

Jamieson, John,

Dr. Jamieson's Scottish dictionary and supplement in four volumes

Bd.: Vol. II

Edinburgh 1841

4 L.g.sept. 53-2

urn:nbn:de:bvb:12-bsb10523093-7

Jamieson

4° L. g. sept.

53

DR. JAMIESON'S
SCOTTISH DICTIONARY, AND SUPPLEMENT.

IN FOUR VOLUMES.

VOL. II.

EDINBURGH:
WILLIAM TAIT, 107, PRINCE'S STREET.
MDCCCXLI.

DR. JAMESON'S

SCOTTISH DICTIONARY

THE MUSEUM

1710

1710

1710

WILLIAM TAIT, 102 PRINCE'S STREET.

1710

AN ETYMOLOGICAL DICTIONARY
OF
THE SCOTTISH LANGUAGE:

ILLUSTRATING
THE WORDS IN THEIR DIFFERENT SIGNIFICATIONS, BY EXAMPLES FROM ANCIENT AND MODERN WRITERS ; SHEWING THEIR AFFINITY TO THOSE OF OTHER LANGUAGES, AND ESPECIALLY THE NORTHERN ; EXPLAINING MANY TERMS, WHICH, THOUGH NOW OBSOLETE IN ENGLAND, WERE FORMERLY COMMON TO BOTH COUNTRIES ; AND ELUCIDATING NATIONAL RITES, CUSTOMS, AND INSTITUTIONS, IN THEIR ANALOGY TO THOSE OF OTHER NATIONS :

TO WHICH IS PREFIXED, A DISSERTATION ON THE ORIGIN OF THE SCOTTISH LANGUAGE:

BY JOHN JAMIESON, D.D.

FELLOW OF THE ROYAL SOCIETY OF EDINBURGH, AND OF THE SOCIETY OF THE ANTIQUARIES OF SCOTLAND.

— Quae vos a stirpe parentum
Prima tulit tellus — — Antiquam exquirite matrem. — VIRG.

THE SECOND EDITION,

CAREFULLY REVISED AND COLLATED, WITH ALL THE ADDITIONAL WORDS IN THE SUPPLEMENT INCORPORATED, AND THEIR MOST POPULAR SIGNIFICATIONS BRIEFLY GIVEN:

BY JOHN JOHNSTONE.

IN TWO VOLUMES.

VOL. II.

WILLIAM TAIT, 107, PRINCE'S STREET, EDINBURGH.

MDCCCXLI.

THE SCOTTISH LANGUAGE:

BOT QUHAT DANGERE IS OCHT TO COMPILE, ALLACE!—

SUM BENE SA FRAWART IN MALICE AND WANGRACE, QUHAT IS WELE SAYD THAY LOIF NOT WORTH AN ACE,

BOT CASTIS THAME EUIR TO SPY OUT FALT AND CRUKE,

AL THAT THAY FYND IN HIDDILLIS, HIRNE, OR NUKE,

THAY BLAW OUT, SAYAND IN EUERY MANNIS FACE,

LO HERE HE FAILYEIS, LO HERE HE LEIS, LUKE.

GAWINE DOUGLAS, BISHOP OF DUNKELD.

EDINBURGH:

Printed by ANDREW SHORTREDE, Thistle Lane.

ETYMOLOGICAL DICTIONARY.

L

IHRE has observed, that words in Gothic ending in L, often denote something of a circular form. He mentions, in proof of this, hagel hail, hwirfwel a whirlpool, spindel a spindle, &c. vo. Hagel.

Elsewhere he remarks, after the Latin philologists, that this letter has aliquid blandi, a certain softness in it, for which reason it is often used.

L, in our language, is a letter evidently denoting diminution. In this sense it occurs in the formation of bagrel, a child; gangarel, gangrel, a child beginning to walk, q. a little ganger; hangrell, q. v.

Ihre, in order to prove that Gothic diminutives are formed by this letter, refers to Moes.G. mawilo, a diminutive from mawi, a girl; barnilo, a little child, from barn; Su.G. kyckling, a chicken, wekling, an effeminate man. He remarks the affinity of the Lat. in this respect; as, in puellus, cultellus, &c. In Germ. l is also a mark of diminution; as maennl, homuncio, from man, homo; steinl, lapillus, a little stone, from stein, lapis.

Germ. gengeln, like gangrel, is a term employed with respect to infants, who have not learned the proper use of their feet. Su.G. gaenglig denotes one who walks in a tottering way. V. Ihre, vo. Gunga. From these, and a variety of other examples, it would appear, indeed, that in the northern languages, l not only marks diminution, but forms the termination of those words which express inequality of motion, or a proneness to fall; as E. waddle, viewed as a diminutive from wade, wriggle, hobble, &c. S. hoddle, to waddle, weeggle, id., toddle, to totter in walking; coggle, to cause to rock; shoggle, to shake; weffil easily moved from one side to another, from AS. waf-ian, to wave; bachle, shachle, &c.

I know not if it be merely accidental, that many words terminate in l or le, which denote the falling, or dispersion of liquids in drops, or in smaller quantities: as E. dribble, trickle, sprinkle, draggel; S. bebble, scuttle, q. v. A sanguine philologist might fancy that he perceived a resemblance between the liquid sound of the letter, and that of the object expressed.

VOL. II.

L A B

L in S. seems sometimes to denote continuation or habit. Thus, gangrel also signifies one who is accustomed to wander from place to place; haivrel, one who is habituated to foolish talking, or haivering, S.; stumral, applied to a horse which is prone to stumbling.

It may perhaps be added, that l or le is frequently used as the termination of words denoting trifling or procrastination in motion or action; as E. fiddlefaddle; S. haingle, to hang about in a trifling way, daddle, druttle, to be slow in motion; taigle, to delay; pingil, to work diligently without much progress; muddle, id. niddle, &c.

L, after broad a, as occurring in E. words, is changed into silent u, or w; as malt, maut, salt, saut, &c. S. To LA, v. a. To lay.

Glaiddie wald I baith inquire and lere,
And to ilk cunnand wicht la to myne ere.

Doug. Virgil, 11, 52.

LAB, s. A lump, or large piece of any thing, S.; perhaps the same with E. lobe, a division, as, a lobe of the lungs.

To LAB, v. a. To beat. S.

LAB, s. A stroke, a blow, Ang.

It seems to be generally used metaphorically, to denote a handle for crimination, an occasion for invective; corresponding to Gr. λᾶζ, ansa, manubrium, occasio; although most probably the resemblance is merely accidental. Ihre observes, that Sw. labbe denotes the hand, especially one of a large size; vo. Lofwe.

To LAB, v. a. To pitch; to toss out of the hand. S.

LAB, s. The act of throwing as above. Penny-stanes, quoits, &c. are said to be thrown with a lab. S.

To LABBER, LEBBER, v. a. To soil; to bespatter. S.

To LABE, LAVE, v. a. To lade; to lay on a burden. S.

LABEY, s. The flap or skirt of a man's coat. S.

To LABOUR, LABOURE, v. a. To plough the ground. S.

LAWBORABLE, adj. In a state fit for being ploughed. S.

LABOURIN, s. 1. In agriculture, the preparation of the soil for receiving the seed. S.

2. "A farm," S. Sir John Sinclair's Observ. p. 181.

A

L A D

LACHT, s. A fine or penalty. V. UNLAW. S.
LACHTER, s. A lecher.

Came ye to wow our lasse, now lachter,
Ye ar sa rasch thair will be slachter,
Ye will not spair nor speir quhais aucht hir.

Philotus, S. P. R., iii. 6.

Junius derives lecherous from Fland. lack, luxuriosus, lascivus; Lye, from Arm. lic, lascivus. These seem radically the same with Germ. laich-en, lascivire, scortari. Its original sense is ludere, Isl. leik-a, whence minstrels or musicians were denominated leikari, Verel. Ind.; leikare, lusor; leika, amica, G. Andr.; Su.G. lek-a, ludere; lascivire.
LACHTER, LAUGHTER, s. A fowl is said to have laid all her lachter, when it is supposed that she will lay no more eggs at one time, S. Lochter, Perth. See Sup.

In The Gander and Goose, it is said,
In offspring soon so rich he grew,
That children's children he cou'd view,
While thus she liv'd his darling pet,
Her lachter's laid with which she's set.

Morison's Poems, p. 68.

A. Bor. lawter is undoubtedly the same, although this might scarcely occur from Grose's definition; "thirteen eggs, to set a hen," Gl.

Sibb. properly refers to Teut. leght-tyd, the time of laying, ovatio, eyeren legghen, ova ponere. Isl. barnsleg, loci matricis vel secundina, G. Andr.

LACHTER, LAICHTER, LAUCHTER, s. 1. A layer, stratum, or flake. A lachter of woo, a flake of wool, Ang. See Sup.

Lochter is used Perth. Tweedd.; as, a lochter of hay or straw.

2. A lock; as, a lauchter of hair. S.

Teut. logh-en, componere foenum in metam. Su.G. Isl. lag, a layer, from laegg-a, ponere; Belg. laag, Teut. laeghe.

LACHTERSTEAD, s. The ground occupied by a house; as much ground as is necessary for building on, S. B.

Su.G. laegerstad, a bed-chamber, a lodging-room; from laeger, a couch, and stad, a place. Laeger, Isl. ligr, ligri, is from ligg-ia, Moes.G. lig-an to lie. Thus the term lachterstead originally conveyed the simple idea of a place where one's couch might be laid, or where one might make his bed. We use it only in a secondary sense; as the principal use of a house, in the savage state of society, is as a place of rest during night. Belg. leger also denotes a bed; een leger van stroo, a bed of straw; hence legersted, a place to lie down; Sewel.

E. leaguer, used to denote a siege, has the same origin. The word properly signifies a camp; Teut. legher, Germ. lager, Su.G. laeger, Dan. lajer. id.; from legg-en, Su.G. ligg-a, ponere, jacere; because troops take their station there. Hence S. leaguer-lady, q. v.

To LACK, v. a. To slight. V. LAK.

LAD, s. 1. It is used as signifying one in a menial situation. See Sup.

Pandaris, pykthankis, custronis, and clatteraris,
Loupis vp from laddis, sine lights amang lardis.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 198.

It still denotes a male servant, who has not arrived at manhood, or at least at his prime, S.

2. A sweetheart, S.

And am I then a match for my ain lad,
That for me so much generous kindness had?

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 187.

3. A young unmarried man; as, "He's no married yet, he's only a lad." S.

Lass is the correlate.

2

L A D

The cadger clims, new cleikit from the creill,
And ladds uploips to lordships all thair lains.

Montgomery, MS. Chron. S. P. iii. 499.

"Lay up like a laird, and seek like a lad," S. Prov.; "spoken to them who take no care to lay up what they had in their hands, and so must drudge in seeking of it." Kelly, p. 240.

The origin is certainly A.S. leode, juvenis. Isl. lydde, servus, mancipium, seems allied. V. Seren.

AULD LAD. An old bachelor. S.

LAD BAIRN, s. A male child. Syn. Knavebairn. S.

To LADDER, LEDDER, s. To apply a ladder to any place for the purpose of ascending or descending. S.

LADDIE, s. 1. A boy; a diminutive from lad, S.

Then Hobbie had but a laddie's sword,
But he did mair than a laddie's deed;
For that sword had clear'd Conscothart green,
Had it not broke o'er Jerswigham's head.

Minstrelsy, Border, i. 191.

2. A fondling term, properly applied to a young man, S.
If kith and kin and a' had sworn,
I'll follow the gypsie laddie.

Ritson's S. Songs, ii. 178.

LADE, LAID, s. A load, in general; as much as man or beast can carry, S.

Your claith and waith will never tell with me,
Tho' ye a thousand *laid*s thereof could gee.

Ross's Helenore, p. 80.

Hence a lade of meal, two bolls, the quantity sufficient to load a horse, S.

A.S. hlad, id.; Isl. ladsla, onus navis.

LADE, LEAD, MILL-LADE, s. The canal or trench which carries the water of a river or pond down to a mill, S. See Sup.

"Myllers—take the fry, or smolts of salmon, in the myln dame or lead, contrair the ordinance of the law." Chalmerlan Air, c. 11, § 4.

Camden renders lade, "passage of waters;" observing, that in an old glossary, aquaeductus is translated water-lada; Remains, p. 147. A.S. lade, canalis; Teut. leyde, aquaeductus. Baillie gives millead, milleat, as used in the same sense.

LADE-MAN, LAID-MAN, s. 1. A man who has charge of a horse-load, or of a pack-horse. 2. A miller's servant who lifts the loads, or drives them to the owners. S.

To LADEN, LAIDIN, v. a. To load. V. LODNIN. S.

LADENIN TIME. The time of laying in winter provisions, S. See Sup.

Su.G. lad-a, to heap together, to stuff, congerere, stipare, Ihre. Hence lada, a barn, because grain is collected in it.

LADE-STERNE, LEIDE-STERNE, s. 1. The polestar, E. loadstar.

—Arcturus, quhilk we cal the leide sterne,
The double Vrsis weill couth he decerne.

Doug. Virgil, 37, 5.

2. Metaphorically a leader, guide, or pattern.

Lanterne, lade sterne, myrroure, and A per se.

Ibid. iii. 11.

From A.S. lead-an, Su.G. led-a, Isl. leid-a, Teut. leyd-en, ducere, q. the leading or conducting star; Teut. leyd-sterre, also leyd, id. cynosura, polus. E. loadstone has the same origin. The Icelanders call the magnet leidar-steinn, lapis viae, from leid, a way; Landnamabok, Gl. V. LEDISMAN.

LADY, s. The old designation for a landholder's wife. S.

LADY-BRACKEN, s. The female fern. V. BRACHEN. S.

LADY-DAY, s. Mary-mess. S.

LADIES-FINGERS, s. Woodbine or Honey-suckle. S.

L A D

LADY-GARTEN-BERRIES, s. pl. Bramble-berries. S.
 LALY-PREIN, s. A minikin or small pin. S.
 LADY'S (OUR) ELWAND. The constellation called Orion's girdle, or the King's Elwand. V. ELWAND. S.
 LADY'S (OUR) HEN. The sky-lark. Orkn. S.
 LADY LANDERS. The lady-bird. V. LANDERS.
 LADNAIRE, LAIDNER, LARDNER, s. A larder, the place where meat is kept, S.

A foule mellé thar gane he mak.
 For meill, and malt, and blud, and wyne,
 Ran all to giddy in a mellyne,
 That was unsemly for to se.
 Tharfor the men off that countré,
 For swa fele thar mellyt wer,
 Callyt it the Dowglas Lardner.

Barbour, v. 410. MS.

Laidner being the vulgar pronunciation, it is altered to this, edit. 1620, with the addition of a line:

— Called it the Dowglas Ladnaire,
 And will be called this mony yeere.

It occurs in both forms in our old Acts.

"They lay ane lardnar in great, and selles in their buiths be peces, contrair the lawes and statutes of burrowes." Chalmerlan Air, c. 8. § 10. Lardarium in grosso, Lat.

—"For this cause na fisher sould make laidner." Ibid. c. 21. § 9.

The ground of complaint evidently was, that fleshers and fishers kept by them a stock of what should have been brought to market.

Lye conjectures that Arm. lard, fat, may be the origin of larder.

LADRY, s. "Idle lads," Pink.

Thay lufit nocht with ladry, nor with lown,
 Nor with trumpours to travel throw the town.

Priests of Peblis, S.P.R. 1. 3.

This seems rather to mean what the Fr. call canaille, S. canallyie, perhaps from A.S. leod-wera, incola, leod-weras, common people, Somn. Isl. lydur, plebs; or, as this term is connected with trumpours, deceivers, it may be allied to Isl. loddari, a travelling musician, a juggler, ludio, histrion, probably from liod, carmen, A.S. hleoethr-ian canere, Isl. lauder-menne is rendered homo nauci, from lauder, laudr, spuma, as E. scum is used. Lodur-menne, homo vilis, a lodur spuma, q. spumeus homo, i. e. inutilis ut spuma. Olai. Lex. Run.

G. Andr. expl. loddare, as signifying a dirty sneaking fellow. V. next word.

LADRONE, LAYDRONE, LATHERIN, s. A lazy knave; laithron, S. It often signifies a sloven, a drab. See S.

Quhair hes thow bene, fals ladrone lown?

Doyttand, and drinkand, in the toun?

Lyndsay, S.P.R. ii. 8.

Here it is used as if an adjective.

But when Indemnity came down,
 The laydron caught me by the thrapple.

Watson's Coll. i. p. 11.

Sibb. views it as "probably a variation of lurdane, if not from Teut. ledig, otiosus, deses, supinus, and the common termination roun." It seems more to resemble Su.G. lat, lazy, laett-ias, to be indolent; or lidder, q. v.—q. lidder ane, a lazy one.

It may be observed, however, that Isl. loddare is used in a similar sense; impurus et invisae notae tenebrio, quasi incomptus, insulse hirsutus; G. Andr. He seems to deduce it from lod, earth rough with grass, lodinn hairy, rough, shaggy; while he mentions Fr. lourd as a synonym. But the Isl. word has evidently more affinity to ladrone than to lurdane, q. v.

LAD'S-LOVE, s. Southernwood; applerie. S.

L A G

LAD-WEAN, s. A man-child. Syn. Lad-bairn. S.
 LAFF, LAIFF, LAYFF, LAFF, LAFF, s. The remainder after partition or division, the persons or things remaining; pron. laive, S. lave, A. Bor.

And the lave syne, that dede war thar,
 Into gret pyttis erdyt war.—Barbour, xiii. 665. MS.

His men entryt, that worthy war in deid,
 In handis hynt, and stekit of the layff.

Wallace, iv. 255. MS.

Than said he thus, All weildand God resawe
 My petows spreit and sawle among the law:
 My carneill lyff I may nocht thus defend.

Wallace, ii. 174. MS.

A.S. lafe, Moes.G. laib-os, Alem. leibba, Isl. leif, Su.G. lefw-or, Germ. laib, id.; all from the different verbs signifying to leave.

LAFFY, adj. Soft; not pressed together. S.

LAFT, s. A floor of a house, &c.; but not the ground floor; a gallery in a church, &c. S.

LAFT, LOFT, s. The fitness of any soil to produce one kind of grain; as, "That land's in a fine laft for aits." S.

LAG, adj. Sluggish; slow; tardy. S.

LAGABAG, s. The hindmost or last. S.

LAGENE, LAGGENE, pron. leiggen, s. 1. The projecting part of the staves at the bottom of a bushel or cask, S. See Sup.

"That—the edge of the bottom, entring within the lagene, be pared out-with, towarde the nether side; and to be maid in-with plaine and just rule richt." Acts, Ja. vi. 1587. c. 411.

2. The angle within, between the side and bottom of a cask or wooden vessel, S.

An' I hae seen their cogie fou,
 That yet hae tarrowt at it;
 But or the day was done, I trow,
 The laggen they hae clautet
 Fu' clean that day.

Burns, iii. 98.

Su.G. lagg is used precisely in the first sense. Usurpatur—de ultima parte lignorum in vasis ligneis, quae extra commissuras eminet; Ihre. In general it denotes the extremity of any thing. E. ledge is evidently allied; whence probably our phrase, the ledgins of a brigg, for the parapets of a bridge.

To LAGEN, LAGGEN, v.a. To repair the laggen of a vessel. S.

LAGEN-GIRD, s. A hoop securing the bottom of a tub or wooden vessel, S. See Sup.

TO CAST A LAGGEN-GIRD. To bear a spurious child, S.

Or bairns can read, they first maun spell.

I learn'd this frae my mammy,

And coost a legen girth mysel,

Lang or I married Tammie.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 274.

"There wis ane o' the queans, I believe, had casten a lagen-gird." Journal from London, p. 7.

LAGGERY, adj. Miry, dirty. A laggery road, a road that is covered with mire, S.B. V. next word.

LAGGERIT, part. pa. 1. Bemired, besmeared with mud. S. See Sup.

The law valis flodderit all wyth spate,
 The plane stretis and euery hie way
 Full of fluschis, dubbis, myre and clay.
Laggerit leyis wallowit fernis schew,
 Broun muris kythit thare wissinyt mossy hew.

Doug. Virgil, 201, 5.

2. Encumbered, from whatever cause; as by heavy armour, S.B.

An' as you ay by speed o' fit
 Perform ilk doughty deed,

L A Y

Fan laggert wi' this bouksome graith,
Ye will tyne haaf your speed.

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 12.

Rudd. supposes, that this may be compounded of A.S. laga water, and gara gorges. This, as far at least as it respects the first of these words, is the only probable conjecture among a variety which he throws out. Su.G. lag, Isl. laug-r, laug-ur, water; log-ur, a collection of waters. The radical term is laa, unda fluens. Laa in Hervarar S. is used to denote the sea; Verel.

LAGMAN, s. The president in the supreme court formerly held in the Orkney Islands.

"The president, or principal person in the Lawting, was named the Great Foud or Lagman." Barry's Orkney, p. 217.

Su.G. lagman, Isl. lagmadr, judex provincialis summae apud veteres dignationis, quippe qui non judex tantum erat in conventibus publicis, sed etiam coram Rege tribunatium potestatem exercuit; Ihre, vo. Lag. V. Foud.

LAGRAETMAN, s. One acting as an officer to a lagman.

"As the chief judge had a council consisting of several members called Raddmen, or counsellors, so the inferior ones [Lagmen] had their council also, composed of members denominated Lagraetmen, or Lawrightmen, who were a kind of constables for the execution of justice in their respective islands." Barry's Orkney, p. 217.

From Su.G. lag law, and raett right; men whose business it was to see, that justice was done according to law.

LAY, s. Law.

Yone pepil twane sall knyt vp peace for ay,
Bynd confederance baith conjonit in ane lay.

Doug. Virgil, 442, 32.

Leges et foedera jungent. Virg.

O. Fr. lai is used for loi, id.

LAY, s. Basis, foundation.

"But this plainly enough says, that this rising did not flow from any correspondence with the Earl of Shaftsbury; and indeed the narrow lay upon which the first gatherers together set up, makes this matter beyond debate." Wodrow's Hist. ii. 42; in margin, expl. foundation.

Teut. laeghe, positus, positura, positio; Kilian.

LAY, s. The slay of a weaver's loom, S. See Sup.

—"The instrument which inserted the woof into the warp, radius the shuttle; which fixed it when inserted, pecten the lay." Adam's Rom. Antiq. p. 523.

Teut. laede, weverslaide, pecten; probably from leggh-en ponere, because by means of this the woof is, as it were, laid, or kept firm.

To LAY, v. a. To alloy, to mix other substances with more precious metals.

"Tuiching the article of gold-smythis, quhilkis layis and makis fals mixture of euill mettall." Acts, Ja. iv. 1489. c. 29. edit. 1566. V. LAYIS, LAYIT.

To LAY, v. a. To smear or salve sheep with an ointment composed of tar and batter. S.

LAYING TIME, s. The season of smearing the sheep. S.

To LAY BY. "He has laid himself by wi' hard wark;" he has overdone himself by improper exertion. S.

To LAY DOWN. To sow out in grass. S.

To LAY GOWD. To embroider. S.

To LAY IN. To throw back into the state of a common; to put into a waste state. S.

To LAY ON, v. impers. To rain; to hail; to snow heavily. S.

To LAY ON, v. a. To strike; to give blows, S. See S.

"For the Lords rebukes ar ever effectuell, he mynteth not against his enemies, bot he layeth on." Bruce's Eleven Sermons, 1591, Sign. S. 3, a.

L A I

Beanjeddart, Hundlie, and Hunthill,
Three, on they laid weel at the last.

Raid of Reidswire; Minstrelsy, Border, i. 120.

To lay on strokes is E. But the verb is used elliptically in S. I'll lay on, I will strike; He laid on me, he struck me. It seems properly to denote repeated blows.

Su.G. laegg-a id., laegga pa en, aliquem verberare.

To LAY TILL one. To allot; to ordain. S.

To LAYCH, v. n. To linger; to delay. See Sup.

— Mony tymis hym selfin has accusit,
That he sa lang has laychit and refusit,
To ressaue glaidlie the Troiane Enee.

Doug. Virgil, 433, 15.

Rudd. derives it from Fr. lach-er, lasch-er, or Lat. lax-are, to slacken, to unbend. Did not the form of the word favour the Fr. etymon, we might deduce it from Su.G. laet-ja, intermittere, laett-jas, otiosi; Alem. laz, lätze, piger. Fr. lasche, however, is used as nearly equivalent to E. lazy. Chaucer, lache, sluggish, lache, laziness.

"If a wight be slowe, and astonied, and lache, men shall holde him like to an asse." Boeth. 389, a.

LAICH, LAYCHE, (gutt.) adj. Low in situation. S.

LAICH, s. A hollow. V. LAIGH. S.

LAICH of a coit. Laich, cloth in general. V. LAIK. S.

LAICHLY, adj. A laichly lurdane; Lyndsays. V.

WASH. Perhaps it should be laithly. V. LAITHLIE.

LAI, s. The pollack, a fish. V. LYTHE.

LAI, s. People; the same with Leid, Lede. S.

LAI DRAIN. A drain formed by two rows of stones, about eight or ten inches apart, as an opening for the water, with a course of flat stones laid above them. S.

LAI DRAIN, s. A vessel for containing liquids. S.

LAI DIS, s. pl. Perhaps, people, or languages. S.

LAI DLY, adj. Clumsy. V. LAITHLY.

LAI D-MAN, s. V. LADE-MAN. S.

LAI DNER, s. A larder; a winter's stock of provisions. S.

LAI DNING, s. Lading; freight. S.

LAI D-SADILL, s. A saddle used for laying burdens on; q. a load-saddle. V. LADE.

I haif ane helter, and eik ane hek,
Ane coird, ane creill, and als ane eradill,
Fyfe fiddier of raggis to stuff ane jak,
Ane auld pannell of ane laid sadill.

Bannatyne Poems, p. 159, st. 7.

LAYER, s. The shear-water, a bird. V. LYRE.

LAI F, LAEF, s. A loaf, S.

But I haive a laef here in my lap,
Likewise a bottle of clarry wine;
And now, ere we go farther on,
We'll rest a while, and ye may dine.

True Thomas; Jamieson's Pop. Ball. ii. 9.

"Keep as muckle of your Scots tongue as will buy your dog a leaf," S. Prov; "a reprimand to conceited fellows who affectedly speak English, or, as they say, begin to knap." Kelly, p. 229.

Moes.G. hlaibs, hlaifs, A.S. hlaef, hlaif, laf, Alem. leib, Isl. hleif, lef, Su.G. lef, Fenn. leipa, Lappon. leab, Fris. leef, leaf, id. L.B. leib-o, Lat. libum. Junius refers to Heb. לחם, hhalaph, innovare, instaurare, Goth. Gl.; Ihre to Germ. lab-en refocillare, or lope coagulum. It would be more natural to trace it to Germ. leib, and the cognate terms denoting life, bread being almost universally considered as "the staff of life."

Mr Tooke, however, exhibits a very ingenious theory as to the origin of these terms used to denote this simple species of aliment, bread, dough, and loaf. Bread, he says, is the past part. of the verb to bray, to pound, to beat to pieces; as suggesting the idea of corn, grain, &c.

in a brayed state. Dough, the past part. of A.S. deaw-ian, to moisten, denotes this grain as wetted; and loaf, laif, Alem. hlaif, is the past part. of hlef-ian to raise, and means merely raised; as Moes.G. hlaibs, loaf, is the same part. of hlei-bian, to raise, or to lift up. "After the bread has been wetted," he says, "(by which it becomes dough,) then comes the leaven, (which, in the Anglo-Saxon, is termed haef and haefen;) by which it becomes loaf." Divers. Purley, ii. 46, 156.

The etymon of bread, however, is highly questionable. For as bray does not seem to be a Gothic verb, grain merely in a brayed state has never been reckoned bread.

LAIFF, LAYFF, s. The remainder. V. LAFE. S.

LAIF SUNDAY, LEIF SUNDAY, LAW SUNDAY.

Some Sunday between the end of March and Whitsunday. S.

LAY-FITTIT, adj. Splay-footed; flat-soled. S.

To LAIG, v. n. To wade; Gl. Sibb. S.

LAIGAN, s. A large quantity of any liquid. S.

To LAIG, v. n. To talk loudly and foolishly. S.

LAIGH, LAYCHE, adj. 1. Low in situation, S.

All the streynthis that thai hade

Thai ewyn layche with the erde has made.

Wyntown, viii. 37. 114.

"Where the dike's laighest, it is eithest to lowp." Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 77.

2. Not tall. A laigh man, one of a small stature.

A tall person is said to be heich, S.

Su.G. laag, Isl. lagr, Teut. laegh, leegh, humilis, non altus.

LAIGH, LAICH, s. A hollow; a plat of low-lying ground.

"I have also been told, upon good authority, that there is a passage in the Red Book of Pluscardine,—that the whole laigh of Moray had been covered with the sea in the year 1010." P. Dyke, Elgin, Statist. Acc. xx. 232.

To LAIGHEN, v. a. To lower in whatever way. S.

LAIGLIN, s. V. LEGLIN.

LAIGHNESS, s. Lowness. S.

LAYIS, s. The alloy mixed with gold or silver. See S.

—"Na goldsmyth sall mak mixture, nor put fals layis in the said metallis." Acts Ja. iv. 1489, c. 29, edit. 1566.

Fr. lier, id. alli-er, ali-er, to alloy. Allier, or alier, is most probably the original form of the Fr. word, which Menage derives q. à loy, according to law. Somn. however, renders A.S. alecg-an, "to embase, as by mixing baser with better metals, vulgarly termed Alloy." The verb primarily signifies ponere, deponere. V. next word.

LAYIT, adj. Base, of inferior quality; a term applied to money.

"Quhat care over your comoun-welthe doethe hir Grace instantly bear, quhen evin now presentlie, and of a lang tyme bygane, by the ministry of sum, (quho better deserved the gallows than ever did Cochran,) sche doeth so corrupte the layit mony, and hes brocht it to suche basenes, and to sick quantitie of scrufe, that all men that hes thair eyis oppin may persave ane extreame beggarie to be brocht tharethrow upoun the wholle realme." Knox's Hist. p. 164. Layed, p. 222.

The sense of the passage is totally lost in the London edit. p. 175. "Sche doth so corrupt the good money, and hath brought it to such businessse, and such a deal of strife," &c.

The money here meant appears to be that commonly called billon.

The word seems to have been still in use in Ramsay's time, although printed as if contracted from allay'd:

Yet all the learn'd discerning part
Of mankind own the heav'nly art

Is as much distant from such trash,
As 'lay'd Dutch coin from sterling cash.

V. LAYIS, and LAY, v.

Poems, i. 317.

LAIK, LAKE, s. Very fine linen cloth.

Thir fair ladyis in silk and claith of laik,
Thus lang sall not all foundin be sa stabill,
This Venus court, quhilk was in lufe maist abil,
For till discrive my cunninges to waik,
Ane multitude thay war innumerabill.

Palice of Honour, i. 52.

Leg. cunning is, as in edit. 1579.

The tents that in my wounds yeed,
Trust ye well they were no threed.

They were neither lake nor line,
Of silk they were both good and fine.

Sir Egeir, p. 12.

Chaucer uses the same word:

He didde next his white lere
Of cloth of lake, fin and clere,
A breche and eke a sherte.

Sir Thopas, v. 13788.

It would appear, from other dialects, that this term was anciently used with greater latitude, as denoting cloth in general. Belg. lak, and laaken, are used in this sense; laken-kooper, a cloth merchant. The word conjoined generally determines the kind of cloth meant; as, slaap-laken, a sheet for a bed, tafel-laken, a table cloth. Although Germ. lacken seems properly to denote woollen cloth, leilach signifies sheets for a bed. Su.G. lakan, a sheet.

The same diversity appears in the more ancient dialects. Alem. lahhan was used to signify both woollen and linen cloth; lahhan pallium, lahhan chlamys; proprie panus est, sed metonymice pro pallio accipitur è panno confecto; Schilter. It is used by Kero to denote a linen cloth; stuollahhan, the covering of a seat or stool; panclahhan, the covering of a bench.

Ihre has observed, vo. Lakan, that Plautus uses the term lacinia for a piece of linen cloth.

Sume laciniam, et absterge sudorem. Merc. i. 2.

A.S. lach being rendered chlamys, and Alem. lahhan, pallium, I am inclined to think, that claith of laik is synon. with claith of pall; as denoting any such fine cloth as was worn by persons of distinction. V. LAUCHT; LAUCHTANE.

LAIK, s. Gift, pledge. LOVE-LAIK, pledge of love.

In toun thou do him be;
Her love-laik thou bihald,
For the love of me,

Nought wene.

Bi resoun thou schalt se,

That love is hem bituene. Sir Tristrem, p. 114.

A.S. lac, laec, munus.

LAIK, LAIKE, s. 1. A term used by boys to denote their stake at play, S. See Sup.

I pledge, or all the play be play'd,
That sum sall lose a laike.

Cherry and Slae, st. 80.

Isl. leik, Su.G. lek, Germ. laich, id. Moes.G. laik-an, A.S. lac-an, Isl. leik-a, Su.G. lek-a, Germ. laich-en, to play.

A. Bor. to lake, id.

Hence lakein, a toy, Westmorel.

2. Used metaphorically to denote the strife of battle.

Streite on his steroppis stoutely he strikes,
And waynes at Schir Wawayn als he were wode.
Then his leman on lowde skirles, and skrikes,
When that burly barne blenket on blode.

Lordis and ladies of that laike likes,

And thonked God fele sithe for Gawayn the gode.

Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. ii. 16.

Isl. leik is also used in this sense. Est etiam ludus serius, nempe certamen, pugna. Hence leiksmark, q. a play-mark, denotes a scar, or mark of a wound or stroke received in combat; Indicium vel argumentum ludi, livor nempe, vulnus, &c. Verel. Ind.

L A Y

LAYKYN, s. Play; applied to justing. S.

LAIK, s. Perhaps, a small lake, loch, or pool. S.

LAIK, s. Want, lack, S.

Ne spare thay not at last, for laik of mete,
Thare fatal foure nukit trunscheouris for til ete.

Doug. Virgil, 208, 51.

Teut. laeche, laeche, Su.G. lack, id. Seren. views Isl.
laa, noxa, laesio, as the radical word.

LAYKE, s. Paint.

Quhais bricht conteyning bewtie with the beamis,
Na les al uther pulchritude dois pas,
Nor to compair ane clud with glausing gleames,
Bright Venus cullour with ane landwart las,
The quhytest layke bot with the blakkest asse.

Philotus, S. P. R. iii. 25.

i. e. "with ashes of the darkest hue."

The term, although properly denoting a reddish colour, is here used in an improper sense for paint in general. Fr.
laque, sanguine, rose or ruby colour.

LAYME, LEEM, adj. Earthen. S.

LAYN, s. Apparently lawn. V. LAYNE. S.

LAIKIN, part. pr. LAIKY, adj. Applied to rain. Laikin showers are such as fall now and then, intermittent showers; as distinguished from a tract of rainy weather on the one hand, and constant drought on the other, S.

Laikyweather conveys the same idea.

Su.G. lack-a, deficere, deesse; Fenn. lak-an, desinere, cessare. Teut. laeck-en, minuere; minui, decrescere; deficere.

LAIKS, s. pl.

Quhen that she seimlie had said hir sentence to end,
Then all thay leuche upon loft, with laiks full mirry.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 50.

Mr Pink gives this as synon. with laits, gestures. In Edit. 1508, it is laits.

LAIN, adj. Alone. V. LANE.

LAING, s. A small ridge of land. Orkn. S.

To LAING, v. n. To move with long steps. V. LING. S.

LAYNDAR, LAUENDER, s. A washerwoman, a laundress.

The King has hard a woman cry,
He askyt quhat that wes in hy.
"It is the layndar, Schyr," said ane,
"That hyr child ill rycht now hes tane."
This wes a full gret curtesy,
That swilk a King, and sa mychty,
Gert his men duell on this maner,
Bot for a pour lauender.

Barbour, xvi. 273, 292. MS.

Fr. lavendiere, id. Chaucer, lavender.

To LAYNE, v. n. To lie, to tell a falsehood.

Than he carpit to the knight, cruel and kene;
"Gif thow luffis thi life, lelely noght to layne, Yeld me thi bright brand, burnist sa bene."

Gawan and Gol. iv. 3.

The term might seem to signify render, give up. A. S. lean-ian, Su.G. laen-a, reddere. But layne, or lain, very often occurs in the sense given above.

In lede is nought to layn,
The hunters him biheld.

Sir Tristrem, p. 30, st. 43.

In lede is nought to layn,
He sett him bi his side.—Ibid., p. 41, st. 65.

To LAYNE, v. n.

Men sayis ane met thame in the Forde,
That prewaly wyth-owtyn worde

L A I

Led thame wp by the wattyr syne,
Qwhill thai to the Gask come and Duplyne.
Thare mony wes lwgyd, nought to layne;
Of thai the mast part have thai slayne.

Wyntown, viii. 26. 119.

This word is left by Mr Macpherson without explanation. Perhaps the meaning is, that the persons lodged here, were appointed to keep watch; for it is evident that they formed only an outpost. Thus, nought to layne would signify, "not to lie down;" Su.G. laen-a, A. S. hlyn-an hleon-ian, recumbere.

If such were their orders, they disobeyed them. For we learn from Fordun, Scotichr. ii. 305, that many were slain, sine vigile cubantes.

The phrase in Wyntown may, however, merely signify, not to lie, i. e. to tell the truth.

In the same sense may we understand the following passages:—

There come a lede of the lawe, in londe is not to layne,
And glides to Schir Gawane, the gates to gayne.

Sir Gawan and Sir Gal, 1. 7.

O tell us, tell us, May Margaret,
And dinna to us len;
O wha is aught yon noble hawk
That stands your kitchen in?

Jamieson's Popular Ball. i. 85.

The amiable editor is mistaken, in viewing this as signifying "to stop or hesitate;" and as the same with O. E.
lin, synon, with blin, to cease.

To LAYNE, LEIN, v. a. To conceal.

"Whae drives thir kye?" can Willie say;
"It's I, the captain o' Bewcastle, Willie;
I winna layne my name for thee."
It's I, Watty Woodspurs, loose the kye!
I winna layne my name frae thee.

Minstrelsy, Border, i. 103, 106.

Su.G. hlaun-a, Moes.G. ga-laugn-ian, Germ. laugn-en, Isl. leyn-a, A. Bor. lean, which Ray improperly derives from A. S. leanne to shun.

Than lukit scho to me, and leuch;
And said, Sic luf I rid yow layne,
Albeid ye mak it never sa teuch,
To me your labour is in vain.

Maitland Poems, p. 209.

I am uncertain whether this signifies conceal; or avoid, shun, from A. S. leanne, vitare, fugere, Somn.

The phrase, quoted under the preceding verb, from Sir
Ga n, might bear the sense of conceal.

"Little can a lang tongne lein." S. Prov. "Spoken as a reproof to a babler." Kelly, p. 240.

To the same purpose it is said, "Women and bairns lein what they ken not." Ferguson's S. Prov. p. 341.

LAYNE, n. Lawn, fine linen.

The King and Parliament complain of "the great abuse, standing amang his subjectes of the meane estaite, presuming to counterfaict his Hienes and his Nobilitie, in the use and wearing of coastelie cleithing of silkes of all sortes, layne, cammerage, freinyies," &c. Acts, Ja. vi. 1581, c. 113.

Fr. linon, id.

LAYNERE, s. A strap, a thong.

He hym dressyt his sted to ta,
Hys cusché laynere brak in twa.—Wyntown, vii. 32. 46.

Fr. laniere, id. V. CUSCHÉ.

LAY-POKE, s. The ovarium of fowls. Syn. Egg-bed. S.

To LAIP, LAPE, v. a. To lap, S.

The feyndis gave them hait leid to laip.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 30.

It did him gud to laip the blude
Of young and tender lammis.—Spec. Godly Sangs, p. 6.
Su.G. laep-ia, Isl. lep-ia, C.B. chlepp-ian chleib-io, Arm.

L A I

lip-at, A. S. lap-ian, Alem. laff-an, Germ. lab-en, Gr λαπτ-ειν, Lat. lamb-ere, lib-are.

LAIP, s. A splash; Loth. V. LAPPIE.

LAIR, LAYRE, LARE, s. 1. A place for lying down, or taking rest; used in a general sense, S.

He maks my lair,
In fields maist fair.

Montgomery, Vers. 23, Ps. Ever-green, ii. 217.

A hard bed is called an ill lair, S. V. CARE-BED LAIR.

2. The act of lying down, or of taking rest.

In the mene quhylye, as al the beistis war
Repaterit wele, eftir thare nyctis lare;
The catal gan to rowtin, cry and rare.

Doug. Virgil, 248, 29.

3. A burying-place, a tomb; or a particular portion of burial-ground appropriated to a person or family.
One is said to have a lair in this or that churchyard, S.

The Byshape Dawy of Bernhame
Past off this warld til his lang hame:
As he dyd here, sa fand he thare.
Of him I byd to spek na mare.
He chesyd hys layre in-til Kelsew;
Noucht in the Kyrk of Saynt Andrewe.

Wyntown, vii. 10. 151.

"He (Bishop Kennedy) founded a triumphant college in St. Andrews, called St. Salvator's College, wherein he maid his lair very curiously and costly." Pitscottie, p. 68.

Unum reliquit suae liberalitatis monumentum egregium, scholas publicas ad fanum Andreae, maximis sumptibus aedificatas.—In eis sepulchrum sibi magnificè extruendum curavit. Buchanan. Hist. xii. 23.

"The keeper of the register charged himself for the burial lair (grave) of a child, without mentioning whether it was male or female." P. Aberdeen, Statist. Acc. xix. 176.

Su.G. laeger, Germ. lager, Dan. lajjer, Alem. legar, Moes.-
G. ligr, all signify a bed, from ligg-a, &c., to lie. Sometimes another term is added, as A.S. legerbedd, Alem. legerstede, cubile. Teut. laegher is properly applied to the den or resting-place of wild beasts. Some of these are transferred to our last resting-place; as Germ. lager, Su.
G. laeger, sepulchrum; or with addition, laegerstaette, laegerstad, A. S. legerstow, Isl. legi, id. Verel.

Hardyng uses leyre in this sense.

Kyng Arthur then in Aualon so dyed,
Where he was buryed in a chapel fayre,
Which now is made, and fully edified
The mynster church, this day of great repayre,
Of Glastenbury, where now he hath his leyre:
But then it was called the black chapell
Of our Lady, as chronicles can tel.

Chronicle, Fol. 77, a.

Although many have denied the existence of the celebrated Arthur, Leland quotes an ancient MS., which asserts that his grave was discovered at Glastenbury, A.D. 1192, with a cross of lead upon his breast, having his name inscribed. Collect. i. 242. He also refers to Gervase, as giving the following testimony:—A. 1191, apud Glasconi-am inventa sunt ossa Arturii famosiss. regis, qui locus olim Aualon, i. e. insula pomorum, dicebatur, p. 264. Gervase lived in the reign of King John. Leland also quotes John Bevyer, who wrote about the year 1300, as attesting the same circumstance, p. 280.

To LAIR, v. a. To inter, to bury.

If they can eithly turn the pence,
Wi' city's good they will dispense;
Nor care tho' a' her sons were lair'd
Ten fathom i' the auld kirk-yard.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 104.

L A I

I am not certain, however, whether this may not be the
v. signifying, to mire, used in a ludicrous sense.

LAIR, s. A stratum, S.

Rudd. observes, that the term lairs is used "for the different beds, rows, and stratum, of fossils, or such like;"
Gl. vo. Lare. This is merely E. layer.

He also says, that S. Bor. "generally the ground or foundation upon which any thing stands is called a lair;"
mentioning stance and stead as synon. I have never remarked that it is used in this sense. It certainly does not convey the idea of standing, but of lying.

LAIR, LARE, s. A mire, a bog, S. A. Bor. See Sup.

Rudd. thinks that this may have the same origin with lair, as signifying a place of rest. But it seems radically the same with Isl. leir, clay, mire, lutum, coenum, G.
Andr.; leyra, fundus argillosus; leirvik, paludes glebosae;
lertekt, the liberty of digging clay for constructing walls.
Su.G. ler, Dan. leer, clay.

To LAIR, v. n. To stick in the mire, S.

"When James Finlay was tenant of Bridge of Don, his cattle sometimes laired in the waggie, and were drawn out by strength of men." State, Leslie of Powis, 1805, p. 74.

To LAIR, v. a. To mire, S.

"They came to a place called The Solway-moss, where-through neither horse nor man might pass, and thair laired all their horse, and mischieved them." Pitscottie, p. 176.

LAIRIE, LAIRY, adj. Boggy; marshy. S.

LAIR, s. A laver, or washing vessel. Corr. of lawer. S.

LAIR, s. Learning; education. V. LARE. S.

LAIRACH, s. The site of a building. V. LERROCH. S.

LAIRBAR, LARBAR, s. Isl. lar-a debilitare.

Bot with an lairbar for to ly,

Ane auld deid stock, baith cauld and dry.

Philotus, S. P. R. i. 16.

Mr Pink. renders it "dirty fellow." But the term seems properly to suggest the idea of great infirmity; as the phrase deid stock, which is still used in this sense, is added as expletive of the other. It is used in a similar sense, Maitl. P. pp. 47, 49.

It may have been formed from A.S. leger a bed, and bear-an to carry; as originally denoting one bedrid, or who needed to be carried on a couch. It is in favour of this etymon, that legere is rendered "sickness, a lying sick," leger-faest, bedrid; and leger-bedd, which signifies a couch of any kind, also denotes "a sick man's bed, a death-bed;"
Somn. or as inverted in Germ. betlaerig, clinicus, lecto affixus; Wachter. Larbitar denotes one who is quite inactive, Ang. q. leger-bedd-er.

The term, however, may radically be still more emphatic, as referring to a corpse.

Scho lyis als deid, quhat sall I deime?

—Scho will not heir me for na cryis,

For plucking on scho will not ryis,

Sa lairbairt lyke lo as scho lyis,

As raveist in a trance. Philotus, st. 112.

As leger also signifies a grave, (V. LAIR, 1.) q. one fit to be carried to the grave; or from leger cubile, and baer nudus, q. the bed to which one returns naked.

The word is also used adj. in the sense of sluggish, feeble.

His luve is waxit larbar, and lyis into swowne.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 51.

—His back is larbour grown and lidden.

Ever-green, i. 76.

It seems also to signify ghastly.

The larbar lukes of thy lang leinest craig,—

Gars men dispyt thair flesch.—

Ibid. ii. 56, st. 16.

LAIRD, LARDE, s. 1. A lord; a person of superior rank. See Sup.

— This tretys sympylly
I made at the instans of a larde
That hade my serwys in his warde,
Schyr Jhone of the Wemys be rycht name,
Ane honest Knycht and of gude fame,
Suppos hys lordschype lyk noucht be
Tyl gret statis in eqwalytè.

Wyntown, i. Prol. v. 55.

Ilk ane of thaim furth pransand like a lard,
Arrayit wele the templis of thare hede
With purpoure garlandis of the rosis rede.

Doug. Virgil, 136, 39.

2. A leader; a captain.

Before the laif, as ledsman and lard,
And al hys salis vp with felloun fard,
Went Palinure—

Ibid. 156, 19.

3. A landholder; a proprietor of land; a term applied, as Sibb. observes, to a "landed gentleman under the degree of a knight," S.

"Quha sa vsis not the said archarie, the laird of the land sall rais of him a wedder, and gif the laird raisis not the said pane, the Kingis Schiref or his ministers sall rais it to the King." Acts Ja. I. 1424, c. 20. Edit. 1566.

"Quhatsumeuer tennent, gentilman vnladit, or yeman hauand takkis or steidingis of ony lordis or lairdis, spirituall or temporall, that happinnis to be slane be Inglismen in our souerane Lordis armie,—the wyfis and barnis of thame,—sall bruke thair takkis, malingis or steidingis."
Acts Ja. V. 1522, c. 4. Ibid.

That laird is originally the same term with lord, is undeniable. Mr Macpherson has justly observed, that "in Wyntown's time it appears to have been equivalent to Lord, and is sometimes used to express the feudal superiority of an over-lord."

This Kyng in fe and herytage
That kynrik held, and for homage
Of a grettare kyng of mycht,
That wes hys Oure-Lard of rycht.

Cron. viii. 3, 34; also, v. 40, 44.

They are used as synon. in O. E. In a Norm. Sax. paraphrase on the Lord's Prayer, written before 1185, God is called Lauerd, for Lord. We have also Lauerid king, R. Brunne.

Lauerid king, "Wassaille," seid sche.

V. Gl. R. Glouc. p. 695.

This is lord in R. Glouc. Chron.

A kne to the kyng heo seyde, Lord kyng wasseyl.

P. 117.

It would appear that anciently the title of Laird was given to no proprietor but one who held immediately of the Crown. This distinction is still preserved in the Highlands. The designation Tiarn, corresponding to our Laird, and rendered by it, is given to one whose property is perhaps not worth two or three hundred per ann., while it is withheld from another, whose rental extends to as many thousands; because the former acknowledges no superior under the king, while the latter does.

4. The proprietor of a house, or of more houses than one. S.

A. S. hlaford, lavord, Isl. lavard-ur, Su. G. laward, dominus.
Vercl. derives the Isl. term from lad, land, soil, and vard a guardian. Dicitur lavard, q. ladvard, fundi vel soli servator et defensor; Ind. p. 150. Stiernhielm deduces it from hlaf bread, and waerd an host, hospes; Junius, from hlaf, and ord initium, origo, q. he who administers bread. G. Andr.
views it q. lavagardr, horrei oconomus, from laf, lave, an area, a barn, a storehouse, p. 160.

Mr Tooke having observed that hlaf is the past part. of
A. S. hlif-ian to raise, adds, that hlaford is "a compound word of hlaf, raised or elevated, and ord, (ortus) source, origin, birth. Lord," he subjoins, "therefore means High-born, or of an exalted origin." Divers. Purley, ii. 157, 158. Hlaf-dig, lady, he views as merely lofty, i. e. raised or exalted: her birth being entirely out of the question;

the wife following the condition of the husband." Ibid.
p. 161.

In an old Isl. work, quoted by G. Andr. the serpent is made to say to Eve, Thu ert lafde myn, en Adam er lavardr min. "Thou art my Lady, and Adam is my Laird." The same passage occurs in Spec. Reg. pp. 501, 502, in the amusing account given by the author of the dialogue between our common mother and the serpent. This phraseology is perfectly analogous to that of our own country.
For, among all classes, within half a century, the wife of a laird was viewed as entitled to the designation of Lady, conjoined with the name of the estate, how small soever:
and among the vulgar, this custom is still in use.

LAIRDSHIP, s. An estate, landed property, S. See S.

My lairdship can yield me

As meikle a year,

As had us in pottage,

And good knockit beer.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 313.

LAIRDIE, s. A small proprietor, Dimin. from Laird. S.

LAIR-IGIGH, s. The name of a bird. S.

LAIR-SILUER, s. Uncertain; perhaps, money paid for education; or the dues for a grave. S.

LAIR-STANE, s. A tomb-stone. S.

LAIRMASTER. V. LARE, v. a.

LAIRT, LEIR, adv. Rather. S. B. V. LEVER, whence it is formed; also LOOR.

LAIT, LAYTE, LATE, LETE, s. 1. Manner; behaviour; gesture.

Betwix Schir Gologras, and he,

Gude contenance I se:

And uthir knightis so fre

Lufsom of lait. Gawan and Gol. iv. 21.

A lady, lufsom of lete, ledand a knight

Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. ii. 1. V. RIAL.

Suppose thi birny be bright, as bachiler sul ben,

Yhit ar thi latis unlufsum, and ladlike, I lay.

Gawan and Gol. i. 8; also i. 13. V. LAITHLIE.

Lat occurs in Sir Tristrem, p. 117.

It seemeth by his lat,

As he hir never had sen,

With sight.—

Than on his kneis he askit forgiuenes

For his licht laytes, and his wantones.

Priests of Peblis, p. 36.

To dans thir damysellis thame dicht,

Thir lasses licht of laitis. Chr. Kirk, st. 2.

i. e. light, or wanton, in their behaviour.

Douglas applies the expression in the very same sense.

The faithful ladyis of Grece I nicht consider,

In claithis blak all bairfute pas togidder,

Till Thebes sege fra thair lordis war slane.

Behald, ye men, that callis ladyis liddir,

And licht of laitis, quhat kindnes brocht them hidder!

Quhat treuth and lufe did in thair breists remane!

Palice of Honour, iii. 34. Edit. 1579.

2. Mien, appearance of the countenance.

Thai persawyt, be his speking,

That he wes the selwyn Robert King.

And changyt cuntenance and late;

And held nocht in the fyrst state.

For thai war fayis to the King.

Barbour, vii. 127. MS.

Thy trimnes and nimnes

Is turnd to vyld estait;

Thy grace to, and face to,
Is altered of the late.

Burel's Pilgr. Watson's Coll. ii. 50.

3. A practice; a custom; a habit. 4. A trick. S.

Callander strangely seeks the origin in Moes. G. laistjan sequi; although it is evidently Isl. lat, laete, gestus, usually derived from laet, me gero, I behave myself. Marg eru latinn ef ollum er latid; Multi sunt gestus, si omnes adhibeantur, Volusp. Here both s. and v. occur. The Su. G. synon. is lat-ur; Fenn. laatu, laita, gestus, indoles. Teut. laet, ghe-laet, gestus, habitus, vultus, apparitio, ostensio; status, species; laet-en, ghe-laet-en, apparere; prae se ferre, Kilian.

Isl. laet and Su. G. lat-ur are much used in composition: Mikillatur proud, litillatur modest, litillaeti modesty, tyst-latig silent, lettlatr of a light carriage. The character of Venus is, Miok lettlat horkona, scortum levissimum; Damascen. ap. Verel. Ind. This exactly corresponds to the S. phrase quoted above, licht of latis; lett signifying levis. Lauslaete, vita dissoluta; lauslatr, lascivus, ibid.

Isl. lit, lyt, is used as synon. with laet gestus; which might seem to suggest that the latter, although immediately connected with the v. laet-a, se gerere, is radically allied to lit vultus, leite respectus, auglit facies. The extensive use of the Teut. term would appear to confirm this idea.

LAITLESS, adj. Uncivil; unmannerly; unbecoming. S. To LAIT, v. a. To allure; to entice. An old word. S. To LAIT, v. a. To reduce the temper of iron or steel when it is too hard, by heating it. V. LATE, LEET, S. To LAIT, v. a. To personate; to assume the appearance of. See Sup.

This word occurs in an ancient specimen of translation, extant in the Scotichron., most probably by Walter Bower, Abbot of Inch Colme in the Frith of Forth; which entitles him to a place of considerable distinction among our Scottish Poets. It must have been written before A. 1435, in which year he seems to have concluded his work.

The passage referred to is a translation of the following singular verses from Babio's Comedies.

Indisciplinata mulier	{	Cornuta capite, ut hoedus;
		Effurens fronte, ut taurus;
		Oculis venenata, ut basiliscus;
		Facie blanda, ut scorpio;
		Auribus indisciplinata, ut aspis;
		Signo fallax, ut vulpes;
		Ore mendax, ut Diabolus.

The unlatit woman the licht man will lait,
Gangis coitand in the curt, hornit lik a gait:
Als brankand as a bole in frontis, and in vice;
Mair venumit is hir luke than the coketrice.
Blyth and bletcherand, in the face lyk an angell,
Bot a wisle in the taill, lyk a draconell.
Wyth prik youkand eeris as the awsk gleg.
Mare wily than a fox, pungis as the cleg!
Als sikir for to hald as a water eel;
Bot as trew in her tounge as the mekyl Devil.

Fordun, ii. 376.

The meaning of the first line, as here given, may be, "The woman, who is a stranger to propriety of manners, will act as if she were a wanton man." I have a strong suspicion, however, that licht man is, q. lic-man, and allied to Su. G. lek-a, Isl. leik-a to play, to make sport, lekar a jester, a buffoon, a mimic, O. Fr. leceour. Thus, the sense would be; "She personates a buffoon or harlequin;" and perhaps there is an allusion to the Julbok, or cervulus, as she is hornit lik a gait. Dunbar would almost seem to have imitated this passage, in the following counsel, which he puts into the mouth of his loose Wedo.

Be dragounis bayth and dowis, one in doubill forme;—
VOL. II. 9

Be aimabil with humil face, as angel apperwaired;
And with ane terrible tail be stangand as edderis.

Maitland Poems, p. 54.

V. the s. and LEIT, LEET, v. which is radically the same. To LAYT, v. a.

Who wil lesinges layt,

Tharf him no ferther go. Sir Tristrem, p. 175.

"Listen," Gl. But I suspect that it rather signifies give heed to, make account of. V. LAT, LET, to esteem.

To LAITH at, v. a. To loathe; to have a disgust at. S. LAITH, adj. 1. Loathsome; impure.

Exalatiouns or vapouris blak and laith,

Furth of that dedely golf throwis in the are.

Doug. Virgil, 171, 30.

This seems the primary sense. Isl. leid-ur, turpis, sordidus, leid-a, taedio afficere; whence, says Verel., Ital. laido, foedus, sordidus, Fr. laide. A. S. lath, hateful.

2. What one is reluctant to utter.

This Calcas held his tounge ten dais till end,
Kepand secrete and clois all his intent,
Refusing with his wordes ony to schent,
Or to pronounce the deith of any wycht;
Scars at the last throw gret clamour and slycht
Of Vlisses constrenit, but mare abaid,
As was deuysit, the laith wourd furth braid,
And me adjugit to send to the altare.

Doug. Virgil, 42, 50.

3. Unwilling; reluctant; S.

And til Saynt Serf syne wes he broucht.
That schepe, he sayd, that he stall noucht;
And thare-til for to swere an athe,
He sayd, that he wald noucht be lathe.

Wyntown, v. 12. 1229.

For Peter, Androw and Johne wer fischaris fine,
Of men and women, to the Christian faith;
Bot thay to haue spreid net with huik & line,
On rentis riche, on gold, and vther graith,
Sic fisching to neglect, thay will be laith.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 136.

"Laith to bed, laith out of it;" Ferguson's S. Prov. p. 23. It is also said, "Laith to the drink, laith frae't." Ibid.

A. S. lathe, it grieves, it gives pain. Isl. leithr, whence leithest, most reluctant.

LAITH, LATHE, s. A loathing; a disgust. S.

LAITHEAND, adj. Detestable; loathsome. S.

LAITHERIN, p. pr. Lazy; loitering. V. LADRONE. S.

LAITHFOW, adj. 1. Bashful; sheepish; S.

The youngster's artless heart o'erflows wi' joy;

But blate and laithfu', scarce can weel behave.

The mother, wi' a woman's wiles, can spy

What makes the youth sae bashfu' and sae grave;

Weel pleas'd to think her bairn's respected like the lave.

Burns, iii. 176, 177.

2. Shy of accepting an invitation to eat, or an offer of any favour, from a kind of modesty, S. It is opposed to the idea of greediness; and is generally used among the vulgar. 3. Disgustful; loathsome. V. LAITH. S.

LAITHLES, adj.

Thare come ane laithles leid air to this place.—

It kythit, be his cognisance, ane knight that he wes;

Bot he wes ladlike of lait, and light of his fere.

Gawan and Gol. i, 13.

"Unmannerly," Gl. Pink. He seems to view it as from lait, behaviour, manner, and leas, E. less. But it may be from A. S. lathlice, detestabilis. Leid and air are different words in Edit. 1508 LAITHLIE, LAIDLIE, adj. 1. Loathsome; impure.

See Sup.

L A K

- Our mesis and oure meit thay reft away;
And with thare laithlie twich all thing fyle thay.
Immundo, Virg. Doug. Virgil, 15, 18.
It is used as giving the sense of obscoenus, ib. id. 47.
"Laidly, ugly, lothsome, foul." A. Bor. Gl. Grose.
2. Base; vile.
Thare was also the laithly Indigence,
Terribil of schape, and shameful hir presence.
Turpis, Virg. Doug. Virg. 12, 48.
3. Clumsy; inelegant. A laidly flup, a clumsy and awkward fellow, S.B.
O. E. lothly is radically the same. V. LAITH.
LAITHLOUNKIE, adj. Dejected; chopfallen. S.
LAITTANDLY, adv. Latently; secretly. V. MEMMIT.
To LAIVE, v. a. To throw water with the hand or by means of a vessel. S.
To LAK, LACK, LACKIN, v. a. 1. To blame; to reproach.
Gif ye be blythe, your lychtnes thai will lak.
Gif ye be grave, your gravité is clekit.
Maitland Poems, p. 158,
For me lyst wyth man nor bukis flyite,
—Nor na man will I lakkin nor dyspyse.
Doug. Virg. 8, 4.
Howbeit that diuers deuot cunning clerkis
In Latyne toung hes written sindrie buikis;
Our ynleirnit knawis litle of thir werkis,
More than thay do the rauing of the ruikis.
Quhairfoir to colyearis, carters, & to cuikis,
To Jok and Thome, my ryme salbe directit;
With cunning men howbeit it wilbe lackit.
Lyndsay's Warkis, p. 14.
2. To depreciate; to vilify; S. B.
"Agayne yhoure will and of malis
"Hely yhe releve thare prys.
"Yhe wene to lak, bot yhe commend "That natyown, as yhe mak ws kend."
Wyntown, ix. 13. 3.
I see that but spinning I'll never be braw,
But gae by the name of a dilp or a da.
Sae lack where ye like, I shall anes shak a fa',
Afore I be dung with the spinning o't.
Song, Ross's Helenore, p. 135.
"He that lacks my mare, would buy my mare." S. Prov.
Kelly, p. 130.
It occurs in this sense in O. E.
Amongis Burgesis haue I be, dwellyng at London,
And gard Backbiting be a broker, to blame men's ware,
Whan he sold and I not, than was I ready
To lye & loure on my neyghbour, and to lak his chaffer.
P. Ploughman's Vision, Fol. 22, 6.
Su.G. lack-a, Isl. hlack-a, Teut. laeck-en, vituperare;
Su.G. lack, Isl. hlack, Teut. lache, laeche, vituperium.
These terms seem originally to suggest the idea of sport;
as if radically the same with Moes.G. laik-an bi-laik-an, Isl. leik-a, Su.G. leh-a, ludere. As sport is often carried on at the expense of another, the Su.G. verb signifies, to make game of any one. Moes.G. bi-laik-an is used in the same sense. Bilailaikun ina, they mocked him, Mark, 15, 20.
- LAK, s. 1. Dispraise, reproach.
For thi, ilk man be off trew hardy will,
And at we do so nobill in to deid,
Off ws be found no lak eftir to reid.
Wallace, ix. 818. MS.
Na manere lak to your realme sal we be,
Nor na repruf tharby to your renowne,
Be vs nor nane vthir sal neuer sprede.
Doug. Virgil, 213, 28.
Quhat of his lak, sa wide your fame is blaw,—

L A K

- Na wretchis word may depair your hie name.
Palice of Honour, ii. 22.
"Shame and lak, is an usual phrase, S.B." Rudd.
2. A taunt, a scoff.
Wallace, scho said, Yhe war clepyt my luff,
Mor baundounly I maid me for to pruff. —
Madem, he said, and verité war seyn,
That ye me luffyt, I awcht yow luff agayn.
Thir wordis all ar no thing bot in wayn;
Sic luff as that is nothing till awance,
To tak a lak and syne get no plesance.
In spech off luff suttell ye Sotheroun ar,
Ye can ws mok, supposs ye se no mar.
Wall. viii. 1407. MS.
It is corruptly printed alah, Perth edit.; while liking is substituted in other editions. It seems to have been a prov. phrase, expressive of the folly of taking the blame of any thing, while one received no advantage; as we still say, "He has baith the scaith and the scorn," Prov. S.
V. the v.
- LAK, s.
The land loun was, and lie, with lyking and love.
And for to lende by that lak thocht me levare,
Becauss that thir hertis in herdis coud hove.
Houlate, i. 2. MS.
Place, station? A.S. leag, locus; Isl. lage, statio, from ligg-ia, to lie. It may indeed signify plain, as the A.S. word also does.
- LAK, adj. Bad, mean, weak, defective, comp. lakker, worse; superl. lakkest, worst.
Wisser than I may fail in lakker style.
Doug. Virgil, 9, 26.
Into the mont Apenninus duelt he,
Amang Liguriane pepil of his cuntré,
And not forsoith the lakkest weriour,
But forcy man and richt stalwart in stoure.
Ibid. 389, 43.
Harry the Minstrel seems to use lakest as signifying the weakest.
Wald we him burd, na but is to begyn;
The lakest schip, that is his flot within,
May sayll ws down on to a duffull ded.
Wall. ix. 98. MS.
Isl. lacr is used in the same sense; deficiens a justa mensura, aut aequo valore, G. Andr.
- LAKE,* s. A small stagnant pool; a Lochan. Loch is used to denote a large body of water. S.
To LAKE AT, v. a. 1. To give heed to; generally used negatively; as, "He never lakit at it," He gave no heed to it. 2. To give credit to; to trust to. S.
- LAKE-FISHING. V. RAISE-NET-FISHING.
- LAKIE, s. An irregularity in the tides, observed in the Frith of Forth. See Sup.
"In Forth there are, besides the regular ebbs and flows, several irregular motions, which the commons betwixt Alloa and Culross (who have most diligently observed them) call the Lakies of Forth; by which name they express these odd motions of the river, when it ebbs and flows: for when it floweth, some time before it be full sea, it intermitteth and ebbs for some considerable time, and after filleth till it be full sea; and, on the contrary, when the sea is ebbing, before the low water, it intermits and fills for some considerable time, and after ebbs till it be low water; and this is called a lakie. There are lakies in the river of Forth, which are in no other river in Scotland." Sibbald's Hist. Fife, p. 87.
This term appears to be used elliptically. For another mode of expression is also used.
"The tides in the river Forth, for several miles, both above and below Clackmannan, exhibit a phenomenon not to be found (it is said) in any other part of the globe. This is what the sailors call a leaky tide, which happens always in good weather during the neap tides," &c. P. Clackmannan, Statist. Acc. xiv. 612.

L A M

The word seems properly to denote deficiency or intermission; and may therefore be from the same origin with Laikin, q. v.

LALIE, s. A child's toy. S.

LALL, s. An inactive, handless person. S.

LALLAN, adj. Belonging to the Lowlands of Scotland. S.

To LAMB, v. a. To bring forth lambs, to yearn, S. See S.

"I wish you lamb in your lair, as many a good ew has done," S. Prov.; "Spoken to those who lie too long a-bed," Kelly, p. 195.

"Tip when you will, you shall lamb with the leave," [lave,] S. Prov.; "An allusion to sheep taking the ram, and dropping their lambs; used in company, when some refuse to pay their clubs, because they came but lately in, signifying that they shall pay all alike notwithstanding;" Kelly, p. 306.

"If in the spring, about lambing time, any person goes into the island with a dog, or even without one, the ewes suddenly take fright, and through the influence of fear, it is imagined, instantly drop down as dead, as if their brains had been pierced through with a musket bullet." Statist. Acc. (P. Kirkwall,) v. 545.

Sw. lamb-a, Germ. lamm-en, id.

LAMBIE, LAMMIE, s. A young lamb; a fondling term for a lamb, without respect to its age; a darling. S.

LAMB'S-LETTUCE, s. Corn salad, an herb, S. Valeriana locusta, Linn.

LAMB-TONGUE, s. Corn mint, S. Mentha arvensis. S.

LAME, s. Lameness, hurt.

He sayd, that he wald ayl ná-tyng. —

Thus hapnyd til hym of this lame.

Wyntown, viii. 35. 135.

Sa dyde it here to this Willame,

That left nought for defowle and lame,

But folowyd his purpos ithandly,

Qwhill he had his intent playnly. Ibid. 36. 112.

Isl. lam, fractio.

LAME, adj. Earthen; a term applied to crockery ware. See Sup.

"In the year of God i.m.v.c.xxi. yeris, in Fyndoure ane town of the Mernis, v. mylis fra Aberdene, wes found ane anciant sepulture, in quhilk wer ii. lame piggis craftely maid with letteris ingrauit full of brynt powder, quhilkis sone efter that thay wer handillit fel in dros." Bellend. Cron. Fol. 35, b. Urnae duae, Boeth.

A.S. laemen fictilis, lam lutum, lamwyrhta, figulus, a potter; Teut. leem, terra figularis; Gl. Pez. leimino, fictiles. A lame plate, a plate of earthen ware, as distinguished from a wooden one, S.

To LAME, v. a. To prepare wool by drawing. S.

LAMENRY, s. Concubinage.

He beddit nocht richt oft, nor lay hir by,

Bot throw lichtnes did lig in lamenry.

Priests of Peblis, p. 30. V. LEMAN.

LAMENT, s. 1. An elegiac composition in memory of the dead. 2. The music to which such composition is set. S.

LAMER, s. A thong. S.

LAMITER, s. A cripple, one who is lame, S. See S.

LAMITER, adj. Lame. S.

LAMMAS FLUDE OR SPATE. The heavy fall of rain, and consequent swelling of the waters, which generally take place about Lammas, or some time in August. S.

L A M

LAMMAS-TOWER, s. A hut or kind of tower erected by the herds of a district, about the time of Lammas; and defended by them against assailants, Loth.

"All the herds of a certain district, towards the beginning of summer, associated themselves into bands, sometimes to the number of a hundred or more. Each of these communities agreed to build a tower in some conspicuous place, near the centre of their district, which was to serve as the place of their rendezvous on Lammas day. This tower was usually built of sods, for the most part square, about four feet in diameter at the bottom, and tapering to a point at the top, which was seldom above seven or eight feet from the ground. The name of Lammas-towers will remain (some of them having been built of stone) after the celebration of the festival has ceased." Trans. Ant. Soc. Scot. i. p. 194, 198.

LAMMER, LAMER, s. Amber, S. See Sup.

My fair maistres, sweitar than the lammer,

Gif me licence to luge into your chammer.

Lyndsay, S. P. R. ii. 13.

"O wha's blood is this," he says,

"That lies in the châmer?"

"It is your lady's heart's blood;

'Tis as clear as the lamer."

Jamieson's Popular Ball. i. 181.

Also used adj. Lammer beads, beads made of amber, S.

Teut. lamertyn-steen, succinum, synon. with amber, ember.

LAMMER, LAMOUR, adj. Of, or belonging to amber. S.

LAMMER-WINE, s. Amber-wine. S.

LAMMERMOOR LION, s. A sheep. S.

LAMMIE, s. A lamb; a darling. V. LAMBIE. S.

LAMMIE-SOUROCKS, s. The herb sorrel. S.

LAMOO, s. Any thing that is easily swallowed, or that gives pleasure in the act of swallowing, is said to gang down like lamoo. See Sup.

This is sometimes understood, as if lamb wool, S. pron. in the same manner, were meant. But the idea is repugnant to common sense. The phrase is probably of Fr. origin, from moust, mout, with the article prefixed, le mout, new or sweet wine; also, wort.

To LAMP, LEMP, v. a. To beat, to strike, or flog, S. B.

Teut. lomp-en, id. impingere; quassando et concutiendo quinquam rudius tractare; lomp-halsen, colaphos infligere, Kilian.

To LAMP, v. n. To go quickly, by taking long steps, Loth. See Sup.

To LAMP, v. n. The ground is said to lamp, or to be lampin, when it is covered with that kind of cobwebs which appear after dew or slight frost, S. B.

Perhaps from Teut. lompe, lint, spun flax; because the ground appears as if covered with the finest threads.

LAMP, s. A long and heavy step. Syn. Blad. S.

LAMPER, s. A person who takes long and heavy steps. S.

LAMPER EEL, s. A lamprey. V. RAMPAR EEL, S.

LAMPET, LEMPET, s. The limpet, a shell-fish; which adheres to rocks washed by the sea, S. patella. See S.

Butter, new cheis, and beir in May,

Connanis, coddillis, curdis and quhay,

Lapstaris, lempettis, mussillis in schellis,

Grene leikis, and all sic men may say,

Suppois sum of thame sourly smellis.

Scott. Chron. S. P. iii. 162, Bann. MS

Kilian gives the name of lompe to a species of fish of the holothuria kind.

LAMSONS, s. pl. A term used to denote the expenses of the Scots establishment at Campvere; or rather the expenses incurred by those who were sent over, in their passage.

"Many ways had been projected for the payment of your lamsons; but all had failed." Baillie's Lett. ii. 344. This letter is addressed to Mr Spang at Campvere.

The word is probably corr. from A.S. land-socn, Germ. land-suchung, transmigration.

LANCE, s. A surgeon's lancet. S.

LAND, s. A "clear level place in a wood." Gl. Wynt.

The kyng and that lord alsuá
To-gydder rad, and nane but tha,
Fere in the wode, and thare thai fand
A fayre brade land and a plesand.

Wyntown, vii. 1. 50.

Fr. lande, a wild or shrubby plain; C. B. llan, a plain; O. E. laund, mod. lawn.

LAND, s. A hook in the form of the letter S; S. B.

LAND, s. The country; on land, to land, in the country.

"That na indwellar within burgh nor land, purches ony lordschip in oppressioun of his neichtbouris." Acts, Ja. II. 1457, c. 88. Edit. 1566.

"That this be done alsweill in burrowes as on lande, throw all the realme." Acts, Ja. I. 1425, c. 76. Ibid.

"That the auld statutis and ordinancis maid of befoir, baith to burgh and to land—be obseruit." Acts, Ja. IV. 1491, c. 55. Ibid.

A.S. land, rus, the countrie; Su.G. id. In oppositione ad civitatem notat rus, Ihre; landslag, the law of the country, as opposed to stadslag, that of the city. Belg. land, id. whence land-rost, a country sheriff, land-huys, a country house, land-raad, the council of the country.

LAND, s. A house consisting of different stories; but always used to denote the whole building. It most commonly signifies a building, including different tenements, S. See Sup.

"From confinement in space, as well as imitation of their old allies the French, (for the city of Paris seems to have been the model of Edinburgh,) the houses were piled to an enormous height; some of them amounting to twelve storeys. These were denominated lands." Arnot's Hist. Edin. p. 241.

This seems only a secondary and oblique sense of the word, as originally denoting property in the soil, or a landed estate; a house being not less heritable property than the other. The name of the proprietor was often given to the building; as signifying, perhaps, that this was the heritable property of such a one. Estate, in a similar manner, denotes property in general, whether moveable or immovable.

To LAND, v. n. To end. Metaph. use of the E. v. to land. S.

LAND, LANDIN, LAN'EN, s. The quantity of standing corn which a band of reapers can take before them. S.

LANDE-ILL, s. Some kind of disease. S.

LAND OF THE LEAL. The state of departed souls, especially that of the blessed; heaven. See Sup.

I'm wearin' awa, John,
I'm wearin' awa, man,
I'm wearin' awa, John,
To the land of the leal.—Old Song.

This is a simple and beautiful periphrasis for expressing the state of the just; as intimating, that he who enjoys their society, shall suffer no more from that multiform deceit which so generally characterises men in the world. V. LEIL.

LANDBIRST, LAND-BRYST, s. "The noise and roaring of the sea towards the shore, as the billows break or burst on the ground," Rudd. But it properly signifies not the noise itself, but the cause of it; being equivalent to the English term, breakers.

In hy thai put thaim to the se,
And rowyt fast with all thair mayne:
Bot the wynd wes thaim agayne,
That swa hey gert the land-bryst ryss,
That thai moncht weld the se na wyss.

Barbour, iv. 444. MS.

Ryueris ran rede on spate with wattir broun,
And burnis harlis all thare bankis down;
And landbirst rumbland rudely with sic bere,
Sa loud neur rummyst wyld lyoun nor bere.

Doug. Virgil, v. 200, 26.

The prynce Tarchon can the schore behald,
Thare as him thocht suld be na sandis schald,
Nor yit na land birst lippering on the wallis.

Ibid, 325, 51.

The ingenious Mr Ellis renders this, "landsprings, accidental torrents;" Spec. E. P. i. 389. It may perhaps bear this sense in the second passage quoted; but in the other two it is applied to the sea.

Teut. berst-en, borst-en, rumpi, frangi, crepare; primarily denoting the act of breaking; and secondarily, the noise caused by it; Isl. brést-a, Su.G. brist-a, whence brestr, brist, fragor: nearly allied to the idea suggested by E. breakers.

LANDIMER, s. 1. A land-measurer.

2. A march or boundary of landed property. S.

"But it is necessar, that the measurers of land, called Landimers, in Latine, Agrimensores, obserue and keepe ane juste relation betwixt the length and the bredth of the measures, quhilk they vse in measuring of landes." Skene, Verb. Sign. vo. Particata.

This word, in the first sense, is used improperly; for it is evidently the same with A.S. landimere, landgemere, which denotes a boundary or limit of land, Su.G. landamaere, Isl. landamaeri, id. from land and mere, Su.G. maere, Belg. meere, a boundary. In this sense, the E. use meerstone for a landmark. Landimers is by Cowel rendered measures of land. L. B. Landimera. Ihre views Gr. μετρω, divido, as the origin.

LAND-GATES, adv. Towards the interior of a country. S.

LAND-HORSE, s. The horse on the ploughman's left hand, which treads the unploughed land. S.

LANDIS-LORDE, LANDSLORDE, s. A landlord.

"That all Lands-lordes and Baillies of the landes on the Bordours, and in the Hie-landes, quhair broken men hes dwelt, or presentlie dwellis,—sall be charged to find sufficient caution and sovertie;—That the Landis-lordes and Baillies, upon quhais landis, and in quhais jurisdiction they dwell, sall bring and present the persones compleined upon." Acts, Ja. VI. 1587, c. 93. Murray.

LAND-LOUPER, s. A vagabond; one who frequently flits from one place or country to another. It usually implies that the person does so in consequence of debt, or some misdemeanour, S. Synon. Scamp. See S. Land-louper, light skouper, ragged rouper, like a raven.

Polwart, Watson's Coll. iii. p. 30.

Heb, Sirs! what cairds and tinklers come,

An' neer-do-weel horse-coupers;

An' spae-wives fenyng to be dumb,

Wi' a' siclike landloupers?—Fergusson's Poems, ii. 27.

Teut. land-looper, erro vagus, multivagus, vagabundus, Kilian. This sense is quite different from that given by Johns. of E. landloper. This word is however, by Blount, rendered "a vagabond, or a rogue that runs up and down the country."

Skouper most probably has a similar sense; from Isl. skop-a, discurrere. Perhaps Moes.G. shev-ian, ire, is radically allied.

L A N

LAND-LOUPING, s. Rambling; migratory; shifting from place to place. S.

LAND-MAN, s. 1. A proprietor of land.

2. An inhabitant of the country, or rather a farmer. S.

Bot kirk-mennis cursit substance semis sweet

Till land-men, with that leud burd-lyme are kyttit.

Bannatyne Poems, p. 199, st. 20.

In the old Gothic laws landzman signifies an inhabitant of the country; A.S. landman, terrigena, Somn. But it is more immediately connected with Isl. lender menn, Su.G. laens-men, nobiles terrarum Domini, vel a Rege terris Praefecti, G. Andr.; according to Verel. those who held lands in fee. Ihre defines laensman, laendirman, as denoting one who held lands of the king, on condition of military service. He derives it from laen, feudum; vo. Laena.

LAND-METSTER, s. A land-measurer. S.

LANDRIEN, adv. In a straight course; directly. S.

LANDSLIP, s. A quantity of soil which slips from a declivity, and falls into the hollow below. S.

LANDSMARK-DAY, s. The day on which the Magistrates and Burgesses of towns ride the marches. S.

LAND-STAIL, s. That part of a dam-head which connects it with the land adjoining. S.

LAND-STANE, s. A stone found among the soil. S.

LANDTIDE, s. The undulating motion in the air in a warm day, arising from evaporation. Syn. Summer-couts. S.

LAND-TRIPPER, s. The sand-piper, a bird. Galloway.

"The sea fowls are sand-pipers, here called land-trippers," &c. P. Kirkcudbright, Statist. Acc. xi. 14.

LANDWAYS, adv. By land; overland, not by sea. S.

LANDWART, LANDART, LANDUART, adj. 1. Inland, of or belonging to the country; as opposed to boroughs. See Sup.

"The maist anciant nobilis that hes bene in ald tymis, tha detestit vrbante, and desirit to lyue in villagis and landuart tounis to be scheiphirdis." Compl. S. p. 66.

2. Having the manners of the country, rustic, boorish, S.

But, bred up far frae shining courts,

In moorland glens, where nought I see,

But now and then some landart lass,

What sounds polite can flow from me?

Ramsay's Works, i. 102.

"This idea of rusticity," as Sir J. Sinclair observes, "seems to have been taken from a notion, that the interior parts of the country are more barbarous and uncivilized than those of the sea-coast." Observ. p. 103. See Sup.

This term is sometimes used adverbially.

"And thay that sa beis fundin, haue a certane takin to landwart of the schireffis, and in burrowis of aldermen and bailleis." Acts, Ja. I. 1424, c. 46, edit. 1566.

"To burrow and landwart" is the common distinction used in our laws.

"Far to the landwart, out o' sight o' the sea, is a common phrase among the fishermen on the coasts of Fife and Angus. Gl. Compl.

It sometimes occurs as a s.

"At last scho was delyuerit of ane son namit Walter, quhilk within few yeris became ane vailyeant & lusty man, of greter curage & spreit than ony man that was nurist in landwart, as he was." Bellend. Cron. b. xii. c. 5. Ruri, Boeth.

A.S. land rus, and weard versus, toward the country.

V. LAND.

LAND-WASTER, s. A prodigal; a spendthrift. S.

LANDERS. Lady Landers, the name given to the insect called the Lady-Bird, Lady Fly, E. "Lady-Couch, or Lady-Cow, North;" Gl. Grose. The coccinella bipunctata, C. quinque-punctata, and C. septem-punctata, of Linn. all go by the same name. See S.

L A N

I am indebted to a literary friend for the following account.

"When children get hold of this insect, they generally release it, calling out—

Lady, Lady Landers!

Flee away to Flanders!

The English children have a similar rhyme.

Lady-bird, Lady-bird, fly away home;

Your house is on fire, your children at home.

These rude, but humane couplets, very generally secure this pretty little insect from the clutches of children. It is very useful in destroying the aphides that infect trees. For the Eng. rhyme, V. Linn. Transact. V.

In the North of S. there is a third rhyme, which dignifies the insect with the title of Dr Ellison.

Dr. Dr. Ellison, where will I be married?

East, or west, or south or north?

Take ye flight, and fly away."

It is sometimes also knighted, being termed Sir Ellison. In other places it is denominated Lady Ellison.

We learn from Gay, that the Lady-fly is used by the vulgar in E., in a similar manner, for the purpose of divination.

This Lady-fly I take from off the grass,

Whose spotted back might scarlet red surpass.

"Fly, Lady-bird, north, south, or east, or west, Fly, where the man is found that I love best."

Pastorals.

This insect seems to have been a favourite with different nations; and to have had a sort of patent of honour. In Sw. it is called Jung fru Marias gullhona, i. e. the Virgin Mary's gold hen; also, Jung fru Marie nychelpiga, the Virgin Mary's key-servant, q. housekeeper. It has another designation not quite so honourable, Lactfaerdig kona, wanton quean. It would appear, that both our names and those used in E. refer to the Virgin, who, in times of Popery, was commonly designed Our Lady, as is still the case in Popish countries.

As so many titles of honour have been given to this favourite insect, shall we suppose that ours has a similar origin; from Teut. land-heer, regulus, a petty prince? It being sometimes addressed as a male, sometimes as a female, the circumstance of lady being prefixed, can determine nothing as to the original meaning of the term conjoined with it.

LANDIER, s. An andiron. S.

LANDIN', s. The termination of a ridge of corn. S.

LANDLASH, s. A great fall of rain with high wind. S.

To LANE, v. a.

I may not ga with the, quhat wil thow mair?

Sa with the I bid nocht for to lane,

I am full red that I cum never againe.

Priests of Peblis, i. 41.

Leave? Gl. Pink. I have been inclined to view this as bearing the sense of conceal. But it seems the same with layne; merely signifying, not to lie, to tell the truth; "a common expletive," as Mr Scott has observed. It occurs frequently in Sir Tristrem—

Nay, moder, nought to layn,

This thef thi brother slough.

P. 94.

In the same sense we may understand the following passages:—

Monye alleageance lele, in lede nocht to lane it,

Off Aristotle, and all men, schairplye thai schewe.

Houlate, i. 21, MS.

For the quhilk thir lordis, in lede nocht to lane it

He besocht of socour, as sovrane in saile,

L A N

That thai wald pray Nature his present to renew,
Ibid. iii. 17. MS.

In one place it seems to signify conceal:—
 From the lady we will not lane,
 That ye are now come home again.—Sir Egeir, p. 14.
 V. LAYNE, 3.

LANE, p. pa. Perhaps, laid, or smeared; as laid skins. S.
 LANE, s. 1. A brook having a motion so slow as to be scarcely perceptible. 2. Those parts of a stream so smooth as to answer this description. S.

LANE, s. A loan; or perhaps gift. See Sup.

The thrid wolf is men of heretege;
 As lordis, that hes landis be Godis lane.

Henryson, Bann. P. p. 120, st. 19.

Su.G. laan, donum, concessio, from laen-a, laan-a, to lend, to give.

Ihre (vo. Laena) mentions the very phrase which occurs here as of great antiquity, and as applied by the peasants of the north to all the fruits of the field.

Annotabo,—omnia cerealia dona a ruricolis nostris appellari guds laan, quod proprie notat Dei donum. Antiquitatem phraseos testatur Hist. Alex. M.

The fylla sik swa af Guds laane:

Ita se oplent Dei munere, hoc est, cibo potuque.

Teut. leen, also, is rendered, praedium clientelare vel beneficiarium, colonia, feudum; Kilian.

LANE, adj. Lone; alone. See Sup.

Think ye it nocht ane blest band that bindis so fast,
 That none unto it adew may say bot the deithe lane?

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 46.

Hence the phraseology, his lane, hir lane, their lane, &c. S.

The cadger clims, new cleikit from the creill,
 And ladds uploips to lordships all thair lains.

Montgomery, MS. Chron. S. P. iii. 499.

There me they left, and I, but any mair,
 Gatewards my lane, unto the glen gan fare.

Ross's Helenore, p. 31.

This may be merely an abbrev. of alane, q. v. Seren.
 however, derives E. lone from Isl. lein-a occultare, leine latebrae. He mentions as synon. Sw. loenligt clandestinus, abditus.

LANELY, adj. Lonely. S.

LANELINESS, s. Loneliness. S.

LANERLY, adj. Lonely. S.

LANESOME, adj. Lonely. S.

To LANG, v. n. To long, S.

Whan they had eaten, and were straitly pang'd,
 To hear her answer Bydby greatly lang'd.
 And Lindy did na keep her lang in pain.

Ross's Helenore, p. 52.

Germ. lang-en, A.S. laeng-ian, Su.G. lang-ta, desiderare.

This is a secondary sense of the v. which signifies to draw, to draw out, to protract. It has this signification in other dialects; A.S. lang-ian, ge-laeng-an, Alem. leng-en, Germ. lang-en, trahere, protrahere, prolongare.

To LANG, v. n. To belong; to become; to be proper or suitable.

He is na man, of swylk a kynd
 Cummin, bot of the dewylis strynd,
 That can nothyr do na say
 Than langis to trowth and gud fay.

Wyntown, vi. 18. 320.

—Forgane thare face is sett reddy,
 All dantyis langand till ane kingis feist.

Doug. Virgil, v. 185, 37.

Lat thame commaund, and we sall furnis here
 The irne graith, the werkmen, and the wrichtis,
 And all that to the schippis langis of richtis.

Ibid. 373, 40.

L A N

Sometimes it is used without a prep.

And hir besech, that sche will in thy nede
 Hir counselle geve to thy weelfare and spede;
 And that sche will, as langith hir office,
 Be thy gude lady, help and counseloure.

King's Quair, iii. 41.

Germ. lang-en, pertinere.

Wachter views this as a metaphorical sense of lang-en tangere, to touch; "because," he says, "things pertaining to us resemble those which are contiguous, i. e. which nearly touch us." But, although this learned writer seems disposed to view lang-en tangere, as radically different from lang-en trahere, the former appears to be merely a secondary sense of the latter. Objects are said to touch each other, when the one is so drawn out or extended, as to make the nearest possible approximation to the other.

LANG, LANGE, adj. 1. Long, S. Yorks. 2. Continual; incessant; as, the lang din o' a schule, (school.) S.

Eftyr all this Maximiane

Agayne the empyre wald have tane;

And for that caus, in-tyl gret stryfe

He lede a lange tyme of hys lyfe,

Wyth Constantynys sonnys thre,

That anelyd to that ryawté.

Wyntown, v. 10. 478.

To think lang, to become weary, especially in waiting for any object; evidently an elliptical phrase, q. to think the time long.

O wow! quo' he, were I as free,

As first when I saw this country,

How blyth and merry wad I be!

And I wad never think lang.

Gaberlunzie-man, Ritson's S. Songs, i. 165.

Lang is used in the same sense in almost all the northern languages.

This appears to be formed from the v., as originally signifying, to draw out. The primary idea is undoubtedly length as to extension of bodies. It is applied to time only in a secondary sense.

LANG, adv. For a long time.

Lang assegeand thaire thai lay.

Wyntown, viii. 37. 159.

I lang hae thought, my youthfu' friend,

A something to have sent you,

Tho' it should serve nae other end

Than just a kind memento.—Burns, iii. 208.

LANGARE, LANGAYR, LANGERE, LANGYRE, adv. Long since; long ere now.

I knew ful wele, that it was thou langare,

That by thy craft and quent wylis sa sle,

Our confederatioun trublit and treté.

Doug. Virgil, 434, 8.

Syc sawis war langayr out of thy mynde.

Ibid. 339, 33.

From A.S. lang, and aere, Belg. eer, prius. As has been observed, it is a complete inversion of E. erelong.

LANG-CRAIG, s. A name given to an onion that grows all to the stalk, while the bulb does not form properly, S. q. long neck.

LANG-CRAIG, s. A cant term for a purse, Aberd.

O! had ye seen, wi' what a waefu' frown,

He drew lang craig, and tauld the scushy down.

Shirrefs' Poems p. 35.

LANG DAYS. Afore lang days, ere long. S.

LANG, s. Mony a lang, for a long time. At the lang, at length. S.

LANGBOARD, s. The long table in a farm-house, at which the master and servants sat at meat. S.

LANG-BOWLS, s. pl. A game played with heavy leaden bullets, in which he who throws farthest is victor. S.

LANGFAILLIE, s. Some part of female dress. S.

LANG HALTER TIME. That season of the year, when the fields being cleared, people claimed a right of occasional pasturage. S.

To LANGELE, v. a. Properly to tie together, on one side, the two legs of a horse or other animal. V.
LANGET. S.

Fat gars you then, mischievous tyke!

For this propine to prig,
That your sma' banes wou'd langel sair,
Thae are sae unco' big.

Poems in the Buchan dialect, p. 12.

Su.G. lang-a, to retard, from lang, long.

LANGELL, LANGLIT, LANGELT, s. V. LANGET.

LANGIS, prep. Along.

Ane hale legioun in ane rout followis hym,—

And thay that duellis langis the schil ryuere
Of Anien.— Doug. Virgil, 232, 38.

Alangis, q. v. is used in the same sense. But langis is evidently the more simple form; Su.G. laangs, laangs utmed floden, along the river's side; Belg. langs, id. langs de straat, along the street. The origin is lang, long, extended: for the term conveys the idea of one object advancing in respect of motion, or extending as to situation, as far as another mentioned in connexion.

LANGER, LANGOURE, s. 1. Weariness; dejection.

Langour lent is in land, al lichtnes is loist.
Doug. Virgil, 238, a. 20.

It is always pron. langer. To hald ane out of langer, to keep one from becoming dull, to amuse one, S.

"He was a fine gabby, auld-farren carly, and held us browly out o' langer bi' the rod." Journal from London, p. 2.

"Out o' sight, out o' langer." Ferguson's S. Prov. p. 26.

2. Earnest desire of; eagerness for.

"Wouldest thou desire to dwell with the Lord, desire to flit out of thy bodie: for if thou hast not a desire, but art afraide to flit, it is a token that thou hast no langour of God, and that thou shalt neuer dwell with him." Rollocke on the Passion, p. 383.

This may be merely Lat. languor, Fr. languueur, id. But there is considerable probability in the hint thrown out by Rudd. that it is from long, S. lang, as we say, to think lang, i. e. to become weary. It may be added, that the Goth. terms, expressive of gaiety, are borrowed from the adj. directly opposed, as signifying short. V. JAMPH, SCHORTSUM. See Sup.

LANGET, LANGELL, s. A tether, or rope, by which the fore and hinder feet of a horse or cow are fastened together, to hinder the animal from kicking, S. See S.

"It is not long since Louse bore langett, no wonder she fall and break her neck," S. Prov.; "spoken when one has suddenly started up in a high station, and behaves himself saucily in it;" Kelly, p. 198. Ferguson gives it thus: "It is short while since the louse bore the langell;" p. 21. "Ye have ay a foot out of the langle;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 82. This seems the more ancient form, as allied to the v. Langel, q. v. Langet, indeed, seems merely the part. pa. of the v., q. langelt, that by which any animal is entangled. A. Bor. langled, "having the legs coupled together at a small distance," Gl. Grose.

Hence, to lowse a langet, metaph. to make haste, to quicken one's pace, S.

LANGLETIT, part. pa. Having the fore and hind legs tied together to prevent running. S.

LANG-HEADIT, adj. Having a great stretch of understanding and much foresight. S.

LANGRIN, AT LANGRIN, adv. At length, S.; at the long run. E.

At langrin, wi' waxin and fleechin,
And some bonnie wallies frae Hab,
And mammie and daddie's beseechin,
She knit up her thrum to his wab.

Jamieson's Popular Ball. i. 295.

LANGKAIL, s. Coleworts not shorn, S. See Sup.

And there will be langkail and pottage,
And bannocks of barley meal.

V. KAIL.

Ritson's S. Songs, i. 208.

LANGLINS, prep. Along, S. B.

Whan she her loof had looked back and fore,
And drawn her finger langlins every score,
Up in her face looks the auld hag forfairn.

Ross's Helenore, p. 61.

From lang, and the termination ling, q. v.

LANG-LUGGED, adj. Quick of hearing. S.

LANG-NEBBIT, adj. 1. Having a long nose, S.

Impos'd on by lang-nebbit jugglers,
Stock-jobbers, brokers, cheating smugglers,
Wha set their gowden girns sae wylie,
Tho' ne'er sae cautious, they'd beguile ye.

V. NEBB.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 330.

2. Acute in understanding. 3. Prying; disposed to criticise. 4. Applied to a staff with a long prong or point. 5. Used to denote preternatural beings in general. 6. Applied to learned and pedantic terms; as, Lang-nebbit words. S.

LANGOUS, prep. Along. V. LANGIS. S.

LANG PARE EFT. Long after; for a long time.

Scotland was dissawarra left,

And wast nere lyand lang pare eft.

Wyntown, iii. 3. 116.

Probably corr. from A.S. lang-faer, of long duration; whence lang-fernysse, long distance of time.

LANGSYNE, adv. Long ago; long since.

Hame o'er langsyne, you hae been blyth to pack
Your a' upon a sarkless soldier's back.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 74.

Langsyne is sometimes used as if it were a noun.

Should auld acquaintance be forgot,

And never brought to min'?

Should auld acquaintance be forgot,

And days o' langsyne?

Burns, iv. 123.

A. S. longe siththan, diu exinde; Sw. laenge sedan, long ago, long since. V. SYNE.

LANG-SADDIL BED, LANGSAILD BED. Perhaps, corr. of Langsettle, q. v. S.

LANG SANDS. To leave one to the Lang Sands, to cut one out of a share of property to which he is entitled. S.

LANG-SEAT, s. The same with Lang-settle. S.

LANG-SETTLE, LANG-SADDLE, s. A long wooden seat, resembling a settee, at the fireside of an old farmhouse; generally appropriated to the gudeman. S.

LANGSUM, LANGSOME, adj. 1. Slow; tedious, in a general sense, S.

On fute I sprent, into my bare sark,

Wilful for to complete my langsum wark.

Doug. Virgil, 403, 54.

2. Tedious in relation to time. 3. Denoting procrastination. 4. Tedious in regard to local extension; as, a langsum gait, a long road. S.

A. S. langsum, nimis longus, Isl. langsamur, Teut. langsaem, tardus, lentus.

LANGSUMLIE, adv. Tediously. S.

LANGSUMNESS, s. Tediousness; delay. S.

LANG-TAILED, LONG-TAILED, adj. Prolix; tedious. S.

L A N

LANG-TONGU'D, LANG-TONGUED, adj. Babbling, apt to communicate what ought to be kept secret, S. See S.
 "Lang-tongu'd wives gae lang wi' bairn;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 48.; i. e. they too soon tell others of their situation.

LANG-WAYES, prep. Along.

LANGSPIEL, s. A species of harp. S.

LANNIMOR, s. A person employed by conterminous proprietors to adjust their marches. S.

To LANS, LANCE, v. a. To throw out; to fling.

Frekis in forstarne rewlit weil thar ger,

Ledys on luff burd, with a lordlik fer,

Lansys laid out, to thar passage sound.

Wallace, ix. 57. MS.

— Leads on leiburd with a lordly feere,

Lynes laid out to look their passage sound.

Edit. 1648, p. 211.

— Leids on loof-board, with a lord-like effeir.

Lansys laid out, their passage for to sound.

Edit. 1758, p. 251.

I suspect that ledys does not signify leads affixed to lines, for the purpose of taking soundings; but people, as equivalent to frekis in the preceding line; and that laid is for leid, or lead. Thus lansys laid is, throws out lead, the sing. being very often used in S. for the pl.

Fr. lanc-er, id. The term seems borrowed from the act of throwing a lance or spear; L. B. lanc-eare, hastiludio sese exercere; Arm. lanc-a, jaculari, lanceam vibrare.

To LANS, v. n. 1. To spring forward; to move with velocity.

Quham Turnus, lansand lichtly ouer the landis,

With spere in hand persewis for to spyll.

Doug. Virg. 297, 16.

Evidently a secondary sense of the v. a.

2. It seems to denote the delicate and lively strokes of a musician on his violin.

Thome Lutar wes thair menstral meit,

— as he culd lanss!

He playit sa schill, and sang sa sweit,

Qubill Towsie tuik ane transs.

Chr. K. st. 6.

The minstrels, it is said, could in general acquit themselves as dancers, as well as singers and poets. I am inclined, however, to view the term as used in the sense given above.

LANS, LAUNCE, s. A leap; a spring.

And he that wes in juperty

To de, a launce he till him maid,

And gat him be the nek but baid.

A loup, edit. 1620.

Barbour, x. 414. MS.

LANSPREZED, s. A term of contempt, borrowed from the military life.

Beld bisseed, marmissed, lansprezed to thy lowns.

Polwart, Watson's Coll. iii. 32.

The term is used by Massinger:

"I will turn lance prezado."

"The lowest range and meanest officer in an army is called the lancepesado or prezado, who is the leader or governor of half a file; and therefore is commonly called a middle-man, or captain over four." The Soldier's Accidence, Massinger, iii. 51, N.

O.E. lancepesade, "one that has the command of ten soldiers, the lowest officer in a foot company, who is to assist the corporal in his duty, and supply his place in absence; an under-corporal;" Phillips.

Fr. lance-pessade, the meanest officer in a foot company; Cotgr. Lance spezzate is thus defined, Dict. Trev.: "Est un officier reformé, qui étoit entrefois un gendarme démonté qu'on plaçoit dans l'infanterie avec quelque avantage, dont on a fait Ans-pessade, qui marche après le caporal. Le Pape a encore pour sa garde, outre trois cens Suisses, douce lances spezzates, ou officiers reformés." It is also written lanspecade and lansespezzade. The term is properly Ital. lancia spezzata; lancia a lance, and spezzata broken, synon. with lancia rotta. It seems originally to refer to the reduction of the regiment or corps, in which such officers have served. Lansprezed to thy lowns, is therefore equivalent to, petty officer to thy rascally followers; as beld bisset and marmissed signify, bald buzzard and marmoset.

16

L A P

LANT, s. Commotion; confusion. S.

LANT, s. The old name for Loo, a game at cards. S.

LANTIT, part. adj. Reduced to a dilemma; q. Looed. S.

LANTEN-KAIL, s. V. LENTRIN. S.

To LAP, v. a. 1. To environ; applied to the surrounding of a place with armed men, in order to a siege. See Sup.

Bot Sotheroun men durst her no castell hald,

Bot left Scotland, befor as I yow tald,

Saiff ane Morton, a capdane fers and fell,

That held Dundee. Than Wallace wald noch duell;

Thiddyr he past, and lappyt it about.

Wallace, ix. 1840, MS. also, xi. 96.

2. To embrace; applied to the body.

— Gruffyng on his kneis,

He lappit me fast by baith the theys.

Doug. Virgil, 88, 54.

Genua amplexus, Virg.

3. To fold; used in a sense nearly the same with that of the E. word, but in relation to battle.

— Thay desirit on the land,

To lap in armes, and adione hand in hand.

Ibid. 470, 42.

From Su.G. Germ. lapp, Alem. lappa, A.S. laepp, segmentum panni, a small bit of cloth.

LAP,* s. Metaph. applied to the extremity of one wing of an army. S.

LAP, pret. Leaped. V. LOUP, v.

LAPIS. Blew Lapis. Perhaps, Lapis Lazuli. S.

LAPLOVE, s. Corn convolvulus; climbing buckweed. S.

To LAPPER, v. a. To besmear; to cover so as to clot. S.

LAPPERED, part. pa. Coagulated; lappert milk, milk that has been allowed to stand till it has soured and curdled of itself; lappert blude, clotted blood, S.; lopperd, A Bor. Lancash.

There will be good lapper'd-milk kebbucks,

And sowens, and fardles, and baps.

Ritson's S. Songs, i. 211.

I vow, my hair-mould milk would poison dogs,

As it stands lapper'd in the dirty cogs.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 3.

It is surprising that Sibb. should view this as "slightly corrupted from Teut. klotter-melch, or klobber-saen, lac coagulatum." It is beyond a doubt radically the same with Isl. hlaup coagulum, liquor coagulatus, (from hleipe, coagulo;) G. Andr. Su.G. loepe, Dan. loebe, Alem. lip, Belg. lebbe, id. We call that milk, says Ihre, mioelken loepnar, and loepen mioelk, which thickens, being soured by heat. Germ. lab-en, to coagulate, lab rennet.

These terms have certainly been formed from the different verbs signifying to run. This is the primary sense of Isl. hleyp-a, and of Su.G. loep-a, to which loepe is so nearly allied. Dan. loebe assumes the very form of loeb-er, cur-rere. Our vulgar phrase is synon. The milk's run, i. e. it is coagulated, q. run together into clotts. It may be added, that the E. s. rennet is undoubtedly from Germ. rinn-en, ge-rinnen, coagulari, in se fluere, Wachter; whence the phrase, exactly synon. with ours, die milch gerinnend.

LAPPIE, s. A splash; a sort of pool; a place where water stands. Ang. Laip, Loth.

Shall we deduce this from Teut. lapp-en, sorbendo haurire; because at such a place cattle use to drink, and dogs to lap? We might suppose it to be radically the same with loup, s. q. v. did not this properly denote running water.

L A R

LAPRON, s. A young rabbit; Gl. Sibb. See Sup.

LARACH, s. The site of a building, in S. a stance. S.

LARBAL, adj. Lazy; sluggish. S.

LARBAR, s. V. LAIRBAR.

LARD, s.

I him forfeit as ane lard, and laithit him mekil.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 58.

Mr. Pink. gives this word as not understood. But it is most probably the same with Belg. laerd, luyaerd, a stupid or inactive fellow; ignavus, stupidus,—non recte fungens officio.

LARDUN, s. A piece of bacon.

The ravin, rowpand rudely in a roch rane,
Was Dene rurall to rede, rank as a rake,
Quhill the lardun was laid, held he na hous.

Houlate, i. 17. MS.

Fr. lard. This sense is certainly preferable to that of larder, given by Mr. Pink.

LARE, s. Place of rest. V. LAIR, I.

To LARE, v. n. To stick in the mire. V. LAIR.

To LARE, LERE, LEAR, v. a. I. To teach, S.

And, for he saw scho wes hys ayre,
He leryd hyr of mynystralsy,
And of al clerenes of clergy:
Scho hat Elane, that syne fand
The cors in-to the Haly land.

Wyntown, v. 9. 783.

2. To learn, to acquire the knowledge of, S.

"As the old cock crows, the young cock lears." S.

Prov. Kelly, p. 13.

Be sic access he kend wele,
And leryd thare langage ilka dele.

Wyntown, v. 3. 22.

Al vice detest, and vertew lat vs lere.

Doug. Virgil, 354, 12.

Hence leard, learned, as a weil-leard man, vir doctus; lair-master, a gude lair-master, a good instructor; Teut. leer-meester, praeceptor. "Layer-father is an instructor, teacher, or prompter;" Yorks. Dialogue, Gl. p. 107. "Lare-master, a schoolmaster or instructor. North." Gl. Grose.

A.S. laer-an, Alem. leer-en, Germ. ler-en, to teach; Germ. ler-en, Belg. leer-en, to learn; Isl. laerd, doctus.

LARE, LEAR, LERE, s. Education; learning, S. See S.

Bot this Japis—

Had leuer haue knawin the science, and the lare,
The nicht and fors of strenthy herbis fyne,
And all the cunning vse of medicyne.

Doug. Virgil, 423, 41.

"Hand in use is father of lear." Ferguson's S. Prov. p. 12.

A.S. laere, Belg. leer, Alem. lera, leru, id.

LARE, s. A stratum; corr. from E. layer. S.

LAREIT, LAUREIT, s. The name of a chapel dedicated to our Lady of Loretto, which formerly stood a little eastward from Musselburgh. A small cell still remains. The place is now called, according to the original design of the designation, Loretto.

This chapel, it is evident, once possessed great celebrity. Hence it is often mentioned by our poets. Persons of both sexes used, in the time of Popery, to go thither in procession; or to meet at this place, as a favourite rendezvous. The greatest abuses were committed under pretence of religion.

I haue sene pas ane maruellous multitude,

VOL. II.

17

L A R

Young men and wemen flingand on thair feit:

Under the forme of fenyeit sanctitude,

For till adorne ane image in Laureit.

Mony cum with thair marrowis for to meit,

Committing thair foull fornicatioun:

Sum kissit the claggit tail of the Hermeit;

Quhy thole ye this abhominatioun?

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592. p. 75.

Here, it appears, there was not only an image of the Virgin, but a hermit who had the highest character for sanctity and miraculous power. Hence the poet adds,

Quhy thole ye vnder your dominioun

Ane craftie Preist, or feinyeit fals Hermeit?

Ibid. p. 76.

As it has been customary, from time immemorial, for young women to go to the country in the beginning of May, the maidens of Edinburgh used to go a-maying to Lareit.

In May gois madynis till La Reit,

And has thair mynyonis on the streit,

To horss thame quhair the gait is ruch:

Sum at Inche bukling bray thay meit,

Sum in the middis of Musselburch.

Scott, Ever-green, ii. 189. st. 12. MS.

Alareit is used in the same sense. The Earl of Glencairn entitles his Satyre against the Romish clergy, Ane Epistill direct fra the halie Hermeit of Alareit, to his brethren the Gray Freirs. Knox's Hist. p. 24.

The reader may, for a further account of this chapel, consult a curious note, Chron. S. P. iii. 74.

LARG, LARGE, adj. 1. Liberal; munificent.

Off other mennys thing larg wes he.

Barbour, xi. 148. MS.

Welle lettryd he wes, and rycht wertws;

Large, and of gret almws

Till all pure folk, seke and hale,

And til all othir rycht liberale.

Fr. id. Lat. larg-us.

Wyntown, vii. 6. 346.

2. Abundant.

"As, fodder is large, plentiful, or in plenty." Sir J. Sinclair's Observ. p. 103.

LARGES, LERGES, s. 1. Liberty; free scope; opposed to a state of confinement or restraint.

And for he dred thir thingis suld faile,

He chesyt furthwart to trawail,

Quhar he mycht at his larges be;

And swa dryve furth his destané.

Barbour, v. 427. MS.

Fr. au large, at large, in a state of liberty.

2. Liberality in giving. See Sup.

Of all natyownys generally

Comendit he wes gretumly

Of wyt, wertew, and larges,

Wyth all, that he wyth knawyn wes.

Wyntown, ix. 27. 85.

Fr. largesse. In ancient times it was customary to use this term, in soliciting a donative on days of jollity; as appears from the metrical title of a poem in Bann. Collection, p. 151.

Lerges, lerges, lerges hay,

Lerges of this New-yeir Day.

This custom also prevailed in France. At the time of the consecration of their kings, and at other great ceremonies, the heralds were wont to throw among the people pieces of gold and silver; and the people used to cry, Largesse, largesse. Hence the money thus scattered was called pieces de largesse; Dict. Trev. A similar custom prevailed in England, of which some vestiges yet remain. When tournaments were held, "a multitude of minstrels," as Godwin observes, "furnished with every instrument of martial music, were at hand, to celebrate the acts of prowess which might distinguish the day. No sooner had a master-stroke taken place in any instance, than the music sounded, the heralds proclaimed it aloud, and a thousand shouts, echoed from man to man, made the air resound with the name of the hero. The combatants rewarded the proclaimers of their feats in proportion to the vehemence and loudness of their cries; and their liberalities produced yet other cries, still preserved in the customs of our husbandmen at their harvesthome, deafening the ear with the reiteration of largesse." Godwin's Life of Chaucer, i. 206, 207.

C

L A S

LARGELY, adv. Liberally.

And largly among his men
The land of Scotland delt he then.

Barbour, xi. 146. MS.

LARICK, s. The larch, a tree. S.

LARICK, s. A lark. V. LAVEROCK.

LARICK'S LINT, s. Great golden maidenhair, S.
Polytrichum commune, Linn.

LARIE, s. Laurel.

There turpentine and larie berries:
His medicine for passage sweer,
That for the van, these for the reer.
—Trembling he stood, in a quandarie;
And purg'd, as he had eaten larie.

Colvil's Mock Poem, P. ii. p. 8. 23.

Fr. lauriel, a bay-tree; lauraye, a grove of laurel.

LASARE, LASERE, s. Leisure.

Ne gat he lasare anys his aynd to draw.

Doug. Virgil, 307, 40.

Quhy will thou not fle spedely by nycht,
Quhen for to haue thou has lasere and mycht?

Fr. loisir.

Ibid. 119, 54.

LASARYT, part. pa. At leisure. S.

LASCHE, adj. 1. Relaxed, in consequence of weakness or fatigue; feeble; unfit for exertion, S.B. See Sup.

Ouer al his body furth yet the swete thik;—
The feblit breith ful fast can bete and blaw,
Amyd his wery breist and lymmes lasche.

Doug. Virgil, 307, 42.

2. It is also rendered lazy, Rudd. I am not certain whether it be used in this sense, S.B.

3. Devoted to idleness; relaxed in manners.

"Allace, I laubyr nycht and day vitht my handis to neureis lasche and inutil idil men, and thai recompens me vitht hungyr and vitht the sourd." Compl. S. p. 191.

It is rendered base, Gl. But this is too indefinite a sense.

Fr. lasche, Teut. leisz, and Lat. lax-us, have been mentioned as cognate terms. To these we may add Germ. lass, tired, faint; and Su.G. loes. Notat id, quod molle et flac-cidum est, opponiturque firmo et duro; Ihre. Isl. loskr, ignavus, Moes.G. laus, and A.S. leas, are radically allied.

To LASH out, v. n. To break out; to be relaxed in a moral sense. S.

To LASH, v. n. To fall or be poured down with force;
applied to rain or any body of water. S.

LASH, s. A heavy fall of rain. S.

LASH of water. A great quantity of water thrown forcibly. S.

To LASH water, or any liquid. To throw forcibly in great quantities. It's LASHIN' ON. It rains heavily. S.

LASHNESS, LASHNES, s. 1. Relaxation in consequence of great exertion.

"In the end, after some lashness and fagging, he made such a pathetic oration for an half-hour, as ever comedian did upon a stage." Baillie's Lett. i. 291.

L A T

2. Looseness of conduct; relaxation of discipline or of manners.

"Alwaies in the meane time, suppose there be trews promised, yit stand ye on your gairds, & let it not come to passe be your misbehaueour and lashnes, that the glorie of God, & libertie of this citie be impaired in any waies, bot stand on your gairdes, that as this citie hath bene a terrour to euill men of befoir, so it may terrifie him also."
Bruce's Eleven Serm. 1591. Sign. O. 5. b.

LASK, s. A diarrhoea, to which black cattle are subject, S.B.

"The lask, or scour, is likewise a distemper seldom cured. It generally originates from feebleness, cold, or grazing on a soft rich pasture, without a mixture of hard grass." Prize Essays, Highl. Soc. S. ii. 268. This word occurs in Skinner.

LASKAR, s. A large armful of hay or straw, as much as one can lift in both arms, Tweedd.

Isl. hla denotes the load of a sledge; quantum portat traha vel currus; Su.G. lass, id. It might, however, be deduced from las-a, A.S. les-an, to gather.

LASS, s. 1. A sweetheart, S. 2. A maid-servant. See S.
The lads upon their lasses ca'd
To see gin they were dress'd.

V. LAD.

R. Galloway's Poems, p. 90.

To GANG TO SEE THE LASSES. To go a-wooing. S.

LASS-BAIRN, s. A female child. S.

LASSIE, s. 1. A young girl; strictly one below the age of puberty. 2. A fondling term. S.

LASSOCK, s. Diminutive from E. lass. S.

LASS-QUEAN, s. A female servant; rather a free and contemptuous designation. S.

LASS-WEAN, s. A female child. S.

LAST, s. A measure used in Orkney. See Sup.

"Item, 24 meales makis ane last. Item, of meile and malt, called coist, ane last makis ane Scottish chalder."
Skene, Verb. Sign. vo. Serplaith.

Su.G. laest, mensura 12 tonnarum, Ihre. But the measure, he says, differs according to the nature of the commodity.

LAST, s. Durability; lastingness. S.

LASTIE, LASTY, adj. Durable; E. lasting. S.

LASTER, (comparative,) adv. More lately. S.

LASTEST, (superlative,) adv. Last. S.

LAST LEGS. A person is said to be on his last legs when his animal strength is almost exhausted by exertion, disease, or age; also when he is supposed to be on the eve of bankruptcy. S.

To LAT, v. a. 1. To suffer, to permit, S.B. let, E.

Your strenth, your worschip, and your mycht,
Wald nocht lat yow eschew the fycht.

Barbour, xviii. 531. MS.

—That the Maystyr walde ayrly
Cum, and a part of his schipemen,
To spek wyth hym, and bad hym then
Lat thame cum hardely hym til,
And thai suld entre at thare wille.

Wyntown, viii. 38. 37.

Belg. lat-en, laet-en, A. S. laet-an, Moes.G. let-an, Dan.
lad-er.

2. To LAT RE. To let alone, to cease from, S. See S.

Lat be to vex me, or thy self to spill.

Desine, Virg.

Doug. Virgil, 112, 19.

The rial stile, clepit Heroicall,—

Suld be compilit, but tenchis or vode wourde,

All lous langage and lichtnes lattand be.

Ibid. 271, 32.

L A T

3. LAT BE, LET BE. Much less, far less; q. not once to mention, to take no notice of.

To clim the craig it was nae buit,
Let be to preiss to pull the fruit,
In top of all the trie.

Cherry and Slae, st. 26.

"Long it was ere a person could be found of parts requisite for such a service. Morton, Roxburgh, let be Haddington or Stirling, were not of sufficient shoulders." Baillie's Letters, i. 51.

"One Trewman confessed, that he had heard that knave's motion to him, without dissenting, of joining with the Scots, if a party should come over to Ireland; but withal did avow, that he had never any such resolution, let be plot, for accomplishment of any such motion." Ibid. i. 170.

4. To LAT GAE. To let off; to let fly. 5. To break wind. 6. To lose the power of retention. 7. To raise the tune. S.

8. To LAT O'ER. To swallow; as "she wadna lat o'er a single drap." See Sup. S.

LAT-O'ER, s. The act of swallowing; appetite. S.

Isl. lett-a, Sw. laet-a, desinere, Verel.; the very term in Virg. for which Doug. uses lat be.

To LAT, LET, v. a. To hinder; to retard, E. let.

—The Mwne—

—Lettis ws the Sowne to se

In als mekil qwantyté,

As it passis be-twix oure sycht,

And of the Swne luttis ws the lycht.

Wyntown, viii. 37. 86.

Moes.G. lat-jan, A.S. lat-an, lett-an, Su.G. laet-ia, Isl. let-ia, Belg. lett-en, id.

To LAT, LET, v. n. To esteem; to reckon; frequently with the prep. of; pret. leyt, lete.

And thai, for thair mycht anerly,

And for thai lat off ws heychtly,

And for thai wald distroy ws all.

Maiss thaim to fycht.—

Barbour, xii. 250. MS.

This is rendered set, edit. 1620.

Into this world of it we lat leichtly,

Throw fleschely lust fulfillit with folly;

Quhill all our tyme in fantasy be tint,

And than to mend we may do nocht but minte.

Priests of Peblis, S. P. R. 1. 3.

All the foulis of the firth he defoulit syne,

Thus lete he na man his pere.

Houlate, iii. 21. MS.

The man leyt him begilyt ill,

That he his gud salmound had tynt.

Thought, edit. 1628.

Barbour, xix. 680. MS.

And thai sall let thaim trumptyt ill

Fra thai wyt weill we be away.

Ibid. v. 712. MS.

i. e. They shall think that they are miserably deceived.

Let is thus used O.E.:

All that men saine he lete it soth, and in solace taketh.

P. Ploughman, Fol. 80. a.

A.S. laet-an, reputare, aestimare, judicare. Diorost laetath, pretiosissimum aestimant, Boet. p. 158.

To LAT, LATT, v. a. To leave.

Lat I the Queyn to message redy dycht,

And spek furth mar off Wallace trawaill rycht,

Wallace, viii. 1150. MS.

Lat I this King makand hys ordinans,

My purpos is to spek sum thing off Frans.

Ibid. ix. 1882. MS.

In these and other passages, leave is substituted, edit. 1648.

This is a very ancient sense of the v., corresponding to 19

L A T

Sw. laat-a, to leave, Seren. A.S. laet-an, id. Laet thaer thin lae, Leave there thy offering, Matt. v. 24. ic laete nu to thinum dome ma thone to hiora; Relinquo nunc tuo judicio plus quam eorum; Boeth. 38, 5. Moes.G. let-an, af-let-an, id. Afetandans ina gath lauhun allai; Leaving him, they all fled, Mark xiv. 50. Germ. lass-en.

This is the most simple, and probably was the original sense of the v. For what does the idea of permission, which is the ordinary sense, imply; but that a man is left to take his own will, or to prefer one mode of acting to another?

To LAT, v. n. To put to hire, E. let.

"He quha lattis or sets the thing for hyre, to the vse of ane other man, sould deliver to him the samine thing." Reg. Maj. B. iii. c. 14. s. 2.

Lattin, part. pa. "Any thing lattin and receaved to hyre for rent and profite." Ibid. Tit.

LATCH, s. 1. A dub; a mire; Gl. Sibb. See Sup.

2. A rut, or the track of a cart-wheel, S.O.

LATCHY, adj. Full of ruts, S.O.

LATE,* adj. At late, at a late hour. S.

To LATE, LEET, v. a. 1. A term applied to metal, when it is so heated in the fire that it may be bent any way without breaking, S. It is used with respect to wire of any kind. Latit, part. pa.

Sum stele hawbrekis forgis furth of plate,

Birnyst flawkertis and leg harnes fute hate,

With latit sowpyl siluer weil ammelyt.

Doug Virgil, 230, 26.

Sum latit lattoun but lay lepis in lawde lyte.

Ibid. 238, b. 49.

2. "They say also, iron is lated, when it is covered with tin," S. Rudd.

In the latter sense it seems allied to Su.G. laad-a, lod-a, loed-a, to solder. In the former, it is more allied to A.S. lithe-gian, lith-ian, ge-lith-ian, to soften, to attemper, mollem et tractabilem se praeberere, Lye; as indeed iron is softened by heat.

To LATHE, v. a. To loath.

He luwyd men, that war wertuows;

He lathyd and chastyd all vtyows.

A.S. lath-ian, id.

Wyntown, 7. 10. 489.

LATHAND, part. pr.

—Laithly and lousy, lathand as a leik.

Dunbar, Evergreen, ii. 53. st. 7.

This Ramsay explains "feeble, weak and faded." It is certainly more consistent with the other epithets, to render it, "causing disgust, as a leek does by its smell."

LATHE, adj. V. LAITH.

LATHELY, adj. V. LAITHLY.

LATHERON, s. 1. A sloven. V. LADRONE.

2. A limmer.

LATHRON, LATHERIN, adj. Lazy; low; vulgar. S.

LATIENGE, s. Leisure. S.

LATINER, s. One learning the Latin language. S.

LATIOUSE, adj. Free; unrestrained.

Mankinde can nevir wele lyke,

Bot gif he have a latiouse lyving.

Ballad, S. P. R. iii. 124.

Lat. latus, or compar. neut latius.

LATRINE, LATRON, LATRONS, s. A privy. S.

LATTER, adj. Lower, inferior in power or dignity.

"Life, lim, land, tenement, or escheit, may not be judged in latter Courts then Courts of Baron; bot gif these Courts have the samine fredome, that the Baron hes." Baron Courts, c. 47, comp. with Quon. Att. c. 43. "Life or limme may not be adjudged, or decerned as escheit, in ane court, inferior to ane Baron Court, except that court haue the like libertie and fredome." &c.

This seems a comparative formed from A.S. laith, lathe, malum; or a corruption of lythr, bad, base; lythra sceatt, bad money; lythre, pejus.

LATTER-MEAT, LEATER-MEATE, s. Victuals brought from the master's to the servant's table. S.

LATTYN, s. Hindrance; impediment.

Than grathit sone thir men of armyss keyne:

Sadlye on fute on to the housse thai socht,

And entryt in, for lattyn fand thai nocht.

V. LAT, v. to hinder.

Wallace, iv. 232, MS.

LATTOUCE, s. The herb lettuce. S.

LATTOUN, s. 1. A kind of mixt metal, E. latten. See S.

Sum latit lattoun, but lay lepis in lawde lyte.

Doug. Virgil, 238, b. 49.

i. e. "Some heat lattoun that is latit, against law, little to their praise." V. LATE, v.

2. Electrum, "a metal composed of gold and silver," Rudd.

The licht leg harnes on that vthir syde,

With gold and birnist lattoun purifyit,

Graithit and polist wele he did espy.—Ibid, 265, 40.

3. The colour of brass.

— Bricht Phebus schene souerane heuinnis E,

The opposit held of his chymes hie,

Clere schynand bemes, and goldin sumeris hew,

In lattoun cullour altering all of new;

Kything no signe of heit be his vissage,

So nere approachit he his wynter stage;

Reddy he was to enter the thrid morne,

In cludy skyes vnder Capricorne.—

Ibid. 200. 9.

In this sense it is also used by Chaucer.

Phebus waxe old, and hewed like laton,

That in his hote declination,

Shone as the burned gold with stremes bright;

But now in Capricorne adoun he light,

Where as he shone ful pale, I dare wel sain.

Frankel. T. v. 11557.

So striking is the resemblance between this, and the description given by Douglas, that one would almost think that he had had the language of Chaucer in his eye.

Isl. laaton, orichalcum, Belg. latoen, Germ. letton, id.

Various conjectures as to the origin may be seen in Jun. Etym. in vo.

LAUANDER, LAVANDER, s. A laundress. S.

LAUANDRIE, s. The laundry. S.

LAVATUR, s. A vessel to wash in; a laver. S.

To LAUCH, (gutt.) v. n. To laugh. Pret. leuch; part. pa. leuchin. S.

LAUCH, s. A laugh. S.

LAUCHER, s. A laugher. S.

LAUCH, LAWIN, LAWING, (pron. lauwin), s. A tavern-bill; the reckoning.

The first is sometimes used, S. B., only the latter in other parts of S.

Ay as the gudwyf brocht in,

Ane scorit upon the wauch.

Ane bad pay, ane ither said, nay,

Byd quhill we rakin our lauch.

Peblis to the Play, st. 11. Select S. Ball. 1. 6.

Rakin our lauch, i. e. calculate what is every one's share of the bill.

The dogs were barking, cocks were crawling,

Night-drinking sots counting their lawin.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 535.

— Sojors forcing alehouse brawlings

To be let go without their lawings.

Colvil's Mock Poem, P. i. p. 32.

Sibbald derives it from Goth. laun, remuneratio. Lawin has indeed considerable resemblance to this: and Germ. lohn, is used in the same sense; wages, recompense, pay; fuhrlohn, fare, freight; taglohn, pay for a day's work.

But as lauch seems the original form, the term. ing, or in, being apparently of later use, the word claims a different parentage. Tent. ghe-lagh, ghe-laegh, symbolum, com-potatio; club, or shot, a drinking together. Kilian derives this from leggh-en, to lay, because every one lays down, or contributes his share. Ghe-lagh-vry, shot-free; ghe-lagh betaalen, to pay the reckoning. Germ. gelag, gelach, com-potatio. Proprie, says Wachter, est collatio, vel symbolum convivale, quod quisque comessantium pro rata confert, a legen offerre, conferre, prorsus ut gilde a gelten offerre. Ge est nota collectivi, quia unus solus non facit collectam nec symposium.

According to this account, the origin of the term is referred back to that early period, in which the northern nations, when celebrating the feasts of heathenism, were wont to contribute, according to their ability, meat and drink, which they consumed in convivial meetings. V. SKUL.

Su.G. lag, in like manner, signifies social intercourse, fellowship; also, a feast, a convivial entertainment: laegga, samman, to collect, or gather the reckoning; Sw. betala laget, to pay for the entertainment, Wideg. Isl. lagsmen, lagbraeder, lagun-autur, denote companions, properly in feasting or drinking. Enn thessa tign a huer, laugonautur adrum at veita; Hunc vero honorem contubernaliū quisque contubernali suo exhibere debet; Spec. Regal. p. 370.

According to Olaus, lag has a different origin from that which has been assigned to the Germ. word. He derives lagunautur from Isl. laug, drink, liquor, and nautr, a partaker, from nyt-a, to use. Lex. Run.

LAUCH, LAUCHT, s. 1. Law.

This word occurs in an old and curious specimen of S. and Lat. verse conjoined:

Lauch liis down our all: fallax fraus regnat ubique.

Micht gerris richt down fall: regnum quia rexit inique.

Treuth is made now thrall: spernunt quam dico plerique.

Bot til Christ we call: periemus nos animique.

Fordun, Scotichron. ii. 474.

Waltre Stewart of Scotland

Syne in laucht wes to the King.

Barbour, xvii. 219. MS.

"Every land has its lauch;" S. Prov. Rudd. i. e., particular law or custom.

"Ilka land has its ain lauch."

S.

2. Privilege.

Gyve only hapnyd him to sla.

That to that lawch ware bowndyn swa;

Of that prawylyge evyr-mare

Partles suld be the slaare.

Wyntown, vi. 19. 34.

A. S. lah, laga, Isl. laug, Su.G. lag, lagh, O. Dan. lag-ur, Germ. lage, id. V. the v.

To LAUCH, v. a. To possess or enjoy according to law.

All ledis langis in land to lauch quhat tham leif is.

Doug. Virg. 238, a 34.

Su.G. laegg-ia signifies to covenant, to agree; Germ. leg-en, to constitute, to ordain. But neither of these is used precisely in the sense of this v. Some view the Germ. v as the origin of lage law. Ihre derives Su.G. lag, from laegg-a, ponere, in the same manner as Germ. gesetze, a law, is formed from setz-en collocare.

LAUCHFULL, adj. Lawful.

Hys fadrys landis of herytage

Fell til hym be clere lynage,

And lauchful lele befor all othire.

Wyntown, v. 12. 1126.

LAUCHT, pret. Took. V. LAUGHT.

LAUCHT, part. pa.

He raid apon a litill palfray,
Laucht; and joly arayand
 His bataill, with an ax in hand.

Barbour, xii. 19. MS.

This might seem at first view to express the cheerfulness of the king's mind, especially as connected with joly, q. laughed. But the meaning is certainly quite different. It may either refer to the king, as signifying that he wore some sort of mantle; or rather to the palfray, as denoting that it was clothed or dressed in proper trappings. This explanation is confirmed by the use of the word lauchtane, in the same work, which must evidently be understood in a sense allied to this. V. next word.

LAUCHTANE, adj. Of, or belonging to, cloth.

A lauchtane mantell than him by,
 Liand apon the bed, he saw;
 And with his teth he gan it draw
 Out our the fyr.

Barbour, xix. 672. MS.

Mr. Pinkerton leaves this for explanation. Mr. Ellis, on this passage, inquires, "if it be Louthian, the place where it was manufactured, or where such mantles were usually worn?" Spec. E. P. i. 242. It undoubtedly signifies a mantle of cloth; perhaps woollen cloth is immediately meant. V. LAIK, s. 1.

LAUCHTANE, adj. Pale; livid.

My rubie cheiks, wes reid as rone,
 Ar leyn, and lauchtane as the leid.

Maitland Poems, p. 192.

I can form no idea of its origin, unless it be a corruption of lattoun, q. v.

LAUCHTER, s. A lock. V. LACHTER, sense 2d. S.

LAUDE, s. Sentence; decision; judgment. S.

LAUDE, adj. Of, or belonging to laymen. S.

LAUDERY, s. Perhaps drinking, or revelling.

The gudwyf said, I reid yow lat tham ly,
 They had lever sleip, nor be in laudery.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 75.

A.S. hlad-ian, to drink, to pour out; or Belg. lodderigh, wanton, gay.

LAVE, s. The remainder. V. LAFE.

LAVELLAN, s. A kind of weasel, Caithn.

"Sir Robert Sibbald mentions an animal, which he says is common in Caithness, called there lavellan: by his description, it seems to belong to this genus. He says, it lives in the water, has the head of the weasel, and resembles that creature in colour; and that its breath is prejudicial to cattle. Sibb. Hist. Scot. ii." Pennant's Zool. i. 86.

The latter writer elsewhere says: "I inquired here after the lavellan, which, from description, I suspect to be the water-shrew-mouse. The country people have a notion that it is noxious to cattle; they preserve the skin, and, as a cure for their sick beasts, give them the water in which it has been dipt. I believe it to be the same animal which in Sutherland is called the water-mole." Tour in S. 1769, p. 194.

LAVE-LUGGIT, adj. Having the ears hanging down.

LAVENDAR, s. A laundress. S.

LAVER, s.

"Here I gif Schir Galeron," quod Gaynor, "withouten any gile,

Al the londis, and the lithis, fro laver to layre,
 Connok and Carlele, Conynghame and Kile.

Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. ii. 27.

"East to west?" Pink. A.S. laefer signifies a rush; Teut. laer, locus incultus et vacuus. This, however, seems to have been a proverbial phrase, the sense of which is now lost.

LAVEROCK, LAUEROK, s. The lark, S. The word is often pronounced q. lerrik, larick. Lancash. lea-rock. See Sup.

"The lauerok maid melody vp hie in the skyis." Compl. S. p. 60.

A.S. laferc, lawerc, Belg. lawerick, leeuwerik, Alem. laurice, id.

The name of this bird appears in its most simple form in Isl. lava, vulgo loova, or lova; avis, alauda; G. Andr. p. 162. Laffua, id. Edda Saemund. Wachter derives A.S. laferce, Belg. lawerick, &c. from Celt. lief vox, and ork-a valere, q. powerful in voice.

LAVEROCK-HIECH, adj. High as the lark when soaring.

LAVEROCK'S-LINT, s. Purging-flax, an herb. S.

LAUGH, s. Law. V. LAUCH. S.

LAUGH, s. A lake. V. LOCH. S.

LAUGHT, LAUCHT, pret. and part. pa. Took; taken.

Thar leyff thai laucht, and past, but delay.

Wallace, ix. 1964. MS.

Thai luffly ledis at that lord thair levis has laught.

i. e. taken leave of. Gawan and Gol. ii. 12.

A.S. laecc-an, ge-laecc-an, apprehendere; pret. laechte, cepit, prehendit; part. gelaecht. It sometimes signifies, to seize with ardour, which is the proper sense of the A.S. v.

Athir laught has thair lance, that lemyt so light;

On twa stedis thai straid, with ane sterne schiere.

Gawan and Gol. ii. 24.

Laught out is also used to denote the drawing out of swords.

Thai brayd fra thair blonkis besely and bane,

Syne laught out suerdis lang and luffly.

Ibid. iii. 227.

LAVY, s. The foolish guillemot, a bird; colymbus Troile, Linn.

"The Lavy, so called by the inhabitants of St. Kilda, by the Welch, guillema; it comes near to the bigness of a duck." Martin's St. Kilda, p. 59.

Isl. Norw. lomvie, langivie, id. Pennant's Zool. p. 519.

LAUIT-MAN, s. A layman; one not in clerical orders.

LAVYRD, s. 1. Lord; Cumb. lword. V. LAIRD.

2. Applied in this sense to the Supreme Being.

Thus Wyntown, when celebrating the virtues of David I., the great favourite of the Roman clergy, makes a curious allusion to the first words of Psalm 132, suggested by the identity of the name:

Twenty and nyne yhere he wes,

Thynk, Lavyrd, on Dawy and hys myldnes.

Cron. vii. 7. 36.

To LAUREATE,* v. a. To confer a literary degree S.

To LAUREATE, v. n. To take a degree in any faculty. S.

LAUREATION, s. The act of conferring degrees, or the receiving of them; graduation. S.

LAURERE, s. The laurel.

— Rois, register, palme, laurere, and glory.

Fr. laurier,

Doug. Virgil, 3. 9.

LAUREW, s. Laurel. S.

LAUS, s.

Ane helme set to ilk scheild, siker of assay,

With fel laus on loft, lemand full light.

Gawan and Gol. ii. 14.

Mr. Pinkerton inquires if this be lows, fires? Laus may indeed be allied to Su.G. lius, Isl. lios, light. Fel laus would thus mean great splendour. But fel may be here used in the sense of many; and laus may refer to the crest of the helmet; q. many hairs on loft, i. e. a bushy and lofty crest; from Dan. lu, luw, hair, Su.G. lo, lugg, rough, hairy. Lugg and luf denote the hair that grows on the foreheads of horses. According to this view, lemand is not immediately connected with laus, but is a farther description of the helmet itself.

L A W

LAUTEFULL, adj. Apparently, full of loyalty or truth. S.

LAW, adj. Low. See Sup.

King Eduuardis man he was suorn of Ingland,
Off rycht law byrth, supposs he tuk on hand.

Wallace, iv. 184, MS.

Su.G. lag, Isl. lag-r, Dan. lau. Belg. laeg, leeg, id. Moes.G. lig-an, Su.G. ligg-an, to lie, is viewed by some as the root.

LAW, s. Low ground.

Schyr Amerys rowte he saw,
That held the plane ay, and the law.

Barbour, vi. 518, MS.

To LAW, v. a. To bring down, to humble.

— Quhen the king Eduuardis mycht
Wes lawit, king Robert wes on hycht.

Barbour, xiii. 658, MS.

Thou makis febil wicht, and thou lawest hie.

Doug. Virgil, 93, 53.

Bot now the word of God full weill I knaw;
Quha dois exalt him self, God sal him law.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 280.

Teut. leegh-en, demittere, deprimere; Kilian.

LAW, LAWE, A LAWE, adv. Downward, below.

As I beheld, and kest myn eyen a lawe,
From beugh to beugh, thai hippit and thai plaid.

King's Quair, c. 2. st. 16.

That this is the sense, appears from st. 21.

And therewith kest I down myn eye ageyne.

It is sometimes written as one word.

And by this ilke ryuer syde alawe

Ane hyeway fand I like to bene.

Ibid. v. 3.

A often occurs in this connexion, where be is now used; as aneath for beneath, ahint for behind.

LAWLY, adj. Lowly, humble.

"And this lawly and meik submissionn in the confession, with consent to resane the said discipline & pennance, is ane part of satisfacioun, quhilk is the thrid meane to cum to the sacrament of Pennance, as is afore rehersit."
Abp. Hamiltoun's Catechisme, Fol. 155, b.

LAW, s. 1. A designation given to many hills or mounts, whether natural or artificial, S. Loe, A. Bor. Ray.

"Its name is derived from the old Celtic word Dun, a hill; its original site having been on the top of a most beautiful little hill, which is called Dunse Law." P. Dunse, Berwicks. Statist. Acc. iv. 378.

This might be viewed as the same with loe, "a little round hill, or a great heap of stones," A. Bor. V. Gl. Grose.

A. S. hlaewe, hlaewe, agger, acervus, cumulus, tumulus,
"a law, low, loo, or high ground, not suddenly rising up as a hill, but by little and little. Hence—that name given to many hillocks and heaps of earth to be found in all parts of England: being no other but so much congested earth brought, and in a way of burial used of the ancients, thrown upon the bodies of the dead." Somner in vo. He refers to Dugdale's Descrip. of Warwickshire.

According to this account, it might be supposed, that the name had been primarily given to the artificial mounts raised above the dead, and afterwards transferred to those that were natural. For it is unquestionable, that in S.
this designation is given to several hills of the latter description; as Largo-law in Fife, North-Berwick-law in Lothian, &c. It might be conjectured, that the reason of this transition was, that after our ancestors ceased to bury their dead under such tumuli, the places were still viewed as in some measure sacred; that they therefore assembled there in the conventions which were held in particular districts; and at length, in S. at least, gave this name to all those rising grounds, on which they used to meet for enacting laws, or regulating matters of general concern.

It must be admitted, however, that the invariable orthography of the A. S. term opposes this supposition; as it never assumes the form of lag, lage, or laga, the words which denote a law, as corresponding to Lat. lex. But two circumstances deserve to be mentioned, which render it doubtful whether the term, as used in S., is radically the same with A. S. hlaewe. The first is, that such a mount is often called the Law-hill of such a place. The other, that a correspondent word occurs in Isl., evidently formed from lag, laug, loeg, lex. The name of laug-berg, i. e. the rock of law, is given to many hills in Iceland. Their Fridrekr Bishop oc Thorvalldr foro til things, oc bad

L A W

Bishop Thorvalld telia tru fyrer mönum at Löggergi:
Profectis ad comitia universalia Episcopo Friderico et Thorvaldo, ille hunc rogavit, ut se praesente in Logbergo (rupe, in qua jus dicebatur) religionem christianam populo praedicaret; Kristnisag. c. 4. All their public and judicial assemblies were, and, if I mistake not, still are, held at these bergs. Ibid. p. 89—91. Laug-berg, locus publicus ubi judicia peraguntur; Verel. Ind.

It has been said, "The word law, annexed to the name of so many places in the parish [Coldstream] attests, that it had belonged to the kingdom of Northumberland during the Heptarchy; as Hirsel-law, Castle-law, Spy-law, Carter- law," &c. P. Coldstream, Berwicks. Statist. Acc. iv. 420.

But this of itself cannot prove that the parish was under the dominion of the Anglo-Saxons; as the same designation is found in many parts of S. where we are certain that their jurisdiction never extended.

2. In one passage, lawe seems to signify the tomb, grave, or mound. See Sup.

There come a lede of the lawe, in londe is not to layne,
And glides to Schir Gawayne, the gates to gayne;
Yauland, and yomerand, with many loude yelles.

Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. i. 7.

i. e. an inhabitant of the tomb. It is the description of "a grisly ghost," that appeared to Queen Guaynor and Sir Gawan.

To what has been formerly observed, I may add, that Moes. G. hlaw signifies monumentum. Gangith thu thamma hlaiwa; He cometh to the tomb, Joh. xi. 38.

To LAW, v. a. To litigate; to subject to legal investigation and determination. S.

LAW, s. The remainder. V. LAFE.

LAWAINE, s. The eve of All-hallows, Halloween. S.

LAWAR, LAWARE, s. A laver, or vessel to wash in. S.

LAW-BIDAND, LAW-BIDING, part. pr. 1. Waiting the regular course of law, as opposed to flight. 2. Able to answer a charge or accusation. S.

LAW-BOARD, s. The board on which a tailor irons his cloth. S.

LAW-BORROIS, LAW-BORROWS, s. pl. The legal security which one man is obliged to give, that he will not do any injury to another in his person or property, S.
See Sup.

"Gif ony man be feidit, and allegis feid, or dreid of ony partie, the schiref sall furthwith of baith tak law-borrois, and forbid thame in the Kingis name to trubill the Kingis peax, vnder the pane of Law." Acts, Ja. II. 1457. c. 83.
Edit. 1566. called "Borrowis of peax," i. e. peace, 1449. c. 13.

"The action of contravention of lawborrows is likewise penal. It proceeds on letters of lawborrows, obtained at the suit of him who is disturbed in his person or goods by another, and containing a warrant to charge the party complained of to give security, that the complainer shall be kept harmless from illegal violence." Erskine's Inst. B. 4.
Tit. 1. s. 16.

"The import of lawborrows in Scotland is, when two neighbours are at variance, the one procures from the council, or any competent court, letters charging the other to find caution and surety, that the complainer, his wife, bairns, &c. shall be skaithless from the person complained upon, his wife, bairns, &c. in their body, lands, heritages, &c. and before such letters can be granted, the complainer must give his oath expressly, that he dreads bodily harm, trouble, and molestation, from the person complained upon." Wodrow's Hist. i. 473.

It is from law and borgh or borrow, a pledge, a surety, used in pl. V. BORCH.

LAWER, s. A professor of law. S.

LAW-FREE, adj. Not legally convicted or condemned. S.

LAWER, s. A washing vessel; E. a laver. S.

LAWCH, adj. Low, S. laigh.

And in a rycht fayr place, that was

Lawch by a bourne, he gert thaim ta

Thair herbery. — Barbour, xiv. 339. MS.

The fray was gret, and fast away thai yeid,

Lawch toward Ern, thus chapyt thai of dreid.

V. LAW, adj. Wallace, v. 156. MS.

To LAWE, v. a. To lower. S.

LAWIN, s. A tavern reckoning. V. LAUCH, s. 1.

LAWIN-FREE, adj. Scot-free; excluded from paying any share of a tavern bill. V. LAUCH, 1. S.

LAWIT, LAWD, LAWYD, LEWIT, adj. 1. Lay, belonging to laymen. See Sup.

Than ordanyd wes als, that the Kyng,

Na na lawyd Patrowne, be staff na ryng,

Suld mak fra thine collatyowne.

Wyntown, vii. 5. 120.

The Archebyschape of Yhork —

— assoylyd then

Alysawndyr our Kyng, and his lawd men.

Bot the Byschaps and the clergy

Yhit he leit in cursyng ly. —

Wyntown, vii. 9. 160.

The lawit folkes this law wald never ceis,

But with thair use, quhen Bishops war to cheis,

Unto the kirk thay gadred, auld and ying,

With meik hart, fasting and praying.

Priests of Peblis, S. P. R. i. 16.

2. Unlearned, ignorant.

Of all the realme, quhom of ye beir the croun,

Of lawit, and leirit; riche, pure; up and down;

The quhilk, and thay be slane with man's [mannis] hand

Ane count thairof ye sall gif I warrand.

Priests of Peblis, p. 29.

I say not this of Chaucere for offence.

Bot till excuse my lawit insufficiency.

Doug. Virgil, 10, 31.

A.S. laewed, lewd, id. laewed-man, a layman; O. E. lewd.

And they meet in her mirth, whan minstrels ben styll,

Than telleth they of the trinitie a tale or twaine.

P. Ploughman's Vision, Fol. 46, a.

The history of this term affords, at the same time, a singular proof of the progressive change of language, and of the influence of any powerful body on the general sentiments of society. By Bede, Aelfric, and other A.S. writers, it is used in its primitive sense. This meaning it retained so late as the reign of Edward III. when R. de Langland wrote his Vision of Piers the Ploughman. But as, in the dark ages, the little learning that remained was confined almost entirely to the clergy; while the designation, by which they were known, came to denote learning in general, the distinctive term lewd was considered as including the idea of ignorance. It did not stop here, however. The clerical influence still prevailing, and the clergy continuing to treat the unlearned in a very contemptuous manner, as if moral excellence had been confined to their own order; by and by, the term came to signify a wicked person, or one of a licentious life. Hence, the modern sense of E. lewd.

The A.S. word may have been formed from Lat. laic-us, which must be traced to Gr. λαος, populus. Other dialects retain more of the original form; Su.G. leh, Isl. leik, Alem. leig. It seems doubtful, however, whether laewed be not radically the same with leode, populus, plebs, Isl. lid, Germ. leute. V. Spelman, vo. Leudis. In Fr. the phrase, le lais gens resembles the secondary sense of lawit; le petit peuple; Dict. Trev.

LAWLAND, LAULAND, adj. Belonging to the low country of Scotland. S.

LAWLANDS, LAWLANS, s. pl. 1. The level country of Scotland, as distinguished from the Highlands. 2. The language of the low country as opposed to the Gaelic. S.

LAWRIE, s. A designation for the fox. V. LOWRIE. S.

LAWRIGHTMEN. V. LAGRAETMAN.

LAW SONDAY. V. LEIF SUNDAY. S.

LAWTA, LAWTE, LAWTY, LAWTITH, s. 1. Loyalty, allegiance.

Than Wallace said, Will ye herto consent,

Forgyff him fre all thing that is by past,

Sa he will com and grant he has trespass,

Fra this tyme furth kepe lawta till our croun?

Wallace, viii. 11. MS.

Lauta, ibid. vii. 1261, MS. O. E. leauty, id.

— Loue and lownes, and leauty togythers

Shall be maisters on molde. —

P. Ploughman's Vision, Fol. 16, a.

2. Truth, integrity, equity.

Bot he gat that Archebyschapryk

Noucht wyth lawtè bot wytht swyk.

Wyntown, vii. 8. 38.

— No quhar now faith nor lawtè is fund.

Doug. Virgil, 112, 47.

Lawty will leif us at the last,

Ar few for falsett may now fend.

Bannatyne Poems, p. 161. st. 1.

She neither has lawtith nor shame,

And keeps the hale house in a steer.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 251.

Fr. loyauté, loyalty, fidelity, truth; O. Fr. leauté, id. from leal, trusty; Lat. legal-is, from lex, legis.

LAWTIFULL, adj. Most loyal; full of loyalty. S.

LAWTH, Bar. xiii. 651. Leg. lawch.

And it that wndre lawch was ar,

Mon lepe on loft in the contrar.

Lawch seems to signify low. V. LAWCH.

LAWTING, s. The supreme court of judicature in Orkney and Shetland, in ancient times. V. THING.

LAX, s. "Relief, release."

O wharefore should I tell my grief,

Since lax I canna find?

I'm far frae a' my kin and friends,

And my love I left behind.

Bonny Baby Livingston, Jamieson's Pop. Ball. ii. 139.

L.B. lax-a, denotes a gift; Donatio, legatum; Du Cange.

The S. term may be immediately from Lat. lax-us, loosed, released. But Goth. laus, Su.G. loos, id. seems to be the root.

LAX, s. A salmon; formerly the only name by which this fish was known, Aberd. See Sup.

This was indeed the general designation of the salmon in the northern languages: A.S. leax, O. E. lax, (V. Jun. Etym.) Dan. Su.G. id. Teut. lachs, Belg. lass, Ital. lacc-ia. The origin of the term, however, seems lost in obscurity.

LAX-FISHER, s. A salmon-fisher, Aberd. See Sup.

"The said day the Procurator Fiscal gave in a complaint against George Law and Alexander Mason, lax-fishers at the Bridge of Don, for their unwarrantable seizing upon and breaking the lynes [lines] belonging to the whyte fishers of Don." Decree, Baron Court of Fraserfield, A. 1722. State, Fraser of Fraserfield, &c. p. 325.

L E

LAZY-BEDS, s. pl. A mode of planting potatoes still in use in some parts of the country. S.

After the ground is divided into beds about two yards square, a whole potatoe, full of eyes, is laid upon some dung in the bottom of its own bed; the earth is then laid upon it and the manure, from a sort of trench made round the bed; and as the root springs up, the earth is gradually heaped upon it from the trench. The produce is sometimes very large from a single root. S.

LE, LEE, s. The water of the sea in motion.

Thay wene tharby that nocht may thaym gane stand,
Bot that thay sal vnder thare senyeory
Subdew all hale in thirldome Italy,
And occupy thay boundis orientale,
Quhare as the our se flowis alhale;
And eik thay westir partis, traistis me,
Quhilkis ar bedyt with the nethir le.

Doug. Virgil. 245, 41.

—The fomy stoure of stremes lee

Upwaltis from the brade palmes of tre. Ibid. 321, 53.

"It seems to signify," says Ruddiman, "nothing but sea-water, and so may come from the A.S. ea, with the Fr. particle l'." But I have no doubt that here we have a vestige of the old Isl. word lae, laa, mare, Verel.; hodie, unda fluens, G. Andr. Hence la-gardur, the sea-shore covered with weeds, sand, &c. hlaes meyar, poetically, the virgins of the sea, i. e. the waves, laa-var, fluit, fluctitat; laugr, laug, liquor fluens. The same root may perhaps be traced in the compound A.S. words, lago-flod, lago-stream, a deluge, an inundation.

This seems also to give us the true origin of E. lee, which has been strangely derived by Skinner from Fr. l'eau, water. Others have traced it to le, as denoting shelter. But a lee shore, is that towards which the winds blow, and, of consequence, the waves are driven. From the lee side of the ship being understood to denote that which is not directly exposed to the wind, it seems to have been oddly inferred, that the term lee, as thus used, signifies calm, tranquil. Dr. Johnson has fallen into a very singular mistake in relation to this subject; having given precisely the same sense to leeward, as to windward. He thus explains both terms; "Toward the wind."

LE, LIE. The Fr. article le, equivalent to the. S.

LE, LIE, LEE, LYE, s. 1. Shelter; security from tempest. The lee of the hill, the sheltered side. See S.

The cilly schepe and thare litill hird gromes
Lurkis vnder lye of bankis, woddis and bromes.

Doug. Virgil, 201, 27.

2. Metaph. peace; ease; tranquillity. In this sense it most frequently occurs; as in that beautiful elegy on the death of Alex. III., one of the oldest specimens of S. poetry extant.

Quhen Alysandyr oure Kyng wes dede,
That Scotland led in luwe and le,
Away wes sons of ale and brede,
Of wyne and wax, of gamyn and gle.

Wynt. Cron. vii. 10. 528.

Bettir but stryfe to leif allone in le,
Than to be machit with a wicket marrow.

Henryson, Bannatyne Poems, p. 122. st. 3.

Our folkis than that warren blith and glad
Of this couth surname of our new cieté,
Exhort I to graith hous, and leif in lee.

Doug. Virgil, 71, 51.

—Thare I the tell,

L E A

Is the richt place, and stede for your cieté,
And of your trauel ferme hald to rest in lé

Ibid. 81, 19.

Jun. renders to live in lee, to live at his own ease and liking. It also signifies, to live in peace, as opposed to contention or warfare.

Now is the grume that was sae grim
Richt glad to live in lie.

Evergreen, ii. 182. st. 14.

Also, to live in security.

Fra hence furth he sal baith heir and se
Baith theif puneist, and leil men live in lie.

Priests of Peblis, S. P. R. i. 14.

Su.G. lae expresses the very idea conveyed by this word in its primary sense; locus tempestati subductus. lhre. Isl. hle, hlie, id. A.S. hleo, warmth; a place secure from the winds, a place of shelter. In old Gothic monuments, this is written ly.

Oh hade for ragn ok weder ly.

Tecti a pluvia et tempestate. Chron. Rythm.

Dan. lye, lae, a shelter, a cover, chiefly from severe weather. These terms are evidently allied to Isl. hlyr, hly, calidus; de aethere et aere dicitur; hlyende, calor aether-eus; hlyn-ar, aer incalescit, ac clemens fit ex frigido. Perhaps the obsolete Isl. v. hlau-a, may be viewed as the root; votn hlaua, aquae calent; G. Andr. p. 114. 115. S. Lew, lithe and lowne, q. v. seem also radically allied.

Le occurs in a passage in which the sense is uncertain.

Spynagros than spekis; said, Lordingis in le,
I rede ye tent treuly to my teching.

Gawan and Gol. ii. 3.

It may have the same meaning as in the passages cited above: but it must be left doubtful.

LE, LIE, adj. Sheltered; warm.

The land loun was and lie, with lyking and love.

Houlate, i. 2. MS.

The fair forrest with levis loun and lé,
The fowlis song, and flouris ferly sueit,
Is bot the warld, and his prosperité,
As fals plesandis, myngit with care repleit.

V. the s. Henryson, Bannatyne Poems, p. 129.

LE, s. Law; Wyntown.

O. Fr. ley, id. This Mr. Macph. deduces from Lat. leg-e, the abl. of lex.

To LE, v. n. To lie; to tell a falsehood. Wyntown.

A.S. leog-an, mentiri.

To LEA, LEE, v. a. To leave. V. LEED. S.

LE, s. A lie; a falsehood. Wyntown.

LEA, adj. Not ploughed; used only for pasture.

Plenty shall cultivate ilk scawp and moor,
Now lea and bare, because thy landlord's poor.

A.S. leag, pasture.

Ramsay's Poems, 1. 60.

To LEAGER, v. n. To encamp. S.

LEAGUER-LADY, s. A soldier's wife, one who follows a camp; a term used in contempt, S.

Sir J. Smythe, in Certain Discourses concerning the Forms and Effects of divers sorts of Weapons, 1590, speaking of Officers, says: "These, utterlie ignorant of all our auncient discipline and proceedings in actions of armes, have so affected the Walloons, Flemings, and base Almanes discipline, that they have procured to innovate, or rather to subvert all our auncient proceedings in matters military:—as, for example, they will not vouchsafe in their speeches or writings to use our termes belonging to matters of warre, but doo call a campe by the Dutch name of legar; nor will not aford to say that such a towne or such a fort is besieged, but that it is belegard." V. Massinger, iii. 117.

Dan. leyger, Teut. lager, legher, a camp; E. leaguer, a siege; Teut. legher-en, castra metari, Su.G. laegg-a to besiege.

L E A

- To LIE LEA.* To remain some time uncropped. S.
LEAD, s. The name given to the rink, or course over which the stones are driven in Curling. S.
LEADER, s. The person who takes the lead in the game of Curling; he who first lays down his stone. S.
LEAD-BRASH, s. A disease to which all the lower animals are subject at Leadhills. S.
To LEAD CORN. To drive corn from the harvest-field to the corn-yard. S.
LEAD DRAPS. Small shot used in fowling. S.
LEADEN HEART. A spell still used in Shetland. S.
 In Zetland, when one of the lower orders is in declining health, without apparent cause, some lead, in a state of fusion, is cast into water, and one of the particles, most nearly resembling a heart in form, is, after sundry incantations, hung round the neck of the patient. S.
 For an account of this superstition, see The Pirate, iii. 23, 24.
LEADING, s. Perhaps provisions, or loading. S.
LEADIS, s. pl. Languages. V. LEID, LEDE. S.
LEAL, adj. Loyal; honest; upright, &c. V. LEIL. S.
LEA LAIK, s. A natural shelter for cattle; shelter afforded by glens or overhanging rocks. S.
LEALAIKE-GAIR, s. Well-sheltered grazing ground. S.
To LEAM, v. n. To shine. V. LEME.
To LEAM, v. a. To take ripe nuts out of the husk. S.
LEAMER, LEEMER, s. A nut fully ripe which separates easily from the husk. S.
To LEAN DOWN, v. n. To be seated; to lie down. S.
LEAP, s. A cataract; synon. linn. V. LOUP.
To LEAP OUT, v. n. To break out in an illegal or disorderly way. S.
LEAPING ILL, LOUPING ILL. A kind of palsy to which sheep are subject. V. THORTER ILL. S.
LEAR, adv. Rather; i. e. liefer. S.
LEAR, LEARE, s. A liar, S. pron. leear.

God of the Dewyl sayd in a quhile,
 As I haue herd red the Wangyle,
 He is, he sayd, a leare fals:
 Swylk is of hym the fadyre als.

A.S. leogere, Belg. liegher. Wyntown, vi. 18. 323.

- LEASE-HAUD, s. Possession; holding by a lease. S.
LEASH, adj. Active; clever; agile. V. LIESH. S.
LEASH, s. Freedom; liberty, S. B. Gie us the leash, set us at liberty.

I'm of your proffer wond'rous fain;
 Gie us our leash the night, and ye sall be
 My dauted lass, and gang alang wi' me.

Ross's Helenore, p. 52.

Shirr. views the phrase mentioned as equivalent to "give us licence." But the word is more allied to Isl. leis-a, leys-a, solvere, whence leysinge, a freedman; Moes.G. laus, solutus. Lat. lic-et, whence licentia, would indeed seem to have the same origin.

- To LEASH AWAY, v. n.* "To go cleverly off, or on the way, S. B." Rudd. v. Relieschand. V. the s.
LEASING-MAKING, s. The crime of uttering falsehood against the Sovereign and Government to the People, or against the People to the Sovereign or Ministers. S.
LEASING-MAKER. V. LESING-MAKARE. S.
LEASUMLIE, adv. Lawfully; a term used in our old laws. S.
LEATER MEATE. V. LATTER MEAT. S.
LEATH, s. The lay of a weaver's loom. S.
To LEATH, v. a. To loiter. V. LEIT, v. to delay. S.
To LEATHER, v. a. 1. To lash, to flog, *S. q. to beat**

L E C

- with a thong of leather, in inflicting discipline; a low word. 2. To batter soundly; to tie tightly. See S. Lether, Lancash. id.
LEATHERIN, s. A beating; a drubbing. S.
To LEATHER, v. n. To go cheerfully and briskly. S.
LEATHER.* Loose Leather. V. LOWSE LEATHER. S.
LEAUGH, adj. Low. V. LEUCH. S.
LEAUW, s. A place for drawing the nets on, composed partly of stones, earth, and gravel; Aberd.
 "Interrogated, If some parts of the bank to the east of the croft-dike be not faced or barricadoed with stone? depones, That he does not know if any leaws must be made at any part of the water-side, but he knows of no bulwark." State, Leslie of Powis, &c. p. 91.
 "The biggest leaws there for felling at does not exceed one space and one half in breadth, from the declivity of the brae to the margin of the water; but they extend several paces in length along the margin of it, by which he means only the shots in deep water immediately below the braes." Ibid. p. 102.
 "When there are any obstructions made by the river, in hollowing in one place, and raising birsts in others, at the leaws or felling, or landing places, the hollows are in like manner filled up, and the birsts and every other obstruction removed." Ibid. p. 114.
 "Further depones, That a Leauw is a place wherever a net can be hauled ashore." Ibid. p. 138.
 This might seem to be Fr. lieu, place, but more probably is the same with Teut. loo, lo, locus altus adjacens stagnis, torrentibus, aut paludibus; Becan. ap. Kilian. A.S. hlar, hlaew, agger, acervus, tumulus. The latter is the word from which we have our LAW, q. v.
To LEBER, LEBBER, v. a. To bedaub; to beslabber. S.
LEBBER-BEARDS, s. pl. Broth made of greens, (coleworts) and thickened with a little oatmeal. S.
LEBBERS, s. pl. Droppings from the mouth, &c. in eating or drinking. S.
LEBBIE, s. The lap or fore-skirt of a man's coat, S. B. Loth.
A.S. laeppe, Belg. Germ. lap, lapp, Isl. laf, id. Su.G. lapp, pannus.
To LECHE, v. a. To cure; to heal. See Sup.
 Bot quhen that he had fowchtyn fast,
 Eftyre in-til an ile he past,
 Sare woundyt, to be lechyd thare,
 And eftyr he wes seyn na mare.
Wyntown, v. 12. 353.
Su.G. laek-a, Moes.G. leikin-on, A.S. lacn-ian, id.
LECH, LECHE, LEICHE, s. A physician or surgeon. See S.
 Thaim that war woundyt gert he ly
 In till hiddillis, all priuely;
 And gert gud lechis till thaim bring,
 Quhill that thai war in till heling.
Barbour, v. 437. MS.
 The gentlemen of the faculty had affected a considerable degree of state, even as early as the time of our poetical Bishop of Dunkeld.
 Me thoct I lurkit vp vnder my hude,
 To spy thys auld, that was als sterne of speiche,
 As he had bene ane medicynare or leiche.
Doug. Virgil, 450, 29.
Leicht was also used to denote a barber. S.
 This is evidently a very ancient word. Moes.G. leik, lek; A.S. laec, laece, lyce; Alem. laehi; Isl. laeknar, laeknir; Su.G. lakare; Dan. laege; Slav. Dalmat. Bohem. likar; Pol. likartz; Fenn. laeackaeri; Ir. liagh, id. Hence horse-leech; and tough-leech, sanguisuga, which, by translation into modern language, although it has a ludicrous effect, is sometimes called, S. B. a Black Doctor.

L E E

 "In Aberdeen, it is said that leeches are cried in the streets under the name of Black Doctors, whelped in a pool." Sir J. Sinclair, p. 123. S. horse-leech, "a farrier or horse-doctor," Rudd.

LECHING, LEICHING, s. Recovery, cure.
 Jop past north, for leiching wald nocht let.
 Wallace, ix. 1248. MS.

LECHEGE, s. Leakage. S.

LECK, s. A name given to any stone that stands a strong fire; as, greenstone, trap, &c. S.

LEDDY-LAUNNERS, s. V. LANDERS. S.

LEDDYR, s. Leather. S.

LEDDERANE, LEDDERING, adj. Made of leather. S.

LED FARM. A farm on which no tenant resides. S.

LEDE, s. A person. V. LEID.

LEDGIN, s. A parapet, especially that of a bridge. S.

LEDINGTON, s. A kind of long-shaped apple. S.

LEDISMAN, LEDSMAN, LODISMAN, s. A pilot.
 Before the laif, as ledsman and lard,
 And al hys salis vp with felloun fard,
 Went Palinure. Doug. Virgil, 156, 19.
 — Thy schip — I knew full quyte
 Spulyeit of hir graith, and lodisman furth smyte.
 Ibid. 175, 44.

Chaucer, lodisman; A.S. ladman, Teut. leydsman, Belg. loodsman, Su.G. ledesman, Sw. lots, E. loadsman; not as Sibb. supposes, "q. the heaven of the lead;" but all from the idea of leading.

LEE, s. To set at little lee, to leave scarcely any means of shelter or escape. V. LE, LIE, &c. S.

LEE, s. Shelter; adj. sheltered. S.

LEE, adj. Lonely.
 When seven years were come and gane,
 Lady Margaret she thought lang;
 And she is up to the highest tower,
 By the lee licht o' the moon.
 Jamieson's Popular Ball. i. 88.

This seems to have been a favourite allusion. It occurs also in p. 25. st. 1. Vol. ii. 46. V. LEEFOW.

LEEAR, s. A liar; one who utters falsehoods. S.

LEE-LIKE, adj. Having the appearance of falsehood. S.

To LEECH, LEETCH, v. a. To pin or splice two pieces of wood together; as, the broken shaft of a cart, &c. S.

LEECH, s. The piece of wood used for splicing a shaft. S.

LEED, pret. Left.
 With both his hands he hint his sword,
 And all the strength that he had leed,
 He set upon Sir Gryme his head.
 Sir Egeir, v. 160?

Lewed, left, R. Glouc. Perhaps here head and leed have been originally heued and leued; as the poem is much modernized.

LEEFOW, adj. Wilful; obstinate. S.

LEEFOW, LIEFU', adj. Lonely; solitary. The phrase used is leefow lane, quite alone, S.
 Whan he came in, wha's sitting here but Jean,
 Poor Colin's honest wife, her liefu' lane?
 Ross's Helenore, p. 44.

Here the idea of being lonely is conjoined with that of being alone. It may be allied to Sw. ledsam, lonely; Su. G., Dan., Germ., Belg. ledig empty, without an inhabitant. Wachter observes that Belg. ledig is also written leeg per syncop. Teut. led, vacuity, is the root. Isl. hliae, however, signifies umbra, umbraculum; ad draga a hlie, occultare, coelare, subducere. G. Andr. p. 115. Or, shall we refer to Isl. hlíod, subtristis, taciturnus, and full?

L E E

LEEFUL, LEEFOW-HEARTIT, adj. Compassionate, sympathizing. Loth. Leiful, friendly. See Sup.

"The leeful man is the beggar's brother;" S. Prov.

"Spoken when we have lent something that we now want, and must be forced to borrow." Kelly, p. 315.

Leeful is used by Wynt. in the sense of friendly.

This seems radically different from the preceding; most probably from A.S. leof, dear. Isl. hlif-a, Su.G. lif-a, tueri, parcere, are considerably allied in signification. But the former is preferable.

LEE-LANG, adj. Livelong, S.
 Whyles, o'er the wee bit cup an' platie,
 They sip the scandal potion pretty;
 Or lee-lang nights, wi' crabbed leuks,
 Pore owre the devil's pictur'd beuks. — Burns, iii. 10.

LEEM, adj. Earthen. V. LAME. S.

LEEMERS, s. pl. V. LEAMER. S.

LEEN, interj. Cease; give up; yield.
 Let gang your grips:—fye, Madge!—hout, Bauldy, leen:—
 I widna wish this tulyie had been seen.
 Ramsay's Poems, ii. 148.

Allied perhaps to Su.G. laen-a concedere; or rather A.S. alinn-an, Sw. linn-a, to cease; whence O. E. linne, id.

To LEENGE, v. n. To slouch in walking; as, a leen-gin ganger, one who slouches in his gait. S.

LEENGYIE, adj. A weaver's web, of a raw or thin texture, is said to have a leengyie appearance. S.

LEENING, adj.
 Calliope, most facund and leening,
 Inquirat Venus quhat wicht had hir mismaid?
 Palice of Honour, ii. 19. Edit. Pink.

Leg. bening, as in Edin. edit. 1579.

LEENO, LEENON, s. A vulgar term for thread gauze. S.

To LEEP, v. a. To heat; to parboil; to scald. V. LEPE.

LEEP, LEPE, s. A slight boiling; a wallop. S.

To LEEP, v. a. To cozen; to deceive. S.

LEEPER-FAT, adj. Very fat, S. A. See Sup.

LEEPIT, adj. "Meagre; thin; loving the fire," Shirr. Gl. S. B.

We left the auld gabby carly an' the hudderen wife to help the leethfu' leepit sleeth o' a coachman to yoke his horse." Journal from London, p. 6.

Isl. lape, fungus homo, G. Andr. Sibb. derives it from lepe, to warm, to parboil.

LEERIE, s. A childish term for a lamp-lighter. S.

LEEROCH, s. A peat-moss. Ayrshire. S.

LEEROCH, s. 1. The site of an old house, or the vestiges of ancient fortifications. 2. Local position. S.

To LEESE, v. a. To arrange; to trim; to sort. S.

To LEESE out, v. a. To be prolix in narration. S.

To LEESH, v. n. To move quickly forward. S.

LEESING, s. Allaying; assuaging.
 The formest hoip yit that I have,—
 Is in your Grace, bayth crop and grayne.
 Quhilk is ane leesing of my pane.
 Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 119.

Either from Su.G. laesh-a, Alem. lesh-en, Germ. lesch-en, to temper, to mitigate; or Su.G. lis-a. V. LEIST.

LEESOME, adj. Pleasant. V. LEISUM.

LEESOME, adj. Easily moved to pity. S.

LEESUM, adj. False; lying; hyperbolic. S.

To LEET, v. n. To pretend. V. LEIT. S.

To LEET, v. n. To ooze by slow dropping. S.

To LEET till, v. a. To attend to. S.

LEET, s. 1. One portion of many; a lot: as, a leet of peats, turfs, &c. when exposed to sale, S. B. See S.

L E G

"Peats are estimated by the leet, which is a solid body piled up like bricks, 24 feet long, and 12 feet broad at bottom, and 12 feet high." P. Pitsligo, Aberd. Statist. Acc. v. 101. 102.

2. A nomination of different persons, with a view to the election of one or more of them to an office, S.

To put on the leet, to give in one's name in order to nomination, S.

"After long delay, and much thronging, being set in our places, the Moderator for the time offered to my Lord Commissioner a leet, whereupon voices might pass for the election of a new Moderator." Baillie's Lett. i. 98.

3. The term is also used to denote a list.

My Burchet's name well pleas'd I saw

Amang the chosen leet,

Wha are to give Britannia law,

And keep her rights complete.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 400.

A.S. hlete, a lot. It is used perhaps in the second sense, in reference to the mode in which persons are often chosen by lot. Mr Macpherson, however, seems to think that it is contracted from clyte, as formed from elect; "lists of persons chosen for an office under the controul of a superior power," being "in Sc. called Lytts in 1583. Maitland's Hist. of Edin. p. 228." V. LYTE, LITE.

To LEET, LEIT, v. a. To put in nomination, in order to election when there are two or more candidates. S.

LEET, s. Language. V. LEID.

LEETHFOW, adj. Sympathizing. S.

LEETHFOW, adj. Loathsome; dirty, S. B.

"We left the auld gabby carly, an' the hudderen wife, to help the leethfu' leepit sleeth o' a coachman to yoke his horse." Journal from London, p. 6.

A.S. lath and full, q. what fills one with loathing.

LEEVIN LANE. Quite alone. Leefow lane. S.

LEFT, pret. Remained; used passively. V. LEVE. S.

LEEZE ME. V. LEIS ME.

LEFULL, LEIFULL, adj. Lawful.

Leiffull is now to brek, but mare abade,

The sworne promysis, that I to the Grekis maid;

Lefull is eik thay pepill for to hate.

Doug. Virgil, 43, 54; 44, 1.

This word is used by Wiclif.

"Thy disciples don that thing that is not leefful to hem to do on the Sabotis.—He—eat looves of proposicioun, which looves it was not leeful to him to ete." Matt. 12. See S.

This is derived from le law, Gl. Wynt. But it is questionable whether it be not from leif leave, and full, q. allowable, what may be permitted; especially as it is often written leifful. V. LESUM.

To LEG, v. n. To run; a low word, S. See Sup.

Su.G. lack-a, id. whence lackare, a runner, a running footman; softened into Fr. laquai, Ital. lacché, Hisp. lacayo, E. lacquey. Ibre views laegg, crus, the leg, as the common origin.

To LEG away, v. n. To walk clumsily. S.

LEG-BAIL, s. A ludicrous but emphatic term, applied to one, who, when chargeable with any crime or misdemeanour, instead of waiting the course of law, or endeavouring to find bail for himself, provides for his safety by flight. It is said, He has taen leg-bail. i. e. He reckons his limbs his best sureties. See Sup.

Sae weel's he'd fley the students a',

Whan they were skelpin at the ba';

They took leg-bail, and ran awa'

Wi' pith an' speed.—Fergusson's Poems, ii. 10.

LEGACIE, s. The state or office of a papal legate. S.

LEGAGE, s. Supposed to signify leakage of a ship, &c. S.

L E I

LEGATNAIT, s. One who, as being an Archbishop or Bishop, enjoyed the rights of a Papal Legate within his own province or diocese. See Sup.

"Johne be the mercie of God Archbischof of Sanct Androus, Metrapolitan and Primat of the hail kirk of Scotland, and of the seit Apostolyck Legatnait, till all & sindry Personis, Vicars and Curattis, specially within our awin Diocye, and generally within the boundis of al our hail primacie of Scotland, desyris grace and peace in Christ Jesu our Saluour." Abp. Hamiltoun's Catechisme, Pref.

Such Archbishops or Bishops were designed Legati Nati, q. native Legates, as it was a right belonging, in succession, to those who presided in such provinces or dioceses. They were free from the jurisdiction of the Legates a latere. The Archbishop of Canterbury is acknowledged as Legatus natus, in a bull of Pope Urban, A. 1378. V. Du Cange.

LEG-BANE, s. The shin. S.

LEG-DOLLOR, s. Perhaps, a dollar of Leige. S.

LEGEN-GIRTH, s. V. LAGENGIRD.

LEGGAT, LEGGET, LEGGIT, s. At handball, golf, &c. an unfair stroke, or one which, on account of some accidental circumstance, is not counted, is said to be leggat, i. e. null. S.

LEGGIN, s. The angle within, between the side and bottom of a cask or wooden vessel. S.

To LIP AND LEGGIN. When a vessel containing some drink is held obliquely, if the liquor in it does not touch the leggin and at the same time reach to the lip or rim, a toper may say, "There's no a drink there; it'll no lip and leggin." S.

LEGGINS, s. pl. Gaiters reaching up to the knees. S.

LEG-ILL, s. A disease of sheep, causing lameness. S.

LEGIER, s. A resident at a court, an envoy, or legate.

"This done he was dimitted, Sir Robert Bowes residing still as Legier." Spotswood, p. 393. Lieger, Hume's Hist. Doug. p. 301.

Corr. from L. B. legator, or legatar-ius, legatus, missus.

LEGIM, adv. Astride. To ride legim. V. STRIDELEGS. S.

LEGITIM, s. The lawful portion of moveables to which a child is entitled on the death of a father. S.

LEG-O-ER-IM, adv. Having one leg over the other; or, as a tailor sits on his board. S.

LEG POWSTER. A ludicrous corr. of Liege Poustie. S.

LEGLIN, LAIGLIN, s. A milk-pail, S. The wooden vessel to which this name is given, has one of the staves projecting as a handle. See Sup.

It occurs in that beautiful old song, The Flowers of the Forest.

At bughts in the morning nae blyth lads are scorning,

The lasses are lonely, dowie and wae;

Nae daffin, nae gabbin, but sighing and sabbing,

Ilk ane lifts her leglin, and hies her away.

Ritson's S. Songs, ii. 3.

In a traditionary version of this song, the second line is still more emphatic.

But wooers are runckled, liart and gray.

Teut. leghel, id. larena; Isl. leigill, ampulla; Su.G. laegel, Alem. lagella, Dan. leyel, doliolum, a small barrel. Ibre deduces these words from Lat. lagenula.

To LEICH, v. n. To be "bound or coupled as hounds are," L. Hailes.

The trueth will furth, and will not leich.

Spec. Godly Sangs, p. 13.

E. leash, Belg. Su.G. las, Fr. lesse. Skinner considers

Lat. laqueus, a snare, as the common origin.

LEICHE, s. A physician. V. LECH.

LEICHMENT, s. Cure of diseases. V. under Leche, v. S.
 LEICHING, LEICHMENT, s. Medical aid. S.
 LEY COW, LEA COW. A cow that is neither with calf, nor gives milk, as distinguished from a Ferry Cow.

LEID, s. A load. S.
 LEID, s. Lead, (Metal.) S.
 LEID, s. Perhaps used as errat. for heid, attention. S.
 LEID, s. A mill-race. V. LADE. S.
 LEID. Brewing Leid, a brewing utensil. S.
 LEID, LEDE, s. People; folk; nation.

"Suld thow help thaim that wald put the to deid?"
 Kyndnes said, "Yha, thai ar gud Scottismen."
 Than Will said, "Nay; weryté thow may ken,
 Had thay bene gud, all anys we had beyn;
 Be reson heyr the contrar now is seyn;
 For thai me hayt ma na Sotheroun leid."

Wallace, x. 227. MS.

i. e. "I am more hated by the Scots of Bute's party than even by the people of England."

The term is used in the same sense in pl. by Doug.
 All leidis langis in land to lauch quhat thame leif is.

Virgil, 238, a. 34, V. next word.

LEID, LEDE, s. A man; a person.

And thus he wrait than in till gret honour,
 To Wilyham Wallace as a conquerour.
 "O lowit leid with worschip wyss and wicht, Thou werray help in baldyn of the rycht."

Wallace, viii. 1635. MS.

There come a lede of the Lawe, in londe is not to layne.

Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. i. 7.

i. e. "An inhabitant of the tomb. V. Law, s. 1. and next word.

And as this leid at the last liggand me seis,
 With ane lake unlufsum he lent me sic wourdis.

Doug. Virgil, 239, a. 22.

O. E. leode, id. synon. with wye.

And so sone this Samaritan had syght of this leode,
 He lyght downe of liarde, and ladde hym in hys hand;
 And to the wye he went, his woundes to beholde,
 And perceiued by hys pulse, he was in perel to dye.

P. Ploughman's Vision, Fol. 92. a.

Liarde, as appears from the connexion, denotes the mule on which the Samaritan rode. This, as Tyrwhitt observes, was a common appellative for a horse, from its grey colour. Note, Cant. Tales, v. 7145.

A. S. leod, comes, satelles, homo; a poetical word, Hickes. Isl. lyd, Su. G. lid, miles. This seems only a restricted, if not a secondary sense of Su. G. lyd, lid, laud, Isl. liod, A. S. leod, populus; Germ. leute, Belg. lieden, C. B. llived, gens, natio, turba. The modern term lad, as denoting a young man, seems radically the same. It is indeed used by Ulph. in the compound word juggalaud, vir juvenis. See Sup.

LEID, s. A country; a region.

Ye ar welcum, cumly king, said the kene knyght,
 Ay quhil yow likis, and list, to luge in this leid.

Gawan and Gol. i. 15.

This may be an oblique sense of A. S. leod as properly signifying a people, hence transferred to the territory inhabited by them; A. S. leod-geard, a region. Isl. laad, however, signifies terra, solum.

LEID, LEDE, LEAD, LEED, LEET, s. 1. Language, S. B.

Strophades in Grew leid ar namyt so,
 In the grete se standing ilis tuo.

i. e. the Greek tongue. Doug. Virgil, 74, 38.

Translait of new, thay may be red and sounng
 Ouer Albioun ile into your vulgare lede.

Ibid. 450, 54.

"Ilk land has its ain leid;" S. Prov.
Leet is used in the same sense.

Let matrons round the ingle meet,
 An' join for whisk' their mous to weet,
 An' in a droll auld-farrant leet
 'Bout fairys crack.

Morison's Poems, p. 77.

2. In lede, literally in language, an expletive frequently used by Thomas of Ercildoune. Mr Scott views it as "synon. to I tell you."

Monestow never in lede

Nought lain. Sir Tristrem, p. 39. st. 60.

i. e. "Thou must not tell a falsehood in any respect."

Rudd. is uncertain whether to refer this to A. S. leod, people; Belg. lied, a song; A. S. hlydan, to make a noise, hlyd a tumult; or laeden, leden, Latin, the learned, the best and most universal language, and therefore, by way of eminence, as he imagines, taken for language in general. Sibb. prefers the last of these etymologies.

It may seem to confirm this derivation, that so late as the age of Chaucer, leden occurs in the same sense.

This faire kinges doughter Canace,
 That on hire finger bare the queinte ring,
 Thurgh which she understood wel every thing
 That any foule may in his leden sain,
 And coude answeere him in his leden again,
 Hath understonden what this faucon seyde.

Squieres T. 10749.

Tyrwhitt observes, that Dante uses Latino in the same sense. It may be added, that A. S. lyden is sometimes used to denote the Latin language, and also language in general; lingua, sermo. Notwithstanding, as our word still occurs without the termination, it seems doubtful whether it should not rather be traced to Su. G. liud, sonus, or lyd-a, sonare. Ihre deduces it from the latter. The use of the Su. G. v. has a striking analogy; Orden lyden saa, ita sonant verba. V. next word.

LEID, LEDE, LUID, s. A song; a lay.

Sum sang ring sangis, dancis, leidis, and roundis,
 With vocis schil, quhil all the dale resoundis.

Doug. Virgil, 402, 33.

Rudd. has overlooked this very ancient word. It occurs in another form, as used in the title of a poem composed on the death of Sir Richard Maitland and his lady.

"A luid of the said Sir Richard; and his Lady, who died on his burial day." Maitland Poems, p. 353.

Mr. Pinkerton has observed, that "Leudus was a sort of ode among the Gauls," and that "it seems to have been of the mournful kind." Ibid. Note, p. 432. Of this, however, there is no evidence; as far as we can judge from the vestiges still remaining. Lhuyd mentions Ir. lyidh, as simply signifying a song, a poem; Gael. laoidh. The term seems to have been general in the Gothic dialects; A. S. leoth, lioth, carmen, ode, poema. This was a generic word, the adj. conjoined determining the particular sense; as, idel leoth, frivolum carmen, hilde-leoth, militare carmen. Hence leoth-wyrhta, a poet, literally a song-wright; as playwright is still used, E. for one who composes plays. Belg. lied, a song or ballad; minnelied, a love-song; bruy-lofts lied, an epithalamium or wedding song; herders lied, a pastoral song. Isl. hliod, liod, a song, verses, metre; lioda-book, liber cantionum. Liuth-on is an old Gothic word, signifying to sing. Hence, as would appear, Moes. G. awi-liud-on to praise, to celebrate. V. Ihre, vo. Liud.

I am inclined, with G. Andr., to derive this term from Isl. hliod, voice, hliod-a, to resound; Su. G. liud, liud-a; especially as Germ. laut-en is used in both senses, sonare, resonare; canere, sonum modulare, sive id fiat ore, sive instrumento; Franc. liut-on canere; Wachter. From this sense of the word, he adds, are derived the names of songs, actors, and musical instruments, in many languages. He mentions Lat. lituus, buccina, a trumpet. Verel. explains Isl. hlíod as equally signifying cantus and sonus; although the latter is unquestionably the primary sense, as appears from Snorro Sturleson. V. Von Troil's Letters on Iceland, p. 317. Isl. loddari, ludio, a player, ludr, tuba; Germ. laute, testudo, (E. lute), lied, cantus. Ital. lai, Fr. E. lay, may be merely the Gothic or Celtic term softened in pronunciation; although, it must be observed, that A.S. legþ and leij are used in the sense of canticum.

LEID, LIED, s. A leid of a thing, is a partial idea of it. One is said to have a leid of a song, when he knows part of the words, S.B.

Whether this is allied to the preceding word, seems doubtful. Shall we refer it to lith a joint? Leyt occurs in Chron. Sax. for the link of a chain, membrum catenae; Schilter.

LEID, s. Safe conduct; or a state of safety.

Off his modyr tithandis war brocht him till,
That tym befor scho had left Elrisle,
For Inglissmen in it scho durst nocht be.
Fra thine disgysyt scho past in pilgrame weid,
Sum gyrth to sek to Dunfermlyn scho yeid;
Seknes hyr had so socht in to that sted,
Decest scho was, God tuk hir spreit to leid.

Wallace, ix. 1529. MS.

Su.G. leid, Germ. leit, geleit, signify safe conduct, or the liberty of going to any place and returning without injury. Thus, Su.G. komma hem pa leid, is a phrase used with respect to those who, being at a distance from home, have the public faith pledged for their safe return; leid-a, legd-a, salvum conductum dare.

Utan han honom legdemaen saende,
Som honom leegdo ok forwara.
Nisi ille mitteret duces itineris,
Qui ipsum salvum praestarent.

Chron. Rhythm. p. 364. ap Ihre, vo. Leid.

i. e. "Unless he should send leid-men, or guides of his journey, who should conduct him in safety."

Hence also leidebref, letters of safe conduct. It seems uncertain, whether the term leid has its origin from Isl. leid-a to lead, or Germ. leit-en to depart. Wachter has observed, that Belg. lyde, and hence overlyd, denote a departure, and metaphorically death; overleeden, deceased. The ancient Lombards used lido as simply signifying death.

The idea suggested by the term, as used by Blind Harry, is evidently that God received the soul of the mother of Wallace into his protection. According to this view, a contrast is stated, happily enough, not only between her dangerous situation while at Elrisle, and the gyrth or sanctuary she sought at Dunfermline; but even between the latter, and the more secure sanctuary she obtained with God.

To LEIF, v. n. To believe.

He saw nane levand leid upone loft lent,
Nouther lord na lad; leif ye the lele.

Gawan and Gol. i. 6.

i. e. "Believe ye the truth, or what is testified by an honest person."

I will not do that syn!

Leif yow, this warld to wyn.

Murning Maidin, Maill. Poems, p. 208.

Mr. Ellis explains it, "Love you! a mode of address." Spec. E. P. ii. 37. But it certainly means, "Believe you, be assured;" and is to be viewed as the language of the Maidin, although otherwise printed.

It seems to be the same with O.E. leue.

Be here all the Lordes lawes? quod I. Yea leue me, he sayd.—

Lo here in my lappe, that leued on that charme,
Josue and Judith, and Judas Machabeus,
Yea and vi. thousand beside forth.

P. Ploughman, Fol. 91. a. b.

A.S. leaf-an, Moes.G. ga-laub-jan, Germ. laub-en, credere.
To LEIF, v. a. To leave.

The lard langis eftir land to leif to his are.

Doug. Virgil, 238, a. 42.

Isl. lif-a, Su.G. leif-a, lef-wa, Moes.G. lif-nan, A.S. be-lif-an, id. laefed, left.

LEIF, LEIFF, s. Leave, permission.

A woman syne of the Newtoun of Ayr,
Till him scho went fra he was fallyn thar,
And on hir kneis rycht lawly thaim besocht,
To purchess leiff scho mycht thin with him fayr.

Wallace, ii. 317, MS.

To GIVE A SERVANT LEIF, or LEAVE. To dismiss or discharge from service; a phrase in common use. S. LEIF, s. The remainder; the rest. V. LAFE. S.

To LEIF, LEIFF, LYF, v. n. To live. See Sup.

Yhit Thomas said, Than sall I leiff na mar
Giff that be trow. — Wallace, ii. 322. MS.

Leif in thy flesche, as master of thy cors,

Leif in this warld, as not ay to remane,

Resist to feyndis with slicht and al thy force.

Doug. Virgil, 355, 49, 50.

Su.G. lefw-a, Isl. lif-a, A.S. lyf-ian, Belg. lev-en, id. It is highly probable that this is merely a secondary sense of the v. signifying to leave; like Lat. superesse, to be, or remain, over, i. e. to be left, while others are removed.

LEIFU', adj. Discreet; moderate. S.

LEIFULL, adj. Lawful. V. LEFUL.

LEIF, LIEF, adj. 1. Dear; beloved, S.

Remembrand on the mortall anciant were

That for the Grekis to hir leif and dere,

At Troye lang tyme sche led before that day.

Doug. Virgil, 13, 44.

2. Willing, not reluctant.

— Quidid me war loith or leif,

Full oft resistand and denyand the were,

Constrenyt I was. — Doug. Virgil, 471, 3.

As leif, as leive, as soon, S.

Aince I could whistle, cantily as they

To owsen, as they till'd my ruggit clay.

But now I wou'd as leive maist lend my lugs

To tuneless paddocks croaking i' the bogs.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 1.

A.S. leof, leofa, Moes.G. liuba, Franc. liobo, Su.G. liuf, Isl. liufe, Belg. lief, Germ. lieb, carus, amicus, gratus. Wachter views the v. lieb-en, amare, as the root. Hence lever, leuir, q. v.

LEIFSUM, adj. 1. Proper, desirable.

Quhat thinkis thou leifsum is, that Troianis in fere,

Violence to make with brandis of mortall were

Againis Latynis. —

Quhat haldis thou leifsum, as I pray the, say.

Doug. Virgil, 315, 45, 50.

2. Leesome, which is evidently the same word, is now used in the sense of pleasant, S.

O gear will buy me rigs o' land,

And gear will buy me sheep and kye;

But the tender heart o' leesome luv,

The gowd and siller canna buy. — Burns, iv. 320.

3. Easily moved to pity. S.

Dignus, Virg. as unleif for indignus, p. 442. This, according to analogy, should be the comparative of A.S. leof, carus, and sum, as unleif is A.S. unleof, non dilectus, odiosus. It seems radically different from lesum, q. v. as well as used in a different sense.

LEISOM, adj. Lawful. V. LESUM.

LEIL, adv. Smartly; severely. S.

LEIL, LEILE, LELE, adj. 1. Loyal, faithful; respecting the allegiance due to a sovereign, S.

Quharfor, syr King, by the hie goddis aboue, —
And by the faith vnfilit, and the lele lawté, Gif it with mortall folkis may funden be,
Haue reuth and pietie on sa feill harmes smert?
Doug. Virgil, 43, 20.

— Makmurre and great Onele
To him obeyed, and made him homage leel.
i. e. true faith. Hardyng's Chron. F. 191, b.

2. Right, lawful; as enjoined by authority.
Oure Kyng Alysawndyr tuk Margret,
The dowchtyr of this Kyng Henry,
In-to lele matrimony. Wyntown, vii. 10. 94.

— Vnto Juno of Arge our sacrifice
Maid reuerently, as Helenus vs bad,
Observing wele, as he commandit had,
The serimonis leile. Doug. Virgil, 86, 47.
Jussos honores, Virg.

Unlele is used in the sense of unjust, unrighteous.

Lordis ar left landles be vnlele lawis.—Ibid. 238. b. 40.
Lyue through lele beleue, and loue as God wytneseth.
P. Ploughman, F. 68. a.

3. Honest, upright; as denoting veracity in testimony,
S. In this sense leill and loyall are synon.

"Gif the priest sayes, that the thing challenged was bred and vpbrocht in his house, he sall nocht be heard to alledge the samine; but gif he prove the samine be the testimonie of thrie loyall men.—He sall verifie the samine be the tes-timoniall of leill men, quha knaw the samine to be of veritie." Reg. Maj. B. i. c. 19. s. 3. 6. Honest is used in the same sense in the following section.

Her dowie pain she could no more conceal;
The heart, they'll say, will never lie that's leal.

Ross's Helenore, pp. 79, 80.

4. Giving to every one his due; as opposed to chicanery or theft. Leil share, due proportion. See Sup.

And fra hence furth he sal baith heir and se
Baith theif puneist, and leil men live in lie.

Priests of Peblis, S. P. R. i. 14.

I have ludg'd a leil poor man;
Since nathing's awa, as we can learn.

Gaberlunzie, st. 5, 6.

"It is hard for a greedy eye to have a leal heart;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 45. "Speer at Jock Theif, if I be a leal man;" Fergusson's S. Prov. p. 29.

5. A leil stroke, one that hits the mark; used both literally and metaphorically, S.B. See Sup.

Hence lelyly, lealelie, adv. honestly, faithfully; Acts of Parl., pass.

Bot quhethir sa yhe be freynd or fa,
That wynnys pryss off chewalry,
Men suld spek tharoff lelyly.

O.E. lelly, truly. Barbour, iii. 176. MS.

The prophet his pane [bread] ate, in penaunce and sorow.
By that the psalter sayeth, so dyd other manye,
That loueth God lelly, his liuelode is full easy.

P. Ploughman, F. 38. a.

This line is omitted in edit. 1561.

Lele is also used adverbially.

— Rede lele, and tak gude tent in tyme.

Doug. Virgil, 484, 29.

O. Fr. leall, loyal, true, faithful, honest; Ital. leal, from
Lat. legal-is.

LEILL, LEILL-STEEKE, s. A single stitch in marking on a sampler. A double leill is the going over a single stitch, which makes it more lasting.

To LEIN, v. n. To cease.

To LEIN, v. a. To conceal. V. LAYNE.

To LEIND, LEYND, LENE, LEND, LENT, v. n. 1. To dwell; to abide.

And, quhill him likit thar to leynd,
Euirilk day thai suld him seynd
Wictalis for iii. c. men. Barbour, iii. 747. MS.

A quhile in Karryk leyndyt he. Ibid. v. 125. MS.

— All the wyis I weild ar at his aune will,
How to luge, and to leynd, and in my land lent.

Gawan and Gol. i. 12.

Mr. Pink. views lent as synon.

Here is our duelling place quhare we sall leynd,
For to remane here is our cuntré heynd.

Doug. Virgil, 209, 10.

It is frequently used in this sense in Sir Egglemore, Edin.
edit. 1508.

By awght wokis war cumyn till ende,
In lande of Egyp can he leynde.

Ilke man tuke his awn way
Quhare that hym lykyt to leynde.

Thus in Arteas ar thai lent.

Mr. Pink. calls this an English metrical romance. But from the orthography, as well as from various words which occur in it, as given in this edition, it appears at least to have been altered by a Scotsman.

The term is used, however, by R. Brunne.

He went vnto Wynchestre, his conseile gaf him so.
Unto the somerestide ther gan he lende,
Fyve and thritty batailes had he brouht tille ende.

P. 18.

Turn we now other weys vnto our owen geste,
And speke of the Waleys, that lies in the foreste.
In the forest he lendes of Dounfermelyn.

Ibid. p. 324.

Lenged seems to be used in the same sense, P. Ploughman:

Was neuer wight as I went, that me wysch could

Where this ladde lenged, lesse or more. —

I—prayed hem for charitie, or they passed further,

If they knewe any courte, or contrye as they went,

Where that Dowell dwelleth. Fol. 39. b. Pass. 8.

2. To tarry; to stay.

He said, Allace, I may na longer leind!
Sen I my twa best friends couth assay;
I can nocht get a freind yit to my pay,
That dar now tak in hand, for onie thing,
With me for to compeir befor yon king.

Priests of Peblis, S. P. R. i. 41.

Mr. Pink. leaves this word for explanation. But the sense is precisely the same as in the following passage:

Desist, quod he, this mater mon be left,
For the day lycht, quhilk is to vs vnfreynd,
Approchis nere, we may no langar leynd.

Doug. Virgil, 288, 39.

No longer than against the day,

It is not my will for to lend;

For I would that no man me kend.

O. E. leende.

Sir Egeir, p. 11.

Withinne the thridde day of May,

No lengor nolde thei leende.

Kyng of Tars, Ritson's E. M. Rom. ii. 162.

Lenit and lent are apparently used in the same sense:

—Ilk foule tuke the flicht: and, schortly to schawin,

Held hame to thair hanf, and to thair harbry,

Quhair thay wer wont to remane,

All thir gudly and gane:

And thair lenit allane

The Howlate, and I.

Houlate, iii. 24. MS.

He saw nane levand leid upone loft lent,

Nouthir lord na lad.

Gawan and Gol. i. 6.

3. To continue in any state; applied to the mind.

Thus the ledis on loft in langour war lent.

The lordis, on the tothir side, for liking thay leugh.

Gawan and Gol. iv. 6.

Rudd. without reason deduces this v. from A.S. lend, provincia; Sibb. with more plausibility, from Sw. linna, linda, cessare. But, although this word sometimes signifies to stop, as on a journey; it does not seem to occur in the sense of permanent residence. It must be acknowledged, however, that A.S. bilened is rendered inhabitatus; Lye. But it is more probable that this word primarily signified, to remain under covert, to lodge in a place of concealment; from Isl. lein-a to conceal, leind hiding, leine lurking-place, latebrae, clancularia loca, pl. leind-er. There is an apparent affinity to Heb. לון loon, pernoctare, divertere, commorari.

Douglas in one passage uses this v. as conveying the idea of concealment:

Al the feildis still othir, but noyis or soun,
All beistis and byrdis of diuers cullours sere,
And quhatsumeir in the brade lochis were,
Or amang buskis barsk leyndis vnder the spray,
Throw nichtis sylence slepit quhare thay lay.

Virgil, 118, 34.

From this use of the word, we might suppose that the O. E. and S. phrase, under the lind, was originally from leind, covert, hiding, rather than from the linden tree; were not the latter etymon confirmed by the use of a similar mode of expression in Isl. V. LIND. See Sup.

LEINE, s.

Haill lady of all ladies, lichtest of leine!

Haill! blissit mot thou be

For thy barne seine.

Houlate, iii. 7.

Leg. leme, gleam, and barne teme, as in MS. The latter has been first written, barne tyme, in MS.; then tyme has been deleted, and teme put in its place.

LEYNE, pret. Lied, told a falsehood.

For sikkirly, les than wyse authoris leyne,

Eneas saw neuer Touer with his ene.

Doug. Virgil, 7, 17.

"As sayne for say, and fleyne for fly, all for the verse sake," Rudd.

LEINEST.

The larbar lukes of thy lang leinst craig,
Thy pure pynd thropole peilt, and out of ply,—
Gart men dispyt thair flesch, thou spreit of Gy.

Evergreen, ii. 56. st. 16.

It does not appear whether this be a superlative from lean; or a kind of participle from A.S. hlean-an, to wax lean.

LEINFOU, LEINFOU-HEARTIT, adj. Kind-hearted; feeling; compassionate. S.

LEINGIE, (g. liquid,) s. The loin. S.

LEINGIE-SHOT, s. Having the loins dislocated; spoken of horses. S.

To LEIP, v. n. Apparently; to boil. V. LEPE. S.

LEIPIT. V. LEEPIT.

LEIPPIE, s. The fourth part of a peck. V. LIPPIE. S.

LEIRICHIE-LARICHIE, s. Mutual whispering. S.

To LEIRICHIE-LARICHIE, (gutt.) v. n. To speak in mutual whispers. S.

LEIS, s. Perhaps, a load. S.

To LEIS, v. a. To lose. O. E. leise.

I leis my fader, al comfort and solace,

And all supple of our trauel and pane.

Doug. Virgil, 92, 24.

Moes. G. lius-an, fra-lius-an, Su. G. foer-lis-a, Belg. ver-lies-en, id. Isl. lyssa, grande damnum.

To LEIS, LEISS, v. a. To lessen; to diminish.

—Thochtful luffaris rownyis to and fro,

To leis thare pane, and plene thare joly wo.

A. S. laes, minor.

Doug. Virgil, 402, 42.

To LEIS, v. a. "To arrange; to lay in order. Goth. lis-an congregare;" Gl. Sibb.

LEIS ME, LEESE ME, LEUIS ME. "Pleased am I with;"

an expression of strong affection and good wishes, S. Sibb. seems to give the literal sense in these words above quoted.

I schro the lyar, full leis me yow.

Bannatyne Poems, p. 158, st. 2.

i. e. "I wish a curse on the liar, I love you heartily." It being said, that he was only scoffing, he wishes that a curse might light upon him, if he did not speak the truth in declaring his love.

Leez me on liquor, my todlen dow,

Ye're ay sae good humour'd when weeting your mow.

Ritson's S. Songs, i. 258.

O leese me on my spinning wheel,

O leese me on my rock and reel;

Frae tap to tae that cleeds me bien,

And haps me fiel and warm at e'en. Burns, iv. 317.

This might seem allied to Su. G. lis-a, requiem dare. But I prefer deriving it from leif, dear, agreeable; q. "leif is to me," literally, "dear is to me," a phrase the inverse of wo is me, S. wae's me. This derivation is confirmed by the form in which Douglas uses the phrase:

Take thir with the, as lattir presand sere,

Of thy kind natue freyndes gudis and gere;

O leuis me, the lykest thing lyuing,

And verray ymage of my Astyanax ying.

Virgil, 84, 45.

We find an A. S. phrase very similar, leofre me ys, gratius est mihi, Gen. xxix. 19.; only the comparative is used instead of the positive.

LEISCH, LESCHE, v. 1. A thong; a whip-cord, S.

Thow for thy lounrie mony a leisch has fyld.

Dunbar, Evergr. ii. 53. st. 7.

2. A cord or thong, by which a dog or any other animal is held.

Nixt eftir quham the wageoure has ressaue,

He that the lesche and lyame in sounder draue.

Doug. Virgil, 145, 45.

3. A stroke with a thong, S. V. LEICH.

—Let him lay sax leischis on thy lends.

Kennedy, Evergreen, ii. 50. st. 8.

To LEISCHE, LEICH, LEASH, v. a. To lash; to scourge, S.

"Gif ony childer within age commit ony of thir thingis foirsaid, because thay may not be punist for nonage, their fathers or maisters sall pay for ilk ane of thame xiii. s. iiii. d. or els deliuer the said childe to the juge, to be leichit, scourgit, and dung, according to the fault." Acts, Ja. IV. 1503. c. 103. Edit. 1566; leisched, Skene, c. 69.

Seren. derives E. lash from Isl. lash-ast, laedi; Su. G. laest-a percutere, caedere. Perhaps it is formed from the s.

LEISE-MAJESTIE, LEISS-MAJESTIE, LESE-MAJESTY, s.

1. The crime of high-treason. 2. Treason against Jesus Christ as sovereign of his Church. S.

LEISH, adj. Active; clever. V. LIESH. S.

LEISHIN, part. adj. Tall and active, applied to persons; extensive, applied to fields, farms, &c.; long, referring to a journey. S.

LEISHER, s. A tall and active person; an extensive tract of country; a long journey. S.

LEISOME, adj. Warm; sultry. V. LIESOME, S.

LEISSURE, LIZZURE, s. Pasture between two corn fields; more generally, any grazing ground. S.

To LEIST, v. n. To incline, Dunbar; E. list.

LEIST, expl. "Appeased; calmed, q. leased, from Fr. lacher, Lat. laxare," Rudd.

Desist hereof, and at last be the leist,

And condescend to bow at our request.

Doug. Virgil, 441, 34.

Sibb. derives it from Teut. lessch-en, extinguere; (sitim) levare. If leist signify appeased, the most natural origin would be Su.G. lis-a, requiem dare, lenire mala; whence lisa, requies a dolore, vel sensu quolibet mali; Ihre. But I hesitate, whether it be not used for least, adj.; as Jupiter is here requiring submission, although in very respectful terms, from his haughty and vindictive spouse:

Desine jam tandem, precibusque inflectere nostris.

Virg.

LEISTER, LISTER, s. A spear, armed with three or four, and sometimes five prongs, for striking fish; an eel-spear, S.

"The modes [of fishing] are four. 1. With leisters: a kind of four-pronged fork, with the prongs turned a little to one side; having a shaft 20 or 24 feet long. These they run along the sand on their edge, or throw them when they see any fish. In this manner they often wound and kill great quantities. Some of our people are very dexterous at this exercise, and will sometimes, upon horse-back, throw a leister, and kill at a great distance. This is also called shauling, as it is generally practised when the tide is almost spent, and the waters turned shallow." P. Dornock, Dumfries, Statist. Acc. ii. 15.

"The lister is a shaft, with three iron prongs barbed on one side, fixed on the end, not unlike the figure of Neptune's trident." P. Canoby, Ibid. xiv. 411.

An awfu' scythe, out-owre ae shouther,

Clear-dangling hang;

A three-tae'd leister on the ither

Lay, large and lang.

Burns, iii. 42.

Perhaps it is here poetically used, in the description of Death, as denoting a trident.

It has no affinity to Teut. eel-schere, eel-spear, referred to by Sibb. I can indeed find no vestige of this word in A.S., or in any of the Germ. dialects. But it is preserved, in the same form, in Su.G. liuster, liustra, id. Liustra signifies to strike fish with a trident or eel-spear, when they approach to the light. Far med liustra ok elde; If they use the leister and fire. Leg. Upland. c. 13. ap. Ihre. This phrase irresistibly suggests the idea of what is vulgarly called, in our own country, the black fishing, i. e. fishing under night, or under the covert of darkness. It also shews that the same illegal mode of fishing has been practised in Sweden, as in Scotland. A torch or light is held above the water, and the fish running towards it are struck. Verel. defines Isl. liustra, liuster, so as in fact to give a description of our black-fishing. Tridens, s. fuscina plurium dentium hamata, manubrioque longissimo adfixa, qua ad faculas lintre circumlatas, pisces nocturno tempore percutiuntur et extrahuntur a piscatoribus; Ind.

The v. liustra originally signifies, to strike in general; anc. lyst-a, Isl. liost-a, list-a; liste haugg, verber grave, G. Andr. V. BLACK-FISHING.

Weblyster occurs in the O. E. law; whether the same instrument be meant, is uncertain. V. COWPES.

To LEISTER, v. a. To strike with a fish spear S.

To LEIT, v. a. To permit; to endure; E. let.

— No lad unleill thay leit,

Untrewth expressly thay expell.

Scott, Bannatyne Poems, p. 207. st. 2.

"They will not endure the company of any false or disloyal man;" Lord Hailes. V. LAT, v. 1.

To LEIT, v. n. To delay.

Ane uthir vers yit this yung man cawth sing:

At luv's law a quhyle I think to leit;

In court to cramp clenely in my clething,

And luke amangis thir lusty ladeis sweet.

Henryson, Bann. P. p. 132.

According to L. Hailes, "probably leet, give one's suffrage or vote." But it rather signifies that, as being a young man, he would pass some part of his time in love; Su.G.

laet-ia intermittere, Moes.G. lat-jan, A.S. laet-an, tardare, morari, A. Bor. leath, ceasing, intermission, Ray.

To LEIT, LEET, LET, v. n. 1. To pretend; to give out; to make a shew as if, S.B.

Thre kynd of wolffis in the warld now ringis:

The first ar fals pervertaris of the lawis,

Quhillk, under poleit termes, falset myngis,

Leitand, that all wer gospell that thay schawis:

Bot for a bud the trew men he ourthrawis.

Henryson, Bann. P. p. 119.

It is surprising that L. Hailes should say, on this word, "probably, voting." Here, as on the preceding term, the bench evidently predominated with the worthy judge.

Thus still thai baid quhill day began to peyr,

A thyk myst fell, the planet was nocht cleyr.

Wallace assayd at all placis about,

Leit as he wald at ony place brek out.

Wallace, xi. 502. MS.

— I mak ane vow,

Ye ar not sik ane fule as ye let yow.

Priests of Peblis, S. P. R. i. 29.

Lete, pret., is probably used in the same sense in the following passage:

The king, throu consaile of his men,

His folk delt in bataillis ten.

In ilkane war weile X thousand,

That lete thai stalwartly suld stand

In the batail, and stythly fycht;

And leve nocht for thair fayis mycht.

Barbour, ii. 157. MS.

In edit. 1620, it is rendered thought. But although the v. signifying to think, is written in a similar manner, that here used does not seem properly to express the idea entertained by the person, but the external semblance. Thus it occurs in Ywayne and Gawin:

Than lepe the maiden on hir palfray,

And nere byside him made hir way;

Sho lete as sho him noght had sene,

Ne wetyn that he thar had bene.

Ritson's Met. Rom. i. 76.

"He's no sa daft as he leets," S.B. a phrase used with respect to one who is supposed to assume the appearance of derangement to serve a purpose. "You are not so mad as you leeten you," Chesh.

Su.G. laat-as, to make a shew, whether in truth or in pretence; prae se ferre, sive vere sive simulando; Ihre. This learned etymologist mentions E. leeten as a kindred word. Isl. lat-a, laet-a, id. Thu ert miklo vitrari en thu laeter; Multo es sapientior, quam prae te fers; "Thou art meikle wittier than thou leets," S. Their letu illa yfer; Aegre se ferre professi sunt; Kristnis. p. 74. A.S. laet-an, let-an, simulare. The hi rihtwise leton; Who should feign themselves just men; Luke, xx. 20. Belg. zich ge-laet-en, to make as if. Many view Moes.G. liutei, guile, as the radical term. Ihre prefers Su.G. lat, later, manners, behaviour. Lye explains the prov. term leeten prae se ferre; and refers to A.S. lytig, astutus; Moes.G. liutei, dolus; liuta, hypocrita; adding that the Icelanders retain the root, in laet-a, simulare. V. LAT.

2. To mention, or give a hint of, any thing. Nevir leet, make no mention of it, S.B.

To LET ON, is now more generally used in the same sense.

(1.) To seem to observe any thing; to testify one's knowledge, either by words or looks. S. See Sup.

A weel-stocked mailing, himsel for the laird,

And marriage aff-hand were his proffers:

I never loot on that I kend it, or car'd.—Burns, iv. 249.

(2.) To make mention of a thing.

He did nae let on, he did not make the least mention;

L E M

i. e. he did not shew that he had any knowledge of the thing referred to.

— Let na on what's past,
'Tween you and me, else fear a kittle cast.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 100.

(3.) To give one's self concern about any business.

Never let on you, but laugh, S. Prov.; spoken when people are jeering our projects, pretensions, and designs. Let on you, trouble yourself about it; Kelly, p. 262.

Isl. laet-a is also rendered ostendere.

To let wit, lat wit, to make known, S. is probably from the same stock.

Let na man wit that I can do sic thing.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 81.

Belg. laat-en weeten, Sw. let-a en weeta, id.

Also, to let with it, id. S.B.

Now Nory kens she in her guess was right,
But lootna wi't, that she had seen the knight.

Ross's Helenore, p. 78.

To LEIT, v. a. To put in nomination. V. LEET. S.

LEIT, pret. V. To LET at. S.

LEIT, s. A link of horse hair for a fishing line. S.

To LEIT, LEET, v. n. To ooze; especially applied to thin ichor distilling through the pores of the body, S.

This is perhaps merely a secondary sense of the preceding v. as signifying to appear. The humour may thus be said to shew itself through the pores.

LEYT, pret. Reckoned. V. LAT, 3.

To LEYTCH, v. n. To loiter. S.

LEYTHAND.

Bot sodandly thar come in till his thoct,
Gret power wok at Stirlyng bryg off tre,
Leythand he said, No passage is for me.

Wallace, v. 304. Perth edit.

In MS. it is seichand, sighing.

LEIWAR, s. Liver; survivor. S.

LEKAME, s. Dead body. V. LICAYM.

LE-LANE. Be quiet; give over; Let alane. S.

LELE, s. The lily. V. LEVER.

LELE, adj. Loyal; faithful, &c. V. LEIL. S.

LELELY, LELILY, adv. Faithfully. V. under LEIL. S.

To LELL, v. a. To mark; to take aim, S.B.

From A.S. laefel; or E. level, which is used in the same sense.

LEMANE, s. A sweetheart.

Rudd. and Sibb. render it as if it signified only a mistress or concubine; which is the sense in modern E. But Jun. properly explains it as applied to either sex.

Douglas mentions as the name of an old song:

— The schip salis ouer the salt fame,
Wil bring thir merchandis and my lemane hame.

Virgil, 402, 38.

This must naturally be viewed as referring to a male. Chaucer uses it in both senses:

Now dere lemman, quod she, go farewele.

— Good lemman, God thee save and kepe.

And with that word she gan almost to wepe.

Reves T. v. 4238. 4245.

Unto his lemman Dalida he tolde,

That in his heres ail his strengthe lay.

Monkes T. v. 14069.

It is evident that anciently this word was often used in a good sense; as merely denoting an object of affection.

Many a louely lady, and lemmans of knightes

Swoned and sweltd for sorow of deathes dintes.

P. Ploughman's Vision, Sign. H h, 2. b.

But it is not always used in this favourable sense.

Thys mayde hym payde suythe wel, myd god wille
he byr nom,

VOL. II.

33

L E N

And huld hyre, as hys lefmon, as wo seyth in hordom.

R. Glouc. p. 344.

Rudd. and Johns. both derive it from Fr. l'aimant. Sibb. has referred to the true etymon, although he marks it as doubtful; "Teut. lief dilectus, carus, and man, pro homine, foeminam aeque notante ac virum." Hickeys mentions Norm. Sax. leue-mon, amasius, Gram. A.S. He also refers to Fr. lief-mon, carus homo. But this is certainly of Goth. origin; A.S. leof, carus.

LEMANRYE, s. Illicit love; an amour. S.

To LEME, v. n. To blaze; to shine; to gleam, S.;

lemand, part. pret. See Sup.

The blesand torchis schane and sergeis bricht,
That fer on bred all lemes of thare licht.

Doug. Virgil, 475, 53.

O thou of Troy, the lemand lamp of licht!

Ibid. 48, 21.

Now by this time, the sun begins to leam,
And lit the hill heads with his morning beam.

Ross's Helenore, p. 55.

A.S. leoman, Isl. liom-a, splendere; A.S. leoma, Isl. liome, splendor. Moes.G. lauhmon, lightening, is undoubtedly from the same origin. E. gleam is evidently A.S. ge-leoma, ge-lioma, lumen, contr. Thwaites traces Su.G. glimma, micare, to the same source; Ihre in vo.

LEME, s. Gleam. Leme or lowe. Flamma. prompt. par.

— From the schede of his croun

Schane al of licht vnto the erd adoun,

The leme of fyre and flamb —.

Doug. Virgil, 61, 44.

Be this fair Titan, with his lemis licht,

Ouer all the land had spreid hir [his] baner bricht.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592. p. 226.

Leom, leme, leem, occur in O.E.

O cler leom, with oute mo, ther stud from hym wel pur,
Y formed as a dragon, as red as the fuyr.

R. Glouc. p. 151.

— A lyght and a leme laye before hell.

— This light and this leem shal Lucifer ablend.

V. the v.

P. Ploughman, Fol. 98. b. 99, a.

To LEN, v. a. To lend; to give in loan, S.

Oft times is better hald nor len.—

Therefor I red the verrelly,

Quhome to thou lennis tak rycht gud tent.

Chron. S. P. iii. 225.

A.S. laen-an, Su.G. laen-a, Belg. leen-en, id.

LEN, LEANE, LEND, s. A loan, S. See Sup.

"That quha ever committis usurie, or ocker in time cumming, directlie or indirectlie, (that is to say,) takis mair profite for the leane of money, nor as it cummis to ten pundes in the yeir for a hundreth pundes, or five bolles victual; and swa pro rata,—sall be counted and esteemed usurers and ockerers." Acts, Ja. VI. 1594. c. 222, Murray.

What say you for yourself man? Fye for shame.

Should not a lend come always laughing hame?

Pennecuik's Poems, 1715. p. 49.

Su.G. Isl. laan, A.S. laen, lean, Fris. lean, id. Moes.G. laun, merces, remuneratio.

To LEN, v. n. V. LAYNE.

To LEND, v. n. To abide; to dwell. V. LEIND.

LENDINGS, s. pl. Pay of an army; arrears. S.

LENDIS, s. pl. 1. Loins.

Plate futt he bobbit up with bendis,

For Mauld he maid requeist.

He lap quhil he lay on his lendis. Chr. Kirk, st. 5.

2. Rendered "buttocks," by Ramsay.

Se sune thou mak my Commissar amends,

And let him lay sax leischis on thy lends.

Kennedy, Ever-green, ii. 49, 50.

A.S. lendenu, lendena, lendene; Germ. lenden, Isl. Sw.

E

L E N

lendar, id. Isl. lend in sing. clunis, a haunch or buttock. Callender derives it from leing-a, "to extend, the loins being the length of the trunk of the body."

To LENE, v. a. To give; to grant. S.

LENY, s. Abbrev. of Leonard. S.

LENYIE, LENYE, adj. 1. Lean; meagre.

His body wes weyll [maid, and lenye,]

As thai that saw him said to me. Barbour, i. 387.

The words in brackets are not in MS.

2. Of a fine or thin texture.

Riche lenye wobbis naitly weiffit sche.

Tenuis, Virg. Doug. Virgil, 204, 46.

A.S. hlaene, laene, macer; or laenig, tenuis. See Sup.

LENIT, pret. Granted.

Be this resone we reid, as our Roy lenit,

The Dowglas in armes the bluidy hairt beiris.

Houlate, ii. 18. MS.

Su.G. Isl. laen-a, dare, concedere.

LENIT, LENT, pret. Abode; remained. V. LEIND.

LENIT, LENT, pret. Leaned; reclined.

—As I lenit in an ley in Lent this last nycht,

I slaid on ane swevynyng, slomerand and lite.

Doug. Virgil, 238, a. 7.

Sum vthir singis, I wil be blyith and licht,

My hert is lent apoun sa gudly wicht.

Ibid. 402, 40.

LENK, s. A link of horse-hair which connects the hooks and the line in angling. S.

LENNER, s. Lender. S.

LENNO, s. A child; Gael. leanabh.

Ye's neir pe pidden work a turn

At ony kind of spin, mattam,

But shug your lenno in a scull,

And tidel highland sing, mattam.

Ritson's S. Songs, i. 190.

LENSHER, s. Left unexplained. S.

LENTHE, adj. Long. S.

LENT, s. The game of cards in E. called Loo. V. LANT. S.

LENTED, part. pa. Beat in this game; loeed. S.

LENT, adj. Slow. Fr. lent, Lat. lentus. id. S.

LENT-FIRE, s. A slow fire.

"They saw we were not to be boasted; and before we would be roasted with a lent-fire, by the hands of churchmen, who kept themselves far aback from the flame, we were resolved to make about through the reek, to get a grip of some of these who had first kindled the fire, and still lent fuel to it, and try if we could cast them in the midst of it, to taste if that heat was pleasant when it came near their own shins." Baillie's Lett. i. 171.

LENTFULL, adj. Apparently, mournful; melancholy; from Lent, the season in Popish countries appropriated to fasting.

In relation to the bloody heart in the arms of Douglas, Holland speaks—

Of metteles and cullours in lentfull attyre.

This is explained by what follows;

All thair deir armes in dolie desyre.

Houlate, ii. 9. MS.

LENTRENVARE, s. The skins of lambs that have died soon after being dropped; i. e. in Lentron or Spring. S.

LENTIN KAIL, LANTEN KAIL. Broth made of vegetables, without animal food, used during Lent. S.

LENTRYNE, LENTYRE, s. The season of Lent; still used to denote that of Spring. S.

Schyr Eduuard, fra the sege wes tane,

A weile lang tyme about it lay,

Fra the Lentryne, that is to say,

34

L E P

Quhill forouth the Saint Jhonys mess.

Barbour, x. 815. MS.

—At Saynt Andrewys than bad he,

And held hys Lentyre in reawtè.

Wyntown, viii. 17. 42. Lentyren, ibid. 18. 2.

The quadragesimal Fast received its name from the season of the year in which it was observed. In the Laws of Alfred the Great, it is called lengten-faesten, or the fast in Spring. So early as the translation of the Bible into A.S., lengten, or lencten was the term for Spring, as in Psa. 74. 17. Sumer and lengten thu gescope hig; Thou hast made summer and spring. They called the vernal equinox lencten-lican emnihte. Belg. lente, Alem. Germ. lenze, the Spring.

Both Skinner and Lye derive A.S. lencten from lencg-an, because then the days begin to lengthen.

To LENTH, v. a. To lengthen; to prolong.

He did of Deith suffer the schouris:

And nicht not lenth his life ane hour,

Thocht he was the first conquerour.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592. p. 80.

Tent. lengh-en, Sw. leng-a, prolongare.

LEOMEN, s. 1. A leg, Aberd. 2. The bough of a tree. S.

"Sae I tauld her I'd rather hae the leomen of an auld ewe, or a bit o' a dead nout." Journal from London, p. 9.

A.S. leome, a limb.

To LEP, v. n. Apparently, to make go freely; to run. S.

Thai delt amang thaim that war thar,

[And gaif] the King off Inglandis ger,

That he had levyt in Biland,

All gert thai lep out our thair hand,

And maid thaim all glaid and mery.

Barbour, xviii. 502. MS.

i. e. "They spent it freely; they did not act the part of misers." This seems to have been anciently a proverbial phrase, synon. with that now used with respect to money spent lavishly, that one makes it go. The idea is borrowed from rapid motion; Isl. leip-a, hleip-a, Su.G. loep-a, to run.

To LEPE, LEIP, v. a. To heat; properly to parboil, S.

Sum latit lattoun but lay lepis in lawde lyte.

Doug. Virgil, 238, b. 49.

"We say that a thing is leaped, that is heated a little, or put into boiling water or such like, for a little time," S. Rudd.

They cowpit him then into the hopper,

Syne put the burn untill the glead,

And lepit the een out o' his head.

Allan o' Maut, Jamieson's Pop. Ball. ii. 239.

It is explained "scald," in Gl., but rather improperly.

Unleipit occurs in an old poem.

In Tyberius tyme, the trew imperatour,

Quhen Tynto hills fra skraiping of toun-henis was keipit,

Thair dwelt ane grit Gyre Carling in awld Betokis bour,

That levit upoun Christiane menis flesche, and rew-heids unleipit.

Bann. MS. ap. Minstrelsy Border, ii. 199.

This seems to signify, raw heads that had not got the slightest boiling. Rew, however, may signify rough, having the hair on.

I take this word to be radically the same with A.S. hleap-an, Isl. leip-a, Moes.G. hlaup-an, to leap; because the thing said to be leped, is allowed only to wallop in the pot. By the way, the E. synon. wallop is not, as Johnson says, merely from A.S. weal-an to boil. It is an inversion of Belg. opwell-en, to boil up. That some of the Gothic words, similar in form to E. leap, had been anciently applied to boiling, appears from the Belg. phrases, Zyn gal loopt over, His heart boils with choler; De pot loopt over, The pot runs over; Tent. overloop-en, exaestuate, ebullire.

LEPE, LEEP, s. A slight boiling; q. a wallop, S.

L E S

LEPIT PEATS, s. pl. Peats dug out of the solid moss, without being baked, or dried. S.

LEPER-DEW, s. A cold frosty dew, S. B.

I know not if this derives its designation from being somewhat hoary in its appearance, and thus resembling the spots of the leprosy; or from Isl. hleipe, coagulo.

LEPYR, s. The leprosy. V. LIPPER, s.

LERD, s. Lord. S.

To LERE; to learn. V. LARE.

LERGES. V. LARGES.

LERGNES, s. Liberality.

He put his lergnes to the preif,

For lerges of this new-yeir day.

V. LARG.

Bannatyne Poems, p. 151. st. 1.

LERROCH, LAIRACH, LAIROCH, (gutt.) s. The site of a building, or the traces of an old one; a site of any kind; Midden-lairach, the site of a dunghill. The artificial bottom of a stack, made of brushwood, &c.; a quantity of any materials, as, "a lairoch o' dirt." S.

LERROCK-CAIRN, s. The site of a cairn. S.

LES, conj. 1. Unless.

Bot I offer me, les the fatis vnstabill,

Nor Jupiter consent not, ne aggre.

Doug. Virgil, 103, 31.

2. Lest.

I knew it was past four houris of day,

And thocht I wald na langare ly in May,

Les Phebus suld me losingere attaynt.

Ibid. 404, 11.

Les than is also used for unless, Doug.

"He counsalit hym — neur to moue battall, les than he mycht na othir wayis do." Bellend. Cron. Fol. 23, b.

Les na, les nor, id. See Sup.

"The chancellor sall mak the panis contenit in the said actis of Parliament to be put to executioun vpoun the brekaris of the saidis actis, les na thay leif the said beneficis efter thay be requyrit thairupone." Acts, Ja. IV. 1488, c. 13. Edit. 1566. Les nor, Skene.

A.S. laes, les, id. laes hwon, ne quando, Lye. The laes, and thy laes, are used in the same sense. The original signification of this word is minor, minus, less; as the conj. implies diminution. It occurs in O. E. and is viewed as the imperat. of A.S. les-an, to dismiss. V. Divers. Purley, i. p. 172.

LES-AGE, s. Non-age, minority; from less and age.

"First efter the deith of King James the fourt, Johne Duke of Albany, chosen be the nobilitie to governe in the Kingis les-age, — the Hammiltounis thinking that he had bene als wickit as thay, — held thame quyet for a season." Buchanan's Admonitioun to Trew Lordis, p. 10.

LESH PUND, LEISPUND, LISPUND, s. A weight used in the Orkney Islands, containing eighteen pounds Scots. See Sup.

"Item, ane stane and twa pound Scottish makis ane lesh pund. Item, 15 lesh pundes makis ane barrel." Skene, Verb. Sign. vo. Serplaith.

"The least quantity [of cosn] is called a Merk, which is 18 ounces; 24 Merks make a Leispound or Setten, which with the Danes is that which we call a Stone." Brand's Descript. of Orkney, p. 28.

"The butter — is delivered to the landlord in certain cases by the lispond. This denomination of weight consisted originally of only 12 Scotch or Dutch pounds. By various acts, however, and different imperfect agreements, it has been gradually raised to 30 lb." P. Unst, Shetland, Statist. Acc. v. 197.

Su.G. lispond, a pound of twenty marks. Ihre observes that this is properly Liwesche pund, the Livonian pound.

L E S

LESING-MAKARE, LEASING-MAKER, s. A person who calumniates the sovereign to the subjects, or who calumniates the subjects to the sovereign. S.

LESIONE, LESIOUN, LESSIOUN, s. Injury; loss. S.

LESYT, LESYT, pret. Lost.

Thair gudis haiff thai lesyt all.

Barbour, x. 759. MS.

A.S. leos-an, O. E. lese, to lose.

LESS, lies; pl. of LE, lie. For owtyn less, but less, in truth, without leasing.

For thir thre men, for owtyn less,

War his fayis all wtrelly.

Barbour, vii. 419. MS.

Schir Malcom Wallas was his name but less.

Wallace, i. 321. MS.

Withouten lies, withouten lese; Chaucer, id.

LESS, conj. Unless. V. LES.

S.

LESSIOUN, s. Injury; loss. V. LESIONE.

S.

To LEST, v. n. To please, E. list.

Giff ye be warldly wicht that dooth me sike,

Quhy lest God mak yow so, my derest hert?

King's Quair, ii. 25.

Lest, s. is also used, ibid. st. 38.

Opyn thy throte; hastow no lest to sing?

i. e. inclination, desire.

LEST, pret. Waited; tarried.

This seems the meaning in the following passage.

For he thocht he wald him assail,

Or that he lest, in plain bataill.

Barbour, ix. 557. MS.

Elsewhere, it is used for E. last, endure.

A.S. laest-an, to remain; to stay.

LESUM, LEISOM, adj. Allowable, what may be permitted; often used as equivalent to lawful. "Lovely, acceptable, q. lovesum. In our law it signifies lawful," Rudd.

— Is it not as lesum and ganand,

That fynalie we seik to vncouth land?

Doug. Virgil, 111, 54.

Lesum it is to desist of your feid,

And now to spare the pure pepil Troyane.

Ibid. 164, 47.

In both these places, the word used by Virgil is fas, which has little analogy to "lovely, acceptable." In another place lesum is used in rendering non detur.

Bot it is na wyse lesum, I the schaw,

Thir secrete wayis vnder the erd to went.

Ibid. 167, 46.

Douglas uses lesum and leful in common for fas.

Mot it be leful to me for to tell

Thay thingis quhilkis I haue hard said of hell.

Ibid. 172, 26.

"There was no man to defend the burgesses, priests, and poor men labourers haunting their leisom business, either publicly or privately." Pitscottie, p. 2.

Sibb. derives it from lé, law. But on a more particular investigation, I find the conjecture I had thrown out on Lefull confirmed. A.S. leaf, ge-leaf, licentia, permissio, is indeed the origin. From the latter is formed ge-leafful, licitus, allowable; and also ge-leafsum, id. Lye. We observe the same form of expression in other dialects; Isl. oleifr, oleift, impermissum, illicitum, from o negat. and leift, leave, permission: Sw. laaftig, allowable, olaestig, what may not be permitted; from laaf, lof, leave.

LESURIS, LASORS, s. pl. Pastures. Lizor, pasture.

In lesuris and on leyis litill lammes

Full tait and trig socht bletand to thare dammes.

Doug. Virgil, 402, 24.

"Quhare sum tyme bene maist notable cietes or maist plentuous lesuris & medois, now throw erd quaik & trem-blyng, or ellis be continewall inundation of watteris, nocht remanis bot othir the huge seys or ellis vnprofitable ground & sandis." Belend. Descr. Alb. c. 1.

L E T

"Caranach fled to Fyffe, quhilk is ane plenteous regioun lyand betuix two firthis Tay and Forth, full of woddis, lesuris, and valis." Bellend. Cron. B. iv. c. 11. Nemo-ribus, pascuis, Boeth. "Valis and lesuris." Ibid. B. vi. c. 17. Valles, totaque planities, Boeth.

Thay me demandit, gif I wald assent
With thame to go, thair lasors for to sie.

Maitland Poems, p. 261.

A.S. leswe, laeswe, signifies a pasture; and R. Glouc. uses lesen in this sense.

For Engeland ys ful ynow of fruyt and of tren,
Of welles swete and colde ynow, of lesen and of mede.

Cron. p. 1. Gl. "lees, commons, pastures."

In the same sense lese occurs in his account of Ireland."

Lese lasteth ther al the wynter. Bute hyt tho more wonder be,

Selde me schal in the lond eny foule wormes se.

Ibid. p. 43.

Ir. leasur, according to Lhuyd, signifies pratum. Du Cange gives L. B. lescheria as denoting a marshy place where reeds and herbs grow.

To LET, v. n. To reckon; to esteem; conjoined with of; pret. leit of.

I have na uther help, nor yit supplie,
Bot I wil pas to my freinds thrie;
Twa of them I luifit ay sa weil,
But ony fault thair freindship wil I feil;
The thrid freind I leit lichtly of ay;
Quhat my [may] he do to me bot say me nay?

V. LAT, v. 3.

Priests of Peblis, S. P. R. i. 38.

To LET, v. n. To expect; to suppose; having that conjoined with the subst. v.

— Inglis man he come agayne,
And gert his folk wyth mekil mayne
Ryot halyly the cwntrè;
And lete, that all hys awyne suld be.

Wyntown, viii. 30. 111.

— Na yhoung man wes in the land,
That traystyd sa in his awyne hand,
Na lete, that he mycht prysyd be,
[But] gywe a qwhil wyth hym war he.

Ibid. 38. 115.

To LET, v. a. To dismiss; to send away.

Than ilka fould of his flight a fether has tane,
And let the Houlat in haste, hurtly but hone.

Houlate, iii. 20. MS.

i. e. "Has sent away the owl without delay."

A.S. laet-an, let-an, mittere, dimittere; læt mine wilne to the; Dimisi ancillam meam ad te; Gen. 16. 5.

LET-ABEE, conj. Not to mention; not calling into account. Used as a s. denoting forbearance; as,

LET-ABE FOR LET-ABE. Mutual forbearance. S.

To LET at. To give a stroke; to let drive at any object. S.

To LET BE. V. LAT, v. 1.

To LET GAE, v. a. To raise the tune; a term especially applied, by old people, to the precentor, or reader, S.

O Domine, ye're dispossess,—

You dare no more now, do your best,

Lat gae the rhyme. — Forbes's Dominie Depos'd, p. 3.

To LET ON, LET WIT. V. LEIT, v. 3.

To LET gae, or go, v. a. To shoot. Let go, part. Shot. S.

To LET licht, v. a. To admit; to allow. S.

To LET o'er, v. a. To swallow. V. LAT, v. S.

To LET one to wit. To give one to know. S.

To LET stand, v. a. 1. To suffer any thing to remain in its former state. 2. Not to meddle with a particular point in conversation; to let alone. S.

L E T

To LETE, v. n. To pretend. V. LEIT, v. 3.

To LETE, v. n. To forbear; to exercise patience.

Rohand bad him lete,

And help him at that stounde.

V. LAT, v. 1.

Sir Tristrem, p. 38. st. 58.

LETE, s. But let, literally, without obstruction; an expletive.

He wes nere in the twentyde gre

Be lyne discendande fra Noyè,

Of his yhungest son but lete

That to name was callyd Japhete.—Wyntown, ii. 8. 7.

LETLES, adj. Without obstruction.

The Scottis men saw thair cummyng,

And had of thaim sic abasing.

That thair all saymn raid thaim fra;

And the land letles lete thaim ta.

Barbour, xvi. 568. MS.

From let and les, corresponding to E. less.

LETE, s. Gesture; demeanour. V. LAIT.

LETH, LETHE, s. 1. Hatred; evil; enmity.

— All frawde and gyle put by,

Luwe, or leth, thair lelyly,

Gyve thair couth, thair suld declere

Of that gret dystans the matere.

Wyntown, viii. 5. 106.

A.S. laeththe, hatred; lath, evil, enmity; Su.G. led, Isl. leidr, Alem. Germ. leid, Belg. leed, C.B. a-laeth, grief, adversity.

2. A disgust; a feeling of detestation, S. B.

Clerkys sayis that prolixyté,

That langsumnes may callyd be,

Gendrys leth mare than the delyté.

Wyntown, vi. Prol. v. 3.

LETH, s. A channel, or small run of water. S.

LETHIE, s. A surfeit; a disgust. V. under FORLEITH. S.

LETT, s. A lesson; a piece of instruction. S.

LETTEIS, s. Some kind of ornament, prohibited except on holidays.

"And as to thair gownis, that na wemen weir mertrikis nor letteis, nor tailis unfitt in length, nor furrit vnder, bot on the haly day." Acts, Ja. 11. 1457. c. 78. Edit. 1566.

Sibb., for what reason does not appear, conjectures, that "scarlet cloth" is meant. That the term referred to some kind of fur, might appear probable from letteis being conjoined with mertrikis. But that this is the signification, will scarcely be doubted, when it is observed, that Cotgr. mentions Fr. letice as denoting "a beast of a whitish gray colour." Whether this be the ermine, which the Swedes call lehatt and lehsep, I cannot say.

LETTEN, part. pa. Permitted; suffered; from v. to Let. S.

LETTEN FA'. Let fall. S.

LETTER, s. A spark on the wick of a burning candle. S.

LETTER-GAE, s. The precentor or clerk in a church, he who raises the tune, and, according to the old custom in this country, reads every line before it be sung, S.

The letter gae of haly rhime

Sat up at the board-head;

And a' he said was thought a crime

To contradict indeed.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 265.

"So lightly were clergy and divine worship esteemed some time before the Reformation, that in Mr. Cumming's days, the last Episcopal minister in this parish, there was no singer of psalms in the church but the lettergae, as they called the precentor, and one Tait, gardener in Braal." E. Halkirk, Caithness, Statist. Acc. xix. 49. N.

L E V

This word might at first view seem allied to Fr. latrie; as having the same origin with letteron, q. v. The clerk, however, has undoubtedly received this name from his employment in raising the tune, as this is still called letting gae the line, S. V. LET GAE.

LETTERON, LETTRIN, s. 1. The desk in which the clerk or precentor officiates; extended also to denote that elevated semicircular seat, which, in Scotland, surrounds the pulpit, S. See Sup.

2. "A writing desk, or table," Rudd. "He was bred to the Lettron;" he was bred a writer. S.
And seand Virgill on ane letteron stand,
To wryte anone I hynt my pen in hand.
Doug. Virgil, 202, 38.

3. A desk at which females wrought in making embroidery. 4. A bureau, scrutoire, or cabinet. S.
From O. Fr. letrin, now lutrín, the pulpit from which the lecture was anciently read, Alem. lectrum, Su.G. lectare; all from L. B. lectorium.

LETTERS. To Raise Letters; to issue an order from the signet for one to appear within a limited time. S.

LETTIRMAREDAY, s. The birth-day of the Virgin. S.

LETUIS, LETWIS, s. A species of fur. S.

LEUCH, LEUGH, pret. Laughed; did laugh, S. See S. Moes.G. A.S. hloh, id. V. LEIND.

LEUCH, LEUGH, adj. Low in situation, synon. Laigh; not tall; squat. LEUCHER, comp. Lower. S.

LEUCHLY, adv. In a low situation. S.

LEUCHNESS, LEUGHNESS, s. Lowness of situation; lowness of stature. S.

LEUE, adj. Beloved; dear.
Than to her seyde the quen,
—"Leue Brengwain the bright,
That art fair to sene." Sir Tristrem, p. 183.
A.S. leof, carus, dilectus, Alem. lief, id.

LEUEDI, s. Lady.
The leuedi and the knight,
Both Mark hath sene. Ibid. p. 152.
A.S. hlæfdige, hlæfdia, id. It seems very doubtful if this have any affinity to hlaf, a loaf, (V. LAIRD;) as Isl. lafd, lafda, lofde, are rendered hera, domina, which seem no wise related to lef panis.

To LEVE, v. n. To remain; to tarry behind; to be left. LEFT, pret. Remained; tarried. S.

LEVEFUL, adj. Friendly.
The Duk of Burgon in leveful band
Wes to the Duk bundyn of Holand.
V. LEUE. Wyntown, ix. 27. 263.

LEVEN, s. A lawn; an open space between woods. S.

LILY LEVEN. A lawn overspread with lilies or flowers. S.

LEVER, s. Flesh.
I was radder of rode then rose in the ron;
Now am I a graceless gast, and grisly I gron.
My leuer, as the lelé, lonched on hight.
V. LYRE. Sir Gawain and Sir Gol. ii. 24.
Lonched may signify, extended itself, like the lily;
Germ. lang-en, porrigere; Fr. along-er, to lengthen.

To LEVER, v. a. To unload from a ship. V. LIVER. S.

LEVER, LEUER, LEUIR, LEIR, LEER, LEWAR, LOOR, LOURD, adv. Rather.
Bot Wallace weille coude nocht in Corsby ly;
Hym had leuir in trauaill for to be.
Wallace, iii. 351. MS.
—Quhat wikkitt wicht wald euer
Refuse sic proffer? or yit with the had leuer
Contend in batal? Doug. Virgil, 103, 27.
Or thay thair lawde suld lois or vassalage,

L E V

They had fer lewar lay thare life in wage.
Ibid. 135, 14.
—Him war lewer that journey wer
Wdone, than he sua ded had bene.
Barbour, xiii. 480. MS.

I leir thar war not up and down.
Lyndsay, S. P. R. ii. 39.

I loor by far, she'd die like Jenkin's hen;
Ere we again meet yon unruly men.
Ross's Helenore, p. 93.

I wad lourd have had a winding sheet,
And helped to put it ower his head
Ere he had been disgraced by the border Scot,
Whan he ower Liddel his men did lead.
Minstrelsy Border, i. 106.

Lever, leifer, O. E. id. liever; A. Bor. loor, S. B.
Properly the compound of leif, willing; as A.S. leofre of leof, Germ. lieber of lieb. Thus Belg. liever, rather, is formed in the same manner from lief, lieve, dear. V. LEIF, adj.

LEUERAIES, s. pl. Armorial bearings.
"There is diuerse princis that gyffis the tryumphe of knyghted and nobilite, vitht leuerairis, armis and heretage, to them that hes committit vailyeant actis in the veyris." Compl. S. p. 231.
Fr. livree. The word may be from livrer, to deliver, L. B. liberare; because certain distinctive badges were delivered by the sovereign or superior when he conferred the honour of knighthood.

LEVERE, LEVERAY, s. 1. Delivery; distribution.
Tharfor he maid of wyne leveré,
To ilk man, that he payit suld be.
Barbour, xiv. 233. MS.

2. Donation.
Ye ar far large of leveray,
Agane the courteour can say.
Apperandly ye wald gif all
The teindis of Scotland greit and small,
Unto the Kirk for till dispoone,
And to the Court for till gif none.
Diall. Clerk and Courteour, p. 13.
Fr. livrée, the delivery of a thing that is given; la livrée de chanoines, the stipend given to canons, their daily allowance in victuals or money. L. B. librare and liberatio were used to denote the provision made for those who went to war; as also Fr. livrée. V. Du Cange, and Dict. Trev. Thus, the stated allowance given to servants is called their livery-meal, S. Livery is used in E. in a similar sense.

LEUG, s. A tall ill-looking fellow. S.

LEUGH, adj. Low. LEUGH, pret. Laughed. V. LEUCH. S.

LEUYNT, LEVINT, adj. Eleventh. S.

LEVIN, s. 1. Lightning; a flash of fire; sometimes fyr levin.
Dym skyis oft furth warpit fereful levin,
Flaggis of fyre, and mony felloun flaw.
Doug. Virgil, 200, 53.
The skyis oft lychned with fyr leuyn. Ibid. 15, 49.
A selly sight to sene, fire the sailes threwe.
The stones were of Rynes, the noyse dredfulle and grete,
It affraied the Sarazins, as leuen the fire out schete.
R. Brunne, p. 174.
In my face the levening smate,
I wend have brent, so was it hate.
Ywayne and Gawain, Ritson's M. Rom. i. 17.
Leven, Chaucer, id.

2. The light of the sun.
All thought he be the lampe and hert of heuin,
Forfeblit wox his lemand gilty levin,

L E W

Throw the dedynyng of his large round spere.

Doug. Virgil, 200, 15.

i. e. his "shining gilded light, or rays."

This is perhaps the primary sense of the word; especially as it seems nearly allied to A.S. hlif-ian, hlif-igan, rutilare, to shine; to glitter. Levin may be viewed as embodied in the Su.G. v. liung-a, to lighten, whence liungeld, anc. lyn-geld, lightning. See Sup.

LEVIN, s. Scorn; contempt; with levin, in a light manner.

Sall neuer sege undir son se me with schame,
Na luke on my lekame with light, nor with levin:
Na nane of the nynt degre have noy of my name.

Gawan and Gol. iv. 4.

Teut. laff-en, leff-en, garrire, loquitari? Leme occurs, however, in edit. 1508. But levin corresponds to the rhyme.

LEIVINGIS, LEUINGIS, s. pl. Remains; what is left; leavings, E.

O thou onlye quhilk reuth hes and pieté,
On the untellibill pyne of the Troianis,
Quhilk was the Grekis leuingis and remanis,
Ouerset wyth all maner necessiteis.

Doug. Virgil, 31, 50.

Alem. aleibon, reliquiae, aleiba, residua. V. LAPE.

LEUINGIS, s. pl. "Loins, or rather lungs," Rudd.

LEUIS ME. V. LEIS ME.

LEUIT, LEWYT, pret. Allowed; permitted; granted.

Gif vs war leuit our flote on land to bryng
That with the wind and storm is all to schake,— Blithlie we suld hald towart Italy.

Doug. Virgil, 30, 23.

Thocht a subiet in deid wald pass his lord,
It is nocht lewyt be na ryctwiss racord.

Wallace, iv. 38. MS.

A.S. lef-an, lyf-an, alef-an, alyf-an, concedere, permittere. The original idea is retained in Su.G. lofw-a, to leave, whence lof, permission, For to permit, is merely to leave one to his own course. From A.S. alef-an, is formed O.E. alleuin, and the modern v. allow. Instead of lewyt, in Edit. 1648, leasome is substituted; which is indeed a derivative from the v. V. LESUM.

LEVYT, LEWYT, pret. Left.

— Thai durst than abid no mar;
Bot fled scalyt, all that thai war:
And levyt in the bataill sted
Weill mony off thair gud men ded.

Barbour, xiv. 301. MS.

Than horss he tuk, and ger that lewyt was thar.

Wallace, i. 434. MS.

Isl. leif-a, linquere.

To LEUK, v. a. To look.

LEUK, s. A look.

LEURE, s. A gleam; a faint ray.

LEW, s. The name of a Fr. gold coin once current in S.

To LEW, v. a. To warm any thing moderately; usually applied to liquids; lewed warmed, made tepid, S.B.

Moes.G. liuhad is used by Ulph. to denote a fire. Was warmjands sih at liuhada; Was warming himself at a fire; Mark xv. 54. The word properly signifies light; and has been transferred to fire, perhaps, because the one depends on the other. Our v. is evidently the same with Teut. lauw-en, tepescere, tepescere.

LEW, LEW-WARME, adj. Tepid; lukewarm; S. Lancash.

Fetche hidder sone the well wattir lew warme,
To wesche hir woundis.— Doug. Virgil, 124, 13.

Besyde the altare blude sched, and skalit new,
Beand lew warme thare ful fast did reik. Ibid. 243, 52.

L I A

This word is used by Wiclif.

"I wolde that thou were coold either hoot, but for thou art lewe, and neither coold neither hoot, I schal bigyune to caste thee out of my mouthe." Apocalyps, c. 3.

Teut. Germ. lauw, Belg. lieu, low, Su.G. ly, whence liom, lium, Isl. lyr, hlyr, id. A.S. hleoth, tepor, must be radically the same; as Belg. laewte, liewte, are synon. Ihre and Wachter view the Goth. terms as allied to Gr. χλιανω, tepescere. With more certainty we may say that an Isl. v., now obsolete, claims this term as one of its descendants. This is hloa, to be warm. Heilog votn hloa; Aquae sacrae (in coelo) calent; Edda, App. 12. G. Andr. p. 114. A.S. hliw-an, hleow-an, tepere, fovere, is synon. Mr. Tooke views lew, A.S. hliw, hleow, as the part. past of this v.

LEW, s. A heat.

LEWANDS, s. Buttermilk and meal boiled together. S.

LEW ARNE BORE; Read Tew. Iron hardened with a piece of cast iron, to make it stand the fire in a forge.

V. TEW.

To LEWDER, v. n. To move heavily; S. B.

But little speed she came, and yet the swate
Was drapping frae her at an unco rate;
Showing frae side to side, and lewdring on,
With Lindy's coat syde hanging on her drone.

Ross's Helenore, p. 59.

Thus making at her main, and lewdring on,
Thro' scrubs and craigs, with mony a heavy groan—

Ibid. p. 61.

This is radically the same with E. loiter. Teut. leuter-en, loter-en, morari; probably from laet, Su.G. lat, piger, lazy.

LEWDER, s. A handspoke for lifting the millstones. S.

LEWDER, s. A blow with a great stick. S.

LEWER, LEWRE, s. A lever; a long pole. S.

LEWIS, LEWYSS, s. pl. Leaves of trees.

—Lewyss had lost thair colouris of plesence.

Wallace, iv. 8. MS.

All sidis tharof, als fer as ony seis,

Was dek and couerit with thare dedely lewis.

Doug. Virgil, 170, 32.

LEWIT. V. LAWIT. Hence.

LEWITNES, s. Ignorance; want of learning.

Quhare ocht is bad, gais mys, or out of gre,
My lewitnes, I grant, has all the wyte.

Doug. Virgil, 272, 23.

LEWRAND, part. pr. Luring; lurking; laying snares.

LEWRE, s. An ornamental piece of dress worn only by sovereigns and persons of the highest rank. S.

LEWS, s. Lewis or Lewes, an island on the west coast of Scotland. See Sup.

For from Dumfermling to Fife-ness,
I do know none that doth possess
His Grandsire's castles and his tow'rs:
All is away that once was ours.—
For some say this, and some say that,
And others tell, I know not what.
Some say, the Fife Lairds ever rews,
Since they began to take the Lews:
That bargain first did brew their bale,
As tell the honest men of Creil.

Watson's Coll. i. 27.

LIAM, LYAM, s. A string; a thong; pl. lyamis. This word is still used in Twedd. for a rope made of hair. S.

Nixt eftir quham the wageoure has ressaue,
He that the lesche and lyame in sounder draue.

Doug. Virgil, 145, 45.

Of goldin cord wer lyamis, and the stringis
Festinnit conjunct in massie goldin ringis.

Palice of Honour, i. 33.

L I B

Fr. lien, a string, a cord; Arm. liam, id. liama, to bind, to tie; Basque, lia, a cord. This Bullet views as the origin of all the words above mentioned, as well as of Lat. ligo.

LYARDLY, adv. Sparingly. S.

LYARE, s. Apparently, a kind of carpet or cloth on which cushions were laid at the hours of devotion. S.

LIART, LYART, adj. 1. Having gray hairs intermixed, S.
At bughts in the morning nae blyth lads are scorning,
But wooers are runkled, liart, and gray.

Flowers of the Forest.

"A term appropriated to denote a peculiarity which is often seen to affect aged persons, when some of the locks become gray sooner than others;" Bee.

The passage is otherwise given by Ritson.

At harst at the shearing nae younkens are jearing,
The bansters are runkled, lyart, and gray.

Ritson's S. Songs, ii. 3.

This word is often conjoined with gray.

Efter mid-age the luifair lyis full lang,
Quhen that his hair is turnit lyart gray.

Maitland Poems, p. 314.

Elsewhere it is connected with hoir, i. e. hoary. Thus Henrysone speaks of — Lyart lokis hoir. — Bann. P. p. 131.

2. Grey-haired in general.

I know his canois hare and lyart berde,
Of the wysest Romane Kyng into the erde,
Numa Pompilius. — Doug. Virgil, 194, 28.

Ir. liath signifies gray, gray-haired. But the resemblance seems accidental. Lord Hailes derives this term from A.S. lae hair, and har hoary, Bann. P. Note, p. 284. Tyrwhitt observes that this word "belonged originally to a horse of a grey colour." In this sense it is used by Chaucer, when he makes the carter thus address his horse:
That was wel twight, min owen liard boy.

Freres T.

3. Spotted; of various hues.

The immediate origin is either L.B. liard-us, according to Du Cange, that colour of a horse which the Fr. call gris pommel  , dapple gray; or Ital. leardo. In the same sense liard frequently occurs in the O. Fr. romances. See S.

LYART, s. The French coin called a liard. S.

LIBART, LIBBERT, s. A leopard. See Sup.

— The mast cowart

He maid stoutar then a libart.

Barbour, xv. 524. MS.

He also uses libbard, Ibid. xiv. 2, which occurs in E. works.

Alem. libaert, Belg. libaerd, id. O. E. liberd.

To LIB, LIBB, v. a. To castrate; to geld. S.

SOW-LIBBER, s. A sow-gelder. S.

LIBBER, s. A lubberly fellow. E. lubber. S.

LIBBERLAY, s. A large staff or baton.

Than up he stert, and tuik ane libberlay
Intill his hand, and on the flure he stert.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 82.

"Libbet, a great cudgel, used to knock down fruit from the trees, and to throw at cocks. Kent." Gl. Grose.

LIBBERLY, s. Apparently, livery. See Sup.

With twa men and ane varlot at his bak;
And ane libberly ful lytil to lak;
With ane wald he baith wod and wraith
Quha at him speirit how sald he the claith?

Priests of Peblis, p. 11.

Wax or worth, or rather some word of two syllables, as become, seems wanting in the third line. It may denote a servant of some description; as corr. from livery, Germ. liberei, vestis servientium. But more probably, it is the same with the preceding word; as denoting, that the varlet, for the defence of his master, carried a staff, which was by no means to be despised. Thus it appears that, more than three centuries ago, that self-important thing, called a footman, was no stranger to the use of the cane.

L I C

LIBELT, s. A long discourse or treatise; a libel. S.

LICAYM, LIKAME, LECAM, LEKAME, s. 1. An animated body.

Sall never my likame be laid unlaissit to sleip,

Quhill I have gart yone berne bow,

As I have maid myne avow. Gawan and Gol. i. 23.

i. e. "My body, freed from the weight of armour, shall not be laid to rest in my bed."

In all his lusty lecum nocht ane spot.

King Hart, i. st. 2.

In the same sense it occurs in O. E.

In praiers and penaunce, putten hem many

In hope to haue after heauenrich blisse;

And for the loue of our Lord, liuyden ful harde,

As Ankers & Hermets, that hold hem in her selles

And coueten nought in countrey, to carien about

For no liquerous liuelod, her lykam to please.

P. Ploughman, Sign. A. 1. edit. 1561.

2. A dead body; a corpse.

His frosty mouth I kissit in that sted,

Rycht now manlik, now bar, and brocht to ded;

And with a claith I couerit his licaym.

Wallace, vii. 281. MS.

A.S. lichama, Isl. lykame, Su.G. lekamen, anc. likama, Alem. lihham, Germ. leichnam, Dan. legeme, corpus. Some view it as compounded of lic the body, and Moes.G. ahma the spirit; others, of lic and A.S. hama a covering. Somner, who gives the latter etymon, thinks that the term properly denotes the covering of the body, i. e. the skin. V. LIK.

LICENT, part.adj. Accustomed; properly, permitted. S.

LICHELUS, adj.

He scalkt him fowlar than a fuil;

He said he was ane lichelus bul,

That croynd even day and nycht.

Maitland Poems, p. 360.

This, I suspect, is an error for licher-us, lascivious. Or, it may be a word of the same signification, allied to Fland. lack, lascivus, Germ. laich-en, lascivire, scortari, laek-en, saltare, Su.G. lek-a, ludere, lascivire. Dunbar uses lichour for lecher, and lichroun for lechery.

LY-BY, s. 1. A neutral. 2. A mistress; a concubine. S.

To LY, LIE out, v. n. To delay to enter as heir to property; a forensic phrase. S.

LYING OUT. Not entering as heir to property. S.

To LY to, v. n. Gradually to entertain affection. S.

To LY to, v. n. A vessel is said to ly to, when she lies in the water without making way, though not at anchor. S.

LYCHLEFUL, adj. Contemptuous; corr. lythleful.

"And quhasaquir sais to his brothir racha, (that is ane lythleful crabit word,) he is giltie and in dangeir of the counsell." Abp. Hamiltoun's Catechisme, 1551, Fol. 48. b. V. LICHTLY, adj.

LYCHT, adj. Cheerful; merry.

Bot his vysage semyt skarsly blyith,

Wyth luke doun kast, as in his face did kyith

That he was sum thing sad and nothing lycht.

Doug. Virgil, 197, 5.

LICHT OF DAY. "She canna see the licht o' day to him."—She cannot discern a fault in him. S.

LICHTER, LICHTARE, adj. Delivered of a child, S.B.

Sevyn hundyr wynter and sextene,

Quhen lychtare wes the Virgyne clene,

Pape of Rome than Gregore.—

Wyntown, v. 13. 382.

Willie's ta'en him o'er the faem,
He's wooed a wife, and brought her hame;
He's wooed her for her yellow hair,
But his mother wrought her meikle care;
And meikle dolour gar'd her drie,
For lichter she can never be,
But in her bower she sits wi' pain,
And Willie mourns o'er her in vain.

Minstrelsy, Border, ii. 29.

O! is my corn a' shorn, he said;

Or is my toors a' won?

Or my lady lichter, sen the streen,

Of a dochter or a son? Old Ballad. See Sup.

Toors a' won, turfs all dried.

This phraseology occurs in the Legend of St. Margrete; where a curious account is given of the imagined power of fairies, or of wizards, over unblist, i. e. unbaptised, children.

Ther ich finde a wiif,

That lizter is of barn,

Y com ther also sone,

As euer ani arn:

Zif it be unblistet,

Y croke it fot or arm:

Other the wiif her seluen,

Of childhed be forfarn. V. Gl. Compl. S. p. 311.

The same word is used by R. Brunne, p. 310.

The quene Margerete with childe then was sche,

The kyng bad hir not lete, bot com to the north cuntre

Unto Brotherton, on wherfe ther scho was & lichter of a sonne, the child hight Thomas.

This mode of expression, as it is evidently very ancient, seems to have been common to the Northern nations.

Isl. Ad verda liettare, eniti partum; in our very sense, literally, "to be lichter." The opposite is, oliette kona, gravaida mulier; G. Andr. p. 165. Su.G. olaett, id. from Isl. liette, levo, attollo; liett-ur, Su.G. laett, levis, light.

To LICHTER, LIGHTER, v. a. 1. To unload. 2. To deliver a woman in childbirth. S.

LYCHTLY, adj. Contemptuous.

His lichtly scorn he sall rapent full sor,

Bot power fail, or I sall end tharfor.

Wallace, viii. 51. MS.

It is also used as a noun, signifying the act of slighting.

"As good give the lightly as get it," S. Prov. Rudd.

From A.S. liht and lic, q. having the appearance of lightness.

To LICHTLIE, LYCHTLY, LIGHTLIE, v. a. 1. To undervalue; to slight; to despise; also written lythly, S.

"Bot nou sen thai ar cum to stait and digniteis trocht me, thai ar be cum ingrat, and lychtleis me." Compl. S. p. 199.

"But the king of Scotland was greatly commoved through his passage into England; not only he himself lightlied by the Earl of Douglas, but also he thought some quiet draught to be drawn betwixt the earl of Douglas and the king of England to his great dishonour and offence." Pitscottie, p. 35.

"Trewlie till thame quhilk contemnis, dispysis, and lythleis him and his godly lawis, he is ane mychty and potent iuge, to quhais powar & will na creatur may mak resistance." Abp. Hamiltoun's Catechisme, 1551, Fol. 27. b.

This might seem an errat. for lychleis, did not the same orthography occur Fol. 106. b. 130. b. &c.

Ay vow and protest that ye care na for me,

And whiles ye may lightly my beauty a wee;

But court nae anither, tho' jokin ye be,

For fear that she wyle your fancy frae me.

Burns, iv. 98.

2. To slight, in love, S.

I lean'd my back unto an aik,

I thought it was a trusty tree;

But first it bow'd, and syne it brak,

Sae my true love did lightly me.

Ritson's S. Songs, i. 156.

3. Applied to a bird when it forsakes (lichtlies) its nest.

I have met with no similar v. in the cognate languages.

This is evidently formed from the adj.

LYCHTLYNESS, s. Contempt; derision.

He gat a blaw, thocht he war lad or lord,

That proferryt him ony lychtliness.

Wallace, i. 349. MS.

In lychtliness thai maid ansuer him till,

And him dyspysyt in thar langage als.

Ibid. xi. 166. MS.

For thai ware few, and thai mony,

Thai lete of thame rycht lychty.

Bot swa suld nane do, that ware wys:

Wys men suld drede thare innymys;

For lychtliness and succwdry

Drawys in defowle comownaly.

Wyntown, viii. 26. 53.

To LICHTLIEFIE, LYCHTLEFYE, v. a. To slight; to undervalue. Syn. To Lichtlie, q. v. S.

LYCHTNIS, s. pl. Lungs. This term is used, as well as lichts, S.; the former, it is supposed, rather in the southern parts.

"I sau ysop, that is gude to purge congelie fleume of the lychtnis." Compl. S. p. 104.

Teut. lichte is the name given to the lungs, according to the general idea, from their lightness; as they are also called loose, from loos, empty, because of their sponginess. V. Jun. Etym.

LICK, s. As salt's lick, extremely salt. S.

LICKIE, s. A hooked wire for drawing the thread through the hack (or eye of the iron spindle on which the pirn is placed) of a spinning wheel. S.

LICK OF GOODWILL. A small portion of meal given for grinding corn, in addition to the regular multure.

To LICK, v. a. 1. To strike; to beat; to lash, S. A. Bor.

But Davie, lad, I'm red ye're glaikit;

I'm tauld the Muse ye hae negleckit,

An' gif it's sae, ye sud be licket

Until ye fyke. Burns, iii. 375.

2. To overcome, S.

Su.G. laegg-a, ferire, percutere. Ihre observes that Plautus uses pugno legere in the same sense; also, scipione legere. He views laegg-a as a diminutive from ligg-a, jacere. Isl. lag-a, legg-ia, transfigere, perfodere; alias lagg-a, verberibus caedere. Hence lag, ictus, a stroke. Han geck a lagit; He received a stroke: legg-log, the art of striking, or to express it in the language of this refined age, "the noble science of pugilism." V. Verel. Ind. Germ. leg-en, ponere, also signifies sternere, prosternere, facere, ut jaceat; like A.S. lecg-an, which has both senses, jacere; pulsare, sternere, occidere. Somn., Benson.

LICK, s. A stroke; a blow, S. To give one his licks; to beat; to chastise one; a vulgar phrase.

When he committed all these tricks,

For which he well deserv'd his licks,

With red-coats he did intermix.

Forbes's Dominie Depos'd, p. 28.

Johnson mentions this as a low word, used by Dryden. He derives it from the verb, while he has mentioned no similar sense of the latter. The v. lick is indeed used as a provincial term, both in the N. and S. of England.

LICK, s. A wag; one who plays upon another, S.

L I E

He's naithing but a shire daft lick,
And disna care a fiddlestick,
Altho' your tutor Curl and ye
Shou'd serve him sae in elegy.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 342.

And was nae Willy a great lown,
As shyre a lick as e'er was seen?

Ritson's S. Songs, i. 272.

Perhaps from Su.G. lek-a, Isl. leik-a, to play. It may, however, be allied to A.S. liccet-an to dissemble, to feign, liccetera a hypocrite; lycce, a liar.

LICK-SCHILLING, s. A term of reproach expressive of poverty.

—Lick-schilling in the mill-house.

Dunbar, Evergreen, ii. 60. st. 25.

i. e. one who lives by licking what is called schilling at a mill. V. SCHILLING.

LICKUP, s. 1. A bat of iron which prevents the eikends from slipping off the swingletrees in a plough. S.

2. A martingale for a horse. 3. A scrape; a difficulty. S.

LICK-WAKE. V. LYK-WAIK.

LIDDER, LIDDIR, adj. 1. Inactive; sluggish. A. Bor. lither. See Sup.

Ye war not wount to be sa liddir ilk ane
At nycht batellis and werkis Veneriane.

Doug. Virgil, 391, 23.

Lidder spede, slow progress.

Ibid. 10, 7.

2. Not forward, in comparison of others.

Thocht I be in my asking liddir,
I pray thy Grace for to considder,
Thow hes maid baith Lordis and Lairdis,
And hes geuin mony riche rewairdis,
To thame that was full far to seik,
Quhen I lay nichtlie be thy cheik.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592. p. 262. 263.

3. "Loathsome," Gl. Sibb.

It is used by Douglas in a sense apparently different from that of sluggish, in the description of Charon:

His smottrit habit ouer his schulderis liddir
Hang penagely knyt with ane knot togidder.

Virgil, 173, 47.

This corresponds to—

Sordidus ex humeris nodo dependet amictus. Virg.

Rudd. refers to A.S. lythre, nequam. But this seems to have no affinity. It is probably formed as a comparative from lith mollis, lenis; whence lithnesse inertia. Germ. liederlich signifies careless, negligent. It may be allied to Su.G. lat, Isl. latur, lazy, laettia, laziness. Isl. leidur, however, is rendered turpis, sordidus, Sw. leed, from Isl. leid-a, taedio afficere, molestum et aegre alicui facere, ut ab incepto desistat; Verel. Ind. Hence, he adds, Ital. laido, Fr. laide, foedus, sordidus.

LIDDERIE, adj. Feeble and lazy. S.

LIDDERLIE, adv. Lazily.

—Debora rultit Juda

With spreit of prophecie,

Quhen men wes sueir, and durst not steir;

But lurkit liddierlie.

Arbuthnot, Maitland Poems, p. 144.

LIDDISDALE DROW. A shower that wets an Englishman to the skin; a Scotch mist. V. DROW. S.

To LIDE, v.n. To thicken; to become mellow. V. LITHE.

LIE, adj. Sheltered, warm, S.—LYE, s. Shelter. V. LE.

LIE, s. The relative position; applied to ground. S.

LYE, s. Pasture land about to be tilled. V. LEA. S.

LYE-COUCH, s. A kind of bed. S.

LIEF, LEEF, s. The palm of the hand. V. Lufe. S.

LIEFU', adj. Lonely; solitary. V. LEEFOW. S.

VOL. II.

41

L I F

LIEGE, s. A subject. S.

LIESH, adj. Tall and active. V. LEISHIN'. S.

LIESOME-LOOKING, adj. Having the appearance of falsehood and lies. S.

LIESOME, adj. "Warm, sultry," Gl. Shirr. Perhaps the Aberd. pronunciation for Lesome, lovely. See Sup.

Shirrefs' explanation seems to refer to the following passage:—

Ay, Ned, says she, this is a liesome night!

It is, says he; I fear that birn's no light.

Ye better lat me ease you o't a wee,

It winna be sae great a lift to me.

Shirrefs' Poems, p. 90.

The word, as used in this sense, must have a common fountain with LE and LITHE, calm, q. v.

LIETHRY, s. A crowd. V. LITHRY. S.

LIEUTENANTRY, s. Lieutenantship; lieutenantancy. S.

LIFEY, adj. Lively; spirited. S.

LIFE-LIKE AND DEATH-LIKE. A phrase commonly used to urge the settlement of any affair from consideration of the uncertainty of life. S.

LYF, LYFF, s. Life. On lyf, alive. S.

LIFE-THINKING. In sound health; life-like. S.

LYFLAT, adj. Deceased.

A child was chewyt thir twa luffaris betuene,

Quhilk gudly was, a maydyn brycht and schene;

So forthyr furth, be ewyn tyme off hyr age,

A squier Schaw, as that full weyll was seyne,

This lyflat man hyr gat in mariage.

Rycht gudly men came off this lady ying.

Wallace, vi. 71. MS.

In Gl. Perth edit. lyflat is absurdly rendered, the very same. In edit. 1648 it is life lait, q. lately in life. In the same sense late is still used. The term, however, has most affinity to Su.G., Isl. liflat, loss of life, amissio vitae, interitus, Verel.; from lif vita, and lat-a perdere; Isl. lata lifid, liflat-ast, perdere vitam, to die; liflatinn, fato sublatu, defunctus, ibid. The old bard, by giving this designation to the Squire Schaw, who had married Wallace's daughter, means to say that he had died only a short while before he wrote.

LYFLAT, s. Course of life; mode of living.

As I am her, at your charge, for plesance,

My lyflat is bot honest chewysance.

Flour off realmys forsuth is this regioun,

To my reward I wald haiff gret gardoun.

Wallace, ix. 375. MS.

Edit. 1648, life-lait. A.S. lif-lade, vitae iter, from lif life, and lade a journey, or peregrination. Wallace means that he had nothing for his support but what he won by his sword.

LIFT, LYFT, s. The firmament; the atmosphere, S.

— With that the dow

Heich in the lift full glaide he gan behald,

And with hir wingis sorand mony fald.

Doug. Virgil, 144, 53.

"If the lift fall, we'll a' gather laverocks, a proverb used when a person expresses improbable expectations." Gl. Compl.S. More generally, "May be the lift will fall, and smore the laverocks;" spoken to those who are afraid of every thing evil befalling themselves or others. See Sup.

Another proverb is used, in relation to one who possesses great power of wheedling. It evidently alludes to the idea of the fascinating power of serpents, by means of their breath. He could souck the larricks out of the lift, S.B.

Lyfte and lefte seem to have been used in the same sense, O. E. although overlooked by Jun., Hearne, and other etymologists.

Tho hurde he thulke tyme angles synge ywys

F

L I G

Up in the lufte a murye song, & that songe was thys.

R. Glouc. p. 280.

A voyce was herde on hygh the lefte,
Of whiche all Rome was adradde.

Gower, Conf. Am. Fol. 46. b.

The latter may, however, signify the left hand, sinistra; this being a bad omen.

A.S. lyft aer, Alem. lupht, Su.G. luft; Isl. loft, lopt, id. alopte in aera, alopt in aerem levatum, lopt-a in aerem a terra levo, (G. Andr.) E. aloft. Thus it would appear that this is the origin of the v. lift, to elevate, q. to carry up into the air. Some have derived A.S. heof-an, heaven, from the Gothic verb signifying to heave. But Schilter renders it q. hochfan, summum aulaeum, because it extends like a high curtain; vo. Ban.

I find that Mr. Tooke inverts the etymon given of lift. He views the S. term, signifying firmament, as merely hlifod, the past part. of A.S. hlif-ian, to elevate; and as equivalent to heaven, from heaf-an, id. Divers. Purley, ii. 161, 162.

To LIFT, v. a. To carry off by theft, especially used with respect to cattle, S.

This term has been adopted by those who, living on the confines of the Highlands, did not deem it expedient to give its proper name to a practice formerly sanctioned by the most powerful chieftains. See Sup.

It seems to be merely an accidental coincidence that Moes.G. hlift-us signifies a thief, and hlif-an to steal. Junius, however, is uncertain whether to connect it with Gr. κλέπτειν, fur, or with Belg. lift-en levare, tollere; GL Goth.

LIFTER, s. One who forcibly drove cattle as a booty. S.

To LIFT, * v. a. To remove from one place to another, or from one house to another; to Flit. S.

LIFTING, s. Removal. 1. At the Lifting, just about to remove; used actively. 2. At the Lifting, in a very debilitated state; used in a passive sense. S.

To LIFT, v. a. To plough or break up ground. S.

LIFT, s. The first break or ploughing. V. AITLIFF. S.

LIFT, * s. 1. A heave; the act of heaving as applied to the chest, expressive of difficulty in breathing, or oppressive sickness. 2. A load or surcharge of any thing; as, She has lang had a heavy lift o' a sick man. 3. A trick at cards. S.

To GIE one a LIFT. To aid one; to give one effectual assistance, either literally or metaphorically. S.

To LIFT, v. n. A term signifying that the company at a funeral begin to move towards the place of interment; as, "The burial will lift at twa o'clock." S.

To LIFT, v. a. To lift a Brae, to ascend a brow. S.

LIFTED, * part. pa. In high spirits; transported. S.

LIFTER, s. A shallow broad wooden vessel in which milk is put that it may cast up the cream. S.

LIFT-HAUSE, s. An old cant term for the left hand. S.

LIFTIE, s. The dirt on the streets when glutinous. S.

To LIG, LIGGE, v. n. 1. To lie; to recline, Aberd. A. Bor.

Slane ar the wachis liggand on the wal,
Opnyt the portis, leit in thare feris all.

Doug. Virgil, 47, 46.

This night sall ye lig within mine armes,
To-morrow my bride sall be.

Edom o' Gordon, Percy's Reliques, i. 88.

"Lig ye down there; lie down there. North." Gl. Grose.

2. To lodge. 3. To have carnal knowledge of. S.

Moes.G. lig-an, A.S. lieg-an, Isl. lig-a, Su.G. ligg-a, Chauc. ligge, id.

LIG, s. A league; a covenant.

To LIG, v. n. To bring forth; as, The ewes are ligging. S.

To LIG, v. n. To fall behind; corr. of E. to lag. S.

LIGGAR, s. The name given, in the south of S., to a foul salmon.

Perhaps from the preceding v., as fishes of this species become foul by lying too long in the fresh water, and not going to the sea.

LIGGAT, s. A gate so hung that it may shut of itself; properly a park-gate, Galloway.

To LIGHT, v. a. To undervalue. Syn. Lichtlie. S.

To LIGHTLIEFIE, v. n. To despise. V. LICHTLIE. S.

LIGHTIN'-IN-ELDIN. Such fuel as furze, thorns, &c.

LIGLAG, s. 1. A confused noise of tongues, as that of a multitude of people talking at the same time, S. 2. A great deal of idle talk, S.

3. It is used to express the idea one has of a strange language, or of unintelligible discourse. S.

Liklaking occurs in Davie's Life of Alexander, for the clashing of swords; probably from Isl. hlaek-a clango; G. Andr. Su.G. klick-a leviusculum crepitum edere, Ihre. Teut. klick-en crepitare, klick verber, ictus, hlaek-en, verberare resono ictu. The reduplication in the form of our word denotes the reiteration of the same or similar sounds. It may have been softened from click-clack. Su.G. ligg-a; however, signifies to harass by entreaties.

LIGNATE, s. An ingot or mass of melted metal. S.

LYING-ASIDE, s. The act of keeping aloof. S.

LIK, s. A dead body.

Quha aw this lik he bad hir nocht deny.

Wallace, scho said, that full worthy has beyne.

Than wepyt scho, that peté was to seyne.

Wallace, ii. 331. MS.

Isl. lyk, Su.G. lik, A.S. lic, id. The Su.G. term primarily signifies an animated body; in a secondary sense, one that is destitute of life. Moes.G. leik, Isl. lyk, A.S. lyc, are used with the same latitude. Hence Isl. lyk kysta a coffin, lyk born a bier. V. LICAYM. See Sup.

LYK, LIKE, adj. Used as the termination of many words in S., which in E. are softened into ly. It is the same with A.S. lic, lice; and denotes resemblance.

Ihre observes, with very considerable ingenuity: "The Latins would hardly have known the origin of their terms talis, qualis, but from our word lik. For cognate dialects can scarcely have any thing more near, than qualis, and the term used by Ulph., quileiks, Alem. uuiolih; similis, and Moes.G. samaleiks; talis and Goth. tholik, &c. Thus it appears, what is the uniform meaning of the Lat. terminations in lis, as puerilis, virilis, &c. with the rest which the Goths constantly express by lik, barnslig, manlig. Both indeed mark similitude to the noun to which they are joined, i. e. what resembles a man or boy. I intentionally mention these, as unquestionable evidences of the affinity of the languages of Greece and Rome to that of Scythia; of which those only are ignorant, who have never compared them, which those alone deny, who are wilfully blind in the light of noon-day." V. Lik.

LYK, LİK, v. impers. Lyk til us, be agreeable to us.

It sall lik til us all perfay,

That ilk man ryn his falow til

In kyrtil alane, gyve that yhe will.

Wyntown, viii. 35. 38.

Moes.G. leik-an, A.S. lyc-ian, Su.G. lik-a, placere.

LIKAND, part. Pleasing; agreeable.

Doun thruch the ryss ane river ran with stremis

So lustely upoun the lykand lemis,

That all the laik as lamp did leme of licht.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 9

A.S. liciend, placens, delectans. V. the v.

LYKANDLIE, adv. Pleasantly; agreeably.

L Y K

Sa lykandlie in peace and liberté,
At eis his commoun pepil gouernit he.

Doug. Virgil, 253, 14.

LIKING, LIKYN, 1. Pleasure; delight.

It occurs in that beautiful passage in The Bruce:

A! fredome is a noble thing!
Fredome mayss man to haiff liking!
Fredome all solace to man giffis;
He levys at ess, that frely levys.

Barbour, i. 226. MS.

2. A darling; an object that gives delight. See Sup.
And I sall fallow thé in faith, or with fayis be fellit
As thy lege man lele, my lyking thou art.

Houlate, iii. 15.

A.S. licung, pleasure, delight.

LIKE,* adv. 1. About; as, Like sax fouk. 2. As if,
as it were, prefixed or affixed to a phrase. S.

LYKLY, adj. Having a good appearance, S.

Off lykly men that born was in England,
Be suerd and fyr that nycht deit v thousand.

Wallace, vii. 513. MS.

This word is used by Shakespeare. I take notice of it, merely to observe that Su.G. lyklig signifies, bono similis, sat bonus; according to Ihre, from lik good. Isl. liklig,
id. madur likligste, vir aspectu pulcherrimus; Heims Kr.
Tom. i. p. 280. From lik, bonus, Ihre derives lik-a to please, because we are pleased with what is beautiful.

To LIKLY, v. a. To adorn; to render agreeable.

So me behuffit whilum, or be dum,
Sum bastard Latyne, Frensche, or Inglis ois,
—To keip the sentence, thareto constrenit me,
Or that to mak my sayng short sum tyme,
Mare compendius, or to likly my ryme.

Formed from the adj. Doug. Virgil, 5, 18.

LYKSAY, adv. Like as. "Lyksay as he war present." S.

LYK-WAIK, LYKEWAKE, LIKE WALK, s. The watching of a dead body during night. See Sup.

Als mony syne he takin has anone,
Bred and vpbrocht besyde the flude Ufens,
Quham that he ettilles for to send from thenis,
To Pallas like walkis and obsequies,
To strow his funeral fyre of birnand treis
As was the gise, with blude of prisoneris,
Eftir the auld rytes into mortall weris.

Doug. Virgil, 336, 4.

Mr. Brand supposes, that Pennant has erroneously written late-wake; Popular Antiquities, p. 26. But this is the modern corruption of the term in S.

Sibb. uses this improper orthography. Lye has justly observed, that walk is used by Douglas merely in the sense of wake, it being common with S. writers to insert l; Jun.
Etym. The word is evidently formed from A.S. lic a body, and wac-ian to watch. V. LIL.

This ancient custom most probably originated from a silly superstition, with respect to the danger of a corpse being carried off by some of the agents of the invisible world, or exposed to the ominous liberties of brute animals. But, in itself, it is certainly a decent and proper one; because of the possibility of the person, considered as dead, being only in a swoon. Whatever was the original design, the lik-wake seems to have very early degenerated into a scene of festivity extremely incongruous to the melancholy occasion.

Pennant gives an amusing account of the strange mixture of sorrow and joy in the late-wakes of our Highlanders.

"The Late-wake is a ceremony used at funerals. The evening after the death of any person, the relations and friends of the deceased meet at the house, attended by bagpipe or fiddle; the nearest of kin, be it wife, son, or daughter, opens a melancholy ball, dancing and greeting,

L I L

i. e. crying violently at the same time; and this continues till day-light; but with such gambols and frolics among the younger part of the company, that the loss which occasioned them is often more than supplied by the consequences of that night. If the corpse remain unburied for two nights, the same rites are renewed. Thus, Scythian- like, they rejoice at the deliverance of their friends out of this life of misery. This custom is an ancient English one, perhaps a Saxon. Chaucer mentions it in his Knight's Tale, v. 2960.

— Shall not be told for me,
How Arcite is brent to ashen cold;
Ne how the liche-wake was yhald
All thilke night. —

It was not alone in Scotland that these watchings degenerated into excess. Such indecencies we find long ago forbidden by the Church. In vigiliis circa corpora mortuorum detantur choree et cantilene, seculares ludi et alii turpes et fatui. Synod. Wigorn. An. 1240." Pennant's
Tour in S., 1769, p. 112.

The lik-wake is retained in Sweden, where it is called wakstuga, from wak-a, to watch, and perhaps stuga, a room, an apartment, or cottage. Ihre observes, that "although these wakes should be dedicated to the contemplation of our mortality, they have been generally passed in plays and computations, whence they were prohibited in public edicts;" vo. WAKE.

Not only did the Synod of Worcester prohibit songs, and other profane, loose, and foolish amusements; but enjoined, that none should attend wakes, except for the purposes of devotion. Nec ad dictas Vigiliis aliqui veniant, nisi causa devotionis. Du Cange, vo. Vigiliae.

LIL FOR LAL. Tit for tat; retaliation.

Your catale and your gude thai ta;
Your men tha spar nought for to sla,
Quhen ye set you thaim for to grewe:
To serve you sua tha ask na leve,
Bot ay tha qwyte you lil for lal,
Or that thai skale thare markat all.

Wyntown, ix. 13. 63.

At first view this phrase seemed to have some reference to musical symphony, q. one stroke for another. V. LILL.
But I have accidentally discovered, in the laws of Alfred, what must undoubtedly have been the origin of the expression. It is a law requiring strict retaliation; Honda for honda, fet for fet, burning for burning, wund with wund, lael with laele; i. e. Manum pro manu, pedem pro pede, adustionem pro adustione, vulnus pro vulnere, vibicem pro vibice, or, stripe for stripe. It is indeed the very language of the A.S. version of Ex. xxi. 24. 25. only with is used throughout the passage there, but for in some of the clauses here; both having the same meaning. Thus lael for laele would be precisely the same as lael with laele.

LILY, s. The Aphthae; a disease of children. S.

LILY-CAN, s. The yellow water lily. S.

LILY LEVEN. A lawn covered with lilies or flowers. S.

LILY-OAK, s. The flowering shrub called Lilach. S.

LILL, s. The hole of a wind instrument, S. V. GL.

Ramsay. In Edit. 1800, this word in pl. is erroneously printed lilts. See Sup.

Go on, then, Galloway, go on,
To touch the lill, and sound the drone;
A' ither pipers may stand yon',
When ye begin.

V. LILT, v. R. Galloway's Poems, p. 154.

LILLILU, s. Lullaby. S.

To LILT, v. n. 1. To sing cheerfully, S.

I've heard a lilting at our ewes milking,
Lasses a' lilting before the break of day.

Flowers of the Forest, Ritson's S. Songs, ii. 1.

L I M

Our Jenny sings saftly the "Cowden Broom knows,
And Rosie lilts swiftly the "Milking the Ewes."
Ramsay's Poems, ii. 106.

Lilts sweetly, Edit. Foulis, 1768.

In this sense it is also applied to the music of birds.

The sun looks in o'er the hill-head, and

The laverock is liltin' gay.

Jamieson's Popular Ball. ii. 152.

2. To sing on a high or sharp key, S.

Sometimes the phrase lilt it up is equivalent to "raise the tune cheerfully."

3. It denotes the lively notes of a musical instrument, S. See Sup.

Wha winna dance, wha will refuse to sing?

What shepherd's whistle winna lilt the spring?

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 190.

Hence, perhaps, the phrase, to lilt and dance; to dance with great vivacity; Fife.

4. To lilt out; to take off one's drink merrily, S. an oblique sense.

Tilt it lads, and lilt it out,

And let us ha'e a blythsome bowt.

Up wi't there, there,

Dinna cheat, but drink fair.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 239.

Su.G. lull-a, Fenn. laul-an, canere; Teut. loll-en, lull-en, numeros non verba canere; lol, lul, ratio harmonica, Kilian. Germ. laut-en, Alem. liut-en, seem more nearly allied to Leid, a song, q. v. In Gl. Ramsay this is derived from Lill, q. v. V. also LILT-PIPE.

LILT, s. 1. A cheerful air, in music; properly applied to what is sung, S. 2. Used in the sense of lay or song.

Thy breast alane this gladsome guest does fill,
With strains that warm our hearts like cannel gill,
And learns thee, in thy umquhile gutcher's tongue,
The blythest lilts that e'er my lugs heard sung.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 390.

To cheer your hearts I'll chant to you a lilt,

Sae ye may for a wee but listen tilt.

Morison's Poems, p. 122.

3. At times used for a mournful tune, perhaps improperly.

LILTING, s. The act of singing cheerfully. V. the v.

LILT-PIPE, s. A particular kind of musical instrument.

All thus our Ladye thai lofe, with lyking and list,—
The lilt-pype and the lute, the cithill in fist.

Houlate, iii. 10. MS.

"The lilt-pype," says Ritson, "is probably the bag-pipe." Essay on S. song, cxv. This conjecture is confirmed, as far as it can be by analogy, from the sameness of the signification of Teut. lul-pipe, lulle-pippe, tibia utricularis; whence lulle-pipper, a player on the bag-pipe, utricularius ascaules, Kilian.

LILT, s. A large draught or pull in drinking, frequently repeated, Fife.

LILTING, part. pr. Limping; synon. Bilting. S.

LIMB,* s. A mischievous or wicked person; as, "Ye're a perfect limb;" that is, a "limb of Satan," or a "Devil's limb." S.

LIME, s. Glue; Gl. Sibb. Teut. lijm, gluten.

LIMEQUARREL, s. A lime quarry. S.

LIME-RED, s. The rubbish of lime walls. S.

LIME-SHELLS, s. Burned lime before it is slaked. S.

LIMESTONE-BEADS, s. pl. The name given by miners to the Entrochi. S.

LIME-WORK, LIME-WARK, s. A place where lime-stone is quarried and burnt. S.

LYMFAD, s. A galley. V. LYMPHAD. S.

LIMITOUR, s. An itinerant and begging friar. See S.

L I M

I charge the yit as I have ellis,

Be halie relickis, beidis and bellis,

Be ermeitis that in desertis dwellis,

Be limitoris and tarlochis.—Philotus, S. P. R. iii. 48.

Skinner supposes that this was a seller of indulgences, thus denominated as limiting or fixing the price for each sin. Jun. defines the term as denoting a friar or monk who discharged his office within certain limits or bounds. From the Visions of P. Ploughman it appears, indeed, that the limitour was properly a confessor, who, by virtue of episcopal letters, although he had no parochial charge, was authorized to hear confession and grant absolution within a certain district. R. de Langland describes him metaphor. in allusion to a surgeon.

Conscience called a leche that coude well shriue;

Go salueth tho that sick ben, & through syn wounded,

Shrift shope sharpe salue, and made hem do penaunce,

For her misdedes that they wrought had.—

The frere hereof harde, and hyed hym ful fast

To a lord for a letter, leaue to haue curen,

As a curatour he were; and came with his letters,

Boldly to the bishop, and hys briefe had

In countreys there he came in confession to here.

The writer then gives a character of a friar of this description; which, in that age, it may be supposed, was by no means singular.

I knew such one once, not eyght winters passed,

Came in thus coped, at a court where I dwelled,

And was my lordes leche, and my ladyes both.

And at last this limitour, tho my lorde was oute,

He salued so our women, till some were with childe.

— Here is Contrition, quod Conscience, my cousin sore wounded.

Comfort him, quod Conscience, & take kepe to hys soores.

The plasters of the Person, and pouders beaten to sore,

He letteth hem lig ouer long, & loth is to chaunge hem.

From lenten to lenten his plasters biten.

That is ouer long, quod this limitor, I leue I shall amend it;

And goeth & gropeth Contrition, and gaue him a plaster Of a priuy payment, and I shall praye for you.—

Thus he goth, & gathereth, and gloseth ther he shriue,

Till contrition had cleane forgotten to crie, & to wepe,

And wake for his workes, as he was wont to do.

P. Ploughman, Fol. ult. Edit. 1561.

The character given by Chaucer is nearly alike.

A Frere ther was, a wanton and a mery,

A Limitour, a full solempne man.

In all the ordres foure is non that can

So moche of daliance and fayre langage.

— His tippet was ay farsed ful of knives,

And pinnes, for to given fayre wives.

— Somwhat he lisped for his wantonnesse,

To make his English swete upon his tonge;

And in his harping, whan that he hadde songe,

His eyen twinkled in his hed aright,

As don the sterres in a frosty night.

Cant. T. Prolog. v. 208—271.

LIMM, s. Synon. with Limmer, as applied to a female. S.

LIMMAR, LIMMER, s. 1. A scoundrel; a worthless fellow. See Sup.

"The noblis hauand gret indignation in lykwise of the trubyl falling baith to tham and thair commonis, send ane certane of gentyl men as ambassatouris to king Gryme, persuaing hym in thair name to deuoid hym of vnhappy & mischeuous limmaris, in quhom he had our gret confidence." Bellend. Cron. B. xi. c. 13. Posthabitis sceleratorum sententiis, Boeth. Used also for nebulo, Ibid. c. 14. V. LURDANE.

L Y M

God send grace to our Quene Regent,
Be law to mak sic punishment,
To gar lymmars forbeir
For till oppress the innocent,
Now into this new yeir. Maitland Poems, p. 279.

Limmer is used in our laws as equivalent to thief, rieuer.
"Sik hes bene, and presentlie is the barbarous cruelties, and dailie heirschippes of the wicked thieves and limmers
of the clannes and surnames following, &c.—This mischief and schamefull disordour increasis, and is nurished be the oversight, hounding-out, receipt, maintenance, and not punishment of the thieves, limmers and vagaboundes."
Acts, Ja. VI. 1594. c. 227; Murray.

Mr. Pinkerton justly observes, that lymmar, like shrew
E., was anciently masculine. It is still thus used, Aberd.

I hicht about Lyrnessus wa's
Till I my time cou'd see;

Syne gart the lymmers tak their heels.

V. also p. 2. Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 19.

Chaucer uses limer for a bloodhound, Fr. limier, id.
Hence it may be used metaphor. for one, who, like a bloodhound, was constantly in pursuit of prey. Teut. luymer, however, is rendered, insidiator, from luy-en observare, insidiari. According to the latter, limmar might originally denote one who lays snares for others, who lies in wait to deceive.

2. In vulgar language, a woman of loose manners, S. See
Sup. 3. An opprobrious term expressive of displeasure, though not charging with immorality. S.

LIMMERY, s. Villainy; deceit.

Of Scotland well, the Friers of Faill,
The limmery lang hes lastit;
The Monks of Melros made gude kail
On Friday when they fastit.

Spec. Godly Sangs, p. 37.

LYMMARIS, s. pl. Traces for drawing artillery. S.

LIMMERS, s. pl. The shafts of a cart. V. LYMOURIS. S.
LYMMIT, pret.

Nature had lymmit folk, for thair reward,
This gudlie king to governe and to gy.

King Hart, c. i. st. 3.

Perhaps q. bound, engaged, from Teut. lym-en, aggluti-nare.

LYMOURIS, LYMMOUR, LIMNARIS, s. pl. The shafts of a cart or chariot. See Sup.

The cartis stand with lymouris bendit strek.

Doug. Virgil, 287, 5.

Lymmouris, ibid. 426, 47.

The lymnaris wer of burnisit gold.

Palice of Honour, i. 33. Birneist, Ed. 1579.

"Limmers, a pair of shafts; North. Limbers, thills or shafts; Berksh." Gl. Grose.

Rudd. derives it from Fr. limon, limons, id. Whence the phrase cheval limonier, a thill horse. Menage ridiculously imagines that limon is instead of timon, from temo.
It may naturally be traced to Isl. lim, pl. limar, Sw. lem,
pl. lemmar, rami arborum; Su.G. lima, laem, lemm, tabula, asser.

LYMPET, part. pa.

— I ly in the lymb, lympet the lathaist.

Houlate, iii. 26. MS.

Probably maimed, or crippled. A.S. limp healt, lame.
Isl. limp-ast, viribus deficit, G. Andr. p. 167. Lymb contains an allusion to that sort of prison which the Papists call limbus, in which they suppose that the souls of all departed saints were confined before the death of Christ.

LYMPHAD, LYMFAD, s. A galley; the galley in the arms of the Argyle family and others of the clan. S.

L I N

LYMPUS, s. A worthless woman. S.

LIN, LYN, LYNN, s. 1. A cataract; a fall of water, S.;
sometimes lynd, Rudd.

"Becaus mony of the watteris of Scotland ar full of lynnis, als sone as thir salmond cumis to the lyn, thay leip."
Bellend. Descr. Alb. c. 11.

The watter lynnys rowtis, and euey lynd
Quhislit and brayit of the souchand wynd.

Doug. Virgil, 201, 23.

It grows ay braider to the sea,
Sen owre the lin it came. Cherrie and Slae, st. 110.

2. The pool into which water falls over a precipice;
the pool beneath a cataract, S.

— I saw a river rin

Outoure a steipie rock of stane,
Syne lychtit in a lin. Cherrie and Slae, st. 6.

The shallowest water makes maist din,
The dearest pool the deepest linn,
The richest man least truth within,

Tho' he preferred be. Minstrely, Border, i. 92.

Then up and spake the popinjay,
Says—"What needs a' this din?"

It was his light lemman took his life,
And hidid him in the linn." Ibid. ii. 49.

3. The face of a precipice. 4. A shrubby ravine. Syn.
Cleuch. S.

It seems uncertain which of these is the primary sense.
For A.S. hlynn denotes a torrent, Isl. lind, a cascade, aqua scaturiens, Verel. Ind.: and C.B. thynn, Arm. len, Ir. lin, a pool.

This is obviously the sense of lyn given by Sibb. "Two opposite contiguous cliffs or heughs covered with brushwood." It indeed denotes any place where there are steep rocks and water, though there is no waterfall. S.

To LIN, v. a. To hollow out the ground by force of water. S.

LIN-KEEPER, s. A large fresh-water trout, supposed to keep possession of a particular pool or linn. S.

LIN-LYAR, s. The same with Lin-keeper. S.

LIN, LINN, v. s. To cease. See Sup.

"Yet our northern prikkers, the borderers, notwithstanding, with great enormitie, (as thought me) and not unlyke (to be playn) unto a masterless hounde honyling in a hie wey, when he hath lost him he wayted upon, sum hoopyng, sum whistelyng, and moste with crying a Berwyke! a Berwyke! a Fenwyke! a Fenwyke! a Bulmer! a Bulmer! or so ootherwise as theyr capteins names wear, never linde those troublous and daungerous noyses all the night long." Patten's Account of Somerset's Expedition, Dalyell's Fragments, p. 76.

LIN, LINE, s. Flax, or what is otherwise called lint. S.

LINARICH, s. A sea-plant. S.

LYNCBUS, s. Perhaps an errat. for limbus, or jail. S.

To LINCH, v. n. To halt; to limp. S.

LINCUM LICHT.

Thair kirtillis wer of lincum licht,

Weill prest with mony plaittis. Chr. Kirk. st. 2.

This has been understood as denoting some cloth, of a light colour, made at Lincoln. Mr. Pinkerton, however, says, that it is a common Glasgow phrase for very light, and that no particular cloth was made at Lincoln; Mait- land poems, p. 450, Append. Sibb. also thinks it not probable that this signifies any cloth manufactured at Lincoln, but merely linen; Chron. S.P. ii. 368.

With respect to the phrase being used in Glasgow, I can only say, that during twenty years' residence there I never heard it. But although it were used, it would rather strengthen the idea that the allusion were to Lin- coln; as suggesting that the colour referred to, which was brought from that city, excelled any other.

L I N

It confirms the common interpretation, that the phrase lincum green frequently occurs.

His merryemen are a' in ae liverye clad,
O' the Linkome grene sae gaye to see.

Outlaw Murray, Minstrelsy, Border, i. 8.

As Spenser uses the phrase Lincolne greene, there is no room to doubt as to the meaning of the allusion.

All in a woodman's jacket he was clad,
Of Lincolne greene, belayd with silver lace.

V. Sir Tristrem, Note, p. 256.

It seems scarcely necessary to add, that the term lincum is not only used with respect to the colour, but the peculiar texture or mode of manufacture.

Ane sark maid of the linkome twyne,
Ane gay grene cloke that will nocht stenye.—

Bannatyne Poems, p. 160. st. 8.

LIND, LYND, s. A teil or lime tree, E. linden.

Licht as the lynd is a common allusion, because of the lightness of this tree; as Virg. uses the phrase, tilia levis, Georg. i. 173.

—Set in stede of that man, licht as lynd,
Outhir ane cloud or ane waist puft of wynd.

Doug. Virgil, 316, c.

I wait it is the spreit of Gy,
Or ellis fle be the sky,
And lycht as the lynd.

Bannatyne Poems, p. 173. st. 2.

It occurs also in P. Ploughman.

Was never leafe upon lynd lighter thereafter.

Fol. 7. a.

This allusion seems to have had its origin from the use anciently made of the bark of this tree; especially as bonds and fetters were formed of it. It was employed for this purpose so early as the time of Pliny. Inter corticem et lignum tenues tunicas multiplici membrana, e quibus vincula tiliæ vocantur. Hist. Lib. 16. c. 14. Wachter observes, that the Germans call bonds of this kind lindenbast, i. e. vincula tiliacea; and that from these fetters, the Swedes not only give the name of linden trae, but also of bast, to the tree itself, from bind-en to bind.

Under the lind, "Under the teil tree, or any tree, or in the woods; a way of speaking very usual with poets." Rudd.

I haif bene banneist undir the lynd
This lang time, that nane could me fynd,
Quhill now with this last eistin wynd,

I am cum heir.— Bannatyne Poems, p. 176.

Lord Hailes renders this phrase, "under the line or equator." As this language was used with respect to those who were in a rambling state, either from choice or from necessity, the poet seems to play on the words by his allusion to the eastern wind; as if this had brought him back from the regions under the equator. But at most it is merely a lusus poeticus. The phraseology properly signifies, being in the woods.

Thare housis thay forhow, and leuis waist,
And to the woddis socht, as thay war chaist,
And lete thare nekkis and hare blaw with the wynd:
Sum vtheris went yelland under the lynd,
Quhyl a the skyis of thare skrik fordynnys.

Doug. Virgil, 220, 40.

Here under the lynd is used as synon. with to the woddis.

We have a similar phrase in Adam Bell, &c.

Cloudeslé walked a lytle beside,
Look't under the grene wood linde.

Percy's Reliques, i. 128.

That this is the sense appears also from a passage in Gower.

The kynges doughter, which this sigh,
For pure abasshe drew her adrigh,

L I N

And helde her close under the bough.—
And as she loked her aboute,
She sawe, comende under the lynde,
A woman vpon an hors behynde.

Conf. Am. Fol. 70. a. b.

I find one instance of the phrase being used with the prep. on, as would seem, improperly.

—Grass on ground or beist on lind.

Dunbar, Evergreen, ii. 57. st. 19.

The teil tree is celebrated by the old Northern Scalds. G. Andr. quotes the following passage from an ancient Isl. poem, where this tree is introduced as an emblem of the return of Spring.

Vex ydn, vellur rodna,
Verpur lind, thrimur snerper,
Crescit assiduus labor, prata rubescunt,
Mutat colores Tilia, praelia exasperantur.

As bonds are made of the bark of the teil tree, I here seems to think that it is denominated lynd from this circumstance, from lind-a to bind. But G. Andr. gives the word as primarily denoting a tree, and only applied, in a more confined sense, to the teil tree; Lind, arbor, tilia, p. 167. Lundr denotes a wood; and it deserves observation, that Isl. writers use this term precisely in the same sense in which lind is used by our old poets. A ec veg til lundar; Ad sylvam mihi eundum est:—in quibus verbis poeta exul, et ad sylvas damnatus, suum statum respexit. Gl. Landnamabok. C. B. llwyn also signifies a wood, a tree.

Thus, it seems natural to conclude, either that this phrase, under the lynd, did not originate from lind the teil-tree, but Isl. lund-ur a wood: or, that the name, originally denoting a wood in general, came to be transferred to one particular species of tree, because of the great partiality that our ancestors had for it, both because of its beauty and its usefulness.

LINDER, s. A short gown, shaped like a man's vest, with sleeves, worn both by old women and by children; Ang. See Sup.

Perhaps q. lendir, from Isl. lendar, lumbi, because this garment sits close to the loins or reins; or Su.G. Isl. linda, a girdle. Lind-a, v. signifies to swaddle.

To LINE, v. a. To beat. Hence a game, in which a number of boys beat one of the party with their hats or caps, is called Line him out; Ang.

To LYNE, LYN, v. a. To measure land with a line, or with a measuring chain.

"The lynners sall sweare, that they sall faithfullie lyne in lenth as braidnes, according to the richt meiths and marches within burgh. And they sall lyn first the fore pairt, and thereafter the back pairt of the land." Burrow Lawes, c. 102. s. 3.

Lat. lin-co, are, id.

LYNER, s. One who measures land with a line. See S.

LYNYNG, s. The act of measuring land, or of fixing the boundaries between contiguous possessions. S.

LING, s. 1. A species of grass, Ayr.

"All beyond the mountains is a soft mossy ground, covered with heath, and a thin long grass called ling by the country people." P. Ballantrae, Statist. Acc. i. 105.

Johns. renders E. ling heath; although, from the authority he gives, it is evidently different. It is used in the same sense, A. Bor. V. Gl. Grose.

2. Draw ling, Scirpus cespitosus. S.

3. Pull ling, cotton grass, Eriophorum vaginatum, Linn. See Sup.

"There is a moss plant with a white cottony head growing in mosses, which is the first spring food of the sheep. It springs in February, if the weather is fresh. It is commonly called pull ling. The sheep take what is above the ground tenderly in their mouths, and without biting it draw up a long white stalk." P. Linton, Tweed. Statist. Acc. i. 133.

L I N

Denominated perhaps from being thus drawn up or pulled by the sheep. Its synon. name is CANNA DOWN, q. v.

LING, LYNG, s. A line. In ane ling, l. In a straight line; straight forward.

Schir Oviles, Schir I well, in handis war hynt;
And to the lufly castell war led in ane lyng.

Gaican and Gol. iii. 10.

2. The phrase is used to denote expedition in motion, "quick career in a straight line;" Shirr. Gl.

Than twa discoverowris have thai tane,—
Thai bade thame ryd in-to a lyng
To se, qwhat done wes of that thyng.

Wyntown, viii. 26. 207.

Gyf the list rew on syc, quhat gift condigne
Will thou gyf Nisus, ran swyft in ane ling?

Fr. ligne, Lat. lin-ea.

Doug. Virgil, 139, 26.

To LING, v. n. To move with long steps or strides; to go at a long pace, S.

And thai that drunkyn had off the wyne,
Come ay wp lingand in a lyne,
Qubill thai the bataill come sa ner,
That arowis fell amang thaim ser.

Barbour, xix. 356. MS.

It is also applied to the motion of horses, that have a long step.

And quhair that mony gay gelding
Befoir did in our mercat ling,
Now skantlie in it may be sene
Tuelf gait glydis, deir of a preine.

Maitland Poems, p. 183.

Shirr. renders it, to gallop, Gl.

I know not whether this may be allied to Teut. lingh-en, to lengthen, or Ir. ling-im to skip or go away, also to fling or dart.

LINGAN, s. 1. Shoemaker's thread. V. LINGEL. S.

2. A lash or taw to a whip. S.

LINGAT, s. An ingot; a mass of metal. S.

LINGEL, LINGLE, s. 1. Shoemaker's thread, S. also pron. lingan, Fr. ligneul. A. Bor. langot, the strap of the shoe, Gl. Grose. See Sup.

Nor hinds wi' elson and hemp lingle,
Sit soleing shoon out o'er the ingle.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 203.

The canty cobler quats his sta',

His rozet an' his lingans.

His buik has dreed a sair, sair fa'

Frae meals o' bread an' ingans.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 61.

2. A bandage.

—Or louses of thy lingels sa lang as thay may last.

Polwart. V. Bouk.

Linda is the word used in this sense in Su.G.; hence lindebern, a child wrapt in swaddling-clothes. Ital. lunga, a girth or thong of leather.

To LINGEL, v. a. To bind firmly, as shoemakers do leather with their thread. S.

LINGEL-TAIL'D, adj. A term applied to a woman whose clothes hang awkwardly, from the smallness of her shape below, S.

To LINGE, LYNGE, v. a. To flog; to beat. S.

LINGED, part. pa. Lashed; beaten. S.

LINGER, s. Apparently the furniture of a house. S.

LINGET, s. Properly, a rope binding the fore foot of a horse to the hinder one, to prevent him from running off, Ang.

L I N

Su.G. lin-a, funis crassior. V. LANGET.

LINGET-SEED, s. The seed of flax. This is usually called linget, S.B. pron. like Fr. linge, flax; A.S. lin-saed, lini semen.

"Sik-like, that nane of the subjects of this realme, take upon hand, to carry or transport foorth of this realme, ony maner of linning claith, linget seed," &c. Acts, Ja. VI. 1573. c. 59. Murray.

LINGIS, LINGS, term. Somner has observed that this termination, added to an adj., forms a subst. denoting an object possessing the quality expressed by the adj. Hence also, perhaps, the adv. of this form, as back-lingis, blindlingis, half-lingis, langlingis, newlingis, &c. See Sup.

Ling in A.S. is also a common termination, denoting diminution.

LINGLE-BACK, s. A long weak back. S.

LINGIT, adj. 1. Flexible; pliant; agile. This term includes a variety of ideas; length or tallness, limberness, and agility. Lingit claith, cloth of a soft texture, E. Loth. "Lingey, limber. North." Gl. Grose.

2. Thin; lean; wanthriven; applied to an animal very lank in the belly. See Sup. V. LENYIE.

To LINK, v. n. 1. To walk smartly; to trip, S.

Quhen scho was furth and frie sche was rycht fain
And merrylie linkit unto the mure.

Henryson's Chron. S.P. i. 113.

The lasses now are linking what they dow,
And faiked never a foot for height nor how.

Ross's Helenore, p. 73.

2. Used to denote the influx of money.

My dadie's a delver of dikes.

My mither can card and spin;

And I am a fine fodgel lass,

And the siller comes linkin in.

Ritson's S. Songs, i. 242.

3. To do any thing quickly. S.

This seems a frequentative from Ling, v.

Su.G. lunk-a conveys an idea quite the reverse, tarde incedere, ut solent defatigati; Ihre.

To LINK off, v. a. To do any thing with cleverness. S.

To LINK, v. n. To walk arm in arm. S.

LINK, s. A division of a peat stack. S.

LINKIE, adj. Sly; waggish; as, A linkie loon. S.

LINKIE, s. A roguish or waggish person; one much given to tricks; a deceitful person. S.

LINKS, s. pl. 1. The windings of a river, S.

"Its numerous windings, called links, form a great number of beautiful peninsulas, which, being of a luxuriant and fertile soil, gave rise to the following old rhyme:

The lairdship of the bonny Links of Forth,
Is better than an Earldom in the North."

Nimmo's Stirlingshire, p. 439, 440.

2. The rich ground lying among the windings of a river, S.

Attune the lay that should adorn

Ilk verse descriptive o' the morn;

Whan round Forth's Links o' waving corn

At peep o' dawn,

Frae broomy know to whitening thorn

He raptur'd ran.

Macneill's Poems, ii. 13.

3. The sandy flat ground on the sea-shore, covered with what is called bent-grass, furze, &c. S. This term, it has been observed, is nearly synon. with downs, E. In this sense we speak of the Links of Leith, of Montrose, &c.

L I N

"Upoun the Palme Sondag Evin, the Frenche had thameselfis in battell array upoun the Links without Leyth, and had sent furth thair skirmischears." Knox's Hist. p. 223.

"In his [the Commissioner's] entry, I think, at Leith, as much honour was done unto him as ever to a king in our country.—We were most conspicuous in our black cloaks, above five hundred on a brae-side in the Links alone for his sight." Baillie's Lett. i. 61.

This passage, we may observe by the way, makes us acquainted with the costume of the clergy, at least when they attended the General Assembly, in the reign of Charles I. The etiquette of the time required that they should all have black cloaks.

"The island of Westray—contains, on the north and south-west sides of it, a great number of graves, scattered over two extensive plains, of that nature which are called links in Scotland." Barry's Orkney, p. 205. "Sandy, flat ground, generally near the sea," N. Ibid.

4. The name has been transferred, but improperly, to ground not contiguous to the sea, either because of its resemblance to the beach, as being sandy and barren; or as being appropriated to a similar use, S.

Thus, part of the old Borough-muir of Edinburgh is called Bruntfield Links. The most probable reason of the designation is, that it having been customary to play at golf on the Links of Leith, when the ground in the vicinity of Bruntfield came to be used in the same way, it was in like manner called Links.

In the Poems ascribed to Rowley, linche is used in a sense which bears some affinity to this, being rendered by Chatterton, bank.

Thou limed ryver, on thie linche maie bleede Champyons, whose bloude wyll wythe thie waterres flowe. Elin. and Jug. v. 37. p. 21.

This is evidently from A.S. hlinc, agger limitaneus; quandoque privatorum agros, quandoque paroecias, et alia loca dividens, finium instar. "A bank, wall, or causeway between land and land, between parish and parish, as a boundary distinguishing the one from the other, to this day in many places called a Linch;" Somn.

According to the use of the A.S. term, links might be q. the boundaries of the river. But, I apprehend, it is rather from Germ. lenk-en flectere, vertere, as denoting the ben-dings or curvatures, whether of the water, or of the land contiguous to it.

Sir J. Sinclair derives links "from ling, an old English word for down, heath, or common." Observ. p. 194. But the term, as we have seen, is sometimes applied to the richest land.

LINKS, s. pl. Used as signifying locks of hair. S.

LINKUM-TWINE, s. Pack thread. S.

LIN-PIN, LINT-PIN, s. The linch pin. S.

LINS. A termination common in S. as blindlins. S.

To LINSH, v. n. To hop. S.

LINSH, s. A hop. V. LINSH. S.

To LINT one's hough. To sit down for a little while. S.

To LINT, v. n. To cease; to rest. "He wadna let me lint or I did it;" he would not let me rest. S.

LINT-BELLS, s. pl. The blossom or flower of flax, when growing. S.

LINT-BOWS, s. The pods containing the seeds of flax. S.

LINT-BRAKE, s. An instrument for breaking or softening flax, previous to the rubbing and swingling. S.

LINT-RIPPLE, s. A toothed instrument through which flax is drawn, to separate the seed from the stalk. S.

LINT-STRAIK, s. A head or handful of dressed flax. S.

L I P

LINT-TAP, s. As much flax as is usually put upon a rock for being spun off. S.

LYNTH, s. Length. S.

LINTIE, s. The linnet. S.

LYNTQUHIT, LINTWHITE, s. A linnet, S., often corr. lintie; Fringilla linota, Linn.

"The lyntquhit sang cunterpoint quhen the oszil yelpit." Compl. S. p. 60.

O sweet ar Coila's haughs an' woods,
When lintwhites chaunt amang the buds.

Burns, iii. 251.

— Larks, gowdspinks, mavis, and linties.

V. GOLDSPIK. Ramsay's Poems, ii. 516.

A.S. linetwige, Aelfr. Gl.; supposed to receive its name from feeding on the seed of flax, also linet; as for the same reason, in Germ. flachefinke, q. a flax-finch; Sw. hampspink, id., q. a hemp-finch, as feeding on the seed of hemp. C.B. llinos, a linnet, according to Junius, from llin, lint.

LYON, s. A gold coin anciently struck in S. S.

To LIP, v. a. To break small pieces from the face of edge-tools; as, "I've lippit my pen-knife." S.

LYPE, s. A crease; a fold. S.

LYPIT, part. adj. Creased. S.

LIPPENING, part. adj. Occasional; accidental. S.

LIPPER, s. Leprosy.

"Quhen thir ambassatouris was brocht to his presence, he apperit to thair sicht sa ful of lipper, that he was repute be thaym maist horribyll creature in erd." Bellend. Cron. B. ix. c. 19. Lepra infecto. Boeth.

Wyntown writes lepyr. V. APON.

Fr. lepre, Lat. lepra, id.

LIPPER, adj. 1. Leprous

"Na lipper men sall enter within the portes of our burgh.—And gif any lipper man vses commonlie contrair this our discharge, to come within our burgh, his claiths quherewith he is cled, sall be taken fra him, and sall be brunt; and he being naked, sall be ejected forth of the burgh." Stat. Gild, c. 15.

2. Still used with respect to those whose bodies are covered with the small-pox, or any other eruption. S.

3. Applied to fish that are diseased, as synon. with mysel, q. v.

"They open the fishe, and lukes not quhither they be mysel or lipper fish or not." Chalmerlan Air, c. 21. s. 9. Leprosi is the only word used in the Lat. A.S. hleapere, leprosus.

To LIPPER, v. n. A term used to denote the appearance of foam on the tops of the waves, or of breakers.

Thare, as him thocht, suld be na sandis schald,
Nor yit na land birst lippering on the wallis,
Bot quhare the flude went styl, and calmyt al is,
But stoure or bulloure, murmoure or mouyng,
His steuynnis thidder stering gan the Kyng.

Doug. Virgil, 325, 51.

Hence the tops of broken waves are called Lipperis or lopperis.

This stoure sa bustuous begouth to rise and grewe,
Like as the sey changis first his hewe
In quhite lopperis by the wyndis blast.

Ibid. 226, 13.

This may either be the same with lapper, to curdle, according to Rudd., sometimes written lopper, "as if the sea were curdled;" or it may be immediately allied to Moes.G. hlaup-an, A.S. hleap-an, Su.G. loep-a, currere, whence loepare, cursor; especially as Germ. lauff-en, denotes the flowing of water, fluere, manare, and lauff, Su.G. loep, Isl. hlaup, laup, are used as nouns in a similar sense. V. LOUP.

LIPPER. Lipper fat, very fat. S.
 LIPPERJAY, s. A jackdaw or jay. S.
 LIPPY, s. A bumper; a glass full to the lip. S.
 LIPPIE, s. The fourth part of a peck, S. Syn. Forpet.

"The stipend — consists of 5 bolls of wheat, 33 bolls 3 pecks 1 lippie barley, 9 bolls 1 peck 1 lippie meal," &c. Statist. Acc. P. Dalmenie, i. 236.

Several vestiges of this word remain in modern E. In Sussex, a leap or lib is half a bushel. In Essex, a seed leap or lib is a vessel or basket in which corn is carried; from A.S. leap a basket, saed leap a seed-basket, Ray. "Leap, a large deep basket; a chaff basket, North." Gl. Grose.

It occurs in O.E. "Thei token that that was left of relifis sevene lepfull;" in another MS., "leepis full." Wiclif, Matt. 15. "Seven leepis." Mark, 8.

To this agrees Isl. laup calathus, quasillum; Su.G. lop, loep, mensura frumenti, sextam tonnae partem continens; Ihre. He also renders it by modius. For although the cognate terms are used to denote certain measures, these differ much from each other. In Sw. laupsland denotes as much land as is necessary for sowing this quantity of seed. In like manner, in S. we speak of a lippie's sowing, especially as applied to flax-seed, i. e. as much ground as is required for sowing the fourth part of a peck. Hence L. B. lep-a, a measure, according to Lye, vo. Leap, containing two-thirds of a bushel. But in the passage quoted by him, it evidently signifies the third part of two bushels. Teut. loope korens denotes a bushel. For loope lands is expl. quadrans jugeri, agri spatium quod modio uno conseri potest; Kilian. Fris. loop, the fourth part of a bushel, synon. with viertele. See Sup.

To LIPPIN, LYPPYN, LIPPEN, v. a. To expect; to look for with confidence. S.

This tre may happyn for to get
 The kynd rwte, and in it be set,
 And sap to recovyr syne;—
 Than is to lyppyn sum remede.

Wyntown, vii. 4. 138.

To LIPPIN, LYPPYN, LIPPEN, v. n. 1. To expect; sometimes used in vulgar language without any prep. at other times with for, S. Lancash.

The ferd Alysawndyr oure kyngis sone,
 — At Roxburch weddyt Dame Margret,
 The erle of Flawndrys dowchtyr fayre,
 And lyppynyt than to be hys ayre. Ibid, vii. 10. 382.
 But some chield ay upon us keeps an ee,
 And sae we need na lippen to get free.

Ross's Helenore, p. 51.

Ne'er—deal in cantrip's kittle cunning,
 To spier how fast your days are running;
 But patient lippen for the best,
 Nor be in dowy thought opprest.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 123.

2. To lippin in; to put confidence in; to trust to; to have dependence on.

Lippin not Troianis, I pray you in this hors;
 Howeuer it be, I drede the Grekis fors.
 And thame that sendis this gift always I fere.

Doug. Virgil, 40, 13.

Do neuer for schame vnto your self that lak,
 To lippin in spede of fute, and gyf the bak.

Ibid. 329, 18.

3. To lyppyn off, used in the same sense.

The fyrst is, that we haf the rycht;
 And for the rycht ay God will fycht.
 The tothyr is, that thai cummyn ar,
 For lyppynnyng off thair gret powar,
 To sek ws in our awne land.—Barbour, xii. 238. MS.
 Vol. II.

4. To lippen till; to intrust to the charge of one.
 I love yow mair for that lofe ye lippen me till,
 Than ony lordschip or land.—Houlate, ii. 12. MS.

5. To lippin to; to trust to, or confide in; the phraseology commonly used, S.

Lippyn not to yone alliance reddy at hand.
 To be thy mach sall cum ane alienare.

Doug. Virgil, 208, 14.

"Lippen to me, but look to yourself," S. Prov. Kelly.

6. To lippin upon; to depend on for.

"The first command techis the hart to feir God, to be-leif fermelie his haly word, to traist vpon God, lippin all gud vpon him, to lufe him, and to loue him thairfore." Abp. Hamiltoun's Catechisme, 1551, Fol. 29, 6.

None of our etymologists have given any derivation of this word. But it is unquestionably allied to the different Goth. verbs which have the same signification; although it most nearly resembles the participle.

Moes.G. laub-jan, ga-laub-jan, credere; whence ga-laub-jand-ans credentes, lippinand, S. ga-laubeins fides. It needs scarcely to be observed, that b and p are often interchanged. Alem. loub-en, gi-loub-en, A.S. ge-lyf-en, leaf-an, lef-an, Germ. laub-en, Belg. ge-loov-en, id.

LYPPNYNG, s. Expectation; confidence. See Sup.

Thai chesyd the mast famows men
 Of thare college commendyt then
 Wyth the consent of the kyng,
 Makand hym than full lyppnyng
 That thai suld sa thraly tret the Pape,
 That of Northwyche the byschape
 Til of Cawntirbery the se

Befor othir suld promovyde be. Wyntown, vii. 8. 686.

LIPPING, LIPPIN-FOW, adj. 1. Full to the brim or lips of the vessel. 2. A river when in flood is said to be lipping. S.

To LIRB, v. a. To sip. S.

LIRE, LYR, LYRE, s. 1. The fleshy or muscular parts of any animal, as distinguished from the bones. See S.

Thus it is frequently used by Blind Harry.

Quham euir he strak he byrstyt bayne and lyr.

Wallace, v. 1109. MS.

This seems equivalent to bayne and brawne, ver. 962.

The burly blaide was braid and burnyst brycht,
 In sonder kerwyt the mailyeis off fyne steyll,
 Throwch bayne and brawne it prochit euirilkdeill.

Thus it is applied to the flesh of brute animals, offered in sacrifice.

— Sum into tailyeis schare,
 Syne brocht flikerand sum gobbetis of lyre.

Doug. Virgil, 19, 35.

God Bacchus gyftis fast thay multiply,
 Wyth platis ful the altaris by and by
 And gan do charge, and wourschip with fat lyre.

Ibid, 456, 2.

2. Flesh, as distinguished from the skin that covers it. Of a sword it is said;

What flesh it ever hapneth in,
 Either in lyre, or yet in skin;
 Whether that were shank or arm,
 It shall him do wonder great harm. Sir Egeir, p. 26.

3. Lyre signifies the lean parts of butcher-meat. S.

The origin is certainly A.S. lire, lacerti, the pulp or fleshy parts of the body; as scanc-lira, the calf of the leg. Rudd. has observed, that S. "they call that the lyre, which is above the knee, in the fore-legs of beeves." This has an obvious analogy with Su.G. Dan. laar, Mod. Sax. lurre, femur, the thigh.

L I R

The phrase fat lyre used by Doug. would almost suggest that our term had some affinity to Isl. hlyre, lyre, which is the name of the fattest fish, piscis pinguissimi nomen; piscis pinguissimus maris, G. Andr. p. 115, 167; whence hlyrfeit-er, lyrfeit-er, very fat.

LYRE, LYIRE, s. That part of the skin which is colourless, especially as contrasted with those parts in which the blood appears.

As ony rose hir rude was reid,
Hir lyre wes lyk the lillie. Chr. Kirk, st. 3.

— Hir lips, and cheikis, pumice fret;
As rose maist redolent.
With yvoire nek, and pomells round,
And comelie intervall.
Hir lillie lyre so soft and sound;
And proper memberis all,
Bayth brichter, and tichter,
Then marbre poleist clein. Maitland Poems, p. 239.

This term is common in O.E. in the same sense.

His lady is white as wales bone,
Here lere brygte to se upon,
So fair as blome on tre.

Isumbras, MS. Cott. V. Tyrwh. iv. 321.

Her lyre light shone. Launfal.

"Lyre," says Mr. Pink., "is common in old English romances for skin, but originally means flesh," Maitl. P. N. 394. But this word is most probably different from the preceding. If its original signification be flesh, it is strange that it should be appropriated to one part of the skin only. It seems also to have quite a different origin. Rudd. mentions Cimb. hlyre gena, a word I have found nowhere else. But it corresponds to A.S. hleor, hlear, which not only signifies the cheek, but the face, the countenance.

LYRE, LAYER, LYAR, s. That species of petrel, called the Shear-water, Procellaria Puffinus, Linn. See S.

"The—lyre—is a bird somewhat larger than a pigeon, and though extraordinary fat, and moreover very fishy tasted, is thought by some to be extremely delicious." P. Kirkwall, Statist. Acc. vii. 537.

"This species inhabits also the Orkney Isles;—it is called there the lyre; and is much valued, both on account of its being a food, and for its feathers." Penn. Brit. Zool. ii. 552.

"The lyar bird is not peculiar to this island, but abounds far more here than in other places of the country.—This bird makes its nest by digging a hole horizontally in the loose earth, found among the shelvings of high rocks." P. Walls and Flota, Orkney, Statist. Acc. xvii. 322.

"There is a bird, called a layer, here, that hatches in some parts of the rocks. It is reported, that it is only to be found in Dunnet Head, Hoy Head in Orkney, in Wales, and in the Cliffs of Dover, (where it is said to be known by the name of the puffin), and in no other place in Britain." P. Dunnet, Caithness, Statist. Acc. xi. 249.

Pennant says they are "found in the Calf of Man, and as Mr. Ray supposes in the Scilly Isles." There is no reason for supposing the Lyre to be the Puffin.

Feroensibus, Liere, Brunnich, 119. Penn. Zool. 551. Seren. calls the Shearwater, Larus Niger. May we suppose that this name has originally been formed from Lar-us? or vice versa.

LIRE, s. The udder of a cow or other animal. V. LURE, S.

LYRED, part. adj. Having some locks of hair lighter in colour than the rest. V. LIART. S.

LYRIE, s. The Pogge, or Armed Bullhead; a fish. S. To LIRK, v. a. To crease; to rumple, S.

It is also used as a n. v., to contract, to shrivel, S. See S. Isl. lerk-a contrahere; lerkadr contractus, in plicas adductus. Hosur lerkadr at beinum; caligae circa crura in plicas coactae, Landnam. Gl. In the same sense we say that stockings are lirkit.

L I T

LIRK, s. 1. A crease, a mark made by doubling any thing, S. 2. A fold; a double. 3. Metaph. a double; a subterfuge. See Sup. 4. A wrinkle.

Some loo the courts, some loo the kirk,
Some loo to keep their skins frae lirks;—
For me, I took them a' for stirks
That loo'd na money.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 307.

5. A hollow in a hill.

The hills were high on ilka side,
An' the bought i' the lirk o' the hill;
And aye, as she sang, her voice it rang,
Out o'er the head o' yon hill.

Minstrelsy, Border, iii. 281.

LIRKIE, adj. Full of creases; wrinkled. S.

To LIS, v. a.

Weill gretis yow, lord, yone lusty in leid,
And says him likis in land your langour to lis.

Gawan and Gol. i. 14.

"Lessen," Pink. Gl. But I would rather understand it as signifying to assuage; Su.G. lis-a requiem dare, lenire.

LYSE-HAY, s. Hay mowed off pasture-ground. S.

LISK, LEESK, s. The flank; the groin, S. Lish, lash, id. A. Bor. Lesh, Lincoln. See Sup.

— The grundyn hede the ilk thraw
At his left flank or lish persit tyte.

Doug. Virgil, 339, 7.

Dan. liuske, Sw. id. Seren. liumske, Ihre. Belg. liesch, id.

LISS, s. 1. Cessation; a state of quietness. 2. "Remission, or abatement, especially of any acute disease. Fr. and Sax. lisce, remissio, cessatio." Gl. Sibb.

We may add, as cognate terms, Dan. lise, Su.G. lisa, otium, requies a dolore vel sensu quolibet mali. Ihre seems to view Isl. leys-a, A.S. lyse, [lys-an], to loose, as the origin.

LISLEBURGH, s. A name said to have been once given by the Fr. to the city of Edinburgh. S.

LISPUND, s. A weight used in Orkn. V. LESPUND, S. To LISS, v. n. To cease; to stop. S.

LISS, LISSENS, s. Cessation; a state of quietness; an interval in the time of sickness. S.

LIST, adj. Agile. S.

LIST, s. Apparently, Last; a measure for fish, &c. S.

LISTARIS, s. pl. The small yard arms.

"Hail on your top sail scheitis, vire your listaris and your top sail trossis, & heise the top sail hiear." Compl. S. p. 63.

Perhaps from list, the border of a garment, or Germ. latz, sinus vestis.

LISTER, s. A spear for killing fish. V. LEISTER.

To LIT, LITT, v. a. To dye; to tinge, S. A. Bor. Part. pa. littyt, dyed.

"Na man bot ane burges may buy woll to lit, nor make claith, nor cut claith, without or within bourgh." Burrow Lawes, c. 22.

— Turnus by his hait and recent dede
Had wyth hys blude littyt the ground al rede.

Doug. Virgil, 462, 9.

Rudd. derives it from Lat. lit-um, the supine of lino. Sibb. with far greater propriety mentions Sw. lett-a, id. Our term is more immediately allied to Isl. lit-a colorare, tingere, litr, Su.G. let, anc. lit, color; hence twaelitt, variegated; q. of two colours; Isl. lit-la decolor, lithlaedi vestes tinctae, litverpur colorem deponens, &c.

This term seems to be confined to the Scandinavian dialects of the Goth. I have, at least, observed no vestige of it in the Germ.

L I T

To LIT, v. n. To blush deeply. S.

LIT, LITT, s. Colour; dye; tinge; dye-stuffs, S. See S.

"It is sene speidfull, that lit be cryit vp, and vsit as it was wont to be." Acts, Ja. II. 1457, c. 76, edit. 1566.

V. HOGERS; also the v. Hence,

LITSTAR, LITSTER, s. A dyer, one who gives a colour to clothes, S. See Sup.

"And at na litstar be draper, nor by claith to sell agane, nor yit thoilit thairto, vnder the pane of escheit." Acts, Ja. II. 1457, c. 76, edit. 1566.

"Na sowter, litster, nor flesher, may be brether of the merchand gilde; except they sweare that they sall not vse their offices with their awin hand, bot onlie be servants vnder them." Burrow Lawes, c. 99.

Isl. litunarmadur tinctor, literally a colour-man.

LITTING-LEID, s. A vessel used by dyers. S.

LITANY,* s. A long unmeaning effusion. S.

To LITCH, v. a. To strike over. S.

LITE, s. The dung of oxen or cows. Syn. Sharn. S.

LITE, LYTE, adj. Little; small; limited.

Consider thy ressoun is so febill and lite,
And his knowlege profound and infinite.

Doug. Virgil, 310, 4.

Thys litil toun of Troy, that here is wrocht,
May not wythhald the in sic boundis lyte.

Ibid. 300, 50.

"Lite, a lite, a few or little. North." Gl. Grose.

LITE, LYTE, s. 1. A short while.

And though I stood abaisit tho a lyte,
No wonder was. King's Quair, ii. 22.

I you beseik my febyl lyffe to respite,
That I may leit, and endure yit ane lyte,
All pane and labour that you list me send.

Doug. Virgil, 263, 34.

The term is used in O. E.

Sithen he gan him drawe toward Normundy,
The londe to visite, & to comfort his frendes.
He rested bot a lite, a sonde the Inglis him sendes.

R. Brunne, p. 81.

2. A small portion.

— I knaw tharin full lyte.
Doug. Virgil, 3, 41.

A.S. lyt, lyte, parum, pauci; Su.G. lite, Isl. litt, parum.
It is not improbable that this is allied to Su.G. lyte vitium, as littleness implies the idea of defect. Thus the origin may be Isl. liot-a damnum accipere; Verel.

LYTE, s. Elect, contr. of elyte, q. v.

He stud as Lyte twa yhere owre,
And Byschape thretty yhere and foure.

Wyntown, vii. 5. 141.

LITE, s. A list of names of candidates for election to any office, from which a choice is to be made.

"Archibald, Earl of Argile,—James Earl of Morton, and John Earl of Marre, being put in lites, the voices went with the Earl of Marre." Spotswood, p. 258.

"You will not finde any Bishop of Scotland, whom the Generall Assemblie hath not first nominated and given vp in lytes to that effect."—Bp. Galloway's Dikaiologie, p. 180. V. LEET.

To LYTE, v. n. To nominate; to propose for election. S.

To LITH, LYTH, v. n. To listen; to attend.

Than said he loud upone loft, "Lord, will ye lyth, Ye sal nape torfeir betyde, I tak upone hand."

Gawan and Gol. iii. 18.

This word is common in O. E. Su.G. lyd-a, Isl. hlyd-a, audire, obedire; hlyding, hlydin, Dan. lydig, obediens.
From the v., as Ihre observes, are formed A.S. hlyst-an,

L Y T

Su.G. lyst-ra, lyst-a, hlyst-a, lysn-a, Germ. laust-ern, Belg. hlyst-ern, E. list, listen.

LITH, s. 1. A joint; a limb, S. See Sup.

—Thare lithis and lymys in salt wattir bedyit, Strekit on the coist, spred furth, bekit and dryit.

Doug. Virgil, 18, 28.

Not lichtis as in the printed copy. V. Gl. Rudd.

"Looking to the breaking of that bred, it represents to thee, the breaking of the bodie and blood of Christ: not that his body was broken in bone or lith, but that it was broken with dolour, with anguish and distres of hart, with the weight of the indignation and furie of God, that he sustained for our sins quhilk hee bure." Bruce's Sermon on the Sacr. 1590. Sign. F. 4. b.

2. Used metaphor. to denote the hinge of an argument, S.

The Squire perceiv'd; his heart did dance,
For he had fall'n on this perchance.
He did admire, and praise the pith of't,
And leugh and said, I hit the lith of't.

Cleland's Poems, p. 31.

3. A division in any fruit; as, The lith of an oranger. S.

4. The rings surrounding the base of a cow's horn. S.

A.S. lith, artus, membrum, Isl. litha, id. Verel. Ind. p. 158. This learned writer deduces it from led-a to bend; observing that it properly denotes the flexion and articulation of the joints. Proprie est flexus et commissio articulorum. Alem., Dan., Belg., lid, Chaucer lithe. Moes.G. uslitha is used to denote a paralytic person, Matt. 8, 6; 9, 9, deprived of the use of his limbs; us signifying from or out of. To this corresponds S. aff-lith, or out-of-lith, dislocated, disjointed.

To LITH, v. a. To separate the joints one from another, especially for facilitating the business of carving a piece of meat, S. V. the s. See Sup.

LITHE, adj. 1. Calm; sheltered from the blast, S. Lancash. Pron. lyde, leyd, S.B. synonym. lown.

"A lythe place, i. e. fenced from the wind or air," Rudd. vo. Le. The lithe side of the hill, that which is not exposed to the blast, S.

In a lythe cantie hauch, in a cottage,
Fu' bien wi' ald warldly store,
Whare never lack'd rowth o' good potage,
And butter and cheese gilore;
There, couthie, and pensie, and sicker.
Wonn'd honest young Hab o' the Heuch.

Jamieson's Pop. Ball. i. 292.

Like thee they scoug frae street or field,
An' hap them in a lyther bield.

V. SCUG, v. n. Fergusson's Poems, ii. 34.

2. Warm, possessing genial heat.

The womannys mylk recomford him full swyth,
Syn in a bed thai brocht him fair and lyth.

Wallace, ii. 275. MS.

3. Affectionate, metaphor. used. One is said to have a lithe side to a person or thing, when it is meant that he has attachment or regard, S.B.

A.S. hliethe, quietus, tranquillus, hleowth apricitas, sunshine, hleoth-faest calidus, are evidently allied. But it appears in a more primitive form in Isl. hliæ umbra, umbraculum, locus a vento vel sole immunis. Ad draga i hlie, occultare, celare, subducere. Leite, locus soli, ascensionis loci; G. Andr. Isl. hlyd dicebatur latus cujusvis montis, potissimum tamen pars montis a ventis frigidioribus maxime aversa. Jun. Et. vo. Lukewarm. V. LE, under which some other cognate terms are mentioned; as both words claim the same origin.

LYTHIE, adj. Warm; comfortable. S.

L Y T

To LYTHE, v. a. To shelter, S.B.
 'Twas there the Muse first tun'd his saul
 To lilt the Wauking of the Faul'.
 When ance she kindly lyth'd his back,
 He fan' nae frost.
Shirrefs' Poems, viii.

V. the adj.
LYTHE, s. 1. A warm shelter, S.B.
 — She frae ony beeld was far awa',
 Except stanesides, and they had little lythe.
Ross's Helenore, p. 58.

2. Encouragement; favour; countenance; metaph.
 used, S.B.
 And he 'bout Nory now cud see nae lythe,
 And Bydby only on him looked blythe.
Ross's Helenore, p. 106.

LYTHNES, s. Warmth; heat.
 "To excesse, thair may never cum gud nor profit, nor body nor lif is nevir the bettir. And sa it tynis all maner contience, voce, aynd, lythenes and colour." Porteous of Nobilnes, Edin. 1508.
 Perhaps it may signify softness, A.S. lithenesse lenitas.

To LITHE, v. a. 1. To soften. See Sup.
 "I beleif that trew repentance is the special gift of the haly spreit, quhilk be his grace lythis and turnis our hart to God." Abp. Hamiltoun's Catechisme, 1552. Fol. 119. a.

2. To thicken; to mellow, S. Chesh. Spoken of broth, when thickened by a little oat-meal, or by much boiling. Lancash. "lithe, to put oat-meal in broth."
 Tim Bobbin, Gl. "Lithing, thickening of liquors.
 North." Gl. Grose.

3. Applied to water when thickened by mud. S.
 A.S. lith-ian, to mitigate; lithewaec-an, to become mellow. Our v. is also used, like the latter, in a neut. sense.
 A v. of this form seems to have been anciently used in Isl. Hence Olaus mentions this as an old proverb addressed to maid-servants, when their work went on slowly.
Huad lydur grautnum genta? Quid proficis pultem coquendo? or, as it would have been expressed in vulgar S.,
 "What speid do ye mak in lithing the crowdie, maid?"
 Lex. Run. vo. Genta.

LYTHIE, LYTHY, adj. Thickened or mellowed; as applied to broth or soup. S.

LITHIN, s. A mixture of oat-meal and water or milk, poured into broth for mellowing it. S.

LYTHE, adj. Of an assuaging quality. See Sup.
 Water thai asked swithe,
 Cloth and bord was drain;
 With mete and drink lithe,
 And seriaunce that were bayn.—
Sir Tristrem, p. 41.

Moes.G. leithu denotes strong drink; whence A.S. lith poculum. V. the v.

LITHE, s. A ridge; an ascent.
 Here I gif Schir Galeron, quod Gaynour, withouten
 ony gile,
 Al the londis, and the lithis fro laver to layre.
Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. ii. 27.

In this sense, doubtless, are we to understand the term lithe, as used by Thomas of Ercildoune; although viewed by the ingenious Editor, as "oblique for satisfaction." V. Gl.
 No asked he lond, no lithe,
 Bot that maiden bright. Sir Tristrem, p. 97.

A.S. hleoth, hlithe, jugum montis, clivus, Su.G. lid clivus, colli altior; Hist. Alex. Magn.
Them lister at dwaelyas under ena lida.
 Placet sub clivo subsistere.
 Isl. leit, id. lid, hlid, latus montis, seems also allied; pl.
lidar, declivitates; Verel. Ind.

LYTHE, LAID, s. The pollack, Gadus Pollachius,

L Y T

Linn. Statist. Acc. v. 536. Laith, Martin's St. Kilda,
 p. 19.
 "The fish which frequent Lochlong, are cod, haddocks, seath, lythe, whittings, flounders, mackarel, trouts, and herrings." P. Arroquhar, Dunbart. Statist. Acc. iii. 434.
 They are called leets on the coast near Scarborough;
 Encycl. Brit. vo. Gadus.
 "Laid, a greenish fish, as big as a haddock." Sibb. Fife,
 p. 129.
Lyth is also the name in Orkney.
 "The pollack,—with us named the lyth, or ly-fish, is frequently caught close by the shore, almost among the wrack or ware in deep holes among the rocks." Barry's Orkney, p. 293.
 This, by mistake, is viewed as the same with the scad.
 P. Kirkcudbright, Statist. Acc. xi. 13.

LITHER, adj. Lazy; sleepy. S.

LITHERLIE, adv. Lazily. V. LIDDER. S.

LITHER, adj. Undulating. A lither sky, a yielding sky.

LYTHYRNES, s. Sloth.
 The statis of Frawns soucht for thi
 Til the Pape than Zachary,
 And prayid hym be hys consaile
 To decerne for thare governale,
 Quhether he war worth to hawe the crown,
 That had be vertu the renowne
 Of manhad, helpe, and of defens,
 And thare-til couth gyve diligens;
 Or he that lay in lythyernes
 Worth to nakyn besynes. Wyntown, vi. 4. 69.

V. LYTHRY. This, however, may be allied to Isl. lat-ur, Su.G. lat, piger.

LYTHIS, s. pl.
 For lythis of ane gentil knicht,
 Sir Thomas Moray, wyse and wycht,
 And full of —. Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 359.

It is difficult to determine the meaning, the sentence being incomplete in the printed poem. It may denote manners; Isl. lit, lyt, mos. Med fagram lyt och nyom fundom; Pulcris moribus et novis artibus. Hist. Alex.
 Magn. ap. Ihre, vo. Later. If so, it is synon. with lait,
 q. v. Or it may signify tidings, from lith, to listen; Su.G.
hlid-a, id. hlids, a hearing. Hlids bid ek; Audientiam peto; Voluspa, Ihre, vo. Liuda. The language of Dunbar may be equivalent to, "I have tidings to give concerning a gentle knight."

To LYTHLY, v. a. To undervalue. V. LYCHTLIE.

LYTHOCKS, s. pl. A mixture of oatmeal and cold water boiled together, applied to tumours. Sautless parritch.

LITHRY, s. A crowd; "commonly a despicable crowd," Shirr. Gl. See Sup.
 "In came sik a rangel o' gentles, and a lithry o' hanyiel slyps at their tail, that in a weaven the house wis gaen like Lawren-fair." Journal from London, p. 8.
 This is either a deriv. from leid, people, q. v. or from A.S. lythre malus, nequam; lythre cynne, adulterinum genus, Lye; Isl. leid-ur, turpis, sordidus vel malis moribus praeditus.

LITIGIOUS,* adj. 1. Prolix; tedious in discourse.
 2. Vindictive; also pron. Latigious. S.

LITIS, s. pl. Strifes; debates. S.

LITISCONTESTATIOUNE, s. The state of a case in law, in which both parties having been fully heard before a judge, they agree that he should give a final decision.

LITSALTIS, s. pl. Perhaps errat. for litfaltis, or lit- fattis; fats for lit, or dye-stuffs. S.

LYTT, s. A list of candidates; the same with Leet. S.

L I Z

To LYTT, v. a. To nominate two or more candidates. S.
V. LEET. S.
LITTAR, s. Perhaps a horse-litter for travelling. S.
LITTERSTANE, s. A stone about 2 feet long, and 1 foot thick, for building, so named from being carried in litters. S.
LITTLEANE, s. A child, S. See Sup.
 —Fu soon as the jimp three raiths was gane,
 The daintiest littleane bonny Jean fuish hame.
 To flesh and bluid that ever had a claim.
Ross's Helenore, p. 12.
 This may be q. little one; or from A.S. lytling parvulus.
V. LING, term.
LITTLE-BOUKIT, adj. Small in size; not bulky. S.
LITTLE-DINNER, s. A morsel taken in the morning before going to work. S.
LITTLEGOOD, LITTLEGUDY, s. Sun-spurge, or wart-spurge, an herb, S. Euphorbia helioscopia, Linn.
LITTLE-GUDE, s. The devil. S.
LITTLER, comp. of Little. Less. S.
LITLLEST, superl. of Little. Least. S.
LITTLEWORTH, adj. Worthless; morally bad. S.
LITTLEWORTH, s. He's a littleworth, a worthless person. S.
LITLIE, adj. Rather little. S.
LIUE, s. Life. Eterne on liue, eternally in life, or alive; immortal. On lyve, alive.
 Was non on lyve that tok so much on hand
 For lufis sake. King's Quair, iii. 11.
 —All ane begynnare of euey thing but drede,
 And in the self remanis eterne on liue.
Doug. Virgil, 308, 52.
 The phrase on liue is from A.S. on lyf, alive; Tha he on lyf waes, when he was alive, Lye.
Lyue is used for live or life, O.E.
 The emperor of Aylmayne wyllede to wyue
 Mold the kyng's dogter, & to rygte lyue.
R. Glouc. p. 433.
LIVER, adj. Lively; sprightly. Syn. DELIVER. S.
To LIVER, v. a. To liver a vessel, to land the goods carried by her; to unload, S. See Sup.
 Germ. liefer-n, Fr. livr-er, to deliver, to render.
LIVER-CRUE, LIVER-CROOK, s. An inflammation of the intestines of calves. S.
LIVERY-DOWNIE, s. A haddock stuffed with livers, meal, and spiceries; sometimes the roe is added, Ang.
LIVER-MOGGIE, s. The stomach of the cod filled with liver, &c. a dish used in Shetland; evidently from Sw. lefwer, liver, and mage, the maw or stomach.
LIVERY-MEAL, s. Meal given to servants as a part of their wages. S.
LIUNG, s. An atom; a whit; a particle, Ang. synon. yim, nyim, hate, flow, starn.
 I scarcely think that this can be allied to Su.G. liung-a to lighten, q. a flash, a glance.
LYWYT, pret. Lived.
 For auld storys, that men redys,
 Repraisentis to thaim the dedys
 Of stalwart folk, that lywyt ar,
 Rycht as thai than in presence war.
Barbour, 1. 19. MS.
 Mr. Pink. thinks that the phrase lywyt ar signifies are dead, as equivalent to Lat. vixerunt; Gl. But it simply means "lived in former times," or "before." V. Air, adv.
LIXIE, s. The female who borrows all the knives, spoons, &c. for a Penny-wedding. S.
LIZ, LIZZIE, LEEZIE, s. Abbrev. of Elizabeth. S.

L O C

LOAGS, s. pl. Stockings without feet; Hoggers. S.
LOALLING, s. Loud mewling. S.
LOAMY, adj. Slothful; inactive. Syn. Loy. S.
LOAN, LONE, LOANING, s. 1. An opening between fields of corn, near or leading to the homestead, left uncultivated, for the sake of driving the cattle homewards, S. Here the cows are frequently milked. See Sup.
 Thomas has loos'd his ousen frae the pleugh;
 Maggy by this has bewk the supper-scones;
 And muckle kye stand rowting in the loans.
Ramsay, ii. 7.
 On whomelt tubs lay twa lang dails,
 On them stood mony a goan,
 Some fill'd wi' brachan, some wi' kail,
 And milk het frae the loan. Ibid. i. 267.
 Hence the phrase, a loan soup, "milk given to passengers when they come where they are milking;" Kelly, p. 371.
 But now there's a moaning on ilka green loaning,
 That our braw forresters are a' wede away.
Ritson's S. Songs, ii. 2.
 The term, I suspect, is allied to E. lawn. As this signifies an open space between woods, there is great affinity of idea. The E. word is generally derived from Dan., Su.G. lund, a grove. V. Jun. Etym. Gael. lòn, however, signifies a meadow.
Launde, as used by Chaucer, is rendered "a plain not plowed;" Tyrwhitt.
 —To the launde he rideth him ful right,
 Ther was the hart ywont to have his flight.
Knightes T. v. 1693.
 2. A narrow enclosed way, leading from a town or village, sometimes from one part of a village to another, S. This seems at first to have been applied to a place where there were no buildings, although the term has in some instances been continued afterwards. It is nearly allied to E. lane, as denoting "a narrow way between hedges."
 3. In some towns it denotes a narrow street. S.
 —He spang'd out, rampag'd an' said,
 That nane amon' us a'
 Durst venture out upo' the lone,
 Wi' him to shak a fa'.
Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 10.
LOANING-DYKE, s. A wall, frequently of sods, dividing the arable land from the pasture. S.
LOAN-SOUP, s. A draught of milk given to a stranger who comes to the place where the cows are milked. S.
LOAN, LONE, s. Provisions. S.
To LOAVE, v. a. 1. To expose for sale. 2. To lower the price of any thing in purchasing. S.
LOBBIA, s. Coarse grass of any kind. V. LUBBA. S.
LOBSTER-TOAD, s. Cancer Araneus; Deep-sea-crab.
To LOCAL, v. a. To apportion an augmentation of stipend to a minister among different landholders. S.
LOCALITY, s. 1. The apportioning of an augmentation of the parochial stipend on the landholders. S.
 2. Used also in relation to the liferent of a widow. S.
LOCH, LOUCH, s. 1. A lake, S.
 Thai abaid till that he was
 Entryt in ane narow place,
 Betwis a louchsid and a bra. Barbour, iii. 109. MS.
 Bot suddainlie thay fell on slewthfull sleip,
 Followand plesance drownit in this loch of cair.
Palice of Honour, iii. 6.
 It is used metaphor. by Douglas.
 2. An arm of the sea, S. See Sup.

"Kingsburgh conducted us in his boat across one of the lochs, as they call them, or arms of the sea, which flow in upon all the coasts of Sky." Boswell's Journ. p. 244.

Gael. loch, Ir. lough, C.B. lugh, a lake. Loch in Gael. also signifies an arm of the sea. Lat. lac-us, is radically the same. This term seems to have been equally well known to the Goths. Hence A.S. luh, and Isl. laug, Su.G. log, a lake. A.S. luh also denotes a firth, an arm of the sea; fretum, aestuarium, Lye. The northern languages, indeed, seem to retain the root, Su.G. lag, Isl. laug, which have the general sense of moisture, water. V. Lag, Ihre. LOCH-REED. Common Reed-grass, S.

"Arundo phragmites. The Loch-Reed. Scot. aust." Lightfoot, p. 1131.

LOCHABER AXE, s. A sort of large-sized halbert, having a strong hook, at the back part, for laying hold of the object assaulted. S.

LOCHAN, s. A small loch or lake. S.

LOCHDEN, LOUDEN, s. The name given to Lothian. S.

LOCH-LEAROCK, s. A small grey water-bird, seen on Lochleven; called also a Whistler. S.

LOCHMAW, s. A species of mew. S.

LOCHTER, s. A layer. V. LACHTER.

LOCHTER, s. The eggs laid in one season. V. LACHTER.

LOCK, LOAKE, s. A small quantity, a handful; as a lock of meal, a lock of hay, or a lock meal, &c. S. See S.

"Lock, a small parcel of any thing. North." Gl. Grose. Lock, E. sometimes signifies a tuft.

Ye may as weel gang sune as syne
To seeke your meal amang gude folk;
In ilka house yese get a loake,
When ye come whar yer gossips dwell.

Ritson's S. Songs, i. 225.

"May bids keep a lock hay;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 52.

The original application seems to have been to hair, as the phrase is still used; from Isl. lock-r, Su.G. lock capillus contortus; in the same manner as taut, q. v.

LOCKANTIES, LOCKINTIE, interj. O strange! S.

LOCKER, s. A ranunculus. S.

LOCKERBY. A Lockerby lick, a severe stroke or wound in the face. S.

LOCKERIE, adj. Rippling; applied to a stream. S.

LOCKET, s. The effect of belching; what is eructed. S.

LOCKFAST, LOKFAST, adj. Secured by bars and locks. S.

LOCK-HOLE, s. The key-hole. S.

LOCKIN'-TREE, s. Perhaps, the rung used as door-bar.

LOCKMAN, LOKMAN, s. The public executioner.

It occurs in this sense, in the Books of Adjournal, Court of Justiciary, so late as the year 1768; and is still used, Edinburgh.

His leyff he tuk, and to West Monastyr raid.
The lokmen than thai bur Wallace but baid
On till a place his martyrdom to tak,
For till his ded he wald na forthyr mak.

Wallace, xi. 1342. MS.

Ay loungand, lyke a lock-man on a ladder;
Thy ghaistly luke fleys folks that pas thee by,
Lyke a deid theif that's glowrand in a tedder.

Dunbar, Evergreen, ii. 56.

In both passages, this is the most natural sense. That from Wallace, in edit. 1648, is nonsensically printed cleughmen; in edit. 1673, cleugmen.

Lockman, hangman, so called from the small quantity (lock) of meal which he was entitled to take out of every boll exposed in the market-place. In some towns he also levies a tax on the fish, &c., which are exposed for sale. S.

Lockman seems originally to have denoted a jailer; Germ. loch, a prison, a dungeon; einen in loch stecken, to clap up one in prison; Teut. luck-en, lock-en, to lock; A.S. loc claustrum, "a shutting in," Somner. A place of confinement in Dundee is still called the Lock-up House.

From the apparent origin of the term, it would appear, that, in former times, the jailer, or perhaps the turnkey, who had the charge of a condemned criminal, was also bound to act as executioner.

Analogous to this, A.S. bydel, ergastularius, exactor, "the keeper of a prison or house of correction," Somn., in mod. language signifies a door-keeper, E. beadle. Germ. buttel is radically the same word, lictor; in Teut. softened into beul, an executioner; carnifex, tortor, lictor; Kilian. Hence beulije, beulerije, a prison, carcer; Germ. buttelei. Wachter derives buttel from beit-en capere, because his office is to seize and bind the guilty. Sw. boedel, from the same source, is the common designation for an executioner. V. DEMPSTER.

LOCUMTENANT, s. Lieutenant. S.

LOCUS, s. Ashes so light as to be easily blown about. S.

LODDAN, s. A small pool. S.

LODISMAN, s. A pilot. V. LEDISMAN. S.

LODNIT, LADNIT, pret. Laded; put on board. S.

LOFF, s. Praise. V. LOIF.

To LOFT, v. a. To lift the feet high in walking. S.

LOFTED HOUSE. A house of more stories than one S.

LOG, s. The substance which bees gather for making their works, S. B.

Perhaps radically the same with A.S. loge, Su.G. lag, humor. Lag, Ihre observes, is one of the most ancient Goth. words, as appears from the great variety of forms which it assumes in different languages, Isl. laug-r, beria-laugr, the juice of berries; Belg. loog, lye for washing.

LOGAN, s. 1. A handful of money, or any thing else, thrown among a crowd to produce a scramble. 2.

The act of throwing in this manner. S.

To LOGAN, v. a. To throw any thing for a scramble. S.

LOGE, s. A lodge; a booth.

A litill loge tharby he maid;
And thar within a bed he haid.

Barbour, xix. 653. MS.

Celt. lug, log, a place; whence, according to Callender, Lat. loc-us. Dan. loge, however, denotes a lodge, a shed, a hut; Su.G. laage locus recubationis, Isl. laag latibulum, Seren. A.S. log-ian, to lodge.

LOGG, adj. Lukewarm. S.

To LOGGAR, v. n. To hang loosely and largely. S.

LOGGARS, s. pl. Stockings without feet, tied up with garters, and hanging down over the ankles. S.

LOGGERIN', adj. Drenched with moisture. S.

LOGIE, KILLOGIE, s. A vacuity before the fireplace in a kiln, for keeping the person dry, who feeds the fire, or supplies fuel, and for drawing air. Both terms are used, S.

And she but any requisition,
Came down to the killogie,
Where she thought to have lodg'd all night.

Watson's Coll. i. 45.

I have sometimes been inclined to deduce this from Su.G. loga, Isl. log, flame. But perhaps it is from Belg. log a hole; or merely the same with the preceding word, as denoting a lodge for him who feeds the fire.

LOGS, s. pl. Stockings without feet. V. LOAGS. S.

LOY, adj. Sluggish; inactive; Ang. See Sup.

This is merely Belg. luy, lazy, Fenn. loi, id. Isl. lue, fatigue, and luen weary, seem allied. Hence, LOYNESS, s. Inactivity, Ang. Belg. luyheit.

LOICHEN, (gutt.) s. A quantity of any soft moist substance, as of pottage, flummery, &c. S.

L O I

LOYESTER, s. A stroke; a blow. S.
To LOIF, LOIFE, LOIUE, LOVE, LUFF, LOUE, v. a. To praise.

Now sal thair nane, of thir wayis thrie,
Be chosen now ane bishope for to be;
Bot that your nicht and majestie wil mak
Quhatever he be, to loife or yit to lak;
Than heyly to sit on the rayne-bow.
Thir bishops cums in at the north window;
And not in at the dure nor yit at the yet:
Bot over waine and quheil in wil he get.

Priests of Peblis, S. P. R. p. 16, 17.

The meaning seems to be, "to merit praise or dispraise;"
the term being used rather in a passive sense, like to blame,
S. instead of, to be blamed.

Thy self to loif, knak now scornefully
With proude wourdis al that standis the by.

Doug. Virgil, 300, 24.

Now God be louit has sic grace till vs sent.

Ibid. 485, 13.

Thai prysyt him full gretumly,
And lovyt fast his chewalry. Barbour, viii. 106. MS.

Leavté to luff is gretumly;

Throuch leavté lifis men rychtwisly. Ibid. i. 365. MS.

i. e. loyalty is greatly to be praised.

"Loiue thow the Lord, O my saule, and all that is within me loiue his haly name, loiue thow the Lord, my saule, and forget nocht his benefitis." Abp. Hamiltoun's Catechisme, 1552, Fol. 90, 6. This is for benedic in the Vulgate.

This word appears in most of the Goth. dialects; Isl.
Su.G. lofw-a, A.S. lof-ian, Alem. lob-on, Germ. lob-en, Belg. loob-en, id. A.S. Isl. Belg. lof, Germ. lob, praise, Isl.
loftig, laudable, loford, commendation.

Ihre informs us that some derive lofw-a, to praise, from lofwe, lofi, the palm of the hand, S. lufe; because the clapping of the lues is a sign of praise, as 2 Kings xi. 12, is rendered in the Isl. version, Their kloppudu lofum saman;
They clapped their hands. Hence lovaklapp, applause.

LOIF, LOFF, s. Praise.

Loill loif, and lawté lyis behind,
And auld kyndnes is quyt foryett.

Bannatyne Poems, p. 184. st. 1.

i. e. honest commendation, void of flattery.

Thair loff and thair lordschip of so lang date,

That bene cot armour of eld,

Thair into herald I held. Houlate, ii. 9. Lofs, MS.

LOYNE, s. An opening between fields. V. LOAN. S.

LOIS, s. Praise.

The sege that schrenks for na schame, the schent might him schënd,

That mare luffis his life, than lois upone erd.

Gawan and Gol. iv. 7.

Sa grete dangere of battal it was he

Prouokit sa, and mouit to the mellé,

For young desire of hye renowne perfay,

And lois of proues, mare than I bid say.

Doug. Virgil, 469, 6.

Laus is the word used by Maffei. V. Los.

LOISSIT, pret.

Thair luffy lances thai loissit, and lichtit on the ground.

Gawan and Gol. iii. 3.

"Loosed," Pink. But it is rather, lost, broke, or destroyed; A.S. leos-an perdere, or los-ian perire, amittere.

This is confirmed from another passage.

Thair lancis war loissit, and left on the land. Ibid. st. 18.

LOIT, s. A turd, S. Isl. lyte, deformity; or Su.G.
lort, dung, filth.

LOIT, s. 1. A spirt of boiling liquid forcibly ejected from a pot by intense heat. 2. Any thing suddenly thrown out by the stomach. S.

L O M

LOKADAISY, interj. Used as expressive of surprise. S.

LOKE, interj. Expressive of surprise and glee. S.

LOKFAST, adj. Secured by a lock. V. LOCKFAST. S.

To LOKKER, v. n. To curl; S. part pr. lokkerand;
part. pa. lokkerit.

The benk yeildit of the grene holyne

Wyth lokkerit lyoun skyn ouerspred was syne.

Doug. Virgil, 247, 1.

"When your hair's white, you would have it lochering,"

S. Prov.; spoken of one who is immoderate in his desires;

Rudd.

Isl. lock-r, capillus contortus; locka-madr, a man who has long and curled hair; Franc. loche, curled hair; also to curl, Gl. Pez. According to Somner, A.S. locca sometimes bears this sense. Gr. πλοκος cirrus, has been fancifully viewed as the origin by Helvigius, Rudd. and others.

LOKKER, LOKAR, adj. Curled.

His heid was quhyt, his een was grene and gray,

With lokar hair, quhilk owre his shulder lay.

Henrysone, Evergreen, i. 186. st. 5.

LOKLATE, adj.

Wicht men assayed with all thair besy cur,

A loklate bar was drawyn ourthourth the dur;

Bot thai mycht nocht it brek out of the waw.

Wallace, iv. 234. MS.

Edit. 1648. locked. The term seems to signify a bar that guarded or covered the lock, so as to let or hinder it from being opened by a key, or forced open.

LOKMAN. V. LOCKMAN.

LOLL, s. 1. A sluggard. 2. Human excrement. S.

To LOLL, v. n. To howl in the manner of a wild cat. S.

LOLLERDRY, s. The name given, for some ages before the Reformation, to what was deemed heresy.

The schip of faith, tempestous wind and raine,

Dryvis in the see of Lollerdry that blawis.

Bannatyne Poems, p. 190. st. 4.

From Lollard, a name reproachfully given, in England, to any one who adhered to the doctrines of Wiclif. Some think that it was derived from Lat. lol-ium, cockle. To this origin, as Tyrwhitt has observed, Chaucer seems to allude.

He shal no gospel glosen here ne teche,

He woulde sowen som difficultee,

Or springen cockle in our clene corne.

Shipman's Prol. v. 12923.

Others trace it to Teut. lollaerd mussitator, a mumblor of prayers, loll-en mussitare. V. Kilian, vo. Lollaerd.

LOME, LOOM, pron. lume, s. 1. An utensil or instrument of any kind, or for whatever use; as, a headpiece, &c. S. Loom, Chesh. id. See Sup.

Eneas himself also with ful gud willis

For to be besy gan his feris pray:

With lume in hand fast wirkand like the laif.

Doug. Virgil, 169, 25.

Werklome is often applied to instruments used in labour;
S. warkloom.

Al instrumentis of pleuch graith irnit and stelit,

As culturis, sokkys, and the sowmes grete,—

War thidder brocht, and tholis tempyr new,

The lust of all sic werklomes wer adew:

Thay dyd thame forge in swerdis of mettal brycht,

For to defend thare cuntré and thare richt.

Ibid. 230, 31.

2. A tub, or vessel of any kind, S.; as brew-lumes, the vessels used in brewing; milk-lumes, those employed in the dairy; often, in this sense, simply called lumes.
See Sup.

A.S. loma, ge-loma, utensilia. Hence, as Lye observes, the word heirloom is used by E. lawyers, in the sense of hereditaria supellex, i. e. S. the splechrie which one enjoys by heritage.

L O O

LOMON, s. A leg. L pronounced liquid. S.
LOMPNYT, part. pa.

Barbour, when describing the conduct of Bruce, in dragging his ships across the narrow neck of land called the Tarbet, says:

Bot thaim worthyt draw thair schippis thar;
And a myle was betwix the seys;
Bot that wes lompnyt all with treys.
The King his schippis thar gert draw.

The Bruce, xv. 276, MS. Loned, Ed. 1620. p. 294.
Loupnyt. Ed. 1758.

Sibb. renders "lompnit, lonit, hedge-rowed." But the meaning seems to be, that the way, across the neck of land, was prepared for the passage of the ships, by trees being laid in a straight line, on which the ships might slide along; somewhat in the same manner as when vessels are about to be launched. It may be allied to A.S. limp-ian, gelimp-ian, convenire; or Sw. laemp-a, to adapt, to fit. The origin is, however, uncertain; as is even the proper form of the word. If lompnyt be the true reading, as in MS., it may be allied to lamp, applied to the appearance of the ground when covered with the gossamer. V. LAMP, 2. Perhaps it is from Isl. lunn, pl. lunner, Su.G. lunnar, (abl. lunnum, written also lummum, lhre.) phalangae sive truncae teretes et volubiles super quos in terram vel aridum extrahuntur naves per hyemem siccandae vel reparandae; Verel. Ind. This conveys precisely the same idea.

LONACHIES, LONNACHS, s. pl. Couch-grass. S.
LONE, s.

He ladde that ladye so long by the lawe sides,
Under a lone they light lore by a felle.

Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. i. 3.

Perhaps a place of shelter; Isl. logn, Su.G. lugn, tranquillitas aeris. Or it may signify a secret place; Isl. laun, occultatio, loen-bo, furis occultae latebrae.

LONE, s. Provision for an army. S.

LONE, s. An avenue; an entry to a place or village. S.

To LONG,* v. n. To become weary. S.

LONG, adv. Long to, i. e. long to the time. S.

To LONGE, v. n. To tell a fair tale. S.

LONGEIT, pret. Perhaps lodged. S.

LONGIE, s. The Guillemot; the Sea-hen. S.

LONGUEVILLE, s. A species of pear. S.

LONY.

The land lony was, and lie, with lyking and love.

Read loun, as in MS., sheltered. Houlate, i. 2.

LONYNG, s. A narrow enclosed way; a path through which cattle pass to, or return from, their pasture. S.

LONKOR, s. An opening through dykes for sheep. S.

To LOO, v. a. To love. V. LUF, v. S.

LOOF, s. The palm of the hand; pl. looves. V. LUF, v. S.

LOOF-BANE, s. The centre of the palm of the hand. S.

OUTSIDE OF THE LOOF. The back of the hand; that is, rejection and repulse. S.

LOOFY, s. A stroke on the palm of the hand. S.

LOOFIE, s. A flat or plane stone, resembling the palm of the hand; originally used in Curling. S.

LOOFIES, s. pl. Plain mittens for the hands. S.

LOOGAN, s. A rogue, Loth.; synon. with Loun, q. v.

LOOKING-ON, part. pa. Waiting for the exit of one past hope of recovery; as, "They're just lookin on him."

LOOKIN'-TO, s. A prospect in regard to the future; as, "A gude lookin'-to." Syn. To-look, q. v. S.

To LOOL, v. n. To sing in a dull and heavy manner. S.

L O S

LOOM, s. A utensil or instrument, &c. V. LOME.

LOOM, s. Mist; fog. V. LUMMING. S.

LOOMY, adj. Misty; covered with mist. S.

LOOP, s. The channel of any running water that is left dry. Loops. The windings of a river or rivulet. S.

LOOPIE, adj. Crafty; deceitful, S. either, q. one who holds a loop in his hand, when dealing with another; or as allied to Belg. leep, id. See Sup.

LOOR, adv. Rather. V. LEVER.

LOOSSIE, adj. Applied to the skin when it is covered with incrustation or dandruff. S.

LOOT, pret. of v. to Let. Permitted; let, or did let. S.

LOOTEN, part. pa. of v. to Let. Permitted; let. V. LUIT.

LOOVES, s. pl. Palms of the hands. V. LUF, v. S.

To LOPPER. Lopperand, part. pr.

The sweland seis figure of gold clere

Went flowand, but the lopperand wallis quhite

War powderit ful of fomy froith mylk quhite.

Doug. Virgil, 267, 45. Lipperand, MS.

V. LIPPER, v.

LOPPERIS, s. pl. The broken, foamy waves, when the sea is agitated by the wind. V. LIPPER, v.

To LOPPER, v. n. To coagulate. V. LAPPER. S.

LOPPER-GOWAN, s. The Yellow Ranunculus which grows by the sides of streams. S.

LOPPIN, LOPPEN, pret. and part. pa.

Sum to tha erd loppin from the hie touris of stone.

Doug. Virgil, 57, 53.

"Our longsome parliament was hastened to an adjournment, by the sudden and unexpected invasion of Kintyre, by Coll, Mr. Gillespie's sons, who, with 2500 runagates from Ireland, are loppen over there." Baillie's Lett. ii. 48. i. e. Have fled thither, have gone hastily.

A.S. hleop, insiliit, pret. of hleap-an salire. Sw. imperf. lopp, pret. lupit, lupen.

LORE, part. pa. Solitary; forlorn.

He ladde that ladye so long by the lawe sides,

Under a lone they light lore by a felle.

Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. i. 3.

Mr. Pink. renders the term, probably in reference to this passage, low. But here it would seem to signify, that they had separated from the rest of their company, Belg. verlor-en, to lose; as synon. with lorn used by later writers.

LORER, s. Laurel; or an arbour of laurel.

Under a lorer ho was light, that lady so small,

Of box, and of berber, bigged ful bene.

Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. i. 6.

Fr. laurier, a laurel; lauriere, a plot or grove of bay trees. V. Ho.

LORN, s. The Crested Corvorant. S.

To LOS, LoIS, v. a. To unpack; applied to merchandise. S.

LOSANE, s. A lozenge, or rhomboidal figure. S.

To LOSE THE HEAD. To lose strength; to droop. S.

LOSE, Loss, s. Praise; commendation; good name.

Sir Ywayne oft had al the lose,

Of him the word ful wide gose,

Of thair dedes was grete renown.

Ywayne, Ritson's E.M.R. i. 66.

— The lyoun he bure, with loving and loss,

Of silver, semely and sure.— Houlate, ii. 20.

It is used by R. Glouc. and Chaucer.

Hys los sprong so wyde of ys largesse

—To the verrost ende of the world,

That such man was nour non. R. Glouc. p. 181.

This, Mr. Tooke observes, is the past part. of the A.S. hlis-an celebrare. He views the northern word as also the origin of Lat. laus, praise. Divers. Purley, ii. p. 303. V. LoIS.

L O U

LOSEL, s. "Idle rascal; worthless wretch," Gl. See S.
 Away, away, thou thriftless loone,
 I swear thou gettest no alms of mee;
 For if we should hang any loسل heere,
 The first we wold begin with thee.

Ritson's S. Songs, ii. 136. 137.

Tyrwhitt observes, that in the Prompt. Parv. "Losel, or Lorel, or Lurden, is rendered Lurco;" Gl. vo. Lorel. It is perhaps allied to Teut. losigh, ignavus.

LOSH, interj. Expressive of surprise, wonder, or astonishment. Corr. of the name Lord. S.

LOSH-HIDE. Perhaps the skin of a lynx. S.

LOSIN, p. pa. "Ane new sarklosin with black werk." S.

LOSINGEOUR, LOSINGERE, s. 1. A lying flatterer; a deceiver.

For thar with thaim wes a tratour,
 A fals lourdane, a losyngeour,
 Hosbarne to name, maid the tresoun,
 I wate nocht for quhat enchesoun.

Barbour, iv. 108. MS.

Chaucer uses losengeour in the same sense. Fr. lozeng-er to flatter, to cozen, to deceive. Ital. lusingare, Hisp. lisongear, a flatterer; Alem. los guile, losen crafty, losonga guile. V. Menage. Isl. lausingia folk, liars, lausungar ord, a lie; A.S. leasunga, whence E. leasings.

2. A sluggard; a loiterer.

I knew it was past four houris of day,
 And thocht I wald na langare ly in May,
 Les Phebus suld me losingere attaynt.

Doug. Virgil, 404, 11.

It seems used by Douglas rather improperly; as it can scarcely be viewed as a different word, allied to Teut. losigh, leusigh, piger, ignavus.

LOSS, s. Praise. V. LOIS, LOS.

To LOSS, v. a. To unload; applied to a ship. Syn. liver. S.

LOSSING, s. The act of unloading. S.

LOSSIE, adj. Applied to fields of new sprung grain, pulse, &c. in which there are vacancies or empty spots.

LOSSINESS, s. The state of being lossie. S.

LOT, s.

—Lantern to lufe, of ladeis lamp and lot.—

Scott, Bannatyne Poems, p. 202.

Lord Hailes views it as put for laud, praise. From the connexion, it seems rather to signify light; A.S. leoht, Alem. leoht, lioht. It may, however, be used in the former sense, from Ital. lode praise.

LOT,* s. A certain quantity of grain, commonly the twenty-fifth part, given to a thresher as wages. S.

LOT-MAN, s. One who threshes for one boll in a certain number, as in twenty-five, S.

"There are several threshing machines here; but they seem, as yet, to save only a lot-man, as he is called, who threshes for so much the boll." P. Dunbog, Fife. Statist. Acc. iv. 234.

LOTCH, s. A snare; a situation from which one cannot easily extricate one's self, S.

Near to his person then the rogues approach,
 Thinking they had him fast within their lotch;
 And then the bloodhounds put it to the vote,
 To take alive or kill him on the spot.

Hamilton's Wallace, p. 334.

Chauc. latche, id., the same as las; Teut. letse, Ital. laccio; supposed to be formed from Lat. laqueus.

LOTCH. V. BAKIN-LOTCH.

To LOTCH, v. n. To jog; to ride ungracefully. S.

LOTCH, LoATCH, s. A corpulent and lazy person. S.

LOTCH, adj. Lazy. S.

LOTCH, s. A handful of any half-liquid stuff. S.

VOL. II.

57

L O V

LOUABIL, adj. Commendable; praise-worthy.

Reduce ye now into your myndis ilkane
 The wourthy actis of your eldaris bigane,
 Thare louabil fame, and your awin renownee.

Fr. louable, id. V. LOIF, v. Doug. Virgil, 325, 23.

LOUCH, s. (gutt.) 1. A cavity; a hollow place of any kind.

The Lord of Douglas thiddir yeid,
 Quhen he wyst thai war ner cummand,
 And [in] a louch on the ta hand
 Has hys archers enbuschit he,
 And bad thaim hald thaim all priué,
 Quhill that thai hard him rayss the cry.

Barbour, xvi. 386. MS.

2. A cavity containing water; a fountain.

And O thou haly fader Tyberine,— Quhare euer thy louch or fontane may be found,
 Quhare euer so thi spring is, in quhat ground,
 O flude maist plesand, the sal I ouer alquhare
 Hallow with honorabill offerandis euermare.

Doug. Virgil, 242, 28.

Germ. loch apertura, cavitas rotunda, foramen. Loch is also explained latibulum, spelunca. Wachter views these as radically different, but without sufficient reason; Alem. loh, fovea, Fohun habent loh; The foxes have holes; Tatian. ap. Schilter. Otfrid uses luage in the sense of spelunca; A.S. loh barathrum; Isl. lyk concavitas, Verel. Louch, as denoting a fountain, may be from the same root; as Franc. loh signifies, orificium. At any rate, Lye seems mistaken in confounding this with loch, a lake. V. Jun. Etym.

LOUCHING, part. pr. Bowing down; louting. See Sup.

Than fled thay, and sched thay,
 Euery ane from ane vdder,
 Down louching and couthing,
 To fle the flichts of fudder.

Burel's Pilgr. Watson's Coll. ii. 24.

Isl. lyst, laut; at lut-a, pronus fio, procumbo, flecto me prorsum; lutr pronus, lotinn cernuus; G. Andr. A.S. hlut-an. To this fountain undoubtedly ought we to trace E. slouch, which Dr. Johnson inconsiderately derives from Dan. sloff, stupid.

To LOUE, LOVE, v. a. To praise. V. LOIF.

LOVE-BEGOT, s. An illegitimate child. S.

LOVEDARG, s. A piece of work done from a principle of affection, S. V. DAWERK.

LOVE-DOTTEREL, s. That kind of love with which old unmarried men and women are seized. S.

LOVEIT, LOVITE, LOVITT. A forensic term used in charters, dispositions, proclamations, &c. expressive of the royal regard to the person or persons mentioned or addressed. S.

LOVENS, LOVENENS! An exclamation expressive of surprise; often with eh prefixed; as, Eh lovens! S.

LOVEANENDIE, interj. The same as above. S.

LOVERIN-IDDLES, interj. Similar to Losh, q. v. S.

LOVERS-LINKS, s. pl. Stone-crop; Kidneywort. S.

LOVE-TRYSTE, s. A meeting of lovers. S.

LOVERY, LUFRAY, s.

The feynds gave them hait leid to laip;
 Thair lovery wes na less.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 30.

"Their desire was not diminished; their thirst was insatiable." Lord Hailes.

Lufray occurs in the same poems.

Grit God releif Margaret our Quene;
 For and scho war as scho hes bene,
 Scho wald be larger of lufray
 Than all the laif that I of mene,
 For lerges of this new-yeir day.

P. 152. st. 10.

H

It seems to be the same word that occurs in both places, as signifying bounty, in which sense Lord Hailes renders it in the latter passage, from Fr. l'offre. If so, in the former, it is used ironically. It may be allied to Su.G. luf, qui aliis blanditiis inescat, from liuf carus; or from lofiwa, to extend the hand in token of engagement; a derivative from lofiwe, S. lufe, the palm of the hand; whence Su.G. for-lofiware, a surety, one who "strikes hands with" another.

LOUING, s. Praise; commendation.

— Na louingis may do incres thy fame,
Nor na reproche dymynew thy gude name.

Doug. Virgil, 4, 21.

Lowyng, Barbour, id. A.S. lofung laudatio. V. LOIF.

LOVITCH, adj. Corr. from E. lavish. S.

To LOUK, v. a. 1. To lock; to enclose; to embrace.

Luffaris langis only to lok in thare lace
Thare ladyis lufely, and louk but lett or releuis.

Doug. Virgil, 238, a. 36.

2. To surround; to encompass.

Amiddis ane rank tre lurkis a goldin beuch,—
That standis loukit about and adumbrate
With dirk shaddois of the thik wod schaw.

Doug. Virgil, 167, 44.

Moes.G. luk-an, Su.G. Isl. luk-a, A.S. be-luc-an, Belg. luyck-en, claudere. V. LUCKEN.

LOUN, LOWNE, LOWEN, adj. 1. Calm; serene; expressive of the state of the air, S. This seems to be the primary sense.

—In the calm or loune weddir is sene
Aboue the fludis hie, ane fare plane grene,
Ane standyng place, quhar skartis with thare bekkis,
Forgane the son gladly thaym prunyeis and bekis.

Doug. Virgil, 131, 43.

When th' air is calm, and still as dead and deaf,
And vnder heav'n quakes not an aspin leaf,—
And when the variant winde is still and lowne,
The cunning pylot never can be knowne.

Hudson's Judith, p. 8.

Its growin loun; The wind begins to fall, S.

"Lownd, calm and mild," Yorks. Dial. Gl. p. 107. Westmorel. id. "Calm; out of the wind. North." Gl. Grose.

2. Sheltered; denoting a situation screened from the blast, S. lound, Northumb. See Sup.

The land loun was and lie, with lyking and love.

Houlate, i. 2. MS.

The fair forrest with levis, loun and lé,
The fowlis song, and flouris ferly sueit,
Is bot the world, and his prosperité,
As fals plesandis myngit, with cair repleit.

Henrysone, Bannatyne Poems, p. 129.

3. Unruffled; applied to water.

The strene bakwartis vpfloewis soft and still;
Of sic wise meissand his wattir, that he
Ane standand stank semyt for to be,
Or than a smoth pule, or dub, loun and fare.

Doug. Virgil, 243, 3.

"Thir salmond, in the tyme of heruist, cumis vp throw the smal watteris, specialle quhare the watter is maist schauld and loun, and spawnis with thair wamis plet to vthir." Bellend. Descr. Alb. c. 11.

4. Applied metaph. to man. One who has been agitated with passion, or in the rage of a fever, is said to be loun, when his passion or delirium subsides, S.

Ye hae yoursell with yon snell maiden locked,
That winna thole with affsets to be joked;
And sae, my lad, my counsel's ye be loun,
And tak a drink of sic as ye hae brewn.

Ross's Helenore, p. 92.

When the wind falls, we say, It lowdens, or, It's lowdening, S.B. V. LOUN, v.

5. To BE LOUN, or LOWDEN, also signifies to be still, or silent, "to speak little or none in the presence of one of whom we stand in awe." Rudd.

6. Used in relation to concealment, as when any report, or calumny is hushed. "Keep that loun," be silent about that affair. S.

7. Applied to tranquillity of state, habits, or mode of life. S.

LOUNLIE, LOWNLY, adv. 1. In a sheltered state, screened from the wind. 2. Under protection, used in a moral sense. 3. Softly; with a low voice. S.

LOUN, LOWN, s. 1. Tranquillity of the air. 2. Tranquillity in a moral sense. 3. A shelter; as, the loun o' a dike. S.

To SPEAK LOWNE. To speak with a low voice, as in a whisper. S.

Isl. logn, Su.G. lugn, tranquillitas aeris. Logn denotes serenity, both of air and of water. Tha var logn vedurs, logn siöar; Erat tranquillitas aeris, tranquillum mare, Olai Lex. Run. Or, as we would express it, including both the first and the third sense given above; "There was loun weddir, and a loun sea."

Su.G. lugn is also used metaph. as applied to the mind. Hog lugn, tranquillitas animi. Spegelius derives the term from lun, quietness, peace, to which styr, battle, contention, is opposed; Ihre, from laegg-a ponere, as the wind is said to be laid. Og vinden laegdes og thar var logn mykit; Ventus subsedit, et tranquillitas magna facta est. Bibl. Isl. Mark. 4. 39.

Besides Su.G. lugn, Sibb. mentions Isl. lundr sylvæ, which has no connexion; and Moes.G. analaugn occultum. I have sometimes hesitated whether S. loun, with the cognate terms already mentioned, might be allied to Isl. laun, Su.G. lon, clam; lagga a lon, to hide. But the most natural deduction is from Isl. hlaun-ar, aer calescit, et fit blandus, the air becomes warm and mild; hlyn-ar, id. hlyende, calor æthereus; from hloa, to grow warm. Loun has thus a common fountain with lew, tepid, q. v. Although Belg. laauw, tepid, is written differently from luuw, sheltered from the wind, they seem originally the same. Luuw-en is evidently allied to loun; Het begint te luuwen, the wind begins to cease; hence luuwte, a shelter, a warm place.

Lé, lie, sheltered, and lé, shelter, are evidently from the same root. Hence, as appears from the preceding quotations, loun and lé seems to have been a common phrase, in which the same idea was expressed, according to a common pleonasm, by synonym. terms.

I shall only add, that although lowden, mentioned under sense 4. as applied to the wind, when it falls, and also as signifying, to be still, to speak little, might be viewed as allied to Belg. luuwte, it seems preferable to consider it as radically different. Isl. hliod is used in a sense nearly correspondent. Its original signification is, voice, sound. But, like some Heb. words, it also admits a sense directly contrary, denoting silence. Bidia hliods, to demand silence, hliodr, silent, tala i hliodr, to speak with a low voice, hliodlatr, multum tacens; G. Andr. Su.G. liud, silence; kyrhliud, the silence of the temple. V. Liud, Ihre.

To LOUN, LOWN, v. a. To calm; to make tranquil.

The wyndis eik thare blastis lounit sone,
The sey calmyt his fludis plane abone.

Doug. Virgil, 317, 7.

— The dow affrayit dois fle
Furth of her holl, and richt dern wyning wane,
Quhare hir sueit nest is holkit in the stane,
So feirsly in the feildis furth scho spryngis,

Quhill of hyr fard the hous rigging ringis,
And sone eftir scherand the lounyt are,
Down from the hicht discendis soft and fare.

Ibid. 134, 44.

To LOUN, LOWN, v. n. To turn calm, S.

"Blow the wind ne'er so fast, it will loun at the last;"
S. Prov. Kelly, p. 65.

LOUN, LOUNE, LOWN, LOON, s. 1. A rogue; a worthless fellow, S. See Sup.

———— Quod I, Loune, thou leis.

Doug. Virgil, 239, a. 26.

Loun, lyke Mahoun, be boun me till obey.

Dunbar, Evergreen, ii. 59. st. 24.

2. Used as equivalent to whore. S.

It is sometimes applied to a woman. The phrase loun-queyn is very common for a worthless woman, S.B. Hence a female, who hast lost her chastity, is said to have played the loun, S.

Then out and spake him bauld Arthur,

And laugh'd right loud and hie—

"I trow some may has plaid the loun,

"And fled her ain countrie."

Minstrelsy, Border, ii. 75.

Loun is used by Shakespeare for a rascal.

Sibb. refers to Teut. loen homo stupidus, bardus, insulsus; A.S. lun egenus: Lye, to Ir. liun, slothful, sluggish, (Jun. Etym.) which is evidently the same with the Teut.
word. Lye mistakes the sense of it as used in S.; viewing it as agreeing in signification with the Teut. and Ir. terms.
If originally the same with these, it has undergone a very considerable change in its meaning. Mr. Tooke gives loun as the part. pa. of the v. to low, to make low. Divers. Purley, ii. 344. What, if it be rather allied to Moes.G. leygands, A.S. laewend, traditor, proditor, a traitor.
Alem. loug-en signifies to lie; hence loun-a, a falsehood, lügenfeld, campus mendacii, luggenwizagon, false prophets, pseudoprophetae. Could we view loogan, Loth., synon.
with loun, as giving the old pronunciation, it might with great probability be traced to A.S. leog-an mentiri, as being the part. leogende, mentiens, q. a lying person, a liar.
(V. LOUN, 2.) Hence,

LOUNFOW, adj. Rascally, S. from loun and full.

LOUN-ILL, s. Pretended sickness, to escape working. S.

LOUN-LIKE, adj. 1. Having the appearance of a loun, or villain, S. lowner-like, compar.

I'll put no water on my hands,

As little on my face;

For still the lowner-like I am,

The more my trade I'll grace.

Ross's Helenore, Song, p. 141.

2. Shabby; threadbare; applied to dress, S.

LOUNRIE, LOWNRY, s. Villany. See Sup.

Thou—for thy lounrie mony a leisch has fyld.

Dunbar, Evergreen, ii. 53. st. 7.

LOUN, LOWN, s. 1. A boy, S.

Then rins thou down the gate, with gild of boys,

And all the town-tykes hingand at thy heils;

Of lads and louns ther rises sic a noyse,

Quhyle wenchies rin away with cards and quheils.

Dunbar, Evergreen, ii. 59. st. 23.

And Dundee gray, this mony a day,

Is lichtlyt baith be lad and loun. Evergreen, i. 176.

"The usual figure of a Sky-boy, is a loun with bare legs and feet, a dirty kilt, ragged coat and waistcoat, a bare head, and a stick in his hand." Boswell's Journ. p. 264.

2. One in a menial station; an adherent to a superior. S.

It is not improbable that this word originally denoted a servant, as allied to Isl. liodne, lione, servus. Hence liona- tegt, quod est servile, G. Andr.; lionar, legati, Verel.

There is a considerable analogy. For loun, S. is often used to denote a boy hired either occasionally, or for a term, for the purpose of running of errands, or doing work that requires little exertion. In a village, he who holds the plough is often called the lad, and the boy who acts as herd, or drives the horses, the loun. In like manner, lad, a youth, is derived from Isl. lydde servus, Seren.

LOUN'S PIECE, the uppermost slice of a loaf of bread, S.

In Su.G. this is called shalk. Ihre is at a loss to know, whether it be from shal crusta, because it has more of the crust than those slices that are under it. Singulare est, says this learned writer, quod vulgo shalk appellent primum secti panis frustum. He would have reckoned it still more singular, had he known that the S. phrase, loun's piece, is perfectly consonant. It would also have determined him to reject shalk, crusta, as the origin. He has properly given this word under shalk as the root, which primarily signifies a servant; and in a secondary sense, a deceitful man, a rascal, (nebulo) a loun. Now this Su.G. term primarily denoting a servant, and being thus allied to S. loun, as signifying a hired boy; the uppermost slice must, according to analogy, have been denominated shalk, as being the loun's piece, or that appropriated to the servant, perhaps because harder than the lower slices. This coincidence is very remarkable in a circumstance so trivial; and exhibits one of those minute lines of national affinity, that frequently carry more conviction to the mind than what may be reckoned more direct evidence. Dan. shalk, id. "the kissing-crust, the first slice, crust or cut of a loaf;" Wolff.

If we could suppose that loun had been used by our ancestors to denote a servant in general, we might carry the analogy a little farther. We might view this as the primary sense, and rogue, scoundrel, as the secondary. For this process may be remarked, in different languages, with respect to several terms originally signifying service. This has been already seen with respect to Su.G. shalk. In like manner, E. knave, which primarily means a boy, se-condarily a servant, has been used to denote a rascal.
Wachter views Germ. dieb, Su.G. thiuf, a thief, as an oblique sense of Moes.G. thiwe, a servant; as Lat. fur, a thief, was originally equivalent to servus. Both Ihre and Wachter ascribe this transition, in the sense of these terms, to the depraved morals of servants. Cui significationi haud dubie procacia servorum ingenia occasionem dedere;
Ihre, vo. Shalk.

This, however, may have been occasionally, or partly, owing to the pride of masters. Of this, I apprehend, we have a proof in the E. word villain, which, originally denoting one who was transferable with the soil, came gradually to signify "a worthless wretch," from the contempt entertained for a bondman. Perhaps varlet, which formerly conveyed no other idea than that of one in a state of servitude, may be viewed as a similar example.

LOUND, adj. Quiet; tranquil. V. LOUN, LOWN. S.

To LOUNDER, v. a. To beat with severe strokes, S.

The hollin souples, that were sae snell,

His back they loundert, mell for mell.

Jamieson's Popul. Ball. ii. 238.

Instead then of lang days of sweet delyte,

Ae day be dumb, and a' the neist he'll flyte:

And may be, in his barlichoods, ne'er stick

To lend his loving wife a loundering lick.

V. LOUNDIT.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 79.

LOUNDERING, LOUNDERIN', s. A drubbing; a beating. S.

LOUNDER, s. A severe stroke or blow, S.

He hit her twa'r three routs indeid,

And bad her pass sweith from his stead;

"If thou bide here, I'll be thy dead:"

With that gave her a lounder,

L O U

While mouth and nose rusht out of blood;
She staggard also where she stood.

Watson's Coll. i. 43.

—Then, to escape the cudgel, ran;
But was not miss'd by the goodman,
Wha lent him on his neck a lounder,
That gart him o'er the threshold founder.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 530.

LOUNDIR, part. pa. Beaten. See Sup.

That cuddy rung the Dumfries fuil
May him restrane againe this Yuil,
All loundit into yallow and reid,
That lads may bait him lyk a buil.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 108.

This seems to be the origin of lounder; although I cannot even form a conjecture as to the radical term.

To LOUP, v. n. 1. To leap; to spring, S. lope, A. Bor. Pret. lap; also, loppin, q. v.

"As good hads the stirrup as he that louns on;" S. Prov. Ferguson, p. 7.

"He stumbles at a strae, and louns o'er a brae;" Ferguson's S. Prov. p. 19.

"Every one louns o'er the dike, where it is laigest;" S. Prov. Kelly, p. 97.

"He that looks not ere he loip, will fall ere he wit;" S. Prov. Kelly, 97. 147.

Then Lowrie as ane lyoun lap,
And sone ane flane culd fedder;
He hecht to perss him at the pap,
Thairon to wed ane weddir.

Chr. Kirk, st. 12. Chron. S. P. ii. 362.

He lap quhill he lay on his lendis. Ibid. st. 5.

It is also used in a kind of active sense, S.

O Baby, haste, the window loip,
I'll kep you in my arm;
My merry men a' are at the yett,
To rescue you frae harm.

Jamieson's Popul. Ball. ii. 141.

This v. retains the character of the other Northern dialects, more than of A.S. hleap-an, id. Moes.G. hlaup-an, sal-tare, Germ. lauffen, id. Su.G. loep-a, Belg. loop-en, currere.
2. To run; to move with celerity. S.

3. To burst open. Luppen, loppin, burst open, S. See S.

The frost's loppin, a phrase used to signify that the frost, which prevailed during night, has given way about sunrise; which is generally a presage of rain before evening, S.

4. To give way; applied to frost. 5. Applied to a boil or sore, when the skin breaks. S.

6. To cover; used in the same sense with Su.G. loep-a.
De canibus, ubi discursitant veneri operam daturi;
hence loepsk, catuliens; Ihre. Germ. lauffen, Teut. loop-en, catulire, in venerem currere. Lyndsay, Chron. S. P. ii. 164. Warkis, 1592. p. 268.

7. To change masters, to pass from one possessor to another; applied to property.

For why tobacco makes no trouble,—
Except it gar men bleer and bubble,
And merchants whiles winn meikle geir.
Yea sometimes it will make a steir,
Gar swaggerers swear and fill the stoup.
Quoth Conscience, since it came here,
It has gard sindrie lairdships loip.

Many's Truth's Travels, Pennecuik's P. p. 111.

LAND-LOUPER. A vagabond; one who flees the country. S.

To LOUP about. To run hither and thither. S.

To LOUP back. To refuse to stand to a bargain. S.

To LOUP down. Suddenly to refuse to give as much for a commodity as was at first offered. S.

L O U

To LOUP home. To escape to one's own country. S.

To LOUP in. To change one's side or party suddenly. S.

To LOUP on. To mount on horseback. S.

To LOUP on, v. a. To mount; or perhaps to equip. S.

To LOUP out. To run, or spring, out of doors. S.

To LOUP up. Suddenly to demand more for any commodity than was at first asked. S.

To BE LIKE TO LOUP out o' one's skin. To be in a transport of joy. S.

To LOUP, v. a. To burst open; to cause to snap. S.

LOUP, s. A leap; a jump; a spring, S. See Sup.

The King with that blenkit him by,
And saw the twasome sturdely
Agane his man gret mellé ma.
With that he left his awin twa,
And till thaim that faucht with his man
A loip rycht lychtly maid he than;
And smate the hed off the tane.

Barbour, vi. 638. MS.

LOUPING, s. The act of leaping. S.

LOUP, LOUPE, LEAP, s. 1. A small cataract which fishes attempt to leap over; generally a salmon-loip; a waterfall, S.

Be it alwayes understand, that this present Act, nor nathing theirin contained, sall be prejudiciall to his Hienes subjectes, being dewlie infest and in possession of halding of cruves, lines or loupes within fresche waters." Acts Ja. VI. 1581. c. 111.

2. A place where a river becomes so contracted that a person may leap over it. S.

Lines seems used for linns, as equivalent to loupes. The word is still used in this sense.

"The Endrick—then turns due W., rushing over the Loup of Fintry, and inclosing part of the parish within 3 sides of a square."

"—The only curiosity which is universally remarked in this parish, is the above mentioned Loup of Fintry; a cataract of 91 feet high, over which the Endrick pours its whole stream." P. Fintry, Stirlings. Statist. Acc. xi. 381.

Leap occurs in the same sense; but I suspect, that it is the common word Anglified.

"Still farther up the burn, agreeable to the description in the dialogue of the second scene [of the Gentle Shepherd,] the hollow beyond Mary's Bower, where the Esk divides it in the middle, and forms a linn or leap, is named the How Burn." P. Pennycuik, Loth. Append. Statist. Acc. xvii. 611.

It occurs in a sense, although different, yet nearly allied, in other Northern languages: Isl. laupur, alveus, calathus, Su.G. lop, watnlop, the channel of a river; Teut. loop der rivieren, id. These terms, denoting the channel or course of a river, are from Su.G. loep-a, &c. as signifying currere, to run. Our word is from the same v. in the sense of saltare, to leap or spring.

LOVER'S LOUP. A leap over a precipice or waterfall which a despairing lover may take when he means to terminate his griefs at once. Several places in Scotland have received this name from tradition. S.

LOUPING AGUE. A disease resembling St. Vitus's dance, Ang.

"A singular kind of distemper, called the louping ague, has sometimes made its appearance in this parish. The patients, when seized, have all the appearances of madness; their bodies are variously distorted; they run, when they find an opportunity, with amazing swiftness, and over dangerous passes; and when confined to the house, they jump, and climb in an astonishing manner, till their strength be exhausted. Cold Bathing is found to be the most effectual remedy." P. Craig, Forfars. Statist. Acc. ii. 496.

"There is a distemper, called by the country people the leaping ague, and by physicians, St. Vitus's dance, which has prevailed occasionally for upwards of 60 years in these parishes, and some of the neighbouring ones. The patient first complains of a pain in the head, and lower part of the back; to this succeed convulsive fits, or fits of dancing at certain periods. This disease seems to be hereditary in some families. When the fit of dancing, leaping, or running, seizes the patient, nothing tends more to abate the violence of the disease, than the allowing him free scope to exercise himself in this manner till nature be exhausted." P. Lethnot, Forfars. Ibid. iv. 5.

Leaping ague must be an error of the press; as louping is the term invariably used.

LOUPEN-STECK, s. 1. Literally a broken stitch in a stocking. 2. Metaph. any thing wrong. S.

To TAKE UP A LOUPEN-STECK. To remedy an evil. S.

LOUPIN-ILL, LOUPING-ILL, s. A kind of paralytic disease of sheep which causes them to spring up and down when moving forward. S.

LOUP-THE-BULLOCKS, s. The game called Leap-frog. S.

LOUP-THE-DYKE, adj. Giddy; unsettled; runaway. S.

LOUP-THE-TETHER, adj. Breaking loose from restraint; rambling. V. LAND-LOUPING. S.

LOUPIN-ON-STANE, s. A stone, or several stones raised one above another, like a flight of steps, for assisting one to get on horseback, S. Hence, metaph. To cum aff at the loupin-on-stane, S. to leave off any business in the same state as when it was begun; also, to terminate a dispute, without the slightest change of mind in either party. See Sup.

LOUPEGARTHIE, s. The gantelope, or gantlet. S.

LOUP-HUNTING, s. Hae ye been a loup-hunting? a phrase commonly used, by way of query, S.B. It is addressed to one who has been abroad very early in the morning, and contains an evident allusion to the hunting of the wolf in former times. Fr. loup, a wolf. See Sup.

LOUR, s. A lass who pretends love merely as a lure. S.

LOURD.

Enouch of blood by me's bin spilt,
Seek not your death frae mee;
I rather lourd it had been my sel,
Than eather him or thee.

Gil Morrice, Ritson's S. Songs, ii. 165.

In Gl. "wished?" But it seems merely a tautology, lourd signifying rather, as lewar, loor. V. LEVER.

LOURD, adj. Dull; lumpish; gross; sottish. S.

LOURDLY, adv. Stupidly; sottishly. S.

LOURDNES, s. Surly temper.

This Kyng Edward lyklyly
Hys prynccehad chaungyd in tyrandry,
And in lourdnies hys ryaltè.
That suld hawe bene of grete pytè.

V. LOWRYD.

Wyntown, vii. 10. 373.

To LOURE, v. n. To lurk. See Sup.

This cruel monstoure Alecto on ane
Infect with fel venom Gorgonayne,
Socht first to Latium, and the chimes hie
Of Laurentyne the Kingis cheif cieté;
And priuely begouth to wach and loure
About his spous Quene Amatais bour.

Doug. Virgil, 218, 31.

— The ilk Furie pestilentiale that houre

61

Ful priuely in the derne wod dyd loure

To cast on thame slely hyr fereful rage.

Latet, Virg.

Ibid. 225, 15.

This is indeed allied to E. lowre, lower, to frown, as Jun. and Rudd. conjecture, in as far as they are both connected with Teut. loer-en. But the E. word retains one sense, retortis oculis intueri, also, frontem contrahere; the S. another, observare insidiose, insidiari. Germ. laur-en has both senses, insidiari; also, limis oculis intueri; whence laur, a lurker. In other languages the v. is used only in one sense; Su.G. lur-a, oculis auribusque insidiari; Isl. lure, more aluri in insidiis latere; Dan. lur-er, to lurk, to watch, to lie sneaking or in ambush; whence lur, an ambush, lurer, a lurker. This is undoubtedly the origin of E. lurk, which Seren. and Ihre both trace to Su.G. lurk, Isl. lurkr mendicus vagus, homo rudis et subdolos. But Verel. explains lurkr as simply signifying a staff, clava, baculus. It is the compound designation, lurkr landafægir, which he renders, mendicus vagus, cui in manu scipio, et rotunda patera vel lagena, ad excipiendum potum datum. This is almost the very description that a Scotsman would give of a sturdy-beggar; one who wanders through the country with a pike-staff, and a cap in his hand, for receiving his almess.

LOURSHOUTHER'D, adj. Round-shouldered. S.

LOUSANCE, s. A freedom from bondage.

"It is not a death, but lousance;" S. Prov. "that is, a recovery of freedom from bondage;" Kelly, p. 54.

This is a Goth. word, with a Fr. termination.

To LOUSE, LOWSE, v. a. 1. To unbind; E. to loose.

2. To free from encumbrance of pecuniary obligation.

3. To take out of the hold of a ship; the reverse of stow. 4. To release; as to louse a pawn; to redeem a pledge. 5. To pay for; as, "Gie me siller to louse my coals." S.

LOWSE LEATHER. 1. A phrase denoting the skin that hangs loose about the chops or elsewhere, when one has fallen off in flesh; as, "He's a hantle lowse leather about his chafts. 2. A person who sets no guard on his talk is said to have o'er meikle lowse leather about his lips. S.

LOWSE SILLER. Small change, in silver coin. S.

To LOUSE, v. n. To give over work of any kind. S.

To LOUSE, LOWSE, v. n. When the udder of a cow begins to shew the first appearance of containing milk, she is said to be lowsing. S.

To LOUT, LOWT v. n. 1. To bow down the body, S.

Bot Dares walkis about rycht craftelie,

— Lurkand in harnes wachis round about,

Now this tocum, new by that way gan lout,

Quhare best he may cum to his purpois sone.

Doug. Virgil, 142, 35.

2. To make obeisance.

And quhen Dowglas saw hys cummyng,

He raid, and hailst hym in hy,

And lowtyt him full curtasly.—Barbour, ii. 154. MS.

Here it is used actively. R. Brunne subjoins the preposition, p. 42.

The folk vntille Humber to Suane gan thei loute.

Johnson mentions lout as now obsolete. It is still used as a provincial term, A. Bor. A.S. hlut-an, Isl. Su.G.

lut-a, Dan. lud-er, incurvare se; whence lutr, bowed, and

Isl. lotning, which denotes not only submission, but religious worship. Spelm. and Jun. view this as the origin of O.E. lout, lowt, a subject, a servant, from the homage or obeisance required by his superior. But it seems rather from A.S. leod plebs, populus, Germ. leute. V. Spelm.

vo. Leudis. V. also UNDERLOUT.

L O W

LOUT-SHOUTHER'D, LOUT-SHOULDERED, adj. 1. Having shoulders bending forward; round-shouldered. 2. Metaph. applied to a building, one side of which is not perpendicular, S. V. LOUT, v.

To LOUTCH, (pron. loutch), v. n. 1. To bow down the head and make the shoulders prominent. 2. To have a suspicious or blackguard-like look. 3. "To gang loutchin' about;" to go about in a loitering way. S.

LOUTHE, s. Abundance. S.

To LOUTHER, v. n. 1. To be entangled in mire or snow, Ang.

Isl. ludra, demissus cedere, uti canes timidi, vel mancipia dum vapulant; G. Andr.; Isl. ledia limus, coenum, might seem allied. I suspect, however, that this is the same with the v. LEWDER, q. v.

2. To walk with difficulty; generally applied to those who have short legs, Ang. See Sup.

This is undoubtedly the same with Lewder.

LOUTHERING, part. Doing any thing awkwardly. S.

LOUTHER, s. An awkward good-for-nothing person. S.

LOUVER, s. The lure of a hawk. S.

To LOW, v. n. 1. To flame; to blaze, S. part. pr. lowan.

Ah! wha cou'd tell the beauties of her face?

Her mouth, that never op'd but wi' a grace?

Her een, which did with heavenly sparkles low?

Her modest cheek, flush'd with a rosie glow?

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 17.

When stocks that are half rotten lowes,

They burn best, so doth dry broom kowes.

Cleland's Poems, p. 34.

2. To flame with rage, or any other passion, S.

My laureat liems at thee, and I lows.

Kennedy, Evergreen, ii. 48.

A vulgar mode of speech for low.

Gower uses loweth, as signifying kindles.

For he that hye hertes loweth

With fyry dart, whiche he throweth,

Cupido, whiche of loue is god,

In chastisyng hath made a rod

To dryue away her wantounesse.

Conf. Am. Fol. 70. a.

3. Used to express the parching effect of great thirst. S.

Isl. log-a, Su.G. laag-a, ardere, flagrare; Alem. loghent flammant. V. the s.

Low, LOWE, s. 1. Flame; blaze, S. A. Bor. See Sup.

Na mar may na man [fyr] sa cowyr

Than low, or rek sall it discowyr.

Barbour, iv. 124. MS.

The lemand low sone lanssynt apon hycht.

Wallace, vii. 429. MS.

Of lightnes sal thou se a lowe,

Unnethes thou sal thi-selven knowe.

Ywaine, v. 343. Ritson's E. M. Rom. i. 15.

2. Used metaphor. for rage, desire, or love.

That, quod Experience, is trew;

Will flatterit him quhen first he flew;

Will set him in a low.

Cherrie and Slae, st. 54. Evergreen, ii. 133.

Isl. Dan. loge, Su.G. loga, laaga, Alem. lauga, Germ. lohe, id. Perhaps the common origin is Moes.G. liug-an lucere, whence liuhad ignis, fire. Our term has less affinity to A.S. leg, lig, flamma, than to any of the rest. It may be observed, that Isl. log-a signifies to diminish, to dilapidate, to consume; but whether allied to loge, flame, seems doubtful.

Junius has a curious idea with respect to Goth. orlog, battle, a word that has greatly puzzled etymologists. He views it as composed of or, great, and log, flame, q. the great flame that extends far and wide. Etym. vo. Brand.

L O W

To LOW, v. a. To higgie about a price. S.

To LOW, v. n. To stop; to stand still; used negatively. S.

To LOWDEN, v. n. 1. Used to signify that the wind falls, S.B.

2. To speak little; to stand in awe of another, S.B.

It is also used actively, in both senses. "The rain will lowden the wind," i. e. make it to fall; and, "He has got something to lowden him;" or, to bring him into a calmer state; S.B. V. LOUN, adj. See Sup.

LOWDER, LOUTHERTREE, s. 1. A handspoke used for lifting the miln-stones. 2. Any long stout rough stick. 3. A stroke or blow, S. See Sup.

Into a grief he past her frae,

And in a feiry farry

Ran to the mill and fetcht the lowder,

Wherewith he hit her on the show'der,

That he dangt a to drush like powder.

Watson's Coll. i. 44.

Can this be derived from Isl. ludr mola, molitoria? (G.

Andr.) perhaps for molitura.

LOWDING, s. Praise, q. lauding.

Quhat pryce or lowding, quhen the battle ends,

Is sayd of him that overcomes a man;

Him to deffend that nowther dow nor can?

Henryson, Evergreen, i. 192.

LOWE, s. Love.

Than pray we all to the Makar abow,

Quhilk has in hand off justry the ballance,

That he vs grant off his der lestand lowe.

V. LUF.

Wallace, vi. 102. MS.

LOWIE, s. A drone; a large, soft, lazy person. S.

LOWIE-LEBBIE, s. One that hangs on about kitchens. S.

LOWYING, part. adj. Idling; lounging. S.

LOWINS, s. pl. In distillation, liquor after it has once passed through the still; perhaps corr. of low wines. S.

LOWIS, s. The Island of Lewis. V. LEWS. S.

LOWKIS, s. The city of Lucca in Italy. S.

LOW-LIFED, adj. Mean; having low propensities. S.

LOWN, adj. Calm, &c. V. LOUN.

LOWNDRER, s. A lazy wretch.

— Repruwand thame as sottis wyle,

Syne thai mycht doutles but peryle

Tyl thame and all thare lynyage,

That lordschipe wyn in herytage,

For to leve it fayntly,

And lyve as lowndreris cayttevely.

Wyntown, ii. 8. 106.

"Q. lourdaner. See Lourdane," Gl. Sibb. But with far more reason, Mr. MacPherson derives it from Teut. lunderer cunctator, dilator; lunder-en cunctari, morari. The origin is probably Su.G. lund intervallum. Hence Isl. bid-lund, expectatio, mora, Verel.; mora concessa, Ihre; the time that any one is allowed to stay.

LOWRYD, adj. Surly; ungracious.

Set this abbot wes messyngere,

This kyng made hym bot lowryd ehere:

Nowthir to mete na maungery

Callyd thai this abbot Den Henry.

Wyntown, viii. 10. 116.

By the sense given to this Mr. MacPherson seems to view it as allied to the E. v. lower, to appear gloomy.

LOWRIE, LAWRIE, s. 1. A designation given to the fox; sometimes used as a kind of surname, S.

Then sure the lasses, and ilk gaping coof,

Wad rin about him, and had out their loof.

M. As fast as fleas skip to the tate of woo,

Whilk slee Tod Lowrie hads without his mow.

L O W

When he to drown them, and his hips to cool,
In summer days slides backward in a pool.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 143.

He said; and round the courtiers all and each
Applauded Lawrie for his winsome speech.

Ibid. ii. 500.

2. A crafty person; one who has the disposition of a fox. See Sup.

Had not that blessit bairne bene borne.

Sin to redres,

Lowries, your liues had bene forlorne

For all your Mes. Spec. Godly Sangs, p. 38.

The name Tod Lowrie is given to this animal in S. in the same manner as in E. he is called Reynard the Fox, and perhaps for a similar reason. The latter designation is immediately from Fr. renard, a fox. This Menage derives from raposo, a name given to the fox in Spain and Portugal, from rabo, a tail; as he supposes that Reynard has received this designation from the grossness of his tail. But what affinity is there between raposo and renard. It is worth while to attend to the process, that the reader may have some idea of the pains that some etymologists have taken, as if intentionally, to bring ridicule on this important branch of philology.

This word must be subjected to five different transmutations, before it can decently assume the form of renard. The fox himself, with all the craft ascribed to him, could not assume so great a variety of shapes, as Menage has given to his name. Raposo is the origin of Renard. "The change," he says, "has been effected in this manner: Raposo, raposus, raposinus, rasinus, rasinardus, renardus, Renard!" Quod erat demonstr.

The author sagely subjoins; "This etymon displeases me not. On the contrary, I am extremely well pleased with it."

But it would be cruel to torture Reynard himself so unmercifully, notwithstanding his accumulated villanies. The writer had no temptation whatsoever to do such violence to his name. For this term, like many others in the Fr. language, is undoubtedly of Goth. origin. Isl. reinicke signifies a fox, from reinki, crafty, to which Germ. raenke, Dan. renk, fraudes, versutiae, correspond.

Hisp. raposo may be from Lat. rapio, -ere, to snatch away, or Su.G. raef, Isl. ref-r, a fox, whence perhaps refiur, technae, deceptiones, stratagems. Ihre mentions Pers. roubah, Fenn. rewon, as also denoting this animal.

Henryson expresses his S. designation, as if he had viewed it as the common diminutive used for the proper name Lawrence. But for this supposition, if really made by him, there is no foundation. Speaking of the fox, he says,—

Lawrence the actis and the proceis wrait.

Bannatyne Poems, p. 112. st. 14.

This agrees to what he had formerly said:

The fox wes clerk and notar in that caus.

P. 110. st. 5.

The name might seem formed from Corn. luern, Arm. luarn, vulpes. But it is more probably of Goth. extract. It has been seen, that Fr. renard appears nearly allied to some Northern terms denoting craft. Ihre thinks that the fox in Moes.G. was denominated fauho, from its favo or yellow colour, and that hence its Germ. name fuchs is formed. But Wachter, with greater probability, deduces the latter, whence E. fox, from fah-en dolo capere, Isl. fox-a decipere, fox false; as, raup fox, a false sale; Verel. It is therefore probable, from analogy, that lowrie owes its origin to some root expressive of deception.

Sibb. has materially given the same etymon that had occurred to me; "Teut. lorer, fraudator; lorerye, fraus, lore, illecebra." The designation may have been immediately formed from our old v. loure, to lurk, q. v. I need only add to what is there said, that Fr. leurr-er and E. lure, are evidently cognate terms. Not only Teut. lorer, but loer, denotes one who lays snares.

L U C

It is impossible to say, whether the term has been first applied to the fox, or to any artful person. Its near affinity to the v. loure would seem to render the latter most probable.

LOWRIE-LIKE, adj. Having the crafty look of a fox. S.

LOWTTIE, adj. Heavy and inactive. S.

LOZEN, s. A pane of glass, S. corrupted from lozenge; so called from its form. See Sup.

LUB, s. Any thing heavy and unwieldy. S.

LUBBA, s. A name given to coarse grass of any kind; Orkney.

"As to hills,—they are covered with heath, and what we call lubba, a sort of grass which feeds our cattle in the summer time; it generally consists of different species of carices, plain bent, and other moor grasses." P. Birsay, Statist. Acc. xiv. 316.

Isl. lubbe conveys the idea of rough, hirsutus; kua lubbe, boleti vel fungi species; G. Andr. p. 171. c. 2. He derives it from lafe, haereo, pendulus lacer sum. Dan. lu, lwo, the nap of clothes; lubben, gross.

In Isl. lubbe we perceive the origin of E. lubber. For it is also rendered, hirsutus et incomptus nebulo; q. a rough tatty-headit lown, S.

This term appears nearly in its primitive Goth. form in O. E.

Hermets an heape, with hoked staues,
Wenten to Walsingham, & her wenches after.
Great loubies & long, that loth were to swinke,
Clothed hem in copes, to be knowen from other,
And shopen hem hermits, her ease to haue.

P. Ploughman, Sign. A. 1, b.

Lubberly fellows assumed the sacerdotal dress, or appeared as hermits, because they were unwilling to swinke, i. e. to labour.

LUBBERTIE, adj. Lazy; sluggish. E. lubberly. S.

LUBIS, LUBYES, LUBBIS, adj. Of, or belonging to Lubec.

LUCE, s. Scurf; the same with Luss, q. v. S.

LUCE, s. Brightness. S.

LUCHKTAEH, s. The body-guard of a chief. S.

LUCHT, LUGHT, s. A lock of hair. S.

LUCHTER, s. A handful of corn in the straw. S.

To LUCK, v. n. To have good or bad fortune, S. See S.

Quhair part has perisht, part prevaild,

Alyke all cannot luck. Cherrie and Slae, st. 103.

Teut. ghe-luck-en, Su.G. lyck-as, Isl. leik-ast, Dan. lykk-es, to prosper. Ihre derives lyck-as from lik-a, to please; as Wachter, gluch, fortune, from gleich-en, which is synon. with lik-a.

LUCK, s. Upon luck's head, upon chance. S.

LUCKEN, part. pa. 1. Closed; shut up; contracted.

See Sup.

Lucken-handed, having the fist contracted, the fingers being drawn down towards the palm of the hand, S. "close fisted," Gl. Shirr. "Hence," says Rudd. vo. Louk,—"the man with the lucken hand in Th. Rhymer's Prophecies, of whom the credulous vulgar expect great things." The same ridiculous idea, if I mistake not, prevails in the north of Ireland. This man is to hold the horses of three kings, during a dreadful and eventful battle. I am not certain, however, if this remarkable person does not rather appear with two thumbs on each hand.

Lucken-taed, also, lucken-footed, web-footed, having the toes joined by a film, S.

"This [Turtur maritimus insulae Bass] is palmipes, that's lucken-footed." Sibbald's Hist. Fife, p. 109

L U C

- Chaucer uses loken in a similar sense. "Loken in every lith," contracted in every limb. Nonne's Preestes T. v. 14881.
2. Webbed; having the toes joined. S.
3. Locked; bolted.
- Rudd. thinks that "the Lucken-booths in Edinburgh have their name, because they stand in the middle of the High-Street, and almost joyn the two sides of it." Vo. Louk. But the obvious reason of the designation is, that these booths were distinguished from others, as being so formed that they might be locked during night, or at the pleasure of the possessor.
- A.S. locen signifies clausura, retinaculum. But the term is evidently the part. of luc-an, to lock. V. Louk, v.
- To LUCKEN, LUKEN, v. a. 1. To lock, S.
- Baith our hartis ar ane,
Luknyt in lufis chene. Scott. Chron. S. P. iii. 169.
2. Metaph. used to denote the knitting of the brows as expressive of great displeasure.
- His trusty-true twa-hannit glaive
Afore him swang he manfullie,
While anger lucken'd his dark brows,
And like a wood-wolf glanst his ee.
Jamieson's Pop. Ball. ii. 173.
3. To gather up in folds; to pucker; applied to cloth. S.
- This v. is formed from the part. Lucken.
- LUCKEN or LUKIN GOWAN. The globe flower, S. Trollius europaeus, Linn.; q. the locked or Cabbage daisy. V. LIGHTFOOT, p. 296. See Sup.
- Let all the streets, the corners, and the rewis
Be strowd with leaves, and flowres of divers hewis;—
With mint and medworts, seemlie to be seen,
And lukein gowans of the medowes green.
Hume, Chron. S. P. iii. 379. 380.
- We'll pou the daizies on the green,
The lucken gowans frae the bog.
Ramsay's Poems, ii. 227.
- To LUCKEN, v. n. To adhere; to grow close together. S.
- LUCKEN-BROWED, adj. Having the eyebrows close on each other. S.
- LUCKEN, s. A bog; a morass. S.
- LUCKEN, s. An unsplit haddock half dry. S.
- LUCKY-PROACH, s. The Fatherlasher, a fish. S.
- LUCKIE, LUCKY, s. 1. A designation given to an elderly woman, S.
- As they drew near, they heard an elderin dey,
Singing full sweet at milking of her ky.—
And Lucky shortly follow'd o'er the gate.
With twa milk buckets frothing o'er, and het.
Ross's Helenore, p. 77.
- How does auld honest lucky of the glen?
Ye look baith hale and fair at threescore-ten.
Ramsay's Poems, ii. 96.
- Fair* ought to be feer or ferre.
2. A grandmother, Gl. Shirr. often luckie-minny, S.B. ibid.
- I'll answer, sine, Gae kiss ye'r lucky,
She dwells i' Leith. Ramsay's Poems, ii. 351.
- "A cant phrase, from what rise I know not; but it is made use of when one thinks it is not worth while to give a direct answer, or think themselves foolishly accused." Ibid. N.
- Perhaps it signifies, that the person seems to have got no more to do than to make love to his grand-mother.
- Luckie-daddie*, grandfather, S.B.
- We shou'd respect, dearly belov'd,
Whate'er by breath of life is mov'd.
First, 'tis unjust; and, secondly,
— 'Tis cruel, and a cruelty

L U C

- By which we are expos'd (O sad!)
To eat perhaps our lucky dad.
Ramsay's Poems ii. 507.
- The gentles a' ken roun' about,
He was my lucky-deddy.
Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 15.
- "Ha'd your feet, luckie daddie, old folk are not feery;"
S. Prov. Kelly, p. 164.
3. Used, in familiar or facetious language, in addressing a woman, whether advanced in life or not, S.
- Well, Lucky, says he, hae ye try'd your hand Upon your milk, as I gae you command?
Ross's Helenore, p. 125.
4. Often used to denote "the mistress of an alehouse." S. V. Gl. Ross.
- It did ane good to see her stools,
Her boord, fire-side, and facing-tools;—
Basket wi' bread.
Poor facers now may chew pea-hools,
Since Lucky's dead.
Elegy on Lucky Wood, Ramsay, i. 229.
- "Lucky Wood kept an ale-house in the Canongate; was much respected for hospitality, honesty, and the neatness of her person and house." N. ibid. p. 227.
- The source is uncertain. Originally, it may have been merely the E. adj., used in courtesy, in addressing a woman, as we now use good. This idea is suggested by the phraseology of Lyndsay, when he represents a tippling husband as cajoling his obstreperous wife.
- Ye gaif me leif, fair lucky dame.
— Fair lucky dame, that war grit schame,
Gif I that day sowld byid at hame.
— All sall be done, fair lucky dame.
Lyndsay, S. P. R. ii. 8. 9.
- It may, however, have been applied to an old woman, primarily in contempt, because of the ancient association of the ideas of age and witchcraft; Isl. hlok, maga. Hlokk is also the name of one of the Valkyriar, Parcae, or Fates of the Gothic nations; Grimmismalum, ap. Keyser, Antiq. Septent. p. 153.
- Louke* is a term used by Chaucer, in a bad sense, although of uncertain meaning.
- Ther n'is no thefe without a louke,
That helpeth him to wasten and to souke
Of that he briben can, or borwe may.
Coke's T. v. 4413.
- This has been explained, "a receiver to a thief." But he seems evidently to use it as equivalent to trull.
- LUCKIE'S-MUTCH, s. Monkshood, an herb. S.
- LUCKY, adj. Bulky; full; extending the due length; superabundant; as, Lucky measure, S.
- "The lucky thing gives the penny;" S. Prov. "If a thing be good, the bulkier the better; an apology for big people." Kelly, p. 334.
- It is also used adv. for denoting any thing exuberant, or more than enough. It's lucky muckle, it is too large, S.
- But she was shy, and held her head askew;
And cries, Lat be, ye kiss but lucky fast;
Ye're o'er well us'd, I fear, since we met last.
Ross's Helenore, p. 82.
- Our acquaintance was but lucky short,
For me or ony man to play sic sport. Ibid. p. 83.
- This use of the word has probably originated from a custom which seems pretty generally to have prevailed, of giving something more to a purchaser than he can legally claim, to the luck of the bargain, as it is called, S. or to the to-luck, S.B. V. next word, and TO-LUCK.
- LUCK-PENNY, s. A small sum given back by the person who receives money in consequence of a bargain, S. lucks-penny, S.B.

L U F

"A drover had sold some sheep in the Grassmarket last Wednesday morning.—In the afternoon the drover received his payment from the butcher's wife, and not only went away content, but returned a shilling, as luck-penny." Edin. Even. Courant, 28 Oct. 1805.

This custom has originated from the superstitious idea of its ensuring good luck to the purchaser. It is now principally retained in selling horses and cattle. So firmly does the most contemptible superstition take hold of the mind, that many, even at this day, would not reckon that a bargain would prosper, were this custom neglected.

LUCKRAS, s. A cross-grained, cankered gudewife. S. To LUCRIFIE, v. a. To get in the way of gain; to gain. S. LUDE, part. pa. Loved; beloved, S.

Quhat hes marrit thé in thy mude,
Makyne, to me thow schaw;
Or quhat is luve, or to be lude?
Faine wald I leir that law.

V. LUF, v. Bannatyne Poems, p. 98. st. 2.

LUDE. Contraction for love it, S.
And quha trowis best that I do lude,
Skink first to me the kan.

Bannatyne Poems, p. 177. st. 16.

LUDIBRIE, s. Derision; object of mockery. S.

To LUE, v. a. To love. S.

LUELY, adv. Softly. S.

LUELY, s. A fray. S.

To LUF, LUVE, LUWE, v. a. To love, S. lue, pron. with the sound given to Gr. v.

Luf euery wicht for God, and to gud end,
Thame be na wise to harm, bot to amend.
That is to know, luf God for his gudenes,
With hart, hale mynd, trew seruice day and nycht.
Doug. Virgil, Prol. 95, 48.

Luffis, lovest, ibid. 42.

—He luwyd God, and haly kyrk
Wyth wyt he wan hys will to wyrke.

Wyntown, vi. 9. 29.

Luwand he wes, and rycht wertwus,
Til clerkys, and all relygyus. Ibid. vii. 6. 7.

A.S. luf-ian, Alem. liub-en, id. Moes.G. liub-a dilectus,
Su.G. liuf gratus, Isl. liufr amicus, blandus.

LUF, LUVE, s. Love.

O luf, quidder art thou joy, or fulyschnes,
That makys folk so glayd of thair dystres?
Doug. Virgil, 93, 34.

LUFARE, adj.

Of bestis sawe I mony diuerse kynd.—
The percyng lynx, the lufare vnicorn,
That voidis venym with his euoure horn.
King's Quair, c. v. st. 3. 4.

The poet represents the unicorn as a more pleasant, or perhaps more powerful, animal than the lynx; especially from the idea of his horn being a safeguard against poison, as it was formerly believed, that it would immediately burst, if any deleterious liquid were poured into it. A.S. leofre, gratior, potior, compar. of leof carus, exoptatus.

LUFFAR, s. A lover, pl. luffaris.

Quhat? Is this luf, nyce luffaris, as ye mene,
Or fals dissait, fare ladyis to begyle?
Doug. Virgil, 95, 8.

LUFLELY, adv. Kindly; lovingly.

—Thar capitane
Tretyt thaim sa luflely,
And thair with all the maist party
Off thaim, that armyt with him wer,
War of his blud, and sib him ner.
Barbour, xvii. 315, MS. lovingly, Ed. 1620.

VOL. II.

65

L U G

A.S. lufelic lovely, whence O.E. lufly.

Befor the messengers was the maiden brouht,
Of body so gentille was non in erth wrouht,
No non so faire of face, of spech so lufly.

R. Brunne, p. 30.

LUSOM, LUSOME, adj. Lovely. The f is now sunk in pronunciation, S. See Sup.

—A lady, lufsom of lete, ledand a knight,
Ho raykes up in a res bifer the rialle.

V. LAIT, and RIAL. Sir Gawain and Sir Gal. ii. 1.

A.S. lofsum, delectabilis; lufsumlie, desiderabilis.

LUFE, LUIF, LUFFE, LOOF, s. The palm of the hand;
pl. luffis, Doug. luves; S. luve, also lufe, A Bor.

Syr, quhen I dwelt in Italy,
I leirit the craft of palmestry.
Schaw me the luffe, Syr, of your hand,
And I sall gar yow undirstand
Gif your Grace be unfortunat,
Or gif ye be predestonat. Lyndsay, S.P.R. ii. 120.
Na laubour list thay luke tyl, thare luffis are bierd lyme. Doug. Virgil, 238, b. 26.

This is a very ancient word; Moes.G. lofa. Lofam slohun ina; Did strike him with the palms of their hands; Mark xiv. 65. Su.G. lofwe, Isl. lofi, loofve, loove, vola manus; whence loefd a span, loef-a to span, loefatak plausus, G. Andr., the clapping of the hands; also, stipulatio manualis. Dan. luen, vola, differs in form. Wachter, vo. Law, refers to Celt. llaw the hand, and Gr. λεως, id. plur. He views llaw as the radical term. Lhuyd mentions thau as signifying, not only the hand, but the palm of the hand; and Ir. lamh, pron. lav, the hand; whence lamhach a glove, lamhagan, groping, &c. These terms are retained in Gael. The word has thus been common to the Goth. and Celt. tribes. See Sup.

No similar term occurs in A.S. Always where Ulphilas uses lofa, we find another word in the A.S. version.

LUFEFOW, LUIFFUL, s. As much as fills the palm of the hand.

He maid him be the fyre to sleip;
Syne cryit, Colleris, beif and coillis,
Hois and schone with doubill soillis;
Caikis and candell, creische and salt,
Curnis of meill, and luiffullis of malt.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 314.

LUFFIE, s. 1. A stroke on the palm of the hand, S. Syn. pawmie, pandie. 2. A sharp reproof, or expression of displeasure in one way or another. See Sup. Moes.G. slahlofi, alapa. Gaf slahlofin. Dedit alapam, John xviii. 22. This is from slah-an to strike, and lofa the palm of the hand. It properly denotes a stroke with the palm.

To LUFF, s. To praise; to commend. V. LOIF, v.

LUFLY, adj. Worthy of praise or commendation; applied both to persons and to things.

Thus thai mellit, and met with ane stout stevin.
Thir lufly ledis on the land, without legiance,
With seymely scheidis to schew thai set upone sevin.
Gawan and Gol. iii. 2.

Thai lufly ledis belife lightit on the land.
And laught out swerdis lufly and lang. Ibid. ii. 25.

Isl. loftig, Teut. loftick, laudabilis.

Lufly, or loofly, is applied to a person who is apt to strike another, Ang. But there is no affinity.

LUFRAY, s. V. LOVERY.

LUFRENT, s. Affection; love. S.

LUG, s. 1. The ear; the common term for this member of the body in S. as well as A. Bor. See Sup.

—“He sall be put vpon the pillorie, and sall be convoyed to the head and chief place of the towne, and his taker sall cause cutt ane of his lugges. His taker sall cause his other lug to be cutted." Burrow Lawes, c. 121, s. 3. 4. V. TRONE.

L U G

"Ye canna make a silk purse o' a sow's lug;" Ferguson's S. Prov. p. 35.

This term is used by E. writers, but in a derisory sense. —With hair in characters, and lugs in text.

Cleaveland's Poems, Ray.

2. The short handle of any vessel when it projects from the side; as, the lug of a bicker, &c. S.

3. At the lug of, near; in a state of proximity, S.

"Ye live at the lug of the law;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 83.

4. Up to the lugs in any thing, quite immersed in it, S. It has been supposed that this phrase alludes to one's drinking out of a two-handed beaker. It may, however, refer to immersion in water.

5. If he were worth his lugs, he would do, or not do, such a thing; a phrase vulgarly used to express approbation or disapprobation, S.

The same idea has been also familiar with the E. in an early age. Langland, speaking of the absurd custom of pretending to sell pardons, says:

Were the bishop blessed, and worth both his cares,
His seale shold not be sent to deceyue the people.

P. Ploughman, A. ii. a.

This proverbial phrase has most probably had its origin from the custom of cutting off the ears; a punishment frequently inflicted in the middle ages. One part of the punishment of a sacrilegious person, according to the laws of the Saxons, was the slitting of his ears. These and other crimes were punished, several centuries ago, with the loss of both ears. Du Cange refers to the statutes of St. Louis of France, and of Henry V. of England; vo. Auris.

6. To Hing or Hang by the Lug of any thing, to keep a firm hold of it, as a bull-dog does of his prey. S.

7. He has a Flea in his Lug, "There's a bee in his bannet-lug;" that is, He is a restless giddy fellow. S.

8. To lay one's Lugs in or amang, to take copiously of any meat or drink. S.

Sibb. thinks that this word may be from A.S. locca caesaries, the hair which grows on the face. Although the origin is quite uncertain, I would prefer deriving it from Su.G. lugg-a to drag one, especially by the hair; as persons are, in like manner, ignominiously dragged by the ears. V. BLAW, v.

To LUG, v. a. To cut off one's ears. S.

LUG-BAB, s. A ribbon-knot, or tassel at the bannet-lug. S.

LUGGIT or LOWGIT DISCH. A wooden bowl or vessel, made of small staves, with upright handles. S.

LUG-KNOT, s. A knot of ribbons attached to the ear or front of a female's dress. Synon. Lug-bab. S.

LUG-LACHET, s. A box on the ear. S.

LUG-MARK, s. A mark cut in the ear of a sheep. S.

To LUG-MARK, v. a. 1. To make a slit or notch in the ear of a sheep by which it may be known. S.

2. To punish by cropping the ears. S.

LUG-SKY, s. The same with Ear-sky. V. SKY. S.

LUG, s. A worm got in the sand, within flood-mark, used by fishermen for bait, S. Lumbricus marinus, Linn.

"All the above, except the partans and lobsters, are taken with lines baited with mussels and lug, which are found in the bed of the Ythan at low tides." P. Slains, Statist. Acc. v. 277.

"The bait for the small fishes—a worm got in the sand, lug." P. Nigg, Aberd. ibid. vii. 205.

L U M

"Eruca marina; the fishers call it lug." Sibb. Fife, p. 138.

Perhaps from Fris. lugg-en, ignave et segniter agere; as descriptive of the inactivity of this worm, as another species is called slug, for the same reason.

LUGGENIS, s. pl. Lodgings. S.

LUGGIE, s. The horned owl. S.

LUGGIE, adj. 1. Corn is said to be luggy, when it does not fill and ripen well, but grows mostly to the straw, S.B. 2. Heavy; sluggish.

Belg. log, heavy; Teut. lugg-en, to be slothful.

LUGGIE, s. A lodge or hut in a garden or park, S.B.

Teut. logie tugurium, casa. V. LOGE.

LUGGIE, LOGGIE, s. A small wooden vessel, for holding meat or drink, provided with a handle, by which it is laid hold of, S.

The green horn-spoons, beech luggies mingle,
On skelfs forgainst the door.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 114.

Among the superstitious rites observed on the eve of Hallowmas, the following is mentioned.

In order, on the clean hearth-stane,
The luggies three are ranged,
And every time great care is ta'en,
To see them duly changed.

V. Note, Ibid.

Burns, iii. 138.

It is also written loggie.

The sap that hawkie does afford

Reams in a wooden loggie. Morison's Poems, p. 48.

Perhaps from lug the ear, from the resemblance of the handle. The Dutch, however, call a wooden sauce-boat lokke. Some might be disposed to trace this word to Heb. לֹג, log, sextarius, the smallest measure of liquids used among the Jews, nearly equal to an English pint and a half.

LUGHT, s. A lock of hair, &c. V. LUCHT. S.

LUGINAR, s. One who lets lodgings. S.

LUGIS. V. HINGARIS AT LUGIS. S.

LUID, s. A poem. V. LEID.

LUIFE AND LIE. A sea phrase Luff and lee. S.

LUIG, s. A hovel. S.

LUIK-HARTIT, adj. Warmhearted; affectionate; compassionate.

Thair is no levand leid sa law of degre

That sall me luif unlufit; I am so luikhartit—

I am so merciful in mynd, and menis all wichtis.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 63.

In edit. 1508. loik hertit. Perhaps from Alem. lauc flame, or from the same origin with luke in E. lukewarm.

LUIT, pret. Let; permitted.

"No man pursued her, but luit her take her own pleasure, because she was the king's mother." Pitscottie, p. 140.

Lute also occurs in the same sense; and lute of, for reckoned, made account of.

"That carnall band was neuer esteemed off be Christ, in the time he was conversant heere vpon earth; he lute nathing of that band." Bruce's Serm. on the Sacr. 1590. Sign. I. 3. b. V. LET, v.

LUKNYT, part. pa. Locked. V. LUCKEN.

LUM, LUMB, s. 1. A chimney; the vent by which the smoke issues, S.

—"A cave, or rather den, about 50 feet deep, 60 long, and 40 broad, from which there is a subterranean passage to the sea, about 80 yards long, through which the waves are driven with great violence in a northerly storm, and occasion a smoke to ascend from the den. Hence it has got the name of Hell's Lumb, i. e. Hell's Chimney." P. Gamrie, Banffs. Statist. Acc. i. 472. 473.

2. Sometimes it denotes the chimney-top, more commonly denominated the lum-head, S.

L U N

"The house of Mey formerly mentioned, is a myth, sign or mark, much observed by sailers in their passing through this Firth between Caithness and Stroma, for they carefully fix their eyes upon the lums or chimney heads of this house, which if they lose sight of, then they are too near Caithness." Brand's Descr. Orkney, p. 145.

3. The whole of the building appropriated for one or more chimneys; the stalk. S.

Sibb. conjectures that this may be from A.S. leom lux, "scarcely any other light being admitted, excepting through this hole in the roof."

LUMB-HEAD, s. A chimney top, S.

Now by this time, the sun begins to leam,—
And clouds of reek frae lumb-heads to appear.

Ross's Helcnore, p. 55.

LUM-PIG, s. A can for the top of a chimney. S.

LUMBART, s. Apparently the skirt of a coat. S.

LUME, s. An utensil. V. LOME.

LUMMING, adj. A term applied to the weather when there is a thick rain. V. LOOMY. S.

LUMMLE, s. The filings of metal, S. Fr. limaille, id.
Chaucer uses lumaile in the same sense.

And therein was put of silver limaile an unce.

Chan. Yeman's T. v. 16630.

LUMPER, s. One who furnishes ballast for ships. S.

LUNCH, s. A large piece of any thing, especially of what is edible; as bread, cheese, &c. S.

—Drink gaed round, in cogs an' caups,
Amang the furms an' benches;
An' cheese an' bread, frae women's laps,
Was dealt about in lunches

An' dawds that day. Burns, iii. 37.

LUND, LWND, s. The city of London.

This jowell he gert turss in till England;
In Lwnd it sett till witness of this thing,
Be conquest than of Scotland cald hym king.

Wallace, i. 129, MS.

Lund appears on many Saxon coins. V. Kederi Catal.

Numm. A.S. But this seems an abbreviation, as it was usually written Lunden.

LUNGIE, s. The Guillemot. S.

LUNYIE, s. A wallet. S.

LUNYIE, s. The loin.

And Belliall, with a brydill renyie,
Evir lasht thame on the lunyie.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 29.

Teut. loenie, longie, id.

LUNYIE-JOINT, s. The joint of the loin or hip. S.

LUNYIE-SHOT, s. Having the hip-bone disjoined. S.

LUNYIE-BANE, s. Hucklebone, Fife.

LUNKEHOLE, s. A hole in a stone wall. S.

LUNKIE, s. An aperture in a dyke. S.

LUNKIE, adj. Close and sultry, denoting the oppressive state of the atmosphere before rain or thunder. S.

LUNKIENESS, s. The state of the atmosphere as above. S.

LUNKIT, adj. Lukewarm; also, half-boiled, S. See S.
Dan. lunk-en to make lukewarm, whence, indeed, the E. word may be most directly deduced.

LUNNER, s. A smart stroke; corr. of Lounder. S.

LUNT, s. 1. It is used as in E., for a match.

—"Ane of thame be chaunce had a loose lunt, quhilk negligently fell out of his hand amang the great quantity of poulder, and brunt him and diuers utheris to the great terror of the rest." Historie James Sext, p. 126.

2. A torch. 3. A piece of peat, or of hardened horse or cow dung, or rag, used for lighting a fire. 4. The flame of a smothered fire which suddenly blazes forth. S.

L U R

5. A column of flaming smoke; particularly, that rising from a tobacco pipe, in consequence of a violent puff, S.

She fuff't her pipe wi' sic a lunt,

In wrath she was sae vap'rin,

She notic't na, an aizle brunt

Her braw new worset apron

Out thro' that night. Burns, iii. 131.

6. Improperly used to denote hot vapour of any kind, S.

—Butter'd so'ns, wi' fragrant lunt,

Set a' their gabs a-steerin.

Burns, iii. 139.

Teut. lonte, fomes ignarius, Sw. lunta.

To LUNT, v. n. 1. To emit smoke in columns, S.

The luntin pipe, and sneeshin mill,

Are handed round wi' right guid will.—Burns, iii. 7.

2. To blaze; to flame vehemently. S.

To LUNT awa. Used as above; also applied to the smoking of tobacco; as, "She's luntin awa wi' her pipe." S.

To LUNT, v. a. To emit smoke in puffs. S.

To LUNT, v. n. To walk quickly, with a great spring. S.

LUNT, s. A great rise and fall in the mode of walking. S.

LUNTUS, s. A contemptuous designation for an old woman, probably from the practice of smoking tobacco, S.B.

LUP, LUPIS. Lup schilling, apparently a coin of Lippe. S.

LURD, s. A blow with the fist. S.

LURDANE, LURDON, s. 1. A worthless person; one who is good for nothing, whether man or woman. See Sup.

Thire tyrandis tuk this haly man,
And held hym lang in-til herd pyne:
A lurdane of thame slwe hym syne,
That he confermyd, in Crystyn fay
Befor that oure-gane bot a day.

Wyntown, vi. 12. 133.

In this sense Douglas applies the term to Helen.

That strang lurdane than, quham wele we ken,
The Troiane matronis ledis in ane ring,
Fenyeand to Bacchus feist and karolling.

Doug. Virgil, 182, 9.

Rudd. renders it, as here used, "a blockhead, a sot." But for what reason I do not perceive.

In the same sense we may understand the following passage, in which Lord Lindsay of the Byres is made to address the Lords who had rebelled against K. James III.; although, from its connexion, it perhaps requires a still stronger meaning.

"Ye are all Lurdanes, my Lords; I say, ye are false Traitors to your Prince.—For the false lurdanes and traitors have caused the Kyng, (Ja. IV.) by your false seditions and conspiracy, to come against his Father in plain battle," &c. Pitscottie, p. 97.

2. A fool; a sot, a blockhead.

"Sir John Smith's second fault, far worse than the first, albeit a lurdane to defend all he had done, and to draw the most of the barons to side with him, was a very dangerous design." Baillie's Lett. ii. 173. 174.

3. It is still commonly used, in vulgar language, as expressive of slothfulness. Thus one is called a lazy lurdane, S.

4. It is used, improperly, to denote a piece of folly or stupidity.

His Popish pride and threefald crowne
Almaist hes lost their licht;
His plake pardones are bot lurdons,
Of new found vanitie. Spec. Godly Sangs, p. 35.

It occurs in P. Ploughman.

Haddest thou ben hend, quod I, thou wold haue asked leue.

L U S

Yea, leaue, Lurden, quod he, & layde on me with age;
And hit me vnder the eare, vnneth may iche heare;
He buffeted me about the mouth, and bet out my teth,
And gyued me in goutes, I may not go at large.

Sign. Hh. 3, b.

It is also used by R. Brunne.

Sibriht that schrew as a lordan gan lusk,

A suynhird smote he to dede vnder a thorn busk.

Chron. p. 9.

This word has been fancifully derived from Lord Dane. It deserves notice, that this derivation is at least as old as the time of Hector Boece.

"Finalie the Inglismen were brocht to so grete calamité & miserie be Danis, that ilk hous in Ingland wes constranit to sustene ane Dane, that the samyn mycht be ane spy to the Kyng, and advertis hym quhat wes done or said in that hous. Be quhilk way the Kyng mycht knaw sone quhare ony rebellion wes aganis hym. This spy wes callit lord Dane. Quhilk is now tane for ane ydyll lymmer that seikis his leuyng on othir mennis labouris." Bellend. Cron. B. xi. c. 14.

It is more fully expressed in the original. Dictus est is explorator dominus Danus, vulgo Lordain. Quod nomen nostrates et populi nunc Angli dicti ita usurpaverunt, ut quem viderint ociosum ac inutilem nebulonem, ocio deditum, alienis laboribus quaeritantem victum, omni-que demum aspersum infamia, Lordain vel hac aetate appellitent.

I need scarcely say, that this etymon is evidently a chimera.

The immediate origin seems to be Fr. lourdin, blockish, blunt, clownish; allied to which are lourdat, a dunce, lourdade, an awkward wench, from lourd, heavy, stupid, blockish. See Sup. Bullet derives lourdat from Arm. lourdod, id. But as many Fr. words have their origin from Teut., it has occurred to me, as also to Sibb. that Fr. lourdin may be immediately traced to Teut. luyaerd piger, desidiosus, ignavus homo, or loer, loerd, which have the same meaning, homo murcidus, ignavus. To the latter Kilian traces Fr. lourd. Thus the radical Teut. term will be luy, id. V. Loy. It may be added, however, that as Ital. lorido corresponds to Fr. lourd, Verel. derives the former from Isl. and Sw. lort, stercus. Seren. deduces all the modern terms from this Goth. fountain; vo. Lordane. From the Ital. word L.B. lurdus seems formed. Du Cange is uncertain whether it should be rendered impurus, or stolidus.

LURDANERY, LURDANRY, s. 1. Sottishness; stupidity. Friendschip flemyt is in France, and faith has the flicht. Leyis, lurdanry and lust ar oure laid sterne.

Doug. Virgil, 238, a. 14.

2. It seems also used to denote carnal sloth, or security in sin.

Cum all degreis in lurdanery quha lyis,
And fane wald se of syn the feirful fyne:
And leirne in vertew how for to upryis.

Lyndsay's Warkis, A. 7. a.

Fr. lourderie, stupidity; Teut. luyerdije, sluggishness.

LURDEN, adj. Heavy; a lurden nevvil; a severe blow. S. LURE, s. The udder of a cow, S. See Sup.

Su.G. jur, jufver, and Belg. uyer, have the same signification. But there seems to be no affinity; as we have no evidence of l being prefixed to words of Goth. origin.

LURE, adv. Rather, S.

But I lure chuse in Highland glens
To herd the kid and goat, man,
Ere I cou'd for sic little ends
Refuse my bonny Scotman.

V. LEVER.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 256.

LUSBIRDAN, s. pl. Pigmies.

S.

L U T

LUSCAN, s. A lusty beggar and a thief. S.

LUSCHBALD, s. Expl. "a sluggard."

Lunatick lymmar, Luschbald, lous thy hose.

Kennedy, Evergreen, ii. 73.

From Isl. losk-r ignavus, and bald-r, Germ. bald, potens, q. surpassing others in laziness. E. lusk, idle, lazy, which Johns. derives from Fr. lusche, has the same origin.

LUSERVIE, s. Apparently, a species of fur. S.

LUSKING, LEUSKING, part. pr. Absconding; Gl. Sibb.

I have not observed this word in S. O.E. lusk is rendered, "to be idle, to be lazy," Gl. Brunne. Perhaps it rather signifies to lurk, in the passage quoted, vo. LUR-DANE.

Teut. luyisch-en, latitare, Germ. lausch-en, Franc. loschen, losc-an.

LUSOME, adj. Not smooth; in a rough state. A lusome stein, a stone that is not polished, S.B.

Su.G. lo, logg, lugg, rough, and sum, a common termination expressing quality.

LUSOME, adj. Desirable; agreeable; S. V. LUSOM.

LUSS, s. A yellowish incrustation, which frequently covers the heads of children, dandruff; Pityriasis capitis, S.

LUSTY, adj. 1. Beautiful; handsome; elegant.

I haue, quod sche, lusty ladyis fourtene,
Of quham the formest, clepit Diope,
In ferme wedlock I sall conione to the,

Doug. Virgil, 15, 18.

Sunt mihi his septem praestanti corpore Nymphae.

Virg.

Nixt hand hir went Lauinia the maid,—
That doun for schame did cast byr lusty ene.

Ibid. 380, 35. Decorus, Virg.

The lusty Aventynus nixt in preis

Him followis, the son of wourthy Hercules.

Ibid. 231, 29. Pulcher. Virg.

2. Pleasant; delightful. See Sup.

Amyd the hawchis, and euery lusty vale,
The recent dew begynnis doun to skale,

Doug. Virgil, 449, 25.

A.S. Teut. lust, desiderium; lustigh, lostigh, amoenus, delectabilis, jucundus; Franc. lustlike, venustus. Hence, LUSTHEID, s. Amiableness; Gl. Sibb.

Teut. lustigheyd, amoenitas.

LUSTYNES, s. Beauty; perfection.

Sweit rois of vertew and of gentilnes;
Delytsum lyllie of everie lustynes!

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 89.

LUSTING, s. Meaning doubtful; perhaps, invading. S.

LUTE, LEUT, s. A sluggard; Gl. Sibb.

"Probably," says Sibb. "from Lurdane." But there is not a shadow of probability here. It is certainly the same with E. lout, from Teut. loete, homo agrestis, insulsus, bardus, stolidus. This is perhaps radically allied to Su.G. lat, piger, whence laettia, anc. laeti, ignavia.

LUTE, pret. Permitted; let out. V. LUIT.

LUTERRIS, s. pl. Perhaps, the fur of an otter. S. LUTHE.

This lene auld man luthe not, but tuke his leif,
And I abaid undir the levis grene.

Henryson, Bannatyne Poems, p. 133.

Lord Hailes renders this "remained." If this be the sense, it may be allied to Moes.G. lat-jan, Su.G. laett-ias, morari, otiosi; the pret. often taking u instead of a. It may indeed be formed from leit; and thus signify, took no notice.

LUTHRIE, s. Lechery.

Thay lost baith benifice and pentioun that mareit,
And quha eit flesch on Frydayis was fyrefangit;

M A

It maid na miss quhat madinis thay miscareit
On fasting dayis, thay were nocht brint nor hangit;
Licence for luthrie fra thair lord belangit,
To gif indulgence as the devill did leir.

Bannatyne Poems, p. 196.

From the connexion, it is evident that the term here means lechery. But R. Glouc. uses luther as signifying wicked, in a general sense; and lutherhede, luthernes, vile-ness, wickedness, villany. Lither, Chauc. wicked. A.S. lythre, nequam.

LUTTAIRD, adj. Bowed. A luttaird bak, a bowed back.

M A A

Ane pyk-thank in a prelots chayse,—
With lut shoulders, and luttaird bak,
Quhilk nature maid to beir a pak.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 141.

O. Belg. loete a clown and aerd, a termination denoting nature, kind. V. LOUT, v.

LUTTEN, part. pa. Let; suffered; permitted. S.

To LUVE, LUWE, v. a. To love. V. LUF.

LUWME, LWME, s. A weaving loom. S.

M.

WACHTER has observed that this letter is used in forming substantives from verbs, and from adjectives; as A.S. cwalm, interitus, death, from cwell-en, to kill; Franc. galm, clangor, from gell-en, sonare, uuahsmo, fruit, from wahs-en, to grow; Sw. sotma, sweetness, from sot, dulcis; Germ. baerm, dregs, from baer-en, levare, helm, a helmet, from hull-en, to cover.

It is used S., with the addition of a or e, in forming some alliterative words, being employed as the medium of conjoining their component parts; as clish-ma-claver, hash-me-thrum, whig-me-leerie; E. rig-ma-role.

MA, MAY, MAA, MAE, adj. More in number, S.; mair being used to denote quantity.

Fra thair fayis archeris war
Scalyt, as I said till yow ar,
That ma na thai war, be gret thing,—
Thai woux sa hardy, that thaim thought
Thai sould set all thair fayis at noucht.

Barbour, xiii. 85. MS.

The Kyng of Frawns yhit eftyr thai
Send til this Edward in message may,
That ware kend and knowyn then
Honorabil and gret famows men.

Wyntown, viii. 28. 18.

Sa frawart thaym this god hir mynd has cast,
That with na doutsum takinnis, ma than twa,
Hir greife furthschew this ilk Tritonia.

Doug. Virgil, 44, 25.

"The sacrilegious blasphemers, and the bloody adulterers, and infinite maa vther sins, concurring in one persone, shall not these shorten this miserable life?" Bruce's Eleven Serm. 1591. Sign. K. 5. a.

"It is statut—that the secretarie mak and constitute deputis, ane or mae, in every ane of the placis foresaid." Act. Sed. 3 Nov. 1599.

Mr. Tooke views A.S. mowe, a heap, as the radical word; supposing A.S. ma, E. mo, to be the positive, A.S. mare, E. more, the comparative, and A.S. maest, E. most, the superlative. But not to say that A.S. mowe does not seem to have been used to denote quantity in general, or applied to persons, the hypothesis labours under several considerable difficulties. The first is, that mo never occurs in A.S., but always ma, which has been corruptly changed in later times into mo, like many other words originally written with a. But besides this, A.S. ma is as really a comparative as mare, both being used adverbially, in the sense of plus, magis. As an adjective, mare properly denotes superiority in size, or in quality, major; ma, superiority in number, plures. This word, even as changed into mo, has been always used in the same manner. One of the very examples brought by Mr Tooke, is a proof of this. "Yf it be fayre a man's name be eched by moche folkes praysing, and fouler thyng, that mo folke not praysen." Chaucer, Test. Love, Fol. 319, b.

Mr. Tooke has charged Junius with saying untruly, that most is formed from the positive maere, having maerre as the compar., and maerest, contr. maest, as the superl. But candour required, that this singularity in A.S. should have been mentioned, that maere is used both as a positive, magnus, and a compar., major; while maerest is the superl. It does not appear, indeed, that this is the origin of maest which occurs in the simple form of maists in Moes.G. from the comparative maiza.

Lat. plus and magis may both be mentioned as analogous. For although both are used as comparatives, it would appear that they had been originally positives. Plus is certainly from the Gr. positive πολυς, many; and magis has also been traced to μεγας, great.

To MA, v. a. To make; frequently used when the metre does not require it.

Thai durst nocht bid to ma debate.

Barbour, x. 692. MS.

And nocht forthi sum of thaim thar

Abad stoutly to ma debate;

And othyr sum ar fled thair gate.

Ibid. xiv. 547. MS. also, ii. 6.

In this form the v. resembles Germ. mach-en, facere, which Seren. derives from the very anc. Goth. v. meg-a, valere.

MA, auxiliary v. May.

Ybit thretty ylys in that se

Wytht-out thir ma welle reknyde be.

Wyntown, i. 13. 66.

Peraventure my scheip ma gang besyd,

Quhyll we haif liggit full neir.

Henryson, Bannatyne Poems, p. 99. st. 6.

Sw. ma, Isl. maa, id.

MA, pron. poss. My.

S.

MAA, MAW, s. A whit; a jot. Ne'er a maa, never a whit. Fiend, Foul, and Deil are often used instead of Ne'er; as, Fiend a maw, Deil a maa, &c S.

M A C

MAAD, MAWD, s. A plaid, such as is worn by shepherds; a herd's mawd, S.

This seems to be a Goth. word. Su.G. mudd denotes a garment made of the skins of reindeers; also, lapmudd. Ihre thinks that the word has come to Sweden along with the goods.

MAADER, interj. A term used in Aberdeenshire to a horse, to make him go to the left hand. S.

MABBIE, s. A cap; a head-dress for women; S.B. mob, E.

And we maun hae pearlins, and mabbies, and cocks,
And some ither things that the ladies call smocks.

Song, Ross's Helenore, p. 137.

MABER, s. Marble; perhaps, errat. for marber. S.

MACALIVE CATTLE. Cattle appropriated, in the Hebrides, to a child who is sent out to be fostered. S.

MACDONALD'S DISEASE. An affection of the lungs, believed to be curable by the touch, &c. of certain tribes of the Macdonalds. S.

MACER, MASSER, MASAR, s. A mace-bearer; an officer of the Court who carries the mace before persons in authority and preserves order. S.

MACFARLANE'S BOWAT. The moon. V. Bowat. S.

MACH, s. Son-in-law. V. Maich.

To MACHE, v. n. To strive.

With thir agane grete Hercules stude he,
With thir I was wount to mache in the mellé.

Doug. Virgil, 141, 26.

Fast fra the forestammes the floud souchis and raris,
As thay togidder machit on the depe. Ibid. 268, 37.

The E. v. match is occasionally used nearly in the same sense.

MACHICOULES, MACHCOLING, s. The openings in the floor of a battlement. S.

To MACHLE, (gutt.) v. a. To busy one's self, and yet be doing nothing in a right manner. S.

MACHLESS, (gutt.) adj. Feeble; destitute of strength or energy. V. Mauchtless. S.

MACK, MAK, adj. Neat; tidy; purpose-like. S.

MACKLIKE, adj. Tight; neat; well-proportioned. S.

MACKER-LIKE, adj. More proper; more becoming. S.

MACKLACK, adv.

Then the Cummers that ye ken came all macklack,
To conjure that coidyoch with clews in their creils;
While all the bounds them about grew blaikned and black,

For the din of thir daiblets rais'd all the de'ils.

Polwart, Watson's Coll. iii. 22.

This evidently denotes the noise made by their approach, particularly expressing the clattering of feet. The word is formed, either from the sound, or from mak, make, and clack, a sharp sound; Teut. klacke, the sound made by a stroke.

MACKREL-STURE, s. The tunny, or Spanish mackrel, Scomber thynnus, Linn.

"The tunny frequents this [Lochfine] and several other branches of the sea, on the western coast, during the season of herrings, which they pursue: the Scotch call it the mackrel-sture, or stor, from its enormous size, it being the largest of the genus." Pennant's Tour, 1772, p. 8.

Isl. Su.G. stor, anc. stur, ingens, magnus.

MACRELL, MAKERELL, s. 1. A pimp.

"He had nane sa familiar to hym, as fidlaris, bordellaris, makerellis, and gestouris." Bellend. Cron. B. v. c. 1. Utricularios, ganiones, lenones, mimos. Boeth.

2. A bawd.

"The auld man speikis to the macrell to allure the madyn." Philotus, S. P. R. iii. 7.

M A G

Teut. maeckelaer, proxeneta, Fr. maquereau; fem. maquerelle. Thierry derives the Fr. term from Heb. machar to sell. Est enim lenonum puellas vendere, et earum corpora pretio prostituere. As panders, in theatrical representation, wore a particoloured dress; hence he also conjectures that the term maquereau has been transferred to the fish, which we, after the Fr., call mackerel, because of its spots. Wachter more rationally derives Germ. mackler, proxeneta, from mach-en, jungere, sociare.

MAD, MAUD, s. A net for catching salmon or trouts, fixed in a square form by four stakes. S.

MADDER, s. A vessel for holding or measuring meal. S.

MADDERS'-FULL. As much as would fill a madder. S.

MADDIE, s. A kind of large mussel. S.

MADDIE, s. Abbrev. of Magdalen. V. MAUSE. S.

MADGE, s. 1. A familiar designation given to a female; Quean; Hussie. 2. An abbrev. of Magdalen. S.

MAD-LEED, adj. Mad-strain; mad-language. S.

MADLINGS, adv. In a furious manner. S.

MADLOCKS, MILK-MADLOCKS, s. pl. Oatmeal brose made with milk instead of water. S.

To MAE, v. n. To bleat softly, S. This imitative word is used to denote the bleating of lambs, while bae is generally confined to that of sheep.

————— Shepherds shall rehearse

His merit, while the sun metes out the day,

While ewes shall bleet, and little lambkins mae.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 14.

MAE, s. 1. A bleat. 2. A name for a sheep or lamb, S. S.

How happy is a shepherd's life,

Far frae courts, and free of strife!

While the gimmers bleet and bae,

And the lambkins answer mae.

Ritson's S. Songs, i. 285.

Here it is used rather as an interj.

MAE, adj. More in number. V. MA. S.

To MAGG, v. a. To carry off clandestinely; to steal.

To MAGG COALS. To lay off part of them by the way, Loth., apparently a cant term. See Sup.

MAGG, s. A cant word for a halfpenny.

MAGGS, s. pl. The gratuity which servants expect from those to whom they drive any goods, Loth. Sibb. refers to "O. Fr. magaut, a pocket or wallet, q. pocket-money." V. MAIK. See Sup.

MAGGIE, MAGGY, s. A species of till; a miner's term.

MAGGIE FINDY. A female good at shifting for herself.

MAGGIE MONYFEET. A centipede. V. MONYFEET.

MAGGIE RAB, MAGGY ROBB. 1. A bad halfpenny. 2. A bad wife; as, "He's gotten a Maggy Rob o' a wife." S.

MAGGIES, s. pl. "Jades," Pink.

Ye trowit to get ane burd of blisse,

To have ane of thir maggies.

Philotus, S. P. R. iii. 50.

Perhaps, maids, from A.S. maegth, virgo.

To MAGIL, MAIGIL, MAGGLE, v. a. To mangle. See S.

Thare he beheld ane cruell maglit face,

His visage menyete, and baith his handis, allace!

Doug. Virgil, 181, 21.

Bot rede lele, and tak gud tent in tyme,

Ye nouthir magil, nor mismeter my ryme.

Ibid. 484, 30.

Sen ane of them man be a deill,

My maglit face maks me to feill

That myne man be the same.

Philotus, S. P. R. iii. 56.

Rudd. derives it from Lat. mancus; Sibb. from Teut.

M A Y maeck-en, castrare. Perhaps mangel-en, to be defective, is preferable.

MAGISTRAND, MAGESTRAND, s. 1. A student in the highest philosophical class before graduation.

2. The Moral Philosophy Class; Aberdeen. S.

MAGNIFICKNESSE, s. Magnificence. S.

MAGRAVE, prep. Maugre, in spite of.

Than all the Inglis cumpany

Be-hynd stert on hym stwrdyly,

And magrave his, thai have hym tane.

Maugre his, O. E. Wyntown, viii. 26. 429.

We ask yow grace of this, assoyle him of that othe,

That he did maugre his, to wrong was him lothe.

V. MAWGRE. R. Brunne, p. 265.

MAGREIT, s. The magreit of the quene of Navarre, an erroneous title for Contes et Nouvelles de Marquerite, Reine de Navarre. S.

MAGRY, prep. In spite of, maugre.

Than Schir Gologras, for greif his gray ene brynt,

Wod wraithand, the wynd his handis can wryng.

Yit makis he mery magry quhasa mynt.

Gawan and Gol. iii. 10.

MAHERS, s. pl. A tract of low, wet-lying moory land. S.

MAHOUN, s. 1. The name of Mahomet, both in O.S. and E.

2. Transferred to the devil.

— Thow art my clerk, the devill can say,

Renunce thy God, and cum to me.

— Gramercy, tailyor, said Mahoun,

Renunce thy God, and cum to me.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 31. 32.

Lord Hailes observes; "It would seem that the Franks, hearing the Saracens swear by their prophet, imagined him to be some evil spirit which they worshipped. Hence, all over the western world Mahoun came to be an appellation of the devil." But it is more natural to suppose, that this was rather the effect of that bitter hatred produced by the crusades, than of such gross ignorance, among those at least who had themselves been in Palestine.

MAY, s. A maid; a virgin, S.

The Kyngis dowchtyr of Scotland

This Alysandrys the thryd, that fayre May,

Wyth the Kyng wes weddyt of Norway.

Wyntown, vii. 10. 309.

This Margret wes a pleysand May.

Ibid. viii. 6. 269.

"The word is preserved in Bony May, the name of a play among little girls." Gl. Wynt. It is also still used to denote a maid.

The term frequently occurs in O. E.

The corounyng of Henry, & of Malde that may,

At London was solemply on S. Martyn's day.

R. Brunne, p. 95.

Henry kyng our prince at Westmynster kirke

The erly's doubter of Prouince, the fairest may o lif.—

Ibid. p. 213.

Mid harte I thohte al on a May,

Sweetest of al thinge.

Harl. MS. Warton, Hist. Poet. ii. 194.

Isl. mey, Su.G. Dan. moe, anc. moi, A.S. maeg, Norm. Sax. mai, may, Moes.G. mawi, diminutively, mawilo, id. Some have viewed mage, familia, cognatio, as the root; "because a maiden still remains in her father's house, or if her parents be dead, with her relations." V. Schilter, Gl. p. 560. vo. Magt. Lye mentions Norm. Sax. mai, as not only denoting a virgin, but as the same with mag, cognatus. In relation to the former sense, he adds; "Hence, with the O. E. The Queen's Meys, the queen's maidens: among whom it came also to be a proverb, There are ma Meys than Margery." V. MARIES.

M A I

Perhaps O. Fr. mye, maitresse, amie, is from the same origin. V. Gl. Rom. Rose. As Belg. maeghd, also meydsen, meyssen, are used in the same sense with our term, Mr. MacPherson ingeniously inquires, if the latter be "the word Miss, of late prefixed to the names of young ladies?"

MAY, s. Abbrev. of Marjorie, S. V. MYSIE. S.

MAY,* s. The fifth month; unlucky for marriage. S.

MAY-BIRD, s. A person born in the month of May. S.

MAY-BE, adv. Perhaps. S.

MAICH, MACH, (gutt.) s. Son-in-law. MAUF denotes a brother-in-law. See Sup.

Gyf that thou sekis ane alienare vnknaw,

To be thy maich or thy gud sone in law,

— Here ane lytil my fantasy and consate.

Doug. Virgil, 219, 33.

To be thy mach sall cum ane alienare. Ibid. 208, 15.

Maich is used in the same sense by Bellenden, as the translation of gener, Cron. B. ii. c. 6.

"My meaugh, my wife's brother, or sister's husband," A. Bor. Ray.

Rudd. has observed, that "after the same manner other names of consanguinity and affinity have been often confounded by authors." But we are by no means to suppose, that the word was originally used in this restricted sense. Perhaps it primarily denoted consanguinity. The most ancient vestige we have of the term is in Moes.G. mag-us, a boy, a son. It seems, however, to have been early transferred to affinity by marriage. Thus A.S. maeg, maega, not only has the same signification with the Moes.G. word, but also denotes a father-in-law; Moses kept, his maeges sceap, the sheep of his father-in-law; Ex. iii. 1. It is also used for a kinsman in general, cognatus; and even extended to a friend, amicus. V. LYE.

O. E. mowe denotes relation by blood in a general sense.

— He let the other

That het Edward, spousy the Emperoures mowe.

R. Glouc. p. 316.

Isl. magur denotes both a father-in-law, and a step-father, Verel.; and maagr, an ally, a father-in-law, a son-in-law; maegd, affinitas, maeg-ia, affinitate jungi; G. Andr. We learn from the latter, that maeg-ur anciently signified a son. Ihre gives Su.G. maag, anc. mager, maghaer, as having the general sense of affinis; but shews, at the same time, that it is used to denote a son, a parent, a son-in-law, a father-in-law, a step-father, a step-son, &c. He is uncertain, whether it should be traced to Alem. mag, nature, or Sw. magt, blood, or if it should be left indeterminate, because of its great antiquity. Wachter derives Germ. mag, natura, also, parens, filius, &c. from mach-en, parere, gignere; Schilter, from mag-en posse, as, according to him, primarily denoting domestic power.

A.S. maeg not only signifies a relation by blood, and a father-in-law, but a son. Maeg waes his agen thridda; He was his own son, the third; Caedm. 61. 21. ap. Lye.

Isl. maug-r occurs in the sense of son, in the most ancient Edda. Gastu slikan maug; Genuisti talem filium; Aeg. 36. As maeg-r signifies a son-in-law; so, in a more general sense, a relation. Both these have been deduced from mae, meg-a, valere, pollere; because children are the support of their parents, especially when aged; and because there is a mutual increase of strength by connexions and allies. Hence the compound term, barna-stod, from barn and stod, columen, q. the pillar or prop of children; and maega-stod, the support given by relationship. Maug-r often appears in a compound form; as Maug-thrasir, q. filius rixae, a son of strife, i. e. a quarrelsome man. Maug-r also signifies a male.

I need scarcely add, that Gael. mac, a son, pronounced gutt. q. machk, has undoubtedly a common origin. Macamh, a youth, a lad, and macne, a tribe, are evidently allied.

MAICH, s. (gutt.) Marrow, Ang.

It is uncertain, whether this be A.S. maerh, id. eliso r.; or, as it is accounted a very ancient word, radically different. For both maich and mergh are used S.B. in the sense of medulla.

MAICHERAND, part. adj. (gutt.) Weak, feeble, incapable of exertion, Ang.; allied perhaps to Su.G. meker, homo mollis.

MAICHLESS, adj. Feeble; wanting bodily strength. S.

MAID, s. A maggot, S.B. The larvæ of maggots. See Sup.

Teut. made, Belg. maade, id. mad, Essex, an earth-worm; Moes.G. A.S. matha, Alem. mado, Su.G. matk, anc. madk, a worm.

MAID, adj. Tamed; applied to animals trained for sport.

"It is statute, — that na maner of persounis tak ane vther mannis hundis, nor haulkis maid or wyldie out of nestis, nor eggis out of nestis, within ane vther mannis ground, but licence of the Lord, vnder the pane of x. pundis. Acts, Ja. III. 1474. c. 73. Edit. 1566. Murray, c. 59.

It seems radically the same with Mait, q. v.; as if it signified, "subdued by fatigue," — this being one mean employed for breaking animals. V. MATE, v.

MAID, MADE, adj. Fatigued. V. MAIT. S.

MAIDEN, s. An instrument for beheading, nearly of the same construction with the Guillotine, S. See S.

 "This mighty Earl [Morton,] for the pleasure of the place and the salubrity of the air, designaed here a noble recess and retirement from worldly business, but was prevented by his unfortunat and inexorable death, three years after, anno 1581, being accused, condemned and execute by the Maiden at the cross of Edinburgh, as art and part of the murder of King Henry Earl of Darnly, father to King James VI, which fatal instrument, at least the patern thereof, the cruel Regent had brought from abroad to behead the Laird of Pennecuik of that ilk, who notwithstanding died in his bed, and the unfortunat Earl was the first himself that handselled that merciless Maiden, who proved so soon after his own executioner." Pennecuik's Descr. of Tweeddale, pp. 16, 17.

This circumstance gave occasion for the following proverb; "He that invented the Maiden, first hanseled it." Kelly, p. 140. He refers to James, Earl of Morton.

"He [E. of Argyle] — falling down on his knees upon the stool, embraced the Maiden (as the instrument of beheading is called) very pleasantly; and with great composure he said, "It was the sweetest maiden ever he kissed, it being a mean to finish his sin and misery, and his inlet to glory, for which he longed." Wodrow's Hist. ii. 545.

MAIDEN, s. 1. The name given to the last handful of corn that is cut down by the reapers on any particular farm, S. See Sup.

The reason of this name seems to be, that this handful of corn is dressed up with ribbons, or strips of silk, in resemblance of a doll. It is generally affixed to the wall, within the farm-house.

They drave an' shore fu' teugh an' sair;

They had a bizzy mornin':

The Maiden's taen ere Phœbus fair

The Lomonds was adornin' ♦

V. sense 2. Douglas's Poems, p. 142.

By some, a sort of superstitious idea is attached to the winning of the maiden. If got by a young person, it is considered as a happy omen, that he or she shall be married before another harvest. For this reason perhaps, as well as because it is viewed as a sort of triumphal badge, there is a strife among the reapers as to the gaining of it. Various stratagems are employed for this purpose. A handful of corn is often left by one uncut, and covered with a little earth, to conceal it from the other reapers, till such time as all the rest of the field is cut down. The person who is most cool generally obtains the prize; waiting till the other competitors have exhibited their pretensions, and then calling them back to the handful which had been concealed.

In the north of S. the maiden is carefully preserved till Yule morning, when it is divided among the cattle, "to make them thrive all the year round." There is a considerable resemblance between this custom and that of the Northern nations, with respect to the Julagalt, or bread-sow; as related by Verel. Not. Hervarar S. p. 139. He views the custom referred to as transmitted from the times of heathenism, and as a remnant of the worship of Odin. "The peasants," he says, "on the Eve of Yule, [i. e. the evening preceding Christmas-day], even to this day, make bread in the form of a boar-pig, and preserve it on their tables through the whole of Yule. Many dry this bread-pig, and preserve it till spring, when their seed is to be committed to the ground. After it has been bruised, they throw part of it into the vessel or basket from which the seed is to be sown; and leave the rest of it, mixed with barley, to be eaten by the horses employed in ploughing, and by the servants who hold the plough, probably in expectation of receiving a more abundant harvest." This was also called Sunnugoltr, because this bread-boar was dedicated to the Sun. Verel. Ind. V. KIRN, RAPE-GYRNE, and Yule, § II.

2. This name is transferred to the feast of Harvest-home, S. It is sometimes called the Maiden, at other times the Maiden-feast.

The master has them bidden

Come back again, be't foul or fair,

'Gainst gloamin', to the Maiden.

Douglas's Poems, p. 144.

Then owre your riggs we'll scour wi' haste,

An' hurry on the Maiden feast.

Ibid. p. 117.

It may be observed, that, in some parts of S., this entertainment is given after the grain is cut down; in others, not till all is gathered in.

"It was, till very lately, the custom to give what was called a Maiden feast, upon the finishing of the harvest, and to prepare for which, the last handful of corn reaped in the field was called the Maiden." [The reverse is undoubtedly the fact; the name of the feast being derived from the handful of corn.] "This was generally contrived to fall into the hands of one of the finest girls in the field; was dressed up in ribbons, and brought home in triumph, with the music of fiddles or bagpipes. A good dinner was given to the whole band, and the evening spent in jovialty and dancing, while the fortunate lass who took the maiden was the Queen of the feast; after which, this handful of corn was dressed out, generally in the form of a cross, and hung up, with the date of the year, in some conspicuous part of the house. This custom is now entirely done away; and in its room, to each shearer is given 6d. and a loaf of bread. However, some farmers, when all their corns are brought in, give their servants a dinner, and a jovial evening, by way of Harvest-home." P. Longforgan, Perth. Statist. Acc. xix. 550.

The custom is still retained in different parts of the country.

MAIDEN, s. An ancient instrument for holding the broaches of pirns until the pirns be wound off. S.

MAIDEN, s. A wisp of straw for watering a smithy fire.
 MAIDEN, s. A sort of honorary title given to the eldest daughter of a farmer; as, The Maiden of Deloraine. S.
 HA'-MAIDEN, s. 1. A farmer's daughter who sits ben the house, or apart from the servants. 2. The bride's maid at a wedding. 3. The female who lays the child in the arms of its parent, when it is presented for baptism. S.
 To MAIDEN, v. a. To perform the office of a maiden at baptism. To maiden the wean. S.
 MAIDEN-HAIR, s. The muscles of oxen when boiled. S.
 MAID-HEID, s. Virginity; maidhood. S.
 MAIDEN-KIMMER, s. The maid who attends the kimmer, or matron, who has charge of the infant at kimmerings, and baptisms, and who lifts the babe into the arms of its father when it is presented at the baptismal font. S.
 MAIDEN-SKATE, s. The name given to the Thornback and Skate while young. S.
 MAID-IN-THE-MIST, s. Navelwort; a plant. S.
 MAIGS, MAGS, s. pl. The hands. "Haud aff yer maigs, man." S.
 To MAIG, v. a. To handle any thing much, or keenly and roughly, so as to hurt it, or to render it useless. S.
 MAIGERS, pret. In spite of. S.
 MAIGHRIE, s. A term used to denote money or valuable effects; opposed to Spraichrie, which denotes a collection of trifling articles. S.
 MAIGLIT, part. pa. Mangled. V. MAGIL.
 MAIK, s. A cant term for a halfpenny, S. perhaps from the v. make, in relation to the art displayed in its fabrication; or as the same with Magg, q. v.
 MAIK, MAKE, MAYOCK, s. 1. A match, mate, or equal, S. make, A. Bor. Pl. makis. See Sup.
 Hastow no mynde of lufe? quhare is thy make?
 Or artow seke, or smyt with jelousye?
King's Quair, ii. 39.
 ——— Well is vs begone,
 That with our makis are togider here. Ibid. st. 45.
 The painted pawn, with Argos eyis,
 Can on his mayock call. Cherrie and Slae, st. 2.
 On th' other side we lookt unto Balthayock,
 Where many peacock cals upon his mayok.
Muse's Thren. Hist. Perth, i. 160.
 2. The maik, the like; the same. S.
 A.S. maca, ge-maca, Isl. Su.G. make, Dan. mage, aequalis, socius; Alem. gimahha, conjux. As Germ. mag denotes both a relation and a companion, this word may be viewed as radically the same with Maich, q. v.
 To MAIK, v. n. To match; to associate with.
 Theseus for luf his fallow socht to hell,
 The snaw quhite dow oft to the gray maik will,
 Allace for luf, how mony thame self did spill!
Doug. Virgil, 94, 9.
 Germ. mach-en, jungere, sociare; Alem. kamachon, id.
 Rudd. has overlooked this v.
 MAIKLESS, MAYKLES, adj. Matchless; having no equal, S.
 This designation is given to the Virgin Mary.
 Malcolm kyng of Scotland —
 Mad the fundatyowne
 Of the abbay of Culpyre in Angws,
 And dowyd it wyth hys almws
 In honoure of the maykles May.
Wyntown, vii. 7. 287.
 The fillok hir deformyt fax wald haue ane fare face,
 To mak hir maikles of hir man at myster mycheiuis.
Doug. Virgil, 238, a. 40.

Su.G. makaloes, Dan. mageloes, sine pari. Chaucer, makeless, id. Christina, Queen of Sweden, greatly puzzled the connoisseurs at Rome, by the use of the word MAKEΛΩΣ, impressed on a medal. But after the learned Kircher had pronounced it to be Coptic, it was found to be merely the Sw. word, denoting, according to Keysler, that she was a nonpareil, or, as Ihre says, that, as being unmarried, she had no mate.
 We have a beautiful proverb, expressive of the inestimable worth of a mother, and of the impossibility, on the supposition of her death, of the loss being repaired to her children: "The mother's a maikless bird;" S.B.
 MAIL, MALE, s. A spot in cloth, especially what is caused by iron; often, an irne mail, S. See Sup.
Mole seems to have been used in the same sense, O. E.
 ——— Thy best cote, Hankyn,
 Hath many moles and spottes, it must be washed.—
 Men shold fynd many fowle sides, & mani fowle plots.
P. Ploughman, Fol. 65. a. b.
 A.S. mal, Franc. mal, meila, Teut. mael, macula, yser-mael, macula ferruginea; Germ. maal, id. Moes.G. malo, rust.
 To MAIL, MALE, v. a. To discolour or stain, S.
 Teut. mael-en, pingere, Sibb. Gl. Su.G. maal-a, id. maal, signum.
 MAIL, MEIL, MEEL, s. A relative weight used in Orkney.
 "The stipend consists of 86 mails malt, (each mail weighing about 12 stones Amsterdam weight.)" P. Holme, Statist. Acc. v. 412.
 "— 6 settings make 1 meel." P. of Cross. Ibid. vii. 477.
 "On the first is weighed settings and miels." P. Kirkwall. Ibid. 563.
 Su.G. mael-a, to measure; whence maal, a measure, Fland. mael, a measure of any kind. Moes.G. mela, a bushel.
 MAIL, s. 1. Tribute; duty paid to a superior; pl. malis.
 "Afore thay dayis the principall men of Scotland vnder the Kyng war callit Thanis, that is to say, gadderaris of the kyngis malis." Bellend. Descr. Alb. c. 16. Quaestores regii, Boeth.
 "To moue his noblis with hie curage & spreit aganis thair ennymes, he [Kenneth] dischargit thame of all malis and dewteis aucht to hym for v. yeris to cum." Bellend. Cron. B. xi. c. 8.
Burrow mailles, duties payable within burghs. Acts, Ja. I. 1424. c. 8.
 2. The rent paid for a farm or possession, whether it be in money, grain, or otherwise. See Sup.
 "The arrears of rent, or, in our law-style, of mails and duties, prescribe, if they be not pursued for within five years after the tenant's removing from the lands out of which the arrears are due." Erskine's Inst. B. iii. T. 7. s. 20.
 3. Rent paid for a house, or for any thing of which one has had the use. See Sup.
 "We ordain and appoint our present Town-thesaurer, and his successors in office, to pay the house-rent and mails of his Lordship and succeeding Presidents of the Session." Act Sederunt, 12. Jan. 1677.
 House-rent is often called house-mail, improperly pron. q. house-meal. Stable-mail, horse-mail, what is paid for entertainment for a horse, S. Horse-mail is improperly printed, according to the vulgar pronunciation, horse-meal.
 "Mr. Blair has a chamber, I another, our men a third; our horse-meals every week above £11 Sterling." Baillie's Lett. i. 217.
 This is also called stable-meal. V. ABEECH.
Grass-mail, rent paid for grass, S.
 "King Robert — was so well pleased with the goats as his bed-fellows, that, when he came to be king, he made a law, that all goats should be grass-mail (or grass-rent) free." P. Buchanan, Stirl. Statist. Acc. ix. 14.
 K

The term, as denoting rent, is evidently used in a secondary sense; but nearly allied to the primary meaning. For what is rent, but the duty or tribute paid to another, in respect of which he possesses a superiority? For still "the borrower is servant to the lender."

4. To pay the mail; to atone for a crime by suffering. S.

A.S. male, Isl. mala, Su.G. maala, Ir. mal, tributum, vectigal. Male is used in the Sax. Chron. to denote the rent at which lands are let. Arm. mael, profit, gain; Pers. mal, riches; Gael. mal, rent.

The Su.G. word also signifying pay (stipendium,) Ihre thinks that it is the root of C.B. milur, and Lat. miles, a soldier, as signifying one who fights for pay. Allied to this is Su.G. maala maen, mercenary soldiers. It is probable that Su.G. maala, as denoting tribute, rent, pay, &c. is derived from maal, mensura; because these being anciently paid in kind, were mostly delivered by measure.

It has been said: "The word Maill was antiently the name of a species of money. It was also made use of to signify some kind of rent, such as geese, &c. This makes it probable, that this word was intended by our ancestors to comprehend both money, rent, and kain." Russel's Conveyancing, Pref. ix.

Cowel has indeed derived mail, in Black mail, from Fr. mail, which, he says, "signifieth a small piece of money." But Fr. maille is comparatively of late origin, and seems to have no connexion with our term. By Du Cange, vo. Mailla, it is viewed as merely a corruption of medaille. V. Spelm. vo. Maille. The idea, indeed, that it first signified money, and then tribute, is inconsistent with general history. For, among barbarous nations, tribute is first paid in kind; money is afterwards employed as a substitute.

BLACK-MAIL, s. A tax or contribution paid by heritors or tenants, for the security of their property, to those freebooters who were wont to make inroads on estates, destroying the corns, or driving away cattle.

"The thieves, and broken men, inhabitants of the saidis Schirefdomes,—foirnentis the partis of England—committis daylie theiftis, reiffis, heirschippes, murtheris, and fyre-raisingis, upon the peaceable subjects of the countrie.—And—divers subjects of the Inland takis and sittis under thair assurance, payand them black-maill, and permittand them to reif, herrie, and oppresse their nichtbouris, with their knowledge, and in their sight, without resistance or contradiction." Acts, Ja. VI. 1567. c. 21. Murray.

This predatory incursion was called lifting the herschaw or hershup, which, by a singular blunder, is, in Garnet's Tour, denominated hardship, as if it had been the English word of this form.

Depredations of this kind were very common in the Highlands, or on their borders. Rob Roy Macgregor, one of the most famous of these freebooters, overawed the country so late as the year 1744, and used often to take the rents from the factor to the Duke of Montrose, after he had collected them for his master. His hostility to the duke, and, as would appear, his engaging in this strange kind of life, was owing to the following circumstance:—Being proprietor of the estate of Craigrostan, he, with one Macdonald, had borrowed a considerable sum of money from the duke, for purchasing cattle. Macdonald, having got possession of the money, fled with it; and Roy being unable to refund the sum, the duke seized on his lands, and settled other tenants on the farms.

Such was the power of these freebooters, and so feeble was the arm of the law, that at times this illegal contribution received a kind of judicial sanction. A curious order of the justices of peace for the county of Stirling, dated 3d February, [1658-9,] is preserved in the Statistical Account of the parish of Strathblane, vol. xviii. 582. By this, several heritors and tenants in different parishes, who had agreed to pay this contribution to Captain Macgregor, for the protection of their houses, goods, and geir, are enjoined to make payment to him without delay; and all constables are commanded to see this "order put in execution, as they sall answer to the contrair."

An exception, however, is added, which, while it preserves the semblance of equity, shews, in the clearest light, the weakness of the executive power.

"All who have been ingadgit in payment, sal be liberat after such tyme that they go to Captaine Macgregor, and declare to him that they are not to expect any service frae him, or he expect any payment frae them." V. Garnet's Tour, i. 63-66.

This term was also used in the Northern counties of E., to denote "a certain rate of money, corn, cattle, or other consideration, paid unto some inhabiting near the Borders, being men of name and power, allied with certain known to be great robbers and spoil-takers within the counties; to the end, to be by them protected and kept in safety, from the danger of such as do usually rob and steal in those parts. Ann. 43. Eliz. c. 23." Cowel.

Spelman strangely thinks that it received this name from the poverty of those who were thus assessed, as being paid in black money, not in silver;—aere vel opsoniis plerumque pendebatur, non argento; vo. Blackmail.

Du Cange adopts this idea, with a little variation. He says, "Brass money is with us called blanque, or blanche maille;" literally, white money. "But with the Saxons and English," he adds, "it is called black;" vo. Blakmale.

It might seem, perhaps, to have received this denomination in a moral sense, because of its illegality. Wachter, however, defines Blackmal, tributum pro redimenda vexa; deriving it from Germ. plack-en, vexare, exagitare; whence baurenplacker, rusticorum exagitator. Schilter says, that blak-en signifies, praedari.

FORMALE, s. Apparently, rent paid per advance. S.

FORMALING, s. In formaling, in the state of paying rent per advance, or before it be due. S.

MAILER, MEALLER, s. 1. A farmer; one who pays rent.

The thrid wolf is men of heretege;

As lordis, that hes landis be Godis lane,

And settis to the maillaris a willage,

For prayer, pryce, and the gersum tane;

Syne vexis him or half the term be gane,

Wyth pykit querrells, for to mak him fane

To flitt, or pay the gersum new agane.

Henryson, Bannatyne Poems, p. 120.

2. It now signifies one who has a very small piece of ground; nearly synon. with cottar, S. See Sup.

"Another class of persons remains to be mentioned, who, though they cannot strictly be called farmers, are so in part, as they occupy one, two, or three acres of ground. These are commonly called cottars, i. e. cottagers, or mailers, and often hold of the principal farmer. They do not depend on farming for their entire support, being, in general, artificers, mechanics, or day-labourers." P. Kiltarn, Ross. Statist. Acc. i. 275.

"The mailers are those poor people who build huts on barren ground, and improve spots around them, for which they pay nothing for a stipulated number of years." P. Urray, Ross. Ibid. vii. 254.

The word, however much it has fallen in its signification, is perfectly equivalent to farmer; as denoting one who pays mail or rent. V. FERME, s.

MAIL-GARDEN, s. A garden, the products of which are raised for sale; corr. pron. meal-garden, S. See Sup.

It seems to be thus denominated, not because mail or rent is paid for the garden itself, but because, the fruits being raised for sale, he, who either sends for them, or consumes them in the garden, pays mail. It is thus distinguished from a garden, which, although rented, is kept for private use.

MAILIN, MAILING, MALING, s. 1. A farm, S. from mail, because it is rented.

To tak ane mailing, that grit lawbour requyris;
Syne wantis grayth for to manure the land.

Maitland Poems, p. 315.

2. The term during which a tenant possesses a farm.

—“Nor yet is he [the lord of the tenement] prejudged in his right be the deed of his Fermour, done be him in the time of his mailling.” Baron Courts, c. 48.

This, however, may be the gerund of the v.

According to Sir J. Sinclair, “mailing comes from mail, in consequence of rents being originally paid in mails or bags.” Observ. p. 181. But this is a very singular inversion. The bag might possibly receive this designation, as having been used for carrying the tribute paid to princes. V. MAIL.

MAIL-MAN, S. A farmer; q. a rent-payer.

“Na Mail-man, or Fermour, may thirle his Lord of his frie tenement, althought he within his time haue done thirle service, or other service, not aught be him.” Baron Courts, c. 48.

Schilter mentions malman as used in Sax. A. 961. to denote one who served a monastery, perhaps by lifting the rents due to it, vo. Mal, census, p. 563. Maalman, according to Du Cange, dicti quod homines erant tributo obnoxii. Wachter gives various senses of this word, Gl. col. 1031.

MAIL-PAYER, s. The same with Mailer and Mail-man, S.B.

— A lass, what I can see, that well may sair
The best mail-payer's son that e'er buir hair.

Ross's Helenore, p. 104.

“Firmarius, ane mail-payer, ane mailer, or mail-man.”
Skene, Verb. Sign. vo. Firmarius.

To MAIL, MAILL, v. a. To rent; to pay rent for.

“Gif it be ane man that mailis the hows, and birnis it reklesly, he sall amend the skaith efter his power, and be banist the towne for thre yeiris.” Acts, Ja. I. 1426. c. 85.
Maillis, Skene, c. 75.

MAILYIE, s. 1. In pl., the plates or links of which a coat of mail is composed.

Vnto him syne Eneas geuin has,
That by his vertw wan the secund place,
Ane habirgeoun of birnist mailyeis bricht.

Doug. Virgil, 136, 20.

Teut. maelie, orbiculus, hamus, annulus, Fr. maille, Ital. maglia. The S. proverb, “Many mailyies makes an haubergioun,” is evidently of Fr. origin. Maille à maille on fait les haubergeons; Cotgr., vo. Maille.

2. Network.

Hir kirtill suld be of clene constance,
Lasit with lesun lufe,
The mailyeis of continwance,
For nevir to remufe.

Henrysone, Bannatyne Poems, p. 103.

Teut. maelie van het net, the meshes of a net.

MAILIE, s. A pet ewe. V. MAILLIE. S.

MAILYIE, s. The name of an old French coin. S.

MAILLIE, s. An affectionate term for a sheep. S.

MAILLIE, s. The same with Molly, used for Mary. S.

MAILS, s. pl. An herb. V. MIDDEN MYLIES. S.

To MAIN, v. a. To bemoan, S. V. MENE, v.

MAIN, MAYNE, MANE, s. Moan; lamentation, S.

He saw the Sothroun multipliand mayr,
And to hym self oft wald he mak his mayne.
Off his gud kyne thai had slane mony ane.

V. MENE. Wallace, i. 189. MS.

MAYNDIT. Wall. i. 198, Perth Ed. V. WAYNDIT.

MAYNE, MANE, s. 1. Might; properly, strength of body.

Schir Jhon the Grayme, that mekill was off mayne,
Amang thaim raid with a gud sper in hand:
The fyrst he slew that he befor him fand.

Wallace, vii. 702. MS.

2. Courage; valour.

Assembl now your routis here present,
And into feild defend, as men of mane,
Your king Turnus, he be not reft nor slane.

Doug. Virgil, 417, 42.

This word is also used in E. But Johnson does not properly express its sense, when he renders it “violence, force.”

A.S. maegen, Isl. magn, magnitudo virium, G. Andr.; from meg-a, posse.

MAINE BREAD, MAIN-BRED, s. Manchet-bread. S.

MAINLIE, adv. Used apparently for meanly. S.

MAIN-RIG, applied to land. Syn. Runrig, q. v. S.

MAINS, MAINES, s. The farm attached to the mansion-house on an estate, and in former times usually possessed by the proprietor, S. This in E. is sometimes called the demesne.

“Gif there be twa mainnes pertaining to ony man that is deceased, the principall maines suld not be divided, bot suld remaine with his aire and successour, without division; togidder with the principal messuage.” Skene, Verb. Sign. vo. Manerium.

He renders it, q. “domaine landes; or terrae dominicales, because they ar laboured and inhabited be the Lorde and proprietar of the samin;” ibid. L.B. mans-us, mans-a, fundus cum certo agri modo.—Mansus Dominicus,—proprius et peculiaris domini mansus, quem dominus ipse colebat, cujusque fructus percipiebat; DuCange. V. MANYS.

MAIN'S MORE, s. Free grace or good will. S.

MAIN SWEAT. The vulgar term for the violent perspiration which often immediately precedes death. S.

MAINTO, MENTO, s. To be in one's mainto, to be under obligations to one; Out o' one's mento, no longer to be under obligations to one. S.

MAYOCK, s. A mate. V. MAIK.

MAYOCK FLOOK. A species of flounder, S.

“The Mayock Flook, of the same size with the former, without spots.” Sibb. Fife, 120: “Pleuronectes flesus, Common Flounder.” Note, ibid.

To MAJOR, v. n. To prance about, or walk backwards and forwards with a military air. S.

MAJOR-MINDIT, adj. Haughty in demeanour, resembling a military officer of rank. S.

MAIR, MAIRE, MARE, s. 1. An officer attending a sheriff or ordinary judge, for executing summonses and letters of diligence, and for arresting those accused of any trespass, S. Syn. Messenger. See S.

“Fra thyne furth, it is statute and ordanit that ilk officiar of the kingis, as Maire, or kingis Seriant, and Barronne Seriant, sall not pas in the countrie, na Barronne Seriant in the Barronny, but ane horne and his wand.” Acts, Ja. I. 1426. c. 110. Edit. 1566.

“It is ordanit, that al Mairis and Seriantis arreist at the Schireffis bidding, albeit that na partie followar be, all trespassouris.” Ibid. 1436. c. 140.

According to Skene, “the Kings Maire is of ane greater power and authoritie, nor the messengers or officiers of armes, and speciallie in justice aires, and punishing of trespassors.” De Verb. Sign. vo. Marus.

An officer of this description is now commonly denominated a Sheriff's Mair, S.

2. Maire of fee, a hereditary officer under the crown, whose power seems to have resembled that of sheriff-substitute in our times.

The power of this officer might extend either to one district in a county, or to the whole. He might appoint one or more deputies, who were to discharge the duty belonging to their office immediately in his name.

"A Mair of fee, quether he be Mair of the schirefdome, or of part, sall haue power to present ane sufficient person or personis, & habill to the Schiref in court to be deputis vnder him.—He sall schaw nane vther power in his attachiamentis, na in his summoundis making, bot allanerly the precept of his ouerman, the quhilk commandis him to mak the summoundis." Acts, Ja. I. 1429. c. 126. Edit. 1566.

Skene, in an inserted explanation, calls "the Mair of fee, Schiref in that part." Stat. David II. c. 51. s. 6. Vicecomites in hac parte, Marg. Lat. Elsewhere, he complains that "now the said office is given in fee and heritage to Maires of fee, quha knowis nocht their office: bot ar idle persones, and onely dois diligence in taking vp of their fees, from them to quhom they do na gud, nor service to the King." De Verb. Sign. vo. Marus.

In the reign of Alexander II., this office was not reckoned unworthy of the rank of an earl; and it had powers attached to it, to the exercise of which he had no claim merely as a nobleman.

"Na Earle, nor his servants may enter in the lands of anie freeholders haldand of the King, or take vp this vnlaw: bot onlie the Earle of Fife: and he may not enter as Earle; bot as Mair to the King of the Earledom of Fife, for vptaking of the kings deuties and richts." Stat. Alex. II. c. 15. s. 3.

Skene views the term, Mair of fee as synon. with Toscheoderach.

"It is necessare that the executer of the summons sall declare and exprime in his executions, his awin proper name, with the name of his office: As gif he be the Kings Mair or his Toscheoderach (ane serjeand, ane officiar, ane Mair of fie) or anie other name of office pertaining to the execution of summons." Reg. Maj. I. c. 6. s. 7.

Toscheoderach, barbarum nomen, priscis Scotis, et Hybernis usitatum, pro Serjando, vel Serviente Curiae, qui literas citatorias mandat executioni. Et apud interpretes Juris Civilis Nuncius dicitur. David 2. Rex Scotiae dedit et concessit Joanni Wallace suo Armi-gero, et fideli, officium Serjandiae Comitatus de Carrik, quod officium, Toschadorech dicitur, vulgò, ane mair of fee. Not. ad loc. Lat.

I am inclined, however, to think that Skene is mistaken here, and that the Toscheoderach was indeed the deputy of the Mair of fee. For in the text they seem to be distinguished:—Si fuerit Marus Domini Regis, vel Toscheoderach ipsius, vel aliquod nomen officii pertinentis ad summonitionem faciendam. According to this view, ipsius refers immediately to Marus; not to Regis, as Skene has understood it.

The same distinction occurs in another place.

"Sche sall gang to the principal Mare of that schirefdome, or to the Toschoderach gif he can be found." Reg. Maj. IV. c. 8. s. 3. Ad capitalem Marum illius comitatus, vel ad Toscheoderach.

If we could suppose, indeed, that Skene quoted the very words of the charter of David II., it would confirm his view. But he seems merely to subjoin his own explanation of the term, when he says; Dicitur vulgò, ane mair of fee.

Boece makes the Toscheoderach to be nothing more than a thief-catcher. Thus he explains the term; Latine emissarii lictores, seu furum et latronum indagatores. Hist. Ind. vo. Tochederach.

The term was also used to denote the office itself. Hence it is thus explained by Skene.

"Tocheoderache, ane office or jurisdiction, not vnlike to ane Baillerie, specialle in the Isles and Hie-landes. For the 9. Mart. 1554, Neill Mack Neill dispoed and analied to James Mack Oneil, the lands of Gya, and vthers, with the Toschodairach of Kintyre." De Verb. Sign.

The term might at first view seem to have some affinity to Gael. Tosh, Toshich, primarily, the beginning or first part of any thing; sometimes, the front of the battle; hence, Toshich, the leader of the van of an army. But, from its determinate meaning, it appears to be merely a corruption of Gael. and Ir. teachdaire, a messenger, or teachdaireacht, a message. It may indeed be supposed, that tosh or toshich has been prefixed, as signifying that he was the first or principal messenger under the hereditary Mair.

The farther back we trace the office of Mair, the greater appears its dignity. The Pictish Chronicle, A. 938. mentions the death of Dubican, Mormair of Angus. The same title occurs in the Annals of Ulster, for the year 1032. Maolbryd is styled "Murmor of Mureve," or Moray. In these Annals, in the description of a battle between the Norwegians and Constantin, A. 921, Murmors are named as chiefs on Constantin's side: and, A. 1014, Douel, a great Murmor of Scotland, is killed with Brian Borowe. V. Pinkerton's Enquiry, ii. 185.

Mr. Pink. observes, that "this title seems equivalent to thane or iarl;" adding, "But I know not if it is any where else to be found." The late learned Dr. Donald Smith, whose early death every friend of the literature of our country must deplore, had the same idea. "Mormhair was the highest title of nobility among the ancient Scots, and still continues, among the speakers of Gaelic, to be applied to earl or lord, as banamhor' air is to countess." Report Comm. Highland Soc. App. p. 269.

Did we pay any regard to the order of enumeration observed by Wyntown, we would infer that the Mair was inferior, not only to the Earl, but to the Baron, or at least nearly on a level with the latter. Speaking of the conduct of William of Normandy, after the conquest, he says;

And to the mare sykkynes,
Of Lordis, that mast mychty wes,
Thaire eldast barnys, and thare ayris
Of Erllys, Baronys, and of Marys,
For ostage gret he tuk alsua,
And delyveryd til hym war tha:
He send thame all in Normandy.

Cronykil, vii. 2. 12.

From the passage quoted above, from the statutes of Alexander II., with respect to Makduff, it appears that the office of "Mair to the King of the Earledom of Fife," was one of the hereditary privileges granted to his family. This was probably in consideration of his signal service in bringing Malcolm Canmore to the crown; although it is not particularly mentioned among the honours which he claimed as his reward. From the marginal note to the statute of Alexander II., Cuninghame, in his Essay on the Inscription on Makduff's Cross, not only infers, "that the Earl of Fife was Marus Regis Comitatus de Fife," but "makes the words graven upon the cross, to relate to the privileges of the regality the king gave to him, and to the asylum or girth." V. Sibbald's Fife, p. 219.

Robert II. granted a charter "to John Wynd, of the office of Mairship Principal, vic. Aberdeen, with the lands of Petmukstoun, whilk land and office Robert de Keith, son to William de Keith Marshal of Scotland, resigned." Robertson's Index of Charters, p. 121, No. 71.

During the same reign, a charter is granted "to William Herowart, of the office of Mairship of the east quarter of Fife, with the land called the Mairtoun, whilk William Mair resigned." Ibid. p. 120. No. 68. From the connexion, it is probable, that some ancestor of the latter had received his surname from his office.

Perhaps it was the same land, that was afterwards given to William Fleming, who received "the office of Mair-of-fee of the barony of Carale [Crail,] with the land of Mar-toun, and the acre called Pulterland, belonging to said office." Ibid. p. 127. No. 25.

Mr. Heron has said, that "the transient dignity of Mur-mor in the Scottish history, and that of iarl introduced into England, and more permanently established, are both of Danish origin." Hist. Scotland, i. Sect. 2. pp. 148, 149. He refers to Mallet's Northern Antiquities, and Johnstone's Antiq. Celto-Scand.; but in that loose mode of quotation that generally characterizes his work. I have not been able to find this word in either of the books referred to.

It would seem that Murmor, or more properly Mormair, is immediately of Gaelic origin. For Ir. mormaor not only signifies a lord mayor, but a high steward; V. O'Brien. Shaw renders Gael. mormhaor, "a lord mayor, a high steward, an earl, lord." It is evidently from mor great, and maor "a steward, an officer, a servant; formerly, a baron," id. "Maor," says O'Brien, "among the Scots, was anciently the same with Baron afterwards, and maor-mor, with Earl." C.B. maer, a ruler, a governor; Arm. maier, the head of a village, whence perhaps Fr. maire a mayor, anc. maier. See Sup.

But this term was by no means confined to the Celtic. It occurs, in a variety of forms, in the Gothic and other languages. Alem. mer, a prince; whence, Marco-mer, the lord of the marches, Inguimer-us, the prince of the youth, Chlodo-mir, an illustrious prince. O. Teut. mari, maro, illustrious, celebrated; A.S. maere, id. O.Sw. mir, a king, according to Rudbeck. Hence, says Schilter, speaking of this radical term, Mayor hodie pro praefecto, rectore villae, Villicus, Hofmeister; Gl. Teut. Chald. Syr. mar, a lord; Turc. emir, Arab. emir, a prince, a governor; in anc. Ind. mor, moer, a king; Pers. mir, a lord; Tartar. mir, a prince.

3. The first magistrate of a royal borough, a Provost, or Mayor.

The Mayr ansuer'd, said, We wald gyff ransoun,
To pass your way, and der no mayr the toun.

Wallace, viii. 872. MS.

"That the Mair and Baillie sall be chosen be the sicht and consideration of the communitie." Stat. Gild. c. 34.

The Provost, or Mayor, of Edinburgh seems formerly to have been distinguished from other officers, to whom the same name belonged, by being called the maister Mair.

The number of thame that wer thair,
I sall descriue thame as I can;
My Lord, I mene the maister Mair,
The Prouest ane maist prudent man:
With the haill counsall of the toun,
Ilkane cled in a veluet gown.

Burel's Entry Q. 1590. Watson's Coll. ii. 14.

It was written in the same manner in O.E.

"My Lord Mayr, Sir John Guillott Knyght, companyd of the Aldermen,—reseyved the said Quene very mykely. And after, they rod befor Hyr to the Mother Church, the sayd Mayre beryng his Masse." Q. Margaret's (Daughter to Hen. VII.) Journey to Scotland, Leland's Collect. iv. 271.

Langland seems to use it in the sense of Judge.

Salomon the sage, a sermon he made
For amend Mayres, and men that kepe lawes;
And tolde hem this teme, that I tel thinke,
Ignis deuorabit tabernacula eorum, qui libenter accipiunt munera. P. Ploughman, Fol. 13, a.

Elsewhere it is conjoined with judge.

Therefore I red you reukes, that rich be on this earth,
Apon truste of your treasure, trientales to haue,
Be ye neuer the bolder, to breake the ten hestes;
And namely ye maisters, mayres, & judges,
That haue the welth of this world, & for wise men be holden. Ibid. Fol. 39, a.

In another place, it would seem to denote only an officer of a court of justice, as equivalent to the sense in which it is still used in S.

Shal neither king ne knight, constable ne mayre,
Ouerleade the common, ne to the court sommone,
Ne put hem in panel, to done hem plight her truth.

Ibid. Fol. 16, b.

Where governors occurs in our version, Wiclif uses the term meyres. "And to meyris or presidentis, and to kyngis ye schul be led for me in witnessyng to hem, and to the hethen men," Matt. x. 18. The Gr. word is ἡγεμονας.

In addition to the etymological hints given under sense 2., I shall only observe that mair, as denoting a magistrate, or mayor, has been generally, but improperly, derived from Lat. major. It is most probable that the Lat. compar. is from the same root with our theme, or with S. mair, greater, q. v. Maer, says Keysler, etiam Celtis praepositus est, a qua voce malle Anglorum Major (Mayor) arcessere, quam e Latino fonte. Antiq. Septent. p. 395.

MAIR, adj. More. V. MARE.

MAIR, adv. Moreover. S. Mairattour.

MAIR BY TOKEN. Especially.

MAIRDIL, adj. Unwieldy. A mairdil woman, a woman who from size or bodily infirmity moves heavily, Ang.

Su.G. moer, anc. maer, soft, tender. But it is doubtful if there be any affinity.

MAIRATOUR, adv. Moreover, S.B.

"Mairatour, the same Apostle sais thus: In hoc est charitas, &c." Abp. Hamiltoun's Catechisme, 1551, Fol. 17. b.

And mair attoure, his mind this mony day,
Gatelines to Nory there, my dother, lay.

V. ATOUR. Ross's Helenore, p. 101.

MAIROUR, MAIROUR, adv. Moreover.

"Mairour thow so doand, condemnis thi awin saule to panis eternal, because that thou forsakis vtterly thi Lord God." Abp. Hamiltoun's Catechisme, Fol. 17. a.

MAIRT, s. An ox or cow killed and salted for winter provision. V. MART.

MAIS, conj. But; Fr. See Sup.

Prudent, mais gent, tak tent and prent the wordis Intill this bill. Scott, Bannatyne Poems, p. 201.

MAISCHLOCH, s. Mixed grain. V. MASHLIN. S.
To MAISE, MEYSE, v. n. To incorporate; to unite into one mass, S.B. V. MEISE.

MAYS, MAYSE, MAISS, 3 p. v. Makes.

Freedom mayse man to haiff liking.

In MS. mayss. V. also xii. 252. Barbour, i. 226

Heyr the thryd elde now tayis end,
That, as the Ebrewy mays ws kende,
Contenys nyne hundyr yhere
And twa, gyf all wele rekynynd were.

Wyntown, iii. 3. 170.

MAIS'D, part. adj. Mellow; as, a mais'd apple. S.

MAISER, s. A drinking-cup. V. MASAR. S.

MAISERY, s. Corr. of the name Margery or Marjory. S.

MAIST, MAST, adj. 1. Most; denoting number or quantity, S.

— Off Scotland the maist party
Thai had in till thair company.

Barbour, ii. 215. MS.

O. E. meste, greatest.

Thine fon beth in ech half, & this ys the meste doute.
R. Glouc. p. 114.

2. Greatest in size, S.

Fresche vere to burgioun herbis and sueit flouris,
 The hate somer to nuris corne al houris,
 And brede al kynd of foulis, fysche, and beist,
 Heruest to rendir his frutis maist and leist,
 Wyntir to snyb the erth wyth frost and schouris.
Doug. Virgil, 308, 21.

3. Greatest in rank.

Swanus, and Knowt hys swne, then
 Cheftanys ware, and maste oure-men
 Of that strayne natyowne,
 That maid this felle dystrowtyown.
Wyntown, vi. 15, 104.
 Of the mast Byschape of that land
 Scho quene was made the crown berand.
Ibid. vii. 10. 321.

Moes.G. maists, A.S. maest, Isl. Su.G. mest, id.

MAIST, MAST, adv. Most.

Thare made wes a gret mawngery,
 Quhare gaddryd ware the mast worthy.
Wyntown, vii. 4. 46.

MAISTLINS, adv. Mostly, S.

This has been viewed as the same with Germ. meistins, id. But it is formed by the addition of the termination to
 S. maist. V. LINGIS.

MAIST, MAISTLY, adv. 1. Almost; nearly; as, "Maist dead, seldom helps the kirkyard." 2. For the most or greatest part. S.

MAISTER, MASTER, s. 1. A landlord; a proprietor of an estate, S.

"Gif ane dwelles vpon land perteing to ane frie man, and as ane husband man, halde lands of him; and he happin to deceis; his maister sall haue the best eaver or beast
 —of his cattel." Quon. Attach. c. 23. s. 1.

"In harvest the farmer must, if a fair day offer, assist when called out in cutting down his landlord's (or as here termed his master's) crop, though he leave his own entirely neglected, and exposed to bad weather." P. Wick, Caithn.
 Statist. Acc. x. 17.

The word, in this sense, being used in relation to tenants, is evidently a remnant of the old feudal system.

2. In composition, like master E., it is often used to denote what is chief or principal in its kind; as maister- street, the chief or principal street, Doug. V. 51, 8. &c.
Mayster-man seems equivalent to Lord. See Sup.

A mayster-man cald Feretawche,—
 And other mayster-men thare fyve
 Agayne the Kyng than ras belywe.

Wyntown, vii. 7. 201.

Feretawch or Ferchard, here called a mayster-man, is designed by Fordun Comes de Strathern. As Wyntown speaks of "othir fyve mayster-men," we learn from Fordun, that six earls were engaged in this rebellion. Mayster-men, however, as used by Wyntown, may denote great men in general; corresponding to majoribus in Fordun. Concitatis regni majoribus, sex comites, Ferchard scilicet comes de Strathern et alii quinque. Scotichron. Lib. 8. c. 4.

3. The eldest son of a Baron or Viscount, by courtesy; as, The Master of Lovat. 4. The designation given to a farmer by those who are employed by him. S.

Su.G. mester denotes a landholder, mesterman, an architect; Mod. Sw. maesterman,—one who certainly gets the mastery,—an executioner, a hangman.

The term Master has generally been viewed as radically from Lat. Magister. But it may be questioned, whether, in some of the Northern dialects at least, it may not claim a Gothic origin. It occurs in almost all the dialects of this language; Alem. mestar, Germ. meister, Belg. meester, Isl.

meistare, Dan. mester; as well as in C.B. meistr. A.S.
maester was used as early as the reign of Alfred. As Lat.
magister is evidently from magis, more, A.S. maester may be from maest, most, greatest; Alem. meistar from meist, id. &c. V. Ibre.

MAISTER, MASTIR, MAISTRY, s. 1. Dominion; authority.

This Ayr was set in Jun the auctand day,
 And playnly cryt, na fre man war away.
 The Scottis marweld, and pess tane in the land,
 Quhy Inglissmen sic maistir tuk on hand.
Wallace, vii. 56. MS.

2. Service; exertion; execution.

On Sotheron men full mekill maister thai wrocht.
Wallace, ix. 529. MS.
 With xl men Cristall in bargane baid,
 Agayne viii scor, and mekill maistir maid,
 Slew that captayne, and mony cruell man.
Ibid. vii. 1283. MS.

3. Resistance; opposition.

Bot Sotheroun men durst her no castell hald,—
 Saiff one Morton, a Capdane fers and fell,
 That held Dundee. Than Wallace wald nocht duell.
 Thidder he past, and lappyt it about.—
 Thow sall forthink sic maister for to mak,
 All Ingland sall off the exemple tak.
Wallace, ix. 1846. MS.

4. Victory, S.

—This Ceneus, quhilk than gat the maistry,
 Belue Turnus with ane dart dede gart ly.
Doug. Virgil, 297, 49.

O.Fr. maistrée, authority, power, Gl. Rom. Rose.

MAISTRYSS, MASTRYSS, s. 1. Affectation of dominion; appearance of authority.

—Inglis men, with gret maistryss,
 Come with thair ost in Lowthian;
 And sone till Edynburgh ar gane.
Barbour, xviii. 260. MS.

2. Service.

The hund did thar sa gret maistrys,
 That held ay for owtyne changing,
 Eftre the rowte quhar wes the King.
Barbour, vi. 566. MS.

3. Art; ability.

And fele, that now of wer ar sley,
 In till the lang trew sall dey:
 And othir in thair sted sall ryss,
 That sall conn litill of that maistryss.
Barbour, xix. 182. MS.

Fr. maistrise, "mastery, authority, command; also, skill, artificialness, expert workmanship;" Cotgr.

MAISTERFULL, adj. 1. Difficult; arduous; requiring great exertion.

Till Erle Malcome he went vpon a day,
 The Lennox haile he had still in his hand;
 Till King Eduuard he had nocht than maid band.
 That land is strait, and maisterfull to wyn,
 Gud men of armyss that tyme was it within.
Wallace, iv. 159. MS.

2. Imperious; using violence. Maisterfull beggaris, a designation conjoined with that of Sornaris, are such as take by force, or by putting householders in fear.
Maisterfull partie, an expression descriptive of rebels.

"For the away putting of Sornaris, oner-lyaris, & maister- terfull beggaris, with hors, hundis, or vther gudis, that all officiaris—tak ane inquisition at ilk court that they hald, of the foirsaid thingis." Ja. II. 1449. c. 21. Edit. 1566.

"For eschewing of greit and maisterfull thift and reif, it is ordanit, that the Justice do law ont throw the realme, and quhair he may not hald justice of maisterfull men, he sall verifie and certifie the King thair of." Ibid. 1449. c. 27.

M A K

—"God of his grace hes send our Souerane lord sic progressis and prosperitie, that all his rebellis and brekaris of his justice, ar remouit out of his realme, and na maisterfull partie remanand, that may cause ony breking in his realme." Ibid. 1457. c. 102.

MAISTERFULLIE, adv. Violently; with the strong hand. S.

MAISTERMAN, s. The Deacon of an incorporated trade. S.

MAISTERSCHIP, s. A title of respect formerly given to the Magistrates of Aberdeen. S.

MAISTER, MASTER, s. Urine; properly what is stale; chamber-lie, S. Hence maister laiglen, a wooden vessel for holding urine; maister-cann, an earthen vessel applied to the same use, S.

Wi' maister laiglen, like a brock,
He did wi' stink maist smore him.—
Your neither kin to pat nor pan;
Nor uly pig, nor maister-cann.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 63. 65.

Can this have any affinity to Moes. G. maihst, a dunghill, Belg. mest, dung, mest-en, to dung?

MAISTER-CAN, s. An earthen vessel used for preserving stale urine, or chamber-lie. S.

MAISTER-TUB, s. A wooden vessel for the same use. S.

MAIT, MATE, adj. 1. Fatigued; overpowered with weariness. See Sup.

Thare fa thay did assailye and inuade,
Sa lang, quhil that by fors he was ouerset,
And of the heuy byrdin sa mait and het,
That his micht failyeit.— Doug. Virgil, 417, 17.
"Wery and mate." Bellend. Cron. Fol. 22, b.

2. Confounded; overwhelmed with terror.

Affrayit of the ferlie scho stude sic aw,
And at the first blenk become scho mate,
Naturale hete left her membris in sic state,
Quhill to the ground all mangit fell scho doun.
Doug. Virgil, 78, 13.

For mate I lay downe on the grounde,
So was I stonayd in that stounde.
Ywaine, v. 427. Ritson's E. M. Rom.

3. Dispirited; dejected.

The lordis, that than in Ingland ware,
Feld thame of this a-greved sare,
In peryle and in hard dowl stad,
Of a gud rede all mate and made. Wyntown, vii. 2. 30.

4. Stupified, or elevated, by means of strong drink.

Ane Ingliss Captane was sittand wp so lait,
Quhill he and his with drynk was made full mait.
Nyn men was thar, now set in hye curage,
Sum wald haiff had gud Wallace in that rage,
Sum wald haiff bound Schir Jhon the Graym throucht streth. Wallace, ix. 1405. MS.

Rudd. derives it from O.Fr. mat, overcome, beaten. In Gl. Rom. Rose, mat-er, to vanquish, is mentioned. Teut. matt, fessus, has also been referred to. We may add to these Su. G. matt, languidus, pro lassitudine viribus defectus, from Sw. matt-a, Su. G. moed-a, Isl. maed-a, fatigare, molestia afficere, mod, lassus; Alem. muothe, fatigatus, muade, lassus, muad, lassitudo; Schilter. A.S. methig, defatigatus, is radically allied. The Fr. word is most probably from the Goth. V. MUTH.

MAITH, s. Son-in-law. V. MAIGH. S.

To MAK, MACK, MAKE, v. n. 1. To compose poetry.

Baith John the Ross and thou shall squeil and skirle,
Gif eir I heir ocht of your making mair.
Kennedy, Evergreen, ii. 49.

— O maistres Marie! make I pray:
And put in ure thy worthie vertews all.

M A K

—A plesant poet perfyte sall ye be.
Chaucer, id. Maitland Poems, p. 267.

And eke to me it is a grete penaunce,
Sith rime in English hath soche scarcite,
To follow word by word the curiosite
Of gransonflour of them that made in Fraunce.

Complaynt of Ven.

Teut. maech-en, facere; Alem. gimahh-on, componere.

2. To avail; to be of consequence; used with the negative affixed, It maks na, it does not signify, it is of no consequence; sometimes as one word, maksna, S.B.

Sae gin the face be what ye lippen till,
Ye may hae little cause to roose your skill.
Maksna, quo she, gin I my hazard tak,
Small sturt may other fouks about it mak.

Ross's Helenore, p. 85.

Nae doubt ye'll think her tackling braw,
But well ken we that maksna a';
Gin she sud ony water draw. Shirrefs' Poems, p. 254.

3. To counterfeit; to assume prudish airs.

Wow, quod Malkin, hyd yow;
Quhat neidis you to maik it sua?

Peblis to the Play, st. 8.

4. To become fit for the peculiar purpose for which any thing is intended; as, "Muck maun be laid in a heap to mak." S.

MAK, MAKE, s. 1. Manner; fashion; as make, E.

Wallace slepyt bot a schort quhill and raiss,
To rewl the ost on a gud mak he gais.

Wallace, x. 554. MS.

2. It seems anciently to have denoted a poem, or work of genius.

Hence Kennedy says to Dunbar;
Fule ignorant, in all thy mowis and makks,
It may be verryfeit thy wit is thin,
Quhen thou wryts Densman—

V. MAKING. Evergreen, ii. 66.

To MAK aff, or To MAK aff wi' one's self, v. n. To scamper off. S.

To MAK at, v. n. To aim a blow at one. S.

To MAK doun, v. a. To dilute; to reduce the strength of spirituous liquors. S.

To MAK doun a bed. To fold down the clothes, and make it ready for being slept in. S.

To MAK for, v. n. To prepare; as, He's makin' for risin'. S.

To MAK in wi' one, v. n. To get into one's favour. S.

To MAK out, v. n. To extricate one's self. S.

To MAK throw wi', v. n. To conclude; as, "He maid throw wi' his discourse after an unco pingle." S.

To MAK up, v. a. To raise with difficulty. S.

To MAK up, v. n. To rise with difficulty. S.

To MAK up, v. a. To be of availment to; to remunerate; to enrich. S.

To MAK up, v. a. 1. To contrive; to invent. 2. To fabricate, regarding a groundless story. S.

To MAK up till one, v. a. To overtake one. S.

To MAK fore, v. n. To be of advantage. V. FORE. S.

To MAK HERING. To cure herrings. S.

To MAK PENNY. To sell; to convert into money. S.

To MAK STEAD. To be of use; E. to stand in stead. S.

MAKAR, MAKKAR, s. A poet.

Go worthi buk, fulfillyt off suthfast deid,
Bot in langage off help thow has gret neid.
Quhen gud makaris rang weill in to Scotland,
Gret harm was it that nane off thaim ye fand.

Wallace, i. 1455. MS.

I see the Makkaris amangis the laif

M A K

Playis heir thair padyanis, syne gois to graif;
Spairit is nocht thair facultie.

Dunbar, "Lament for the Deth of the Makkaris,"
Bannatyne Poems, p. 74—78.

Mr. Pink. has observed, that "the word maker is common in this sense in the English writers from the time of Henry VIII. to that of Elizabeth."

It is formed from mak, A.S. mac-an, or Teut. maech-en, in the same manner as Belg. dichter, a poet, from Germ. dicht-en, facere, parare. The anc. Icelanders also used the v. yrk-ia in the sense of versificare, and yrkia visor, carmina condere, from yrkia, to work.

It is worthy of observation, that, in various languages, the name given to a poet contains an allusion to the creative power which has been ascribed to genius. Gr. ποιητης, from ποιω, facio. A.S. sceop, id. literally a former or maker, from sceap-ian, creare, facere. Omerus se godu sceop; Homer the excellent poet; Boeth. 41. 1. According to Ihre, Isl. skap, from skap-a, creare, is used only to denote genius or ingenuity. Isl. skald, poeta, seems to have a similar origin. G. Andr. derives it from skial, figmentum. Alem machara is rendered auctores. Dera heidenon irridun machara; Gentilium errorum auctores. Notk. Psa. 77. ap. Schilter. p. 558.

MAKING, s. Poetry.

Schir, I complaine of injure;
A resing storie of rakyng Mure
Hes mangillit my making, throw his malise.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 107.

MAKDOME, s. 1. Shape; form; more generally used.

Makdome, and proper members all,
Sa perfyte, and with joy repleit,
Pruifs hir, but peir or pereg all.

Montgomery, Maitland Poems, p. 165.

2. Elegance of form; handsomeness.

I suld at faris be found, new facis to spy;
At playis, and preichings, and pilgrimages greit,—
To manifest my makdome to multitude of pepil,
And blaw my bewtie on breid, quhair bernis war mony.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 47.

To MAKE to, v. n. To approximate in some degree to a certain point or object.

"London and Lancashire goes on with the presbyteries and sessions but languidly. Sundry other shires are making to; but all the errors of the world are raging over all the kingdom." Baillie's Lett. ii. 36.

MAKE, s. Mate. V. MAIK.

MAKE, s. Abbrev. of the name Malcolm. S.

MAKER-LIKE, adj. More proper; more becoming. S.

MAKINT, pron. Maikint, adj. Confident; possessing assurance. A maikint rogue, one who does not disguise his character, S.B.

Isl. mak, Ger. gemach, Belg. gemak, ease; mak, tame, maklyk, easy. Hence, MAKINTLY, MAIKINTLY, adv. With ease; confidently, S.B.

MAKLY, adv. "Evenly, equally," Rudd. See Sup.

The wyndis blawis euin and rycht makly:
Thou may souirly tak the ane howris rest.

Aequatae spirant aurae, Virg. Doug. Virgil, 156, 40.

Rudd. and Sibb. both refer to Maik, a mate or equal. It seems immediately allied to Isl. makligt, what is fit, suitable, equal; commodum, opportunum, par, Verel. Ind. A.S. maccalic, Germ. ge-maechlico, id. Ihre views Su.G. mak, commoditas, as the root. G. Andr. derives the Isl. term from make, socius. Perhaps makly is used by Doug. as an adj.

MAKLY, adj. Seemly; well-proportioned. S.

M A L

MAL-ACCORD, s. Disapprobation; dissent; refusal. S.

MALAPAVIS, s. A mischance; a misfortune. S.

MALARE, MALAR, s. A person who pays rent for a farm: one who rents a house in town. V. MAILER. S.

MALDUCK, s. A name given to the Fulmar. V. MALMOCK.

To MALE, v. a. To stain. V. MAIL. S.

MALE-A-FORREN, s. A meal of meat, over and above what is consumed; a meal beforehand. S.

MALEFICE, s. A bad action. V. MALIFICE. S.

MALE-FRE, adj. Without rent. Syn. Rent-free. S.

MALEGRUGROUS, adj. Grim; or exhibiting the appearance of discontent, S. See Sup.

O.Fr. malengroignie, always in bad humour; Gl. Rom. Rose. The word, however, may be a corr. of Mallewrus, q. v.

MALESON, MALISON, s. A curse; an execration, S. A. Bor. opposed to benison.

"The first punitioun in general, is the curse or maleson of God." Abp. Hamiltoun's Catechisme, Fol. 7, a.

"He got his mother's malison that day," S. Prov.; "spoken of him that has gotten an ill wife." Kelly, p. 165.

O.Fr. maledisson, Lat. maledictio. Gael. mallachd, id. seems formed from the Lat. word.

HORSE-MALISON, s. A person who is cruel to his horse. S.

MAL-GRACE, s. The opposite of being in a state of favour. Fr. See Sup.

"An oath also was taken of all the King's domesticks, that they should not keep intelligence with any of the rebels or others known to be in his majesty's mal-grace." Spotswood, p. 326.

MALGRATIOUS, adj. Surly; ungracious. S.

MALHURE, MALLEUR, s. Mischance; misfortune.

"I saw him not this euening for to end your bracelet, to the quhilk I can get na lokkis, it is reddy to thame, and yit I feir that it will bring sum malhure, and may be sene gif ye chance to be hurt." Lett. Delect. Q. Mary, H. i. b. Edin. Edit. 1572.

"Since the Episcopal Clergy here know they are given up as a prey to their enemies teeth, they had rather sit silent under their malleur, than struggle with the stream when it is so violent and impetuous." Account Persecution [Episcopal] Church in Scotland, 1690. p. 65.

Fr. malheur, from Lat. mala hora, ut bonheur, from bona hora, Rudd.

MALLEWRUS, MALHEURIUS, adj. Unhappy; wretched.

Fr. malheureux.

—Quha vertuus was, and fallis tharefro,
Of verray resoun mallewrus hait is he.

Doug. Virgil, 357, 9.

"The malheurius prince sall warie the tyme that euir he wes sua mischeantlie subiect to the vnressonable desyre of his subiectis." Kennedy of Crosraguell, p. 81.

MALICE, MALE-EIS, s. 1. Bodily disease; used to denote the leprosy with which K. Robert Bruce was seized.

This malice off enfundeyng
Begouth; for throw his cald lying,
Quhen in his gret myscheiff wes he,
Him fell that hard perplexité. Barbour, xx. 75. MS.

Wiclif uses the same word. "Thei broughten to him all that weren at male ese." Matth. 4.—"All that were of male ease." Mark 1.

2. Metaph. applied to trouble or restlessness of mind.

Thus sayd the Kyng, but the violent curage
Of Turnus hie mynd bowit neuer ane stage;
Quha wald with cure of medicins him meis,
The more inccessis and growis his male eis.

Malice, ib. 102, 49. Doug. Virgil, 407, 20.

M A L

Fr. malaise, disease, q. malum otium. We use an adj. of a similar composition. V. ILL-EASED.
MALICEFU', adj. Sickly; in bad health. V. MALICE. S.
MALIFICE, s. Sorcery; witch-craft. S.
To MALIGNNE, v. n. To utter calumny. S.
MALIGRUMPH, s. Spleen. S.
MALING, adj. Wicked; malignant.
 The Basilique that beist maling,
 Of serpents quhilk is countit king.
 Ran quhill he wes the war.

Burel's Pilg. Watson's Coll. ii. 21.

Fr. id. Lat. malign-us.
MALING, s. Injury; hurt.
 Euin so perchance I seik the thing,
 Quhilk may redound to my maling,
 Distruction and distres.

Burel's Pilg. Watson's Coll. ii. 48.

MALISON, s. A curse. V. MALESON.
MALL, MALLY, s. Abbreviation of Mary. S.
MALLACHIE, adj. The colour resembling milk and water mixed, S.B.

A.S. meoloc, meoloc, milk; Belg. melkachtig, milky; or Isl. mioll-r, white, whence miol, new-fallen snow.

To MALLAT, v. n. This v. seems to signify, to feed.
 Then he did take forth of his wallat
 Some draff, whereon this meir did mallat,
 Which fiercely gart her lift her pallat.

Watson's Coll. i. 51.

Isl. maal, a meal, a repast; mellte, devoro, G. Andr. p. 177. Or from maal, and et-a, to eat; as Su.G. aeta maal signifies, to eat a meal.

MALLEURITE', s. Mischance; misfortune. S.

MALLOW, s. The name given in Orkn. to the submarine plant Zastera marina.

MALMOCK, MALLEMOCK, s. The Fulmar, Shetl.
 "Malmock, Mallémock, or Mallduck, Fulmar, Procellaria glacialis,—appears in the friths of Orkney, and voes of Shetland, especially during winter. It is not mentioned by Dr. Barry, and is probably more common in Shetland than in Orkney." Neill's Tour, p. 198.
 This name is Norwegian. V. Penn. Zool. p. 549.

MALT,* s. The phrase, The malt's abune the meal, expresses a state of slight intoxication, or being what is called, half seas over; intimating that one has had a larger proportion of drink than of solid food. S.

MALVERSE, s. A crime; a misdemeanour. S.

MALVESY, MAWESIE, s. Malmsey wine, or some small wine made in imitation of it.

"The Duke—prayed him to send two bosses full of malvesy." Pitscottie, p. 83, 84.

Fr. malvoisie, a name given to a Greek, or Cretan wine, according to Sibb. "from Malvasia, a city of Candia." But Malvasia was a city of Peloponnesus, anciently called Epidaurus, and Epidaurum, from which this wine was first brought. The name was also given to the wine of Chios, an island in the Archipelago. Hence the Romans called it vinum arvisium, from Arvisium, a promontory of Chios. Hence Kilian defines Teut. malvaseye with such latitude; Vinum Arvisium, Creticum, Chium, Monembasites. Ital. malcosio, Hisp. marvisia.
 A sweet wine made in Provence was denominated in the same manner. V. Dict. Trev.

MALVYTE', MAWYTE', s. Vice; wickedness; malignity.

Bot ye traistyt in lawté,
 As sympile folk, but malvyté
 In MS. mawyté.
 For quhethir sa men inclynyt be
 To vertu, or to mawyté,

Barbour, i. 126.

M A N

He may rycht weill refreynye hys will.

Ibid. iv. 730. MS.

O.Fr. malvetie, mauvaistie (Thierry) from malve, merchant; Dict. Trev.

MALWARIS, s. pl. Mowers.
 Sexté and vi xvi to ded has dycht,
 Bot saiff vii men at fled out off thair sycht;
 V malwaris als that Wallace selff with met.

Wallace, xi. 135. MS.

MAMENT, s. Moment. Cannie mament. V. CANNIE. S.

MAMIKEEKIE, s. A smart sound blow. S.

MAMMIE, s. 1. A childish designation for a mother, S.
 And ay she wrought her mammie's wark,
 And ay she sung sae merrilie;

The blythest bird upon the bush
 Had ne'er a lighter heart than she. Burns, iv. 80.

Radically the same with E. Lat., mamma; Gr. μαρμα, voces puerulorum ad matrem. Pers. mamm, id. Teut. mamme, mater.

2. A nurse, S.B.
 Blyth was the wife her foster son to see,—
 Well, says he, mammy, a' that's very gueed.

Ross's Helenore, p. 93.

Lat. mamma, the breast, Teut. mamme, id. also, a nurse. Gael. mome, id. seems to have a common origin.

3. A midwife, S.B.

MAMMONRIE, s. Idolatry. S.

To MAMP, v. a. 1. To nibble; to mop; to eat as one who has no teeth. 2. To speak querulously. E. mump. S.

MAM'S-FOUT, s. A spoiled child. S.

MAM'S-PET, s. The same with Mam's-Fout. S.

MAMUK, s. A fictitious bird.

—Mamuks that byds euer-mair,
 And feids into the crystall air,
 Deid on the fields wer found.

Burel's Pilg. Watson's Coll. ii. 27.

Fr. mammugue, "a winglesse bird, of an unknown beginning, and after death not corrupting; she hath feet a hand long, so light a body, so long feathers, that she is continually carried in the ayre, whereon she feeds." Cotgr.

To MAN, MAUN, v. a. 1. To accomplish by means of strength. 2. To effect by whatever means. S.

MAN, s. 1. A vassal, or subject.

Thai brocht him till the Erle in hy,
 And he gert louss him hastily;

Then he become the Kingis man. Barbour, x. 766. MS.

A.S. Germ. Belg. Isl. Su.G. man, a vassal. In this sense it is used, in the Laws of the Ostrogoths, as opposed to herre, a lord. Hence, as Wachter observes, the phrase, king's man, the king's vassal, and others of a similar kind. Isl. man-sal, the value of a slave. Verel.; a strange prostitution of the name of man!

Manes among the Phrygians, denoted a servant; whence, it is supposed, the term came to be used by the Athenians in the same sense. V. Wachter, vo. Man. For the manner in which one became the bond-man of another, V. TAPPIE-TOUSIE.

2. One dedicated to the service of another from love.

Quhen sall your merci rew upon your man,
 Quhois seruice is yet uncouth to yow?

King's Quair, ii. 44.

3. A male-servant; as, the minister's man, the old phrase denoting his servant, S.

"My man, James Lawrie, give him letters with him to the General, Major Baillie, to Meldrum and Durie." Baillie's Lett. i. 298.

—"Mr. Blair has a chamber, I another, our men in a third." Ibid. p. 217.

"The original of this proverbial expression was probably Joan Thomson's man: Man, in Scotland, signifying either Husband or Servant." Chron. S. P. i. 312.

M A N

4. A husband, S. V. sense 3.

'Twas thus he left his royal plan,
If Marg'ret cou'd but want a man;
But this is more than Marg'ret can.

R. Galloway's Poems, p. 124.

MAN, aux. v. Must, S.

I am commandit, said scho, and I man

Vndo this hare to Pluto consecrate. Doug. Virg. 124, 48.

—— The bodie naturallie,
At certane tymes as we may se,
Man haue refreschement but delay,
Or ellis it will faint and decay.

V. MON. Diall. Clerk and Courteour, p. 91.

MAN-BOTE, s. The compensation for killing a man, fixed by law, according to the rank of the person.

V. BOTE.

MAN-BROW'D, adj. Having hair growing between the eye-brows. V. LUCKEN-BROW'D.

MAND, s. Payment. See Sup.

"Ony partie that sall haif occasione to complain of ony decision gevin in the utter-hous, sall be hard in the haill presence upon ane mand of ane six lib. peise;" i. e. upon payment of a piece of money six pounds Scots in value. Acts Sederunt, 11. Jan. 1604.

This word at first view may seem allied to Su.G. mon, pretium, valor. It is used in the very same connexion as mand. Thingmaen sculu medh loghum doema thiuf til hanga fore half mare mun, oc ej fore minna; Judices jure damnabunt furem ad suspendium pro valore marcæ dimidiæ, sed non pro minore. Skane L. p. 29. ap. Ihre. It also signifies emolument, utility; Giorde honom aera och mycken monn; Ipsum honore et multo commodo ornavit. Histor. Ol. S. p. 47. ibid

This Ihre considers as worthy to be enumerated amongst the most ancient terms in that language; although, as he supposes, entirely obliterated in the other Gothic dialects. He views Moes.G. manvi, sumtus, as belonging to the same family; and both as probably allied to Heb. Manah, numeravit, supputavit.

Su.G. mund may also be mentioned, which signifies a gift, especially one given by a bridegroom, as an earnest to his bride, or the dowry given by her parent.

Mand, however, is probably the same with amand, which signifies a penalty or fine. "Each of the six clerks in the outer-house shall keep a book, in which all fines or amands for the poor, shall be entered." Acts of Sederunt, 11. Aug. 1787. sed. 10.

Thus the origin is L.B. amanda, O. Fr. amande, multa, a fine. Nulla alia amanda pro tali foris facto ab illis hominibus exigetur. Lobinell. Gloss. ad calicem Histor. Britan. ap. Du Cange. This, in Dict. Trev., is given as synon. with amende.

MAND, MAUND, s. A kind of broad basket like a corn-sieve, generally of straw and willows plaited together S.

To MANDER, v. a. To handle; to deal. S.

MANDILL, s. A loose cassock. S.

MANDMENT, s. An order; a mandate. See Sup.

The Scripture clepys the God of goddis Lord;
For quhay thy mandmentis kepis in accord,
Bene ane with the, not in substance bot grace.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 311, 33.

Fr. mandement, id. from Lat. mand-o.

MANDRED, MANDREY, s. The same as Manrent. q. v. S.

MANDRIT, part. adj. Tame.

Thir ar no foulis of ref, nor of rethnas,
Bot mansuete bot malice, mandrit and meke.

Houlate, i. 19.

M A N

This word may be from A.S. manred, homage, as he who did homage to another might naturally enough be said to be tame, as opposed to one who struggled for his independence. V. MANREDYN.

MANE, s. Lamentation. V. MAIN.

MANE. BREID OF MANE. This seems to be what is called manchet-bread, E. See Sup.

Thair is ane pair of bossis, gude and fyne,
Thay hald ane galloun-full of Gaskan wyne.—
And als that creill is full of breid of mane.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 71.

Paindemaine is used in the same sense by Chaucer.

Sir Thopas was a doughty swain;
White was his face as Paindemaine.

Skinner derives pannemaine, white bread, from Fr. pain de matin, "because we eat purer and whiter bread to breakfast." By the way, the O. Fr. main, signifying morning, would have been nearer his purpose. Mr. Pink. supposes that this designation is equivalent to the chief bread, or bread of strength, from Isl. magn, strength. Tyrr-whitt is "inclined to believe that it received its denomination from the province of Main, where it was perhaps made in the greatest perfection."

It would seem, that this phrase is Teut. but not as referring to the strength of the bread. Kilian explains maene, by referring to wegghe. This again he renders wheaten bread; an oblong cake, and a cake shaped like an half moon; (panis triticeus: libum oblongum, et libum lunatum.) As maen signifies the moon, this name may have been given to the wegghe from its form. We have still a very fine wheaten bread, which is called a wyg, sometimes a whig. Now, as the Teut. wegghe was also called maene, our wyg may have been one species of the bread of maen. We have another kind of bread, of the finest flour baked with butter, called a plaited roll. Its form is oblong, and it is pointed at each end, so as to resemble the horns of the moon; only the points are not turned in the same direction. I should rather suspect that this bread has been thus denominated, not merely from its form, but from its being consecrated and offered to the moon, in times of heathenism. We know, that in different nations, "women baked cakes to the queen of heaven."

The idea, however, of the ingenious Sibb. deserves attention. He understands it as signifying almond biscuit, Fr. pain d'amand, Germ. mand bred; Chron. S. P. ii. 390. N. But the Germ. word is mandel.

MANELET, s. Corn Marigold. V. GUILD.

MANER, s. Kind; sort. Maner dyk, maner strenth, a kind of wall or fence. Fr. maniere.

A maner dyk into that wod wes maid,
Off thuortour ryss, quhar bauldly thai abaid.

Wallace, ix. 906. MS.

Off gret holyns, that grew bathe heych and greyn,
With thuortour treis a maner strenth maid he.

Ibid. xi. 379. MS.

MANERIALIS, s. pl. Minerals. S.

MANG, s. To mix one's mang, S.B. See Sup.

And I was bidding Jean e'en gee's a sang,
That we amang the laeve might mix our mang.

Ross's Helenore, p. 117.

This seems to be a proverbial phrase, of a redundant kind, q. to mix our mixture; here signifying, "to take our part in the song," or "join in the chorus." A. Bor. mang, however, signifies "a mash of bran or malt;" Gl. Grose. Isl. Su.G. meng-a, A.S. ge-meng-an, miscere V. AMANG.

To MANG, v. a. 1. To stupify or confound.

Naturale bete left her membris in sic state,

Qubill to the ground all mangit fell scho down,
And lay ane lang time in ane dedely swown.

Doug. Virgil, 78, 15.

It is still used as signifying to run into disorder, from whatever cause. One is said to be mang't in his affairs, when they are in disorder; or with a farm, when he is not able to manage it, Ang.

2. To mar; to injure.

Thay lost baith benefice and pentioun that mareit,
And quha eit flesch on Frydayis was fyre-fangit.—
To mend that menyé hes sa monye mangit,
God gif thé grace aganis this guid new-yeir.

Scott, Bannatyne Poems, p. 196.

3. To overpower; to master, Ang.

Dool fell the swain that's mang'd wi' love!
He goves for comfort fra' above;
But Cupid, and hard-hearted Jove,

Blink na' relief:

And a' his gaunts and gapes but prove Milk to his grief.

A. Nicol's Poems, 1739, p. 22.

4. To render, or to become, frantic or delirious, Ang.

Bot than Turnus, half mangit in affray,
Cryis, O thou Faunus, Help, help! I the pray,
And thou Tellus, maist nobill God of erd.

Doug. Virgil, 440, 27.

Will ran reid wod for haist,
With wringing and flinging,
For madness lyke to mang.

Cherrie and Slae, st. 67.

She choaked and boaked, and cry'd, like to mang,
Alas for the dreary spinning o't.

Song, Ross's Helenore, p. 133.

Rudd. explains mangit as also signifying, maimed, bruised, &c. as if from Fr. mehaigne, changed to mayhim, afterwards maim, E.; which he deduces from L.B. maham-ium, macham-ium, mahem-ium; and this from Lat. manc-us. Sibb., who uses the same latitude of interpretation, refers to Teut. menck-en, mutilare. The origin may rather be Alem. meng-en, deesse, deficere, (V. Mangel, Ihre;) probably from Isl. mein, damnum, impedimentum. Perhaps the most simple derivation is from A.S. meng-an, &c., to mix; V. the s; as a man is said to mix, when he begins to be stupified with drink; and as confusion is generally the consequence of mixture. V. BEMANG and MANYIE.

It seems very doubtful if it be the same word that is used by Langland, which Skinner renders quarrelsome, wicked; deriving it from A.S. man, scelus.

And nowe worth this Mede, married unto a manzed shrewe,

To one fals fickell tongue, a fendes beyet.

i. e. child, S. get. P. Ploughman, Fol. 8, b. also 19, b.

This word is sometimes printed mansed, as signifying, cursed. It occurs in a curious passage in P. Ploughman, which, as it contains some traits of ancient manners, may be acceptable to the reader. Ireland was, in an early period, called the Island of Saints. But if we judge of their saintship by the portrait drawn by Langland, in his age, the estimate will not be very high. In our own time, if Fame lies not, some of the Romish clergy in that country are not only much given to inebriety and broils, but, even in their public addresses to the people, endeavour to compel them to their duty by the common language of execration.

Proude priests come with him, mo than a thowsand,
In paltokes and piked shoes, and pissers long kniues,
Comen agayne Conscience wyth couetyse they helden.
By Mary, quod a mansed priest, of the march of Ireland,

I count no more conscience, by so I catch silver,
Than I do to drinke a draught of good ale.
And so sayde sixty of the same contrey;
And shotten agayne with shote manye a shefe of othes,
And brode hoked arowes, G—s hert and hys nayles:
And had almost vnity and holynesse adowne.

Vision, Sign. H. h. 4. a.

Let no one presume to say, that the character might fit many at this day, who are their successors, under the name of Protestants. We must remember that our author is speaking of a church from which they have reformed.

MANGE, s. Meat; a meal.

I saw the hurcheon, and the hare,
In hidlings hirpling heir and thair,
To mak thair morning mange.

V. next word.

Cherrie and Slae, st. 3.

MANGERY, s. A feast; a banquet.

— Agayn the day

He gert well for the mangery
Ordane that quhen his sone Dawy
Suld weddyt be: and Erle Thomas,
And the gud Lord of Douglas,
In till his steid ordanyt he,
Dewisowris of that fest to be.

Barbour, xx. 67. MS.

In Edit. Pink., by mistake, maugery.

Fr. mangerie, hasty or voracious feeding; mang-er, to eat; L.B. mangerium, the right of entering into the house of another, for the purpose of receiving food, or of partaking of an entertainment; Du Cange.

To MANGLE, v. a. To smooth linen clothes by passing them through a rolling press, S.

Germ. mangel-n, Teut. manghel-en, levigare, complanare, polire lintea, Kilian.

MANGLE, s. A calender; a rolling-press for linens, S. Germ. mangel, id.

MANGLER, s. One who smooths linen with a calender. S.

MANGLUMTEW, s. A heterogeneous mixture. S.

MANHEAD, s. Bravery; fortitude. E. manhood. S.

MANIABLE, adj. That may be easily handled. S.

MANYIE, MANGYIE, MENYIE, s. 1. A hurt; a maim, S. Rudd. vo. Mangit.

"Ane manyie is called, the breaking of anie bane in his bodie, or the strikin in of the harnepan of his head, or be making thinne the skinne of his head, be scheavin away of the samine." Reg. Maj. B. iv. c. 3. s. 3. Mangyie, Ind.

2. A defect, of whatever kind.

"Gif the seller did sell to the buyer ane thing, as without anie fault or menyie, the time of the buying and selling: gif thereafter the buyer proves that thing to haue had ane fault or menyie,—the seller sall take back againe that thing sauld be him." Reg. Maj. B. iii. c. 10. s. 8.

Mangyie is defined, "vice, or fault in the thing quhillk is bocht and sauld." Ind. ibid.

Du Cange derives L.B. maham-ium, O.Fr. mahain, me-hain, not from Lat. manc-us, but from L.B. malign-are, nocere. Mehain, however, approaches so near to Goth. mein, damnum, vitium, that this may rather be viewed as the origin. Isl. meinlaete signifies a wound. V. Mein, Wachter; Men, Ihre; and MANG, v.

MANYIED, MAINYIED, MENYEIT, part. pa. Hurt; maimed. See Sup.

"Be the auld law of this realme, he quha is mainyied, hes ane just cause to excuse himselfe fra singular battell, and yit he will be compelled to purge, clenge, & defend himselfe." Skene, Verb. Sign. vo. Machamium.

With this Mezentius menyeit drew abak,
Harland his leg quharin the schaft stake,

Doug. Virgil, 348, 21.

M A N

MANIORY, MANORIE, s. A feast.

— The Tyrrianis halely

At the blyth yettis flokkis to the maniorie.

Doug. Virgil, 35, 42.

Anone the banket and the manorie—

Wyth alkin maner ordinance was made.

Corr. from Mangery, q. v.

Ibid. 474, 9.

MANYs, s. A mansion-house ; a palace.

— At thir ilk yettis here

The conquerour enterit douchty Hercules,

This sobir manys resaut him, but leis.

Virg. uses regia, palace.

Doug. Virgil, 254, 46.

His cietezanis irkit, syne in ane route

Enarmyt vmbeset his manys about.

Ibid. 259, 52.

Domus, Virg. But it denotes the house of a king.

“S. we call the place where the Lord or Heritor of the ground resides, or wont to reside himself, the mains : and frequently also the ground belonging to it has the same denomination,” Rudd.

L.B. mansum regale, quod Regis proprium est. Castrum Alvecestre, regale tunc mansum. Vita S. Egwini. This was sometimes called Mansum Capitale. Retinuit—Rex in manu sua Mansum suum capitale. Chart. Henr. I. T. 2. Monast. Angl. p. 133. The houses possessed by freemen were called Mansi ingenuiles. The Mansum capitale was also denominated Caput Mansi. This is defined, “the principal house, which belongs to the first-born, or in which the head of the family resides.” This is the same with Fr. Chefmez. Du Cange, vo. Caput, and Mansus. V. CHEMYS.

Rudd. thinks that from manys, as denoting a manor-house, “is derived the S. Manse, i. e. a minister’s dwelling-house.” But it comes immediately from L.B. mansus, as used in a different sense. V. MANSE. Manys is the same with MAINS, q. v.

MANITOODLIE, s. A term expressive of affection which nurses give to male children. S.

To MANK, v. a. 1. To maim ; to wound.

Thai mellit on with malice, thay myghtyis in mude,
Mankit throu mailyies, and maid thame to mer.

Gawan and Gol. iv. 2.

With his suerd drawyn amang thaim sone he went.

The myddyll off ane he mankit ner in twa,

Ane othir thar apon the hed can ta.

Wallace, vii. 305. MS.

The rycht arme from the schuldir al to rent

Apoun the mankit sennouns hingis by,

As impotent, quyte lamyt, and dedely.

Doug. Virgil, 327, 47.

2. To impair, in whatever way. To mank claiith, to mis-shape it, to cut it so as to make it too little for the purpose in view, S.

Teut. manck-en, Belg. mink-en, L.B. manc-are, mutilare, membro privare ; Isl. mink-a, to diminish, from minne, less.

To MANK, v. n. To fail. S.

MANK, adj. 1. Deficient, in whatever way, applied to things, S. See Sup.

“By comparing their printed account with his own papers, I find, that either their copy hath been very mank, incorrect, or they have taken more liberty in the changes they have made than can be justified.” Wodrow, ii. 299.

2. Transferred to persons. He looked very mank ; He seemed much at a loss, S.

L.B. manc-us, contractus, imminutus.

MANK, s. Want, S.

Sae whiles they toolied, whiles they drank,

Till a’ their sense was smoor’d ;

And in their maws there was nae mank,

84

M A N

Upon the forms some snoor’d.

Ramsay’s Poems, l. 280.

MAN-KEEPER, s. A name given to the newt, eft, or S. esk, from a superstitious belief that it waits on the adder to warn man of his danger. S.

To MANKIE, v. n. To miss ; to fail. S.

MANKIE, s. At the game of pearies, when one misses its aim and remains in the ring, it is called mankie. S.

MANKIE, s. The stuff properly called callimanco. S.

MANKITLIE, adv. In a mutilated state.

“First thou sal vnderstand, that thir wordis ar mankitlie allegeit & falslie applyit, becaus thair is nocht in al the scripture sick ane worde as eking and paryng to the word of God.” Kennedy of Crosraguell, p. 110.

MANLY, adj. Human.

“For he ascendit to the hevin, that he in his manly nature mycht pray for vs to his and our father eternal.” Abp. Hamiltoun’s Catechisme, 1552, Fol. 112, b.

MAN-MERROUR, s. A waster of men. S.

MAN-MILN, MANN-MILN, s. A handmill for grinding. S.

MAN-MUCKLE, adj. Come to the height of a man. S.

MANNACH, s. Perhaps, a puppet or little man. S.

To MANNEIS, v. a. To threaten ; to menace.

“Thai manneist and scornit the sillie Romans that var in that gryt vile perplexite.” Compl. S. p. 159. Fr. menac-er. Hence, MANNESSING, s. Threatening.

“Bot al the mannessing that is maid to them—altris nocht ther couetyse desyre.” Compl. S. p. 195.

To MANNER, v. a. To mimic or mock. S.

MANNERIN, s. Mimicry ; mockery. S.

MANNIS TUAS. For In manus tuas, Psalm xxxi. 5.

“Into thine hand I commit my spirit,” &c. S.

MAN OF LAW. A lawyer. S.

MANNIE, MANNY, s. A little man. S.

MANNO, s. A big man ; in contradistinction to Mannie.

MANRENT, MANREDYN, MANRED, MORADEN, s.

1. Homage made to a superior.

— All the lele men off that land,
That with his fadyr war duelland,
This gud man gert cum, ane and ane,
And mak him manrent euir ilkane,
And he him self fyrst homage maid.

Barbour, v. 296. MS.

The Kingis off Irchery

Come to Schyr Eduuard halily,

And thar manredyn gan him ma ;

Bot giff that it war ane or twa.

Ibid. xvi. 303. MS.

Mawrent, Wall. viii. 30. Perth Ed. Read manrent, as in MS. It is also corruptly written moraden.

Her I make the releyse, renke, by the rode ;

And by rial reyson relese the my right.

And sithen make the moraden with a mylde mode.

Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. ii. 24.

In O. E. it is properly written manred.

He will falle to thi fot,

And bicom thi man gif he mot ;

His manred thou schalt afonge,

And the trewth of his honde.

Florice and Blancheflour. V. Minstrely, Bord. i. 225.

2. The power of a superior, especially in respect of the number of kinsmen and vassals he could bring into the field ; an oblique sense.

“Nochtheles thair hicht and gret pissance, baith in manrent and landis was sa suspect to the kingis (quhilkis succedit efter thame,) that it was the caus of thair declination ; and yit sen that surname [Douglas] wes put down, Scotland hes done few vailyeant dedis in Ingland." Bel-lend. Cron. B. xiv. c. 8.

"He was ane man of nobyll blude, of gret manrent and landis." Ibid. B. xv. c. 7.

Hominem potentem cognationibus, Boeth.

3. In manrent, under bond or engagement to a superior, to support him in all his quarrels, and to appear in arms at his call.

"That na man dwelland within burgh be fundin in man-rent, nor ryde in rout in feir of weir with na man, bot with the King or his officiaris, or with the Lord of the burgh." Acts, Ja. II. 1457, c. 88. Edit. 1566. c. 78.
Murray.

"The maist pairt of the nobilitie of Scotland had eyther gevin unto him thair Bands of Manrent, or ellis war in confederacie, and promeisit amitie with him." Knox's Hist. p. 63.

4. Improperly, a bond of mutual defence between equals.

A.S. manred, id. The S. phrase, to mak manrent or man-redyn, is merely A.S. manred maec-an, to do homage. Thus, the Gibeonites are said to be the man-raedene, the servants or vassals of the Israelites, Josh. ix. 11. The word is compounded of A.S. man, which often signifies a servant or vassal, and raeden, law, state, or condition; q. the state of a vassal. Man beon, or man weorthian, is to profess one's self to be the vassal of another. V. MAN.

Among the ancient Germans, manheit was used to denote homage; Su.G. manskap, Teut. manschap, id.; the terminations heit, skap, schap, all conveying the same idea with raeden.

MANRITCH, adj. Masculine; an epithet applied to a female, when supposed to deviate from that softness which is the natural character of the sex. A manritch qweyn, a masculine woman, S.B.

From man, and A.S. ric, Teut. ryck, a termination expressive of abundance in any quality, and increasing the sense of the substantive to which it is added; from A.S. ric, Teut. ryck, Su.G. rik, powerful, rich. Manritch then literally signifies, possessing much of the quality of a male.

MANSE, s. The parsonage-house; the house allotted to a minister of the gospel for his dwelling, S.

"The house which is set apart for the church-man's habitation is, in our law language, called a manse." Er-skine's Inst. B. ii. Tit. 10. s. 55.

This learned writer has remarked, that, from a variety of authorities cited by Du Cange, it appears that L.B.
mans-us in the middle ages denoted "a determinate quantity of ground, the extent of which is not now known, fit either for pasture or tillage;" and that in the "capitulary of Charlemagne, it signifies the particular portion of land which was to be assigned to every churchman." He adds;
"It has been by degrees transferred from the church-man's land to his dwelling-house." Ibid.

But he does not seem to have observed, that, according to Du Cange, so early as the year 1336, it was used for the parsonage-house.

Interdum vero Mansus pro sola aede curiali usurpatur.
Charta an. 1336. apud Kennett. Antiq. Ambrosden, p. 431.
Habeat etiam dictus vicarius pro inhabitatione sua illum Man-sum in quo presbyter parochiae dictae Ecclesiae inhabitare consuevit. Gl. p. 439.

I need scarcely add, that mansus is formed from Lat.
man-co, to remain.

MANSING. In mansing; apparently, in remainder. S.

MANSS, s. A manor; a mansion-house. S.

To MANSWEIR, MENSWEIR, v. a. To perjure, S.; mainswear, id. A. Bor. Gl. Grose. The part. pa. is most generally used by our writers.

Thus him to be mansworn may neuer betyde.

Doug. Virgil, Pref. 11, 10.

"All the chief and principal men quha does swa, are fals & mensworn against God, the King, and the realme."
Lawes Malcolme, c. 14. s. 5.

A.S. manswer-ian, id. from man, scelus, villainy, and swer-ian, to swear. Germ. meineid denotes perjury, from mein, synon. with A.S. man, and eid, an oath. Isl. meinsaeri, perjurium; meinsaerar, perjurii; Menn meinsvarar, homines perjurii, Edd. Snorronis. The other A. S. word forswer-ian, whence E. forswear, is evidently the same with Moes.G. farswar-an, id.

MANSWERING, s. Perjury, S.

Tynt woman, allace, beris thou not yit in mynd

The manswering of fals Laomedonis kynd?

Doug. Virgil, 119, 10.

MANSWETE, adj. Meek; calm; from Lat. mansuet-us.

—Of manswete Diane fast thareby

The altare eith for tyl appleis vpstandis.

Placabilis, Virg.

Doug. Virgil, 236, 21.

To MANT, MAUNT, v. n. 1. To stutter; to stammer in speech, S.

"Hee who manteth or stammereth in his speach while hee is young, will in all appearance speake so vntill his dying day. Fooles dreame that man is like March, if hee come in with an Adders head, they thinke that hee shall goe out with a Peacock's taile; as if an euill beginning were the way to an happie end." Z. Boyd's Last Battell of the Soule, p. 935.

Ramsay writes it both mant and maunt.

2. It is metaph. applied to rough, unpolished verse.

—Or of a plucked goose, thou had been knawn,

Or like a cran, in manting soon ov'rthrawn,

That must take ay nine steps before she flee.

Polwart, Watson's Coll. iii. 29.

3. It is used as v. a., to denote the indistinct mumbling of the Romish litany.

Thay tyrit God with tryfillis tume trentalis,

And daifit him with [thair] daylie dargeis—

Mantand mort-mumlingis mixt with monye leis.

Scott, Bannatyne Poems, p. 197.

Lat. mant-o, are, signifies to stay. But this seems rather from C.B. Ir. mantach, a stutterer, Gael. mandagh, id. Sir
J. Sinclair gives a different etymon. "To mant, [μαντινισμα, Gr.] to stammer; or to hesitate in speaking, as the persons who pronounced the heathen oracles affected to do, when they pretended to be inspired." Observ. p. 89.

MANter, s. One who stutters in speech. S.

MANTIN, s. A stuttering in speech. S.

To MANTEME, v. a. To possess; to enjoy.

And now that secund Paris, of ane accord

With his vnworthy sort, skant half man bene,—

By reif mantemes hir, that suld ouers be.

Potitur, Virg.

Doug. Virgil, 107, 24.

An oblique sense, from Fr. mainten-ir, L.B. manuten-ere.

MANTY, s. A gown; E. mantua. S.

MANTILLIS, s. pl. "Large shields, which were borne before archers at sieges, or fixed upon the tops of ships, as a covert for archers; Fr. mantelet." Gl.
Compl.

"Pauis veil the top with pauesis and mantillis." Compl.

S. p. 64.

MANTILLIS OF BANIS. V. BANIS. S.

MANUARIE, s. A factory. S.

MANUMENT, s. Management. S.

To MANUMIT,* MANUMISS, v. a. To confer a literary degree. Syn. To Laureate. S.

MANUMISSION,* s. Graduation. S.

M A R

- To* MAP, v. n. To nibble as a sheep. S.
 MAPAMOUND, s. A map of the world.
 With that he racht me ane roll: to rede I begane,
 The royetest ane ragment with mony ratt rime,
 Of all the mowis in this mold, sen God merkit man,
 The mouing of the mapamound, and how the mone
 schane. Doug. Virgil, 239, a. 55.
 Fr. mappemonde, L.B. mappa mundi. But here the term seems to be used figuratively for the world itself, or perhaps for the celestial sphere.
 MAPPIE, s. A term used in speaking to a rabbit. S.
 MAPSIE, s. A pet sheep; a young hare. S.
 MAR, adj. More. V. MARE.
 MAR, s. Hindrance; obstruction.
 Till Noram Kirk he come with outyn mar;
 The Consell than of Scotland meit hym thar.
Wallace, i. 61. MS.
 A.S. mar, damnum; Isl. mer-ia, contundere, comminuere.
 It may, however, signify, without longer delay, without more ado.
 MARB, s. The marrow. S.
 MARBEL, adj. Feeble; inactive; slow; lazy; reluctant;
 Loth. This is perhaps radically the same with mairdel,
 q. v. one of them being a corruption. See Sup.
 MARBYR, s. Marble; Fr. marbre.
 "The philosophour Socrates—vas the sone of ane pure man called Sophonistus, quhilk vas ane grauer of imagis of marbyr stone, and his mother vas ane meyd vyf." Compl.
S. p. 200.
 MARBLE BOWLS, MARBLES, s. pl. The play among children in E. called taw; denominated from the substance of which the bowls were formerly made, S.
 MARCHE, s. 1. A landmark.
 —He—dyd espie, quhare that ane grete roik lay,
 Ane ald crag stane huge grete and gray,—
 Ane marche sett in that ground mony ane yere
 Of twa feildis for to discerne thare by
 The auld debate of pley or contrauersy.
Doug. Virgil, 445, 45.
 2. Marches, pl. borders, confines; as in E. Hence, Riding the marches, a practice retained in various boroughs, especially at the time of public markets, S.
 "It is customary to ride the marches, occasionally, so as to preserve in the memory of the people the limits of their property." P. Dunkeld, Perth. Statist. Acc. xx. 441.
 MARCHSTONE, MARCH-STONE, s. A landmark, S.
 "—Therefore ordain—the marc-stones in the muir and moss to be taken up and removed away." Fountainhall's
Decisions, i. 66.
 Isl. markstein, id. from mark, A.S. mearc, Teut. marck, merch, a limit, a boundary, and stein, a stone. Kilian quotes
 And. Velleius, as observing that Teut. marck first denoted any peculiar sign or seal; was then used for a standard, merch and baniere having the same meaning; and that, as the design of a standard is to direct the eyes and minds of the soldiers towards a particular spot, it came at length to signify a boundary.
To MARCHE, v. a. To distinguish the boundaries of properties by placing landmarks. S.
To MARCH, MERCH, v. n. To be on the confines of; to be closely contiguous to; to be bounded by. S.
 MARCH-BALK, s. The narrow ridge which sometimes bounds lands belonging to different proprietors. S.
 MARCH-DIKE, s. A wall separating one farm or one estate from another. S.
 MARCHET, s. The fine, which, it is pretended, was paid to a superior, either in cattle or money, for re-

M A R

- deeming a young woman's virginity, at the time of her marriage. See Sup.
 "—Conforme to the law of Scotland, the marchet of ane woman, noble or servant, or hyreling, is ane young kow, or thrie schillings." Reg. Maj. B. iv. c. 31.
 Those who wish a full and satisfactory account of the meaning of this term, may consult Lord Hailes, Annals, i.
 312—329.
 There seems, indeed, to have been no other foundation for the story told by Boece, and adopted by others, than either the fine paid to a superior by his vassal, or by one who held of him, for the liberty of giving away his daughter in marriage; or that exacted of a dependant, when his daughter was debauched.
Mercheta, according to Whitaker, is nothing more than the merch-ed of Howel Dha, "the daughter-hood, or the fine for the marriage of a daughter." Hist. Manchester, 8vo, i. 359. But Lord Hailes seems justly to hesitate as to ed signifying, in C.B., a fine for a marriage.
 As C.B. merch denotes a virgin, Pruss. Lithuan. merg.
 Wachter deduces the term from Isl. maer, id., and thinks that the writers of the dark ages thence formed their mercheta in L.B.
 If we suppose the word to have been used by German writers, mercheta might have been formed from merch and heyd, heit, a termination denoting state or condition, q. the state of virginity.
 In addition to the various authorities given by our learned Judge, it may not be improper to quote what has been said on this subject by Pennant, when giving an account of the Pulestons of Emral Hall in Flintshire.
 "His son,—Richard, held, in the 7th of Edward II.
 lands in the parish of Worthenbury, by certain services et per ammobrogium, or a pecuniary acknowledgment paid by tenants to the king, or vassals to their lords, for the liberty of marrying, or not marrying. Thus Gilbert de Maisnil gave ten marks of silver to Henry III. for leave to take a wife; and Cecily, widow of Hugh Pevere, that she might marry whom she pleased. It is strange that this servile custom should be retained so long. It is pretended, that the Amobyr among the Welsh, the Lyre-wite among the Saxons, and the Marcheta mulierum among the Scots, were fines paid by the vassal to the superior, to buy off his right to the first night's lodging with the bride of the person who held from him: but I believe there never was any European nation (in the periods this custom was pretended to exist) so barbarous as to admit it. It is true, that the power above cited was introduced in England by the Nor- mans, out of their own country. The Amobyr, or rather Gobr merch, was a British custom of great antiquity, paid either for violating the chastity of a virgin, or for a marriage of a vassal, and signifies, the price of a virgin. The Welsh laws, so far from encouraging adultery, checked, by severe fines, even unbecoming liberties. The Amobr was intended as a preservative against lewdness. If a virgin was deflowered, the seducer, or, in his stead, her father, paid the fine. If she married, he also paid the fine." Tour in Wales, p. 221. 222.
 "The Merch-Gobr of his [the Bard's] daughter, or marriage fine of his daughter, was cxx pence. Her cowyll, argyffreu, or nuptial presents, was thirty shillings; and her portion three pounds. It is remarkable, that the Pencerdd Gwlad, or chief of the faculty, was entitled to the merch-gobr, or amobr, for the daughters of all the infe-riors of the faculty within the district, who paid xxiv pence on their marriage; which not only shews the antiquity, but the great authority of these people." Ibid. p. 432.
 MARCH-MOON. For an account of the superstitious observances during this moon. See Sup.
 MARCHROUS.
 Goshalkis wer governors of thair grit ost,

M A R

Chosin chiftanis, chevelruss in chairges of weiris, Marchrous in the map-mond, and of mycht most,
Nixt Dukis in dignité, quhom no dreid deiris.

Houlate, ii. 2.

Read Marchions, as in MS., marquisses, from L.B. mar-chio, -nis. The same word occurs, though somewhat differ-ently spelled, iii. 4. Marchonis of nichtis.

MARCKIS POINT. The object directly aimed at, as the bull's eye; a metaphor borrowed from archers. S.

MARE, s. A trough for carrying lime or mortar, borne on the shoulder by those who serve masons in building, S. See Sup.

MAREFU', s. A hodful; applied to lime or mortar. S.
MARE, adj. Great.

A bettyr lady than scho wes nane

In all the yle of Mare Bertane.

i. e. Great Britain.

Wyntown, viii. 8. 60.

Gael. Ir. mor, C.B. Arm. maur, A.S. maere, Germ. mar, mer, id. V. Gl. Wynt. Isl. maerr, illustris, inclytus; Gl.
Edd.

MARE, MAIR, adj. 1. Greater, S.

Thai fand thare mawmentis, mare and min.

Wyntown, vii. 10. 70.

— But mare lete,

Thai strawcht thair speris, and thai thaim mete

In-to the fwrđ.—

Ibid. viii. 31. 81.

Above this eik betid ane mare ferlie.

Doug. Virgil, 207, 5.

2. In greater quantity, or number, S.

For sic delyte, as he wes in,

He spendyt mare, than he couth wyn.

Wyntown, vi. 4. 16.

Sometimes it denotes number, but improperly.

The tyme of this fundatyown

Wes eftyre the incarnatyowne

To be reknyd sex hundyr yhere,

Quhether mare or les, bot thare-by nere.

Wyntown, v. 13. 398.

A.S. mare, Isl. meire, Alem. Su.G. Germ. mer, Belg.
meer, Dan. meere. V. MA, adj.

MARE, MAIR, s. More; any thing additional, S.

Of Ingland come the Lyndysay,

Mare of thame I can-nought say.

Wyntown, viii. 7. 160.

"Meikle would fain hae mair;" Ferguson's S. Prov. p. 25.

WITH THE MARE. Perhaps, with the overplus. S.

MARE, MAR, adv. 1. More, S. Yorks.

—Birrand Etna that mont perrellus,

The mare wod wraith and furus wox sche,

Wyth sorowful fyre blesis spoutand hie.

Doug. Virgil, 237, 27.

2. Longer.

The Dowglas then, that wes worthi,

Thought it wes foly mar to bid.

Sw. mera, adv., more.

Barbour, xv. 465. MS.

MARE,* TIMBER MARE, s. A military punishment;
the Wooden Horse, E. V. TREIN MARE. S.

MARE, s. A wooden frame used by masons as a support for a scaffold; called also a horse. S.

MARE.* An absurd superstition prevails in the South of S., that if a bride ride home to the bridegroom's house on a mare, their children will long want the power of retention. S.

MAREATTOUR, adv. Moreover, S.

—Sall neuer among Grekis agane

Ane place be fund soithly to remane,

And mareattour Trojanis offendit eik.

87.

M A R

To sched my blude by paneful deith dois seik.

V. ATOUR.

Doug. Virgil, 41, 2.

MAR FURTH, Furthermore, S.

Off king Eduuward yeit mar furth will I meill

In to quhat wyss that he couth Scotland deill.

Wallace, x. 1063. MS.

MAREDAY, s. A day consecrated to the Virgin. S.

MAREILLEN, s. The Frog-fish; Lophius piscatorius. S.

MARENIS, MURENIS, s. pl.

"Besides this isle lies ane maine sandey isle, callit Fuday, fertill for beare and marenis, the quhilke ile pay murenis yeirly to M'Neill of Barray for part of mailles and dewties." Monroe's Iles, p. 33.

Perhaps lampreys are meant, Lat. muraena; although Pennant thinks that this fish was unknown to the ancients.

Zool. iii. 59. It is more probable, however, that this refers to the Conger eel, Muraena conger, Linn.

MARES, MARRES, s. Marsh, morass.

The soyl was nocht bot marres slyke and sand.

Palice of Honour, i. 4.

Moes. G. marisaius, Alem. mersch, Belg. maerasch, Fr.

marais. Rudd. views Lat. mare, the sea, as the root.

It refers to Su.G. mor, Belg. moer, moorish land, terra palustris. Isl. myra, palus, moer, lutum, argilla, or Su.G.

maer, terra putris, may be the more immediate source.

But all these terms seem originally allied to some radical word denoting a pool, or body of standing water; as A.S.

mere, Teut. maer, lacus, stagnum. Su.G. mar signifies not only the sea, but a lake, and stagnant water in general.

MARE-STANE, s. A rough river stone, like a hatchet, hung up in a stable, to prevent the horses being ridden by the Nightmare. S.

To MARGULYIE, MURGULLIE, v. a. To spoil; to destroy; to mangle; to mar any business; S. V. Shirr. Gl.

They spoild my wife, and staw my cash,

My Muse's pride murgullied;

By printing it like their vile trash,

The honest leidges whully'd.

Ramsay, Addr. Towncouncil of Edin. A. 1719.

Fr. margouill-er, to gnaw, instead of kissing, to bite.

It has perhaps been originally applied in S. to things gnawed by rats or mice, and thus rendered useless.

MARIES, s. pl. The designation given to the maids of honour in Scotland. See Sup.

"The nintein day of August 1561 yeirs, betwene seven and eight hours befoirnone, arrayved Marie Quene of Scotland, then wedo, with two gallies furth of France: in her cumpany, besydes hir gentilwemen, called the Maries, wer hir thrie uncles, the Duke d'Omal, the grand Prior, the Marques d'Albufe." Knox's Hist. B. iv. p. 283.

This Queen had four maids of honour, all of the name of Mary. These were Mary Livingston, Mary Fleming —Seaton, and—Beaton. V. Keith's Church Hist. p. 55.
Hence it has been supposed, that the name passed into a general denomination for female attendants; according to the old Ballad:

Now bear a hand, my Maries a',

And busk me brave, and make me fine.

Minstrelsy, Border, ii. 173.

Ye do ye till your mither's bower,

As fast as ye can gang,

And ye tak three o' your mither's marys,

To had ye unthocht lang.

Jamieson's Popul. Ball. ii. 130.

From analogy, I am much inclined to think that the term is far more ancient than the period referred to. For we learn from Lye, that the O.E. called the queen's maids, the Queen's Meys. V. MAY. Hence it is highly probable that our term Marie is an official designation, and allied to Isl. maer, a maid, a virgin. This more anciently was written meijar in plur. Meijar ordum skal mange trua, —Let no one give faith to the words of young women; Havamal, p. 75.

In an ancient poem on the devastation of the Hebudae, or Western Isles, by Magnus King of Norway, about the year 1093, the same term occurs.

Geck hatt Skota steckvir

Thiod rann Mylok til maedi

Meijar sudr i cyom.

Ivit altum Scotos qui fugat

Populus cucurrit Mylsicus lassatus

Virgines ad meridiem in insulis.

Johnst. Antiq. Celto-Scand. p. 232.

By thiod Mylsk the inhabitants of Mull seem to be meant.

In the Edda, mention is made of three female deities of the northern nations, supposed to dispense to men their fates, which are called the Three Meyar; Myth. 15. These Keysler considers as the very personages called Dis Mairabus in one of Gruter's Inscriptions. V. Antiq. Septent. p. 394—397.

Thus the Queen's Maries, a phrase still common among the vulgar, may be exactly synon. with the Queen's maids. The author of the Gloss. to Gunnlaug. Saga derives Isl. maer, a virgin, from maer, purus, candidus, eximius; which has more probability than the etymology given by G. Andr., from moir, mollis. R in Isl., in the end of a word, is often to be viewed as a sort of quiescent letter, because although found in the nominative, it is lost in the other cases. But maer is not of this description, as the r is preserved in declension. Tha minntiz hann thess er maerin mikillata hafdi maelt; He called to recollection the words of that magnanimous virgin. Johnst. Antiq. Celto-Scand. p. 2.

In Norfolk, as we learn from Spelman, moer denotes a virgin; a word which, he thinks, was left by the Danes, who obtained possession of that county A. 876. It may be added, that mæer, O.Dan., is viewed as corresponding to bower-maidens.

— See that ye're buskit bra',
And clad ye in your best cleading,
Wi' your bower maidens a'.

In this manner Mr. Jamieson renders the language of the original in Kæmpe Viser.

Tag hun dine beste klaeder paa,
Med all dine møer og kvinde.

Popul. Ball. ii. 110. 115.

It has been supposed that Isl. maer, virgo, may be merely the s. feminine formed from maug-r, a son, also, a male. Maer oc maugr, foemina et mas; Gl. Edd. V. MAICH. MARIKEN, MARYSKYN-SKIN. A dressed goat-skin. S. MARYNAL, MARYNEL, s. A mariner. See Sup.

"The maister quhislit, and bald the marynalis lay the cabil to the cabilstok." Compl. S. p. 61.

MARYMESS, s. The day (Sept. 8th) appointed in the Roman calendar to commemorate the nativity of the Virgin. S.

MARION, s. The Scottish name for Marianne, E. S. MARY RYALL. A silver coin of Queen Mary of Scotland, vulgarly called the Crookstone Dollar. S.

MARY'S (St.) KNOT. To tie with St Mary's knot; to cut the sinews of the hams of an animal; to ham-string. S.

MARITAGE, s. "The casualty by which the superior was entitled to a certain sum of money, to be paid by the heir of his former vassal, who had not been married before his ancestor's death, at his age of puberty, as the avail or value of his tocher." Ersk. S.

MARITICKIS, MARTYKIS, s. pl. A band of French soldiers, employed in S. during the regency of Mary of Guise.

"The Duke of Guise—with a new armie sent away his brother Marquis d'Albufe, and his cumpanie the Martickis." Knox's Hist. p. 200. Martykis, ibid. 201. Martickis, MS. i. Martickes, MS. ii.

This name might be derived from Martigues, a town in Provence. But it seems rather borrowed from the commander or colonel. Knox afterwards mentions this as the designation of a person.

"This same tyme [A. 1559.] arrayvit the Martykis, quho without delay landit himself, his cofferis, and the principall Gentilmen that war with him at Leythe." Ibid. p. 203.

"They caused rumours to be spread of some help to come out of France; which had come indeed under the conduct of Martige, (of the house of Luxembourg.) Hume's Hist. Doug. p. 305.

MARK, MERK, s. A nominal weight used in Orkney and Shetland; a pound of eighteen ounces. See Sup.

"The malt, meil, and beare, ar delivered in Orknay, be weicht in this maner. Imprimis, 24 marks makis ane setting." Skene, Verb. sign. vo. Serplaith.

"24 marks make one setting, nearly equal to 1 stone 5 lib. Dutch." P. Cross, Orkn. Statist. Acc. vii. 477.

S.G. mark denotes a pound of thirty-two ounces. V. MERK. MARK, adj. Dark, S.B. See Sup.

"By this time it wis growing mark, and about the time o' night that the boodies begin to gang." Journal from London, p. 6. V. MIRK.

MARK, MARKE, s. Darkness, S.B.

Thair gouns gaue glancing in the marke,
Thay were so wrocht with gold smith warke.

Watson's Coll. ii. 7.

MARKNES, s. Darkness, S.B.

I in my mind againe did pance,—
Deploring and soring
Thair ignorant estaits,
Quhilk marknes, and darknes,
Pairtlie thair deids debaitis.

Burel's Pilg. Watson's Coll. ii. 46.

MARK,* s. Consequence; importance. Men of mark. S. To MARK, v. a. To set, applied to the foot; as, "He's sae weak he canna mark a fit to the grund." S.

MARK, s. A denomination of Scottish money. V. MERK.

MARKLAND, s. A division of land. V. MERK, MERKLAND.

MARK MARK LYKE. One mark for another; in equal quantities of money, penny for penny. S.

MARKAL, s. V. MERCAL. S.

MARK NOR BURN. A phrase syn. with Hiltnor Hair, q.v.

MARK O' MOUTH. 1. A mark in the mouth, by which, from the state of the teeth, cattle-dealers know the age of the animal. 2. Transferred to persons advanced in life. S.

MARKSTANE, s. A landmark. Syn. Marchstane. S.

To MARLE, v. n. To wonder. Corr. from Marvel. S.

MARLED, MERLED, MIRLED, part. pa. Variegated; mottled; chequered; as, "Marled stockings," &c. S.

MARLED SALMON. A species of salmon. V. IESKDRUIMIN.

MARLEYON, MARLION, s. A kind of hawk, E. merlin.

Thik was the clud of kayis and cawis,
Of marleyonis, mittanis, and of mawis.

V. BELD CYTTES. Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 21.

Teut. merlin, smerlin, aesalon. Fr. esmerillon. Kilian says, that it is the smallest sort of hawk, viewing its name as derived from Teut. merr-en, marr-en, to stay; because it remains in the Low countries during the greatest part of the year, even when the other kinds of hawks are gone. Seren, however, derives merlin from Isl. maer, parus. V. G. Andr.

MARMAID, MARMADIN, MEER-MAID, s. 1. The mermaid, S. See Sup.

M A R

The minstrellis sang with curiositie,
Sweit as the marmaid in the Orient sea.

Clariodus & Meliades, MS. Gl. Compl.

"The foure marmadyns that sang quhen Thetis vas mareit on month Pillion, thai sang nocht sa sueit as did thir scheiphyrdis." Compl. S. p. 99.

2. Used improperly as a ludicrous designation by Kennedy.

Marmadin, Mynmerkin, monster of all men.

Evergreen, ii. 74.

3. A name given in Fife to the Frog fish, Lophius Piscatorius, Linn.

"Rana piscatrix, the Frog-fish; our fishers call it a Meer-maid." Sibb. Fife, p. 120.

The ingenious editor of the Gl. Compl. observes: "The popular opinion concerning the mermaid, though often modified by local circumstances, seems to have been chiefly formed from the Sirens of antiquity." V. Gl. pp. 354, 355.

Isl. mar. Germ. mer, the sea, and maid or maiden, A.S.
maeden; Teut. maer-minne, id. from minne, Venus, amica.

MARR, s. An obstruction; an injury. S.

To MARR UP, v. a. To keep one to work, Ang.;
perhaps from Germ. marr-en, to grin or snarl.

MARRAT, MARRIOT, s. Abbrev. of Margaret. S.

MARREST, s. A marsh; a morass. Syn. Mares, Marres.

MARRIAGE, s. For a variety of curious customs and superstitions in regard to marriage, See Sup.

MARROT, s. The Skout, or Foolish Guillemot, a seabird with a dark-coloured back and snow-white belly;
Colymbus troile, Linn. The Lavy of St. Kilda.

Sir R. Sibb. assigns this name to the Razor-bill; Alca torda, Linn.

"Alca Hoieri: our people call it the Marrot, the Auk or Razor-bill." Sibb. Fife, p. 112.

Penn. mentions the Lesser Guillemot as receiving the name of Morrot on the Firth of Forth, in common with the black-billed Auk. Zool. p. 521. It certainly should be Marrot.

MARROW, s. 1. A companion; a fellow; an associate, S. Exmore, id.

"Julius vald nocht hef ane marrou in Rome, and Pompeus vald nocht hef ane superior." Compl. S. p. 271.

The tyme complete was for thare jorney grant:

Bot sone him warnis Sibylla the sant,

Hlis trew marrow, gan schortly to him say.

Doug. Virgil, 183, 3.

Ilk man drink to his marrow, I yow pray.

Tary nocht lang; it is lait of the day.

Lyndsay, S.P.R. ii. 141.

"This Cochran was so proud in his conceit, that he counted no Lords to be marrows to him." Pitcottie, p. 78.

2. A partner in the connubial relation.

— Thow war better beir of stone the barrow

Of sueitand, ding and delffe quhill thow may dré,

Na be machit with a wicket marrow.

Henrysone, Bannatyne Poems, p. 122.

"Scot. a husband or wife is called half-marrow; and such birds as keep chaste to one another are called mar-rows." Rudd.

3. One thing that matches another; one of a pair, S.
See Sup.

"The word is often used for things of the same kind, and of which there are two, as of shoes, gloves, stockings, also eyes, hands, feet, &c." Rudd.

"Your een's no marrows," Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 88.

"These gloves, or shoes, are not marrows, i. e. are not fellows. North." Grose, Prov. Gl.

4. A person who is equal to another. S.

5. Any thing exactly like another. S.

VOL. II.

89

M A R

Rudd. refers to Fr. mari, a husband, Sibb. to marée, a spouse. Perhaps it is rather from anc. Su.G. mager, maghaer, affinis, a relation; whence maghararf, an inheritance possessed by right of relationship. As marrow is applied to the matrimonial relation, it is probable that the term was primarily used to express that fellowship or equality which subsists among those who are connected by blood or marriage; especially as Fr. macar, which seems to acknowledge a Goth. origin, is used for a mate.
V. Maag, Ihre.

To MARROW, v. a. 1. To match; to equal, S. Rudd.

2. To associate with; to be a companion to, S.B. See S.

Thou shalt not sit single, but by a clear ingle

I'll marrow thee, Nancy, when thou art my ain.

Song by a Buchan Ploughman, Burns's Works,
ii. 152. No. 51.

3. Used by Montgomery, obliquely, as signifying, to fit; to adapt; exactly to match.

Scho, and the goddessis ilk one,

Wald have prefert this paragon,

As marrowit, but matche, most meit

The goldin ball to bruik alone.

Maitland Poems, p. 166.

MARROWLESS, adj. 1. Without a match; used to denote one of a pair, when the other is lost; as, a marrowless buckle, S.

2. Applied to two things of the same kind, that do not match each other; as, "Ye hae on marrowless hose." 3. "That cannot be equalled; incomparable," S. Rudd. See Sup.

"You are maiden marrowless," S. Prov.; "a taunt to girls that think much of themselves and doings." Kelly,
p. 385.

MARROW, adj. Equal; so as to match something. S.

To MARROW, v. n. To co-operate with others in husbandry.

MARROWSCHIP, s. Association. S.

MARSCHAL, s. "Upper servant," Sibb. It seems used by Barbour for steward.

He callit his marschall till him tyt,

And bad him luke on all maner;

That he ma till his men gud cher;

For he wald in his chambre be,

A weill gret quhile in priuaté. Barbour, ii. 4, MS.

This, if not radically a different word, is a deviation from the original sense. For, in the Salic law, Marescal- cus properly denotes one who has the charge of a stable,
Germ. marschalk, Su.G. marskalk, id. from Goth. mar, Su.G. maer, a horse, and skalk, a servant. The term, however, was used with great latitude. Hence some have supposed, that, although written in the same manner, it was differently derived, according to its various applications. Thus as Germ. marschalk also signified praefectus servorum, Wachter deduces it from mer, mar, major vel princeps; the same word, as denoting a prefect of the boundaries, from A.S. maera, fines. Sibb. derives the term, as rendered by him, from A.S. maer, summus, and schalk.

MAR'S YEAR. A designation for the rebellion in favour of the Stuart family in 1715; so termed from the Earl of Mar, who led the rebels. V. SHIRRA-MUIR. S.

MART, MARTE, s. "War, or the god of war, Mars," Rudd.

Thare myndis so I sal inflamb alhale

By wod vndantit fers desyre of Marte,

They sal forgadder to helpe from euery art.

Doug. Virgil, 227, 7.

MART, MARTE, MAIRT, s. 1. A cow or ox, which is fattened, killed, and salted for winter provision, S.

2. A cow killed at any time for family use. S.

"Of fleshers being burgesses, and slaying mairts with their awin hands." Chalmerlan Air, c. 39. s. 68.

M

—“ That all — martis, muttoun, pultrie, — that war in the handis of his Progenitouris and Father — cum to our Souerane Lord, to the honorabill sustentation of his hous and nobill estate.” Acts, Ja. IV. 1489. c. 24. Edit. 1566. Skene, c. 10.

“ In 1565, the rents were £263:16:2 sterling, — 60 martis or fat beeves, 162 sheep,” &c. Statist. Acc. V. 4.

3. Used metaph. to denote those who are pampered with ease and prosperity.

“ As for the fed Marts of this warlde, the Lord in his righteous judgment, hes appoynted them for slaughter.” Bruce’s Eleven Serm. 1591, A. 4. a.

The word mart in Gael. denotes a cow. But as used by us at least, it is probably an abbreviation of Martinmas, the term at which beeves are usually killed for winter store. This is commonly called Martlemas in E., whence the phrase mentioned by Seren. Martlemas beef, which is evidently equivalent to Mairt. The term is used A. Bor.

“ Two or more of the poorer sort of rustic families still join in purchasing a cow, &c. for slaughter at this time, (called in Northumberland a Mart), the entrails of which, after having been filled with a kind of pudding-meat, consisting of blood, suet, groats, &c. are formed into little sausage links, boiled, and sent about as presents, &c. From their appearance they are called Black Puddings.” Brand’s Popular Antiq. p. 355.

The Black Puddings are still an appendage of the Mart in S. They are made of blood, suet, onions, pepper, and a little oat-meal.

The season of killing beeves is sometimes called Mart time. This designation, as the time itself falls in November, corresponds to that which the ancient Northern nations gave to this month. For they called it Blot-monath, or “ the month of sacrifice, because they devoted to their gods the cattle which were killed in it.” Ol. Worm. Fast. Dan. p. 43. In Denmark the modern name of November is Slacte-manet, Ib. p. 46. V. MONTH.

To MARTERYZE, v. a. To butcher. S.

MARTH, s. Marrow. S.

MARTY, s. Apparently, a house-steward. S.

MARTIN, (ST.) OF BULLION’S DAY, s. The fourth day of July O.S. See Sup.

The idea of prognosticating as to the future state of the weather, from the temperature of the air on certain festival days, has very generally, and very early, prevailed amongst our ancestors. It seems extremely doubtful, whether these prognostications were formed from any particular regard to the saints, with whose festivals they were conjoined, or from any peculiar influence ascribed to them. It may rather be suspected, that they were in use previously to the introduction of Christianity; and that the days formerly appropriated to such prognostication, merely changed their names. Such observations, perhaps, have been treated with more contempt, in some instances, than they deserved. Were any particular idol or saint supposed to have an influence on the weather, the idea could not be treated with too much ridicule. But certain positions of the heavenly bodies, in relation to our earth, concurring with a peculiar temperature of the atmosphere surrounding it, may have a stated physical effect, which we neither thoroughly know, nor can account for. Human life is of itself too short, and the generality of men, those especially who are crowded together in cities, are too inattentive, to form just rules from accurate observation; while they refuse to profit by the remarks of the shepherd, or the peasant. These, perhaps, they occasionally hear; but either they have not opportunity of putting them to the test, or they overlook them with contempt, as acknowledging no better origin than the credulity of the vulgar. It is certain, however, that those who still reside in the country, such especially as lead a pastoral or agricultural life, often form more just conjectures with respect to the weather, than the most learned academicians. Almost all their knowledge is the fruit of experience: and, from the nature of their occupations, they are under a much greater necessity of attending to natural appearances, than those who reside in cities. We must add to this, that from their earliest years they have been accustomed to hear those traditionary calculations, which have been transmitted to them from their remotest ancestors, and to put them to the test of their own observation.

We find that the mode of prognostication from particular days, was in use in Britain, as early as the time of Bede. For this venerable author wrote a book expressly on this subject, which he entitled Prognostica Temporum. It has been observed, indeed, that it was much earlier. Mizaldus has remarked, that “ Democritus and Apuleius affirm, that the weather of the succeeding year will correspond to that of the dies Brumalis, or shortest day of the year; and that the twelve following months will be similar to the twelve days immediately succeeding it; the first being ascribed to January, the second to February, and so on with respect to the rest.” Aeromantia, Class. 5. De signis fertilitatis, Aphor. 16. ap. Ol. Wormii Fast. Dan. p. 110.

The Danish peasants judge in like manner of the temperature of the year, from that of the twelve days succeeding Yule; and this they call Jule-mercke. Worm. ibid. I have not heard that any correspondent observation of the weather is made by the inhabitants of the Lowlands. But so very similar is the account given by Wormius, of the Danes, to that of our Highlanders by Pennant, that it is worth while to compare them. Speaking of the twelve days immediately following Christmas, Wormius says; Ab hoc duodecim inclusive diligenter Agricola observant dies, quorum temperiem circulo creta inducto trabibus ita appingunt, ut si totus fuerit serenus, circulo saltim delineetur; si totus nubilus, totus circulus creta inducatur; si dimidius serenus, dimidius nubilus, proportionaliter in circulo descripto id annotent. Ex iis autem totius anni futuram temperiem colligere solent; affirmant namque primum diem Januario, secundum Februario, et ita consequenter respondere. Idque Jule-mercke vocant. Fast. Dan. L. 2. c. 9.

“ The Highlanders form a sort of almanack, or presage of the weather, of the ensuing year, in the following manner. They make observation on twelve days, beginning at the last of December; and hold as an infallible rule, that whatsoever weather happens on each of those days, the same will prove to agree on the corresponding months. Thus January is to answer to the weather of December the 31st, February to that of January 1st; and so with the rest. Old people still pay great attention to this augury.” Pennant’s Tour in Scotland, 1772, Part ii. p. 48.

In Banffshire, particular attention is paid to the three first days of winter, and to the first night of January, which is called Oidheh’ Choille.

“ On the first night of January, they observe, with anxious attention, the disposition of the atmosphere. As it is calm or boisterous; as the wind blows from the S. or the N.; from the E. or the W.; they prognosticate the nature of the weather, till the conclusion of the year. The first night of the New Year, when the wind blows from the W., they call dàr-na-coille, the night of the fecundation of the trees.” P. Kirkmichael, Statist. Acc. xii. 458.

I have specified St. Martin’s day, as it is particularly attended to in the north of Scotland. The traditionary idea is, that if there be rain on this day, scarcely one day of the forty immediately following will pass without rain, and vice versa. It is sometimes expressed in this manner; “ If the deer rises dry, and lies down dry, on St. Martin’s day, there will be no rain for six weeks; but if it rises wet, or lies down wet, it will be rain for the same length of time." Some pretend that St. Martin himself delivered this as a prophecy. St. Swithin, whose day, according to the new style, corresponds to our St. Martin's, has been called the rainy saint of England, and the weeping saint, in consequence of a similarity of observation. Gay refers to this, in his Trivia.

Let cred'lous boys, and prattling nurses tell,—
How if, on Swithin's Feast the welkin lours,
And ev'ry penthouse streams with hasty show'rs,
Twice twenty days shall clouds their fleeces drain,
And wash the pavements with incessant rain.

Martin is often denominated the drunken saint.

Why this saint is denominated of Bullion, I cannot pretend to say. It is not from Boulogne. For it does not appear that he had any connexion with this place. Du Cange calls this day Festum Sⁱ Martini Bullientis, adding, vulgo etiamnum S. Martin Bouillant. Both words undoubtedly signify boiling, hot, fervid. In Dict. Trev. this name is supposed to originate from the warmth of the season in which this feast falls. On apelle S. Martin bouillant, la fete de S. Martin qui vient en été.

I have met with several intelligent people, who assert that they have found the observation very frequently confirmed by fact. There is a remarkable coincidence with the traditionary system of Danish prognostication. The Danes indeed take their observation not from St. Martin's day, on the fourth of July, but from that of the Visitation of the Virgin, which falls on the first. Their prognostication is thus expressed by Wormius.

Si pluit, haud poteris coelum sperare serenum, Transivere aliquot ni prius ante dies.

"Our peasants," he adds, "expressly assert, that if there be rain on this day, it will continue to the day of Mary Magdalene," that is, from the fifth to the twenty-second day of the month. Fast. Dan. p. 115.

MARTIN, Saint Martynis Fowle.

Then Myttaine and Saint Martynis fowle
Wend he had bene the hornit howle,
Thay set upon him with a yowle,
And gaif him dynt for dynt.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 21.

Lord Hailes says, this is "the marten or martlet, which is supposed to leave this country about St. Martin's day, in the beginning of winter." I suspect, however, that this is a translation of the French name of the ring-tail, a kind of kite, oiseau de S. Martin, especially as conjoined with the Myttaine, which is evidently a bird of prey.

To MARTYR, v. a. 1. To hew down; to destroy.

Till him thai raid onon, or thai wald blyne,
And cryt, Lord, abide, your men ar martyrit down
Rycht cruelly, her in this fals regioun.

Wallace. i. 422. MS.

Our Kingis men he haldis at gret wnest,
Martyris thaim down, grete peté is to se.

Ibid. iv. 377. MS.

Quha has, allace! the martyryt sa and slane
By sa cruell tormentis and hydduous pane?

Doug. Virgil, 181, 31.

2. One is said to be martyrit when "sore wounded or bruised;" Rudd. S. pron. q. mairtird, like fair. See S.

3. The term is used improperly as signifying to bespatter with dirt. Any thing mismanaged is also said to be mairtir'd; Ang.

Rudd. also explains this martyred, as being the same word. This is the most probable supposition; as Fr. martyr-er not only signifies to martyr, but to torment, to put to extreme pain. Hence, perhaps, by the same transition, Sw. marter-a, to torture, to torment. The term might, however, seem allied to Moes. G. maurthr, slaughter, Isl. myrth-a, to kill, whence E. murder.

MARTLET, s. A martin; a kind of large weasel. S.
MARTRIK, MERTRIK, s. A marten; Mustela martes, Linn.

"Amang thame ar mony martrikis." Bellend. Descr. Alb. c. 8. Martirillae, Boeth.

"Na man sal weir—furrings of mertrickis,—bot allanerly Knichtis and Lordis of twa hundreth merkis at the leist of yeirly rent." Acts, Ja. I. 1429. c. 133. Edit. 1566. Martrickes, c. 118. Skene.

Fr. martre, Belg. marter, A.S. maerth, Su.G. maerd, maertur, Germ. marder, id.

MARVAL, s. Marble. S.

MASAR, s. A drinking cup. S.

MASCROP, s. An herb. S.

MASE, s. A kind of net, with wide meshes, made of twisted straw ropes; used in Orkney. S.

MASER, MAZER, s. Maple; a tree.

He's tain the table wi' his foot,

Sae has he wi' his knee;

Till siller cup and mazer dish

In flinders he gard flee.

Gil Morrice, Ritson's S. Songs, ii. 161.

Lat. "acer a quo f. corr. est B. maeser, Scot. saepissime maser." Rudd. vo. Hattir.

But the idea of the term being derived from the Lat. word seems groundless; especially as it assumes a form similar to that in our language, in a variety of others. Germ. maser, Su.G. masur, Isl. mausur, mosor, C.B. masarn. Ihre derives masur from mas macula, because of the variegation of the wood of this tree. V. MAZER.

MASER, MAZER-DISH, s. 1. A drinking vessel made of maple. 2. Transferred to a cup or bowl of metal. S.

MASH-HAMMER, s. A large and weighty hammer for breaking stones, &c. S.

MASHLICH, (gutt.) s. Mixed grain, generally of pease and oats. V. MASHLIN. S.

MASHLACH, adj. Mingled; blended. S.

MASHLOCK, s. The name given to a coarse kind of bread.

MASHLUM, adj. Mixed, applied to grain. S.

MASHLUM, s. A mixture of any kind of edibles. S.

MASHLIN, MASHLIE, MAISCHLOCH, s. 1. Mixed grain, S. mashlum, Shirr. Gl. mislen, E. See Sup.

"Na man sall presume to grind quheit, maischloch, or rye, with hande mylnes, except he be compelled be storme, —or be inlaik of mylnes, quhilk sould grind the samine." Stat. Gild. c. 19.

This has evidently the same origin with mislen, which, according to Johnson, is corrupted from miscellane. Sibb. gives a more natural etymon; Fr. meslange, meslée, a mixture. But this word is probably of Goth. origin. Teut. masteluhn, farrago, Belg. masteleyn, id. A.S. mistlic, various; Germ. misslich, Alem. Franc. missilihho, Moes. G. missaleiks, id. Wachter views it as compounded of miss, expressing defect, and like. Perhaps it is rather from missch-en, to mix.

2. Mashlie also denotes the broken parts of moss. Mashlie-moss, a moss of this description, one in which the substance is so loose that peats cannot be cast; but the dross, or mashlie, is dried, and used for the back of a fire on the hearth, S.B.

To MASK, v. a. To catch in a net. In this sense, a fish is said to be maskit, Ayrs. E. to mesh.

Su.G. maska, Dan. mask, Isl. moeskne, Belg. masche, macula retis, E. mesh.

MASK, s. A crib for catching fish. Syn. cruive. S.

M A S

To MASK, v. a. To infuse; as to mask tea, to mask malt, S. See Sup.

"They grind it [the malt] over small in the mylne, that it will not run when it is masked." Chalmerlan Air, c. 26. s. 6.

Su.G. mask, bruised corn mixed with water, a mash; Arm. mesc-a, to mix, Alem. misk-an Belg. misch-en, Gael. masc-am, id. Heb. מסך, masach, miscuit. Hence,

To MASK, v. n. To be in a state of infusion. S.

MASK-FAT, MASKING-FAT, s. A mashing vat, used in brewing; a mash-tun, S. Gl. Sibb. See Sup.

MASKING-PAT, s. A tea-pot, S.

Then up they gat the maskin-pat,

And in the sea did jaw, man,

An' did nae less, in full congress,

Than quite refuse our law, man. Burns, iii. 268.

MASKIN'-RUNG, s. A long round stick used in stirring malt in mashing. S.

MASKERT, s. Swines maskert, an herb, S. Clown's all-heal, Stachys palustris, Linn.

The Sw. name has some affinity; Swinknyler, Linn. Flor. Suec. 528. This seems to signify, swines' bulbs or knobs. Swine, he says, dig the ground in order to get this root. The termination of our word is evidently from wort; perhaps q. mask-wort, the root infused for swine.

MASKENSIS, s. Masks or visors used in a masquerade.

MASLE, s. Mixed grain. E. maslin. S.

MASS, s. Pride; haughtiness; self-conceit. S.

MASSIE, MASSY, adj. Full of self-conceit or self-importance, and disposed to brag. S.

MASSIMORE, s. The dungeon of a prison or castle, S.A. See Sup.

"It is said, that, in exercise of his territorial jurisdiction, one of the ancient lairds had imprisoned, in the Massy More, or dungeon of the castle, a person named Porteous." Border Minstrelsy, i. Intr. xviii. N.

This is evidently a Moorish word, either imported during the Crusades, or borrowed from the old romances.

Proximus huic est carcer subterraneus, sive ut Mauri appellant, Mazmorra, custodie Turcarum inserviens. Jac. Tollii Epist. Itinerariae, p. 147.

MASSONDEW, s. An hospital.

"The said declaration—sall have the strenth, force, and power, of an legall and perfyte interruption aganis all personis having enteresse, and that in sua far allenerlie, as may be extended to the particulars following.—Aganis unlawful dispositiouns of quhatsumeuer landes, teinds, or rentes, dotit to Hospitalis or Massondews, and unlawfully disponit aganis the actis of Parliament. Acts Sederunt, p. 43. In Ed. 1740, by mistake, it is massindewris.

Fr. maison Dieu, id. literally a house of God.

MAST, adj. Most. V. MAIST.

MASTER, s. A landlord, S. V. MAISTER.

MASTER, s. Stale urine; chamber-lie. V. MAISTER. S.

MASTER-TREE, s. The trace-tree or swingletree which is nearest the plough in Orkney. S.

MASTER-WOOD, s. The principal beams of wood in the roof of a house. S.

MASTIS, MASTICHE, s. A mastiff.

The cur or mastis he haldes at small auale,

And culyeis spanyearthis, to chace partrik or quale.

Doug. Virgil, 272, 1.

"Gif anie mastiche hound or dog is found in anie forest; and he be nocht bound in bands: his maister or owner salbe culpable." Forrest Lawes, c. 13. s. 2.

Fr. mastin, Ital. mastino, L.B. mastin-us, perperam mastiv-us; Du Cange.

I have met with a curious etymon of this word.

"Budaus calleth a Mastine Molossus, in the olde Brittish speeche they doe call him a Masethefe, and by that name they doe call all manner of barking cures, that doe vse to barke about mens houses in the night, because that they doe mase and feare awaie theefes from the houses of their masters." Manwood's Forrest Lawes, Fol. 93, b.

M A T

MAT, MOT, auxiliary v. May. See Sup.

O thou my child, derer, so mat I thriue,

Quhill that I leuit, than myne awin liue.

Doug. Virgil, 152, 5.

"Well mat, or mot ye be, well may it be, or go with you, S." Rudd. Mat is more commonly used, S.B.

Ane wes Jhon of Haliburtown,

A nobil sqwyere of gud renown;

Jamys Turnbule the tothir was.

Thare sawlys til Paradys mot pas.

Wyntown, viii. 42. 160.

So mot thou Troye, quham I sall saif fra skaith,

Kepe me thy promys, and thy lawté bayth,

As I schaw sall the verité ilk deille,

And for my lyfe sall render you ane grete wele.

Doug. Virgil, 44, 5.

Rudd. derives it from Belg. moet-en, debere, teneri, obligari. Were this the etymon, there would be a change from the idea of possibility to that of necessity. Belg. Ik moet, I must, is certainly from moet-en. A.S. mot signifies, possum, licet mihi; we moton, we might. Su.G. maatte, pron. motte, is used in the same manner. Iag maatte goerat; it is necessary for me to do, or, I must do. The true origin seems to be Isl. Su.G. maa, maatte, possum, potuit. Seren. derives E. may from this root: and certainly with good reason. For although, at first view, this form of the v. may appear to imply permission only, it necessarily includes the idea of power. Thus, when a wish is expressed in this manner, Well mot ye be, if the language be resolved, the sense is; "May power be granted to you to continue in health and prosperity!" Mot is indeed the sign of the optative.

MATALENT, MATELENT, s. Rage; fury.

On him he socht in ire and propyr teyn;

Vpon the hed him straik in matalent.

Wallace, iv. 465. MS.

Lauinia is thy spous, I not deny,

Extend na forther thy wraith and matalent.

Doug. Virgil, 447, 28.

Wynt. maltalent, and mawvetalent. Fr. mal-talent, spite, anger; chagrin, Gl. Rom. Rose, from mal, bad, and talent, will, desire. V. TALENT.

To MATE, v. a. "To kill or wound," Rudd.

Our childer ying exercis beselye,

Hunting with houndis, hornes, schout and crye,

Wylde dere out throw the woddis chace and mate.

Doug. Virgil, 299, 15.

In this sense it might seem allied to Isl. meid-a, mutilare, laedere, membris truncare; Moes.G. maitan, laedere, conscindere. But the language of the original is;

Venata invigilant pueri, silvasque fatigant.

It therefore signifies, to weary out, to overcome the game by fatiguing it. Mait, q. v. may therefore be viewed as the part. pa. of this verb.

MATED OUT. Exhausted with fatigue. V. MAIT. S.

MATERIS, s. pl. Matrons; Lat. matres, mothers.

Thus thay recounterit thame that cummand were,

And samin ionit cumpanyis in fere,

Quham als fast as the materis can espye,

Thay smate thare handis, and rasit vp ane cry.

Doug. Virgil, 463, 45.

MATHER FU', s. The full of the dish denominated a mather. V. MADDER, MADDERS-FULL. S.

MATHIT, part. pa. Mathit on mold; apparently erratfor machit, i. e. "matched," or pitted against each other, "on the field." S.

MATTY, s. Abbrev. of the female name Martha. S.

MATTIE, s. Abbrev. of the name Matthew. S.

To MATTLE at, v. a. To nibble, as a lamb does grass. S.

MAUCH, MACH, MAUK, s. A maggot, S. A. Bor. mauk. See Sup.

"A mach and a horse's hoe are baith alike;" S. Prov. Ferguson, p. 7.

This seems to have as much of the enigma, as of the proverb.

Mauch mutton is one of the ludicrous designations that Dunbar gives to Kennedy, in his Flyting; Evergreen, ii. 60. He evidently alludes to mutton that has been so long kept as to become a prey to maggots.

Su.G. matk signifies not only a worm but a maggot; Dan. maddik, Isl. madk-ur, id. Seren. views Isl. maa terere, as the origin; perhaps, because a maggot gnaws the substance on which it fixes.

MAUCHY, adj. Dirty; filthy, S., if not from the preceding word, radically the same with E. mawkish. q. what excites disgust, generally derived from E. maw, Su.G. mag, the stomach, whence maegtig, mawkish. V. Seren. See Sup.

MAUCH, MAWCH, (gutt.) s. 1. Marrow. V. MAICH. 2. Power; pith; ability. S.

MAUCHT, MAUGHT, MACHT, s. 1. Might; strength, S.

—To Philip sic rout he raucht,

That thocht he wes off mekill maucht,

He gert him gälai disyly. Barbour, ii. 421. MS.

"Than the marynalis began to heis vp the sail, cryand, —Ane lang draucht, ane lang draucht, mair maucht, mair maucht." Compl. S. p. 63.

Yet fearfu' aften o' their maucht,

They quit the glory o' the faught

To this same warrior wha led

Thae heroes to bright honour's bed.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 96.

2. In pl. machts, power, ability, in whatever sense. It often denotes capacity of moving the members of the body. Of a person who is paralytic, or debilitated by any other malady, it is said, He has lost the machts, or his machts, S.B.

The sakeless shepherds stroove wi' might and main,

To turn the dreary chase, but all in vain:

They had nae maughts for sick a toilsome task;

For barefac'd robbery had put off the mask.

Ross's Helenore, p. 22.

3. It also denotes mental ability.

O gin thou hadst not heard him first o'er well,

Fan he got maughts to write the Shepherd's tale,

I meith ha' had some hap of landing fair!

Ross's Helenore, Introd.

Moes.G. mahts, Teut. macht, maght, A.S. meaht maeht, Franc. Alem. maht, id. from Moes.G. A.S. mag-an, Alem.

mag-en, O.Su.G. mag-a, Isl. meg-a, meig-a, posse, to be able.

MAUCHT, MAUCHT, part. adj. 1. Tired; worn out; having lost heart. 2. Puzzled; defeated. Syn. Mait. S.

MAUCHTY, MAUGHTY, adj. Powerful, S.B.

Amo' the herds, that plaid a maughty part,

Young Lindy kyth'd himsel wi' hand and heart.

Ross's Helenore, p. 22.

Teut. machtigh, Alem. mahtig, Su.G. maegtig, Isl. mag-tug-er, potens.

MAUCHTLESS, MAUGHTLESS, adj. Feeble; destitute of strength or energy, S. Sw. maktlos, Germ. maghtlos, id. See Sup.

If Lindy chanc'd, as synle was his lot,

To play a wrangous or a feckless shot,
Jeering, they'd say, Poor Lindy's maughtless grown;
But maksna, 'tis a browst that he has brown.

Ross's Helenore, p. 17.

MAUD, s. A grey chequered plaid of the kind commonly worn by shepherds in the south of S. S.

MAUGERY. V. MANGERY.

MAUGRE', s. V. MAWGRÉ.

MAVIS, s. A thrush. Turdus musicus. S.

MAVIS-SKATE, MAY-SKATE. V. FRIAR-SKATE. S.

MAUK, s. A maggot. V. MAUCH.

MAUKIE, adj. Full of maggots. S.

MAUKINESS, s. The state of being full of maggots. S.

MAUKIN, MAWKIN, s. 1. A hare, S. See Sup.

"Thair's mair maidens nor maukins;" Ferguson's S. Prov. p. 31.

For fear she cow'r'd like maukin in the seat.

Ross's Helenore, p. 62.

Or tell the pranks o' winter nights;

How Satan blazes uncouth lights,

Or how he does a core convene,

Upon a witch-frequented green;

Wi' spells and cauntreps hellish rantin',

Like maukins thro' the fields they're jauntin'.

Morison's Poems, p. 7.

2. Used metaph. to denote a subject of discourse or disputation. 3. Used proverbially, "The maukin was gaun up the hill;" i. e. matters were succeeding. S.

"He then became merry, and observed how little we had either heard or seen at Aberdeen; that the Aberdonians had not started a single maukin (the Scottish word for hare) for us to pursue." Boswell's Tour, p. 99.

Gael. maigheach, id.

MAUKIN, s. A half-grown female: "A lass and a maukin," a maid-servant and a girl to assist her. S.

MAULIFUFF, MALIFUFF, s. A female without energy; one who makes a great fuss and does little or nothing; generally applied to a young woman, S.B.

Su.G. male, Germ. mal, voice, speech, and pfuffen, to blow; q. vox et praeterea nihil. F. FUFF. Or it may be from Belg. maal-en, to dote.

MAULY, s. A female without energy. Syn. Malifuff. S.

To MAUM, v. n. To soften and swell by means of rain, or from being steeped in water; to become mellow, S. Malt is said to maum, when steeped, S.B.

Probably from the same origin with E. mellow; Su.G. miaell, mitis, mollis, Isl. mioll, snow in a state of dissolution; q. malin, if not corrupted from Su.G. mogn-a, to become mellow. It may be observed, however, that Teut. molm signifies rottenness; caries, et pulvis ligni cariosi; Kilian.

MAUMIE, adj. Mellow, S. Maum, ripened to mellow-ness, A. Bor. V. the v.

Grose explains maum, "mellow, attended with a degree of dryness;" Gl.

MAUN, a term used as forming a superlative; sometimes maund, S. See Sup.

Muckle maun, very big or large; as muckle maun chield, a young man who has grown very tall; a muckle maun house, &c. This phraseology is very much used in vulgar conversation.

A.S. maegen, in composition, has the sense of great or large; maegen-stan, a great stone; hence E. main. Isl. magn, vires, robur; magandemadr, adultus, et viribus pol-lens, nearly allied to the phrase, a maun man, S., i. e. a big man; magn-ast, invalescere, incrementa capere, Verel. Ind.

To MAUN, v. a. To attain; to be able to accomplish. S.

M A W

To MAUN, v. n. To shake the head from palsy. S.
 To MAUN, v. a. To command in a haughty and imperious manner; as, "Ye maunna maun me." S.
 MAUN, auxiliary v. Must. V. MON.
 MAUNA. Must not; from maun, must, and na, not. S.
 MAUN-BE, s. An act of necessity. V. MON, v. S.
 To MAUNDER, MAUNNER, v. n. To talk incoherently. S.
 MAUNNERING, s. Incoherent discourse. S.
 MAUNDREL, s. A foolish gossiping person. S.
 To MAUNDREL, v. n. To babble; to play the maundrel. S.
 MAUNDRELS, s. pl. 1. Idle stuff; silly tales: auld maundrels, old wives fables. 2. Vagaries of a person in a fever, or in a slumbering state. S. Perth., Border, Jawthers, haivers, are nearly synon.; with this difference, that maundrels seems especially applied to the dreams of antiquity.
 Perhaps from Su.G. men, communis, vulgatus, or maengd multitudo, and Isl. draefl, sermo stultus et ructantia verba, q. the talk of the vulgar or of the multitude. Drucken oc drafvelsfuller, drunk and full of foolish conversation, Verel. It may, however, be a derivative from E. maunder, to grumble, to murmur. This Johnson derives from Fr. maudire, to curse, (Lat. maledicere;) Seren. from Su.G. man-a, provocare, exorcizare.
 MAUSE, s. One abbreviation of Magdalen. S.
 MAUSEL, s. A mausoleum.
 Where are nowe the mausels and most glorious tombes of Emperours? It was well said by a Pagan,
 Sunt etiam sua fata sepulchris.
 Boyd's Last Battell, p. 1045.
 MAUT, s. Malt. The maut is said to be aboon the meal when a person gets tipsy. S.
 MAUT-SILLER, s. Literally, money for malt. Fig. "Ill-paid maut-siller," a benefit ill requited. S.
 To MAUTEN, MAWTEN, v. n. To begin to spring; applied to grain when steeped in order to make malt. S.
 MAUTEN, MAWTEN, part. pa. 1. Applied to grain that has sprung in the sheaf from damp. 2. Moist and friable, applied to bread not well fired. 3. Transferred to a dull and sluggish person; "a mawten'd lump." S.
 MAW, SEA-MAW, s. The common gull, S. Larus canus, Linn. See Sup.
 "Through the whole of the year, the sea gulls (called by the vulgar sea maws) frequently come upon land; but when they do so, it assuredly prognosticates high winds, with falls of rain from the E. and S.E.; and as soon as the storm abates, they return again to the frith, their natural element." P. St. Monance, Fife, Statist. Acc. ix. 339.
 "Give your own sea maws your own fish guts;" S. Prov.
 "If you have any superfluities, give them to your poor relations, friends, or countrymen, rather than to others." Kelly, p. 118. "Keep your ain fish-guts for your ain sea-maws," is the more common mode of expressing this proverb.
 Dan. maage, a gull; Su.G. maase, fisk-maase, id. As maase signifies a bog, a quagmire, Ihre thinks that these birds have their name from the circumstance of their being fond of bogs and lakes.
 To MAW, v. a. 1. To mow; to cut down with the scythe, S. See Sup.
 'Guideen,' quo' I; 'Friend! hae ye been mawin,
 'When ither folk are busy sawin?' Burns, iii. 42.
 2. Metaph. to cut down in battle.
 —All quhom he arekis nerrest hand,
 Wythout reskew doune mawis with his brand.
Doug. Virgil, 335, 38.
A.S. maw-an, Isl. maa, Su.G. maj-a, Belg. may-en, id.

M A Z

MAW, s. A single sweep with the scythe. S.
 MAWER, s. A mower. S.
 MAWIN, s. The quantity mowed in one day. S.
 MAW, s. A whit; a jot. V. MAA. S.
 MAWCHTYR, s. Probably, mohair. S.
 MAWD, s. A shepherd's plaid or mantle. V. MAAD.
 MAWESIE, s. V. MALVESIE.
 MAWGRE, MAUGRE, MAGRE, s. 1. Ill-will; despite, Barbour. 2. Vexation; blame.
 Peraventure my scheip ma gang besyd,
 Quhyll we haif liggit full neir;
 Bot maugre haif I and I byd,
 Fra they begin to steir.
Henrysone, Bannatyne Poems, p. 99.
 3. Hurt; injury.
 Clym not ouer hie, nor yit ouer law to lycht,
 Wirk na magré, thoch thou be neuer sa wicht.
Doug. Virgil, Prol. 271, 24.
Fr. maulgré, maugre, in spite of; from mal, ill, and gré, will.
 MAWMENT, s. An idol.
 The Sarracenys resawyd the town.
 And as thai enteryd thare templis in,
 Thai fand thare mawmentis, mare and myn,
 To frwschyd and to brokyn all.
Wyntown, vii. 10. 70.
 Be Salomon the first may provit be;—
 Thou gert hym erre into his latter elde,
 Declyne his God, and to the mawmentis yeld.
S. P. Repr. iii. 130.
 Chaucer uses maumet in the same sense, and maumetrie for idolatry; corrupted from Mahomet, whose false religion, in consequence of the Crusades, came to be so hated, even by the worshippers of images, and of saints and angels, that they represented his followers as if they had actually been idolaters; imputing, as has been often done, their own folly and criminality to those whom they opposed.
R. Glouc. uses the term in the same sense.
 A temple heo fonde faire y now, & a mawmed a midde,
 That ofte tolde wonder gret, & wat thing mon bi tidde.—
 Of the mamet he tolden Brut, that heo fonden there.
Cron. p. 14.
 MAWN, s. A basket, properly for bread, S.B. maund, E. A.S. mand, Teut. Fr. mande, corbis.
 To MAWNER, v. a. To mock by mimicry. S.
 MAWS, s. Abbrev. of the herb called Mallows. S.
 MAWSIE, s. A drab; a trollop; a senseless and slovenly woman, S. See Sup.
 The French use maussade in the sense of slovenly. But this is derived from Fr. sade, proper, and mal, Lat. mal-us, used as a privative.
Isl. mas signifies nugamentum, masa, nugor; Su.G. mes, homo nauci; Germ. matz, vanus, futilis, inanis, also used as a s. for a fool; musse, otium. In the same language metse denotes a whore. This has been deduced from Mazzen, the name anciently given to the warlike prophetesses of the Northern nations, whom the Greeks called Amazons; Keysler, Antiq. Septent. p. 460. El Sched. de Dis Germ. p. 431. Masca, saga, quae viva hominis intestina exedit; vox Longobardica; Wachter.
 MAWSIE, adj. Strapping; synon. with Sonsie. S.
 To MAWTEN, v. n. To become tough and heavy; applied to bread only half fired. Mawtend, mawtent, dull; sluggish, Ang.
 This is probably a derivative from Mait, mate, q. v.
 MAZE, s. A term applied to herrings; five hundred. S.

M E A

MAZER, MAZER-DISH, s. "A drinking-cup of mapple," Sibb.

"Take now the cuppe of salvation, the great mazer of his mercie, and call vpon the name of the Lord." Boyd's Last Battell, p. 1123. V. MASER.

MAZERMENT, s. Confusion, Ang.; corrupted from amazement, E.

To hillock-heads and knows, man, wife, and wean,
To spy about them gather ilka ane;
Some o' them running here, some o' them there,
And a' in greatest mazerment and care.

Ross's Helenore, p. 23.

MAZIE, s. A straw net. S.

MEADOW, s. A bog producing hay. S.

MEADOW-HAY, s. The hay which is made from bogs. S.

MEADOWS. Queen of the meadows, meadow-sweet, a plant, S. V. MEDUART.

MEAYNEIS, s. pl. Mines. S.

MEAL, s. The quantity of milk which is yielded by a cow at one milking. V. MELTETH. S.

MEAL, s. The flour of oats, barley, or pease: that of wheat alone is by way of eminence called Flour. S.

To MEAL, v. n. To produce meal; applied to grain. S.

MEAL-AND-THRAMMEL. Meal mixed with water or ale, either used in its moist state, or in the form of a bannock roasted in the ashes. V. THRAMMEL. S.

MEAL-ARK, s. A large chest appropriated to the use of holding meal in a dwelling-house. V. ARK. S.

MEAL-HOGYETT, s. A barrel for holding oatmeal. S.

MEAL'S CORN. Used to denote every species of grain. S.

MEAL-SEEDS, s. pl. The husks of oats which is sifted out of the meal; used for making sowens, q. v. S.

MEAL'S-MORE, s. Ever so much; applied to wasters, as, "Gie them meal'smore they'll be poor." S.

MEALSTANE, s. A rude stone of seventeen pounds and a half used in weighing meal. S.

To MEAL-WIND, v. a. To meal-wind a bannock or cake, to rub it over with meal after it is baked. S.

MEALIN, s. A chest for holding meal. Syn. Girnal. S.

MEALMONGER, s. One who deals in meal; a mealman, S. See Sup.

To MEAN, v. a. To lament; to merit sympathy. V. MENE.

MEAREN, s. A slip of uncultivated ground, of unequal breadth, between two corn ridges. S.

To MEASE, v. a. To allay; to settle. V. MEISE. S.

MEASSOUR, s. A mace-bearer. V. MACER. S.

MEAT-GIVER, s. One who supplies another with food.

"That the receiption, fortifier, maintainer, assister, meat-giver, and intercommoner with sik persones, salbe called therefore at particular diettis criminally, as airt and pairt of their thifteous deidis." Acts, Ja. VI. 1567. c. 21. Murray.

MEAT-HALE, adj. Having a good appetite. S.

MEAT-LIKE, adj. Having the appearance of being well-fed. "He's baith meat-like and claiith-like." S.

MEATHS, s. pl.

They bad that Baich should not be but—
The weam-ill, the wild fire, the vomit, and the vees,
The mair and the migraine, with meaths in the melt.—

Montgomerie, Watson's Coll. iii. 13. 14.

Does this signify worms? Moes. G. A. S. matha vermis;

S. B. maid, a maggot.

MEAT-RIFE, MEIT-RYFE, adj. Abounding in food. S.

MEBLE, s. Any thing moveable; meble on molde, earthly goods. Fr. meuble.

M E E

If anyes matens, or mas, might mende thi mys,
Or eny meble on molde; my merthe were the mare.
Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. i. 16.

MECKANT, adj. Romping; frolicsome. S.

MEDCINARE, MEDICINAR, s. A physician. See Sup.

"This Saxon (that wes subornat in his slauchtir) was ane monk namit Coppa: and fenyet hym to be ane medcinare hauand remeid aganis all maner of infirmiteis." Bell-end. Cron. B. ix. c. 1.

"Ye suld vse the law as ane spiritual urinal, for lyk as lukiug in ane urinal heilis na seiknes, nochtheles, quhen the watter of a seik man is lukit in ane urinal, the seiknes commonly is knawin, and than remede is socht be sum special medecin, geuin be some expert medicinar." Abp. Hamiltoun's Catechisme, 1552, Fol. 80, a.

"Live in measure, and laugh at the mediciners;" S. Prov. Kelly, p. 236.

MEDE, s. A meadow.

I walkit furth about the feildis tyte,
Quhilkis tho replenist stude ful of delyte,—
Plente of store, birdis and besy beis,
In amerand medis fleand est and west.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 449, 13.

A. S. maede, med, Teut. matte, id.

MEDFULL, adj. Laudable; worthy of reward.

Throwch thare wertws medfull dedis
In state and honowr yhit thare sed is.

From O. E. mede, E. meed. Wyntoun, vii. Prol. 41.

MEDIAT, adj. Immediate; next in succession. S.

MEDICINER, s. A physician. V. MEDCINARE. S.

MEDIS, v. impers. Avails; profits.

Quhat medis, said Spinagrus, sic notis to nevin?
Gawan and Gol. ii. 16.

Either formed from A. S. med, O. E. mede, reward; or an ancient verb synon. with Su. G. maet-a, retribuere, mentioned by Seren. as allied to E. meed.

MEDLERT, s. The present state; this world. V. MYDDIL ERD.

MEDUART, MEDWART, s. Meadow-sweet, Spiraea ulmaria, Linn.

"Than the scheiphyrdis vyuis cuttit raschis and seggis, and gadrit mony fragrant grene meduart, vitht the quhilkis tha couurit the end of ane leye rig, & syne sat doune al to gyddir to tak their refectione." Compl. S. p. 65.

From A. S. maede, med, a meadow, and wyrt, E. wort. Sw. mioed-oert, id. Isl. maid-urt, spiraca [l. spiraea] ulmaria, Van Troil's Letters on Iceland, p. 114. The Swedish word is written as if formed from mioed, mead, hydromel.

MEEDWIF, s. A midwife. S.

MEEL-AN-BREE, "Brose," Gl. Aberd.

"It wis time to mak the meel-an-bree, an' deel about the castacks." Journal from London, p. 9.

MEER-BROW'D, adj. Having eyebrows which meet together and cover the bridge of the nose. S.

MEERMAID, s. V. MARMAID.

To MEET in wi', To meet with. S.

MEET-COAT, s. A coat exactly fitted (or meet) to the the body, as distinguished from a long coat. S.

MEETH, MEITH, adj. 1. Sultry; hot, S. B. See Sup.

The day is meeth, and weary he,—
While cozie in the bield were ye;

Sae let the drappie go, hawkie.

Jamieson's Popul. Ball. ii. 363.

2. Warm, as expressive of the effect of a sultry day, S. B. And they are posting on whate'er they may,
Baith het and meeth, till they are haling down.

Ross's Helenore, p. 73.

M E I

This word may originally have denoted the fatigue occasioned by oppressive heat, as radically the same with Mait, q. v.

MEETHNESS, s. 1. Extreme heat, S.B.

The streams of sweat and tears thro' ither ran Down Nory's cheeks, and she to fag began,
Wi' wae, and faut, and meethness of the day.

Ross's Helenore, p. 27.

2. "In some parts of Scotland it signifies soft weather."
Gl. Ross.

MEETH, s. A mark, &c. V. MEITH. S.

MEETH, adj. Modest; mild; gentle. S.

MEETHS, s. pl. Activity, applied to bodily motion. S.

MEG, MEGGY, MAGGIE, s. Abbrev. of Margaret. S.

Meg is used as a designation for a vulgar woman. S.

MEGGY-MONYFEET, MEG-WI'-THE-MONY-FEET, s.

The centipede. V. MONYFEET. S.

MEGIR, adj. Small.

Dependant hang thair megir bellis,—
Quhilks with the wind concordandlie sa knellis,
That to be glad thair sound all wicht compellis.

Palice of Honour, i. 35.

Douglas is here describing the chariot of Venus, the furniture of which was hung with little bells; as the horses of persons of quality were wont to be in former ages. Mr. Pink. leaves megir unexplained. But although it cannot admit of the common sense of E. meagre, it is certainly the same word. It seems to have been used by our S. writers with great latitude. It occurs in this very poem, i. 21. as denoting timidity, or some such idea connected with pusillanimity.

— Certes my hart had brokin,
For megirness and pusillamitie,
Remainand thus within the tre all lokin.

MEGIRKIE, s. A piece of woollen cloth worn by old men in winter, for defending the head and throat, Ang. V. TROTOSIE.

MEGIRTIE, s. A particular kind of cravat. S.

MEGRIM, s. A whim; a foolish fancy. S.

MEGSTY, interj. An exclamation expressive of surprise.

MEY, pron. Me; also hey, he; to sey, to see, &c. S.

MEID, s. Appearance; port. S.

To MEIK, v. a. 1. To soften; to tame.

"All the nature of bestis and byrdis, and of serpentes, & vther of the see, ar meikit and dantit be the nature of man." Abp. Hamiltoun's Catechisme, 1551. Fol. 69, b.

Isl. myk-ia, Su.G. moek-a, mollire; from miuk, mollis.

2. To humble.

"Humiliauit semetipsum, &c. He meikit him self and became obedient euen to his dede, the verrai dede of the crosse." Ibid. Fol. 106, a.

MEIL, MEEL, MEIL, s. A weight used in Orkney. V. MAIL, s. 2.

To MEILL of, v. a. To treat of.

Off king Eduuard yeit mar furth will I meill,
In to quhat wyss that he couth Scotland deill.

Wallace, x. 1063. MS.

This seems the same with Mel, to speak, q. v.

MEIN, MENE, adj. Common; public.

"A mein pot played never even;" S. Prov. A common pot never boiled so as to please all parties. Kelly, p. 27.

A.S. maene, Alem. maen, Su.G. men, Isl. min, id.

MEIN, s. An attempt, S.B. V. MENE, v. 3.

MEINE, s. Apparently signifying insinuation. V. MENE, v.

To MEING, MENG, v. n. Corn is said to meing, when yellow stalks appear here and there when it begins to ripen, and of course to change colour, S.B.

M E I

Q. To mingle; A.S. meng-ean, Su.G. meng-a, Alem. Germ. Belg. meng-en, id.

To MEINGYIE, v. a. To hurt; to lame. V. MANYIE. S.

To MEINGYIE, v. n. To mix; applied to grain when it begins to change colour, or to whiten. V. MEING. S.

MEINGING, s. The act of mixing. S.

MEYNTYM, s. The meanwhile. S.

MEIR, s. A mare. To ride on a meir, denotes pride. S.

MEIRIE, s. A little mare. Diminutive from Meir. S.

MEIRDEL, s. A confused crowd of people or animals; a numerous family of little children. S.

To MEIS, MESE, MEASE, v. a. 1. To mitigate; to calm; to allay. V. AMEISE.

King Eolus set heich apoun his charc,
With scepture in hand, thair mude to meis and still,
Temperis thare yre. Doug. Virgil, 14, 52.

"He should be sindle angry, that has few to mease him;"

S. Prov. Kelly, p. 138. This corresponds to the E. Prov.

"He that has none to still him, may weep out his eyes."

But whae's this kens my name sae weil,

And thus to mese my waes does seik?"

Minstrely, Border, 1. 177.

2. To mellow; as by putting fruit into straw or chaff. S.

To MEIS, MEASE, v. n. To become calm.

"Crab without a cause, and mease without amends;"

S. Prov. Kelly, p. 80.

Germ. misch-en, to mix.

MEIS, s. 1. A mess.

—Als mony of the sam age young swanys

The coursis and the meisis for the nanys

To set on burdis,

Doug. Virgil, 35, 38.

2. Meat, as expl. in Gl.

Servit thai war of mony dyvers meis.

Full sawris sueit and swyth thai culd thame bring.

King Hart, 1. 53.

Alem. muos, maz, Su.G. mos, meat in general.

To MEISE, MAISE, v. n. To incorporate; to unite into one mass. Different substances are said to maise, when, in consequence of being blended, they so incorporate as to form a proper compost or manure, S.B.

To MEYSEL, MEYZLE, v. a. To crumble down food. S.

To MEISSLE, v. a. To waste imperceptibly; to expend in a trifling manner, Fife.; smatter, synon.

It is said of one with respect to his money, He meisslit it awa, without smelling a must; He wasted it, without doing any thing to purpose.

Isl. mas-a, nugor, Su.G. mes, homo nauci; miss-helde, mala tractatio, from mis denoting a defect, and hall-a, to treat; Germ. metz-en, mutilare; Isl. meysl, truncatio, Verel.

Or, it may be allied to Belg. meusel-en, pitissare, ligurire, et clam degustare paulatim, (smaigher, synon. Ang.); as primarily referring to the conduct of children, who consume any dainty by taking a very small portion at once.

MEIT-BUIRD, s. An eating table. S.

MEITH, auxiliary v. Might. V. MITH.

MEITH, MEETH, METH, MYTH, s. 1. A mark, or any thing by which observation is made, whether in the heavens, or on the earth, S. pron. q. meid, Ang. as, I hae na meids to gae by.

Not fer hens, as that I beleif, sans fale,

The freyndlie brotherly coistis of Ericis,

And souir portis of Sicil bene, I wys,

Gif I remember the meithis of sternes wele.

Doug. Virgil, 128, 6.

Where she might be, she now began to doubt.

Nae meiths she kend, ilk hillock-head was new,

And a' thing unco' that was in her view.

Ross's Helenore, p. 25.

M E K

"The fishermen direct their course in sailing, by observations on the land, called meeths, and formed from the bearings of two high eminences." P. Unst, Shetl. Statist. Acc. v. 191.

Myth, Brand's Orkn. V. LUM.

This seems to be the primary sense of the term: Isl. mide, a mark, mid-a, to mark a place, to take observation; locum signo, spatia observo et noto; G. Andr. p. 178; mid, a certain space of the sea, observed on account of the fishing; certum maris spatium, ob piscaturam observatum. Isl. mid-a also signifies, to aim in a right line, to hit the mark; Su.G. matt-a, id. Ihre supposes, rather fancifully perhaps, that both these verbs are to be deduced from Lat. med-ium, q. to strike the middle. But that of hitting a mark seems to be only a secondary idea. It is more natural to view them as deducible from those terms which denote measurement, especially as Dan. maade signifies both a measure, and bounds; Alem. mez, a measure, the portion measured, and a boundary. V. Schilter. The ideas of marking and measuring are very congenial. For the memorials of the measurement of property are generally the marks by which it is afterwards known.

2. A sign; a token, of whatever kind, S.

For I awow, and here promittis eik,
In sing of trophé or triumphale meith,
My louyt son Lausus for to cleith
With spulye and al harnes rent, quod he,
Of younder rubaris body fals Euee.

Doug. Virgil, 347, 34.

Isl. mide, signum, nota intermedia in re quapiam inserta, G. Andr.

3. A landmark; a boundary. See Sup.

"Ane schyre or schireffedome, is ane parte of lande, cutted and separated be sertaine meithes and marches from the reste." Skene, Verb. Sign. vo. Schireffe, par. 1.

"Gif the meithes and marches of the burgh, are wel keiped in all parties." Chalmerlan Air, c. 39. s. 13.

A.S. mytha, meta, limes, finis.

4. The boundary of human life.

Thare lyis thou dede, quhom Gregioun oistis in ficht
Nowthir vincus nor to the erde smite nicht,—
Here war thy methis and thy terme of dede.

Doug. Virgil, 430, 11.

5. A hint; an inuendo. One is said to give a meith or meid of a thing, when he barely insinuates it, S.B.

Perhaps we ought to trace the word, as thus used, to Moes.G. maud-jan, to suggest. V. MYTH, v.

To MEITH, v. a. To define by certain marks. V. MYTH.S.

MEITH, adj. Hot; sultry. V. MEETH. S.

MEYTIT, part. pa. Meaning not clear. S.

MEKYL, MEIKLE, MYKIL, MUCKLE, adj. 1. Great, respecting size, S. See Sup.

—The meikle-hillis

Bemys agane, hit with the brute so schill is.

Doug. Virgil, 132, 30.

2. Much; denoting quantity or extent, S.

"Little wit in the head makes muckle travel to the feet." Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 51. This is the most general pronunciation, S.

A.S. micl, micel, mucel, Alem. Isl. mikil, Dan. megil, Moes.G. mikils, magnus, Gr. μεγαλ-ος.

3. Denoting pre-eminence, as arising from rank or wealth. Mekil fouk, people distinguished by their station or riches, S. See Sup.

In the same sense Moes.G. mikilans signifies principes, Isl. mikilmenne, vir magnificus, magnus.

It is also used adverbially.

MEKILDOM, s. Largeness of size, S.

"Meikledom is nae virtue;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 53.

VOL. II.

97

M E L

To MAK MEKIL or MUCKLE of one. To shew one great attention; to make much of one. S.

MEKILWORT, s. Deadly nightshade: Atropa belladonna, Linn.

"Incontinent the Scottis tuk the ius of mekilwort berijs, & mengit it in thair wyne, aill, & breid, & send the samyn in gret quantité to thair ennymes." Bellend. Cron. B. xii. c. 2. Solatro amentiali. Boeth.

This seems to receive its name from mekil, great, and A.S. wyrt, E. wort, an herb; but for what reason it receives the designation mekil, does not appear.

MEKIS, s. Left unexplained. S.

To MEL, MELL, v. n. To speak. See Sup.

Thairfore meikly with mouth mel to that myld,
And mak him na manance, bot all mesoure.

Gawan and Gol. II. 4.

Su.G. mael-a, Isl. mal-a, A.S. mael-an, Germ. Belg. meld-en, Precop. malth-ata, Moes.G. mathl-jan, loqui; Su.G. mael, voice or sound, Isl. mal, speech. Ihre views Heb. מלל, malal, locutus fuit, as the root. This word suggests the origin of malal, mal, (whence E. mall), as used by the Goth. nations to signify a forum, also a court, L.B. mall-us; because there public matters were agitated in the way of discourse or reasoning. For Moes.G. mathls denotes a forum, from the v. already mentioned; and this being the most ancient of the Goth. dialects, we may believe that the same analogy is preserved in the rest. This seems to be the same with Meill, q. v.

Mell is still used in the same sense, to mention, to speak of, S.B.

MELDER, MELDAR, s. 1. The quantity of meal ground at the mill at one time, S.

When bear an' ate the earth had fill'd,
Our simmer meldar niest was mill'd.

Morison's Poems, p. 110.

"Melder of oats; a kiln-full; as many as are dried at a time for meal. Chesh." Gl. Grose.

2. Flour mixed with salt, and sprinkled on the sacrifice; or a salted cake, mola salsa.

The princis tho, quhylk suld this peace making,
Turnis toward the bricht sonnys vprisng,
Wyth the salt melder in thare handis raith.

Doug. Virgil, 413, 19. Also 43, 4.

"Lat. molo, to grind, q. molitura;" Rudd. But Isl. malldr, from mal-a, to grind, is rendered molitura, G. Andr. p. 174. Sw. malld, id. Seren. Indeed Germ. mehlder seems to be the same with our word.

DUSTY MELDER. 1. The last milling of the crop of oats.

2. Metaphorically the last child born in a family. S.

MELDROP, MELDRAP, s. 1. A drop of mucus at the nose. 2. The foam which falls from a horse's mouth. 3. A drop at the end of an icicle; every drop in a pendant state. S.

MELG, s. The milt (of fishes.) S.

MELGRAF, MELLGRAVE, s. A quagmire; also a break in a highway. S.

MELYIE, s. A coin of small value.

And gif my claith felyie,

Yeis not pay a melyie.

Evergreen, 1. 182.

Fr. maille, a half-penny. The term may be originally from A.S. mal, Su.G. maala, &c. tribute; or Alem. mal, signum et forma monetæ, which is allied to mal-en, to mark with the sign of the cross; this, in the middle ages, being common on coins; Su.G. maal, a sign or mark of whatever kind.

MELL, s. 1. A maul, mallet, or beetle, S. A.Bor. See S.

Quo Colin, I hae yet upon the town,

A quoy, just gaing three, a berry brown;—

N.

M E L

She's get the mell, and that sall be right now.

Ross's Helenore, p. 113.

He that takes a' his gear frae himsel.

And gies to his bairns,

It were well wair'd to take a mell,

And knock out his harns.

Ferguson's S. Prov. p. 16.

2. A blow with a maul.

The hollin souples, that were sae snell,

His back they loundert, mell for mell,

Mell for mell, and baff for baff,

Till his hide flew about his lugs like caff.

Jamieson's Popular Ball. ii. 238.

Hence the phrase, to keep mellinshaft, to keep straight in any course, to retain a good state of health, Loth.; a metaph. borrowed from the custom of striking with a maul, which cannot be done properly when the handle is loose.

3. For a custom in which the Mell is introduced at a Broose or wedding, See Sup.

This has been derived from Lat. mall-eus, in common with Fr. mail. But it may be allied to Moes. G. maul-jan, Isl. mol-a, contundere, to beat, to bruise.

To MELL, v. a. To mix; to blend.

This nobil King, that we off red,

Mellyt all time with wit manheid.

V. MELLYNE, and the v. n. Barbour, vi. 360. MS.

To MELL, MEL, MELLAY, v. n. 1. To meddle with; to intermeddle; the prep. with being added, S. See S.

Above all vtheris Dares in that stede

Thame to behald abasit wox gretumly,

Tharwith to mel refusing aluterlie.

Doug. Virgil, 141, 14.

"They thought the king greatly to be their enemy because he intended to mell with any thing that they had an eye to, and specially the Priory of Coldingham." Pitt-cottie, p. 86.

It sets you ill,

Wi' bitter, dearthfu' wines to mell,

Or foreign gill.

Burns, 111. 16.

2. To be in a state of intimacy, S.B.

But Diomede mells ay wi' me,

And tells me a' his mind;

He kens me sicker, leal, an' true.

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 24.

3. To contend in fight; to join in battle.

Forthi makis furth ane man, to mach him in feild,—

Doughty dyntis to dell

That for the maistry dar mell

With schaft and with scheild.

Gawan and Gol, ii. 18.

Dar is inserted from Edit. 1508.

Thare Willame Walays tuk on hand,

Wyth mony gret Lordys of Scotland,

To mellay with that Kyng in fycht.

Wyntown, viii. 15. 19.

Rudd. properly enough derives this from Fr. meler, to meddle. But the Fr. word itself has undoubtedly a Goth. origin; Isl. mille, i mille, Su. G. mellan, between, (amell, id. Gl. Yorkshire.) This, again, q. medlom, is deduced from medla, to divide, (Isl. midla,) medla emell-an, to make peace between contending parties. The primary term is Su. G. mid, middle. For to meddle, to mell, is merely to interpose one's self between other objects. V. Ihre vo. Mid. Teut. mell-en, conjungi.

MELLE, s. Mixture; in melle, in a state of mixture.

V. next word.

MELLE, MELLAY, s. 1. Contest; battle. See Sup.

Rycht peralous the semlay was to se

Hardy and hat contenyt the fell mellé.

Wallace, v. 834. MS.

M E L

It is sometimes requisite that it should be pron. as a monosyllable.

This Schyr Johne, in till playn melle,

Throw sowerane hardiment that felle,

Wencussyt thaim sturdely ilkan.

Barbour, xvi. 515. MS.

2. In melle, in a state of mixture or conjunction. S.

Thus it also occurs in the sense of mixture, or the state of being mingled.

Fede folke, for my sake, that failen the fode,

And menge me with matens, and masses in melle.

Sir Gawan and Sir Gol, i. 25.

Fr. melée, id. whence chaude melée; L. B. melleia, melle-tum, certamen, praelium.

MELLYNE, MELLING, s. Mixture; confusion.

— Meill, and malt, and blud, and wyne,

Ran all to giddy in a mellyne,

That was unsemly for to se.

Tharfor the men off that countré,

For swa fele thar mellyt wer,

Callyt it the Dowglas Lardner.

Fr. mellange, id.

Barbour, v. 406. MS.

MELLING, s. The act of intermeddling. S.

MELL, s. A company.

"A dozen or twenty men will sometimes go in, and stand a-breast in the stream, at this kind of fishing, [called heaving or hauling,] up to the middle, in strong running water, for three or four hours together: A company of this kind is called a mell." P. Dornock, Dumfr. Statist. Acc. ii. 16.

Germ. mal, A. S. Teut. mael, comitia, coetus, conventus; from mael-en, conjungi, or Su. G. mael-a, loqui. Hence L. B. mall-us, mallum, placitum majus, in quo majora Comitatus negotia, quae in Villis, Centuriisve terminari non poterant, a Comite finiebantur. Spelm. Gl. vo. Mallum; Schilter. Gl.

Allied to this seems mell-supper; "a supper and merry-making, dancing, &c. given by the farmers to their servants on the last day of reaping the corn or harvest-home. North." Grose, Prov. Gl. Teut. mael, convivium.

To MELL, v. n. To become damp; applied solely to corn in the straw. S.

MELLA, MELLAY, adj. Mixed. Mellay hew, mixed colour; Mellay wool, mixed wool, &c. S.

MELLER, s. The quantity of meal ground at the mill at one time; the same with Melder, q. v. S.

MELLGRAVE, s. A break in a highway. V. MELGRAVE. S.

MELL-IN-SHAFT. To keep mell-in-shaft. 1. To hold on in any course or condition; as, to retain a good state of health. 2. To be able to carry on one's business. S.

MELMONT BERRIES, s. Juniper berries. S.

MELT, s. The milt or spleen, S.

"I sau madyn hayr, of the quhilk ane sirop maid of it is remeid contrar the infectioun of the melt." Compl. S. p. 104.

— The bleiring Bats and the Bean-shaw,

With the Mischief of the Melt and Maw.

Montgomerie, Watson's Coll. iii. 13.

Su. G. mielte, A. S. Alem. milte, Dan. milt, Isl. millte, id. A. S. milteseoc, lienosus, sick of the spleen; miltesare, the disease or sore of the spleen; probably the same called the infectioun, and the mischief, of the Melt.

To MELT, v. a. To knock down; properly, by a stroke in the side, where the melt or spleen lies, S.

But I can teet an' hitch about,

An' melt them ere they wit;

An' syne fan they're dung out o' breath

M E M

They hae na maughts to hit.

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 36.

"The phrase, to melt a person, or an animal, is used, when either suddenly sinks under a blow on the side," Gl. Compl.

MELT-HOLE, s. The space between the ribs and the pelvis, whether in man or beast. V. Melt, s. S.

MELTETH, MELTITH, s. 1. A meal, food, S. meltet, S.B. Unhalsome melteth is a fairy mous, And namely to a nobil lyon strang, Wont to be fed with gentil venison.

Henryson, Evergreen, i. 193.

The feckless meltet did her head o'er set,
Cause nature frae't did little sust'nance get.

Ross's Helenore, p. 26.

"A hearty hand to gie a hungry meltith;" S. Prov. "an ironical ridicule upon a niggardly dispenser;" Kelly, p. 27.

"Twa hungry meltiths makes the third a glutton;" Ferguson's S. Prov. p. 32.

2. A cow's meltit, the quantity of milk yielded by a cow at one milking. S.

Verstegan, meal-tide, "the time of eating;" Chauc. mele-tide, according to Tyrwhitt, dinner-time. Isl. mael-tid, hora prandii vel coenae; Gl. Edd. Teut. maal-tyd, convivium, from maal, mael, a meal, a repast, and tyd, tempus; literally, the time, the hour of eating. Thus Belg. middag-maal, dinner, or the meal at midday; avond-maal, supper, or the meal taken at evening. A.S. maele, id. LL. Canut. aer-maele, dinner, i. e. an early meal. Yfel bith thaet, man faestentide aer-maele etc; Malum est hominem jejunii tempore prandium edere. Ap. Somner. The use of the word in this sense seems to shew, that they were not wont, in the time of Canute, to take what we call breakfast. Dan. maaltid, a meal. Ihre observes that Su.G. maaltid signifies supper. But Seren. renders this word simply, a meal, a meal's-meat; for supper he gives aftonmaaltid. Some derive the word maal from Su.G. maal-a, molere, because we use our teeth in grinding our food. Wachter from maal, sermo, because conversation is one of the principal enjoyments at a feast. Ihre observes that the word maaltid is a pleonasm, tid and mal equally denoting time, as Su.G. maal is a sign either of time or of place. Amongst the various opinions as to the origin of this word, I wonder that no one has mentioned Su.G. maal-a, mensurare, maal, mensura; as set measures or portions were given to servants at fixed hours.

To MELVIE, v. a. To soil with meal, S.

Waesucks! for him that gets nae lass,

Or lasses that hae naething!

Sma' need has he to say a grace,

Or melvie his braw claithing! Burns, iii. 38.

Isl. miolveg-r matr, fruges; G. Andr.

MELVIE, adj. Soiled with meal, S.B. Shirr. Gl.

A.S. mealewe, melewe, melwe, meal.

To MELWAND, v. a. To rub with meal. V. MEAL-WIND.

MEMBRONIS, Houlate, iii. 1.

Than rerit thro membronis that montis so he.

Leg. thir marlionis, as in MS. i. e. merlins. V. BELD CYTTES.

To MEMER, v. n. To recollect one's self.

Hit stemered, hit stonayde, hit stode as a stone;

Hit marred; hit memered; hit mused for madde.

Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. i. 9.

A.S. mymer-ian, reminisci.

MEMERKYN, MYNMERKIN, s. A contumelious term, apparently expressive of smallness of size.

— Mandrag, memerkyn, mismade myting.

Stewart, Evergreen, i. 120.

Marmadin, mynmerkin, monster of all. Ibid. ii. 74.

M E N

Mynmerkin seems the primary form. As connected with marmadin, it might seem to suggest the idea of a sea-nymph; the last part of the word being allied to C.B. merch, a virgin, a maid. But it may be Goth., min signifying little. Lord Hailes has observed; "Within our own memory, in Scotland, the word merekin was used for a girl, in the same sense as the Greek μεροζαιον." Annals, i. 318. As it seems doubtful whether an O.E. word, of an indelicate sense, does not enter into the composition, I shall leave it without further investigation.

MEMMIT, part. pa.

Thay forge the friendship of the fremmit,

And fleis the favour of their freinds;

Thay wald with nobill men be memmit,

Syne laittandly to lawar leinds.

Scott, Bannatyne Poems, p. 208. st. 7.

"Probably, matched," Lord Hailes. This conjecture is certainly well-founded. From the connexion, the word evidently means alliance by marriage. Women are here represented, as first wishing to be allied to nobility, and afterwards as secretly leaning or inclining to those of inferior rank. It is most probably formed from Teut. moeme, mume, an aunt by the father's or mother's side; in Mod. Sax. an ally. Muomon suni, consobrini, Gloss. Pez. Wachter observes, that the word is used to denote every kind of consanguinity.

MEMORIAL, adj. Memorable. S.

MEMT, part. adj. Connected by, or attached from blood, alliance, or friendship. S.

MEN, adj. Main; principal. S.

MENAGE, s. A friendly society in which a certain number of persons agree to pay in a sum weekly, for as many weeks as there are members. They then determine by lot the order on which the weekly contributions are to be given to each member, upon his finding security that he will continue to pay in during the stipulated time. S.

MENANIS (SANCT.) St. Monan's in Fife. S.

MENARE, s. One of the titles given to the Virgin, in a Popish hymn; apparently synon. with Moyaner, q. v. as denoting one who employs means, a mediatrix.

The feind is our felloun fa, in thé we confyde,

Thou moder of all mercye, and the menare.

Houlate, iii. 9. MS.

Teut. maener, however, signifies monitor, from maen-en, monere, hortari.

MENCE, s. Errat. for Mense, q. v. Saxon and Gael. S.

MENDIMENT, s. Amendment; pron. menniment. S.

MENDS, s. 1. Atonement; expiation. See Sup.

— "He hais send his awin sone our saluour Jesus Christ to vs, to make ane perfite mendis, and just satisfaction for all our synnis." Abp. Hamiltoun's Catechisme, 1551, Fol. 17, b. Thus he renders propitiationem.

2. Amelioration of conduct.

"There is nothing but mends for misdeeds;" S. Prov. Kelly, p. 320.

3. Addition. To the mends, over and above; often applied to what is given above bargain, as E. to boot. V. Keltie.

"I will verily give my Lord Jesus a free discharge of of all, that I, like a fool, laid to his charge, and beg him pardon to the mends." Rutherford's Lett. P. i. ep. 161.

4. Revenge. To get a mends of one, to be revenged on one. S.

Contr. from O.E. amends, compensation, which is evidently Fr. amende, used in pl. It appears that amends had been also used in S., from the phrase, applied both to persons and things; He would thole amends; i. e. He would require a change to the better.

M E N

To MENE, MEYNE, MEANE, v. a. 1. To bemoan; to lament, S.

Sic mayn he maid men had gret ferly;
 For he was nocht custummabilly
 Wont for to meyne men ony thing.

Barbour, xv. 237. MS.

Quhen thai of Scotland had wittering
 Off Schir Eduuardis wencussing,
 Thai menyt thaim full tendrely.

Ibid. xviii. 207. MS.

Quhat ferly now with nane thoch I be meind,
 Sen thus falsly now failyes me my freind.

Priests of Peblis, S.P.R. i. 42.

O.E. mene, id. pret. ment.

Edward sore it ment, when he wist that tirpeil,
 For Sir Antoyne he sent, to cum to his conseil.

R. Brunne, p. 255.

Biment, bemoaned, K. of Tars. E. M. R. ii. 200.

2. To mean one's self, to make known one's grievance; to utter a complaint. See Sup.

— "Ye shall not hereafter advocat unto you any matter, from any Presbyterie within that kingdom, without first the partie, suiter of the same, have meaned himself to that Archbishop and his conjunct commissioners, within whose Province he doth remain, and that he do complain as well of them, as of the Presbytery." Letter Ja. VI. 1608, Calderwood's Hist. p. 581.

In nearly the same sense it is said, in vulgar language, to one who is in such circumstances, that he can have no reason for complaint, or can have no difficulty of accomplishing any matter referred to; I dinna mein you, or, You're no to mein, i. e. Your situation is such as to excite no sympathy.

I think, my friend, an' fowk can get
 A doll of roast beef piping het,—
 And be nae sick, or drown'd in debt,
 They're no to mean.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 350.

Yes, said the king, we're no to mean,
 We live baith warm, and snug, and bien.

R. Galloway's Poems, p. 132.

3. "To indicate pain or lameness; to walk or move as if lame," Sibb. Gl.

"You mein your leg when you walk."

This seems an oblique sense of the same v.

To MENE, MEANE, v. n. 1. To utter complaints; to make lamentation, S.

If you should die for me, sir knight,
 There's few for you will meane;
 For mony a better has died for me,
 Whose graves are growing green.

Minstrelsy, Border, iii. 276.

2. To utter moans, as a person in sickness, S.

A.S. maen-an, dolere, ingemiscere.

MENE, MEIN, MAIN, s. 1. Moaning; lamentation. S.

2. Condolence; expression of sympathy; as, "I didna mak meikle mein for him;" "My mene's made." S.

To MENE, MEAN, MEEN, v. a. 1. To intend; as E. mean, S.

How grete wodnes is this that ye now mene?

Doug. Virgil, 40, 3.

A.S. maen-an, Germ. mein-en, Su.G. men-a, velle, intendere.

2. To esteem; to prize.

And eik, for they beheld before thare ene
 His dochtly dedis, thay him loue and mene.

Doug. Virgil, 330, 29.

M E N

3. To take notice of; to mention; to hint.

She drew the curtains, and stood within,
 And all amazed spake to him:
 Then meened to him his distress,
 Heart or the head whether it was;
 And his sickness less or mare;
 And then talked of Sir Egeir.

Sir Egeir, p. 32.

A.S. maen-an, memorare, mentionem facere.

There is scarcely any variation in the sense in which it occurs in the Kyng of Tars.

Dame, he seide, ur doughter hath ment
 To the soudan for to weende.

Ritson's E. M. R. ii. 167.

i. e. she hath made a proposal to this purpose.

4. To make known distinctly.

Sa heuin and eirth salbe all one,
 As menis the Apostil Johne.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 175.

—"Gif refusing the same, ye declare thareby your evill mynd towards the comoun-welthe and Libertie of this Realme, we will (as of befor) mein and declair the caus unto the hail Nobilitie and Comounis of this Realme." Knox's Hist. p. 181.

It is often conjoined with schaw, shew, in old law-deeds.

"Unto your Lordschips humblie meinis and schawis, I Sir James Elphinston of Barneton, Knight," &c. Act Sed. 3 Nov. 1599.

It occurs also in this sense, O. E.

The toun he fond paired & schent,
 Kirkes, houses beten down.
 To the kyng they ment tham of the town,
 That many of the best burgeis
 Were fled & ilk man yede his weis.

R. Brunne, App. to Pref. clxxxviii.

Menyng also denotes mention.

Whilk tyme the were kynges, long or now late,
 Thei mak no menyng whan, no in what date.

Ibid. Chron. p. 25.

Germ. mein-en, Su.G. men-a, significare, cogitata sermone vel alio signo demonstrare. Alem. gemein-en, id. Schilter suggests a doubt, however, whether this be not rather from meina, commune, publicum.

5. To know; to recognise.

He bigan at the shulder-blade,
 And with his pawm al rafe he downe,
 Bath hauberk and his actoune,
 And all the fless down til his kne,
 So that men myght his guttes se;
 To ground he fell, so alto rent,
 Was thar noman that him ment.

Ywaine and Gawin, E. M. R. i. 110.

It is also used as a neut. v.

6. To reflect; to think of; with of or on added.

Bot quhen I mene off your stoutnes,
 And off the mony grete prowes,
 That ye haff doyne sa worthely;
 I traist, and trowis sekyrly,
 To haff plane wictour in this fycht.

Barbour, xii. 291. MS.

Lat ilkane on his lemman mene;

And how he mony tyme has bene

In gret thrang, and weill cummyn away.

Ibid. xv. 351. MS.

— Althocht hys Lord wald mene

On his ald seruyce, yet netheles I wene,

He sal not sone be tender, as he was are.

Doug. V. Prol. 357, 34.

A.S. maen-an, in animo habere; Germ. mein-en, cogitare; reminisci. Su.G. men-a, Isl. mein-a, Moes.G. mun-an, cogitare. Alem. farmana suggests the contrary idea; aspernatio, Jun. Etym. vo. Mean. Farmon, contemtor. Schilter.

M E N

7. To make an attempt.

"Finding in his Majestie a most honourabil and Christian resolution, to manifest him self to the world that zelous and religious Prince quhilk he hes hiddertill professit, and to employ the means and power that God hes put into his handis, as weill to the withstanding of quhatsumever forreyne force sall mean within this island, for alteration of the said religion, or endangering of the present estate; as to the ordering and repressing of the inward enemies thairto amangis our selfis," &c. Band of Maintenance, Collection of Conf. ii. 109.

MENE, s. Meaning; design.

To pleis hys lufe sum thocht to flatter and fene,
Sum to hant bawdry and vnleifsum mene.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 402, 50.

Alem. meinon, Germ. meinung, intentio.

MENE, MEIN, s. An attempt, S.B. mint synon.

He wad ha geen his neck, but for ae kiss;
But yet that gate he durst na mak a mein;
Sae was he conjur'd by her modest een,
That, tho' they wad have warm'd a heart of stane,
Had yet a cast sic freedoms to restrain.

Ross's Helenore, p. 32.

Perhaps it strictly signifies, an indication of one's intention.

MENE, adj. Middle; intermediate; mene gate, in an equal way, between two parties.

I sall me hald indifferent the mene gate,
And as for that, put na diuersité,
Quhiddir so Rutulianis or Troianis thay be.

Fr. moyen, id.

Doug. Virgil, 317, 14.

MENE, adj. Common. V. MEIN.

MENFOLK, s. pl. Males.

S.

To MENG, v. a. To mix; to mingle. V. MING.

To MENG, v. n. To become mixed. "The corn's beginning to meng," i. e. to change colour, to ripen.

S.

To MENGE, v. a.

Fede folke, for my sake, that failen the fode;
And menge me with matens, and masses in melle.

Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. i. 25.

It seems to signify, soothe, assuage; perhaps obliquely from A.S. meng-an, myneg-ian, monere, commonefacere.

MENIE, MAINIE, s. One abbrev. of Marianne, sometimes of Wilhelmina.

S.

MENYEIT, part. pa. Maimed. V. MANYIED.

MENYIE, MENGYIE, MENYE, MENYHÉ, s. 1. The persons constituting one family. See Sup.

"Properly the word," according to Rudd, "signifies the domesticks, or those of one family, in which sense it is yet used in the North of England; as, We be six or seven a Meny (for so they pronounce it) i. e. 6 or 7 in family, Ray."

It is thus used by our old Henrysone.

Hes thow no reuth to gar thy tennent sueit
Into thy lawbour, full faynt with hungry wame?
And syne hes littill gude to drink or eit,
Or his menyé at evin quhen he cumis hame.

Bannatyne Peems, p. 121. st. 21.

It is used in a similar sense by Wiclif, and Langland.

"If thei han clepid the housebonde man Belzebub: how myche more his houshold menyee?" Matt. 10.

I circumcised my sonne sithen for hys sake;
My selfe and my menyny, and all that male were Bled blond for the Lordes loue, & hope to blyss the tyme.

P. Ploughman, Fol. 90, b.

It occurs in the same sense in R. Brunne, p. 65.

Tostus ouer the se went to S. Omere,

M E N

His wife & his meyne, & duelled ther that yere.

O.Fr. mesnie signifies a family.

2. A company; a band; a retinue. A great menyie, a multitude, S.B. A few menyie, was formerly used; i. e. a small company.

In nowmer war thay but ane few menyie,
Bot thay war quyk, and valyeant in mellé.

Doug. Virgil, 153, 8.

Thus Wyntown uses it to denote those who accompanied St. Serf, when he arrived at Inchkeith.

Saynt Adaman, the haly man,
Come til hyme thare, and fermly
Mad spyrytuale band of cumpany,
And tretyd hym to cum in Fyfe,
The tyme to dryve oure of hys lyfe.
Than til Dysard hys menyhé

Of that counsale fwrth send he. Cron. v. 12. 1170.

3. The followers of a chieftain.

"If the laird slights the lady, his menyie will be ready;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 42. i. e. ready to follow his example.

Till Louchmabane he went agane;
And gert men with his lettres ryd,
To freyndis apon ilk sid,
That come to hym with thar mengye;
And his men als assemblyt he.

Barbour, ii. 75. MS.

4. Troops; an army in general, or the multitude which follows a prince in war.

The King Robert wyst he wes thar,
And quhat kyn chyftanys with him war,
And assemblyt all his mengye;
He had feyle off full gret bounté.

Barbour, ii. 228. MS.

Nor be na wais me list not to deny
That of the Grekis menyé ane am I.

Doug. Virgil, 41, 15.

Neque me Argolica de gente negabo. Virg. Æn. ii. 78.

It is used by R. Glouc. as denoting armed adherents or followers.

Tuelf yer he byleuede tho here wyth noble y nou,—
And bygan to astrengthy ys court, & to eche ys maynye.
P. 180.

5. A crowd; a multitude; applied to persons. S.

6. A multitude; applied to things, S. See Sup.

Black be the day that e'er to England's ground
Scotland was eikit by the Union's bond;
For mony a menyie o' destructive ills
The country now maun brook frae mortmain bills.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 86.

The word is evidently allied to A.S. menegio, menigo, manige, menge, &c. multitudo, turba. Isl. meingi, id. Alem. menigi, multitudo, also, legio; Moes.G. manag, A.S. maenige, Alem. Belg. menige, O. Teut. menie, multus; whence E. many. Wachter derives these terms from man, plures; Ihre views them as having a common origin with Su.G. men, publicus, communis. Jun. deduces them from man, homo, as being properly used to denote a multitude of men. V. Goth. Gl. vo. Manag.

"Many," Mr. Tooke says, "is merely the past participle of (A.S.) meng-an, miscere, to mix, to mingle: it means mixed, or associated (for that is the effect of mixing) subaud. company, or any uncertain and unspecified number of any things." Divers. Purley, ii. 387.

I have given that as the first sense, which Rudd. views as the proper one. But I am convinced that the term primarily respected a multitude, because it uniformly occurs in this sense in Moes.G. A.S. and Alem. Not one example, I apprehend, can be given from any of these ancient languages, either of the adj. or subst. being used, except as denoting a great company. The phrase, which

Mr. Tooke quotes from Douglas,—a few menye, in support of the idea, that from the term itself we can learn nothing certain as to number, is a solitary one; and only goes to prove, what is evident from a variety of other examples, that the term gradually declined in its sense. Originally, signifying a multitude, it was used to denote the great body that followed a prince to war; afterwards it was applied to those who followed an inferior leader, then to any particular band or company, till it came to signify any association, although not larger than a single family.

I hesitate greatly as to A.S. menġ-an, being the origin. It seems in favour of this hypothesis, that a multitude, or crowd, implies the idea of mixture. But this is one of those theories which will turn either way. Wachter conjecturally deduces the Germ. synon. menġ-en, miscere, from menge, many, or a multitude. "For what is it to mingle," he says, "but to make one of many?" This, indeed, seems the most natural order. For, although a multitude or crowd necessarily includes the idea of mixture; there may be mixture where there is not a multitude of objects.

MENYNG, s. Pity; compassion.
Than lukyt he angryly thaim to,
And said grynnd, Hyngis and drawys.
That wes wonder of sic sawis,
That he, that to the dede wes ner,
Suld ansuer apon sic maner;
For owtyn menyng and mercy.

Barbour, iv. 326. MS.

V. Mene, to lament; q. that principle which makes one bemoan the helpless situation of another.

MENISSING, s. The act of diminishing. S.
MENKIT, pret. Joined.

Now, fayr sister, fallis yow but fenyng to tell,
Sen men first with matrimonie yow menkit in kirk,
How have ye farne?

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 51.

This is the reading of Edit. 1508, instead of mensit, Edit. 1786.

A.S. menġ-an, miscere; also, concumbere.

MENOUN, MENIN, s. A minnow, S. mennon, minnon.
— With his handis quhile he wrocht
Gynnys, to tak geddis and salmonys,
Trowtis, elys, and als menounys.

Barbour, ii. 577. MS.

To where the saugh-tree shades the menin pool,
I'll frae the hill come down when day grows cool.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 133.

Alem. mina is rendered fannus piscis. Perhaps the minnow has its name from Germ. min, little. Since writing this, I am informed that its Gael. name meanan, is traced to meanbh, little.

To MENSE, v. a. To grace. V. MENSK, v. S.
MEN'S-HOUSE, s. A cottage attached to a farm-house where the men-servants cook their victuals. S.

MENSK, MENSE, s. 1. Manliness; dignity of conduct.
Tharfor we suld our hartis raiss,
Swa that na myscheyff ws abaiss;
And schaip always to that ending
That beris in it mensk and lowing.

Barbour, iv. 549. MS.

2. Honour. See Sup.

Now dois weill; for men sall se
Quha luffis the Kingis mensk to-day.

Barbour, xvi. 621. MS.

3. Good manners; discretion; propriety of conduct, S.
Thair manheid, and thair mense, this gait thay murle;
For mariage thus unyte of ane churle.

V. MOCHRE. Priests of Peblis, p. 13.

Auld Vandal, ye but show your little mense,

Just much about it wi' your scanty sense.

Burns, iii. 54.

"He hath neither mentse nor honesty;" S. Prov. Rudd.
Mense, A. Bor. id.

"I have baith my meat and my mense;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 39; "spoken when we proffer meat, or any thing else, to them that refuse it." Kelly, p. 212.

"Meat is good, but mense is better;" S. Prov. "Let not one's greediness on their meat intrench on their modesty." Kelly, p. 244.

"Mence is hansomness, or credit." Gl. Yorks. Dial.
"Mense, decency, credit." Gl. Grose.

4. Sense of thanks or grateful return. S.

5. Credit; ornament; something giving respectability. S.

Isl. menska, humanitas; menskur, A.S. mennisc, Su.G. maennisklig, humanus; formed from man, in the same manner as Lat. human-us from homo.

MENSKE, adj. Humane.

Thou gabbest on me so
Min em nil me nought se;
He threteneth me to slo,
More menske were it to the Better for to do,—

This tide;

Or Y this lond schal fle,

In to Wales wide.

V. the s.

Sir Tristrem, p. 118.

To MENSK, MENSE, v. a. 1. To behave with good manners, to make obeisance to one in the way of civility; to treat respectfully. It is opposed, however, to giving homage, bowing ane bak.

I sall preive all my pane to do hym plesance;
Baith with body, and beild, bowsum and boun,
Hym to mensk on mold, withoutin manance.
Bot nowther for his senyeoury, nor for his summoun,
Na for dreid of na dede, na for na distance,
I will noght bow me ane bak, for berne that is borne.

Gawan and Gol. ii. 11.

2. To do honour to; to grace; written menss, mense. See S.
Cum heir, Falsat, and menss this gallowis;
Ye mon hing up amang your fallowis.—
Thairfoir but dowt ye sall be hangit.

Lindsay's S.P.R. ii. 191.

"They mense little the mouth that bites aff the nose;" Ferguson's S. Prov. p. 33; "spoken when people, who pretend friendship for you, traduce your near friends and relations." Kelly, p. 302.

3. To do the honours of; to preside at. To mense a board, to do the honours of a table. S.

4. To fit; to become. S.

MENSKIT, part. pa.

The mereist war menskit on mete at the mail,
With menstrualis myrthfully makand thame glee.

Gawan and Gol. i. 17.

Mr. Pink. renders this, arranged. But it may mean, that those, who were most gay, behaved with moderation and decorum, while at that meal, from respect to the royal presence. Or perhaps it rather signifies that they were honourably treated; in reference to the —seir courssis that war set in that semblee;

and especially the music which accompanied it.

Thus it is merely the passive sense of the v. Mensk.

MENSKFUL, MENSEFUL, MENSFOU, adj. 1. Manly; q. full of manliness.

Schyr Golagros' mery men, menskful of myght,
In greis, and garatouris, graithit full gay;
Sevyne score of scheildis thai schew at ane sicht.

Gawan and Gol. ii. 14.

2. Noble, becoming a person of rank.

M E R

He is the riallest roy, reverend and rike.—
Mony burgh, mony bour, mony big bike;
Mony kynrik to his clame cumly to knaw;
Maneris full menskfull, with mony deip dike.

Gawan and Gol. ii. 8.

3. Modest; moderate; discreet, S. In Yorks. it signifies comely; graceful.

But d'ye see fou better bred
Was mens-fou Maggy Murdy,
She her man like a lammy led
Hame, wi' a weel-wail'd wurdy.

V. MISTIRFUL.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 278.

4. Becoming, particularly in regard to one's station. S.

5. Mannerly; respectful, S.

Thus with attentive look mensfou they sit,
Till he speak first, and shaw some shining wit.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 327.

MENSEFULLIE, adv. In a mannerly way; with propriety. S.

MENSKLES, MENSLESS, adj. 1. Uncivil; void of discretion, S.

This menskless goddes, in euery mannis mouth,
Skalis thyr newis est, weist, north and south.

Doug. Virgil, 106, 39.

2. It is more generally used in the sense of greedy, covetous, insatiable, S.

The staik indeid is unco great;—
I'm seer I hae nae neef
To get fat cou'd be ettl'd at
By sik a mensless thief.

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 3.

3. Immoderate, out of all due bounds, S.

But fu rules trade, are hats, and stockings dear,
And ither trocks that's fit for country wear?
Things has wi' dearth been mensless here awa,
Since the disturbance in America.

Morison's Poems, p. 183.

MENSKLY, adv. Decently, with propriety.

And quhen thir wordis spokyn wer,
With sary cher he held him still,
Qubill men had done of him thair will.
And syne, with the leve of the King,
He broucht him menskly till erding.

Barbour, xix. 86. MS.

A.S. mennislice, humaniter, more hominum.

MENSWORN, part. pa. Perjured. V. MANSWEIR.

To MENT, v. n. 1. To lift up the hand affectedly without intending to strike. 2. To attempt ineffectually. S.

MENT, pret. of v. Mended. S.

MENTENENT, s. One who assists another. S.

MENTICAPTE, s. Insanity; derangement. S.

To MER, v. a. To put into confusion; to injure; mar, E.

Wald ye wyth men agayn on thaim raleiff,
And mer thaim anys, I sall quhill I may leiff,
Low yow fer mar than ony othir knyght.

Wallace, x. 724. MS.

So thik in stale all merrit wox the rout,
Vneis mycht ony turne his hand about,
To weild his wappin, or to schute ane dart.

Isl. mer-ia, contundere.

Doug. Virgil, 331, 53.

MERCAL, s. A piece of wood used in the construction of the Shetland plough.

"A square hole is cut through the lower end of the beam, and the mercal, a piece of oak about 22 inches long, introduced, which at the other end, holds the sock and sky." P. Aithsting, Shetl. Statist. Acc. vii. 585.

MERCAT, s. A market. MERCAT-STEAD. A market-town; literally, the place where the market stands. S.

MERCH, MERGH, (gutt.) s. 1. Marrow; synonym. smergh.

M E R

— Of hete amouris the subtell quent fyre

Waystis and consumis merch, banis and lire.

V. FARRACH.

Doug. Virgil, 102, 4.

But they hae run him thro' the thick o' the thie,

And broke his knee-pan,

And the mergh o' his shin ban has run down on his spur leather whang. Minstrelsy, Border, i. 208.

It is commonly said, when a person is advised to take something that is supposed to be highly nutritive, That will put mergh in your beins, S.B. It is singular that the same mode of expression is used in Sweden: "They prepare themselves [for the hard labour of ploughing] on this day [the first of May] by frequent libations of their strong ale, and they usually say, Maste man dricka marg i benen; You must drink marrow in your bones." Von Troil's Lett. on Iceland, p. 24, N.

2. Strength; pith; ability, S.

Now steekit frae the gowany field,

Frae ilka fav'rite houff and biold,

But mergh, alas! to disengage

Your bonny buik frae fettering cage,

Your free-born bosom beats in vain

For darling liberty again. Fergusson's Poems, ii. 36.

But mergh, i. e. without strength.

3. Transferred to the mind, as denoting understanding.

A.S. merg, maerh, Su.G. maerg, Isl. mergi, Belg. marg, C.B. mer, Dan. marfve, id. It has been supposed that maerg-el, the Goth. name of marle, Lat. marg-a, is to be traced to this as its origin, q. fat or marrowy earth. V. MERKERIN.

MERCHY, (gutt.) adj. Marrow. S.

MERCHENESS, s. The state of being marrowy. S.

MERCHANGUID, s. Merchandise. S.

MERCHANT, s. A shopkeeper; a peddling dealer. S.

MERCHIT, part. pa. Bounded. V. MARCH, v. S.

MERCIABLE, adj. Merciful.

Hye Quene of lufe! sterre of benevolence!

Pitouse princesse, and planet merciabile!—

Vnto your grace lat now bene acceptable

My pure request.—

King's Quair, iii. 26.

MERCIALL, adj. Merciful.

Thankit mot be the sanctis merciall,

That me first causit hath this accident!

King's Quair, vi. 19.

MERCIALL, adj. Martial; warlike; Bellend. Cron. pass.

MERCIMENT, s. 1. Mercy; discretion. 2. A fine. S.

MERCURY LEAF. The plant Mercurialis perennis. S.

MERE, s. A march; a boundary; pl. merys. See S.

The thryd castelle was Kyldrwm,

That Dame Crystiane the Brws stowtly

Held wyth knyghtis and Sqwyeris,

That reddytt abowt thame welle thare merys.

Wyntown, viii. 27. 230.

To redd marches, is a synonym. phrase still used, as signifying to determine the limits. That employed here has a metaph. sense,—to keep off the enemy from their boundaries; as our modern one often means, to settle any thing that is matter of dispute.

A.S. maera, Su.G. maere, Belg. O.E. meer, id. Thre derives it from Gr. μεριω, divido.

MERE, s. 1. The sea. See Sup.

He Lord wes of the Oryent,

Of all Judè, and to Jordane

And to the mere swa Mediterane.

Wyntown, ix. 12. 38.

2. An arm of the sea. 3. A small pool, caused by the moisture of the soil; one dried up by the heat. S.

A.S. Alem. mere, Isl. maere, mar, Moes. G. marei, Germ. Belg. mer, Lat. mare, Fr. mer, C.B. mor, Gael. Ir. muir.

M E R

Su.G. mar signifies either the sea, or a lake; any large body of water. The terms, in different languages, denoting any great body of water, are promiscuously used in this manner. Thus the lake of Gennesaret is also called the sea of Gennesaret: and in A.S. the same word is sometimes rendered a lake, and at other times a sea.

MERESWINE, MEER-SWINE, s. 1. A dolphin.

Bot hir hynd partis ar als grete wele nere
As bene the hidduous huddum, or ane quhale,
Qubareto bene cuplit mony mereswyne tale,
With empty mawis of wolfis rauenous.

Doug. Virgil, 82, 26.

Delphinum caudas, Virg. Elsewhere the same word is rendered dalphyne by Doug. But that this name was, at least occasionally, given to the dolphin, by our forefathers, appears also from the evidence of Sir R. Sibbald.

"The bigger beareth the name of dolphin; and our fishers call them Meer-swines."—"Delphinus Delphis," N. "The lesser is called Phocaena, a porpoise."—"Delphinus phocaena," N. Fife, pp. 115, 116.

2. A porpoise. This is the more modern and common use of the term. See Sup.

As a vast quantity of fat surrounds the body of this animal, it has given occasion to the proverbial allusion, "as fat as a mere-swine," S.

Teut. maer-swin, delphinus, q. d. porcus marinus; Su.G. marswin, Fr. marsouin, a porpoise.

To MERES. Meaning not clear. S.

MERETABILL, adj. Laudable. S.

MERGH, s. Marrow. V. MERCH.

MERGIN, adj. (g hard.) Most numerous; largest.

The mergin part, that which exceeds in number, or in size, S.B.

Su.G. marg, Isl. marg-ur, multus; mergd, multitudo.

These words, as Ihre observes, are evidently allied to Su.G. mer, magnus.

To MERGLE, v. n. To wonder; to express surprise. S.

MERITOR, s. Perhaps one who profits by a bargain. S.

MERY, adj. "Faithful, effectual;" Gl. Wynt.

On what authority this sense is given, I have not observed. The phrase mery men, as denoting adherents or soldiers, is very ancient.

Be it was mydmorne, and mare, merkit on the day,
Schir Golagros' merymen, menksful of myght,
In greis, and garatouris, grathit full gay;
Sevyne score of scheildis thai schew at ane sicht.

Gawan and Gol. ii. 14.

Sibb. refers to mor, great, Su.G. maere, illustrious. But this seems to be merely a phrase expressive of the affection of a chief to his followers, as denoting their hilarity in his service; from A.S. mirige cheerful.

MERK, s. A Scottish silver coin, formerly current, now only nominal; value, thirteen shillings and fourpence of our money, or thirteen pence and one third of a penny Sterling, S.

"In the year 1561 [1571] it was ordained by the Earl of Lennox, then regent, and the lords of the secret council, that two silver pieces should be struck;—that the weight of the one should be eleven penny weight twelve grains Troy, to be called merks [a merk]; the other, one half of that weight, and to be called half a merk." Introd. to Anderson's Diplom. p. 150.

It does not appear, however, that any such coins were struck at this time.

"The mark," says Mr. Pinkerton, "was so called as being a grand limited sum in account (Marc, limes, Goth.) It was of eight ounces in weight, two-thirds of the money pound." Essay on Medals, ii. 73, N.

Su.G. mark, as applied to silver, denoted eight ounces.

M E R

The term has still this sense in Denmark. Ihre says, that it had its name from maerke, or a note impressed, signifying the weight.

MERK, s. A term used in jewellery. S.

MERK, MERKLAND, s. A certain denomination of land, from the duty formerly paid to the sovereign or superior, S. Shetl.

"The lands are understood to be divided into merks. A merk of land, however, does not consist uniformly of a certain area. In some instances, a merk may be less than an acre; in others, perhaps, equal to two acres. Every merk, again, consists of so much arable ground, and of another part which is only fit for pasturage; but the arable part alone varies in extent from less than one to two acres. Several of these merks, sometimes more, sometimes fewer, form a town." P. Unst, Shetland, Statist. Acc. v. 195. N.

"These merks are valued by sixpenny, ninepenny, and twelpenny land. Sixpenny land pays to the proprietor 8 merks butter, and 12s. Scotch per merk." P. Aithsting, Shetland, Ibid. vii. 580.

An inferior denomination of land is Ure.

"The lands of that description—are 329 Merks and three Ures or eighths, paying of Landmails yearly 109 Lisponds 19 Merks weight of butter, and £238 : 14 Scots money." MS. Acc. of some lands in the P. of Unst.

At first it might seem that this term should be traced to Su.G. mark, a wood; a territory; a plain; a pasture, rather than to mark as a denomination of money; because a merk of land receives different designations, borrowed from money of an inferior value, as sixpenny, ninepenny, &c. But although the name merk seems now appropriated to the land itself, without regard to the present valuation, there is no good reason to doubt that the designation at first originated from the duty, imposed on a certain piece of land, to be paid to the King or the superior.

This exactly corresponds to the division of property, among the northern nations, according to this mode of estimation. The ures mentioned above, are merely the orae of Ihre, also used as a denomination of land. According to Widegr. three oeres make an English farthing; but Seren. says that a farthing is called halfoere.

One sense given of mark, by Ihre is, Certa agrorum portio, quae dividitur, pro ratione numerandi pecunias in marcas, oras, oertugas et penningos; vo. MARK.

The same learned writer, after giving different senses of oere, adds;

IV. Apud agrimensores nostros oere, oertig & penning est certa portio villae dividendae in suas partes. Ett oeres land, en oertig land, &c. cujus ratio olim constitit in censu, quem pendebant agri, nunc tantum rationem indicant unius ad alterum, ita ut qui oram possidet in villa triplo plus habet altero qui oertugam, &c. Ihre, vo. Oere.

Verel. gives a similar account, vo. Oere, p. 193. V. URE, s. 4.

The same mode of denomination has been common in S.

"The Lordes of the Session esteeme ane marke land, of auld extent, to four mark land of new extent." Skene, Verb. Sign. vo. Extent.

"The common burdens were laid on, not according to the retour or merkland, but the valuation of the rents." Baillie's Lett. i. 370.

MERK, adj. Dark. V. MARK.

To MERK, v. n. To ride.

Than he merkit with myrth, our ane grene meid,
With all the best, to the burgh, of lordis I wis.

Gawan and Gol. i. 14.

"Marched," Gl. Pink. But it seems rather to mean, rode.

O.Fr. march-er, C.B. marchogaeth, Arm. marck-at, Ir. markay-im, to ride; C.B. march, Germ. marck, mark, a horse, (probably from Goth. mar, id.); whence Teut. mark-grave, equitum praefectus, Kilian.

M E R

To MERK, v. a. To design; to appoint.

—To rede I began—

Of all the mowis in this mold, sen God merkit man,
The mouing of the mapamound, and how the mone
schane. Doug. Virgil, 239, a. 54.

Merkit is often conjoined with made, S.B. "The like of that was nevir merkit nor made." A.S. mearc-ian, de-signare; merced, statutus.

MERKE SCHOT, "seems the distance between the bow markis, which were shot at in the exercise of archery," Gl. Wynt.

About him than he rowmyt thare
Thretty fute on breid, or mare,
And a merke schot large of lenth.

Wyntown, ix. 27. 419.

V. Acts, Ja. I. c. 20. Ed. 1566. A.S. merc, Germ. mark, a mark, a boundary.

MERKERIN, s. The spinal marrow, Ang. See Sup.

Mergh, q. v. signifies marrow; and Germ. kern has the same sense; also signifying pith. The spinal marrow may have received this denomination, as being the principal marrow, that which constitutes the pith or strength of the body.

MERKIE-PIN, s. That part of a plough on which the share is fixed. S.

To MERL, v. n. To candy; to become granulous; applied to honey, sweetmeats, &c. when long exposed to the air. S.

MERLIE, adj. Sandy and sweet; candied. V. MERL. S.

MERLE, s. The blackbird.

To heir it was a poynt of Paradyce,
Sic mirth the mavis and the merle couth mae.

Henryson, Evergreen, 1. 186.

"Than the mavis maid myrth, for to mok the merle."
Compl. S. p. 60.

Fr. merle, Ital. merla, Hisp. murla, Teut. meriaen, merie,
Lat. merula, id.

MERLED, MIRLED, part. pa. Variegated. V. MARLED.

MERLINS, interj. Expressive of surprise. S.

MERMAID'S GLOVE, s. The sponge. S.

MERMAID'S PURSE. V. MERMAID'S GLOVE. S.

MERRY,* adj. Strong; bold; as, "My merry men." S.

MERRY-BEGOTTEN, s. A spurious child, Ang.

This singular term nearly resembles an O.E. idiom.

Knoute of his body gate sonnes thre,

Tuo bi tuo wives, the thrid in jolifte.

i. e. jollity.

R. Brunne, p. 50.

MERRY-DANCERS, s. pl. 1. A name given to the Aurora Borealis, or Northern Lights, S.

"In the Shetland islands, the Merry Dancers, as they are there called, are the constant attendants of clear evenings, and prove great reliefs amidst the gloom of the long winter nights." Encycl. Brit. vo. Aurora Borealis.

These lights had appeared much less frequently in former times than in ours, and were viewed as portentous.
The first instance mentioned by Dr. Halley, is that which occurred in England, A. 1560, when what were called burning spears were seen in the atmosphere. Baddam's Mem. Royal Soc. vi. 209. Phil. Trans. N. 347.

They are mentioned by Wyntown, as appearing in S. in a very early period.

Sevyn hundyr wynter and fourty

And fyve to rekyn fullyly,

Sternys in the ayre fleand

Wes sene, as flawys of fyre brynnand

The fyrst nycht of Januere,

All that nycht owre schynand clere. Cron. vi. 1. 75.

VOL. II.

105

M E S

2. The vapours arising from the earth in a warm day, as seen flickering in the atmosphere. V. SUMMER-COUTS. S.

Their Su.G. name, nordsken, norrskan, corresponds to that of Northern lights, q. north shine.

MERRY-HYNE, s. 1. A merry-hyne to him or it; a phrase used by persons when they have got quit of what has annoyed them. 2. To get one's merry-hyne, to receive one's dismissal in a rather disgraceful
manner. S.

MERRY-MEAT, s. The feast at a birth. V. KIMMERING.

MERRY-METANZIE, s. A sport of female children. S.

MERRIT. V. MER.

MERSE, s. 1. A flat and fertile spot of ground between hills; a hollow. 2. Alluvial land on the side of a river or gained from the sea. S.

MERTRIK, s. A marten. V. MARTRIK.

MERVADIE, adj. Sweet, and at the same time brittle.

MERVY, MARVIE, adj. Rich; mellow; applied to fruits, potatoes, &c. Savoury; agreeable to the taste. S.

MERVIL, adj. Inactive; applied both to mind and body.

MERVYS, 3. pers. pr. of the v. MER.

—Thryldome is weill wer than deid;

For quhill a thryll his lyff may leid,

It mervys him, body and banys,

And dede anoyis him bot anys.

In MS. merrys. V. MER.

Barbour, l. 271.

MES, MESS, s. The Popish mass; still pron. mess, S.

There is na Sanct may saif your saull,

Fra the transgres:

Suppose Sanct Peter and Sanct Paull

Had baith said Mes.

Spec. Godly Ballads, p. 38.

Su.G. Ital. messa, Germ. Fr. messe, Belg. misse. This has been derived from the concluding words of this service, Ite, missa est; or from the dismissal of the catechu-mens before the mass. Ten Kate, however, deduces it from Moes.G. mesa, A.S. mysa, myse, O. Belg. misse, a table, q. mensa Domini. V. Ihre, vo. Messa.

MES, or MASS JOHN, a sort of ludicrous designation for the minister of a parish, S. Gl. Shirr.

This breeds ill wiles, ye ken fu' aft,

In the black coat,

Till poor Mass John, and the priest-craft

Goes ti' the pot.

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, P. ii. 42.

This has evidently been retained from the time of Popery, as equivalent to mass-priest.

MESALL, MYSEL, adj. Leprous. See Sup.

Bellenden, speaking of salmon, says; "Utheris quhilkis lepis nocht cleirlye ouir the lyn, brekis thaym self be thair fall, & growis mesall." Descr. Alb. c. 11.

"They open the fishe, and lukes not quhither they be mysel or lipper fish or not." Chalmerlan Air. c. 21. s. 9.

It also occurs in O. E.

—To meselle houses of that same lond,

Thre thousand mark vnto ther spense he fond.

R. Brunne, p. 136.

Fr. mesel, meseau, leprous, Su.G. maslig, scabiosus, from massel, scabies: this Ihre deduces from Germ. mas, masel, macula. Hence,

MESEL, s. A leper.

Coppe and clapper he bare,

Til the fiftenday;

As he a mesel ware.

Sir Tristrem, p. 181.

Baldewyn the meselle, his name so hight,

—For foule meselrie he comoud with no man.

De Baldeiano leproso, Marg.

R. Brunne, p. 140.

O

M E S

MESCHANT, adj. Wicked. V. MISCHANT.
 To MESE, v. a. To mitigate. V. MEIS.
 MESE OF HERRING. Five hundred herrings. See S.
"Mese of herring, containis five hundreth: For the common vse of numeration & telling of herring, be reason of their great multitude, is vsed be thousands: and therefore ane Mese comprehends five hundreth, quhilk is the halfe of ane thousand. From the Greek word μεσσην, in Latin medium," &c. Skene, Verb. Sign. in vo.
It may have originated, however, from Isl. meis, a netted bag in which fish are carried, or Alem. mez, Germ. mes, a measure, mess-en, to measure.
Or it may be viewed as of Gaelic origin; as maois-eisg, signifying "five hundred fish," Shaw. Maois, however, simply signifies a pack or bag, corresponding to Isl. meis; and eisg, Gael. is fish.
 MESH, s. A net for carrying fish, S.
Isl. meis, saccus reticulatus, in quo portantur pisces; Verel.
 MESLIN, MASLIN, s. Mixed corn. V. MASHLIN. S.
 MESOUR, s. Measure. S.
 To MESS AND MELL. 1. To have familiar intercourse.
 2. To mingle at one mess. A proverbial phrase. S.
 MESSAGE, s. Embassy; ambassadors; messengers.
Wallace has herd the message say thair will.—
The samyn message till him thai send agayn,
And thar entent thai tald him in to playn.—
Thai wald nocht lat the message off Ingland
Cum thaim amang, or thai suld wndirstand.
Wallace, viii. 541. 633. 672. MS.
This is a Fr. idiom; for Fr. message denotes, not only a message, but a messenger or ambassador. V. Cotgr.
 MESSAN, MESSIN, MESSOUN, MESSAN-DOG, s. 1. It seems properly to signify a small dog; a lapdog, S. See S.
He is our mekill to be your messoun;
Madame, I red you get a les on;
His gangarris all your chalmers schog.
Madame, ye heff a dangerous Dog.
Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 91.
 2. It is also used, more laxly, to denote such curs as are kept about country houses.
This silly beast, being thus confounded,
Sae deadly hurt, misus'd and wounded,
With messan-dogs sae chas'd and wounded,
In end directs a letter
Of supplication with John Aird,
To purchase license frae the Laird,
That she might bide about the yeard,
While she grew sumwhat better.
Watson's Coll. i. 46.
Wounded, in v. 3., has most probably been written hounded.
Messen-tyke is used by Kennedy in the same sense.
— A crabbit, scabbit, ill-faced messen-tyke.
Evergreen, ii. 73.
Sibb. derives the word from Teut. meysen, puella, q. a lady's dog. Some say, that this small species receives its name, as being brought from Messina in Sicily. This idea is far more probable; especially as it was otherwise denominated Canis Melitensis, as if the species had come from Melite, an island between Italy and Epirus, or, as others render it, from Malta, anciently Melita. "Canis Melitensis, a Messin, or Lap-dog." Sibb. Scot. p. 10.
It might be conjectured that the name has been borrowed from Fr. maison, a house, as originally denoting a dog that lies within doors.
 MESSANDEW, s. An hospital. V. MASSONDEW. S.
 MESS-BREID, s. The bread used in celebrating mass. S.
 MESSIGATE, s. The road to church. S.
 MESSINGERIE, s. The office of a messenger-at-arms. S.
 MESS-SAYER, s. A priest who says mass. S.

M E T

To MESTER, v. a.
Quhat sall I think, allace! quhat reverence
Sall I mester to your excellence?
King's Quair, ii. 24.
"Perhaps administer," Tytler. But it seems rather to signify, stand in need of; q. what obeisance will it be necessary for me to make? V. MISTER, v. and s.
 MESWAND, s.
"Because Achan, in the distruction of Hierico, tuk certane geir that was forbiddin be the special command of God, a cloke of silk verrai fyne, twa hundreth syclis [shekels] of siluer, and ane meswand of gold, he was stanit to the deade." Abp. Hamiltoun's Catechisme, 1551, Fol. 61, b.
This corresponds to wedge in our version, but seems literally to signify "a measuring rod," from Alem. mez, Germ. metz, mensura, and wand, virga.
 MET, auxiliary v. May; used for Mat or Mot. S.
 MET, METT, METTE, s. 1. Measure; used indefinitely, S. A. Bor.
"Swa weyis the Boll new maid, mair than the auld boll xli. pund, quhilk makis twa gallownis and a half, and a chopin of the auld met, and of the new met ordanit ix pyntis and thre mutchkinnis." Acts, Ja. I. 1426. c. 80. Edit. 1566. Mette, Skene, c. 70.
The myllare mythis the multure wyth ane mett skant.
Doug. Virgil, 238, a, 48.
 i. e. a scanty or defective measure.
 2. A measure of a determinate kind, S. See Sup.
"Herrings, caught in the bays in Autumn, sell for 1d. per score, or 3s. per mett, nearly a barrel of fresh ungutted herrings." P. Aithsting, Shetland, Statist. Acc. vii. 589.
Su.G. maatt, A.S. mitta, mete, mensura. The word, as used in the latter sense, is perhaps originally the same with Mese, q. v., although the measure is different. Mete, A. Bor. signifies "a strike, or four pecks;" Gl. Grose. The v. is used in E. as well as metewand, S. mettewand, a staff for measuring.
 To METE, v. a. To paint; to delineate.
This was that tyme, quhen the first quyet
Of natural slepe, to quham na gift mare sweit,
Stelis on forwalkit mortall creaturis,
And in thare sweuynnys metis quent figuris.
Doug. Virgil, 47, 53.
A.S. met-an, pingere; perhaps only a secondary sense of the v. signifying to measure, because painting is properly a delineation of the object represented.
Teut. meete, however, signifies woad; a dye stuff much used by our ancestors in painting their bodies.
 METE HAMYS, METHAMIS, s. pl. Manors; messuages.
Wallace than passit, with mony awfull man,
On Patrikis land, and waistit wondyr fast,
Tuk out gudis, and placis down thai cast;
His stedis vii, that mete hamys was cauld,
Wallace gert brek thai burly byggyngis bauld,
Bathe in the Merss, and als in Lothiane,
Except Dunbar, standand he lewit nane.
Wallace, viii. 401. MS.
In Edit. 1648 and 1673, Methamis. It seems compounded of A.S. mete, meat, and ham, a house. A.S. mathm-hus, a treasury, seems to have no affinity.
 METH, s. A boundary; a limit. V. MEITH.
 METHINK, v. impers. Methinks. Semys me is an example of the same construction. See Sup.
He said, "Me think, Marthokys sone,
Rycht as Golmakmorne was wone,
To haiff fra hym all his mengue;
Rycht swa all his fra ws has he.
Barbour, iii. 67. MS.

Me-thynk all Scottis men suld be Haldyn gretly to that Kyng.

Wyntown, viii. 38. 172.

There has been a general prejudice against the E. word methinks. It has been compared to the language of a Dutchman, attempting to speak English. "This," says Dr. Johnson, "is imagined to be a Norman corruption, the French being apt to confound me and I." But the term has not got common justice. Its origin, and its claims, have not been fairly investigated. In Gl. Wynt. it has been observed; "The v. is here used impersonally: and this seeming irregularity, which still remains in the English, is at least as old as the days of Ulfula, and seems to run through all the Gothic languages."

But the irregularity is merely apparent. The phraseology has been viewed as anomalous, from a mistaken idea, that me is here used for I, as if the accusative were put for the nominative. Thus it is rendered by Johnson, I think. Now me is not the accusative, but the dative. The term, so far from being a modern corruption, is indeed an ancient idiom, which has been nearly repudiated as an intruder, because it now stands solitary in our language. It has not been generally observed, that A.S. thinc-an, thinc-ean, not only signifies to think, but to seem, to appear; cogitare, putare; also, videri. Lye, therefore, when quoting the A.S. phrase, me thinceth, properly renders it, mihi videtur, (it appears to me,) adding; Unde nostra methinketh, methinks. The thinceth frequently occurs in a similar sense; Tibi videtur, It seems to thee:

As Moes.G. thank-jan not only signifies to think, but to seem, Ulphilas uses the same idiom in the plural. Thunkeith im; Videtur illis; It appears to them; Matt. vi. 7. There is merely this difference, that the pronoun is affixed. Alem. thenk-en, thunk-en, is used in the same manner. Uns thunkit; Nobis videtur, It seems to us. Isl. thyk-ia, thikk-ia, videri; Thikke mier; Videtur mihi. V. Jun. Gl. Goth. vo. Thank-jan. Sw. mig-tyckes, mihi videtur, Seren. Belg. my dunkt; Germ. es dunket mich, id.

METHOWSS, s. A house for measuring. S.

METIS, 3. p. v. V. METE.

METLUYME, s. An instrument for measuring. S.

METSTER, METSTAR, s. 1. A person legally authorized to measure. 2. One of the Parliamentary Commissioners for regulating the weights and measures of the kingdom. S.

MET-STICK, s. A bit of wood for measuring the foot. S.

METTEGE, s. Measurement. S.

METAL, s. Stones used for making a road. S.

To METAL a Road. To make or repair a road with stones broken down. S.

MET-BURDIS, METT-BURDIS, s. pl. Perhaps, boards or tables for holding meat at meals. S.

METE GUDIS. Probably vessels for measuring goods. S.

METING, s. A glove called a mitten. S.

METTLE, adj. Capable of enduring much fatigue. S.

To MEUL, MIOL, v. n. To mew, or cry as a cat. S.

MIOLING, s. A term to denote the cry of a tiger. S.

MEW, s. Perhaps corr. of Maich, a son-in-law. S.

"Make na twa mews of ae daughter;" Ferguson's S. Prov. p. 24.

The meaning of this term is uncertain; unless it be from Fr. mue, a coop or enclosure, whence E. mew. Isl. miove, angustum; Seren. It might thus be a prohibition to a parent to use one daughter as a lure for different suitors; and, as Kelly conjectures, be borrowed from the Lat. Eaedem filiae duos generos parare, as "spoken to them who think to oblige two different persons with one and the same benefit." P. 255.

MEWITH, 3. p. v. Moveth. See Sup.

The King to souper is set, served in halle,
Under a siller of silke, dayntly dight,
With al worshipp, and wele, mewith the walle;
Briddes branden, and brad, in bankers bright.

Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. ii. 1.

Moveth? as mevable, Chaucer, for moveable.

To MEWT, v. n. To mew, as a cat; to murmur. See S.

"Wae's them that has the cat's dish, and she ay mew-ting;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 74. "spoken when people owe a thing to, or detain a thing from needy people, who are always calling for it." Kelly, p. 343.

MY, interj. It denotes great surprise. S.

MYANCE, s. Means; apparently used in the sense of wages, fee.

In leichecraft he was homecyd,
He wald haif for a nycht to byd
A haiknay and the hurtman's hyd,
So meikle he was of myance.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 20.

Fr. moyen, mean, endeavour. Myance seems properly a s. pl. q. moyens. V. MOYEN.

To MIAUVE, v. n. To mew, as a cat. V. the letter W. S.

MICE-DIRT, s. The dung of mice. V. DIRT. S.

MICELLED, pret. v. Ate after the manner of mice. S.

MICHAELMAS MOON. 1. The Harvest Moon. 2. It used sometimes to denote the produce of a raid at this season, as constituting the portion of a daughter. S.

MYCHARE, s. A sordid covetous fellow. S.

MYCHE, adj. Great; much.

A sege shal he seche with a sessioun,
That myche baret, and bale, to Bretayn shal bring.

Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. i. 23.

— The Latine cietezanis,
Wythout thare wallis ischit out attanis,
That with grete laude and myche solempnité
And tryumphe riall has ressaut Enee.

Doug. Virgil, 470, 25.

Su.G. mycken, great, much; Isl. miok, mikit, much. Hence Hisp. mucho, as well as the E. word.

MICHEN, s. Common spignel, or Bawdmoney, S. Athamanta meum, Linn.

"The athamanta meum, (spignel,) here called moiken or muilcinn, grows in the higher parts of the barony of Laighwood, and in the forest of Clunie. The Highlanders chew the root of it like liquorice or tobacco.—The root of this plant, when dried and masticated, throws out strong effluvia, which are thought a powerful antidote against contagious air, and it is recommended by some in goutish and gravelly complaints." P. Clunie, Perth. Statist. Acc. ix. 238. The name is Gael.

MICHTFULL, adj. Mighty; powerful. S.

MICHTIE, adj. 1. Of high rank.

Than come he hame a verie potent man,
And spousit syne a michtie wife richt than.

Priests of Peblis, S.P.R. i. 10.

2. Stately; haughty, in conduct, S.

3. Strange; surprising; used also adv. like the E. word, as a sign of the superlative, as michtie rich, michtie gude, S.B. 4. Potent; intoxicating; applied to liquors; synon. with Stark. See Sup.

This is entirely Su.G., maagta, signifying very; maagta rik, maagta godt, corresponding to the S. phraseology mentioned above.

MICKLE-MOUTH'D, MUCKLE-MOW'D, adj. Having a large or wide mouth. V. MEKYL. S.

MID-CUPPIL, s. That ligament which couples or unites the two staves of a flail, the hand-staff and souple, S.B.

This is sometimes made of an eel's skin; at other times, of what is called a tar-leather, i. e. a strong slip of a hide salted and hung, in order to prepare it for this use. It is not easily conceivable, why this should be called a tar-leather, unless it be from Isl. tarf-r, taurus, as originally denoting a piece of bull's hide.

MIDDEN, MIDDYN, MIDDING, s. 1. A dunghill, S. A. Bor. Lincolns. id. Muck-midding, a dunghill consisting of the dung of animals, S. A. Bor.; ass-midding, one of ashes; marl-midding, a compost of marl and earth, S.

Thai kest him our out of that bailfull steid,
Off him thai trowit suld be no more ramede,
In a draff myddyn, quhar he remanyt thar.

Wallace, ii. 256. MS.

Syne Sweirnes, at the secound bidding,
Come lyk a sow out of a midding.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 29.

"Better marry o'er the midding, than o'er the moor;"
S. Prov. "Better marry a neighbour's child, whose humours and circumstances you know, than a stranger."
Kelly, p. 60.

2. Metaph. a dirty slovenly woman. Syn. Heap. S.

3. An eating midden; a phrase expressive of the highest contempt for one as a mere belly-god. S.

A.S. midding, id. Dan. moeding; Ihre, vo. Lena, p. 60. Ray derives this word from E. mud; but ridiculously, as he admits that midding is "an old Saxon word," whereas mud is certainly modern, perhaps from Belg. moddig, nasty, Isl. mod, any thing useless, refuse, or rather Su.G. modd, lutum, coenum, whence Isl. modig, Sw. maaddig, putridus, lutulentus.

A.S. midding is radically one with moeding, used in Scania precisely in the same sense. Ihre derives it from moeg, dung, muck, and ding, a heap, vo. Dyng. This is nearly the same with Bp. Gibson's etymon; A.S. myke, dung, and ding, a heap; Notes on Polemo Middinia.

MIDDEN-DUB, s. A hole into which the juice or sap of a dunghill is collected. S.

MIDDING-DUNG, s. Manure from a dunghill. S.

MIDDENHEAD, s. The summit of a dunghill. To be heard on the midden-head. To quarrel openly; a metaphor borrowed from dunghill-fowls. S.

MIDDEN-MOUNT, MIDDING-MOUNT, s. A singular kind of rampart, formed of the town-dung during the reign of Charles I. to defend the citizens against the batteries of the castle. S.

MIDDEN-STEAD, s. The place where a dunghill stands. S.

MIDDEN-TAP, s. The summit of a dunghill. S.

MIDDEN-HOLE, s. 1. A dunghill, S.

"What adds considerably to their miserable state, is the abominable, but too general practice, of placing the dunghill (middenhole, vulgarly) before the doors of their dwelling-houses, many of which, in every point of view, much accord with the situation in which they are placed." P. Kinclaven, Perth. Statist. Acc. xix. 333.

2. Sometimes, a hole or small pool, beside a dunghill, in which the filthy water stands, S.

MIDDEN-MYLIES, s. pl. Orrach, an herb, S. B. Chenopodium viride, et album, Linn; thus denominated, as growing on dunghills. The name in some parts of Sweden is mell, in others melre; which evidently resemble Mylies. The Chenopodium rubrum is called swin-molla; Linn. Flor. Suec. This in the first edition was erroneously printed MAIDEN-MYLIES. S.

To MYDDIL, MIDIL, v. n. To mix.

—Or list apprufe thay pepill all and summyn

To giddir myddill, or jone in lyig or band,

Doug. Virgil, 103, 36.

Himself alsua midlit persaut he

Amang princis of Grece in the mellé. Ibid. 28, 16.

V. Divers. Purley, 410.

Isl. midl-a, dividere, Su.G. medl-a, se interponere, Belg. middel-en, intercedere.

MYDDIL ERD, MEDLERT, MIDLERT, s. This earth, the present state.

Thare saw he als with huge grete and murning,
In middil erd oft menit, thir Troyanis
Duryng the sege that into batale slane is.

Doug. Virgil, 180, 48.

—Sithen make the moraden with a mylde mode,
As man of medlert makeles of might.

Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. ii. 24.

i. e. "I, without fretting, give thee homage, as matchless in power on this earth."

"A phrase yet in use in the N. of S. among old people, by which they understand this earth in which we live, in opposition to the grave. Thus they say, There's no man in middle erd is able to do it, i. e. no man alive," Rudd.

This gate she could not long in midlert be.

Ross's Helenore, p. 59.

It is used by R. Glouc.

Me nuste womman so vayr non in the myddel erthe.

Cron. p. 440.

i. e. I knew, or wist of no woman so fair on earth.

A.S. middan-eard, middan-geard, mundus, orbis terrarum; Moes.G. midjungard, id. Alem. mittilgard, approaches most nearly to our word, from mittil, middle, and gard, area. Middangard occurs in the same language. Gard or geard seems the true orthography of the last syllable.

Ihre, vo. Mid, conjectures, that the earth may have been thus denominated, either because it was supposed to be placed in the centre of the universe, or that there is an allusion to the fabled partition made among the three sons of Saturn; this world being considered as the middle lot between heaven and hell. The Goths, he thinks, wanted a word for denoting the world, before the introduction of verold, werold, &c. and that for this reason they framed the terms manasedh, or, the seat of man, fairghus, q. fair or beautiful house, and midjungard, or the middle area.

MYDDIS, s. The middle.

Worthy Willame of Dowglas

In-til his hart all angry was,

That Edynburchis castelle swa

Dyd to the land a-noy and wa,

Standand in myddis of the land. Wyntown, viii. 38, 7.

Su.G. mid, Moes.G. midja, medius. Hence Su.G. midja, medium, the middle of any thing.

MYDLEN, adj. Middle.

All mydlen land thai brynt wp in a fyr,

Brak parkis down, destroyit all the schyr.

Wallace, viii. 944, MS.

In edit. 1648, it is;

All Mydlame they burnt up in a fire;

as if it were the name of a town. But it seems to denote the middle bounds of Yorkshire; A.S. midlen, medius, whence E. middling.

MYDLEST, adj. Middlemost, in the middle.

Til Willame Rede he gave Ingland

Thare-in to be Kyng ryngnand,

For he hys sowne wes mydlest,

He gawe hym thare-for hys conquest.

Wyntown, vii. 2. 75.

A.S. midlaesta, midlesta, medius; also, mediocris.

MYDLIKE, adj. Moderate; middling; mean; ordinary.

He said, "Methink, Marthokys sone,

Rycht as Golmakmorn was wone
To haiff fra him all his mengne :
Rycht swa all his fra ws has he."
He set ensample thus mydlike,
The quhethir he mycht, mar manerlik,
Lyknyt hym to Gaudifer de Laryss,
Quhen that the mychty Duk Betyss
Assailyeit in Gadyrris the forrayours.

Barbour, iii. 71. MS.

The writer means, that Lorne, in comparing Bruce to Gaul the son of Morni, one of Fingal's heroes, used but an ordinary or vulgar comparison; where he might with propriety have likened him to one of the most celebrated heroes of romance.

A.S. medlice, modicus, small, mean; Somner.

MID-MAN, MIDSMAN, s. A mediator between contending parties.

"I—entreated them with many fair words to delay any such work, and for that end gave them in a large paper, which a very gracious and wise brother, somewhat a mid-man betwixt us, had drawn."—Baillie's Lett. ii. 380.

"Mr. Blair and Mr. Durham appeared as mids-men."

Ibid. p. 401.

MIDS, s. 1. A mean; Lat. med-ium.

"It is a silly plea, that you are all united in the end, since your debates about the midses make the end among your hands to be lost." Baillie's Lett. ii. 192.

2. A medium; the middle between extremes.

"Temperance is the golden mids between abstinence and intemperance." Pardovan's Collect. p. 244.

MYDWART, s. The middle ward or division of an army.

Wallace him self the wantgard he has tayne;—

AIss mony syne in the mydwart put he,

Schir Jhone the Grayme he gert thar ledar be.

Wallace, vi. 500. MS.

A.S. midde, and weard, custodia.

MIDWART, AMIDWART, prep. Towards the centre,

Rudd. E. mid-ward, A.S. midde-weard.

MIDGE, s. A gnat; also, a musquitto. S.

MIDLENTREN, MIDLENTRENE, MYDLENTRENE, s.

The middle of the fast of Lent. S.

MIDLYNGIS, s. pl. Apparently a particular kind of tape, not pins as conjectured in Sup. q. v. S.

To MIDS, v. a. To strike a medium. S.

MIDWINTER-DAY, s. The day of the winter solstice;

the shortest day of the year. S.

MIELDS, s. pl. The north-country pronunciation of Moolds; the dust of the grave. V. MULDES. S.

MIENE, s. Interest; means used; the same as Moyen. S.

MIFF, s. A pettish humour. S.

MYID, MEID, s. A mark. V. MEITT. S.

MYIS, s. (pl. of Mus,) Mice. S.

To MYITH, v. a. To indicate. V. MYTH.

MYKIL, adj. Great. V. MEKYL.

MILD, s. A species of fish, Orkney.

"Many other fish are caught about this coast, but in general in inconsiderable quantities, called in this country, milds, bergills, skate and frog." P. Birsay, Orkn. Statist. Acc. xiv. 314.

It is probably the same fish, which G. Andr. describes as not less rare than beautiful. Mialld-r, piscis pulcherrimi nomen, sed captu rarus; Lex. p. 178.

MYLD, s. Left unexplained. S.

MILDROP, s. The mucus flowing from the nose in a liquid state.

His eyin droupit, quhole sonkin in his hede,

Out at his nose the mildrop fast gan rin.

Henryson's Test. Creseide, Chron. S.P. i. 162.

A.S. mele, alveus, a hollow vessel, and dropa; or drop-maelum, guttatim, inverted?

MILDS, MILES, s. The Chenopodium album, et viride, an herb. V. MIDDEN-MYLIES. S.

MILE, s. Wild celery, Apium graveolens, Linn. S.

MYLES, s. Wild spinach; the same as Midden-Mylies. S.

MILES, s. pl. A small animal found on the diseased intestines and livers of sheep. Syn. Flook. S.

MYLIES, s. pl. The small links on a fishing-rod through which the line runs. V. MAILYIE. S.

MILYGANT, MYLIGANT, s. A false person. S.

To MILITATE,* v. n. To have effect; to operate. S.

To MILK, v. a. To steal. V. MILL, v. S.

MILK, s. A day annually observed in a school, on which the scholars present a small gift to their master or mistress; in return for which he or she gives them the play, as it is called, or freedom from their ordinary tasks, and provides for them a treat of curds and cream, sweetmeats, &c. Sometimes they have music and a dance. Loth.

This mirthful day has evidently at first received its designation from milk, as being the only or principal part of the entertainment.

To MILK the tether, a power ascribed to witches, of carrying off the milk of any one's cows, by pretending to perform the operation of milking upon a hair-tether, S.

It is singular, that the very same idea is to be found among the vulgar in Sweden at this day. I am informed by a gentleman who resides in that country, that the wife of one of his tenants complained to him of a neighbouring female, that she witched away the milk of her cows by means of a haar-rep, i. e. a hair-rope.

The same effect is ascribed to what is called trailing the tether. On Rood-day, the Fairies are supposed to trail or drag the tether over the clover, in order to take away the milk. Hence, if one has an uncommon quantity of milk from one's cows, it is usually said, "You have been drawing the tether."

MILK-AND-MEAL, s. Milk-porridge. S.

MILK-BROTH, s. Broth made with milk instead of water. S.

MILK-GOWAN, s. A yellow flower whose stem gives out a humour like butter milk. Dandelion. S.

MILK-HOUSE, s. A dairy, in which milk is kept. S.

MILKY,* adj. Applied to grain when the ear is filled before it becomes ripe. S.

MILKER, s. A vulgar designation for a cow that gives milk, S. See Sup.

MILK-MADLOCKS, s. V. MADLOCKS. S.

MILKMAID'S PATH, s. The Milky way, or galaxy. S.

MILK-MEAT, s. Milk and meal boiled together. S.

MILKNESS, s. 1. The state of giving milk, S.

Afore lang days, I hope to see him here,

About his milkness and his cows to speer.

Ross's Helenore, p. 78.

2. Milk itself, improperly, S. See Sup.

My ky may now rin rowtin' to the hill,

And on the naked yird their milkness spill;

She seenil lays her hand upon a turn,

Neglects the kebbuck, and forgets the kirn.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 3.

3. A dairy, S. A. Bor.

4. The produce of the dairy in whatever form. S.

MILK-SYTH, s. A milk-strainer; a vessel used for straining milk, S. corr. milsie, milsey.

—Ane ark, ane almry, and laidills two,

Ane milk-syth, with ane swyne taill.

Bannatyne Poems, p. 159. st. 4.

M I L

This word has given rise to a proverb addressed to those who make much ado about nothing, or complain of the weight of that work which deserves not to be mentioned. Ye are sair stressed wi' stringing the milsey. This refers to the cloth, through which the milk is strained, being taken off the wooden frame, wrung out, and tied on again.

Sibb. views it "q. milk-sieve." But the last syllable is from Sey to strain, q. v. It is also called the Sey-dish.

MILK-WOMAN, s. A wet nurse; a green milk-woman, one whose milk is fresh, who has been recently delivered of a child, S.B.

MILKORTS, MILKWORTS, s. The name given to the root of the Campanula Rotundifolia. S.

To MILL, v. a. To steal. S.

To MILL one, v. a. To give one a beating; to drub. S.

To MILL one out of a thing, to procure it rather in an artful and flattering way, Loth. It seems nearly synon. with E. wheedle.

Isl. mill-a, lenire, to mitigate.

MILL,* s. The vulgar name for a snuff-box, one especially of a cylindrical form, or resembling an inverted cone; also snuff-mill, sneechin-mill, S. See Sup.

No other name was formerly in use. The reason assigned for this designation is, that when tobacco was introduced into this country, those, who wished to have snuff, were wont to toast the leaves before the fire, and then bruise them with a bit of wood in the box; which was therefore called a mill, from the snuff being ground in it.

I may observe, by the way, that the word mill is radically from Isl. mel-ia, contundere, to beat; hence mael, farina, meal, and mal-a, to grind. V. G. Andr. Lex. p. 174.

MILLART, MILLERT, s. A provincialism for Miller. S.

MILL-BANNOCK, s. A circular cake of oatmeal, with a hole in the centre, baked at mills, and toasted on the burning seeds of shelled oats. S.

MILL-BITCH, s. The same with Black Bitch, q. v. S.

MILL-CLOOSE, s. The boxed wood-work which conducts the water into the mill-wheels. S.

MILL-EE, MILL-EYE, s. The eye or opening in the hupes or cases of a mill, at which the meal is let out. S.

MILLER OF CARSTAIRS. A proverbial allusion; one who draws every thing to himself. S.

MILLER. To Drown the Miller. 1. A phrase used when in baking there is too much water, and too little meal. 2. Applied in making punch or toddy when there is too much water and too little spirits. 3. Transferred to any thing, which, however good, defeats the desired end by its excess. 4. To become bankrupt. S.

MILL-REEK, s. A disease to which those who work in lead mines are subject, which brings on palsy, sometimes madness, and terminates in a few days in death. S.

MILN-RYND, MILL-RYND, s. A piece of iron sunk in the centre of the upper mill-stone to receive the iron spindle on which it turns. S.

MILL-RING, s. The open space between the mill-stones and the wooden frame surrounding them, in which a good deal of meal is deposited. 2. The meal collected there, which is deemed a perquisite for the millers. Su. G. ring, vilis. S.

MILL-STEW, s. The dust that flies about a mill. S.

MILL-STEEP, s. A lever attached to corn-mills by which the mill-stones can be put closer together, or farther apart at pleasure. S.

M I M

MILL-TROWSE, s. The sluice of a mill-lead; the troughs that conduct the water. Syn. Mill-cloose. S.

MILL-LADE, s. The mill-race. V. LADE.

MILL-LICHENS, s. In a mill, the entry into the place where the inner wheel goes, S.B.

Allied perhaps to Alem. luch-an, bilohhan, to shut; Su. G. lykt, an enclosure. Or, perhaps q. the lungs or lights of a mill. V. LYCHTNIS.

MILLER'S THUMB, s. The river Bullhead, S. Cottus Gobio, Linn.

"Gobius marinus; our fishers call it the Miller's Thumb." Sibb. Fife, p. 121.

This name seems also known in E.

MILLOIN, adj. Of or belonging to mail.

Mine habergeon of milloin wark

Lasted me no more than my sark;

Nor mine acton of milloin fine,

First was my father's and then mine.

Sir Egeir, p. 7.

Teut. maelien van't pansier, rings of mail; maelien-koller, a breastplate. In a MS. copy, transcribed, as would seem, from a different edition, it is millain. This would suggest, that the armour described had been made in the city of Milan.

MILNARE, s. A miller.

This Milnare had a dowchtyr fayre,

That to the Kyng had oft repayre.

Sw. moelnare.

Wyntown, vi. 16. 27.

MILORD, MY LORD. A designation frequently given to a haggis in the South of Scotland. S.

MILSIE, MILSEY, s. A strainer. V. MILK-SYTH. S.

MILSIE WALL, s. 1. A wall with crenated battlements. 2. Milsie wa', the wall of a dairy having a sort of window made of perforated tin. S.

To MILT, v. a. To knock one down with a blow on the side, S. V. MELT.

MIM, adj. 1. Affectedly modest; prudish, S.

"She looks as mim, as if butter would na melt in her mouth," S. Prov.

"Had aff," quoth she, "ye filthy slate,

"Ye stink o' leeks, O feigh!

"Let gae my hands, I say, be quait:"

And vow gin she was skeigh

And mim that day.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 262.

And now cam the nicht o' feet-washin',

And Bessie look'd mim and scare.

Jamieson's Popular Ball. i. 295.

2. Prim; demure. Quiet; mute. See Sup.

Now Nory all the while was playing prim,

As ony lamb as modest, and as mim;

And never a look with Lindy did lat fa'.

Ross's Helenore, p. 106.

3. Affecting great moderation in eating or drinking; or squeamishness in admitting what cannot be denied, S.

"A bit but, and a bit ben,

"Makes a mim maiden at the board end."

Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 9.

i. e. The maiden who eats in the kitchen, and in the larder, must of necessity have little appetite at the dining-table.

It might be supposed, that mim resembled Alem. mamm-en, to please, whence mammende, those who are meek, pleasant, or complacent; Schilter: and indeed, our term often includes the idea of an awkward and unnatural attempt to please. But as it is synon. with Moy, and occasionally interchanged with it, they have probably a common origin. V. Moy.

M Y N

MIMLIE, adv. Prudishly. S.
MIMNESS, s. Prudishness. S.
MIM-MOUED, adj. Reserved in discourse; having the affectation of modesty. 2. Affectedly moderate at table. 3. Affected in the mode of speaking. S.
MIM-MOU'DNESS, s. Affected modesty in conversation. S.
MIMENTIS, s. pl. Memorandums. S.
MIN, MYN, adj. Less; smaller.

They sould be exylt Scotland mair and myn.
i. e. more and less. Kennedy, Evergreen, ii. 69.

Idolateris draw neir, to burgh and land;
 Reid heir your life at large, baith mair and min.
H. Charteris Adhort. Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592. A. 6. b.
V. MAWMENT.

It occurs in O.E.
 His confession of treason, more and mynne,
 Of nyne poinctes fayned, he then proclaymed.
Hardynge, p. 192.

Su.G. minne, Alem. min, id. Michilu min, much less.
Belg. min, minder, Fr. moins, O.Fr. mion, Lat. min-or, Ir. min, small, delicate.

To MIND, v. n. 1. To remember, S. See Sup.
 "The instances of invading of pulpits are yet fewer, that is, none at all, as far as I mind, in the preceding years."
Wodrow's Hist. i. 455.

A.S. ge-myn-an, ge-mynd-gan, Isl. aminn-a, Su.G. minn-as, Dan. mind-er, Moes.G. ga-mun-an, meminisse, in memoriam revocare.

2. To design; to intend, S.
 "Qubilk day they keipit, and brocht in thair cumpanie Johne Knox, quho the first day, after his cuming to Fyfe, did preiche in Carrile, the nixt day in Anstruther, mynd-ing the Sondag, qubilk was the thrid, to preiche in Sanct Androis." Knox's Hist. p. 140.

To MIND, v. a. To recollect; to remember, S.
 "My sister, (said a devout and worthy lady) can repeat a discourse from beginning to end; but for me, I never mind sermons." Sir J. Sinclair's Observ. p. 90.

OF GUDE MIND. Of blessed memory, &c. &c. S.

MIND, MYND, s. Recollection; remembrance. I had na the least mind of it; I had totally forgot it, S. See S.
To keep mind, to retain in remembrance, S.

—Ay keep mind to moop and mell,
 Wi' sheep o' credit like thysel. Burns, iii. 79.

One sense given of E. mind is, "memory, remembrancy."
 But in all the proofs Johns. gives, a prep. is prefixed, in mind, to mind, out of mind. I question much if in E. it is used as with us.

A.S. ge-mynd, Dan. minde. Isl. minne, Alem. minna, Su.G. minne, memoria. Hence the cup drunk by the ancient Goths, in memory of their ancestors, was called minne. V. SKOLL. Sibb mentions Minnynge daies, minding or commemoration days; a phrase which I have not met with elsewhere.

MYNDLES, adj. 1. Forgetful.
 God callis thaym vnto this flude Lethe,
 With felloun farde, in nowmer as ye se,
 To that effect, that thay myndles becum
 Baith of plesoure and panis al and sum.
Immemores, Virg. Doug. Virgil, 192, 2.

2. Oblivious, causing forgetfulness.
 Wet in the myndles flude of hell Lethe,
 And sowpit in Styx the forcy hellis se,
 His glottonyt and fordouerit ene tuo
 He closit has, and sound gart slepe also.
Doug. Virgil, 156, 7.

3. Acting foolishly or irrationally, like a person in a delirium.

M I N

I ressaut him schip-brokin fra the sey ground,
 Wilsum and misterfull of al warldis thyng,
 Syne myndeles maid him my fallow in this ring.
Doug. Virgil, 112, 50.

—Half myndles againe scho langis sare
 For tyll enquire, and here the sege of Troye,
 And in ane stare him behaldis for joye. Ibid. 102, 22.
Demens is used in both places, Virg.

To MYNDE, v. a. 1. To undermine. See Sup.
 We holk and mynde the corneris for the nanis,
 Quhil down belife we tumlit all atanis.
Myne, id. 183, 35. Doug. Virgil, 54, 33.

2. To dig in a mine. S.

MYNDE, MINDE, s. A mine of metals or minerals. S.

MINENT, s. corr. from E. minute. S.

To MYNG, MYNGE, v. a. To mix; to mingle.
 Thre kynd of wolffis in the warld now ryngis:
 The first ar fals pervertaris of the lawis,
 Quhilk, undir poleit termes, falset myngis,
 Leitand, that all wer gospell that thay schawis.
Henrysone, Bannatyne Poems, p. 119.

Myngit, mingled, Bellend. Descr. Alb. c. 5.
A.S. meng-an, Su.G. meng-a, Germ. mengen, id. chimen-gide, permixtim, Isidor. ap. Schilt. Chauc. menged, mingled.

MING, MYNG, v. n. To mix; to mingle. S.

MING, s. A mixture. S.

MINIKIN, s. A term to denote any thing very small. S.
MINIKIN, adj. Of the smallest size; as, a minikin prein, the smallest pin; in contradistinction to a corkin prein, the largest common pin that is made. S.

MYNIVER, s. A species of fur from Russia. S.

MINK, s. 1. A noose. 2. A ring of straw or rushes, used in adjusting the bow on an ox. V. MUNKS. S.

MYNKES, s. A species of fur. S.

MYNMERKIN, s. V. MEMERKIN.

MINNE, v. a.
 Blithe weren thai alle,
 And merkes gun thai minne;
 Toke leve in the halle,
 Who might the childe winne. Sir Tristrem, p. 35.

"Apparently from Mint, to offer.—They began to offer marks or money." Gl. It seems rather to signify, contribute; as allied to Isl. mynd-a, procurare, from mund, dos, pecunia. Teut. muynigh-en, communicare, participare.

To MYNNES, v. a. To diminish. S.

MINNIE, MINNY, s. 1. Mother; now used as a childish or fondling term, S.

Sen that I born was of my minnie,
 I nevir wouit an uther but you.
Clerk, Evergreen, ii. 19.

This word, although now only in the mouths of the vulgar, is undoubtedly very ancient. It is nearly allied to Belg. minne, a nurse; a wet nurse; minne-moer, a nursing mother; minne-vader, a foster-father. This is to be traced to minne, love, as its origin; minn-en, to love. Teut. Minne is also the name of Venus. Correspondent to these, we have Alem. minna, love, Minne, Venus, Meer-minne, a Siren, min-oon, to love; Su.G. minn-a, id., also to kiss. Hence Fr. mignon, mignot, mignard, terms of endearment. This designation is thus not only recommended by its antiquity, but by its beautiful expression. Love and Mother are used as synon. terms. Can any word more fitly express the tender care of a mother, or that strength of affection which is due from a child, who has been nourished by the very substance of her body? It must be observed, however, that Isl. manna is used in the same sense as S. minnie. Manna dicunt pueri pro matercula. G. Andr. 175.

M I N

2. The dam among sheep. S.
To MINNIE LAMBS. To join each lamb of a flock to its own dam, after they have been separated. S.
MINNIE'S BAIRN. The mother's favourite. S.
MINNIE'S MOUTHES, s. A phrase used to denote those who must be wheedled into any measure by kindness. "The solistations, protestations, and promises of great reward, often used since the beginning of the Parliament, are here againe enlarged amply, and engyred finely for soupling such with sueties, as they take to be Minnie's mouthes." Course of Conformitie, p. 93.
Alem. minlich is rendered suavissime, Schilter; so that it seems doubtful, whether the phrase, minnie's mouthes, refers to the indulgence given by a fond mother, or literally respects sweetness, as equivalent to the E. phrase, "having a sweet tooth."
To MYNNIS, v. n. To diminish; to grow less. With the to wrestil, thou waxis euermore wicht; Eschew thyne hant, and mynnys sall thy mycht. Doug. Virgil, 98, 12.
Su.G. minsk-a, id. from min, less; Lat. min-us.
MINNOYT, part. pa. Annoyed. S.
MINSHOCH, (gutt.) s. A female goat two years old. S.
To MINT, MYNT, v. n. 1. To aim; to take aim; to intend, A. Bor. Gl. Grose. See Sup.
 Thare thai layid on thame dynt for dynt,
 Thai myst bot seldyn quhare thai wald mynt.
Wyntown, viii. 16. 200. Ibid. ix. 27. 408.
 So that the stane he at his fomen threw Fayntly throw out the vode and waist are flew;
 Ne went it all the space, as he did mynt,
 Nor, as he etlit, perfurnyst not the dynt.
Doug. Virgil, 446, 9.
 ——— For oft
 There as I mynt full sore, I smyte bot soft.
King's Quair, iii. 32.
 i. e. where, in taking aim, I threaten to give a severe stroke.
 "For the Lords rebukes ar ever effectuall, he mynteth not against his enemies, bot he layeth on." Bruce's Eleven Serm. 1591. Sign. S. 3. a.
 i. e. he never takes aim, without also striking.
 At the lyown oft he mynt,
 Bot ever he lepis fro his dynt,
 So that no strake on him lyght.
 Here it is the pret. Ywaine, Ritson's E.M.R. i. 104.
 Mr. MacPherson views the word, in this sense, as allied to Su.G. maatt-a, Isl. mid-a, id. collineare.
 2. To attempt; to endeavour, S. See Sup.
 This seems the meaning of the following passage.
 Than Schir Golograce, for greif his gray ene brynt,
 Wod wraith; and the wynd his handis can wryng.
 Yit makes he mery magry, quhasa mynt,
 Said, I sall bargane abyde and ane end bryng.
Gawan and Gol. iii. 10.
 "Offer," Gl. But the line most probably should be read thus:
 Yit makis he mery, magry quhasa mynt.
 i. e. whosoever should attempt the contrary; or, whosoever should oppose him.
 — I sall anis mynt
 Stand of far, and keik thaim to;
 As I at hame was wont. Peblys to the Play, st. 4.
 "It is here alone, I think, we might learn from Canterbury, yea, from the Pope, yea, from the Turks or Pagans, modesty and manners; at least their deep reverence in the house they call God's ceases not till it have led them to the adoration of the timber and stones of the place. We are here so far the other way, that our rascals, without

M I R

- shame, in great numbers, makes such din and clamour in the house of the true God, that if they minted to use the like behaviour in my chamber, I would not be content till they were down the stairs." Baillie's Lett. 1. 96.
 He speaks of the Assembly at Glasgow 1638.
To MINT at a thing. To aim at a thing, or to make an attempt, S. A. Bor. Lincolns.
 The lasses wha did at her graces mint,
 Ha'e by her death their bonniest pattern tint.
Ramsay's Poems, ii. 19.
To mint to, was formerly used in the same sense.
 "If you mint to any such thing, expect a short deposition; and if the burrows be overthrown, that they cannot remove you, be assured to be removed out of their hearts for ever." Baillie's Lett. i. 51.
A.S. ge-mynt-an, disponere, statuere. This v. may be viewed as a frequentative from Alem. mein-en, intendere, to mean. For meint-a, gimeint-a, occur in the same sense. V. Schilter, p. 578.
To MINT with any thing. To aim with it. S.
MINT, MYNT, s. 1. An aim.
 Now bendis he vp his burdoun with ane mynt,
 On syde he bradis for to eschew the dynt.
Doug. Virgil, 142, 2.
 Yit, quod Experience, at thee
 Mak mony mints I may. Cherrie and Slae, st. 83.
 "He makes ill mints, spoken of one that hath given shrewd suspicions of ill designs." Rudd.
 A ful fel mynt to him he made,
 He bigan at the shulder-blade,
 And with his paw al rafe he downe, &c.
Ywaine, E.M.R. i. 110.
 2. An attempt, S.
 "But now alas! you are forced to behold bold mints to draw her [the church] off the old foundation to the sandy heapes of humane wisdom." Epistill of a Christian Brother, 1624, p. 8.
 Dear friend of mine! ye but o'er meikle reese
 The lawly mints of my poor moorland muse.
Ramsay's Poems, ii. 393.
 3. Apparently used in the sense of E. threat. S.
Alem. meint-a, intentio, Schilter.
To MINT, v. n. To hint; to communicate by innuendo. S.
MINUTE, s. The first draught of a writing. S.
To MINUTE, v. a. To take short notes; to make a first draught of any writing. S.
To MYPE, v. n. 1. To speak much. 2. To be very diligent; as, "a mypin' bodie," one constantly engaged. S.
To MIRD, v. n. To meddle; to attempt, S.B. See S.
 'Tis nae to mird with unco fouk ye see,
 Nor is the blear drawn easy o'er her ee.
Ross's Helenore, p. 91.
 Thus dainty o' honours and siller I've tint;
 Wi' lasses I ne'er mean to mird or to mell.
Jamieson's Popular Ball. ii. 335.
 Shall we suppose that it was originally applied to acts of hostility; as allied to Isl. myrd-a, occulte interimere?
To MIRD, v. n. To make amorous advances. S.
To MIRE, v. a. To entangle in a dispute; to Bog. S.
MIRE-BUMPER, s. The bittern, S. Ardea stellaris, Linn.
 It seems denominated from the noise which it makes; E. bump, to make a loud noise. This Johns. derives from Lat. bomb-us, which indeed denotes a buzzing noise, also that made by a trumpet. But the term is perhaps more immediately connected with Isl. bomp-a, pavire, to beat or strike against; bomps, a stroke, ictus, allisio, G. Andr.
 This animal seems to receive its name for the same reason, in a variety of languages. In the south of E. it is called butterbump, q. the bumping butour or bittern; in the

M I R

North, miredrum, Gl. Grose; q. the drum of the mire: Sw. roerdrum, rohrtrummel, either from roer, a reed, and trumma, drum, trumla, to beat the drum; Teut. roer-domp, roer-trompe, id. Kilian. Or roer may, as Ihre conjectures, be from A.S. raer-en, to bray as an ass. In Germ. it is called mosskuhe, q. cow of the moss, from the resemblance of its noise to that of bellowing. V. Moss-BUMMER.

MIRE-SNIPE, s. The snipe, Scolopax gallinago. S.

MIRE-SNIPE, s. An accident: I met wi' a miresnipe. S.

TO CATCH A MIRE-SNIPE. To mire one's self. S.

MYRIT, pret. Stupified; confounded.

Rutulianis vox affrayit with myndis myrit.
Doug. Virgil, 278, 35.

I scarcely think that this is the same with merrit, marred, as Rudd. conjectures; or from A.S. myrran, profundere, perdere. It seems merely a metaph. use of the E. v. to mire, which is often applied S.B. to a person in a state of perplexity from whatever cause.

MIRK, MYRK, MERK, adj. 1. Dark. 2. It is used in the sense of duskish, and as distinguished from dark. S.

And the myrk nycht suddanly
Hym partyd fra hys cumpany.
Wyntown, vi. 13. 103.

Amang the schaddois and the skuggis merk
The hell houndis herd thy youle and berk.
Doug. Virgil, 172, 8.

Isl. myrkr, myrk, Su.G. moerk, S.A. mirk, S.B. mark, A. Bor. murk, id.

MIRK, MIRKE, s. Darkness. In the mark, or mirk, S. in darkness.

For sen ye maid the Paip a King,
In Rome I cowl'd get na lugeing
Bot hyde me in the mirke. Lyndsay's S.P.R. ii. 136.

It is undoubtedly in the same sense that R. Brunne uses in mirke, p. 176, although Hearne expl. it, "by mark."

A werreour that were wys, desceyt suld euer drede,
Wele more on the nyght, than upon the day,
In mirke withouten sight wille emys mak affray.
Leg. emys, i. e. enemies.

A.S. myrce, Su.G. moerker, Dan. morcker, Isl. myrkr, id.

TO MIRKEN, MYRKYN, v. n. To grow dark. See Sup.

Bot now this dolorous wound sa has me dycht,
That al thing dymmis and myrknys me about.
Doug. Virgil, 395. 11.

Sw. moerkna, id. tenebrescere, Seren.

MIRKLINS, adv. In the dark, S.B. V. LING, term.

MIRKNESS, s. 1. Darkness. 2. Mental darkness. See S.

—Thai slew thaim euirilkan,
Owtane Makdowell him allan,
That eschapyt, throw gret slycht,
And throw the myrknes off the nycht.
Barbour, v. 106. MS.

MIRK MONANDAY. A day of uncommon darkness, from a total eclipse of the sun, which happened on Monday the 24th March, A. 1652. S.

TO MIRK, v. a. To darken. S.

MYRKEST, adj. Most rotten; or perhaps most wet.

The forseast ay rudly rabutyt he,
Kepyth hys horss, and rycht wysly can fle,
Qubill that he cum the myrkest mur amang.
His horss gaiff our, and wald no forthyr gang.
Mirkest, Edit. 1648, 1758. Wallace, v. 293. MS.

This is most probably from the same source with Isl. morkinn, Su.G. murken, rotten, putrid; murket traa, rotten wood. That part of a moor is said to be most rotten, which sinks most, or is most unfit to be trod on. G. Andr. connects the Isl. term with moor, solum grumis sterilibus obsitum; also, clay. In Finland maerkae signifies humid.

MIRKY, MIRKIE, adj. "Smiling; hearty; merry;

M Y S

pleased; mirky as a maukin, merry as a hare, S.B. See Sup.

For tho' ye wad your gritest art employ,
That mirky face o' yours betrays your joy.
Shireffs' Poems, p. 31.

"The third wis—as mirkie as maukin at the start, an' as wanton as a speanin lamb." Journal from London, p. 7.

Sibb. views it as radically the same with smirky, which is from A.S. smerc-an, subridere. But as the s seems to enter into the original form of this word, perhaps the former is from A.S. myrig, merry, pron. hard, or from myrg, pleasure.

MIRKLES, s. pl. The radicle leaves of Fucus esculentus, eaten in Orkney.

MIRL, s. A crumb, S.B. nirl, S. A. Bor. V. MURLE, to crumble.

MIRLES, s. pl. The measles, Aberd. elsewhere nirles. Fr. morbilles.

MIRLIE, MIRLEY, adj. Speckled. S.

MIRLY-BREASTED, s. Having the breast speckled. S.

MIRLIT, MIRLET, MERLED, part. pa. Variegated with interwoven spots; waved with various colours. S.

MIRLIEGO, s. A small upright spinning-wheel. S.

MIRLYGOES, MERLIGUES, s. pl. It is said that one's eyes are in the mirlygoes, when one sees objects indistinctly, so as to take one thing for another, S.

Sure Major Weir, or some sic warlock wight,
Has flung beguillin' glamour o'er your sight;
Or else some kittle cantrip thrown, I ween,
Has bound in mirlygoes my ain twa een.
Fergusson's Poems ii. 86.

Look round about, ye'll see ye're farther north
By forty miles and twa this side the Forth:
The mirlygoes are yet before your e'en,
And paint to you the sight you've seen the streen.
Morison's Poems, p. 134.

Fergusson seems to allude to some popular idea that the merlygoes are the effect of incantation.

A.S. maerlic, bright, q. dazzled with brightness. Perhaps rather q. merrily go, because when the faculty of sight is disordered, objects seem to dance before the eyes.

MIRREITIS, s. pl. Merits. S.

MIRROT, s. A carrot, S.B. Daucus carota, Linn. See S.

This is the only term used for this root among the vulgar in Sutherland, who do not speak Gaelic; also in Ross-shire. It is pure Gothic. Su.G. morrot, id. Linn. writes it morot, Flor. Suec. 237. Ihre views it as denominated, either from its red colour, morroed denoting a brownish colour; or from mor, marshy ground, because, he says, it delights in marshy places. Lye mentions A.S. mora, as denoting a root; Add. Jun. Etym. Aelfric renders wald-mora, carota, [by L. carota, Somn.] This seems to signify, the wood-root, from weald, sylvia, a wood, a forest; as feld-mora, a parsnip, q. the field-root. I am, therefore, inclined to differ from the learned Ihre, as to the etymon of Morrod, as he prefers that from mor, a marsh. It seems rather to mean, the red root; especially as Germ. mor, signifies, fuscus.

MYRTRE, adj. Of or belonging to Myrtle.

The cyrculate wayis in hell Eneas saw,
And fand quene Dido in the myrtre schaw.
Doug. Virgil, 178, 34.

MYS, MYSS, MISS, s. 1. A fault; an error, S.B.

Now haiff I lost the best man leiffand is;
O feble mynd, to do so foull a myss!
—To mend this myss I wald byrne on a hill.
Wallace, iv. 746. 762. MS.

Quhat haif we heir bot grace us to defend?

M I S

The quhilk God grant us till amend our miss.
Henryson, Bannatyne Poems, p. 108.
 Thow be my muse, my gidare, and laid sterne,
 Remitting my trespas, and euery mys.
Doug. Virgil, 11. 25.
 Chaucer uses mis for what is wrong, and Gower.
 Pryde is of euery mysse the prycke.
Conf. Am. F. 26, b. i. e. the spur to every thing that is evil; as he had previously said:
 Pryde is the heed of all synne.
 2. Evil, in a physical sense; calamity; suffering.
 If anyes matens, or mas, might mende thi mys,
 Or eny meble on molde; my merthe were the mare.
Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. i. 16.
 Goth. missa, defectus, error, corruptela, Isl. missa, amissio. Thus mis is used in most of the Goth. dialects, as an inseparable particle, denoting defect or corruption.
MISBEHADDEN, part. pa. 1. A misbehadden word, a term or expression that is unbecoming or indiscreet, such as one is apt to utter in anger, S. 2. Ill-natured;
 as, "a misbehadden geit," an ill-trained child. S.
 A.S. mis and behealden, wary, from beheald-en, attendere,
 also cavere, q. a word spoken incautiously.
To MISCALL, MISCA', v. a. To call names to, S.
 "Christ and Antichrist are both now in the camp, and are come to open blows: Christ's poor ship saileth in the sea of blood, the passengers are so sea-sick of a high fever, that they miscall one another." Rutherford's Lett. P. ii.
 ep. 52.
 "They began to misca' ane anither like kailwives."
Journal from London, p. 8.
MYSCHANCY, adj. 1. Unlucky; unfortunate, S.
 —Sa stranglie his freynd and fallow dere,
 That sa myschancy was, belouit he,
 That rather for his lyfe himselfe left dee.
Doug. Virgil, 291, 49.
 2. Causing unhappiness.
 Bot netheles intill oure blynd fury,
 Foryettand this richt ernistle thay wirk,
 And for to drug and draw wald neuer irk,
 Qubill that myschancy monstoure quentlie bet
 Amyd the hallowit tempill vp was set.
Doug. Virgil, 47, 3.
MISCHANT, MESCHANT, adj. 1. Wicked; evil; naughty.
 "Conarus heirand thir wourdis said, How dar ye mis- chant fulis pretend sic thyngis aganis me and myseruandis."
Bellend. Cron. B. v. c. 6. Viri omnium impudentissimi.
 Boeth.
 "Mischant instrumentis, as these twenty years bygone, so to this day, misleads so the court, that nothing can be got done for that poor prince." Baillie's Lett. i. 336.
 2. It seems to be used in the sense of false.
 I purpois not to mak obedience
 To sic mischant Musis na Mahumetrie,
 Afoir time usit into poetrie.
Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592. p. 4.
 Fr. meschant, id. Perhaps the Fr. may be a corr. from
 Lat. mentior, -iri, to lie.
MISCHANTNESSE, s. Wickedness. S.
MISCHANT, MISHANT, s. A wretch; a worthless person.
 Mischievous mishant, we shall mell
 With laidly language, loud and large.
Polwart, Watson's Coll. iii. 6.
 "As to the care they professed of the King's preservation, any man might conjecture how he should be preserved by them, who exiled his grandfather, murdered his father,— and now at last had unworthily cut off his uncle and Regent, by suborning a mischant to kill him treacherously."
Spotswood, p. 238.

M I S

MISCHANTLIE, MESCHANTLIE, adv. Wickedly.
 Wee, meschantlie, haue re-admitted Messe,
 Which, happilie, was from our sholders shaken.
Bp. Forbes, Eubulus, p. 163.
 "Mr. Blair, Mr. Dickson, and Mr. Hutcheson, were, without all cause, mischantly abused by his [Sydserv's] pen, without the resentment of the state, till his Majesty himself commanded to silence him." Baillie's Lett. ii, 454.
MISCHANT YOUTHER. A very bad smell. This term is used both in the N. and W. of S. also in Loth.
 Fr. meschant odeur, id.
MISCHANPRATT, s. A mischievous trick, Loth. properly mischant pratt. V. PRATT. S.B. say an ill pratt, id. and ill-praitty, mischievous.
MISCHIEF,* s. 1. A vexatious or ill-deedie person; as,
 Ye're a perfect mischief. 2. Equivalent to the devil;
 as, "He's gain to the mischief as fast as he can." S.
To MISCHIEVE, v. a. To hurt. S.
MISCOMFIST, part. adj. Nearly suffocated with a bad smell. Syn. Scomfist. S.
MISCONTENT, adj. Dissatisfied. S.
MISCONTENTMENT, s. Ground of dissatisfaction. S.
To MISCOOK, v. a. 1. To dress food improperly. 2.
 Metaph. to mismanage any business; as, Ye've mis- cookit a' your kail. S.
MISDIMABLE, adj. Not to be despised. S.
To MISDOUBT,* v. a. To doubt; to distrust. S.
MISDOUBT, MISDOOT, s. Doubt; apprehension. S.
MYSEL, adj. Leprous. V. MESALL.
MYSELL, s. Myself, S. corr.
 Set we it in fyr, it will wndo my sell,
 Or loss my men; thar is no mor to tell.
Wallace, iv. 421. MS.
MYSELWYN, s. Myself.
 I am sad off my selwyn sa,
 That I count not my liff a stra.
Barbour, iii. 320. MS.
 From me and sylfne, accus. masc. of sylfe ipse.
MISERICORDE, adj. Merciful. S.
MISERLY, MISERT, adj. Extremely parsimonious. S.
MISERTISH, adj. Very avaricious. S.
To MYSFALL, v. n. To miscarry.
 —Quha sa werrayis wrangwysly,
 Thai fend God all to gretumly,
 And thaim may happyn to mysfall,
 And swa may tid that her we sall.
Barbour, xii. 365, MS.
MISFALT, s. Misdeed; improper conduct. S.
To MISFAYR, MISFARE, v. n. 1. To miscarry.
 I haue in ryme thus fer furth tane the cure,
 Now war I laith my lang labour misfure.
Doug. Virgil, 272, 18.
 Fra this sair man now cummin is the King,
 Havand in mynd great murmour and moving;
 And in his hart greit havines and thocht;
 Sa wantonly in vane al thing he wrocht,
 And how the cuntrie throw him was misfarne,
 Throw yong counsel; and wrocht ay as a barne.
Priests of Peblis, S.P.R. i. p. 22.
 2. To fare ill; to be unfortunate. S.
Misfarin, S.B. signifies ill-grown. A.S. misfar-an, male evenire, perire, to go wrong. Somner. Hence,
MYSFAR, s. Mischance; mishap.
 Ingliss wardanis till Loudon past but mar,
 And tauld the King off all thair gret mysfar,

How Wallace had Scotland fra thaim reduce.

Wallace, xi. 940. MS.

MISFORTUNE,* s. A soft term to express a breach of chastity, especially as announced by a third party. S.

MISFORTUNATE, adj. Unfortunate. S.

MISGAR, s. A kind of trench in sandy ground occasioned by the wind driving away the sand. S.

To MISGIE, v. n. To misgive. S.

MISGYDINS, s. Mismanagement. S.

To MISGOOGLE, v. a. To spoil; applied to any work; as, "He's fairly misgogglit that job." S.

To MISGRUGGLE, MISGRUGLE, v. a. 1. To disorder; to rumple; to handle roughly, S.

"I took her by the bought o' the gardy, an' gar'd her sit down by me; bat she had me had aff my hands, far I misgrugled a' her apron." Journal from London, p. 8.

2. To disfigure; to deform; often applied to the change of the countenance in consequence of grief or hard treatment, S.B. See Sup.

It seems originally the same with Belg. kreukel-en, to crumple, to ruffle, from kreuk, a crumple; Isl. ruck-a, Lat. rug-a, id. Mis seems redundant, as Gruggle is synon.

To MISGUGLE, v. a. To disfigure; to deform. S.

To MISGUIDE,* v. a. 1. To abuse; to spoil. 2. To mispend; to waste; to squander. 3. To use ill; to maltreat. S.

MISGUIDING, s. The act or habit of wasting. S.

To MISGULLY, v. a. To cut clumsily; to mangle in cutting; to use the gully, or knife, amiss. S.

MISHAD, pret. v. Misdemeaned; acted improperly. S.

MISHANTER, MISCHANTER, s. 1. Misfortune; disaster, S. An unlucky chance; as, A sair mischanter. See Sup.

2. In profane language, a designation for the source of all evil; as, "Go to the mishanter, go to the devil." S.

For never since ever they ca'd me as they ca' me,

Did sic a mishap and mishanter befa' me.

Song, Ross's Helenore, p. 133.

Sibb. has rightly observed, that this is from Fr. misa-venture, q. mis-aunter. For indeed it occurs in the latter form in O. E.

The vnrygt ydo to poueremen to suche mys-auntre, turnde. R. Glouc. p. 375.

MISHAPPENS, s. Unfortunateness.

"My heart pitied the man; beside other evils, the mishappens of the affair, which could not be by any hand so compassed as to give content to all, made him fall in such danger of his Majesty's misinterpretation, that no other means was left him to purchase a good construction of his very fidelity." Baillie's Lett. i. 117.

MISHARRIT, part. pa.

And I agane, maistlike ane elriche grume,

Crap in the muskane aiken stok misharrit.

Palice of Honour, i. 19.

It seems to mean, disconcerted, disappointed, q. unhinged, from A.S. mis, and hearro, a hinge.

Sibb. says, "perhaps mis-scheirit, hollow and shattered." He seems to refer to this very passage, and to view the term as applied by Doug. to the tree, instead of the person who took refuge in it.

MISHMASH, MISMASHERIE, s. Whatever is in a huddled or confused state. V. MIXTIE-MAXTIE. S.

MYSIE, s. Abbrev. of Marjory; also of Marianne. S.

MISK, s. Land covered with coarse, rough, moorish grasses; ground partly earth, partly moss. S.

MISK-GRASS, s. The grass on ground of this kind. S.

To MISKEN, v. a. 1. Not to know; to be ignorant of, S. Yorks.

Qubay knawis not the lynnage of Enee?

Or quhay miskennys Troy, that nobyll cieté?

Doug. Virgil, 30, 47.

"Poor fowk's friends soon mishen them." Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 58.

2. To overlook; to neglect. See Sup.

The vane gloir that my tua brethir takis in sic vane gentilnes, is the cause that thai lichtlye me, trocht the quhilk arrogant mynde that thai haf consaut, thai mysken God and man, quhilk is the occasione that I and thou sall neuyr get releif of our afflictione. Compl. S. p. 201. "Mistake," Gl. But this is not the sense. For this is nearly allied to lichtlye.

"He suddenly resolveth to do all that is commanded, and to forego every evil way, (yet much mishenning Christ Jesus) and so beginneth to take some courage to himself again, establishing his own righteousness." Guthrie's Trial, p. 89.

3. To seem to be ignorant of; to take no notice of; applied to persons, S. See Sup.

"In all these things mishen me, and all information from this," i. e. "Do not let the source of your information appear." Baillie's Lett. ii. 139.

"Sir William Waller's forces melted quickly to a poor handful; the Londoners, and others, as is their mishent custom, after a piece of service, get home." Ibid. ii. 2.

4. To let alone; to forbear; not to meddle with; to give no molestation to.

"Carlavrock we did mishen. It could not be taken without cannon, which without time and great charges, could not have been transported from the castle of Edinburgh." Baillie's Lett. i. 159.

"Mr. Henderson, and sundry, would have all these things mishent, till we be at a point with England." Ibid. i. 368.

Isl. miskun-a is used in a sense nearly akin. It signifies to pity; misereor, G. Andr.

5. To refuse to acknowledge; to disown.

"The reasone quhairof Sanct Paule schawis in few wordis, saying: Qui ignorat, ignorabitur. He that mishens sall be mishennit. Meining this, gif we will nocht ken Goddis iustice and his mercy, offerit to vs in Christ, in tyme of this lyfe, God sall mishen vs in the day of extreme iugement." Abp. Hamiltoun's Catechisme, 1552, Fol. 82. a.

6. To mishen one's self; to assume airs which do not belong to one; to forget one's proper station, S.

To MYSKNAW, v. a. To be ignorant of.

Biddis thou me be sa nyce, I suld mysknaw

This calm salt water, or stabill fludis haw?

Doug. Virgil, 156, 50.

"Thairefter he geuis his awin iugement, quhilk is contrarius to al the rest: affirmyng the samyn but older scripture or doctor. And thairfore, is dere of the rehersing, becauss it was euir misknawin to the kirk of God, and all the ancient fatheris of the samyn." Kennedy (Crossraguell,) Compend. Tractiue, p. 92.

MISLEARD, adj. 1. Unmannerly; indiscreet. Shirr. Gl. S.

Her Nanesel maun be carefu' now,

Nor maun she be misleard,

Sin baxter lads hae seal'd a vow

To skelp an' clout the guard.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 51.

2. It also signifies mischievous, S. V. FUTIE, and KITTLE, adj. Literally, ill-tutored; from mis and lear'd, i. e. learned. V. LERE, v.

To MISLIKEN, MISLIKLY, v. a. To form a wrong estimate of; to slight; to depreciate. S.

M Y S

To MISLIPPEN, v. a. 1. To disappoint, S. Yorks.
 2. To illude; to deceive. 3. To neglect any thing put under one's charge. To mislippen one's business, not to pay proper attention to it. 4. To suspect. S.
To MISLUCK, v. n. To miscarry; not to prosper, S. Belg. misluck-en, id.
MISLUCK, s. Misfortune, S.
 "Wha can help misluck?" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 75.
MISLUSHIOUS, adj. Malicious; rough, Gl. Ramsay.
 Hutcheon with a three-lugged cap,
 His head bizzen wi' bees,
 Hit Geordy a mislushios rap,
 And brak the brig o' s neese
 Right sair that day.
Ramsay's Poems, i. 279.
 It seems to be expl. malicious, merely from the resemblance in sound. The proper idea is that of rough, severe, unguarded; rackless, synon.
To MISMACK, MISMAKE, v. a. 1. To shape or form improperly; applied to clothes. 2. To trouble; to disturb; as, "Dinna mismake yoursell for me." S.
To MISMAE, v. a. To disturb. V. MISMAKE. S.
To MISMAGGLE, v. a. 1. To spoil; to put in disorder; to put awry, S.B. 2. To mangle. See Sup.
 "She bad me had aff my hands, for I misgrugled a' her apron, an' mismaggl'd a' her cocker-nony." Journal from London, p. 8.
Mis seems redundant here. V. MAGIL.
MISMAIGHT, part. pa. "Put out of sorts; mismatched," S. Gl. Sibb. from mis and maik, q. v.
MISMAINNERS, s. pl. Ill breeding; indiscretion. S.
To MISMARROW, v. a. To put out of sorts; to mismatch; generally applied to things which are sorted in pairs, when one is put for another, S. V. MARROW, v.
To MISMAUCHER, v. a. To spoil, or render useless. S.
To MISMINNIE, v. a. Applied to lambs when they lose their dams, or are put to suck strange ewes. S.
To MISMUVE, v. a. To disconcert; to alarm. S.
MISNURTURED, adj. Ill-bred; unmannerly.
 "—Therefore that which idle onwaiting cannot do, misnurtured crying and knocking will do." Rutherford's Lett. P. i. ep. 27.
MISNOURTOURNESSE, s. Ill breeding; want of due respect.
 "This homelines will not be with misnourtournesse, and with an opinion of paritie: albeit thou wilt be homely with him as with thy brother; yet thou mayest not make thy selfe as companion to him, and count lightly of him." Rollock on the Passion, p. 343.
To MISPERSON, MYSPERSON, v. a. To give disgraceful names to one; to abuse in language. S.
MISPERSONING, s. The act of giving abusive names. S.
To MISPORTION one's self, v. a. To eat to excess; to surfeit one's self, S.B.
MIS-RID, part. pa. Entangled. Syn. Ravell'd. S.
MISS, s. A fault; a false stroke. V. MYS. S.
To MISSAYE, v. a. To abuse; to rail at. See Sup.
 "Item, of them quha missayes the Baillies, or the Lord's Baillie in court of his office doing, it behoves him right there to cry him mercy, and therefore to make him amends." Baron Courts, c. 72.
 Teut. mis-segg-en, maledicere, malè loqui alicui, insectari aliquem maledictis.
MISSAYING, s. Calumny, or depreciation. S.
MYSSEL, s. A vail. V. MUSSAL, v.

M I S

MISSELLIS, s. pl. Perhaps, fireworks, or bombs for throwing shells. S.
To MISSET, v. a. To displease. V. MISSETTAND. S.
MIS-SET, part. pa. Disordered; out of humour. S.
MISSETTAND, part. pr. Unbecoming.
 In recompence for his missettand saw,
 He sall your hest in euerie part proclame.
Palice of Honour, ii. 22.
 Teut. mis-sett-en, male disponere. Instead of this, on-settin, or unsettin, is the term now used, especially with respect to any piece of dress which, it is supposed, does not become the wearer. V. SET, v.
MISSILRY, s.
 — Maigram, madness, or missilry,
 Appostrum, or the palacy.—
Roult's Cursing, Gl. Compl. p. 330.
 This denotes some eruption, perhaps leprosy. For while Germ. masel signifies the measles, masel-sucht is used for the leprosy; Su.G. massel for the scall, Lev. xxi. 20, and massling for the smallpox. V. MESALL.
MISSIVE, s.* 1. A letter sent. 2. A letter containing an engagement, to be afterwards extended in form. S.
MISSLIE, adj. 1. "Solitary, from some person or thing being amissing or absent." Gl. Sibb. See Sup.
 2. Applied to one whose absence is regretted or remarked. S.
MISSLIENESS, s. Solitariness, from the absence of some favourite person or thing. S.
To MISSPEAK, v. a. To praise one for a virtue or good quality which his conduct immediately after belies. S.
To MISSWEAR, v. n. To swear falsely, S.
To MISTAİK, v. a. To neglect; from Mis and staih. S.
To MISTENT, v. a. Toneglect; from Mis and Tent. q. v. S.
MISTER, MYSTER, s. Craft; art.
 Ane engynour thair haif thai tane,
 That wes sleast of that myster,
 That men wüst ony fer or ner.
 It is also found in O.E. Barbour, xvii. 435. MS.
 — He asked for his archere,
 Walter Tirelle was haten, maister of that mister.
R. Brunne, p. 94.
 This is immediately from Fr. mestier, id. Menage derives this from Lat. minister-ium; Skinner, E. mystery, a trade, from Gr. μυστηριον. Warton, however, contends that L.B. magister-ium is the origin, to which Fr. maistrise exactly corresponds. Hist. E. Poet. v. iii. xxxvii. &c.
MISTER, MYSTER, s. 1. Want; necessity, S.B. See S.
 Tharfor his horss ail haile he gaiff
 To the ladyis, that mystir had.
Barbour, iii. 357. MS.
 "Mister makes man of craft." Ferguson's S. Prov. p. 24.
 "There's nae friend to friend in mister." Ibid. p. 31.
 2. It sometimes denotes want of food, S.B.
 And now her heart is like to melt away
 Wi' heat and mister.—
Ross's Helenore, p. 59.
 It is used as synon. with Faut.
 There's been a dowie day to me, my dear;
 Faint, faint, alas! wi' faut and mister gane,
 And in a peril just to die my lane.
 V. FAUT. Ibid. p. 66.
 3. Any thing that is necessary.
 —Grant eik leif to hew wod, and tak
 Tymmer to bete airis, and vther misteris.
Doug. Virgil, 30, 26.
 He ete and drank, with ful gude chere,
 For tharof had he grete myster.
Ywayne, Ritson's E.M.R. i. 33.
 Rudd. views this as the same with the preceding word.

M Y S

supposing that, as Fr. mestier signifies a trade or art, "because by these we may and ought to supply our necessities," the term "came to signify need, lack, necessity, want." Sibb. adopts this etymon.

Fr. mestier is indeed used as signifying need, or want. But it seems more natural to deduce mister from Su.G. mist-a, Dan. mist-er, to lose, to sustain the want, loss, or absence of any thing. Allied to these are Isl. misser, a loss, misting, he who is deprived of his property; Alem. mizz-an, to want, Belg. miss-en.

To BEIT A MISTER. To supply a want. V. BEIT. S.
To MISTER, v. a. To need; to be in want of; to have occasion for.

All trew Scottis gret fauour till him gaiff,
Quhat gude thai had he mysterit nocht to craiff.

Wallace, v. 558. MS.

O douchty King, thou askis counsale, said he,
Of that matere, quhilk, as semys me,
Is nouthir dirk nor doutsum, but full clere,
That mysteris not our auisis bene here.

Doug. Virgil, 374, 21.

The prep. of is sometimes added.

—"The saids Deputes exponed, that sum tyme it nicht chance, that the King nicht mister of his grit gunis and artillyrie in France." Knox's Hist. p. 233.

Mister'd, straitened, reduced to difficulties, S.B.

To MISTER, MYSTRE, v. n. 1. To be necessary.

The King has than to consaill tan,
That he wald nocht brek down the wall;
Bot castell, and the toun withall,
Stuff weill with men, and with wittail,
And alkyn othyr apparaill
That mycht awaile, or ellis mystre
To hald castell, or toun off wer.

Barbour, xvii. 215. MS.

"Gif it misters," if it be necessary.

"And gif it misters, that secular power be callit in supporte and helping of halie kirk." Acts, Ja. I. 1424. c. 31.

2. To be in necessitous circumstances. S.

MYSTIR, adj. Necessary.

Then in schort time men mycht thaim se
Schute all thair galayis to the se,
And ber to se bayth ayr and ster,
And othyr thingis that mystir wer.

Barbour, iv. 631. MS.

MISTIRFUL, adj. Needy; necessitous.

"For the misere of mistirful men, and for the vepying of pure men, the diuine justice sal exsecut strait punitione." Compl. S. p. 194.

Unkend and mysterfull in the deseirtis of Libie
I wander, expellit from Ewrop and Asia.

Doug. Virgil, 25, 2.

"Misterfou' fowk mauna be mensfou'"; Ferguson's S. Prov. p. 24. "They who are in need must and will importune." Kelly, p. 304.

MISTRY, s.

The Erle of Herfurd thiddyward
Held, and wes tane in, our the wall;
And fyfty of his men with all;
And set in howssis sindryly,
Swa that thai had thar na mistry. Barbour, xiii. 412.

In Ed. 1620, it is mastrie: in MS. mercy; which appears to be an error. The most natural sense of the passage is, that, being received within the walls, they were in no strait, or exposed to no danger from the enemy.

MIST-FAWN, s. A figure formed from mist. S.

To MYSTRAIST, v. n. To mistrust; to suspect.

Ner the castell he drew thaim priwaly
In till a schaw; Sotheroun mystraistit nocht.

V. TRAIST. Wallace, ix. 1620. MS.

M I T

To MISTRAM, v. a. Perhaps, to misplace or disorder the beams or rafters of a house. S.

MISTRESS, s. A sort of title given in Scotland to the wife of a principal tenant, or of a minister, especially in the country. She is called The Mistress. S.

To MISTRYST, v. a. 1. To break an engagement with, S. Gl. Sibb. 2. To disappoint; to bring into confusion by disappointing. 3. To alarm; to affright. S.

To MISTROW, v. a. 1. To suspect; to doubt; to mistrust.

Thai mystrow him off tratoury
For that he spokyn had with the King.
And for that ilk mistrowing
Thai tuk him and put [him] in presoun.

Barbour, x. 327. MS.

2. To disbelieve.

And in hys lettrys sayd he thane,
That the pepil of Ireland
Wnfaythful wes and mystrowand,
And lede thame all be fretis wyle,
Nowcht be the lauche of the Ewangyle.

Wyntown, vii. 7. 222.

Isl. misstru-a, Franc. missitruw-an, Belg. mistrouw-en, id. mistrowig, suspicious, mistrowen, a suspicion.

MISTROWING, s. Distrust; suspicion. V. the v.

MITCHELL, s. Meaning not clear. S.

To MYTH, v. a. To measure; to mete.

The myllare mythis the multure wyth ane mett skant,
For drouth had drunken vp his dam in the dry yere.

Doug. Virgil, 238, a. 48.

A.S. met-an, met-gian, metiri.

To MYTH, MYITH, v. a. 1. To mark; to observe.

Scho knew him weille, bot as of eloquence,
Scho durst nocht weill in presens till him kyth,
Full sor scho drede or Sotheron wald him myth.

Wallace, v. 664. MS.

2. To shew; to indicate.

Thoght he wes myghtles, his mercy can he thair myth,
And wald that he nane harme hynt, with hart and with hand Gawan and Gol. iii. 18.

i. e. Although his strength was so far gone in the fight, that it might have been supposed he would have been irritated, yet he shewed mercy.

For the bricht helme in twynkland sterny nycht
Mythis Eurill with bemes schynand brycht.

Doug. Virgil, 289, 36.

The feverous hew intill my face did myth
All my mal-eis; for swa the horribill dreid
Haill me our set, I nicht not say my creid.

Palice of Honour, i. 67.

"Myith, mix." Gl. Pink. But there is no evidence that it ever bears this sense. It is radically the same with Isl. mid-a, locum signo; or, as explained by Verelius, colimare, to look straight at the mark. That there is a near affinity between this and the preceding verb, the one signifying to measure, and the other to mark, appears from what has been said in the illustration of MEITH, q. v.

MYTH, s. A mark. V. MEITH.

MITH, MEITH, aux. v. Might, S.B. See Sup.

What I mith get, my Kate, is nae the thing;
Ye sud be queen, tho' Simon were a king.

V. MAUCHT. Shirrefs' Poems, p. 44.

Su.G. maatte, anc. matha, id.

MITHNA. Might not. S.

MYTH, s. Marrow. S.

MYTHIE, adj. Of or belonging to marrow. S.

MITHER, s. A mother. S.

MITHERLIE, adj. Motherly. S.

M I Z

MITHERLINESS, s. Motherliness. S.
 MITHER'S-PET, s. The youngest child of a family; the mother's greatest favourite. V. MAM'S-FOOT. S.
 MITHRATES, s. The heart and skirts of a bullock. S.
 MITHRET, s. The midriff. See above. S.
 MYTING, s. 1. A term used to express smallness of size. It seems to carry the idea of contempt in the following passage.

Mandrag, memerkyn, mismade myting.

Evergreen, i. 120.

Perhaps from Teut. myte, mydte, acarus, a mite; or myte, any thing very minute, also, money of the basest kind.

2. A fondling designation for a child, pron. q. mitten, Ang.

To MITLE, v. a. To eat away; applied to the action of mites: "His siller's a' mitled away." S.

MITTALE, MITTAINE, s. A bird of prey, of the hawk kind; gleddis and mittalis being classed together.

"Item, Anent ruikis, crawis, & vther foulis of rief, as ernis, bissartis, gleddis, mittalis, the quhilk distroyis baith cornis and wylde foulis," &c. Acts, Ja. II. 1457. c. 95, Edit. 1566, Murray, c. 85.

It is certainly the same fowl which Dunbar calls Myttaine. V. St. Martynis Fowle.

MITTENS, s. pl. 1. "[Mittaines, Fr.] Woollen gloves. Mittens, in England, at present, are understood to be gloves without fingers." Sir J. Sinclair, p. 163. See S. Lancash. id.; also, "a very strong pair to hedge in;" Gl. Tim Bobbin.

2. To lay up one's mittens; to beat out one's brains; a cant phrase, Aberd.

"For, thinks I, an' the horse tak a brattle now, they may come to lay up my mittens, an' ding me yavil an' as styth as gin I had been elf-shot." Journal from London, p. 4.

3. To Claw up one's Mittens, to kill; to overturn. Claw up their mittens, give them the finishing stroke. S.

PIN-MITTENS, s. pl. Mittens wrought upon a wooden pin.

MITTILAT, s. To make a Mittlelat o' one, to disable a person as to the use of any of his limbs. S.

To MITTLE, v. a. To hurt or wound, by a fall, bruise, or blow, S. See Sup.

I have sometimes thought that this might be a corruption of mutilate, a term much used in our old laws in the same sense; as,—"hurt, slaine, mutilate."—Acts, Ja. VI. 1594, c. 227.

But as this would only correspond to the part. mittlit, the verb may be from Fr. mutil-er, Lat. mutil-are, id. I am not satisfied, however, that it is not allied to Moes.G. mait-an, Isl. meid-a, mutilare, laedere, conscindere.

MITTS, s. pl. The same with Mittens. S.

To MIX, v. n. To change colour; applied to grain. S.

MIXT, part. pa. Disordered; applied to one who is in some degree ailing; partial intoxication. S.

MIXTIE-MAXTIE, MIXIE-MAXIE, adv. In a state of confusion; suggesting the same idea with the E. s. mishmash, a mingle, S. See Sup.

It is also used as if an adj.

Could he some commutation broach,—

He need na fear their foul reproach

Nor erudition,—

Yon mixtie-maxtie queer hotch-potch,

The coalition. Burns, iii. 25.

Both the S. and E. terms are allied, the latter especially, which Dr. Johnson calls "a low word," to Su.G. miskmask, id.; congeries rerum multarum; Ihre, vo. Fick-fack.

To MIZZLE, v. a. To speckle. S.

MIZZLED, adj. Having different colours. The legs are said to be mizzled, when partly discoloured by sitting too near the fire, S.

M O C

This at first view might seem merely a peculiar use of E. measles, q. like one in the measles. But mizzled is a different term. It may be allied to A.S. mistl, varius, diversus, or rather to Isl. mislitt, variegatus; mislitan kyrtil, tunicam variegatam, 2 Sam. 13. V. Let, color, Ihre. This word seems originally to have denoted loss of colour, Isl. miss, signifying privation.

Teut. maschelen, however, is synon. Maschelen aen de beenen, maculae subrubrae quae hyeme contrahuntur, dum crura ad ignem propius admoventur; from masche, maschel, macula, a spot or stain.

MIZZLIE, MIZLIE, adj. Having different colours; variegated; applied to the effect of fire on the limbs. S.

To MOACH, (gutt.) v. n. To be approaching to a state of putridity. V. under MOCH, MOCHIE. S.

To MOACH, MOCH, v. n. To begin to be in a state approaching to putridity, from dampness accompanied with heat. S.

MOAGRE, s. A confusion. S.

MOAKIE, s. A fondling name for a calf. S.

MOBIL, MOBLE, s. Moveable goods, or such as are not affixed to the soil, S. moveables.

Yone berne in the battale will ye nocht forbere

For all the mobil on the mold merkit to meid.

Gawan and Gol. iii. 13.

It is more generally used in pl.

Fra euery part thai flocking fast about,

Bayth with gude will, and thare moblis but dout.

Fr. meubles, id.

Doug. Virgil, 65, 25.

MOCH, MOCHIE, adj. 1. Moist; damp; applied to animal food, corn in the stack, meal, &c. See Sup.

Not [nocht] throw the soyl bot muskane treis sproutit,

Combust, barrant, vnblomit and vnleifit,

Auld rottin runtis quhairin na sap was leifit;

Moch, all waist, widderit with granis moutit,

A ganand den quhair murtherars men reifit.

Palice of Honour, i. 3. Edin. Edit. 1579.

2. Thick; close; hazy. This is the sense of mochy.

A mochy day, a hot misty day, S. See Sup.

The E. use the phrase, moky day. But both Skinner and Johnson seem to understand it as if it were the same with murky, gloomy, rendering it dark. It is certainly synon. with S. mochy. Muck, Lincolns. signifies moist, wet.

3. Applied to meat when it begins to be putrid. S.

Isl. mokk-ne, mokk-r, condensatio nubium, are evidently allied to our term, especially in the second sense. Dan. mug, denotes mould, muggen, mouldy; and in some parts of E. they say, a muggy day. But it most nearly resembles Isl. mugga, aer succidus et nubilo humidus; G. Andr. p. 181.

MOCH'T MEAT. Animal food in a state of incipient corruption, when it sends forth a disagreeable, although not an absolutely foetid smell. S.

MOCH, s. A heap. This Sibb. mentions as the same with Mowe, q. v. from A.S. mucg, acervus.

MOCH, (gutt.) s. A moth. V. MOGH. S.

MOCHIE, adj. Filled with moths. S.

To MOCHRE, MOKRE, v. n. 1. To heap up; to hoard.

And quhen your Lords ar pur, this to conclude;

Thay sel thair sonnes and airs for gold and gude,

Unto ane mokrand carle, for derest pryse,

That wist never yit of honour, nor gentryse.

This worschip and honour of linage,

Away it weirs thus for thair disparage.

Thair manheid, and thair mense, this gait thay murle;

For mariage thus unyte of ane churle.

Priests of Peblis, S.P.R. i. 13.

Chaucer uses muckre and mockeren precisely in the same sense.

— Muckre and ketches pens. Troilus, iii. 1381.

Hence Mukerar, q. v., a covetous person. The verb is certainly allied to A.S. mucg, a heap, as Rudd. observes; but perhaps more immediately to Ital. macchiare, mucchiare, to accumulate. This, as many Ital. words are of Goth. origin, may be traced to Isl. mock-a, id. coacervare.

2. It is used to denote the conduct of those who are busy about trifling matters or mean work, S.B. pron. mochre.

3. To work in the dark, S.B.

These are merely oblique senses of the verb, borrowed from the keenness manifested by a covetous person.

MOCHT, auxiliary v. Might.

The awfull King gart twa harraldis be brocht,
Gaiff thaim commaund, in all the haist thai mocht,
To chargis Wallace, that he suld cum him till,
Witht out promys, and put him in his will.

Wallace, vi. 347. MS.

Forsoyth, at Troyis distruction, as I mocht,

I take comfort herof.— Doug. Virgil, 20, 25.

A.S. mot, id. from mag-an, posse; Alem. maht, Gl.

Wynt. moht-a, from mag-en, mog-en.

MOCKAGE, s. Mockery. S.

MOCKRIFE, adj. Scornful. S.

MODE, MWDE, s. 1.

He ekyd thare manhad and thare mwde,

Thare-for thai drede na multytude.

Wyntown, viii. 27. 199.

"Mind, spirit," Gl. But it seems properly to denote courage; A.S. Sw. mod, id.

2. Anger; indignation; as E. mood is used.

Tho seyde Ysonde with mode,

— "Mi maiden ye han slain."

Sir Tristrem, p. 104.

Su.G. Isl. mod, ira, A.S. mod-ian, irasci.

MODY, MUDY, adj. 1. Spirited; haughty; or perhaps, rather, bold.

xiii castellis with strenth he wan,

And ourcame many a mody man.

Barbour, ix. 659. MS.

Sw. modig, bold, brave, daring; Teut. moedig, spirited, mettlesome; Alem. muat, alacris, animosus, Germ. muthig, id. Alem. muat, mens, assumes a great variety of composite forms; as fastmuat, firmi animi vir, gimuato, graciosus, heizmuati, iracundia, &c.

2. Pensive; sad; melancholy.

— Thou Proserpyne, quhilk by our gentil lawis

Art rowpit hie, and yellit loude by nycht,

In forkit wayis with mony mudy wicht!

Doug. Virgil, 121, 32.

MODERANCE, s. Moderation. S.

To MODERATE, v. n. 1. To preside in an ecclesiastical court, whether superior or inferior, S.

"It is thought expedient that no Minister, moderating his Session, shall usurp a negative voice over the members of his Session." Act Assembly, Dec. 17. 1638.

The prep. in may have been omitted after moderating. It is used in our time.

"The Moderator of the former Assembly opens it with a sermon; but in case of his absence, his predecessor in that chair hath the sermon; and in absence of them both, the eldest Minister of the town where they meet, preacheth, and openeth the Assembly by prayer, and moderates till a new Moderator be chosen." Steuart's Collections, B. i. Tit. 15. § 19.

2. To preside in a congregation, at the election of a Pastor, S.

"When the day is come on which the electors were appointed to meet,—the Minister whom the Presbytery ordered to moderate at the election, having ended sermon, and dismissed the congregation, except these concerned, is to open the meeting of electors with prayer, and thereafter they proceed to vote the person to be their Minister." Steuart's Collections, B. 1. Tit. 1. § 6.

MODERATOR, s. 1. He who presides in an ecclesiastical court, S.

— "Declareth, that the power of Presbyteries and of provincial and general Assemblies, hath been unjustly suppressed, but never lawfully abrogate. And therefore that it hath been most lawful unto them, notwithstanding any point unjustly objected by the Prelats to the contrary,—to choose their own Moderatours, and to execute all the parts of ecclesiastical jurisdiction according to their own limits appointed them by the Kirk." Act Assembly, Dec. 5. 1638. Sess. 13.

The Pastor is constant Moderator of a Session, from the superiority of his office to those of Ruling Elders and Deacons. In a Presbytery, a new Moderator is generally chosen annually; in a Provincial Synod or Assembly, at every meeting.

2. The minister who presides in a congregational meeting, at the election of a Pastor, S.

— "Thereafter they proceed to vote the person to be their Minister.—Which vote being taken and carefully marked, the Moderator is to pronounce the mind of the meeting, viz. that a call be given to the person named; which the clerk is to have ready drawn up to be read and signed by them in presence of the Moderator." Steuart's Collections, ubi sup.

MODERATION, s. The act of presiding, by appointment of Presbytery, in a congregation, in the election of a Pastor by the votes of the majority. When a minister is appointed to preside in this business, it is said that the Presbytery grant a moderation to the people, S.

MODGEL, s. A noggin: "I've gotten my modgel," I have got my usual quantity of drink. S.

To TAK ONE'S MODGEL. To partake of a social glass; sometimes, to take a morning dram. S.

MODIE-BROD, s. V. MOWDIE-BROD. S.

MODYR, MODER, s. Mother.

Hys modyr fled with hym fra Elrisle,

Till Gowry past, and duelt in Kilspyndé.

Wallace, i. 149. MS.

Quha bettir may Sibylla namyt be,

Than may the glorius moder and madin fre?

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 160, 54.

A.S. Isl. Su.G. Dan. moder, Belg. moeder, Alem. muater, muder, Pers. mader.

MODYR-NAKYD, adj. Stark naked; naked as at one's birth, S. mother-naked.

Thre hundyre men in cumpany

Gaddryt come on hym suddanly,

Tuk hym out, quhare that he lay,

Of hys chawmyre befor day,

Modyr-nakyd hys body bare. Wyntown, vii. 9. 261.

"Ye're as souple sark alane as some are mother naked;"

Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 85.

Teut. moeder-naecht, id.

MODYWART, MODEWART, s. A mole, (talpa,) S.

I gryppit graithly the gil,

And every modywart hil. Doug. Virgil, 239, b. 19.

"I graunt thou may blot out all knowledge out of thy minde, and make thy selfe to become als blinde as a modywart." Bruce's Sermon on the Sacr. O. 2, b.

Dan. muldwarp, Germ. maulwurf, Alem. muluurf, A.

Bor. mouldwarp. This is generally derived from A.S. molde, earth, and weorp-an, to throw or cast. Ray says, that to wort is to cast forth as a mole or hog doth. Hence it is probable that there may have been a Goth. v. of a similar form, entering into the composition of our name for the mole. A.S. wrot-an, Belg. vroet-en, wroet-en, Su.G. rot-a, are indeed used in a sense nearly allied, versare rostro, to root as a sow with its snout.

To MOE, v. n. To cry as a calf; To Mue, to low as a cow. S.

MÖEM, s. A scrap. S.

MOGEN, adj. Apparently, common; public. Syn. Mein. S.

MOGGANS, s. pl. 1. Long sleeves for a woman's arms, wrought like stockings, S.B.

Had I won the length but of ae pair of sleeves,—
This I wad have washen and bleech'd like the snaw,
And on my twa gardies like moggans wad draw;
And then fouk wad say, that auld Girzy was braw.

Song, Ross's Helenore, p. 134.

2. Hose without feet, Aberd. Hairy moggans, Fife; synon. with hoggars, Clydes., hoeshins, Ayrs., loags, Stirlings. See Sup.

"The lads wis nae very driech o' drawin, but lap in amo' the dubs in a handclap; I'm seer some o' them wat the sma' end o' their moggan." Journal from London, p. 5.

And mair attour I'll tell you trow,
That a' the moggans are bran new;
Some worsted are o' different hue,

An' some are cotton.

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, Shop-bill.

Belg. mouw, a sleeve, pl. mouwen; A.S. mogg, longas tibiae habens, Gl. MSS. ap. Schilter: but most nearly allied to Teut. mouwken, parva manica. It seems, indeed, the very same word.

MOGGANS, s. pl. The legs. To MIX MOGGANS with one, to be joined in marriage; a vulgar phrase. S.

MOGH, s. A moth, Ang. O.E. mough.

Langland says of a garment;

Shal neuer chest bymolen it, ne mough after byte it.

P. Ploughman, Fol. 67, b.

"It shall never be moulded in chest, or eaten by a moth." This word is overlooked both by Skinner and Junius. In Edit. 1561, it is rendered mought, which is also used in the same sense O.E.

"Rust and mought distryith." Wiclif, Matt. 6. Moughte, Chaucer.

MOGHIE, adj. Having maggots; as, moghie meat, animal food when fly-blown. S.

MOY, s. A certain measure; Ane moy of salt. S.

MOY, MOYE, adj. 1. Gentle; mild; soft.

I wald na langer beir on brydil, but braid up my heid:
Thair nicht na mollat mak me moy, nor hald my mouth in;

I gar the reinyes rak, and ryf into schundyr.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 57.

Venus with this all glad and full of ioye,
Amyd the heuinly hald, rycht mylde and moye,
Before Jupiter down hir self set.

Doug. Virgil, 478, 44.

2. Affecting great moderation in eating or drinking; mim, synon.

"A bit butt, and bit bend [ben,] make a moy maiden at the board end;" S. Prov.; "a jocose reflection upon young maids, when they eat almost nothing at dinner; intimating, that if they had not eaten a little in the pantry or kitchen, they would eat better at the table;" Kelly, p. 31.

Moy is used in the sense of demure, A. Bor. Gl. Grose.

Rudd. derives it from Fr. mol or mou, id. Lat. moll-is; Sibb. from Teut. moy, comptus, ornatus. I suspect that it is radically the same with meek. For Su.G. miuk seems to be formed from Isl. mygia, humiliare. Verel. indeed gives ob-miuka as the Sw. synon. In like manner, Schilter deduces Teut. muyck, mollis, lenis, debilis, from muoh-en, mu-en, muw-en, vexare, affligere. What is a meek person, but one who is tamed and softened by affliction? Thus, our moy is evidently used, in the first passage, in allusion to a horse that is tamed by restraint and correction. Gael. modh, however, signifies modest.

MOYLIE, adv. Mildly.

Lo how that little lord of luve

Before me thair appeird,

Sae myld lyke and chyld lyk,

With bow three quarters scant;

Syne moylie and coylie,

He lukit lyke ane sant. Cherrie and Slae, st. 8.

MOYAN, s. A species of artillery.

— "Two great canons thrown-mouthed, Mow and her marrow, with two great Botcards, and two Moyans." Pittscottie, p. 143. V. BOTCARD.

These have been called moyans, as being of a middle size, to distinguish them from those designed great; Fr. moyen, moderate. The term is still used, in this sense, in the artillery service.

Anciently all the great guns were christened, as it was called, and had particular names given them. As these two, Mow and her marrow, i. e. fellow or mate, are said to have been thrown-mouthed, what is now denominated spring-bored, or unequal in the bore, they seem to be the same that are afterwards called Crook Mow and Deaf Meg, ibid. p. 191. Mons Meg received her name, as having been made at Mons in Flanders.

MOICH, (gutt.) adj. Giving the idea of moistness, conjoined with putridity; applied to tainted meat. S.

MOICHNESS, s. Dampness causing corruption. S.

To MOIDER, v. a. To stupify with blows, or in any other way. S.

MOIDERT, part. adj. Dull; stupid; confused. S.

MOYEN, MOYAN, s. 1. Means for attaining any end whatsoever.

"Therefore the Prophet so straitly denounced death, that the King may be moved to lift his hope aboue nature, and all naturall moyen, and of God onlie to seek support." Bruce's Eleven Serm. 1591. Sign. B. 8, a. Lond. Ed. — "all natural means." V. the v. sense 1.

2. Interest; means employed in behalf of another. See S.

"By moyen he [Bothwell] got presence of the King in the garden, where he humbled himself upon his knees." Calderwood, p. 243.

"Moyen does mickle, but money does more;" S. Prov. Kelly, p. 243.

3. Means of subsistence; money appropriated for the support of men in public office.

"But the Chuch—thought meet to intercede with the Regent and Estates, for establishing a sure and constant order in providing men to those places, when they should fall void, and settling a competent moyen for their entertainment." Spotswood, p. 258.

Be the moyen of, by means of.

"Therefore the Apostle sayis, 1. Cor. 12. 13. that be the moyen of his halie spirite, all wee quha are faithfull men and women, are baptized in one bodie of Christ; that is wee are conjoyned, and fastned vp with ane Christ, be the moyen (sayis hee) of ane spirite." Bruce's Serm. on the Sacr. 1590. Sign. l. 2. b. 3. a.

4. Temporal substance; property. S.

5. Undue means, such as secret influence, bribery. S.

Fr. moyen, a mean. Gael. moigh-en is used to denote interest.

M O L

To MOYEN, MOYAN, v. a. 1. To accomplish by the use of means.

"Alwaies yee see this conjunction is moyaned be twa speciall moyans, be the moyan of the halie spirit, and be the moyan of faith." Bruce's Serm. on the Sacr. 1590. H. 3, b.

2. To procure; implying diligence, and often also interest, S.

Moyent. A weil-moyent man, one who has good means for procuring any thing, S.B.

Fr. moyenn-er, to procure. This verb was anciently used in E., as denoting the use of means for attaining an end.

"At whose instigation and stiring I (Robert Copland) have me applied, moiening the helpe of God, to reduce and translate it." Ames's Hist. Printing. V. Divers. Purley, i. 299. Fr. moyen-nant, id.

MOYENER, MOYANER, s. One who employs means in favour of another.

"He hath maid death to vs a farther steppe to joy, and a moyaner of a straiter conjunction." Bruce's Eleven Serm. 1591. B. 7. a.

"Quhilk ar the moyaners of this conjunction, vpon the part of God, and quhilk ar the moyaners vpon the part of man?" Bruce's Serm. on the Sacr. 1590. H. 1, a.

MOYENLES, adj. Destitute of interest.

Bot simple sauls, unskilfull, moyenles,
The puir quhome strang oppressors dois oppres,
Few of their right or causses will take keip.

Hume, Chron. S.P. iii. 373.

To MOIF, v. a. To move.

Moif the not, said he than,
Gyf thou be ane gentyl man.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 239, a. 31.

MOIKEN, s. Spinel; Athamanta meum. S.

MOIL, s. Hard and constant labour. S.

MOYLIE, s. 1. A bullock without horns. 2. A mild good-natured person, tame, even to silliness. S.

MOYND, s. Apparently used for mine. S.

MOIST-BALL, s. A ball for holding musk. S.

To MOISTIFY, v. a. To moisten. S.

MOYT.

Stude at the dure Fair calling hir vschere,—
And Secrete hir thrifty chamberere,
That besy was in tyme to do seruise,
And othir moyt I cannot on auise.

King's Quair, iii. 24.

This seems to signify, many; from O. Fr. moult, mout, adv. much, beaucoup. Dict. Trev.; Lat. mult-um.

To MOKRE, v. a. To hoard. V. MOCHRE.

MOLD, s. The ground, E. mould. V. MULDE.

MOLE, s. A promontory; a cape; apparently the same with S. Mull.

Thai raysyt saile, and furth thai far,
And by the mole thai passyt yar,
And entryt sone in to the rase.

V. MULL and RAISS. Barbour, iii. 696. MS.

MOLLACHON, s. A small cheese, Stirlings. Gael. mulachan, a cheese, Shaw.

MOLLAN, s. A long straight pole. S.

MOLLAT, MOLLET, s. 1. The bit of a bridle.

Thair nicht na mollat mak me moy, nor hald my mouth in.

V. MOY. Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 57.

2. According to Rudd., the boss or ornament of a bridle.

Thare harnessing of gold richt derely dicht,
Thay raug the goldin mollettis burnist brycht.

Doug. Virgil, 215, 27.

Rudd. refers to Fr. moulette, the rowel of a spur; or Vol. II. 121 mullet, a term in heraldry for a star of five points. V. next word.

M O N

MOLLET-BRYDYL, s. A bridle having a curb.

"Sone efter Makbeth come to vesy hys castell, & becaus he fand not Makduf present at the werk, he said; This man wyl not obey my chargis, quhill he be riddin with ane mollet brydyl." Bellend. Cron. B. xii. c. 6. Nisi lupato in os injecto, Boeth.

Perhaps mollet may have been formed from Teut. muyl, Germ. maul, Su.G. mul, the mouth; especially as Teut. muyl-band, signifies a headstall for a horse, a muzzle, and Sw. munde-stycke, q. something that pricks the mouth, has precisely the same meaning with the S. term. Seren. uses the very word employed by Boece, lupatum. Isl. mel, Su.G. myl, however, denote a bridle, a curb; fraenum, Verel.

To MOLLET, v. n.

Gif thay thair spirituell office gydit,
Ilk man nicht say, thay did thair partis:
Bot gif thay can play at the cartis,
And mollet moylie on ane mule,
Thocht thay had neuer sene the seule;
Yit at this day, als weill as than,
Will be maid sic ane spirituell man.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 270.

This verb, evidently used for the alliteration, refers to the management of a mule in riding. But the precise signification is doubtful. It is most probably formed from MOLLAT, s.

MOLLETS, s. pl. 1. Fantastic airs. 2. Sly winks. S.

MOLLIGRANT, MOLLIGRUNT, s. The act of whining, complaining, or murmuring, Ang. See Sup.

Isl. mogl-a, to murmur, mogl-a, murmur, and graun, os et nasus, q. such whining as distorts the countenance; or, as including two ideas nearly connected, grunnia, murmuring, and grunting. Teut. muyl-en, mutire, mussitare; muyl-er, mussitator.

MOLLIGRUB, MULLYGRUB, s. Melancholy; nearly the same with molligrant, S. See Sup.

Poor Mouldy rins quite by himsel,
And bans like ane broke loose frae hell.
It lulls a wee my mullygrubs,

To think upon these bitten scrubs,

When naething saves their vital low,

But the expences of a tow. Ramsay's Poems, i. 333.

Johnson renders E. mulligrubs, "the twisting of the guts." "Sick of the mulligrubs; low-spirited, having an imaginary sickness;" Grose's Class. Dict.

Germ. grob, signifying great; this might denote a great complaint or murmuring.

MOLL-ON-THE-COALS, s. A gloomy-minded person. S.

To MOLLUP, MOLLOP, v. n. To toss the head in a haughty or disdainful way. S.

MOLOSS, adj. Loose; dissolute in conduct. S.

MOLUCCA NUT. This nut is used as a charm against witchcraft in the Western Islands. S.

MOMENT,* s. A second of time. S.

MOMENT-HAND, s. The hand of a clock or watch which marks the seconds, S.

MOND, s. The technical or heraldic term used to denote the globe that surmounts an imperial crown. S.

MON, MONE, MUN, MAUN, auxiliary v. Must.

Fast folow ws than sall thai,
And sone swa mone thai brek aray.

Wyntown, viii. 38. 148.

Sum time the text mon haue ane exposicioun,

Sum tyme the coloure will cause ane litill additioun,
Doug. Virgil, 9, 27.

The force of this verb is well expressed in the following lines :

— " You maun gang wi' me, fair maid."
 " To marry you, Sir, I'se warrand ;
 " But maun belongs to the king himsel,
 " But no to a country clown ;
 " Ye might have said, ' Wi' your leave, fair maid,'
 " And latten your maun alane."

Jamieson's Popul. Ball. i. 327.

Moun is used by Wiclif, and mun by Minot.

" As long tyme as thei han the spouse with hem thei moun not faste." Mark 2.

Bot all thaire wordes was for noght,
 Thai mun be met if thai war ma..

Minot's Poems, p. 3.

Maun, S.; mun, Cumb. Yorks. Isl. mun, id. Eg mun giora, facturus sum; Fra quwinno ok barn the ganga mona; Uxores et liberos relinquent; Fra wives and bairns they mun gang, S. Runolph. Jonas observes, in his Isl. Grammar, that eg skal and eg mun are auxiliary verbs, which signify nothing by themselves; but, added to other verbs, correspond to Gr. μελλειν. It may be remarked, however, that mun S. and A. Bor. is more forcible than the Isl. term. The latter respects the certainty of something future; the former denotes not only its futurity, but its necessity.

Thre traces this word to Moes.G. And thata munaida thairhgangan; He was to pass that way, Luk. xix. 4. Δι' εκεινης ημελλε διερχεσθαι; Gr. Munaida, however, is from mun-an, mun-jan, to think, to mean.

I have sometimes been inclined to view mon, man, maun, as an oblique use of A.S. magon, possunt; for we frequently urge the necessity of doing a thing, because it is in one's power. But, although Moes.G. magun, from mag-an, posse, corresponds to A.S. magon, we have no evidence of its being used to denote necessity. We may, therefore, either suppose that the Moes.G. verb, primarily signifying to intend, admitted of a secondary sense; or that there was another verb of the same form corresponding to Gr. μελλειν.

To MONE, v. a. To take notice of; to animadvert upon.

Bot othyr dedis nane war done,
 That gretly is apon to mone. Barbour, xix. 526, MS.

A.S. mon-ian, man-ian, myn-egian, notare, animadvertere, Lye; to cite, Somn. Su.G. mon-a, to remember.

MONE, s. Money. S.

MONE, s. Mane.

Out throw the wood came rydand catiues twane,
 Ane on ane asse, a widdie about his mone.
 The vther raid ane hiddeous hors vpone.

Palice of Honour, i. 12. Ed. 1579.

Not used rhythmi causa, as I at first supposed; but evidently allied to Isl. moen, juba, equina. S.

MONE, s. The moon; meen, Aberd. See Sup.

— Fyr all cler
 Sone throw the thak burd gan apper,
 First as a sterne, syne as a mone.—

Barbour, iv. 127. MS.

Be than the army of mony ane Gregioun,
 Stuffit in schippis come fra Tenedoun;
 Still vnder freyndlie silence of the Mone,
 To the kend coistis speding thame full sone.

Doug. Virgil, 47, 28.

In Aberd. and other northern counties, the pronunciation is meen; also in some parts of Perth.

— It tells a' the motion o'
 The sin, meen, and sev'n starns.

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 29.

A.S. mona, Germ. mon. In the other Northern dialects, a or e is used, instead of o. Isl. mana, Alem. mano, Su.G.

Dan. maane, Belg. maen, Moes.G. mena. The latter approaches most nearly to a word used by the prophet Isaiah, which has been understood by the most learned interpreters as denoting the moon. "Ye are they that prepare a table for Gad, and that furnish the offering unto Meni." Isa. lxx. 11. As Gad is understood of the Sun, we learn from Diodor. Sicul. that Meni is to be viewed as a designation of the moon. This name coming from a root which signifies to number, it has been supposed that it was given to the moon, because the nations in general numbered their months from her revolutions. The moon was anciently called Μηνη, Mene, before she received the name of Σεληνη, Selene. This name of the moon, according to Eusebius, occurs in the Poems of Orpheus. The Latins had their goddess Mana. Some nations made the moon a masculine deity, calling him Μην, as the Roman writers spoke of Deus Lunus; for the moon, it has been said, was viewed as of the masculine gender in respect of the earth, whose husband he was supposed to be; but as a female in relation to the sun, as being his spouse. Vide. Vitring. in Isa. lxx. 11. El. Sched. de Dis Germ. p. 136.

As nothing could be more absurd than to ascribe sex to Deity, the folly of the system of the heathen appears, in a striking light, from the great confusion of their mythology in this respect. The sun himself was sometimes considered as a goddess. In A.S. the name of this luminary is feminine, as Spelman, Hickes, and Lye have observed; for the Germans viewed the sun as the wife of Tuisco. On the other hand, Mona, the word used to denote the moon, is masculine. Ulphilas, in his version, sometimes gives the sun a masculine name, Uil; although Sunno, a word of the feminine gender, is most commonly used.

It had occurred to me, that A.S. mona, bears strong marks of affinity to the v. mon-ian, monere, to admonish, to instruct; and that the name might originate from some Goth. v. of this signification, as Heb. ירה, jarehh, the moon, is from ירה, jareh, in hiphil, docuit, monstravit; q. that which admonishes the husbandman as to times and seasons. Upon looking into Wachter, I find that he derives the Goth. name of this luminary from man-a, monere, as the ancient Germans would undertake nothing of importance without examining the state of the moon. The ancient Goths, says Rudbeck, paid such regard to the moon, that some have thought that they worshipped her more than the sun. Atalantis, ii. 609.

Prognostications concerning the weather, during the course of the month, are generally formed by the country people in S. from the appearance of the new moon. It is considered as an almost infallible presage of bad weather, if she lies sair on her back, or when her horns are pointed towards the zenith. It is a similar prognostic, when the new moon appears with the auld moon in her arms, or, in other words, when that part of the moon which is covered with the shadow of the earth is seen through it.

A brugh or hazy circle round the moon is accounted a certain prognostic of rain. If the circle be wide, and at some distance from the body of that luminary, it is believed that the rain will be delayed for some time; if it be close, and as it were adhering to the disk of the moon, rain is expected very soon. In Renfrewshire, however, as I am informed, the idea is inverted. V. BRUGH.

There is the same superstition with regard to the first mention of the term Moon, after this planet has made her first appearance, that prevails with respect to that day of the week to which she gives her name. V. MONDAY. Some to prevent the dangerous consequences of the loquacity of a female tongue, will anxiously inquire at any male, "What is that which shines so clearly?" or, "What light is that?" that he may pronounce the portentous term. In this case, the charm is happily broken.

Another superstition, equally ridiculous and unaccountable, is still regarded by some. They deem it very unlucky to see the new moon for the first time, without having silver in one's pocket. Copper is of no avail. See Sup.

Both Celts and Goths retain a superstitious regard for this planet, as having great influence on the lot of man.

"The moon, in her increase, full growth, and wane, are with them the emblems of a rising, flourishing, and declining fortune. At the last period of her revolution, they carefully avoid to engage in any business of importance; but the first and the middle they seize with avidity, presaging the most auspicious issue to their undertakings. Poor Martinus Scriblerus never more anxiously watched the blowing of the west wind to secure an heir to his genius, than the love-sick swain and his nymph for the coming of the new moon to be noosed together in matrimony. Should the planet happen to be at the height of her splendour when the ceremony is performed, their future life will be a scene of festivity, and all its paths strewn over with rose-buds of delight. But when her tapering horns are turned towards the N., passion becomes frost-bound, and seldom thaws till the genial season again approaches." P. Kirkmichael, Banffs. Statist. Acc. xii. 457.

"They do not marry but in the waxing of the moon. They would think the meat spoiled, were they to kill the cattle when that luminary is wanting [i. e. waning]." P. Kirkwall, Orkn. Statist. Acc. vii. 560. See Sup.

This superstition, with respect to the fatal influence of a waning moon, seems to have been general in S. In Angus, it is believed, that, if a child be put from the breast during the waning of the moon, it will decay all the time that the moon continues to wane. As it is now discovered that the moon has an influence in various diseases, some suppose that it may have been really observed, that the waning moon had been less favourable to children in this situation.

In Sweden, great influence is ascribed to the moon, not only as regulating the weather, but as influencing the affairs of human life in general.

I am informed by a respectable gentleman, who has resided many years in that country, that they have a sort of Lunar Calendar, said to have been handed down from the Monks, to which considerable regard is still paid. According to this, no stress is laid on the state of the weather on the first and second days of the moon. The third is of some account. But it is believed, that the weather, during the rest of the month, will correspond to that of the fourth and fifth days. It is thus expressed:

Prima, secunda, nihil;
Tertia, aliquid;
Quarta, quinta, qualis,
Tota Luna talis.

He justly remarks, that, as the moon's influence on the waters of our earth has been long admitted, by a parity of reason, she may be supposed to affect our atmosphere, a less dense fluid; although it cannot be determined on any satisfactory ground, at what particular period of her age, the days of the prognostication should be selected; or if it were supposed, that her influence would be greater at any one period, that of the full moon might seem to have the best claim.

As in the dark ages, the belief of the influence of the moon regulated every operation of agriculture, of economy, and even of medicine; at this day, the lower orders in Sweden, and even a number of the better sort, will not fell a tree for agricultural purposes in the wane of the moon; else, it is believed, it will shrink and not be durable. A good housewife will not slaughter for her family, else the meat will shrivel and melt away in the pot. Many nostrums are reckoned effectual, only when taken during the first days of the moon. Annual bleeding must by no means be performed in the wane. Gardeners, in planting and sowing their crops, pay particular attention to the state of the moon. V. ST. MARTIN'S DAY.

The superstitions of our own countrymen, and of the Swedes, on this head, equally confirm the account given by Cæsar concerning the ancient Germans, the forefathers of both. "As it was the custom with them," he says, "that their matrons, by the use of lots and prophecies, should declare, whether they should join in battle, or not, they said, that the Germans could not be victorious, if they should engage before the new moon." Bell. Gall. L. i. c. 50. They reckoned new, or full moon, the most auspicious season for entering on any business. The Swedes do not carry this farther than they did. Coeunt, says Tacitus, certis diebus, quum aut inchoatur Luna, aut impletur. Nam agendis rebus hoc auspicatissimum initium credunt.

From a passage in one of Dunbar's Poems, it would appear to have been customary, in former times, to swear by the moon. See Sup.

Fra Symon saw it ferd upon this wyse,
He had greit wonder; and sueiris by the Mone,
Freyr Robert has richt weil his devoir done.

Maitland's Poems, p. 79.

It is strange that, in a land so long favoured with clear gospel-light, some should still be so much under the influence of the grossest superstition, that they not only venture on divination, but in their unhallowed eagerness to dive into the secrets of futurity, even dare directly to give homage "to the Queen of heaven." We have the following account of this heathenish act.

"As soon as you see the first new moon of the new year, go to a place where you can set your feet upon a stone naturally fixed in the earth, and lean your back against a tree; and in that posture hail, or address, the moon in the words of the poem which are marked; if ever you are to be married, you will then see an apparition, exactly resembling the future partner of your joys and sorrows."

The words referred to are;

'O, new Moon! I hail thee!
'And gif I'm ere to marry man,
'Or man to marry me,
'His face turn'd this way fast's ye can,
'Let me my true love see,
'This blessed night!

Rev. J. Nicol's Poems, i. 31. 32.

V. YERD-FAST. See Sup.

It is well known, that, among the ancient Greeks and Romans, the moon was supposed to preside over magic. According to this attribute she was known by the name of Hecate. Hence Jason, when about to engage in magical ceremonies, has this invocation put in his mouth by Ovid.

Modo Diva triformis

Adjuvet, et præsens ingentibus annuat ausis.

Metamorph. Lib. vii.

But he waits three nights, till the moon was full.

Tres aberant noctes, ut cornua tota coirent,

Efficerentque orbem.—

She was called triformis, because she appeared as the Moon or Luna in heaven, as Diana on earth, and as Proserpine in hell.

She was also acknowledged as the goddess who presided over love. Hence, notwithstanding the great difference of character between Venus and the chaste Diana, it is asserted, that according to the heathen mythology, they were in fact the same. That the Moon, or Isis, was the guardian of love, is testified by Eudoxus, ap. Plutarch. Lib. de Osiride et Iside. She is exhibited in the same light by Seneca the Tragedian, in Hippolyt.

Hecate triformis, en ades coeptis favens,

M O N

Animum rigentem tristis Hippolyti doma :
Amare discat, mutuos ignes ferat.

The same thing appears from Theocritus, in Pharmaceutr. V. El. Sched. de Dis German. p. 158—161.

MONETH, s. A month. This form of the word is still retained by some old people, S.

— In the moneth that year of May,

James of Gladstans on a day

— Com, and askyt suppowal

At the Kyng of Scotland.

Wyntown, ix. 24. 3.

A.S. monath, id. from mona, the moon, as denoting a revolution of that luminary. According to Mr. Tooke, "it means the period in which that planet moneth, or compleateth its orbit." Divers. Purley, ii. 417. The observation is very ingenious, although there are no vestiges of a verb of this form in the A.S. or any of the Gothic languages. The termination at, to which A.S. ath, seems equivalent, is, according to Wachter, the medium of the formation of substantives from verbs, and of abstracts from substantives.

The Anglo-Saxons, counting by lunar months, reckoned thirteen in the year. The ancient northern nations were more happy in the names they gave to their months, than we who have borrowed from the Romans. For the particular designations were expressive of something peculiar to the season. The Anglo-Saxons, as Bede informs us, called January Giuli, as would seem, from the feast celebrated about this time; February, they called Sol-monath, because the sun, Dan. soel, began to extend his influence. Rhed-monath was their March, either from Rheda, a goddess to whom they sacrificed at this time; or, according to Wormius, from red-en, to prepare, because this was the season of preparation for nautical expeditions. April was named Eostur-monath, from the heathen goddess Eostre; May, Trimilchi, because in this month they began to milch their cattle thrice a day. June and July were called Lida, as being mild; A.S. liih, mollis, mitis. August was Weide-monath, q. the month of weeds, because they abound then. Haleg-monath corresponded to our September, so called, because it was much devoted to religion; q. holy month. Wynter-fyllit was the name of October, q. full of winter. November was called Blot-monath, or the month of sacrifices, because the cattle, that were slaughtered during this month, were devoted to the gods. December, as well as January, was denominated Giuli. V. Bed. de Tempor. Ratione, c. 13.

The names which, according to Verstegan, were given to the months by the Pagan Saxons, or ancient Germans, differ considerably from those mentioned by Bede. January, he says, was called Wolf-monat, because at this time people are most in danger of being devoured by wolves, which, by reason of the severity of the season, finding it more difficult to obtain their usual prey, draw near to the haunts of men. February was called Sprout-Kele, because then the cole-wort begins to send forth its tender sprouts. March, Lenct-monat, because the days then begin, in length, to exceed the nights.—Hence the fast of Lent, as being observed at this time. April, May, June, and July, were designed Oster-monat, Tri-milki, Weyd-monat, and Hey-monat. But he views Weyd-monat as receiving its name, because the beasts did weyd, or go to feed, in the meadows; whence Teut. weyd, a meadow. August was called Arn, or rather Barn-monat, because the barns were then filled with corn. September, Gerst-monat, from gerst, barley, as being yielded in this month; and October, Wyn-monat, because, although the ancient Germans had not wines of their own produce, they got them at this season from other countries. November they denominated Wint-monat, because of the prevalence of the winds. For, from this season, the Northern mariners confined themselves to their harbours till Fare-maen, or March, invited them to renew their expeditions. December was called Winter-monat. V. Verstegan's Restitut. c. 3.

M O N

The Danes still use distinctive names for the lunar months, by which they reckon their festivals. The first is Diur-Rey, or Renden; so called, because the wild beasts are then rutting. The second is Thor-maen, being consecrated to the god Thor. The third is Fare-maen, because at this time men begin to fare, or set out on different expeditions. Wormius, however, derives it from Faar, sheep, as they are then put upon the tender grass. The fourth is May-maen, not from the Latin name, but from Dan. at maye, which signifies to adorn with verdant leaves and with flowers; as denoting the pleasantness of this month. The fifth is Sommer-maen, or summer month. The sixth Orme-maen, because of the abundance of worms and insects; or, according to Loccenius, because then worms are copiously bred from putrefaction; Antiq. Sueo-G. p. 20. The seventh is Hoe-maen, or Hay-month, because about this time hay is made. The eighth is Korn-maen, because the corns are brought home. The ninth is Fiske-maen, as being accounted a month favourable for fishing. The tenth is Saede-maen, being the season for sowing. The eleventh is Polse-maen, as being the time when puddings are made, because the cattle are slaughtered during this month. The twelfth is Jule-maen, or Yule-month. It must be observed, however, that these months, as well as those of the Anglo-Saxons formerly mentioned, do not exactly correspond to ours. The thirteenth month, when it occurs, is inserted in summer, and called overlobs-maen, or intercalary month.

The following are the names given by the Danes to the solar months. January they call Glug-manet, from glugge, a window, vent, or opening; either, according to Wormius, because the windows are then shut, or because this month is, as it were, the window of the new year. February is Blide-manet, or cheerful month; March, Tor-manet; April, Fare-manet; May, May-manet; June, Sker-Sommer, (Wolff's Dict. skiersommer, probably from skier, clear, bright;) July, Orme-manet; August, Hoest-manet, or harvest-month; September, Fiske-manet; October, Sede-manet, or seed-month; November, Slacte-manet, or slaughter-month; and December, Christ-manet, because the season of Christmas.

The Swedes call January Thor, asserting that the worship of this heathen deity was appropriated to this season. February is named Goe, from Goe, the daughter of Thor, according to G. Andr. a very ancient king of Finland, whose son Norus is said to have given name to the Norwegians, of which nation he was the founder. This Thor, it has been said, was the son of Fornioter, the descendant of the elder Odin in the fifth generation. Some represent Goia, or Goe, as the same with Freija; Loccen. Antiq. Sueo-Goth. p. 19. Others identify her with Ceres, or the Earth, Gr. Tατα: urging the probability of this idea, from its being pretended that Goe was carried off, from a search being annually made for her, and from the observation of a festival of nine days, in the month of February, which are consecrated to her memory. V. Ihre, vo. Goeja. March, they call Blida; April, Varant, probably from Su.G. var, the spring; May, Maj; June, Hovilt, (Ihre, ha-fall, corr. hofwill,) the season of grass, from ha, gramen, and falla, nasci; July, Hoant, Ihre Hoand, literally, the hay-cutting; August, Skortant, from Skord, harvest, which is derived from skaer-a, to cut; September, Ost-monat, as being the time of gathering in what has been cut down; October, November, and December, are Slacte-monat, Winter-monat, Jola-monat, or Yule-month.

In Islandic, January is designed Midsvetrar manadur, or mid-winter; February, Fostugangs; March, Janfn-degra, [Ol. Worm.] evidently, by an error of the press, for Jaffndegra, the equinox, (Jaffndaegre, G. Andr.) April is called Sumar, or summer; May, Fardaga, probably from Su.G. Fardag, the time appointed by law, in which old farmers remove to give place to the new, Ihre; from far-a, proficisci, and dag, dies; June, Noettleysu man, perhaps from Su.G. noet, Isl. naut, and leys-a, to loose, q. when the nout or cattle are let loose on the pastures; July, Madka man, or worm month; August, Heyanna, Heyanna-man, or hay-cutting month, from hey, hay, and ann, labour; September, Addraata man; October, Slatrunar man, from slatrun, mactatio, the killing of cattle; November, Rydtidar man; December, Skamdeigis man, because of the shortness of the day, from skam, short, and deig, a day. V. Worm. Fast. Dan. pp. 39-48. V. Also Von Troil's Letters on Iceland, pp. 117, 118. where the names of the months occur with very little variation. See Sup.

MONESTING, s. Admonition; warning.

—Ye may se we haiff iii thingis
That makis us oft monestingis
For to be worthi, wiss, and wycht,
And till anoy thaim at our ii ycht.

V. MONYSS. Barbour, iv. 533. MS.

MONEY, adj. 1. Many, S. monny, Lancash.

"Yit ane thyng bene necessar to anyse quibidder the empire of ane or of mony be mair profitabill for your common weill." Bellend. Cron. Fol. 6. a. Wyntown, id.

2. Great; Border.

"God send, God send, fayr vedthir, fayr vedthir. Mony pricis, mony pricis." Compl. S. p. 62. 63.

"Mony pricis is a popular phrase for a great price. The kye brought mony prices at the fair, i. e. they sold dear," Gl. Compl.

It occurs in O.E. in the first sense.

And other monye luther lawes, that hys elderne adde ywrogt,

He behet, that he wolde abate, & natheles he ne dude nogt. R. Glouc. p. 447.

A.S. moneg, maenig, Sw. monga, Moes.G. managai, many.

MONYCORDIS, s. pl. A musical instrument. See S.

—The Croude, and the Monycordis, the Gythornis gay.— Houlate, iii. 10.

Probably of one string, from Gr. μονοχορδος, unica intentus chorda, Scapul. Lex. Lydgate writes monacordys.

V. Ritson's E.M.R. Intr. cxv. vol. i.

MONYFEET. Jock wi' the Monyfeet, Jenny with the Manyfeet, Muggie Monyfeet, and Maggie or Meg wi' the Monyfeet are names given to the Centipede. S.

MONEY LANG. This mony lang, for a long time past. S.

MONIPLIES, MONNYPLIES, s. pl. 1. That part of the tripe of a beast which consists of many folds, S.

"The food parches the stomach and intestines, hardens and concretes in the fold of the second stomach or monnyplies." Prize Essays Highl. Soc. S. ii. 218.

As Teut. menigh-voud signifies multiplex, menigh-voude is used nearly in the same sense with the S. word; echinus, bovis ventriculus, sic dictus a variis plicis, Kilian.

I am informed by a medical gentleman of great celebrity, that, of the four stomachs in ruminating animals, the moniplies is the third, or what professional men call the omasum.

O. E. myne-ye-ple, synon. with manifold, is applied to mail, or perhaps to the stuffing or quilting used instead of mail.

Thorowe riche male, and myne-ye-ple,

Many sterne the stroke downe streight.

Anc. Ballad of Chevy-Chase, Percy's Reliques, i. 9. Ed. Dubl. 1766.

"Monyple, a N. C. word." Lamb's Battle of Floddon, Notes, p. 70.

2. Sometimes coarsely and vulgarly applied, in a ludicrous sense, to the intestines of man. S.

To MONYSS, v. a. To warn; to admonish.

Thai may weill monyss as thai will:

And thai may hecht als to fulfill

With stalwart hart, thair bidding all.

Barbour, xii. 383. MS.

Therfor thai monyst thaim to be

Off gret worschip, and of bounté. Ibid. 379. MS.

Rudd. derives this v. from Lat. moneo. But the Lat. v. seems merely to have had a common root with this, which we find, slightly diversified, in almost all the Northern languages; Su.G. man-a, to exhort, to counsel; A.S. men-ian, mann-ian, man-igian, mon-ian, mon-egian, to admonish; Alem. man-on, keman-on; Germ. man-en, vermahn-en; Belg. vermaan-en, Fenn. man-aan, id. A.S. monige, monung, Germ. vermahnung, Belg. vermaaning, admonitio.

MONKRIE, MUNKRIE, s. A monastic foundation. S.

MONONDAY, MONANDAY, s. Monday, S.

Propter hoc hucusque in Anglia feria secunda Paschae Blak-mononday vulgariter nuncupatur. Fordun. Scotichron. ii. 359.

"Upoun Mononday, the fyft of November, did the Frenche ische out of Leyth betymes, for keiping of the victuellis, quhilk suld have cum to us." Knox's Hist. p. 191.

A.S. Monan daeg, id. the day consecrated to the Moon; literally, dies Lunae. For monan is the genit. of mona, the moon.

The name of the second day of the week affects some feeble minds with terror. If Monanday, or Monday, be first mentioned in company by a female, of what age or rank soever, they account it a most unlucky omen. But it gives relief to such minds, if the fatal term be first mentioned by a male. I know not, if this strange superstition be peculiar to the North of S.

This is evidently a ramification of the system of superstition, which in former ages was so generally extended, with respect to the supposed influence of the Moon. For a similar idea is entertained as to the mention of her name. Why the power of dissolving the charm is ascribed to the male sex, it is not easy to imagine. It cannot well be ascribed to the belief, that the Moon was herself of the weaker sex, and therefore controlled by the other. For the Gothic nations seem generally to have viewed the Moon as masculine. See Sup. V. MONE.

MONSTOUR, MUNSTOUR, s. A muster. S.

MONSTRANCE, s. Perhaps, show; display. S.

MONTEYLE, s. A mount.

The Inglis men sa rudly then

Kest amang thaim suerdis and mass,

That ymyd thaim a monteyle was,

Off wapynnyis, that war warpyt thar.

Barbour, xi. 601.

Ital. monticell-o, L.B. monticell-us, collis.

MONTH, MOUNTH, s. 1. A mountain. See Sup.

"The foure marmadyns that sang quhen Thetis vas mareit on month Pillion, thai sang nocht sa sueit as did thir scheiphyrdis." Compl. S. p. 99.

This general sense of the term was not unknown to O. E. writers. Hence Hardyng, in his advice directed to K. Edward IV. as to the most proper plan for conquering Scotland, says;

Betwixt the mounthes and the water of Tay,

Which some do call mountaignes in our language,

Pass eastward, with your armie daie by daie,

From place to place with small cariage.

Chron. Fol. 236, a.

He might probably use the word, as having heard it during his residence in Scotland.

2. The common designation of the Grampian mountains, especially towards the eastern extremity. To gang oure the Month, to cross the Grampians, S.B.

The phrase is particularly used with respect to one pass, called the Cairnie-month, or more properly Cairn of Month.

—He thought weil that he would far
Oute our the Mounth with his menye,
To luk quha that his freind wald be.

Barbour, viii. 393, MS.

A.S. monte, munt, a mountain.

MONTHIS BORD. The ridge of a mountain. V. BORD. S.
MONTUR, s.

No more for the faire fole, then for a rish rote,
But for doel of the dombe best, that thus shold be dede,

I mourne for no montur, for I may gete mare.

Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. ii. 17.

"A saddle horse; Fr. monture, jumentum." Sibb. Cotgr renders monture, a saddle horse. It may, however, here signify the value of the horse in money; A.S. mynittre, numisma, from mynet-ian, to strike money; Su.G. mynt-a.

MOO, s. The act of lowing. V. MUE. S.

MOO, s. The mouth. V. Mow. S.

MOODIE, adj. Gallant; courageous. V. MODY. S.

MOODIE-HILL, s. A mole-hill. V. MOUDIE. S.

MOOL, s. A slipper. V. MULLIS. S.

To MOOL, v. a. To crumble; also To MOOL IN. V.

MULE, v.

To MOOLAT, MOOLET, v. n. To whine; to murmur. S.

MOOLETIN, part. pr. Whining. S.

MOOLIE-HEELS, s. pl. Chilblains; kibes. V. MULES. S.

MOOLIE PUDDING. A school-game. S.

MOOLS, s. Pulverized earth, &c. V. MULDIS.

MOONLIGHT-FLITTING, s. A decampment by night, and carrying off one's goods or furniture, to escape from creditors or from personal arrestment. S.

MONOG, s. A name for the cranberry or crawberry. S.

To MOOP, MOUP, v. n. To nibble; to mump. V. MOUP.

MOORAT, MOORIT, adj. Brownish colour in wool. S.

MOORAWAY, s. A thick shower of snow. S.

MOOR-FOWL, s. Red Game, Gorcock, or Moorcock, S. Bonasa Scotica, Brisson.

Lagopus altera Plinii,—The Moor-cock, nostratibus, the Moor-fowl. Sibb. Scot. p. 16.

"This parish abounds much more with moor fowl and black game than Kirkhill." P. Kiltarlity, Invern. Statist. Acc. xiii. 514.

This in Gael. is called Coileach-ruadh, i. e. the red cock, while the black cock is denominated Coileach-dubh, which has precisely the same meaning with our designation. V. Statist. Acc. xvii. 249.

The name is equivalent to heath-cock. V. MURE.

MOOR-GRASS, s. Potentilla anserina, S. See Sup.

"Silver-weed, or Wild Tansey. Anglis. Moor-grass. Scotis." Lightfoot, p. 268.

MOOR-ILL, s. A disease of black cattle. V. MUIR-ILL.

MOORS. Brown Man of the Moors. V. under Brown. S.

MOOSE, s. That piece of flesh which lies in the shank-bone of a leg of mutton, S. V. MOUSE.

MOOSEWEB, MOUSEWEB, s. 1. The gossamer, the white cobwebs that fly in the air, S.

2. Improperly used as denoting spiders' webs, S. See S.

3. Used metaph. in relation to phlegm in the throat or stomach, S.

Ye benders a', that dwell in joot,
You'll tak your liquor clean cap out,
Synd your mouse-webs wi' reaming stout,

While ye hae cash.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 42.

This orthography is wrong. For the term has no affinity to the mouse.

Sibb. refers to Fr. mousche, a fly, q. a fly-net. But mousse, moss, mossy down, would have been a more natural origin; Teut. mos, moisture. For the term seems properly to respect those webs, which fly in the field, generated from moisture.

MOOSE-WEBB'D, adj. Covered with spider's webs. S.

To MOOTER. V. Mout awa'.

MOOTH, adj. Misty. It is said to be a mooth day, when the air is thick and foggy, when there is flying mist in it, S.B.

Belg. mottig, id. mottig weer, drizzling weather; mott-regen, a drizzling rain; mott-en, to drizzle.

MOOTHLYE, adv. Softly. V. MUTH. S.

MOOTIE, adj. Parsimonious; niggardly. V. MOUT. v. S.

MOOTIT-LIKE, adj. Puny in size; having the appearance of a bird when moulting. S.

To MOOTLE, v. a. To nibble; to fritter away. S.

MOPPAT, s. An implement for cleaning or wetting the inner part of a cannon. E. mop. S.

MORADEN, s. Homage. V. MANRENT.

MORAY COACH. A cart, Banffs.; a cant term used in ridicule of a neighbouring county. S.

MORE, Mor, adj. Great.

Eacak-Mourea-More

Gat Erc, and he gat Fergus More.

Wyntown, iii. 10. 52.

He that wes callyd Fergus More,
In the thrid buke yhe hard before.

Wes Fergus Erchsun.— Ibid, iv. 8. 25.

Used in O.E., as Mr. MacPherson has observed, "if there be no mistake."

Therof he wolde be awreke, he suore hys more oth.

V. MARE, id. R. Glouc. p. 391.

MORE, s. A health. V. MURE.

MORGAN-STERNE, s. A club with a round head furnished with pikes, formerly used by those who were besieged, to defend themselves from their assailants. S.

MORGEOUN, s. V. MURGEOUN.

MORGOZ'D, part. pa. Confused; disordered. S.

MORGUE, s. A solemn face; an imposing look. S.

MORIANE, adj. Black; swarthy, resembling a Moor. See Sup.

The term occurs in a dialogue betwixt Honour, Gude-Fame, &c. p. 5. where we have the following description of David Rizzio.

"Than come Dishonour and Infame our fais,
And brought in ane to rule with raggit clais,
Thocht he wes blak and moriane of hew,
In credite sone, and gorgius clais he grew,
Thocht he wes forraine, and borne in Piemont
Zit did he Lords of ancient blude surmont.
He wes to hir, baith secreit, trew and traist,
With her estemit mair nor all the reast,
In this mene tyme come hame than my Lord Darlie,
Of quhais rair bewtie scho did sumpart fairlie." &c.

This word has certainly been used in O.E. as Cotgr. gives it as the sense of Fr. more, id. It is probably a contraction of Lat. Mauritanus, a moor.

MORMAIR, s. An ancient title of honour in S. V. MAIR.

MORN, MORNE, s. Morrow; to morne, to-morrow, S. the morne, id.

The hyne cryis for the corne,
The broustare the bere schorne,

The feist the fidler to morne
Couatis ful yore.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 238, b. 18.

To morne, to-morrow. Gl. Yorks. Dial.

"This is my first jornay, I sall end the same the morne." Lett. Buchanan's Detect. G. 7. a.

Uther morne, the day after to-morrow.

"He hes prayit me to remane upone him quhill vther morne." Ibid. G. 8. b. Me rogavit, ut se expectarem in diem perendinum, Lat. Vers. p. 111.

A.S. morghen, morgen; Alem. morgan, Su.G. morgon; Isl. morgun, morrow; A.S. to morghen, or morgen, to-morrow.

MORNING,* s. 1. A glass of spirits or bitters taken before breakfast. 2. A slight repast taken at rising. S. MORNING GIFT, s. The gift conferred by a husband on his wife, on the morning after marriage. See Sup.

King Ja. VI. "immediately after the marriage, contracted, and solemnized between" him and Anne of Denmark, "for the singular love and affection borne toward her, gave, granted, and confirmed to her, in forme of morning gift, all and haill, the Lordschippe of Dunfermeline." Acts, Ja. VI. Parl. 13. c. 191.

This lordship was given to the Queen to be possessed by her as her own property during life. She was not to enter upon it in consequence of the King's decease. For his Majesty's grant gave her immediate possession. Both the nature of the gift, and its designation, refer to a very ancient custom. Morgongofwa was the name given, in the Gothic laws, to the donation which the husband made to his wife on the day after marriage. This was also called hindradags gaef, or the gift on the succeeding day. Ihre informs us, that it appears from the laws of the Visigoths, that the gift called tillgewaer, and also wingaeft, was different from the hindradags gaef; the former being a pledge given after the espousals, and the latter a gift bestowed the day after the consummation of the marriage; tanquam servatae pudicitiae praemium. In explaining hindradags gaef, this writer assigns a different reason for the gift; Usurpatur de munere sponsi quo virginitatis damnum pensabat, vo. Hin.

A.S. morgen-gife was used in the same sense; "The gift," says Lye, "which, under the name of dowry, was given to the young wife by her husband on the day after marriage." This the ancient Germans called morgan-geba, and morgan-giba; terms which frequently occur in their ancient laws. Hence Germ. morgen-gabe, a dowry. Wachter observes, however, that among the ancient Germans, this designation was not given to the whole dowry, but only to that part of it which the husband gave to his newly-married wife; post primam noctem, tanquam pretium virginitatis, ut apud Graecos Διαπαρθενια. This gift, he adds, was among the Longobards a fourth part of the husband's goods; and is every where distinguished from other dowries. A specimen of this kind of donation, written in A.S., about the year 1000, is given in Hickes's Diss. Epist. p. 76.

Morghen-gave, morghen-gifte, id. Kilian. But this learned writer erroneously observes, that the husband conferred this gift on the marriage day, before the nuptial feast. The various terms morgongofwa, morgan-gife, &c. all literally mean, either a morning-gift, or a gift conferred on the morrow; Alem. morgon, and A.S. morgen, &c. signifying both the morning, and to-morrow. Thus, when this donation is in our law called morning-gift, it is not by corruption, but in consequence of a translation of the original phrase. I have not heard that it is customary any where in S. for the husband to make any gift of this kind. But perhaps we have a vestige of this ancient custom, in the practice which still prevails in some parts of S., of relations and neighbours making presents to the young wife on the morning after her marriage.

As I have not observed that this phrase occurs any where else in our laws, perhaps the use of it in this single instance may scarcely be deemed sufficient evidence of its having been common. It may be supposed that James might have borrowed it from the Danes. For when he made this gift to his Queen, he was at Upslo, in Norway, as the act declares. It is evident, however, from Reg. Maj. that every freeman was bound to endow his wife with a dowry at the kirk door on the day of marriage; B. ii. c. 16. s. 1. 2. 33. Skene also speaks of morning gift, as a term commonly used to denote "the gift of gudes moveable or immoveable, quhilk the husband gives to his wife, the day or morning after the marriage." De Verb. Sign. vo. Dos.

MORNIE-MORNING. The morn after daylight breaks.

MOROWING, MOROWNING, s. Morning.

A morowing tyde, quhen at the sone so schene
Out raschit had his bemis frome the sky,
Ane auld gude man befor the yet wes sene.

King Hart, ii. 1.

So hapint it, intill ane fayr morowning,

—Thir halie freiris thus walk thai furth on band,

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 66.

Moes.G. maurgins, A.S. Isl. morgen, Su.G. morgon, id.

Mr. Tooke ingeniously traces the A.S. term, also written mergen, merien, merne, to Moes.G. mer-ian, A.S. merr-an, myrr-an, to dissipate, to disperse, to spread abroad, as suggesting the idea of the dispersion of the clouds or darkness. Divers. Purley, ii. 213, 214. One might suppose that Moes.G. maur-gins, were allied to the v. maurg-ian, to shorten, used by Ulph. Mark xiii. 20.; as the dawn of morning shortens the reign of darkness, or cuts off the night. The term is used by Ulph. expressly with respect to time. Ga-maurgida thans dagans; "He hath shortened the days." The days referred to, are those of darkness in a figurative sense.

To MORROCH, v. a. To soil.

S.

MORROW, s. A companion. V. MARROW.

S.

MORSING-HORN, s. A powder-flask; a priming horn.

MORSING POULDER. Powder used for priming. S.

MORT; A MORT.

He tellis thame ilk ane caik by caik;—
And eitis thame in the buith, that smaik;
—that he mort into ane rokkett.

Bannatyne Poems, p. 172. st. 7.

"Would that he died;" Fr. meurt, 3. p. s. ind. improperly used.

We will nocht ga with the but to the port,
That is to say, unto the Kings yet;
With the farder to go is nocht our det.
Quhilk is the yet that we call now the port,
Nocht but our graif to pas in as a mort.

Priests of Peblis, S. P. R. i. p. 47.

A phrase of this kind is still occasionally used. One is said to be all a mort, when he is stupified by a stroke or fall. It is also vulgar E. "Struck dumb, confounded." Grose's Class. Dict.

Perhaps from the Fr. phrase a mort, used in a variety of forms; blessé à mort, jugé à mort, &c.

MORT, adj. Fatal; deadly.

"We say, S. a mort cold, i. e. a deadly cold, an extreme cold, that may occasion death; and so Fr. mortaison, the dead time of the year." Rudd.

MORT, s. The skin of a sheep or lamb which dies. S.

MORT-woo, s. Wool of such skins. S.

MORT-CLOTH, s. The pall; the velvet covering carried over the corpse at a funeral, S.

"The fund for their support and relief arises from—the weekly collections on Sunday, (about £s. at an average,) mortcloths, proclamation money, and the rents of a few seats in the church." P. Glenbervie, Statist. Acc. xi. 452.
MORTFUNDYIT, part. pa. "Extremely cold; cold as death," Rudd. See Sup.

The dew droppis congelit on stibbil and rynd,
 And scharp hailstans mortfundyit of kynd,
 Hoppand on the thak and on the causay by.

V. MORT and FUNDY. Doug. Virgil, Prol. 202, 31.
MORT-MUMLINGIS, s. pl. Prayers muttered or mumbled for the dead.

Thay tyrit God with tryfillis tume trentalis,—
 Mantand mort-mumlingis mixed with monye leis.

Scott, Bannatyne Poems, p. 197.

MORTAGE, s. A particular mode of giving pledges; called also Deid Wad. V. WAD. S.

MORTAL,* adj. Dead drunk. S.

MORTAR, s. 1. Coarse clay of a reddish colour, S.
 "That coarse red clay, called mortar, is the basis of all the grounds in this part of Strathmore." P. Bendothy, Perth. Statist. Acc. xix. 339.

2. This clay as prepared for building, S.

The term is used precisely in the same sense, A. Bor.
 "Mortar, soil beaten up with water, formerly used in building ordinary walls, in contradiction to lime and sand, or cement." Gl. Grose.

It seems to have been denominated from its use in building, instead of what is properly called mortar in E.

MORTAR-STONE, s. A stone formerly used for preparing barley, by separating it from the husks. S.

MORTERSHEEN, s. That species of glanders, a disease in horses, which proves most fatal, S. See Sup.

MORTH o' CAULD. A severe cold; death of cold. S.

MORT-HEAD, s. 1. A death's head. 2. A large turnip excavated, with the representation of a face in the side, and a lighted candle put within. S.

To MORTIFY, v. a. To dispoise lands or money to any corporation, for certain uses, from which there can be no alienation of the property; to give in mortmain, S.

"Feudal subjects granted in donation to churches, monasteries, or other corporations, for religious, charitable, or public uses, are said—to be mortified." Erskine's Instit. B. 2. Tit. 4. s. 10.

"Mrs. Carmichael—mortified £70 Sterling for educating and providing books for poor children." P. Dirleton, Loth. Statist. Acc. iii. 197.

The phrase in our old laws is not only, mortificare terras, but dimittere terras ad manum mortuam. Skene thinks that it is meant to signify the very reverse of what it expresses, the disposition of lands to a society, that is, to such heirs as never die. De Verb. Sign. vo. Manus. The most natural idea as to the use of this phraseology seems to be, that property, thus disposed, cannot be recovered or alienated; the hand, to which it is given, being the same as if it were dead, incapable of giving it away to any other.

Amortise is used by Langland in the same sense.

If lewdemen knew this laten, they wold lok whom they geue,

And aduise them afore a fyue dayes or syxe,
 Er they amortised to monkes or chanons theyr rentes.
 Alas, lordes and ladies lewde, counsell haue ye,
 To giue from your heyres that your ayles you lefte,
 And giue it to bid for you to such as bene ryche.

P. Ploughman, Fol. 82. 1st Edit.

In that of 1561 we find elders used for ayles; perhaps as being better understood, for the meaning is nearly the same, ayles being undoubtedly from Fr. ayeul, a grandfather. Bid, i. e. pray.

MORTIFICATION, s. 1. The act of giving in mortmain, S. See Sup.

Mortifications may still be granted in favour of hospitals, either for the subsistence of the aged and infirm, or for the maintenance and education of indigent children, or in favour of universities, or other public lawful societies." Erskine's Instit. ut sup. s. 11.

2. The lands or money thus disposed, S.

"There are £400 Sterling of a fund for them, £200 of which is a mortification by Archibald Macneil, late tacksmen of Sanderay." P. Barry, Invern. Statist. Acc. xiii. 340.

"4. Tennant's mortification, in 1739, for the relief of widows.—5. Mitchell's mortification, &c." Glasgow, Statist. Acc. v. 524.

MASTER OF MORTIFICATIONS. An officer in a town who has charge of all the funds mortified to pious uses.

MORTIFIER, s. One who gives property in mortmain. S.

MORTYM, MORTON, s. A species of wild fowl. See S.

"They discharge any persons whatsoever, within this realme, in any wyse to sell or buy—Teilles, Atteilles, Goldinges, Mortyms, Schidderems," &c. Acts, Ja. VI. 1600. c. 23.

These are called, "Gordons, Mortons." Skene, Crimes, Tit. 3. c. 3. s. 9.

The Morton, the Murecok, the Myrsnyp in ane, Lychtit, as lerit men of law, by that lake.

Houlate, i. 17.

MORT-SAFE, s. An iron frame enclosing a coffin for some weeks to prevent robbery of the grave. S.

MORUNGEIOUS, adj. In very bad humour; often conjoined with another term expressing the same idea; as morungeous cankered, very ill-humoured, S.B.

MORWYNGIFT, s. The same with Morning Gift. S.

MOSINE, s. The touchhole of a piece of ordnance; metaph. used.

"They beeing deceiued, cry, Peace, peace, euen while God is putting the fierie lunt vnto the mosine of their sudden destruction." Z. Boyd's Last Battell, p. 374.

Hence perhaps the vulgar term motion-hole, used in the same sense, S.

MOSS, s. 1. A marshy or boggy place, S. Lancash.

Sone in a moss entryt ar thai,

That had wele twa myle lang of breid.

Out our that moss on fute thai yeid:

And in thair hand thair horss leid thai.

And it wes rycht a noyus way.

Barbour, xix. 738. 740.

2. A place where peats may be digged, S.

"The fuel commonly used is peat and turf, obtained from mosses in general within its bounds. But the mosses are greatly exhausted, and some of the gentlemen burn coals in their houses." P. New-Machar, Aberd. Statist. Acc. vi. 472.

Su.G. maase, id. also mossa; locus uliginosus. Hinc flotmoesa, locus palustris, ubi terra aquae subtus stagnanti supernatat. L.B. mussa, locus uliginosus. Flotmoesa, and our Flow-moss, q. v. are nearly allied.

MOSS, s. The Eriophorum vaginatum. Syn. Moss-crops. S.

MOSS-BLUTER, s. The snipe. S.

MOSS-BOIL, s. A fountain in a moss. S.

MOSS-BUMMER, s. The Bittern, S.A. Ardea stellaris, Linn.

"The S. name," as an ingenious friend has remarked to me, "is emphatic and characteristic; for the bittern frequents peat-bogs; and, in spring, often utters a loud hollow sound, its call of love;—to the great admiration of the country people, who believe that it produces this sound by blowing into a reed."

This name is perfectly analogous to that which it receives, S.B. V. MIRE-BUMPER.

MOSS-CHEEPER, s. 1. This seems to be the Marsh Titmouse of Willoughby, the Parus Palustris of Gesner. 2. The Tit-lark.

"Titlinga, Titling or Moss-cheeper," Sibb. Scot. iii. 22. V. Pennant's Zool. p. 393. V. CHEIP, v.

MOSS-CORNS, s. pl. Silverweed, an herb, S. Potentilla anserina, Linn. They are also called Moss-crops, and Moor-grass. The E. name is nearly allied to the Sw., which is silver-oert; Linn. Flor. Suec. 452. i. e. silver-herb. See Sup.

MOSS-CROPS, s. pl. Cotton-rush, and Hare's-tailed Rush, or Cana, S. Eriophorum angustifolium et vaginatum, Linn.

"Eriophorum polystachion, et vaginatum. Moss-crops, Scotis australibus." Lightfoot, p. 1080.

MOSS-FA'EN, adj. Applied to trees dug out of a moss. S.

MOSS-FAW, s. Any building in a ruinous state. S.

MOSS-HAG, s. A pit, or break in a moss. V. HAG. S.

MOSS-MINGIN, s. The Cranberry; Myrtillus occyccos. S.

MOSS-TROOPER, s. One of those "banditti who inhabited the marshy country of Liddisdale, and subsisted chiefly by rapine. People of this description in Ireland were called Bogtrotters, apparently for a similar reason." Gl. Sibb.

A fancied moss-trooper, the boy
The truncheon of a spear bestrode,
And round the hall, right merrily,
In mimic foray rode.

Lay of the Last Minstrel, c. 1. st. 19.

"This was the usual appellation of the marauders upon the Border.—'They are called Moss-troopers, because dwelling in the mosses, and riding in troops together. They dwell in the bounds, or meeting, of two kingdoms, but obey the laws of neither. They come to church as seldom as the 29th of February comes into the kalendar.'" Fuller's Worthies. Ibid. N.

"This is ridiculously defined, in Bailey's Dict., 'A sort of robbers which were in the northern parts of Scotland.'"

MOSTED, adj. Crop-eared. S.

MOT, s. A word. S.

MOT, auxiliary v. May. V. MAT.

MOTE, s. 1. A little hill or eminence; a barrow or tumulus.

"After this victory the Scottis and Pichtis with displayit banner convenit on ane lytyll mote." Bellend. Cron. Fol. 8. b.

The reuthfull than and deuote prince Enee
Performyt dewly thy funerall seruyce
Apoun the sepulture, as custome was and gyse,
Ane hepe of erd and litill mote gart vprayis.

Doug. Virgil, 204, 29.

"Rudd. gives various derivations of this word; but he seems to have overlooked the true one, which is certainly A.S. mot, Isl. mote, conventus hominum, a meeting; applied to a little hill, because anciently conventions were held on eminences: hence Folkmote, A.S. Thus Spenser, as quoted by Johns.

"Those hills were appointed for two special uses, and built by two several nations. The one is that which you call folkmotes, and signifies in the Saxon a meeting of folk."

A.S. mote, gemote, not only denoted a meeting, but also the place where it was held. V. Lye. Hence our Mote-hill of Scone derived its name. It is also called Omnis Terra, which is supposed to refer to its being formed by earth brought thither by the Barons and other subjects, which they laid before the king. V. Skene, Not. in Leg. Malc. c. 1. s. 2. But this is evidently a fable. Our Scotch kings anciently held their courts of justice on this tumulus; whence it was called Mons Placiti de Scona. It is indeed most probable, that it was formed artificially; as there is ground to suppose, the most of these hills were. Mounts are often called Laws, for the same reason for which these are called Motes, because the people met here, for the dispensation of justice. The phrase Mons Placiti is merely a version of Mote-hill, or Mute-hill, Leg. Malc. ut sup. For anciently the convention of the different orders of a state was called Placitum.

Placita vocabant, conventus publicos totius regni ordinum, quibus reges ipsi præerant, et in quibus de arduis regni negotiis et imminentibus bellis tractabatur. Annalis Francor. Bertinian. An. 763. Pipinus Rex habuit placitum suum Nivernis. Du Cange. Mota was used in the same sense with Placitum, curia, conventus; apparently formed from the A.S. word.

Du Cange shews, that Malbergium has the same meaning, in the Salic Law, with Mons Placiti, or Mute-hill in ours; from L.B. mall-um, placitum, a place of public convention, where judgment was given: Dan. male, maal, a cause or action, and berg, mons. Hence many places are still called Malls, because in ancient times these assemblies were held there. It has been supposed that A.S. mot, gemot, may be traced to Goth. motastada, used Luk. vii. 27. to denote the place of custom, q. the mootstadt, or place of meeting. However, a very ancient scholiast on Mat. xxii. 19. Shew me a penny, renders the A.S. word as signifying, mot thaes cyning. Now it has been observed by Junius, that if this mean numisma census, it would be in vain to look for another origin of motastada. But there is still a strong presumption, that this word is allied to A.S. gemot, especially as in Moes.G. we find the verb, mot-jan, to meet.

2. Mote is sometimes improperly used for a high hill, as for that on which the Castle of Stirling is built.

"The Castell was not only strang be wallis, bot richt strenthly be nature of the crag, standing on ane hye mote, quhare na passage was, bot at ane part." Bellend. Cron. B. xiv. c. 10.

3. A rising ground; a knoll, S.B.

When he was full within their hearing got,
With dreadful voice from off a rising mot,
He call'd to stop. — Ross's Helenore, p. 120.
V. MUTE, s. and v.

MOTE,* s. A crumb; a very small piece of any thing. S.

To MOTE, v. a. 1. To pick motes out of any thing.

2. To louse one's self or another. 3. v. n. To use means for discovering imperfections. S.

MOTTIE, MOTTY, adj. Abounding in motes or atoms. S.

Syne in a clap, as thick's the motty sin,
They hamphis'd her with unco fike and din.

Sin, i. e. sun. Ross's Helenore, p. 63.

MOTH, adj. Warm; sultry, Loth.; perhaps the same with Moch, mochy, q. v. the air being close.

MOTHER, s. The mother on beer, &c. the lees working up, S. Germ. moder, id.

MOTHER-BROTHER, s. A maternal uncle. S.

MOTHER-NAKED. V. MODYR-NAKYD.

MOTHER-SISTER, s. A maternal aunt. S.

MOTHER-WIT, s. Common sense; sagacity; discretion, S. q. that wisdom which one has by birth, as distinguished from that which may be viewed as the fruit of instruction.

"No mother-wit, naturall philosophie, or carnall wisdom, is a sufficient rule to walk by in a way acceptable to God." Ferguson on Ephesians, p. 361.

"An ounce of mother-wit is worth a pound of clergy;" Ferguson's S. Prov. p. 7.

MOTTYOCH'D, part. adj. Matted. V. MUTTYOCH'D. S.

MOU, s. The notch in the end of the beam, into which the rope used in drawing a plough is fastened. S.

MOU-PIN, s. A pin which fastens this rope to the beam. S.

MOUD, s. A moth. S.

MOUDIE, MOWDIE, MOWDY, s. A mole. S.

MOUDIE-SKIN, s. A mole's skin. S.

To MOVE OFF, v. n. To descend according to a certain lineage, in reference to heritable property. S.

MOVIR, MOUIR, MURE, adj. Mild; gentle.

The Kyng than mad hym this awnswere
On movir and on fayre manere.

Wyntown, vii. 6. 102.

Mr. MacPherson inquires, if this be "the same with mure in B. Harry?" It certainly is.

Ladyis wepyt, that was bathe mylde and mur.

Wallace, ii. 209, MS.

Perhaps from Belg. morwe, murw, Su.G. moer, A.S. meaw, mollis, Alem. muruci, teneritudine; Schilter. Hence, MOVIRLY, adv. Mildly.

The Kyng than herd hym mocyrlly,
And awnsweryd hym all gudlykly.

Wyntown, vi. 18. 243.

MOULD-BOARD, s. A wooden board on the Scottish plough, which turned over the furrow. S.

To MOULIGH, v. n. To whimper; to whine. S.

MOULY HEELS. V. MULES.

MOULS, MOWLES, s. pl. Chilblains. Mooly heels. S.

To MOUNT,* v. n. To make ready; to make all necessary preparation for setting off. S.

MOUNTAIN-DEW, s. Highland whisky. S.

MOUNTAIN DULSE, Mountain Laver, S. Ulva Montana, Linn.

MOUNTAIN-MEN, s. pl. 1. The persecuted Presbyterians in Scotland, who, during the tyrannical reigns of Charles II. and James II. were forced to flee to the mountains for refuge. 2. The Presbyterians in this country who do not acknowledge the lawfulness of the present civil government, adhering to the principles of those who disowned the authority of Charles II. and James. V. HILL-FOLK. S.

MOUNTH, s. A mountain. V. MONTH.

MOUNTING, s. The ornamental trimmings or furniture of any piece of dress. S.

To MOUP, v. a. 1. To nibble; to mump; "generally used of children, or of old people, who have but few teeth, and make their lips move fast, though they eat but slow;" Gl. Ramsay. S. pron. moop.

For fault of fude constrenyt so thay war
The vthir metis all consumyt and done,
The paringis of thare brede to moup vp sone.

Doug. Virgil, 208, 48.

My sheep and kye neglect to moup their food,
And seem to think as in a dumpish mood.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 15.

O, may thou ne'er forgather up
Wi' ony blastit, moorland toop;
But ay keep mind to moop an' mell
Wi' sheep o' credit like thysel!

Burns, iii. 79.

In the same sense a mouse is said "to moup at cheese," Rudd.

2. Used metaph., to impair by degrees.

"Ye have been bred about a mill, ye have mouped a' your manners;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 82.

Probably corrupted from E. mump, which Seren. derives from Sw. mums-a, and this from mun, the mouth, q. muns-a, to labour with the mouth.

To MOUP, v. n. To fall off; as, He's beginnin' to moup. S.

To MOUPER, v. a. To eat in the way of continued nibbling. S.

MOURY, adj. Apparently, mellow. S.

MOURIE, s. A stratum of gravel mingled with sand. S.

MOUSE, s. The outermost fleshy part of a leg of mutton, when dressed; the bulb of flesh on the extremity of the shank, S. pron. moose. When roasted, it formerly used to be prepared with salt and pepper.

Teut. muys, carnosa pars in corpore; Belg. muys van de hand, the muscle of the hand, or the fleshy part between the thumb and middle finger; Alem. musi, lacerti; Raban. de part. corp. ap. Schilter.

MOUSE-WEB, s. V. MOOSE-WEB.

To MOUT, v. n. To moult; to throw the feathers, S. See Sup.

"Anentis birdis and wylde foulis,—that na man distroy thair nestis, nor thair eggis, nor yit slay wylde foulis in mouting tyme." Acts, Ja. II. 1457. c. 94. Edit. 1566. c. 85. Murray.

Teut. myt-en, plumas amittere sive mutare.

To MOUT awa', (pron. moot), v. a. To take away piecemeal, S. nearly allied in signification to E. fritter. Hence, MOUTIT, part. pa. Diminished, from whatever cause; scanty; bare.

This is applied both to things and to persons. Bread is said to be moutit awa', when gradually lessened. It especially respects the conduct of children in carrying it away piecemeal in a clandestine manner. A person is said to be moutit, or moutit-like, when he waxes lean from a decline, or decreases in size from any other cause.

It is the same word which Doug. uses to express the stunted appearance of declining trees:

Not [nocht] throw the soil bot muskane treis sprowtit;—

Auld rottin runtis quhairn na sap was leifit;
Moch, all waist, widderit with granis moutit.

Palice of Honour, x. 3. Edin. Edit. 1579.

i. e. naked boughs, or branches. Quhairn is evidently an errat. for quhairin. V. MOCH.

It is probably, as Sibb. conjectures, a metaph. sense of S. mout, E. moult, to cast the feathers; Teut. myt-en, id. Lat. mut-o, -are, to change, is viewed as the radical word. Nor can any resemblance more fitly express the idea of decrease or diminution, than that borrowed from the appearance of a bird when moulting. It must be observed, however, that Germ. muss-en, simply signifies to lop, to curtail; also, mutz-en, Belg. moets-en, Ital. mozz-are, id. Hence, according to Wachter, E. moot, to pluck up by the roots; and, Fr. mouton, aries castratus; and a phrase used by the Swiss, mutschly brots, frustum panis.

MOUTCHIT, MUTCHIT, s. A disrespectful term applied to children; similar to smatchet. S.

To MOUTER, v. a. To take multure, or the fee in kind, for grinding corn, S.

It is good to be merry and wise,
Quoth the miller, when he mouter'd twice.

V. MULTURE, Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 45.

To MOUTER, (pron. mooter), v. a. The same with mout awa', S.

This is probably derived from the verb Mout; or synon. with it, as Teut. myt-en, is used in the same sense with muyt-en, to moult. It might, however, be viewed as an oblique sense of the verb immediately preceding, because of the great diminution of the quantity of grain sent to a mill, in consequence of the various dues exacted in kind.

M O W

To MOUTER, v. n. To fret; to fall off. S.

MOUTH-POKE, s. The bag suspended from a horse's neck, out of which he eats his corn. S.

To MOUTLE, v. a. To nibble; to fritter away. S.

MOUTON, s. A French gold coin brought into S. in the reign of David II.

"This gold coin had the impression of the Agnus Dei, which the vulgar mistook for a sheep; hence it got the ridiculous name of mouton." Lord Hailes, Annals, ii. 231.

The meaning undoubtedly is, that this name was imposed by the vulgar in France.

To MOUZE, v. n. To plunder clandestinely. S.

MOW, MOUE, s. A heap; a pile. S. bing, synon. See S.

He tuk a cultir hate glowand,
That yeit wis in a fyr brynnand,
And went him to the mekill hall,
That then with corn wes fyllyt all;
And heych wp in a mow it did;
Bot in full lang wes nocht thar hid.

Barbour, iv. 117. MS.

A mow off corn he gyhyt thaim about,
And closyt weill, nane mycht persave without.

Wallace, xi. 338. MS.

— Quhen the grete bing was vpbeildit hale,— Aboue the mowe the foresaid bed was maid,
Quharin the figure of Enee scho layd.

Doug. Virgil, 117, 48.

The S. word retains the sense of A.S. mowe, acervus. This, I suspect, is also the proper sense of the E. word, although explained by Johnson, as denoting the "loft or chamber where any corn or hay is laid up."

MOW, (pron. moo) s. 1. The mouth, S.

In cairful bed full oft, in myne intent,
To tuitche I do appear

Now syde nor [now] breist, now sueit mow redolent,
Of that sueit bodye deir. Maitland Poems, p. 216.

Fr. moue is used for the mouth, but rather as expressing an ungraceful projection of the lips. Mow may be from Su.G. mun, os, oris; but perhaps rather from Teut. muyt, id.; l being generally sunk at the end of a word, according to the S. pronunciation. I can scarcely think, that it is E. mouth, A.S. muth, softened in pronunciation, although generally printed in our time, mou, as if this were the case. For I recollect no instance of th being quiescent in S.

2. A distorted mouth; an antic gesture.

— And Browny als, that can play kow,
Behind the claith with mony a mow.

Roull's Cursing, MS. Gl. Compl. p. 330.

3. Used in pl. in the sense of jest. Is it mows or earnest;

Is it in jest or seriously? Nae mows, no jest, S. See S.

The millar was of manly mak,

To meit him was nae mowis. Chr. Kirk, st. 19.

Thair was nae mowis thair them amang;

Naithing was hard but heavy knocks.

Battle Harlaw, Evergreen, i. 86. st. 19.

Callender observes that Su.G. mopa signifies illudere. But mys-a, subridere, has more resemblance. It seems, however, borrowed from Fr. faire le moue, to make mouths at one.

To Mow, v. n. To jest; to speak in mockery. See Sup.

Now trittill trattill, trow low,

(Quod the thrid man) thow dois bot mow.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 267.

MOWAR, s. A mocker, one who holds up others to ridicule.

M O W

Juvenall, like ane mowar him allone,

Stude scornand everie man as thay yeid by.

From mow, s. 2. q. v.

Palice of Honour, ii. 51.

To MOW-BAND, v. a. To mention; to articulate, S.

Keep her in tune the best way that ye can,

But never mou-band till her onie man;

For I am far mistaen, gin a' her care

Spring not frae some of them that missing are.

Ross's Helenore, p. 41.

It is sometimes applied to cramp terms; at other times to those which are so indelicate that they ought not to be expressed, S.

And gossips, and het pints, and clashin',

Mony a lie was there;

And mony an ill-far'd tale, too,

That I to mow-band wad blush.

Jamieson's Popul. Ball. i. 295.

This may be from Fr. moue and band-er, q. to bind the mouth. But I suspect that it is rather an oblique sense of Teut. muyt-band-en, capistrare, capistrum imponere, iscellam ori appendere; Kilian, to muzzle. V. Mow.

MOW-BAND, s. A halter. S.

MOW-BIT, s. A morsel of food, S.

Wi' skelps like this fock sit but seenil down

To wether-gammon or how-towdy brown;

Sair dung wi' dule, and fley'd for coming debt,

They gar their mou'-bits wi' their incomes met.

q. a bit for the mouth.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 75.

MOW-CUE, s. A twisted halter for curbing a young horse. S.

MOWBEIRARIS, s. pl. Apparently, gleaners in the harvest field who carried away heaps of grain, partly taken from the sheaves. S.

MOWCH, s. A spy, an eavesdropper. See Sup.

Auld berdit mowch! gude day! gude day!

Lyndsay, S. P. Repr. ii. 126.

Fr. mousche, mouche, id.

MOWDEWARP, s. A mole. S.

MOWDY, MOWDIE, MOUDIE, s. A mole. S.

MOWDIE-BROD, s. V. MOULD-BOARD. S.

MOWDY-HILLAN, s. A mole-hill. S.

MOWDIE-HILLOCK, s. A heap of earth thrown up by a mole. S.

MOWDIE-HOOP, s. A mole-hill. S.

MOWDIE-MAN, s. A mole-catcher. S.

MOWDIE-WARK, s. A mole. V. MODYWART. S.

MOWDIEWORT-BURD, s. The mould-board of a plough; as throwing up the mold like a mole. S.

MOWDIWART, s. An improper designation for a coin. S.

MOW-FRACHTY, adj. Agreeable to the taste; palatable. S.B.

From mou, mow, the mouth, and frachty. This, as signifying desirable, might be traced to Moes.G. friks, avidus, cupidus; pl. frikai, used in composition. But perhaps it is rather from fracht, a freight or lading; q. an agreeable freight for the mouth.

MOWE, s. Dust, S.

Rudd., illustrating mold, by A.S. molde, Fland. mul, &c. says; "Hence S. mowe, for dust, as Peat mowe, i. e. peat dust." V. PEAT-MOW.

MOWE, s. A motion.

— Of all the mowis in this mold, sen God merkit man, &c. Doug. Virgil, Prol. 239, a. 54.

Move is sometimes used as a s. in the same sense, S.

MOWELL, adj. Movable. S.

MOWENCE, s. Motion; progress; or perhaps the dependance of one event on another; Fr. mouvance, dependance.

M U D

Bot God, that is off maist powesté,
Reserwyttill his maiesté,
For to know, in his prescience,
Off allryn tyme the mowence. Barbour, i. 134. MS.

MOWR, s. Mock; jeer; flout. S.

MOWSTER, s. Muster; exhibition of forces.
"In the mene tyme the erle of Ros come with mony folkis to Perth, & maid his mowster to the Kyng." Bellend. Cron. B. xv. c. 13.

MOZY, adj. Dark in complexion; a black mozy body, one who is swarthy, S. Isl. mos-a, musco tingere?

MOZIE, s. A weak, stupid-looking person. S.

MOZIE, adj. Sharp; acrimonious; sour-looking. S.

MUA SICKNESS, s. A disease of sheep; the rot. S.

MUCHT, auxiliary v. Might. S.

To MUCK, v. a. 1. To carry out dung; to cleanse the stable or cow-house, S. Hence the name of the Jacobite song, The mucking of Geordie's byre.
2. To lay on dung; to manure. S.
Although the verb, as well as the substantive, is used in E., this is a sense apparently peculiar to S. Su.G. mock-a, stabula purgare, fimum auferre; from mock, fimus, which Ihere seems to view as allied to Isl. mock-a, coacervare. See S.

MUCK, s. Dung. S.

MUCK-CREEL, s. A large hamper formerly used for carrying out dung to the fields. S.

MUCK-FAIL, s. The sward mixed with dung, used for manure, S.B.
"The practice of cutting up sward for manure, or muck-fail, was prohibited by an Act of Parliament, made for the county of Aberdeen, as long ago as 1685, under a penalty of 100l. Scots bolls, toties quoties, to the masters of the ground." P. Alford, Aberd. Stat. Acc. xv. 456, N. There is some mistake here as to the penalty. V. FAIL.

MUCK-MIDDEN, s. A dunghill. V. MIDDEN. S.

MUCKLE, adj. Great. V. MEKIL.

MUCKLE-CHAIR, s. An old-fashioned arm-chair. S.

MUCKLE-COAT, s. A great-coat. S.

MUCKLE-MOUD, adj. Having a wide mouth. S.

MUCKLENESS, s. Largeness in size. S.

MUCKLE-WORTH, adj. Of great value. S.

MUD, s. A small nail or tack, commonly used in the heels of shoes in the country, Loth.
It differs from what is called a tacket, as having a very small head.

To MUDDLE, v. a. "To drive, beat, or throw," Gl. Sibb.; perhaps rather to overthrow; used to express the ease and expedition with which a strong man overthrows a group of inferior combatants, and at the same time continuance in his work.
*Heich Hutchoun with ane hissill ryss,
To red can throw thame rummil;
He muddlit thame down lyk ony myss;
He was na baty-bummil. Chr. Kirk, st. 16.*
Allied perhaps to A.S. midl-an, to tame; or Su.G. midl-a, to divide, to make peace between those at variance.

To MUDDLE, v. n. 1. To be busy at work, while making little progress, S. Pingle, synon. Niddle is also nearly allied in signification.
2. To be busy in a clandestine way, doing work although unperceived. 3. To have carnal knowledge of a female. S.
Teut. moedelick, molestus, laboriosus; moed, Su.G. moeda, molestia.

To MUDDLE, v. a. To tickle a person, at the same time lying upon him to keep him down. S.

M U I

MUDY. V. Mody.

MWDE. V. Mode.

To MUDGE, v. n. To move; to stir; to budge, S.

To MUDGE, v. a. To move; to stir. S.

MUDGE, s. A motion; the act of stirring, S.

MUDGEONS, s. pl. Motions of the countenance, denoting discontent, scorn, &c. V. MUDYEON. S.

MUDYEON, s.
With mudyeons & murgeons, & moving the brain,
They lay it, they lift it, they louse it, they lace it;
They grap it, they grip it, it greets and they grane;
They bed it, they baw it, they bind it, they brace it.
Montgomerie, Watson's Coll. iii. 21.
This, if it does not simply signify, motions, from Mudge, v. may denote laborious and troublesome operations, although of a trifling kind; Teut. moed, Germ. mude, labor; Su.G. moeda, molestia. Usurpatur, says Ihere, tum de animi aerumnis, quam de corporis fatigatione.

To MUE, or Moo, v. n. To low as a cow. It is pron. in both ways, S.
Germ. mu, vox vaccae naturalis; Inde muhe, bucula, muh-en, mugire; Wachter. V. Bu, v.

MUFFITIES, s. pl. A kind of mittens, made either of leather or of knitted worsted, worn by old men, often for the purpose of keeping their shirts clean, Ang. See Sup.

MUFFLES, s. pl. Mittens, gloves that do not cover the fingers, used by women, S.
Fr. mouffle, Belg. mouffel, a glove for winter.

To MUG, MUGGLE, v. n. To drizzle. S.

MUG, MUGGLE, s. A drizzling rain. S.

MUGGY, MUGGLY, adj. Drizzly. S.

To MUG, v. a. To soil; to defile. MUGGIN, part. pr. soiling one's self; using dirty practices in any way. S.

To MUG, v. a. To strike or buck a ball out from a wall, as is done in the game of the wa' baw. S.

MUGGED, adj. Probably, rough; shaggy. S.

MUGGER, s. One who deals in earthen vessels or mugs, hawking them through the country. S.

MUGGER, s. The herb properly called Mugwort. S.

MUGGY, adj. Tipsy, a low word. S.

MUGGIE, s. The hole into which a ball is rolled. S.

To MUGGIE, v. a. To put the ball into the hole. S.

MUGGS, s. pl. A particular breed of sheep, S. See S.
"The sheep formerly in this country, called Muggs, were a tender, slow feeding animal, with wool over most of their faces, from whence the name of Muggs." P. Ladykirk, Berwicks. Statist. Acc. viii. 73.
Qu. Is it meant that this is the signification of the word? This sheep itself is of E. extract, whatever be the origin of the term.
In the lower part of the parish, there is the long legged English Mug, with wool, long, fine, and fit for combing." P. Twynholm, Kirkcudb. Statist. Acc. xv. 86.

MUIR, s. A heath, &c. V. MURE.

MUIR-BURN. V. MURE-BURN.

MUIR-ILL, s. A disease to which black cattle are subject; as some affirm, in consequence of eating a particular kind of grass, which makes them stale blood, S. See Sup.
"It is infested with that distemper, so pernicious to cattle, called the Wood ill or Muir-ill; the effects of which may, however, be certainly prevented by castor oil, or any other laxative." P. Humble, Haddingt. Statist. Acc. vi. 160.
"Muir-ill.—This disorder is frequently confounded with the murrain or gargle, though the symptoms seem to be different.

M U L

"The muir-ill is supposed to be caused by eating a poisonous vegetable, or a small insect common on muir grounds. This produces a blister near the root of the tongue, the fluid of which, if swallowed, generally proves fatal to the animal. The disorder is indicated by a swelling of the head and eyes, attended with a running at the mouth, or discharge of saliva. The animal exhibits symptoms of severe sickness, and difficulty of breathing, which are soon followed by a shivering of the whole body, when the animal may be reckoned in imminent danger. On the first appearance of these symptoms, take the animal home, draw forth its tongue, and remove the blister completely with a piece of harn or coarse linen cloth. The part affected must then be rubbed with a mixture of salt and oatmeal.—I have saved a score of cattle by this simple process alone." Prize Essays, Highl. Soc. S. ii. 217. V. ILL.

MUIR-BAND, s. A hard subsoil composed of clayey sand impervious to water. S.

MUIRFOWL EGG. A species of pear. S.

MUIS, s. pl. Bushels.

—"Annibal send to Cartage thre muis of gold ryngis, quhilkis he hed gottin on the fingeris of the maist nobil Romans that var slane, for ane testimonial of his grit victorie." Compl. S. p. 175.

"Fr. muids & muid, from Lat. mod-ius.—The word is in common use for a measure." Gl.

2. "Heaps; parcels," Sibb. V. Mow, s. 1.

MUIST, MUST, s. Musk, Border.

Thy smell was fell, and stronger than muist.

Montgomerie, Watson's Coll. iii. 2.

Redolent odour vp from the rutis sprent,

—Aromaticke gummies, or ony fyne potioun;

Must, myr, aloyes, or confection.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 401, 43.

Corrupted from Fr. musque, Lat. mosch-us.

MUIST-BOX, s. A box for smelling at; a musk-box. S.

MUITH, adj. 1. Warm and misty, as applied to the weather. 2. Soft; calm; cheerful; jovial. S.

MUKERAR, s. A miser; a usurer.

The wrache walis and wryngis for this warldis wrak,

The mukerar murnys in his mynd the meil gaif na pryce.

V. MOCHRE. Doug. Virgil, Prol. 238, b. 8.

MUKITLAND AITTES. Oats raised from ground that has been manured. S.

MULDES, MOOLS, s. 1. Earth in a pulverized state, in general, S. See Sup.

2. The earth of the grave, S.

—Did e'er this lyart head of mine

Think to have seen the cauldrie mools on thine?

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 9.

"He'll get enough one day, when his mouth's full of mools," S. Prov. "spoken of covetous people, who will never be satisfied while they are alive;" Kelly, p. 161.

3. The dust of the dead.

Nor I na nany send to the sege of Troy,

Nor yit his fader Anchises graue schent,

I nouthir the muldis nor banis therof rent.

Doug. Virgil, 114, 46.

Rudd. renders this "the ground which is thrown on the dead in their graves." But it is the translation of cineres, used by Virg.

"O wherein is your bonny arms,

That wont to embrace me?"

"By worms they're eaten; in mools they're rotten;

"Behold, Margaret, and see;

133

M U L

"And mind, for a' your mickle pride,

"Sae will become o' thee."

Jamieson's Popul. Ball. i. 89.

Moes.G. mulda, Su.G. mull, A.S. mold, Isl. mol, mold, dust. According to Ihre, the root is mol-a, comminuere, q. to beat small. Hence, MULDE-METE, s. 1. A funeral banquet.

Sum vthir perordour caldronis gan vpset,

And skatterit endlangis the grene the colis het,

Vnder the spetis swakkis the roste in threte,

The raw spaldis ordanit for the mulde mete.

Doug. Virgil, 130, 47.

2. "The last food that a person eats before death. To give one his muld mete, Prov. Scot. i. e. to kill him;" Rudd.

"Sw. multen, putridus; multna, to moulder," Gl. Sibb.

But it is evidently from the preceding word.

MULDRIE, s. Moulded work.

—Fullyery, bordouris of many precious stone,

Subtill muldrie wrocht mony day agone.

Fr. moulerie, id. Palice of Honour, iii. 17.

To MULE, MOOL, v. a. 1. To crumble, S.

Isl. mol-a, id. confringere, comminuere, mola, a crumb.

The v. smol-a, is used in Su.G. contracted, as would seem, from smaa, little, and mola, a fragment. Isl. smaa mole, in Dan. smule, minuta mica; G. Andr. vo. Mola.

2. To mule in; to crumble bread into a vessel, that it may be soaked with some liquid, S.

"Ye ken nathing but milk and bread, when it is mool'd in to you;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 82.

Su.G. moelia, bread, or any thing else bruised and steeped; Mod. Sax. mulia.

3. To mule in with one; to have intimacy with one, as those who crumble their bread into one vessel; q. to eat out of the same dish, S. See Sup.

I wadna mule in with him, I would have no intimate fellowship with him.

Mony'll bite and sup, with little din,

That wadna gree a straik at mooling in.

Ross's Helenore, p. 85.

MULIE, adj. Full of crumbs; or of pulverized earth. S.

MULINESS, s. The state of being full of crumbs, &c. S.

MULIN, MOOLIN, MULOCK, s. A crumb, S. Teut. moelie, offa; Alem. gemalanex, pulverisatum, Schilter, vo. Malen. V. the v. See Sup.

MULE, s. A mould; as a button-mule. S.

MULES, s. pl. Kibes; chilblains; most commonly moolie heels, S. Fr. mules. See Sup.

MULETTIS, s. pl. Great mules. S.

MULIS, s. pl.

Thairfoir, Sir Will, I wald ye wist,

Your Metaphysick fails;

Gae leir yit a yeir yit

Your Logick at the schulis,

Sum day then ye may then Pass Master with the Mulis.

Cherrie and Slae, st. 60

—Sed logicam saltem unum disce per annum,

Perfectè ut valeas asininum condere pontem.

Lat. Vers. 1631.

I am at loss to know whether this was used as a nickname for the Professors of a University, who were employed to examine candidates for graduation, or if there had been any ancient custom of putting a pair of slippers on the feet of him who was graduated; as a badge of his new honour. V. MULLIS.

MULL, MAOHL, s. A promontory, S.

"Near the very top of the Mull, (which signifies a promontory), and the boundary of the mainland to the north-east, a chapel had been reared in the dark ages;" Barry's Orkney, p. 25.

"Maol, adj. signifies bare or bald, as ceann maol, bald-head. Hence it is applied to exposed points of land or promontories, and then becomes a substantive noun, and is written maoil, e. g. maoil of Kintyre, maoil of Galloway, maoil of Cara," &c. P. Gigha, Argyles. Statist. Acc. viii. 57. N.

Sibb. mentions Isl. mul, a steep bold cape, Gl. But I have not met with this word elsewhere. Mule, however, denotes a beak; os procerum ac eminens rostrum; G. Andr. p. 181. Alem. mula, rostrum, Schilter. Now as naes, ness, a nose, is used to denote a promontory, from its resemblance to the prominence of the nose in the face; for the same reason, mule might have been used by the ancient Goths in a similar sense.

It confirms this idea that Mule is, in Orkney and Shetland, used in composition, or in the names of places, in a similar sense.

"The aera of this fortification, and of others of the same kind, I leave it to be judged upon, as such places are quite frequent, both in Shetland, such as the Mule of Unst, and in the other end of the mainland of Orkney, called the Mule-head of Deerness, the Burgh of Murray, and indeed in all other places denominated Burghs, that is to say, insulated headlands projecting to the sea." P. Birsay, Orkn. Statist. Acc. xiv. 324, N.

MULL, s. A virgin; a young woman.

Silver and gold that I nicht get,
Beisands, broches, robes and rings,
Frelie to gife, I wald noch let,
To please the mulls attour all things.

This is explained by what follows.

Bettir it were a man to serve
With honour brave beneath a sheild,
Nor her to pleis, thocht thou sould sterve,
That will not luke on the in eild.

Kennedy, Evergreen, i. 116.

A.S. meoule, meoula, a virgin, Hickes. Gramm. A.S. p. 128. Moes.G. mawilo, a damsel, Mar. v. 41. a dimin. from mawi, id.; as barnilo, a child, Luk. i. 76. is formed from barn.

It is not improbable that Alem. mal, desponsatio, ma-heldag, dies desponsationis, gemahela, mahela, sponsa, gemal, conjux, and mahalen, desponsare, are to be traced to mawilo as their root.

MULL, s. A mule.

"Thou may considder that thay pretend nathing ellis, bot onlie the manteinance and uphald of thair bairdit mulls, augmenting of thair unsatiable avarice, and continuall down thringing and swallowung upe thy pur lieges." Knox's Hist. p. 19.

Mules, Lond. Ed. p. 20. In MS. ii. it is barbed mules.

To MULLER, v. a. To crumble, S. either corr. from E. moulder, or a dimin. from MULE, v. q. v.

MULLIGRUMPHS, s. pl. In the mulligrumphs, sullen; discontented; sulky. S.

MULLIS, s. pl. A kind of slippers, without quarters, usually made of fine cloth or velvet, and adorned with embroidery, anciently worn by persons of rank in their chambers. See Sup.

A satirical poet describes the more general use of them as a proof of the increase of pride and luxury.

Et tout est a la mode de France.

Thair dry scarpenis, baythe tryme and meit;
Thair mullis glitteran on thair feit.

Maitland Poems, p. 184.

Fr. mules, id. pantofles, high slippers; Ital. mulo, Hisp. mula; Teut. muyl, muleus, sandalium; calceamenti genus alto solo, Kilian. L.B. mula, crepida, Du Cange. Mullei, Isidor. p. 1310. Mullei similes sunt cothurnorum solo alto: superiore autem parte cum osseis vel aereis malleolis ad quos lora deligabantur.

Menage derives the name from mullei, which, he says, were a certain kind of shoes worn by the kings of Alba, and afterwards by the Patricians; Isidore, from their reddish colour, as resembling the mullet. Dicta autem sunt a colore rubro, qualis est mulli piscis.

The council of Tarraco, A. 1591. forbade the use of ornamented mullis to the clergy. Nullus clericus subuculam collari, et manicis rugatis seu lactucatis deferat—sed nec Mulas ornamentis aureis, argenteis, aut sericis ornari patiat. Du Cange, vo. Mula.

It is the mule or mulo of the Pope, ornamented with a cross of gold, that is touched with the lips, when his votaries are said to kiss his toe. Le Pape a une croix d'or au bout de sa mule, qu'on va baiser avec un grand respect; Dict. Trev.

MULLOCH, s. The crumbled remains of a peat-stack. S.

MULREIN, s. The frog-fish; toad-fish. S.

MULTIPLE/MULTIPLIE, s. Number; quantity.

Dicson, he said, wait thow thair multiplé?

iii thousand men thair power mycht noch be.

Wallace, ix. 1704, MS.

i. e. "Knowest thou their number?"

Qubilk suld be ane gryt exempil till al princis, that thai gyf noch there trest in ane particular pouer of multiplie of men, bot rathere to set there trest in God." Compl. S. p. 123.

Fr. multiple, manifold; multiplié, the multiplicand. The term is evidently used improperly.

MULTURE, MOUTER, s. The fee for grinding grain; properly that paid to the master of the mill, S.

The myllare mettis the multure wyth ane mete skant.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 238, a, 48.

"The multure is a quantity of grain, sometimes in kind, as wheat, oats, pease, &c.; and sometimes manufactured, as flour, meal, sheeling, &c. due to the proprietor of the mill, or his tacksman the multurer, for manufacturing the corn." Erskine's Instit. B. 2. tit. 9. s. 19.

"Millers take ay the best mouter wi' their ain hand." Ferguson's S. Prov. p. 25.

"Molter, the toll of a mill. North." Gl. Grose. Mooter, Lancashire, id.

Fr. mouture, (as the S. word is pron.) L.B. molitura, from Lat. mol-o. Hence, MULTURER, s. The tacksman of a mill, S.

MUM, s. A mutter, S.B. See Sup.

Mumme is used for mutter by Langland. Speaking of lawyers, he says;

Thou mightest better mete the mist on Malverne hils,
Than get a mumme of her mouth, til money be shewed.

P. Ploughman, Fol. 3, b.

The word might originally signify to intimate any thing by gestures, rather than by words; from Teut. momm-en, larvam agere; whence, as would seem, mommel-en, Su.G. muml-a, to mutter.

MUM CHAIRTIS, s. pl. See Sup.

Use not to skift athort the gait,
Nor na mum chairtis, air nor lait.
Be na dainser, for this daingeir
Of yow be tane an ill consait
That ye ar habill to waist geir.

Maitland Poems, p. 329.

Mr. Pinkerton leaves this as not understood. From its connexion with dancer it certainly respects some amusement. Chairtis are undoubtedly cards, and refer to the amusement which bears this name. Cairts is to this day the vulgar pron. Teut. momme signifies a mask; larva, persona; Kilian. Perhaps mum chairtis may simply signify cards with figures on them, as the figures impressed may justly enough, from their grotesque appearance, be called larvae. Mention is made, however, in the account of an entertainment given by Cardinal Wolsey, of playing at mum-chance, which, Warton says, is a game of hazard with dice. Hist. iii. 155. It may therefore be an error of some transcriber. What confirms this conjecture is, that mum-chance is mentioned as a game at cards in an old English poem on the Death of the Mass by William Roy, written in Wolsey's time. In describing the Bishops, he says,

M U N

To play at the cards and the dice,
Some of them are nothing nice;
Both at hazard and mum-chance.
They drink in gay golden bowls,
The blood of poor simple souls
Perishing for laik of sustenance. Ellis's Spec. ii. 15.

To MUMGE, v. n. To grumble; to fret; generally applied to children when any request is refused. S.

MUMMING, s. Perhaps muttering.

With mumming and humming,
The Bee now seeks his byke.

Burel's Pilg. Watson's Coll. ii. 26.

V. CALICRAT, and MUM.

MUMM'D, part. pa. Tingling; the disagreeable sensation felt, when the hands are too quickly warmed. S.

MUMNESS, s. The state of being benumbed. S.

To MUMP, v. n. 1. To hint; to aim at, S.

"I know your meaning by your mumping;" S. Prov. Kelly, p. 183. addressed to those who either cannot, or do not express themselves distinctly.

Ye may speak plainer, lass, gin ye incline,
As, by your mumping, I maist guess your mind.

Shirrefs' Poems, p. 94.

2. To speak in an affected mincing style. S.

Sibb. explains mumping, "using significant gestures, mumming; Teut. mumm-en, mommium sive larvam agere; to frolic in disguise; momme, larva, persona."

MUMP, s. A whisper; a surmise. S.

To MUMP, v. a. Apparently, to mimic in a ludicrous way. 2. To hint; to aim at. S.

To MUMP, v. n. To hitch; to move by succussion. S.

MUMP-THE-CUDDIE, s. A play of children in which they place themselves on their hunkers or hams, with a hand in each hough, and in this position hop forward, he who first arrives at the goal gaining the prize. V. CURCUDDOCH. S.

To MUMPLE, v. n. To seem as if about to vomit. S.

MUMT-LIKE, adj. Having the appearance of stupor, Loth, q. mummed, mummit, resembling one who assumes a fictitious character. V. MUMP.

MUN, v. aux. Must. V. MON.

MUN, MUNN, s. A short-hafted spoon, Galloway, cuttie, synon. See Sup.

"Each person of the family had a short-hafted spoon made of horn, which they called a mun, with which they supped, and carried it in their pocket, or hung it by their side." P. Tungland, Statist. Acc. ix. 326.

"Sup with your head, the Horner is dead, he's dead that made the munns;" S. Prov. Kelly, p. 295.

Can this be allied to Isl. mund, mun, the mouth?

MUN, s. A small and trifling article. S.

MUN, s. Man. S.

M U R

MUNDIE, s. "Expl. pitiful son of the earth; dimin. of man." Sibb.

Auld guckis, the mundie, sho is a gillie,
Scho is a colt-foill, not a fillie.—

Philotus, S.P.R. iii. 37.

Perhaps it is rather allied to Teut. mondigh, pubes, major annis; puer quatuor decem annorum, Kilian. Mondigh also signifies loquacious.

MUNDS, s. The mouth. I'll gie ye i' the munds, I will give you a stroke on the mouth; a phrase used by boys, Loth.

This is undoubtedly a very ancient word. Alem. Germ. mund, id. os, hiatus inter duo labra; Moes.G. munths, whence A.S. muth, E. mouth, Isl. Sw. mun. Wachter mentions a variety of names into the composition of which this word enters.

To MUNGE, v. n. To mumble; to grumble. S.

MUNYMENT, MUNIMENT, s. A legal document. S.

To MUNK, v. a. To diminish, so as to bring any thing below the proper size. Scrimp nearly synon. S.

MUNKIE, s. A rope with a loop or eye for fixing cattle to the stake in a cow-house. S.

MUNKRIE, s. A monastic foundation; a monastery. S.

MUNKS, s. A halter for a horse, Fife. V. MUNKIE.

This seems formed from some one of the Goth. terms denoting the mouth, by means of the letter k, used in the formation of diminutives. V. MUNDS.

MUNN, s. An old person with a very little face. S.

MUNS, s. pl. The hollow behind the jaw-bone. S.

MUNSHOCK, s. A name for the red Bill-berry. S.

MUNSIE, s. A designation expressive of contempt or ridicule; a bonny munsie, a pretty figure indeed, ironically, S. perhaps a corr. of Fr. monsieur, which the vulgar pron. monsie and monshie.

MUNTER, s. Apparently some kind of watch or clock. S.

MUPETIGAGE, s. My little pledge or darling; a fondling style of address to a child. S.

MUR, adj. V. MOVIR.

MURALYEIS, s. pl. Walls; fortifications.

— Lo, within the yet,
Amid the clois muralyeis and pail,
And doubyl dykis how thay thame assail!

Doug. Virgil, 313, 14.

Fr. muraille, a wall; L.B. murale, muratha, murayllia; from Lat. murus.

MURDIE-GRUPS, s. pl. The belly-ache; a colic. S.

To MURDRES, MURTHREYS, v. a. To murder; part. pa. murdrest.

"Mony othir kingis of Northumberland in the samyn maner war ay fynaly murdrist be thair successouris." Bellend. Cron. B. x. c. 3.

In Murrawe syne he murtheysyd was

In-til the towne, is cald Foras. Wyntown, vi. 9. 63.

Moes.G. maurthr-jan. This Goth. term has assumed a great variety of forms in L.B., although not one precisely the same with this. V. Du Cange.

MURDRESAR, s. 1. A murderer.

"On the morrow Bassianus arrayed his folkis & exhortit thaym to remembir how thay war to fecht for defence of equite aganis certane fals conspiratouris, specially aganis the treasonabill murdresar Carance." Bellend. Cron. B. vi. c. 8.

2. A large cannon. See Sup.

"Mak reddy your cannons,—quarter slangis, hede stikis, murdresaris." Compl. S. p. 64.

The ingenious editor of this work quotes Coriat, when describing the cannon in the arsenal at Zurich, as saying; "Among them I saw one passing great murdering piece; both ends thereof were so exceeding wide, that a very corpulent man might easily enter the same."

Yet it seems doubtful, whether this term be not a corr. of Germ. morser, originally a mortar for beating drugs, but transferred, says Wachter, from the resemblance in form, to instruments of destruction; E. mortars.

MURE, MUIR, MOOR, anc. MORE, s. A heath; a flat covered with heath, S. Moor, E. seems always to imply the idea of water, or marshiness, as denoting a fen. Then we use the term moss.

And the gud King held forth his way,
Betwix him and his man, quhill thai
Passyt owt throw the forest war;
Syne in the more thai entryt thar.

Barbour, vii. 108. MS.

Out of a more a raven shal cum,
And of hym a schrew shall flye,
And seke the more with owten rest,
After a crosse is made of ston,
Hye and lowe, both est and west;
But up he shal spede anon.

True Thomas, Jamieson's Popul. Ball. ii. 37.

Broun muris kythit thare wissinyt mossy hew.

Doug. Virgil, 201, 6.

"Under a huge cairn in the E. moor (heath) of Ruthven, their dead are said to be buried." P. Ruthven, Forfars. Statist. Acc. xii. 298.

A.S. mor, ericetum, heath-ground, Somner. Hence, he adds, "they render Stanmore in Lat., ericetum lapideum, i. e. the stoney heath." Isl. moar, terra arida inculta et inutilis, Verel. Ind. Moor, solum grumis sterilibus obsitum, G. Andr. Sw. maer, terra putris, Seren. i. e. rotten earth.

MURE-ILL, s. V. MUIR-ILL. S.

MURISH, adj. Of or belonging to mure or heath. S.

MURE-BURN, s. 1. The act of burning moors or heath, B. See Sup.

"That the vnlaw of mure-burne, efter the Moneth of Marche be—fue pund in all tymes to-cum." Acts, Ja. IV. 1503. c. 106. Edit. 1566. c. 71. Murray.

In describing the rapid diffusion of opinion, or influence of example, an allusion is often made to the progress of fire through dry heath; It spreads like mure-burn, S.

2. Metaph. strife; contention, S. q. a flame like that of moor-burning. Muirburn, a contest; a dispute.

MURELAND, MOORLAND, adj. Of or belonging to heathy ground, S.

—Muirland Willie came to woo.

Ramsay's Tea-Table Miscellany, p. 7.

MURE-LAND, s. The higher and uncultivated part of a district; opposed to Dale-land. S.

MURE-LANDER, s. An inhabitant of the higher uncultivated parts of a district; also Mure-man. S.

MURE-SICKNESS, s. A wasting disorder which attacks sheep, chiefly in autumn. S.

To MURGEON, v. a. 1. To mock one by making mouths or wry faces.

Scho skornit Jok, and skrippit at him;

And murgeonit him with morkkis. Chr. Kirk, st. 4.

Sibb. deduces it from Teut. morkelen, grunnire; morre, os cum prominentibus labris; Callander, from A.S. murc-nung, murmuratio, querela; Goth. Isl. mogla, murmurare. But it has more affinity to Fr. morguer, to make a sour face; morgueur, a maker of strange mouths; morgue, a sour face, Arm. morg, id.

2. To murmur; to grumble; to complain; used as a neut. v.

In this sense it has more relation to A.S. murc-nung, mentioned above; or Germ. murrisch, murmuring, from murr-en, to murmur.

MURGEON, MORGEOUN, s. 1. A murmur; the act of grumbling, S.

With mudycons, & murgeons, & moving the brain,

They lay it.—

V. MUDYEON.

Montgomerie.

—By rude, unhallow'd fallows,

They were surrounded to the gallows,

Making sad ruefu' murgeons.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 361.

2. Apparently as signifying muttering, in reference to the Mass.

"Vther things againe are not so necessare, as the consecration of the place, quhere the Messe is said, the altare stane, the blessing of the chalice, the water, the murgeons, singing, he that suld help to say Messe, and the rest." Bruce's Serm. on the Sacr. Sign. K. 4. b.

3. Murgeons, violent gestures or twistings of the body. S.

Dunbar writes morgeounis, Maitl. P. p. 95.

To MURGULLIE. To spoil, &c. V. MARGULYIE.

MURYT, pret. Built up; enclosed in walls.

Thai thaim defendyt douchtely,

And contenynt thaim sa manlily,

That or day, throw mekill payn,

Thai had muryt wp thair yat agayn.

Barbour, iv. 164. MS.

Fr. mur-er, Germ. mauer-n, to wall; Lat. mur-us, a wall.

MURKIN, adj. Spoiled by keeping, applicable to grain.

MURKLE, s. A term of reproach or contempt. S.

MURLAIN, s. A narrow-mouthed basket, of a round form, S.B.

And lightsome be her heart that bears

The murlain and the creel.

Jamieson's Popul. Ball. ii. 354.

This perhaps might originally be a bag made of a skin, and thus the same with Murling, q. v.

To MURLE, v. a. To moulder; to crumble down;

murl, A. Bor. id. Ray. See Sup.

Thair manheid, and thair mense, this gait thay murle;

For mariage thus unyte of ane churle.

V. MOCHRE.

Priests of Peblis, p. 13.

Perhaps from Su.G. Isl. mior, tenuis, gracilis. Isl. moar, minutae uligines; the vapours which appear rising from the earth; whence G. Andr. derives morka, exigua res. See Sup. Hence, MURLIE, s. 1. Any small object, as a small bit of bread, Ang.

2. A fondling term for an infant, Ang.; either from the smallness of its size, or from the pleasing murmur it makes, when in good humour. V. MURR.

Sometimes murlie-fikes is used in the same sense, from the additional idea of a child being still in motion.

MURLING, MORTHLING, MURT, s. "The skin of a young lamb, or of a sheep soon after it has been shorn." Sibb.

He derives the term from murth, murder. It is merely E. morling, mortling.

MURLOCH, s. Supposed to be the young piked dog-fish, Squalus acanthias, Linn. See Sup.

"There is a very delicate fish that may be had through the whole year, called by the country people murloch. It is very long in proportion to its thickness, and, in shape, resembles the dog-fish; it is covered with a very rough skin, like shagreen, of which it must be stripped." P. Jura, Argyles. Statist. Acc. xii. 322.

The term seems Gael. Perhaps the first syllable is from muir, the sea. Lochag, loth, signify a colt.

MURMELL, s. Murmuring.

And, for till saif us fra murmell,

Schone Diligence fetch us Gude Counsell.

Lyndsay, S. P. R. ii. 223.

Teut. murmul-en, murmurillare, submurmurare. This term seems formed from two verbs nearly synon., murr-en, murmurare, and muyt-en, mutire, mussitare, cum indignatione et stomacho. It occurs in Franc. Murmulo thie menigi; Murmurabit multitudo; Otfrid. ap. Schilter.

MURMLED, adj. A man or beast is said to be murmled about the feet, when going lame, or murbled. S.

To MURMURE, MURMOWR, v. a. 1. To calumniate by secret reflections. 2. To complain upon. S.

MURPHY, s. A cant term for a potato. S.

To MURR, v. n. To purr, as a cat, when well pleased; a term used with respect to infants, S.B. See Sup.

Isl. murr-a, Teut. morr-en, murr-en, murmurare; Su.G. morr-a, mussitare, strepere; whence the frequentative morla, id. Fr. murl-er, to low, to bellow, is probably from the same source.

MURLING, s. A gentle noise, as from a purling stream; a soft murmur, Ang.

MURRICK, s. An esculent root or vegetable. S.

MURRIOW, MURRIOWN, MURREON, s. A helmet or headpiece.

"Ane Captane or Souldiour, we can not tell, bot he had a reid clocke and a gilt murriow, enterit upoun a pure woman,—and began to spoille." Knox's Hist. p. 203.

Morrow, MS. i. murrion, MS. ii.

"At that same tyme arrayvit furth of Fraunce Sir James Kirkaldye with ten thowsand crownes of gold, sum murriownes, corslettis, hagbuttis and wyne." Historie James Sext, p. 123. Murreonis, ib. p. 100.

Fr. morion, morrion, id. E. murrion.

MURRLIN, s. A very froward ill-natured child. S.

MURROCH, s. A name for shell-fish in general. S.

MURT, s. The skin of a lamb before castration-time. S.

MURTH, MORTH, s. Murder; Gl. Sibb.

A.S. morth, Teut. moord, Su.G. mord, Moes.G. maurthr, id.

To MURTHUR, v. n. To murmur softly as a child. S.

To MUSALL, MISSEL, v. a. To cover up; to veil.

Mussallit, part. pa.

"That na woman cum to kirk nor mercat with hir face musallit, or couerit, that scho may not be kend, vnder the pane of escheit of the courchie." Acts, Ja. II. 1457. c. 78. Edit. 1566, c. 70. Murray.

It is also applied to the mind.

"Quhen men hes put out all light, and lefte nathing in thair nature, but darknes; there can nathing remaine, but a blind feare.—Therefore they that are this way mis-seled vp in thair saull, of all men in the earth they are maist miserable." Bruce's Serm. on the Sacr. 1590. O, 3. a.

Su.G. musla, occultare; Fr. emmusel-er, to muffle up.

MUSSAL, MYSSAL, MUSSALING, s. A veil or kerchief covering part of the face.

—Your myssel quhen ye gang to gait,

Fra sone and wind baith air and lait,

To keep that face sa fair.

Philotus, S. P. Rep. iii. 14.

MUSARDRY, s. Musing; dreaming.

Quhat is your force, bot febling of the strenth?

Your curius thochtis quhat bot musardry?

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 93, 22.

Fr. musardie, id. musard, a dreaming dumpish fellow, from mus-er, or, as Sibb. conjectures, Teut. muis-en, abdita magno silentio inquirere; supposed to allude to the caution of a cat when watching for mice; from muis, a mouse.

MUSCHE, adj. Meaning not clear. S.

MUSCHET, part. pa. Signifying notched or spotted. S.

MUSCHINPRAT, s. A great or important deed; used ironically; as, "That is a muschinprat." S.

MUSE-WOB, s. A spider's web. V. MOOSEWEB. S.

MUSH, s. Muttering; Neither hush na mush, neither a whisper nor the sound of muttering. S.

To MUSH, v. a. To cut out with a stamp; to nick or notch; to make into flounces, applied to grave-clothes. S.

MUSH, s. A nick or notch. S.

MUSH, s. One who goes between a lover and his mistress, in order to make up a match; Fife. See Sup.

It is very questionable, if this has any affinity to Teut. mutse, coecus amor. V. BLACK-FOOT.

MUSHINFOW, adj. Cruel. S.

MUSHOCH (gutt.), s. A heap of grain thrashed out and laid aside in a corner for seed. S.

MUSHOCH-RAPES, s. pl. Ropes for surrounding grain. S.

MUSICKER, s. A musician. S.

MUSK, s. A confused heap. S.

MUSK, s. A pulp. S.

MUSK, s. Moss; fog of walls or trees. S.

MUSKANE, MUSCANE, adj. 1. Mossy; moss-grown.

—Muskane treis sproutit,

Combust, barrant, unblomit and unleifit,

Auld rottin runtis, quharin na sap was leifit.

Palice of Honour, i. 3.

It occurs also in st. 19 and 58.

Teut. mosch-en, mucere, situm trahere; mosch, mouldiness; mosachtigh, mouldy, mossy.

2. Putrid; rotten.

"Than to ylk lordis bed past ane of thir men, al at ane set hour, ylkane of thame had in thair hand ane club of muscane tre, quhilk kest ane vncouth glance with the fische scalis in the myrk." Belleud. Cron. B. x. c. 9. Baculum putri ligno excussum. Boeth.

MUSLIN-KAIL, s. "Broth composed simply of water. shelled barley, and greens," Gl. Shirr. S.

While ye are pleas'd to keep me hale,

I'll sit down o'er my scanty meal,

Be't water-brose, or muslin-kail,

Wi' chearf' face. Burns, iii. 90.

Perhaps q. meslin-kail, from the variety of ingredients; and thus from the same origin with Maschlin, q. v.

MUSSELE-BROSE, s. Brose made with mussel-soup. S.

MUSSLING, adj.

"I shall in my stammering tong and mussling speech doe what I can to allure you to the loue thereof." Boyd's Last Battell, p. 771.

If this does not signify mixed, q. meslin, perhaps snivelling; Fr. muscleux, E. muzzelling, tying up the muzzle, closing the nose. It may, however, signify disguised; as corresponding to "another tongue," Isa. xxviii. 11. V. MUSALL, v.

MUST, s. Mouldiness.

It is the riches that evir sall indure;

Quhilk mocht [mocht] nor must may nocht rust norket;

And to manniss sawll it is eternall met.

Henrysone, Bannatyne Poems, p. 125.

Johnson derives the verb from C.B. mws, stinking.

Teut. mos, mosch, mosse, mucor, situs.

MUST, s. Musk. V. MUIST.

M U T

MUST, MOUST, s. An old term, applied by the vulgar to hair-powder, or flour used for this purpose, S.

Perhaps it might anciently receive this name as being scented with musk, S. must.

To MUST, MOUST, v. a. To powder. S.

MUSTARDE-STONE, s. "A mortar stone, a large stone mortar used to bruise barley in," Pink.

He was so fers he fell attour ane fek,
And brak his heid upon the mustarde stone.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 84.

This, however, is not the mortar itself, but a large round stone, used in some parts of the country, by way of pestle, for bruising mustard seed in a stone or wooden vessel. It is called the mustard stane.

To MUSTER, v. n. To talk with great volubility, S.

MUSTER, s. Excessive loquacity. S.

MUSTERER, s. An incessant talker. S.

To MUSTUR, v. n. To make a great show or parade.

Or like ane anciant aik tre, mony yeris
That grew apoun sum montane toppis hycht,— Sielike Mezentius musturis in the feild,
Wyth huge armour, baith spere, helme and scheild.

Doug. Virgil, 347, 20.

Fland. muyster-en, indagare, Ital. mostra, Lat. monstrare, q. to shew one's self.

To MUT, v. n. To meet; to have intercourse with.

Yeit mony fled and durst nocht bid Eduuard,
Sum in to Ross, and in the Ilis past part.
The Byschop Synclar agayn fled in to But;
With that fals King he had no will to mut.

Wallace, x. 994. MS.

Moes.G. mot-jan, Su.G. mot-a, moet-a, Belg. moet-en, occurere, obviam ire. According to Skinner, in many places in E., the council-chamber is called the Moot-house, from A.S. mot, gemot, meeting, and house. In the same sense moot-hall is used. Moes.G. mota, motastad, the place of the receipt of custom.

Moot halle, hall of judgment, Wiclif.

"Thanne knyghtes of the justice [i. e. soldiers of Pilate] token Jhesus in the moot halle, and gade-riden to hem all the company of knyghtes." Matt. xxvii. V. MOTE.

Ihre and Seren. deduce the Goth. verb, signifying to meet, from the prep. mot, contra, adversus. The derivation, however, may be inverted.

MUTCH, s. 1. A cap or coif; a head-dress for a woman, S.

Their toys and mutches were sae clean,
They glanced in our ladies een.

Ramsay's Tea-Table Miscellany, p. 9.

This bonny blink will bleach my mutches clean,
To glance into his een whom I love dear.

Morison's Poems, p. 148.

2. It sometimes also denoted a man's night-cap. S.

Teut. mutse, Germ. mutze, Su.G. myssa, Fenn. myssy, id. Kilian defines mutse so as to give us the idea of that species of mutch in S. called a Toy. Amiculum, epomis: pileus latus, profundus et in scapulas usque demissus; "falling down on the shoulders."

This term has found its way into the Latin of the lower ages; being used to denote a clerical head-dress. Mussa, muza, canonicorum amictus. Almucium, almucia, amiculum, seu amictus, quo canonici caput humerosque tegebant; Du Cange. Fr. aumuce. The rest of the clergy, as well as the Bishops, were enjoined to wear this dress. Ibid. vo. Muza. There was also a cowl, to which this name was given, proper to the monks. Ihre views all the terms, used in this sense, as formed from Alem. muz-en, to cover. V. Schilter, in vo.

M U T

Isl. moet-r, mot-ur, mitra, tiara muliebris, rica, (G. Andr. p. 181.) is probably allied.

MUTCH-CAP, s. A nightcap. S.

NIGHT-MUTCH, s. A nightcap for a female. S.

MUTCHKIN, s. A measure equal to an English pint, S.

"Swa weyis the Boll new maid, mair than the auld boll xli. pund, quhilk makis twa gallounis and a half, and a chopin of the auld met, and of the new met ordanit ix. pyntis and thre mutchkinnis." Acts, Ja. I. 1426. c. 80. Edit. 1566.

"Qu. mett-kan, from Teut. met-en, metiri, and kan, vas;" Gl. Sibb. The Dutch use mutsie for a quart; Sw. maatt, a pint.

MUTCHKIN-STOUP, s. The vessel used for measuring a mutchkin, or English pint. S.

MUTE, s. 1. Meeting; interview.

Wallang fled our, and durst nocht bid that mute;
In Pykardte als till him was na bute.

Wallace, viii. 1525. MS.

2. The meeting of the ancient English; a parliament; an assembly.

Throw Ingland theive, and tak thee to thy fute,— Ane horsmanshell thou call thee at the Mute,
And with that craft convoy thee throw the land.

V. MUT, v. Kennedy, Evergreen, ii. 72.

To MUTE, v. n. 1. To plead; to answer to a challenge in a court of law; to appear in court in behalf of any one who is accused.

—"Ilke soyter of Baron, in the Schiref-court, may there, for his Lord, mute and answeire without impediment." Baron Courts, c. 35. s. 1.

And thus thy freind, sa mekil of the mais,
Is countit ane of thy maist felloun fais;
And now with the he will nocht gang ane fute.
Befoir this King, for the to count or mute.

Priests of Peblis, S.P.R. i. 46.

The E. verb moot, is used only with respect to mock pleading. But most probably it anciently denoted serious pleading; from A.S. mot-ian, tractare, disputare; gemot-man, concionator, an orator, an assembly-man; Somner. Du Cange observes, that, as with E. lawyers to mote signifies placitare, the Scots use mute in the same sense; whence, he says, with them the Mute-hill, i. e. mons placiti; vo. Mota, 2.

2. To speak; to treat of; to discourse concerning; sometimes with the prep. of.

This marschell that lk off mute,
That Schyr Robert of Keyth was cauld,—
In hy apon thaim gan he rid.

Barbour, xiii. 60. MS. Wyntown, id.

Mr. MacPherson refers to Sw. be-mot-a, to declare, Fr. mot, a word. But the Sw. verb is used merely in an oblique sense. It is formed from mot-a, to meet. In the same manner, A.S. mot-ian, to meet, signifies tractare, discutere; because the Goth. nations were wont to meet for the purpose of discussing public concerns.

MUTE, MOTE, s. 1. A plea; an action at law.

"In this mute, or pley of treason, anie frie man, major and of perfect age, is admitted to persew and accuse." Reg. Maj. B. iv. c. 2. s. 1.

"Mote, mute, pley, action, quarrell.—Mute in the lawes of this realme is called Placitum." Skene, Virg. Sign.

A.S. mot, ge-mot, L.B. mot-a, conventus; or immediately from mot-ian, tractare, disputare.

2. Used metaph. with respect to what causes grief; properly, a quarrel.

"Sound comfort, and conviction of an eye to an idol, may as well dwell together as tears and joy; but let this do you no ill, I speak it for your encouragement, that ye may make the best out of your joys ye can, albeit ye find them mixed with mutes." Rutherford's Lett. P. i. ep. 50.

To MUTE, MWTE, v. n. 1. To articulate.

The first sillabis that thow did mute,
Was pa da lyn vpon the Lute;
Than playit I twenty springis perqueir,
Quhilk was greit pietie for to heir.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 263.

2. To mutter, or to mention any thing that ought to be kept secret, S.

"Shall we receiue the plaine aspiring tyrant and enemie, —to giue him the command of the watch, the centinels; to command, controll, that they mute not, stirr not; doe what hee list, yea, euen binde vp all the dogs, and mussell their monthes, that they bite not, barke not, but at his pleasure." D. Hume's Paralogie. V. Galloway's Dikaialogie, p. 95.

3. To complain; to mutter in the way of discontent, S.

Bot Inglissmen, that Scotland gryppit all,
Off benefyce thai leit him bruk bot small.
Quhen he saw weill tharfor he mycht nocht mute,
To saiff his lyf thre yer he duelt in But.

Wallace, vii. 935. MS.

"Mr. Harry Guthrie made no din. His letter was a wand over his head to discipline him, if he should mute." Baillie's Lett. i. 382.

"This was read openly in the face of the Assembly, and in the ears of the Independents, who durst not mute against it." Ibid. i. 438.

It is used also as a v. a.

For thou sic malice of thy master mutes,
It is weil set that thou sic barret brace.

Kennedy, Evergreen, ii. 67.

The verb, in these senses, may be from the same origin with the preceding verb. Teut. muyt-en, susurrare, however, signifies to mutter, to murmur.

Mute is used nearly in the same sense in Sir Peni.

In kinges court es it no bote,
Ogaines Sir Peni for to mote;

So mekill es he of myght,
He es so witty and so strang,
That be it never so mekill wrang,
He will mak it right.

Warton renders this dispute, Hist. Poet. iii. 93. He reckons the poem coeval with Chaucer; and justly observes, that the Scots poem, printed in Lord Hailes' Collection, has been formed from this.

But, indeed, it is most probable, that the one printed by Warton had the same origin. For many words and phrases occur in it, which are properly Scottish; as trail syde, gase for goes, fase for foes, &c.

MUTE, MOOT, s. A whisper. V. MUTE, v. to articulate. S. MUTH, adj. Exhausted with fatigue.

Thare thai laid on that tyme sa fast;
Quha had the ware thare at the last,
I will noucht say; bot quha best had,
He wes but dout bathe muth and mad.

Wyntown, ix. 17. 22.

This seems to have been a proverbial phrase. For it is equivalent to that used elsewhere.

Of a gude rede all mate and made.

V. MATH.

Ibid. vii. 2. 30.

It is perhaps tautological; for muth and mad seem to have nearly the same sense, q. completely exhausted with fatigue. Or the one may denote fatigue of body, the other that exhausture of animal spirits, or dejection of mind, which is the effect of great fatigue.

MUTH, adj. Warm; cheerful, &c. V. MUTH. S.

MUTHER, s. A term denoting a great number; as, "A muther o' beasts, a great drove of cattle," &c. S.

MUTING, s. Apparently, assembly; meeting. S.

MUTTER, s. The same with Multure, q. v. S.

MUTTIE, s. A vessel used for measuring meal. S.

MUTTYOCH'D, MOTTYOCH'D, part. adj. Matted. S.

MUTTLE, s. A small knife. S.

MUTTON, s. A sheep; Fr. mouton, a wedder. S.

To MUZZLE, v. a. To mask. S.

N.

NA, NAE, NE, adv. No; not, S.

And that him sar repent sall he,
That he the King contraryit ay,
May fall, quhen he it mend na may.

Barbour, ix. 471. MS.

Has not Troy all infyrit yit thame brynt?

Na: all syc laubour is for nocht and tynt.

Doug. Virgil, 216, 20.

V. NA, conj.

Ne, Barbour, ix. 454.

A.S. na, ne, Moes.G. ne, Dan. Isl. Su.G. nei, anc. ne, Gr. νε, νη.

As the A.S. often drops the ae, e, in nae, ne, joining it with verbs and nouns, so as to form one word, this idiom is retained in the S.B.; as naes for nae is, is not, A.S. id. Moes.G. and Alem. nist for ni ist; naell, for nae will, will not, A.S. nille, used interrogatively; as well as yaes for yea is, yaell for yea will?

As the A.S. uses two negatives for expressing a negation, the same form of speech is retained by the vulgar in S.; as, I never get nane, I never get any. Chaucer uses this idiom; I ne said none ill.

NA, NE, conj. 1. Neither.

He levyt nocht about that toun,
Towr standand, na stane na wall.
That he ne haly gert stroy thaim all.

Barbour, ix. 454. MS.

Gyf so war now with me as than has bene,
Ne suld I neuer depart, my awin child dere,
From thy maist sweit embrasing for na were.
Nor our nychbour Mezentius in his spede
Suld na wyse mokand at this hasard hede,

N A C

By swerd haif kelit sa fele corpis as slane is.

Doug. Virgil, 263, 13.

2. Nor.

A noble hart may haiff nane ess,
Na ellys nocht that may him pless,
Gyff fredom failyhe : for fre liking
Is yharnt our all othir thing.
Na he, that ay has levyt fre,
May nocht knaw weill the propyrté,
The angyr, na the wrechyt dome,
That is cowplyt to foul thryldome.

Barbour, i. 230. &c. MS.

Me vnrenengit, thou sall neur victour be;
Na for all thy proude wourdis thou has spokin
Thou sal not endure into sic joy.

Nec, Virg.

Doug. Virgil, 346, 6.

3. Used both for neither, and nor.

Thay cursit coistis of this enchanterice,
That thay ne suld do enter, ne thame fynd,
Thare salis all with prosper followand wynd
Neptunus fillit.—

Doug. Virgil, 205, 8.

Bot off all thing wa worth tresoun!
For thair is nothir duk ne baroun,—
That euir may wauch hym with tresoune.

Barbour, i. 576. MS.

A.S. na, ne, neque, nec; Isl. nea, Sw. nei, neque, Verel.
Gael. no is used in both senses.

NA, conj. But.

Away with drede, and take na langar fere,
Quhat wenis thou, na this fame sall do the gude?

Doug. Virgil, 27, 29.

Feret haec aliquam tibi fama salutem. Virg.

NA, conj. Than.

For fra thair fayis archeris war
Scalyt, as I said till yow ar,
That ma na thai wer, be gret thing,—
Thai woux sa hardy, that thaim thought
Thai suld set all thair fayis at nocht.

Barbour, xiii. 85. MS.

Gyve thow thynkys to sla me,
Quhat tyme na nowe may better be,— Wytht fredome, and wyth mare manhed?

Wyntown, vii. 1. 76.

Quben thai war mett, weyll ma na x thousand,
Na chyftane was that tyme durst tak on hand,
To leide the range on Wallace to assaill.

Wallace, iii. 257. MS. Also ix. 1411.

S. nor is used in the same sense.

C.B. Gael. Ir. na, id.

NA, adj. No; not any; none.

The barowuys thus war at discord,
That on na maner mycht accord.

Barbour, i. 69. MS.

To NAAG, v. a. To tease; to taunt. V. NAG. S.

To NAB, v. a. To strike; to peck, S. apparently an oblique sense of the E. verb.

NAB, s. A smart stroke; a blow on the head. V. KNAP. S.

NABBLE, s. A narrow-minded greedy person. S.

NABALISH, adj. Covetous; griping; laborious. S.

NA CA DEED I. An Orkney phrase; I will not. S.

NACHET, NACKET, s.

Sic ballis, sic nachettis, and sic tutivillaris,—
Within this land was nevir hard nor sene.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 44. st. 14.

In the same poem, nackets, Evergreen, i. 105.

"A nacquet, in French, is a lad that marks at Tennis.
It is now used for an insignificant person;" Lord Hailes, Note. A little nacket, a person who is small in size, S. q.
a boy for assisting at play.

N A I

Bullet observes, that "naques is the same as lacques," whence our modern lacquey. He adds, that the President Fauchet says, that, a century before his time, they had begun to call footmen laquets and naquets.

NACKET, s. 1. A bit of wood, stone, or bone, which boys use at the game of Shinty, S.

Perhaps it should rather be written knacket; as being evidently allied to Su.G. kneck, globulus lapideus, quo ludunt pueri; Ihre. Perhaps this is the sense of knakat, as used by Stewart.

Amang the wyves it sall be written,

Thou was ane knakat in the way.

Evergreen, i. 121.

q. something in the road that made one stumble.

2. A quantity of snuff made up in a cylindrical form, or a small roll of tobacco, S.

NACKET, s. 1. A small cake or loaf. 2. A luncheon. S.

NACKETY, adj. Conceited, S. V. under KNACK.

NACKETIE, adj. Dexterous in doing any piece of nice work. Syn. NICKNACKIE. S.

NACKIE, s. A loaf of bread. V. NACKET. S.

NACKIE, adj. Active; clever. V. KNACKY.

NACKS, NAUKS, KNACKS, s. pl. A disease peculiar to fowls, causing wheezing and breathlessness; the Pip. S.

NAUKIE, adj. Asthmatical; short-winded. S.

NADKIN, s. The taint or taste which meat acquires when too long kept; any close or disagreeable odour. S.

NAEGAIT, adv. In no wise. S.

NAELINS, adv. Used interrogatively, Aberd. S.

NAES, is not, interrog. V. NA, adv.

NAFFING, s. Frivolous chat or prattle. V. NYAFF. S.

To NAG, v. a. To strike smartly. S.

To NAG, v. n. To gibe; to taunt; to tease with unkind reflections; as, "He's aye naggin at ane." S.

NAGGIE, s. A cup. Corr. of E. noggin. S.

NAGS, s. pl. A particular game at marbles or taw, in which the loser receives a certain number of strokes, or dumps, on the knuckles from the other players with their bowls; called also Knuckle-dumps. S.

NAG, s. A stroke at the play of Nags. S.

NAGUS, s. One of the abusive designations used by Dunbar in his Flyting.

Nyse Nagus, nipcaik, with thy schulders narrow.

Evergreen, ii. 57.

It is uncertain, whether he gives Kennedy this name, from his attachment to the drink called Negus, or as equivalent to Old Nick; Su.G. Necken, Neccus, a name given to the Neptune of the Northern nations, as Wachter thinks, from Dan. nock-a, to drown; Germ. nicks, Belg. necker,
Isl. nikr, hippopotamus, monstrum vel daemon aquaticus.

NAIG, s. 1. A riding horse, S.; not used as nag in E.
for "a small horse," but often applied to one of blood.

See Sup.

She tauld thee weel thou was a skellum;—

That ev'ry naig was ca'd a shoe on,

The smith and thee gat roaring fou on.

Burns, iii. 328.

2. A stallion, S.

To NAIG AWA, v. n. To move like a horse or naig that has a long, quick, and steady pace. S.

NAIL. Aff at the nail, or, Gane aff at the nail. 1. A phrase used with respect to persons who, in their conduct, have laid aside all regard to propriety or decency; who transgress all ordinary rules; or no longer have any regard to appearances, S. 2. It frequently signifies mad, wrong-headed. S.

3. Aff or Off the nail, sometimes being tipsy. S.

Lat. clavus is used frequently to denote rule or government. Dum clavum rectum teneam; As long as I do my part. Quintil. Also, as denoting a course of life; Vixit inaequalis, clavum ut mutaret in horas. Hor. In a similar sense, one may be said to have gone off at the nail, as denoting that one has lost the proper hinge of conduct; like any thing that is hung, when it loses the hold. Thus Kelly, explaining the Prov. "He is gone off at the nail," says; "Taken from scissars when the two sides go asunder." P. 173, 174.

The expression, however, may be understood metaph. in another sense; according to which nail refers to the human body. For nagel, unguis, was a term used by the ancient Goths and Germans, in computing relations. They reckoned seven degrees; the first was represented by the head, as denoting husband and wife; the second by the arm-pit, and referred to children, brothers and sisters; the third, by the elbow, signifying the children of brothers and sisters; the fourth, by the wrist, denoting the grandchildren of brothers and sisters; the fifth, by the joint by which the middle finger is inserted into the hand, respecting the grand-children of cousins, or what are called third cousins; the sixth, by the next joint; the seventh, or last, by the nail of the middle finger. This mode of computation was called in Alem. sipzal, Su.G. nagel-fare. A relation in the seventh degree was hence denominated, Teut. nagel-mage, q. a nail-kinsman, one at the extreme of computation. V. Wachter, vo. Nagel-mage, and Sipzal; Ihre, Nagel.

It is conceivable, that the S. phrase in question might originate in those ages in which family and feudal connexion had the greatest influence. When one acted as an alien, relinquishing the society, or disregarding the interests of his own tribe, he might be said to go off at the nail; as denoting that he in effect renounced all the ties of blood. But this is offered merely as a conjecture.

NAIL, s. A particular pain in the forehead. S.

NAILS, paring of. Superstition regarding this in Sup.

NAILS, s. pl. The refuse of wool, Su.G. V. BACKINGS.

NAIN, adj. Own. V. NAWN. S.

NAIP, s. The summit of a house, or something resembling a chimney-top, S.B.

Far in a how they spy a little sheald;
Some peep of reek out at the naip appears.

Ross's Helenore, p. 75.

This seems allied to Isl. hnappr, globus, nap-ar, prominent, nauf, prominentia, rupium crepido; Su.G. knaepp, vertex, summities montis; E. the knap of a hill.

NAIPRIE, s. Table linen, S.

"In veray deid the Gray Freirs was a plaice weill providit;—thair scheitis, blancattis, beddis and covertours war sick, that no Erle in Scotland had the better; thair naiprie was fyne; thay war bot aucht personis in convent, and yit had aucht punscheonis of salt beif, (consider the tyme of the yeir, the 11th of Maii.) wyne, beir and aill, besyidis stoir of victuells effeiring thairto." Knox's Hist. p. 128.

Ital. napparie, lingues de table, Veneroni; Fr. nappe, a table-cloth. Johnson mentions napery, but without any authority; the word being scarcely known in E. See S.

NAYSAY, NA-SAY, s. A refusal; a nayword, S. The v. is also sometimes used, S. See Sup.

NAYSAYER, s. One who denies or refuses. S.

NAIT, s. Need. S.

NAITHERANS, conj. Neither. V. NETHERANS. S.

NAITHLY, ad. "Neatly; genteelly; handsomely," Rudd.

Thartyll ane part of the nycht ekis sche,—

And eik her pure damesellis, as sche may,
Naithly exercis, for to wirk the lyne,
To snoif the spyndyll, and lang thredes twyne.
Doug. Virgil, 256, 51.

If this be the sense, it may be from A.S. nithlice, mol-liter, muliebriter. It may, however, signify, industriously; A.S. nythlice, studiosus.

NAKYN, adj. No kind of, S.

And he him sparyt nakyn thing.

V. KIN.

Barbour, v. 362. MS.

NAKIT, pret. v. 1. Stripped; deprived; literally, made naked. See Sup.

—Write their frenesyis,

Qubilk of thy sympil cunning nakit thé.

Palice of Honour, j. 1.

Qubilks of thy sempill cunning nakit the.

Edin. Ed. 1579.

2. Destitute of; Nakit of counsall, devoid of counsel. S.

Su.G. nakt-a, exuere, nudare.

NALE, s. An old word signifying an ale-house. S.

NAM, am not, q. ne am.

Y nam sibbe him na mare,

Ich aught to ben his man,

Chaucer, n'am.

Sir Tristrem, p. 42.

To NAM, v. a. To seize quickly, with some violence. S.

NAMEKOUTH, adj. Famous; renowned.

Thare was also craftelie schape and mark

The namekouth hous, qubilk Labyrinthus hait.

Doug. Virgil, 163, 21.

A.S. namcutha, id. nomine notus, inclytus, insignis; from nam, name, and cuth, known. V. COUTH.

NAMELY, adj. Famous; celebrated. S.

NAMMONIE, s. A little while. S.

NANCY, NANNIE, NANZE, s. Names for Agnes. S.

NANCY-PRETTY, s. London Pride, a flower. S.

NANE, adj. No; none, S.

Thus I declare the nane vncertane thing,

Bot verry soithfast, taikynnys and warnyng.

Doug. Virgil, 241, 18.

A.S. nan, Alem. nih ein, i. e. not one.

NANES, NANYS, s. For the nanys, on purpose, for the purpose; Chaucer, nones, E. nonce.

Thare stude ane dirk, and profound caue fast by,—

All ful of cragis, and thir scharp flynt stanys,

Qubilk was weil dykit and closit for the nanys.

Doug. Virgil, 171, 26.

This word has been viewed as of ecclesiastical origin. It may, indeed, be allied to L.B. nona, the prayers said at noon. Isl. non sometimes signifies the mass. Geck tha kongur til kyrkio, oc for til nono; The King entered into the church, that he might attend the service performed at noon. Heims Kring. ap. Ihre.

In the convents, during summer, the monks used to have a repast after the nones or service at mid-day, called Biberes nonales, or Refectio nonae. Du Cange quotes a variety of statutes on this subject, vo. Nona, Biberis. If we may suppose that the good fathers occasionally looked forward with some degree of anxiety to this hour, the phrase, for the nones or nanis, might become proverbial for denoting any thing on which the mind was ardently set. This is probably the origin of Dan. none, a beverage, a collation.

Tyrwhitt supposes it to have been "originally a corruption of Lat.; that from pro-nunc came for the nunc, and so, for the nonce; just as from ad-nunc came anon." Note, v. 381. But this idea is very whimsical, and receives no support from anon, which has an origin totally different. V. ONANE.

N A S

It has occurred to me, however, that it may with fully as much plausibility be deduced from Su.G. naenn-as, anc. naenn-a, to prevail with one's self to do a thing, to have a mind to do it; Isl. nenn-a, id. Nonne, a me impetrare possum, Gunnlaug. S. Gl.

Since writing this, I have observed that Seren. has adopted the same idea. "Nonce, Isl. nenna, nenning, arbitrium. Su.G. nenna, nennas, a se impetrare, posse."

NAP, s. A little round wooden dish made of staves; a vessel for holding milk. Syn. Boyn. S.

NAPPIE, s. A small wooden dish. S.

NAP, s. A cant term for ale, or a stronger kind of beer. S.

NAP, NYAP, s. A bite; a morsel taken hastily. S.

NAPKIN, s. A handkerchief. S.

NAPPER o' NAPS, s. A sheep-stealer. S.

NAPPY, s. Ale. S.

NAPPY, s. Tipsy; elevated with drink. S.

NAPPIE, adj. Expl. "brittle," Gl.

Wi' cheese an' nappie noor-cakes, auld

An' young weel fill'd an' daft are,

Wha winna be sae crous an' bauld

For a lang towmont after

As on this day. Rev. J. Nicol's Poems, i. 27.

Perhaps, q. what knaps, or is easily broken, as being crimp. See Sup.

NAPPIE, adj. Strong; vigorous; "A nappie callan. S.

NAPPIT, part. adj. Crabbed; ill-humoured. S.

NAPPLE, s. A sweet wild root. V. KNAPPARTS. S.

NAPSIE, s. A little fat animal; such as a sheep. S.

NAR, conj. Nor.

This fremyt goddes held hir ene fixt fast

Apoun the ground, nar blenkis list thaym cast.

Doug. Virgil, 28, 7.

NAR, were not.

Blither with outen wene

Never ner nar thai, Sir Tristrem, p. 148. st. 14.

i. e. never nearly ne were they.

So blithe al bi dene,

Nar thai never are.

Ne were they never before. Ibid. st. 15.

NAR, prep. Near. Also comp. Nigher. V. NER. S.

NAR-SIDE, s. The left side, as opposed to Aff-side, the right side of any object. S.

To NARR, NERR, NURR, v. n. "To snarl as dogs.

Teut. knarren, grunniere," Sibb.

This is merely E. gnar, written according to the pronunciation. A.S. gnyrr-an, id.

NARROW-NEBBIT, adj. Contracted in one's views with respect to religious matters, superstitiously strict, apt to take, or pretend to take, offence on trivial grounds, S. from Neb, the nose, q. v.

NARVIS, adj. Of, or belonging to, Norway. Narvis talloun, tallow brought from Norway.

"Ilk last of Narvis talloun, ii ounce." Skene, Verb. Sign. vo. Bullion.

Sw. Norwegz, Norwegian, Norwegz man, a Norwegian; or the genit. of Norige, Norway; Noriges rike, regnum Norvegiae; Verel. Ind. vo. Norran, Noregs-vellid.

NAS. Was not.

Nas never Ysonde so wo,

No Tristrem, sothe to say. Sir Tristrem, p. 114.

Nas, Chaucer, id. A.S. nas, i. e. ne was, non erat, Lye.

To NASH, v. n. To prate; to talk impudently. S.

NASH-GAB, s. Insolent talk. S.

NASK, s. A withe for binding cattle. S.

NAT, adv. Not.

N A V

Suffer nat to birn our schyppis in a rage.

Doug. Virgil, 29, 33.

Nat, id. is used by Chaucer and other O.E. writers, so late as the reign of Elizabeth; A.S. nate, non.

NAT. Know not.

Thow Phebus lychnare of the planetis all,

I nat quhat deulie I the clepe sall.

Doug. Virgil, 4, 12.

Rudd. acknowledges that he had improperly inserted knew before nat, without observing that it was a contraction.

A.S. nat, i. e. ne wat, non scio, Lye.

To NATCH, v. a. To seize; to lay hold of violently; often used as denoting the act of a messenger in arresting one as a prisoner, S.B.

Teut. naeck-en, attingere? q. to lay hold of legally by touching. I see no evidence that any cognate of the v. snatch has been used without s initial.

To NATCH, v. a. To notch. S.

NATCH, s. A notch. S.

NATE, s. Use; business.

And forth scho drew the Troiane swerd fute hate,

Ane wappen was neuer wrocht for sic ane nate.

Doug. Virgil, 122, 52.

Chaucer, note, Isl. not, id. V. NOTE.

To NATE, v. a. To need. V. NOTE, v. S.

NATHELESS, adv. Notwithstanding; nevertheless. S.

NATHER, conj. Neither. S.

NATHING, s. Nothing, S. In old MSS. it is generally written as two words.

— He had na thing for to dispend.

Barbour, i. 319. MS.

NATIE, adj. Tenacious; niggardly. Syn. Nittie, Neetie. S.

NATYR-WOO, s. Fine wool; wool that has been pulled off a sheep's skin from the root, not shorn. S.

NATIVE, s. The place of one's nativity. S.

NATKIN, s. A disagreeable taste or smell. V. NADKIN.

NATRIE, NYATRIE, adj. Ill-tempered; crabbed. S.

To NATTER, v. n. To chatter, conveying the idea of peevishness, ill-humour, or discontentment. S.

NATTERIN, part. adj. Chattering in a fretful way. S.

To NATTLE, v. a. 1. To nibble; to chew with difficulty, as old people do with the stumps of their teeth.

2. To nip; as, "To nattle a rose," to nip it in pieces. S.

NATURAILL, adj. Lawful, as opposed to illegitimate.

NATURAL, s. Genial; applied to the weather. S.

NATURALITIE, s. Natural affection; that affection connected with propinquity of blood. S.

NATURALITIE, s. Naturalization. S.

NATURE, adj. 1. Fertile in spontaneously producing rich succulent herbage; as, nature grund, land that yields rich grass abundantly without being sown. 2.

Rich; nourishing; applied to grass. S.

NATURENESS, s. 1. Fertility in spontaneously yielding rich herbage. 2. Richness; exuberance; applied to grass produced spontaneously. S.

NAUCHLE, s. A dwarf. Syn. Crute. S.

To NAVELL, v. a. To strike with the fist. V. under NEIVE.

NAVEN, NAWYN, s. A navy; shipping.

"Ther prouisione of diuerse sortis is vunder grit, nocht alanerly be gryt multitude of men of veyr, and ane grit nauen of schipis be seey-burde, bot as veil be secret machinatione to blynd you be auereis." Compl. S. p. 141.

Schyr Nele Cambel befor send he,

For to get him nawyn and meite. Barbour, iii. 393. MS.

It has been observed that "the termination is Saxon," Gl. Compl. But the term is not to be found in that language. Mr. Macpherson views it as probably arbitrary. The term, however, occurs in the same form in other dialects. O. Sicamb. nawen, Germ. nawen, navis, Kilian. NAVIE. Rid navie. Meaning doubtful. S. NAVYIS, adv. No wise. Syn. Nawayes, Nawiss. S. NAUM, s. A heavy blow with a bludgeon. S. NAUR, prep. Near; the pron. of some districts in S. S. NAVUSE-NAWUS-NAWVUS-BORE, s. A hole in wood from the expulsion of a knot; perhaps errat. for Arus- or Auwus-bore. S. NAWAYES, adv. No wise. S. NAWISS, NAWYSS, adv. By no means; in no wise. Now may I nawiss forthyr ga. Barbour, iv. 214. MS.

Ryn eftre him, and him ourta,
And lat him na wyss pass thaim fra.

Ibid, vi. 594. MS.
NAWN, NYAWN, adj. Own. His nyawn, his own. S.
NAXTE', adj. Nasty; filthy.

—I in danger, and doel, in dongon I dwelle,
Naxté, and nedeful, naked on night.

Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. i. 15.

E. nasty is derived from Franc. nazzo, humidus, nazzi, humiditas; Germ. netz-en, humectare.

NAY, adv. No; also used as a s. as, "It is no nay." S.
NAZE, s. A promontory; a headland. Syn. Nes, Ness. S.
NE, conj. Neither; nor. V. NA.
NE, adv. No. V. NA.
NE, prep. Near; nigh.

The lattir terme and day approachis ne
Of fatale force, and strangest destanye.

Doug. Virgil, 412. 10.

A.S. neah, neh, Belg. nae, Alem. nah, Germ. nahe, Su.G. naa, Dan. Isl. na, id.

NE WAR, were it not; unless.

Incontinent thay had to batal went,— Ne war on thame the rosy Phebus rede
His wery stedis had doukit ouer the hede.

Doug. Virgil, 398, 40.

Alem. ne uware idem est ac nisi; ne neware, non-nisi; Schilter.

To NE, v. n. To neigh as a horse.

The dynnyng of thare hors feit eik hard he,
Thare stamping sterage, and thare stedis ne.

Doug. Virgil, 398, 37.

A.S. hnaeg-an, Teut. naey-en, Su.G. gnaegg-a, id.

NE, s. Neighing.

He sprentis furth, and ful proude waloppis he,
Hie strekand vp his hede with mony ane ne.

Doug. Virgil, 381, 20.

NEAPHLE, s. A trifle; a thing of no value. S.

NEAR, adj. Niggardly. S.

NEAR-BEHADDEN, part. adj. Niggardly. S.

NEAR-GAWN, NEAR-BE-GAWN, adj. Niggardly, S.

Shall man, a niggard, near-gawn elf,
Rin to the tether's end for pelf;
Learn ilka cunyied scoundrel's trick,
Whan a's done sell his saul to Nick?

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 105.

There'll just be ae bar to my pleasure.

A bar that's aft fill'd me wi' fear,

He's sic a hard, near-be-gawn miser,

He likes his saul less than his gear. Ibid. ii. 158.

From near, and gaand, going. Be expletive sometimes intervenes. In the same way it is said of a parsimonious person, that he is very near himsell, S.

NEAR-HAND, adj. Near; nigh. S.

NEAR-HAND, adv. Nearly; almost. V. NER-HAND. S.

NEAR HIMSELF. A phrase applied to a man who is very niggardly, or tenacious of his property. S.

NEAR-SIGHTED, adj. Short-sighted. S.

NEASE, s. Nose.

"Turne to faith, and it will make thee to turne to God, and swa conjoine thee with God, and make all thine actions to smell weill in his nease." Bruce's Serm. on the Sacr. p. 8, a. V. NEIS.

NEATY, NEATTY, adj. 1. Mere; having no other cause, S.B.

As they the water past, and up the brae,
Where Nory mony a time had wont to play,
Her heart with neatty grief began to rise,
Whan she so greatly alter'd saw the guise.

Ross's Helenore, p. 79.

2. Identical, S.B.

Three lusty fellows gat of him a clank;—
And wha were they, but the same neaty three,
That with the raips gard him the dolour dree?

Ibid. p. 47.

Perhaps allied to Isl. nyt-ur, nytt, commodus, probatus, q. the very thing in use, or approved by use. V. NOTE, v. NEB, s. 1. The nose; now used rather in a ludicrous sense; as lang neb, a long nose. Hence Lang-nebbit, Narrow-nebbit, q. v. Sharp-nebbit, having a sharp nose, S. Neb bears the same sense, A. Bor. See Sup.

It would seem that this was the original sense of the term; A.S. nebbe, nasus, Isl. nef, nasus.

2. The beak of a fowl, S. A. Bor. nib, E.

"You may dight your neb and flie up;" S. Prov. "taken from pullets who always wipe their bill upon the ground before they go to roost. You have ruined and undone your business, and now you may give over." Kelly, p. 390.

A.S. Belg. nebbe, Su.G. naebb, Dan. neb, Isl. neib, rostrum; Hoka neff, rostrum accipitris.

3. Applied to the snout; as of a sow, &c. S.

4. Any sharp point; as the neb (E. nib) of a pen; the neb, or point, of a knife, &c. S.

5. To gie a thing a neb, to make it pungent. S.

NEB AND FEATHER. Completely; from top to toe; as, "She's dinket out neb and feather." S.

NEB AT THE GRUNSTANE. To keep one's neb at the grunstane, to keep one under, or at hard work. S.

NEB O' THE MIRE-SNIPE. To come to the neb o' the mire-snipe, to come to the last push. S.

NEB O' THE MORNING. That part of the day between the first appearance of light and sun-rising; dawn. S.

To NEB, v. n. To bill; to caress as doves do. S.

NEBBIT, part. adj. 1. Having a beak or nose; as, Lang-nebbit. 2. Having a hooked head; as, Nebbit-staff. S.

NEB-CAP, s. The iron for fencing the point of a shoe. S.

NEBSIE, s. An impudent old woman. S.

NECE, s. Grand-daughter. V. NEIPCE.

NECES, s. pl. Nece, Nete, an unknown animal. S.

NECESSAR, adj. Necessary. S.

To NECK, OR NICK, with nay. V. NYKIS. S.

NECK-BREAK, s. Ruin; destruction. S.

NECKIT, s. A tippet for a child, S.B. Neckatee, E. a handkerchief for a woman's neck, Johns.

NECK-VERSE, s. A cant term formerly used by the marauders on the Border. See Sup.

Letter nor line know I never a one,
Wer't my neck-verse at Hairibee.

Lay of the Last Minstrel, C. i. 24.

N E Y

"Hairibee, the place of executing the Border marauders at Carlisle. The neck-verse is the beginning of the 51st psalm, Miserere mei, &c. anciently read by criminals claiming the benefit of clergy," N. ibid.

NEDEUM, s. A gnawing pain. S.
 To NEDEUM, v. n. To thrill with pain. S.
 NEDMIST, adj. Undermost; lowest in situation, S.
 A.S. neothemest, id. from neothan, under, Su.G. ned.
 This is the correlate of Ummist, uppermost, q. v. V. NETH.
 NEDWAYIS, adv. Of necessity.
 "The behowis nedwayis, said the King,
 To this thing her say thine awiss."
 A.S. neadwise, necessary. Barbour, xix. 156. MS.
 NEED-BE, s. Necessity; expediency. S.
 NEEDLE-E'E, s. Through the needle-e'e. A play among children, described in the Supplement.
 NEEDLE-FISH, s. The Shorter Pipe-fish. V. STANG.
 NEED-MADE-UP, adj. and s. Applied to any thing hastily prepared, as immediately necessary. S.
 NEEF, s. Difficulty; doubt.
 The staik indeed is unco great
 I will confess alway;—
 Great as it is, I need na voust;
 I'm seer I hae nae neef
 To get fat cou'd be ettl'd at
 By sik a mensless thief.
Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 3.
Seer, sure, Aberd.
 A.S. naefde, want, naefga, a needy person; Su.G. napp, difficulty, strait, whence naepliga, with difficulty; Isl. naufa, (vix;) Belg. nauw, narrow, strait.
 NEEMIT, NIMMET, s. Dinner. S.
 NEEP, NEIP, s. The old name for a turnip. S.
 NEEP-HACK, s. A pronged mattock for raising turnips. S.
 NE'ER-BE-LICKIT. Nothing whatsoever; not a whit. S.
 NE'ER-DO-GOOD, NE'ER-DO-GUDE, s. Syn. Neerdoweil.
 NE'ER-DO-WEEL, adj. Past mending. S.
 NEERDOWEIL, s. One whose conduct is so bad, as to give reason to think that he will never do well, S.
 "Some hae a hantla [hantle o'] fauts, ye're only a ne'er dowell," Ramsay's Prov. p. 63.
 NEESE, s. The nose. S.
 To NEESE, v. n. To sneeze; retained in S. as Dr. Johns. has observed. A. Bor. neeze, id. Gl. Grose.
See Sup.
 A.S. nies-an, Belg. niez-en, Germ. niess-en, Alem. nius-an, nios-an, Su.G. nius-a, id.; all, as lhre has observed, from A.S. naese, Su.G. naesa, &c. the nose, "the fountain of sternutation." V. NEIS.
 NEESING, s. Sneezing. V. the v. S.
 To NEESHIN, v. n. To desire the male, S.B. V. Eassin.
 NEET, s. A parsimonious person; a niggard. S.
 NEETIE, adj. Avaricious; covetous. V. NITTIE. S.
 NEFF, s. The nave of a church. S.
 NEFF, s. A hand. V. NEIVE, NEIF. S.
 NEFFIT, s. A puny creature; a pigmy, S. pron. nyeffit.
 Most probably from neif, q. one who might be held in the hand of another. Belg. nufje, however, signifies a chit.
 To NEFFOW, v. a. 1. To take in handfuls. 2. To handle any animal. V. NEIVE and NEVEL. S.
 To NEYCH, NICH, NYGH, NYCHT, (gutt.) v. a. To approach; to come or get nigh. See Sup.
 — The schipmen sa handlyt war,
 That thai the schip on na maner
 Mycht ger to cum the wall sa ner,

N E I

That thar fallbrig mycht neych thartill.
Barbour, xvii. 419, MS.
 Thay wer sa nyss quhan men thame nicht,
 Thay squeilit lyk ony gaittis.
i. e. approached. Chr. Kirk, st. 2.
 But it is improperly used with t in the pres.
 Micht nane thame note with invy, nor nycht thame to neir.
Gawan and Gol. i. 19.
 Gif ony nygh wald him nere,
 He bad thame rebaldis orere
 With a ruyne. Houlate, iii. 21.
 The phrase is used by R. Brunne, p. 41.
 Fyue wynter holy lasted that werre,
 That neuer Eilred our kyng durst negh him nerre.
 Also by Minot.
 Wight men of the west
Neghed tham nerr. Poems, p. 46.
 I ne wist where to eat, ne at what place,
 And it nighed nye the none, and with Nede I met.
P. Ploughman, Fol. 111. b.
i. e. "and I was in want."
 "And whanne he had entrid into Cafernaum, the centurien neighede to him." Wiclif, Matt. 8.
Neighe, Chaucer, id.
 "To nigh a thing, to be close to it, to touch it. North."
Gl. Grose.
Moes.G. nequh-jan, A.S. nehw-an, Su.G. naa, naek-ast, Alem. nach-an, Germ. nah-en, Belg. nak-en, id. Isl. na, to touch. As the v. literally signifies to come nigh, lhre derives it from the prep. naa, prope; as Schilter from Alem. nah, id. Otfred, nahta imo, appropinquavit ei.
 NEIDE, s. Necessity. O neide, of necessity. Most o neide, must needs.
O der Wallace, wmquhill was stark and stur,
 Thow most o neide in presoune till endur.
Wallace, ii. 207. MS.
 NEID-FYRE, s. 1. "The fire produced by the friction of two pieces of wood," S. Gl. Compl. p. 357, 358. See Sup.
 This is undoubtedly the same with Alem. notfyr, not-feyr, id. coactus ignis fricando; Germ. nodefyr, ignis sacrilegus. In a council held in the time of Charlemagne, A. 742., it was ordained, that every bishop should take care that the people of God should not observe Pagan rites,—sive illos sacrilegos ignes, quos Notfyres vocant;—"or make those sacrilegious fires, which are called Notfyres." Capitular. Karlomann. c. 5. In the Indiculus of Superstitions and Pagan Rites made by the Synod Liptinens., the following title is found: De igne fricato de ligno, id est, Nodfyr. V. Schilter, p. 641. It is also written Ned-fres, and Nedfri.
Lindenbrog, in his Gl., thus explains the remains of this superstition: "The peasants, in many places of Germany, at the feast of St. John, bind a rope around a stake drawn from a hedge, and drive it hither and thither, till it catches fire. This they carefully feed with stubble and dry wood heaped together, and they spread the collected ashes over their pot-herbs, confiding in vain superstition, that by this means they can drive away canker-worms. They therefore call this Nodfeyr, q. necessary fire."
Spelman thinks that the first syllable is from A.S. neod, obsequium; and thus that nodfyres were those made for doing homage to the heathen deities.
 It is the opinion of Wachter, that this received its name from some kind of calamity, for averting which the superstitious kindled such a fire. For not signifies calamity.
 But the most natural, as well as the best authenticated, origin of the word, is that found in the Indiculus referred to above. It seems properly to signify forced fire. Before observing that our term had any cognates, it had occurred to me, that it must be from A.S. nyd, force, and fyr, fire; and that this idea was confirmed from the circumstance of a similar composition appearing in a variety of A.S. words. Thus, nyd-name signifies taking by violence, rapine; nyd-hamed, a rape; nyd-gild, one who pays against his will.

Fires of the same kind, Du Cange says, are still kindled in France, on the eve of St. John's day; vo. Nedfri.

These fires were condemned as sacrilegious, not as if it had been thought that there was any thing unlawful in kindling a fire in this manner, but because it was kindled with a superstitious design.

2. Spontaneous ignition, S.

"Quhen the bischop of Camelon wes doand diuynne service in his pontifical, his staf tuk neid fyre, and mycht nocht be slokynnit quhil it wes resolut to nocht." Bel- lend, Cron. B. x. c. 12. Lituus—repente igne correptus, Boeth.

"In Louthiane, Fiffe & Angus, grene treis & cornis tuk neid fyre." Ibid. B. xii. c. 12. Sponte incensae, Boeth.

This is obviously an oblique use of the word; as denoting fire not kindled by ordinary means. Both senses refer to wood as taking fire of itself; although the one supposes friction, the other does not.

3. "Neidfire is used to express—also the phosphoric light of rotten wood," Gl. Compl. pp. 357, 358.

4. It is likewise used as signifying beacon, S.

The ready page, with hurried hand,
Awak'd the neid-fire's slumbering brand,
And ruddy blushed the heaven:
For a sheet of flame, from the turret high,
Waved like a blood-flag on the sky,
All flaring and uneven.

Lay of the Last Minstrel, c. iii. st. 29.

"Neid-fire, beacon," N. This is an improper and very oblique sense.

NEIDFORSE, s. Necessity. On neidforse, of necessity.

"Bot Morpheus, that slepye gode, assailyeit al my membris, ande oppressit my dul melancolius nature, quhilke gart al my spreitis vital ande animal be cum impotent & paralytic: quhar for on neid forse, I was constrenyeit to be his sodiour." Compl. S. p. 105.

"For emphasis, two words are united which have the same meaning, though one of them is derived from the Saxon, and the other from the French. A.S. nead and neod, vis. Fr. force, vis." Gl. Compl.

The A.S. word, however, in its various forms, nead, neod, nid, nyd, primarily signifies necessity. The term therefore properly denotes one species of necessity, that arising from force.

NEIDLINGIS, adv. Of necessity.

Your joly wo neidlingis moist I endite.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 93, 9.

A.S. neadling, nedling, nydling, denotes one who serves from necessity; also a violent person, one who uses compulsion. But the term is apparently formed from the s. and termination lingis, q. v.

To NEIDNAIL, v. a. 1. To fasten securely by nails which are clinched, S. See Sup.

2. A window is said to be neidnail'd, when it is so fixed with nails in the inside, that the sash cannot be lifted up, S. This is an improper sense.

This term might seem literally to signify, nailed from necessity. But it appears to have been originally synon. with roove, E. rivet. Sw. net-nagla still signifies to clinch or rivet. The first part of the word may therefore be the same with naed-a, id. clavi cuspidem retundere, i. e. to roove a nail.

NEIF, s. Difficulty. V. NEEF.

To NEIFFAR, v. a. To exchange. V. under NEIVE. S. NEIGHBOUR-LIKE, adj. 1. Resembling those around us in manners, appearance, or moral conduct.

2. Often implying the idea of assimilation in criminality.

NEIGRE, s. A term of reproach, S; borrowed from Fr. negre, a negro.

NEIP, s. A turnip. V. NEEF.

S.

NEIPCE, NECE, s. A grand-daughter.

"The like is to be vnderstood of ane Neipce, or Neipces, ane or maa, begotten be the eldest sonne alreadie deceased, quha suld be preferred to their father brother, anent the succession of their Gudschirs heritage; except special provision of tailyie be made in favours of the aires maill."

Skene, Verb. Sign. vo. Eneya, Sign. L. 3.

For I the nece of mychty Dardanus,

And gude dochtir vnto the blissit Venus,

Of Mirmidones the realme sal neuer behald.

Doug. Virgil, 64, 53.

As far as I have observed, Skene still uses niece for grand-daughter, thus translating neptis in the Lat. V. Reg. Maj. B. ii. c. 23. s. 3. c. 32. by mistake numbered as 33, also c. 33.

The origin is undoubtedly neptis, which was used by the Romans to denote a grand-daughter only, while the language remained in its purity. Spartian seems to have been among the first who applied the term to a brother's daughter. Adrian. p. 2. B. On this word the learned Casaubon says; Juris auctoribus et vetustioribus Latinis nepos est tantum, ὁ ἐκ γυναικός, filii aut filiae natus. Posterior aetas produxit vocis usum ad ἀδελφίδους, natos fratre aut sorore; quam solam vocis ejus notionem, vernaculus sermo noster et Italicus agnoscunt. Not. in Spart. p. 6.

There seems to be no term, in the Goth. dialects, denoting a grand-daughter, which resembles the Lat. A.S. nift, however, a niece, is evidently from neptis. For by Aelfric it is written neptis, which he explains, brother dochter, vel suster dohter, Gl. p. 75. Germ. nift, nicht, a niece. A.S. and Alem. nift also signifies a step-daughter. Moes. G. nithjo, a relation; C.B. nith, a niece. Both these Wachter, (vo. Nicht), derives from Goth. nid, genus, propago; observing that hence the term not only bore the sense of neptis, but denoted relations of every kind. To this origin he refers Isl. nidur, filius, nidiungar, poster, nidin, cognatio nepotum, nidiar arf, haereditas quae transit ad proximos adscendentes et collaterales. Seren. views nidur, deorsum, as the origin of the terms last mentioned, as referring to property which descends.

NEIPER, s. A prov. corr. of neighbour, S.B.

Well, neiper, Ralph replies, I ken that ye

Had aye a gueed and sound advice to gee.

Ross's Helenore, p. 91.

NEIPERTY, s. Partnership.

S.

NEYPSIE, adj. Prim; precise in manners.

S.

To NEIR, NERE, v. a. To approach; also, to press hard upon.

Bot than the swypper tuskand hound assayis

And neris fast, ay reddy hym to hynt.

Doug. Virgil, 439, 30.

Teut. naeder-en, O. Fland. naers-en, Germ. nahe-n, propinquare.

NEIRS, NERES, s. pl. The kidneys, S. corr. eirs. See S.

I trow Sanctam Ecclesiam;

Bot nocht in thir Bischops nor freirs,

Quhilke will, for purging of thir neirs,

Sard up the ta raw and down the uther.

Lyndsay's S. P. Rep. ii. 234.

Thair, I suppose, should be read for thir.

Isl. nyra, Su.G. niure, Teut. niere, ren, nieren, renes.

NEIS, NES, s. The nose, S. See Sup.

N E I

Of brokaris and sic baudry how suld I write?
Of quham the fylth stynketh in Goddis neis.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 96, 52.

A.S. naese, nese, Su.G. naesa, Alem. nasa, Isl. noos, nasus. V. NEASE.

NEIS-THYRLE, NES-THRYLL, s. Nostril. S.

Vntill Eneas als thare Prince absent
Ane rial chare richely arrayit he sent,
With twa stern stedis therin yokit yfere,
Cummyn of the kynd of heuinlye hors were,
At thare neis thyrls the fyre fast snering out.

Doug. Virgil, 215, 33.

Out of the nes-thrylls twa.

The red bluid brystyd owt. Wyntown, vii. 8. 455.

"Eftir this the minister takis his spattel and vnetis the barnis neysthirles and the eiris, to signifie, that a christin man suld haue ane sweit savoir, that is to say, ane gud name and fame that he may be callit a gud christin man, & also that he haie alwais his eiris oppin to heir the word of God." Abp. Hamiltoun's Catech. Fol. 130. b. by mistake printed as 131.

A.S. naes-thyrlu, pl. from naese, and thyrl, S. thirl, foramen.

NEIST, NAYST, NEST, NIEST, adj. Nearest; next, S. neist, Westmorel.

Destynè swa mad hym ayre
Til Conrade this Emperoure,
And til hym hys neyst successoure.

Wyntown, vi. 13. 236.

Ah chequer'd life!—Ae day gives joy,
The niest our hearts maun bleed.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 80.

A.S. neahst, Su.G. Dan. naest, Belg. naast, Germ. nachste, Pers. nazd, id. V. NE.

NEYST, prep. Next.

Benedict neyst that wyf
Twa yhere Pape wes in hys lyf. Wyntown, vi. 6. 37.

NEIST, adv. Next, S.

A meaner phantom neist, with meikle dread,
Attacks with senseless fear the weaker head.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 55.

NEITHERS, NETHERINS, adv. Neither. S.

NEIVE, NEIF, s. 1. The fist, S. A. Bor. nieve, pl.
neiffis, nevys, newys, newffys.

And now his handis raxit it euery stede,
Hard on the left neif was the scharp stele hede.

Doug. Virgil, 396, 37.

And nevys that stalwart war and squar,
That wont to spayn gret speris war,
Swa spaynyt aris, that men mycht se
Full oft the hyde leve on the tre.

In MS. newys, Barbour, iii. 581.

Thar mycht men se men ryve thair har:
And comounly knychtis gret full sar,
And thair newffys oft samyn dryve,
And as woud men thair elathys ryve.

Ibid., xx. 257. MS.

The fine for "ane straik with the steiked neif," i. e. a stroke with the closed fist, was twelve pennies, or one penny Sterling. Reg. Maj. B. iv. c. 42. § 15.

—Skin in blypes came haurlin

Aff's nieves that night. Burns, iii. 136.

To fald the nieve, to clinch the fist. He wadg'd his nieve in my face, S. He threatened to strike me with his fist, S.B.

2. Hand to nieve, familiarly, hand and glove, S.

They baith gaed in, and down they sat,
And, hand to nieve, began to chat.

R. Galloway's Poems, p. 134.

N E I

Isl. nefi, knefe, knefwe, Su.G. knaef, now naefwe, Dan.
naeve, nefve, id. Ihre seems to think that the word may be derived from knae, which anciently denoted any knot or folding of a joint, in the human body, or otherwise.
Thus knefve, is defined by G. Andr., pugnus, manus complicata. This idea is much confirmed by the use of Isl.
hnue, which not only signifies the space between two joints, internodium digitorum a tergo palmae, but also a knot, a clue, a globe, nodus, glomus, globus, G. Andr. p. 118.

This word does not appear in A.S. or in any of the Germ. dialects of the Gothic. Fyste, or faust, was the term they used in the same sense, whence E. fist. See Sup.
NIEVEFU', NEFFOW, s. 1. A handful; as much as can be held in the fist; often neffow, as a neffow of meal;
neifefull, id. A. Bor.

A nievefu' o' meal, or a gowpen o' aits,—

Wad hae made him as blythe as a beggar could be.

Jamieson's Popular Ball. i. 301.

2. A small quantity of any dry substance. 3. Any person or thing very small and puny. 4. Metaphorically and contemptuously, what is comparatively little or of no value. S.

Tho' here they scrape, an' squeeze, an' growl,
Their worthless nievefu' of a soul
May in some future carcase howl,

The forest's fright. Burns, iii. 246.

5. A death's hold of what is deemed worthy of grasping.

The S. phrase, a neffow o' meal, is perfectly analogous to Su.G. naefwe miol, tantum farinae, quantum manu con-tinere possis. But Ihre observes, that the ancients always said, naefwe full. This evidently corresponds to the origin of our word; neif, and fow or full. Wideg. gives Sw. en naefwe, and en naefwe ful, as synon. for "a handful."

NIVVIL, s. The same; only differently pronounced, S.B.
To NEVELL, NAVELL, NEFFLE, v. a. 1. To strike or beat with the fists, S.

Indeid thow sall beir mee a bevell,
With my neives I sall the navell.

Philotus, S.P.R. iii. 49.

The weaver gae him sturdy blows,
Till a' his sides war nevell'd.

Rev. J. Nicol's Poems, ii. 153.

2. To take a hold with the fist; to take a handful of any thing, S. When used in this sense, it is pron. neffle.

Isl. hnyf-a, id. pugno prendo, from hnefe, the fist. Su.G.
hnuff-a, pugnus impetere, naefs-a, id.

As neave is used as a s., its derivative nevel, is also used as a v., Yorks.

She'll deal her neaves about her, I hear tell,
Nean's yable to abide her cruelty;
She'll nawpe and nevel them without a cause,
She'll macke them late their teeth naunt in their hawse.

"Nawpe and Nevill, is to beat and strike;" Gl. ibid.
Both terms seem to have the common origin given under Neive. But nawpe, is immediately allied to Isl. kneppe, pello, violenter propulso; G. Andr. pp. 116, 117. Neyve is used for the fist, Lancash.

3. To knead well; to leave the marks of the knuckles on the bread. 4. To pommel; to strike with any kind of instrument; used improperly. S.

NEVEL, NEVELL, s. A blow with the fist, S.

Wi' nevels, I'm amaisht fawn faint,
My chafts are dung a char.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 260.

Tho' some wi' nevvels had sare snouts,
A' bygones were neglected.

A. Nicol's Poems, 1739, p. 76.

N E P

NEVELLING, NEFFELLING, s. Fisticuffs, striking with the fist or folded hand, S.

—“Fra glouming thay came to schouldring, from schouldring they went to buffetis, and fra dry blawis be neiffis and nevellling.” Knox’s Hist. p. 51. N. 2. Sign. It is neffelling in both MSS.

To NEIFFAR, NIFFER, v. a. 1. To exchange or barter; properly, to exchange what is held in one fist, for what is held in another, q. to pass from one neive to another, S. See Sup.

“I know if we had wit, and knew well that ease slayeth us fools, we would desire a market where we might barter or niffer our lazy ease with a profitable cross.” Rutherford’s Lett. P. 1. ep. 78.

Stand yond, proud czar, I wadna niffe fame
With thee, for a’ thy furs and paughty name.
Ramsay’s Poems, ii. 322.

Wa is me! quhat mercat hath scho maid!
How neyffarit be parentis twa
Hyr bliss for bale, my luve for feid.
Jamieson’s Popular Ball. ii. 322.

2. To higgle; used in a neuter sense; as, “I’ll no put off time niffering wi’ ye.” S.

NEIFFER, NIFFER, s. A barter; an exchange, S.

Ye see your state wi’ theirs compar’d,
And shudder at the niffer. Burns, iii. 114.

NIFFERING, i. e. The act of bartering.

“I should make a sweet bartering and niffering, and give old for new, if I could shuffle out self, and substitute Christ my Lord in place of myself.” Rutherford’s Lett. P. i. ep. 37.

Noll acknowledges the same root. To this also we may perhaps trace Knuse, Know, and Gnidge, q. v.

NEIVIE-NICKNACK, s. A fire-side game. See Sup.

To NEK, v. a. To prevent receiving check, “a term at chess, when the king cannot be guarded;” Ramsay.

— Under cure I gat sik chek,
Quhilk I nicht nocht remuif nor nek,
But eyther stail or mait. Cherrie and Slae, st. 16.

Perhaps from Su.G. nek-a, to refuse.

To NELL, v. n. To Nell and Talk, to talk loudly, loquaciously, and frivolously. Syn. Now and Talk. S.

NELL, NELLY, s. A name substituted for Helen. S.

NEPIS, s. pl. Turnips. V. NEEP. S.

NEPS, s. Abbrev. of Elspeth or Elizabeth. S.

NEPUOY, NEPOT, NEPHOY, NEPHEW, NEVO, NEVW, NEWU, s. 1. A grandson. See Sup.

The heldare douchtyr yhoure modyre bare;
My modyr hyre syster wes yhoungare;
To the stok I am swa Newu.

Pronewu yhe ar.—
Newu for til have wndon,
Is nowthir brodyr na syster sone;

Bot fra the stok down ewynlykly
Discendand persownys lynealy

In the tothir, or the thryd gre,
Newu, or Pronewu suld be:

As for til call the swne swne,
[Or] the dowchtrys swa to be dwne,
Hyr swne may be cald Newu:

This is of that word the wertu.

Wyntown, viii. 3. 85. 111, &c.

“Failyeng sonnes and daughters,—the richt of succession pertainis to the Nepuoy or Neipce, gotten vpon the sonne or the daughter.” Skene, Verb. Sign. vo. Eneya.

Urry and Tyrwhitt refer to Chaucer’s Legend of Good Women (v. 2648) in proof that it denotes a grandson. But there it undoubtedly signifies nephew.

147

N E R

“We ar faderis, ye our sonnis, your sonnis ar our nepotis.” Bellend. Cron. B. i. Fol. 6. b. 7. a.

“Some alledges the after-borne sonne to be mair richteous aire, then the Nephoy.” Reg. Maj. B. ii. c. 33. s. 2. Nephew, ibid. c. 25. s. 3.

Bot, lo, Panthus slippit the Grekis speris—
Harling him eftir his littill neuo.

Doug. Virgil, 49, 51.

Lat. nepos, a grandson. V. NEIPCE.

2. A great-grandson.

Thus Venus is introduced as saying to Jupiter.

Suffer that ying Aseaneus mot be
Sauff fra all wappinnis, and of perrellis fre;
And at the leist in this ilk mortall stryffe
Suffir thy neuo to remane alyffe.

Doug. Virgil, 314, 12.

3. Posterity; lineal descendants, although remote.

The mene sessoun this Anchises the prince—
Gan rekin, and behald ententfully
Alhale the nowmer of his genology,
His tendir nevois and posterité,
Thare fatis, and thare fortouns euery gre.

Doug. Virgil, 189, 11.

— Of quhais stok the nevois and offspring
Vnder thare feit and lordschip sal behald
All landis sterit and reulit as thay wald.

Nepotes, Virg. Ibid, 208, 18.

4. A brother’s or sister’s son.

Hys newow, Malcolme cald, for-thi
Herytabil in-til his lyf
The Erldwme tuk til hym of Fyfe:
Eftyr that his Eme wes dede,
He Erle of Fyfe wes in his stede.

Wyntown, vii. 9. 328.

His Eyme Schyr Ranald to Rycardton come fast,—
And at the last rycht freindfully said he,
Welcum Neuo, welcum der sone to me.

Wallace, ii. 430. MS.

A.S. nepos, brother sune, vel suster sune, that is, nefa. Gl. Aelfr. p. 75. Nefa, newa, Lye; Germ. nef, Fr. neveu. This is now the usual sense of the term, S., although, as I am informed, some old people still call their grand-children nevoys, Loth. Tweedd. This signification is, however, nearly obsolete.

5. Any relation by blood, although not in the straight line.

Bot this Pape the nynd Benet
Til Benet the auchtand, that that set
Held before, wes newow nere. Wyntown, vi. 13. 57.

i. e. A near relation. “Benedict IX. succeeded. He was son of Alberic count of Tuscany, and a near relation of the two preceding Popes.” Walch’s Hist. Popes, p. 138. V. PRONEVW.

NEPUS-GABLE, s. Perhaps Timpany-gable, synonym. S. NER, NERE, prep. Near, S.

A.S. ner, Su.G. Dan. nacr. V. NYCHBOUR.

It is frequently used in composition; as, ner-by, nearly, S. Belg. byna.

NERHAND, NEARHAND, prep. Near; just at hand, S. See Sup.

Quhen thai the land wes rycht ner hand,
And quhen schippys war sailand ner,
The se wald ryss on sic maner,
That off the wawys the weltrand hycht
Wald refe thaim oft off thair sycht.

Barbour, iii. 716. MS.

Four scoyr of speris ner hand thaim baid at rycht.

Wallace, iv. 545. MS.

“They were standing at that time when hee hung quicke vpon the crosse, so near hand, that he speakes to them from the crosse, and they hearde him." Rollocke on the Passion, p. 213.

N E T

NERE HAND, adv. Nearly; almost.

Swa bot full fewe wyth hym ar gane;
He wes nere hand left hym alane.

Wyntown, viii. 26. 414.

NER TIL, prep. Near to, S.

NER-SICHTIT, adj. Short-sighted; purblind, S. a Goth. idiom; Su.G. naarsynt, id.

NERBY, NEARBY, prep. Near to. S.

NER BY, NEAR BY, adv. Nearly. S.

NER-BLUDIT, adj. Nearly related; near in blood. S.

NES, NESS, s. A promontory; generally pron. ness, S. See Sup.

Than I my selfe, fra this was to me schaw,
Doun at the nes richt by the coistis law,
Ane void tumb rasis, and with loude voice thryis
Apoun thay wandring and wrachit gaistis cryis.

Doug. Virgil, 181, 40.

A.S. naessa, ness, Su.G. naes, Belg. neus, id. This designation is undoubtedly borrowed from A.S. naese, nese, a nose, as a promontory rises up in the sea, like the nose in the face. V. Wachter, p. 1120. V. NEIS and NESS.

NES-THRYLL. V. NEIS-THYRLE.

NESS. S. pl. nessis.

Madem, he said, rycht welcum mot ye be,
How plessis yow our ostyng for to se?
Rycht weyll, scho said, off frendschip haiff we neid;
God grant ye wald off our nessis to speid.

Wallace, viii. 1237. MS.

This term may denote territories, confines in general; from A.S. ness, naesse, a promontory, used obliquely. But it seems rather to signify valleys, low grounds, according to another signification of the same A.S. word; nessas, profunda, loca depressa; Lye, vo. Nesse.

This sense corresponds with the description given of the site of Wallace's camp, when, as it is fabled, the Queen of England came to visit him.

— Chesyt a sted quhar thai suld bid all nycht,
Tentis on ground, and palyonis proudly pycht;
In till a waill, be a small rywer fayr,
On athir sid quhar wyld der maid repayr.

Ibid. v. 1174. MS.

Early editors, according to the inexcusable liberties they have generally taken, when they did not understand any term, have thus altered the former passage.

God grant ye will our errand for to speed.

Ness is the term used, Edit. 1758, p. 231.

NESSCOCK, NESSCOCKLE, s. A small boil. S.

NET, s. The omentum; the caul, or film which covers the intestines; S.

Teut. net, omentum; diaphragma, Kilian; A.S. net, nette, id.

NETES, s. Pl. of Nete, an unknown animal. S.

NETH, prep. Below; downwards.

Doune neth thai held, graith gydys can thaim leyr,
Abone Closbarn Wallace approchyt ner.

Wallace, ix. 1750. MS.

A.S. neothan, Su.G. ned, Isl. nedan, infra.

NETHELES, conj. Notwithstanding; nevertheless.

And netheles with support and correctioun,— Yit with thy leif, Virgil, to follow the,
I wald into my vulgare rural grose,
Write sum sauring of thy Eneadose.

Doug. Virgil, 3, 38.

Natheles is commonly used in the same sense by R.

Glouc. A.S. na the laes, id.

NETHER, s. An adder; a serpent. S.

N E V

NETHER, adv. Nearer. S.

NETHERANS, NAITHERANS, NAITHERS, conj. Neither. S.

NETHER END. The breech. S.

NETHIRMARE, adv. Farther down; farther below.

Tyll hellis fludis Enee socht nethir mare,
And Palinurus his sterisman fand thare.

Doug. Virgil, 173, 31.

A.S. nither, Isl. nedre, Su.G. neder, downward, and mare, more. The phrase is perhaps tautological. For all these terms seem comparatives formed from those mentioned under NETH.

NETHMIST, NETHMOST, adj. Undermost. S.

NETHRING, s. Injury; depression.

— He delt sa curtasly
With me, that on nawyss suld I
Giff consaill till his nethring.

V. NIDDER.

Barbour, xix. 155. MS.

NETTERIE, adj. Ill-tempered. S.

NETTY, s. A female wool-gatherer. S.

NETTY, adj. Mere. S.

NETTLE-BROTH, NETTLE-KAIL, s. Broth made of young nettles as a substitute for greens. S.

NETTLE-EARNEST, s. In nettle-earnest, no longer inclined to bear jesting, but growing testy. S.

NETTLIE, adj. Ill-humoured; peevish. S.

NEUCHELD, (gutt.) part. pa. With calf; a term applied to a cow that is pregnant, Perth. S.

NEUCK-TIME, s. The twilight as the season for pastime and gossiping among the working people. S.

To NEVELL, v. a. To strike or beat, &c. V. under NEIVE.

NEVELL, s. A stroke with the fist. V. under NEIVE. S.

NEVEW, NEVO, NEVOW. V. NEPUOY.

NEVIL-STONE, s. The key-stone of an arch. S.

To NEVIN, NEUIN, NYVIN, v. a. To name.

Quhat medis, said Spinagros, sic notis to nevin?

Gawan and Gol. ii. 16.

— We socht this cieté tyll,

As folkis flemyt fra thare natyue cuntré,
Vmquhile the maist souerane realme, trayst me,
That euer the son from the fer part of heuyn
Wyth his bemys ouer schane, or man couth neuin.

Doug. Virgil, 213, 1.

All thair namys to nyvin as now it nocht nedis.

Houlate, i. 3. MS.

By mistake nyum, Edit. Pink.

The v. occurs in R. Brunne, p. 20.

The date of Criste to neuen thus fele were gon,

Auht hundreth euen, & sexti & on.

Chaucer uses neuen in the same sense,

The s. occurs in Hardyng.

When he had reigned ful eyghtene yere,

Buried he was at Glastenbury to neuen.

Chron. Fol. 116. b.

Skinner views this word as paralogical of name. Rudd. gives no other view of it. Sibb. calls it "a corruption of name." But it is evidently from Isl. nafn, Dan. naffn, a name, whence naevn-er, to name, to call.

NEVYS, pl. Fists. V. NEIVE.

NEUK, s. Corner; the same with Nook, E. Far nook, the extremity of any thing; the utmost corner. In the neuk, in child-bed. S.

NEUKATYKE, s. 1. A shaggy collie, or shepherd's dog. 2. Applied to a man who easily masters another in a struggle or broil: He shook him like a neukatyke;

i. e. as easily as a powerful collie does a small dog. S.

NEULL'D, NULL'D, adj. Having very short horns. S.

NEVOY, s. A nephew. V. NEPUOY. S.

N E W

To NEW, v. a. To renovate; to renew; used in an oblique sense. See Sup.

Rise and raik to our Roy, richest of rent,
Thow sall be newit at neid with nobillay eneuch;
And dukit in our duchery all the duelling.

Gawan and Gol. iv. 6.

i. e. Thou shalt have new honours in abundance, be acknowledged as a duke, &c.

It occurs in a sense somewhat different in the S. Prov.; "It is a sary brewing, that's no good in the newing;" i. e. when it is new; "spoken when people are much taken with new projects." Kelly, p. 181.

A.S. neow-ian, id. Part. pa. niwod; Alem. niu-uonne, renovare, Schilter. Isl. Su.G. ny, novus, whence foer-ny-a, to renew; Germ. neu, whence er-neu-ern, id.

NEW,* adj. Of New; newly; anew. S.

NEWCAL, s. A cow newly calved, Loth., used as pl.
My faulds contain twice fifteen farrow nowt;
As mony newcal in my byers rowt.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 122.

NEW CHEESE. A kind of pudding made by simmering the milk of a newly calved cow. S.

To NEW, v. a. To curb; to master; to humble. V. NEW'D.

NEW'D, part. pa. "Oppressed; kept under;" Gl. Ross. S.B.

'Bout then-a-days, we'd seldom met with cross,
Nor kent the ill of conters, or of loss.
But now the case is alter'd very sair,
And we sair new'd and kaim'd against the hair.

Ross's Helenore, p. 92.

This, as synon. with Nidder, q. v. may be from the same source, A.S. neothan, infra, q. "kept at under," as explained. Or from A.S. neod-ian, nyd-ian, cogere; part. nied, enforced, constrained, Somner. Isl. naudga, neyde, cogo, subigo, vim facio. It seems to have more affinity to either of these than to Alem. nik-en, kenik-en, incurvare; although this verb is conjoined with the cognate of niddered; Kenichet unde genideret pin ih harto; Incurvatus et humiliatus sum nimis. Notker, ap. Schilt. p. 633.

NEW-YEAR'S-DAY. Among other superstitions, it is believed unlucky to have a corpse in the house on New-year's-day. S.

NEWYN.

Off sic mater I may nocht tary now,
Quhar gret dule is, bot rademyng agayne,
Newyn of it is bot ekyng of payne.

Wallace, vi. 193. MS.

Newing, Edit. 1754. The sense seems to be renewing.

V. NEW. I am not certain, however, that this does not signify, naming, from Nevin.

NEWINGIS, NEWINGS, s. 1. News; a fresh account of any thing. 2. Novelties; what one is not familiar with. S.

NEWIT, part. pa. Renewed. V. NEW.

NEWIS, NEWYS, NEWOUS, adj. "Parsimonious," Sibb. It generally signifies, earnestly desirous; also, covetous; greedy, Loth.

A.S. hneaw, tenax, "that holdeth fast;—also, niggish, sparing, hard, covetous," Somner. Su.G. niugg, Isl. niuggr, hnoggr, id. From the termination of our word, it would seem more nearly allied to Su.G. nidsk, nisk, avarus, parcus, tenax, from nid, avaritia. A. Bor. nything, sparing of, Alem. nied-en, concupiscere.

NEWLINGIS, adv. Newly; recently, S. newlins.

Syk hansell to that folk gaiff he,
Rycht in the fyrst begynnyng,
Newlingis at his arywyng.

Barbour, v. 122. MS.

A.S. newlice, Belg. niewlijchs, have the same sense. But this is formed from the adj. with the termination, Lingis, q. v.

N Y C

NEWMOST, adj. Nethermost; lowest, S.B.

"My side happen'd to be newmost, an' the great hudderen carlen was riding hockerty-cockerty upo' my shoulders in a hand-clap." Journal from London, p. 3.

A.S. neothemest, imus, infimus.

NEWOUS, adj. Newfangled; full of what is new. S.

NEWOUSLIE, adv. In a new-fangled way. S.

NEWOUSNESS, s. Newfangledness. S.

To NEWSE, v. n. To talk over the news. S.

NEWSIE, adj. Fond of hearing or repeating news. S.

NEWITH, prep. Beneath.

The New Park all eschewit thai,
For thai wist weill the King wes thar,
And newth the New Park gan thai far.

V. NETH. Barbour, xi. 537. MS.

To NIB, v. a. To press or pinch with the fingers.

They know'd all the kytral the face of it before;
And nib'd it sae doon near, to see it was a shame.

V. WORLIN. Montgomerie, Watson's Coll. iii. 19.

Isl. hneppe, coarcto; etiam pello, violenter propulso.

NIBAWAE, adj. Diminutive and meagre. S.

NIBBIE, s. A walking-staff with a hooked head. S.

NIBBIT, s. Two pieces of oatmeal cake, spread over with butter, and laid face to face. S.

NICE,* adj. Simple.

Quha that dois deidis of petie,
And leivis in pece and cheretie,
Is haldin a fule, and that full nice.

Bannatyne Poems, p. 169.

"Nice is from Fr. niais, simple. Thus Chaucer, Cukow and Nightingale.

For he can makin of wise folk full nice.

Thus also Dunbar;

Quhen I awoik, my dreme it was so nice.

Bannatyne Poems, p. 24."

Lord Hailes, Note. V. the following word.

It is rendered foolish, as used in O.E.

So tikelid me that nyce reverence,
That it ma-de larger of despence.

Hoccleve's Poems, p. 41.

NICETÉ, NYCETÉ, s. Folly; simplicity.

Thaim thocht it was a nyceté,

For to mak thar langer duelling,

Sen thai mycht nocht anoy the King.

Barbour, vii. 379. MS.

It seems to have had the same sense in O.E.

The kyng it was herd, & chastised his meyne,
& other afterward left of ther nycete.

R. Brunne, p. 123. Hoccleve, id.

Mr. Pinkerton derives this word immediately, as Lord Hailes does the adj., from Fr. niais, which primarily signifies a young bird taken out of the nest, and hence a novice, a ninny, a gull. But neither of these learned writers has observed, that Fr. nice, signifies slothful, dull, simple. It is probable, however, that niais is the origin; nies-er, to deal simply or sillily, being derived from nies, as synon. with niais. The Fr. word is probably from the Goth.; Moes.G. hnasquia, mollis, A.S. hnesc, nesc, tener, effeminatus, from hnesc-ian, mollire; Germ. nasch-en, Su.G. nask-a, to love delicacies.

NICE-GABBIT, adj. Difficult to please as to food. S.

To NICH, NYGH, v. a. To approach. V. NEYCH.

NYCHBOUR, NYCHTBOUR, s. 1. A neighbour.

Sum men ar gevin to detractioun,—

And to thair nychbouris hes no cherité.

Bellend. Cron. Excus. of the Prenter.

It is frequently written nichtbour, nychtbour; but, as would seem, corruptly.

"Gif it be a man that awe the hows, and birnis it reklesly, or his wyfe, or his awin bairnis, qubether his nychtbouris takis skaith or nane, attoure the skaith & schame that he tholis, he or thay salbe banist that towne for thre yeiris." Acts, Ja. I. 1426. c. 85. Edit. 1566. c. 75. Murray.

A.S. neah-ge-bure, Alem. nahgibur, Germ. nachbauer, from neah, nah, nach, near, nigh, and gebure, gibur, bauer, an inhabitant,—vicinus, colonus; literally, one who dwells near.

In O.E. ner seems occasionally to have been used for neighbour.

—My frend & my nexte ner stondeth agen me.

R. Glouc. p. 328.

"Next neighbour," Gl. Hearne; from A.S. adj. neah, vicinus; compar. near, propior, nigher, whence E. near.

2. An inhabitant, or perhaps rather a fellow-citizen. S.

The term near, indeed, whether used as an adj., a prep., or an adv., seems originally to have been a comparative. As A.S. near, is from neah, Su.G. naer seems to have the same relation to naa, prope. It confirms this idea, that next, whether used as an adj., a prep., or an adv., is evidently, in its original use, the superlative of A.S. neah; neahst, nehst, i. e. the person or thing nighest or most near to another. Su.G. naehst, proxime, is formed in the same manner from naa, prope; Alem. nahist, from nah; Germ. nechst, from nahe.

To NYCHTBOUR, v. n. To co-operate in an amicable manner in the labours of husbandry, with those living in the vicinity. S.

NYCHTBOURHEID, NYCHTBOURSCHIP, s. The aid which those who lived adjacent to each other, were bound by law to give to one another. Syn. Marrowschip. S.

NYCHBOURLIKE, adj. Like one's neighbours. S.

To NICKER, NEIGHER, (gutt.) NICKER, v. n. 1. To neigh, S.

I'll gie thee a' these milk-white steids,
That prance and nicker at a speir;
And as muckle gude English gilt,
As four of their braid backs dow bear.

Minstrely, Border, i. 65.

It is printed nicher, Ritson's S. Songs, ii. 10.

"And hark! what capul nicher'd proud?
Whase bugil gae that blast?"

Jamieson's Popul. Ball. i. 233.

"Little may an auld nag do, that mauna nicker;" Ferguson's S. Prov. p. 25. Ramsay writes it neigher.

Now Sol wi' his lang whip gae cracks
Upon his neighering coursers' backs.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 558.

"Nickering. Neighing. North." Gl. Grose.

A.S. gnaeg-an, Su.G. gnaegg-ia, id. whence Wachter derives nache, hnahe, a horse, E. a nag. See Sup.

2. To laugh in a loud and ridiculous manner, so as to resemble a horse neighing, S.

Now in the midst of them I scream,
Quban toozlin on the haugh;
Than qubihher by thaim down the stream,
Loud nickerin in a lauch.

Minstrely, Border, iii. 361.

NICKER, NICKER, s. 1. A neigh, S.

When she cam to the harper's door,
There she gave mony a nicker and sneer;
"Rise up," quo' the wife, "thou lazy lass, Let in thy master and his mare."

Minstrely, Border, i. 85.

2. A horse laugh, S.

NYCHLIT, pret. v.

—Syn to the samyn forsuth thai assent hale;
150

That sen it nychlit Nature, thair alleris maistris,
Thai coud nocht trete but entent of the temperale.

Houlate, i. 22.

This word is not distinct in the MS. It may signify, belonged to, as perhaps allied to A.S. neahlaecc-an, neolic-an, approximare; Alem. nahlíhhot, appropinquat.

NICHT-CQWL, s. A night-cap. S.

NICHTED, part. pa. Benighted. V. NICHTIT. S.

NICHT-HAWK, s. 1. A large white moth, which flies about hedges in summer evenings. 2. A person who ranges about at night. S.

NICHT-HAWKIN, adj. Addicted to nocturnal roaming. S.

NYCHTYD, pret. v. impers. Drew to night.

—It nychtyd fast: and thai

Thowcht til abyd thare to the day.

Wyntown, viii. 26. 77.

Su.G. Isl. natt-as, ad noctem vergere, quasi noctescere;

Alem. pi-nahten; pi-nachtet, obscuraverit, Schilter.

NYCHTYRTALE, s. Be nychtyrtale. In the night-time.

NICHTIT, part. pa. Benighted. S.

NICHT QUAIFFIS. Night-coifs. V. QUAIFFIS. S.

To NICK, v. n. A cant word signifying, "to drink heartily; as, he nicks fine." Shirr. Gl. S.B.

It is probable, however, that this word is of high antiquity; for, in Su.G. we find a synon. term, one indeed radically the same. Singulare est, quod de ebrio dicimus, Hafwa naagot paa nocka. This seems literally to signify, To have some thing notched against him. Thus, the phrase, he nicks fine, may properly signify, he drinks so hard, that he causes many nicks to be cut, as to the quantity of liquor he has called for. V. NICKSTICK.

To NICK, v. a. To throw off a small bowl, by a quick motion of the first joint of the thumb, which presses the marble against the forefinger. S.

NICK, s. The angle contained between the beam and the handle on the hinder side of a plough. Syn. Asee. S.

NICK, s. An opening between the summits of two hills. S.

To NICKER, v. n. To neigh. V. NICKER.

NICKERERS, s. pl. A cant term for new shoes. S.

NICKERIE, s. Little nickerie, a kindly style of address to a young child. S.

NICKET, s. A small notch, Sibb. Gl.

NICKIE, NIKIE, s. The familiar term for the name Nicol; sometimes for the female name Nicolas. S.

NICKIM, NICKUM, s. A wag; a tricky person. S.

NICK-NACK, s. 1. A gimcrack; a trifling curiosity, S.
Grose expl. nicknacks, "toys, baubles, or curiosities."
Class. Dict.

2. Small wares, S.B.

Blankets and sheets a fouth I hae o' baith,
And in the kist, twa webs of wholesome clait;
Some ither nick nacks, sic as pot and pan,
Cogues, caps, and spoons, I at a raffle wan.

Morison's Poems, p. 458.

Su.G. snicksnak is composed in the same alliterative manner; but differs in sense, signifying a taunt, a sarcasm.

S. a knack. Nicknack is probably formed in allusion to the curious incisions anciently made on bits of wood, by the Goth. nations, which served the purpose of Almanacks, for regulating their festivals. V. Worm. Fast. Dan. Lib. 2. c. 2.—5.

NICKNACKIE, adj. Dexterous at any nice work. S.

NICKNACKET, s. A trinket; a gimcrack. S.

To NICKS, NIX, v. n. To set up any thing as a mark, and take aim at it. S.

NICKSTICK, s. A piece of wood, corresponding to another, on which notches are made; a tally, S. See S.

"You are to advert to keep an exact nickstick between you and the coalier, of the number of deals of coals received in, and pay him for every half score of deals come in."—"A deal of coals is 23 hundred lib. weight. N." D. of Queensberrie's Instructions, &c. Trans. Antiq. Soc. Scot. p. 558.

This custom is still used by bakers.

The word is evidently from S. nick, Su.G. nocka, a notch, and stick. The simple mode of reckoning, by marking units on a rod, seems to have been the only one known to the Northern nations. This rod is in Sw. denominated karfstocke. Thus E. and S. score is used both for a tally, and for the notch made on it; from Su.G. skaer-a, incidere.

The Scandinavians, in like manner, formed their Almanacks by cutting marks on a piece of wood. V. Wormii Fast. Dan. lib. 1. c. 2. also, Museum Worm. p. 367. An almanack of this kind was in Denmark called Primstaff; in Sweden Runstaf, i. e. a stick containing Runic characters. A similar custom prevailed among the peasants in some parts of France. V. Ihre, vo. Runstaf.

NICKSTICK BODIE. One who proceeds exactly according to rule, who will not dine a second time with any person till he has made a return in kind. S.

NICNEVEN, s. A name given to the Scottish Hecate, or mother-witch; also called the Gyrecarlin. See S.

Fra the sisters had seen the shape of that shit,
Little luck be thy lot there where thou lyes,
Thy fumard face, quoth the first, to flyt shall be fit.
Nicneven, quoth the next, shall nourish thee twyse,
To ride post to Elphine nane abler nor it.—
Then a clear companie came soon after closs,
Nicneven with her Nymphs, in number anew,
With charms from Caitness and Chanrie in Ross,
Whose cunning consists in casting a clew.

Montgomerie, Watson's Coll. iii. 16.

There is no evidence that the first syllable of this name has any reference to Nick. For this is the Northern name given to "the angry spirit of the waters;" whereas Nicneven's operations seem to be confined to the earth and the air. Neven may be from Isl. nafn, a name, which seems sometimes to signify, celebrated, illustrious. Whether this designation has any affinity to the Nehae, or nymphs, worshipped by the ancient Northern nations, it is impossible to say. Wachter views these as the same personages called Mairae, or Matrons, vo. Neha. But Keyser distinguishes between them; Antiq. Septent. 263. 371.

Some peculiar necromancy must lie in casting a clew; as it is said of Nicneven and her nymphs,

Whose cunning consists in casting a clew.

This is one of the heathenish and detestable rites used on Hallow-even, by those who wish to know their future lot in the connubial state. The following is the account given of this ceremony in a note to Burns's Poems.

"Whoever would, with success, try this spell, must strictly observe these directions: Steal out, all alone, to the kiln, and, darkling, throw into the pot, a clue of blue yarn; wind it in a new clue off the old one; and towards the latter end, something will hold the thread; demand, wha hauds? i. e. who holds; and answer will be returned from the kiln-pot, by naming the christian and surname of your future spouse." Burns, iii. 139.

Some particular virtue must be supposed to be in the colour: and there is reason to apprehend that this idea has been of long standing. It is referred to by Montgomerie, in the invocation he puts in the mouths of his witches, in order to the accomplishment of their spells on a child represented as the brood of an Incubus. The Poet introduces Hecate, improperly printed Hecatus, as distinct from his Nicneven; although he has previously given the latter the honours ascribed to the former. He thought, perhaps, that the mother-witch of his own country owed some peculiar respect to the great enchantress of the classical writers.

On three headed Hecatus to hear them, they cry'd;
As we have found in the field this fundling forfairn,
First, his father he forsakes in thee to confyde,
Be vertue of thir words, and this raw yearn.
And while this thrise thretty knots on this blue threed,
And of thir mens members well sowed to a shoe,
Which we have tane from top to tae,
Even of a hundred men and mae;
Now grant us, goddess, or we gae,
Our duties to doe. Ibid. p. 17. 18.

It is not improbable, that this charm, of the clue, contains an allusion to the Greek and Roman fable of one of the Fates holding the distaff, another spinning, and a third cutting the thread of human life.

Nicneven displays her power, not only by making a sieve, notwithstanding all the leaks, as secure as the tightest boat, but by withdrawing the milk from cows. Of the pretended brood of the Incubus, it is further said;

Nicneven, as nourish, to teach it, gart take it,
To sail sure in a seif, but compass or cart;
And milk of a hair tedder, though wives should be wrackt, [l. wrackit,]
And a cow give a chopin, was wont to give a quart.
Many babes and bairns shall bless thy bair bairns,
When they have neither milk nor meil,
Compell'd for hunger for to steil. Ibid. p. 20.

In the Malleus Maleficarum, we have a particular account of the manner of conducting this process.

Quaedam enim nocturnis temporibus et sacratoribus utique ex inductione Diaboli, ob majorem offensam divinae majestatis, in quocunque angulo domus suae se collocant, urceum inter crura habentes, et dum cultrum vel aliquod instrumentum in parietem aut columnam infigunt, et manus ad mulgendum apponunt, tunc suum Diabolum, qui semper eis ad omnia cooperatur, invocant, et quod de tali vacca ei tali domo, quae sanior, et quae magis in lacte abundat, mulgere affectat, proponit, tunc subito diabolus ex mamillis illius vaccae lac recipit, et ad locum ubi Malefica residet, et quasi de illo instrumento fluat reponit. P. 354.

But the author seems to have been ignorant of the importance of the hair tedder; although it is not yet entirely forgotten by the vulgar in this country.

To NIDDER, NITHER, v. a. 1. To depress; to constrain; to keep under, S.

This seems to be the primary sense.

What think ye, man, will yon frank lassie please?
Will ye our freedom purchase at this price?—
Sair are we nidder'd, that is what ye ken;
And but for her, we had been bare the ben.

Ross's Helenore, p. 51.

Bat why a thief, like Sisyphus,
That's nidder'd sae in hell,
Sud here tak' fittinment,
Is mair nar I can tell.

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 4.

2. To press hard upon; to straiten; applied to bounds.
We haue bot sobir pussance, and no wounder,—
On this half closit with the Tuskane flude;
On yonder syde ar the Rutulianis rude,
Nidderis our houndis, as ful oft befallis,
With thare harnes clattering about our wallis.

Doug. Virgil, 259, 17.

3. To pinch or bind up with cold. Niddered, pinched with cold; constrictus frigore, Ang. Loth. "Nithered, starved with cold." Gl. Grose. See Sup.

4. To pinch, as referring to hunger; used both in the N. and S. of S. "Niddered, hungered, half-starved." Gl. Shirr. "Marred or stunted in growth," Sibb. See S.
5. To stunt in growth. Nidderit, Nitheryt, marred or stunted in growth. 6. To put out of shape, as by frequent handling and tossing. Nidderit and deformit. S.
7. The part. is also used, in a loose sense, as equivalent to "plagued, warmly handled," Shirr. Gl. See S. Sibb. renders niddering, "niggardly, sparing;" Chron. S. P. i. 143, N.

Rudd. mentions A.S. nid-an, urgere, nyd-ed, coactus; but more properly refers to nyther, deorsum. For our v. is perfectly synon. with Su.G. nedr-as, anciently nidr-as, deprimi; whence foer-nedr-a, to humble, Teut. ver-neder-en, id. Ihre, certainly with propriety, views ned, infra, as the root. Hence nedrig, low in place, also, humble. A.S. nither-ian, ge-nither-an, dejiere, humiliare, to bring or pull down; to humble, (Somner,) has a similar origin, from nyther.

R. Glouc. uses anethered, for diminished.

The compaynye athes half muche anethered was.

i. e. on this half or side.

Cron. p. 217.

NIDDER, s. The second shoot of grain in growing; in dry seasons it never bursts the nidder. S.

To NIDDLE, v. n. To trifle or play with the fingers; sometimes, to be busily engaged with the fingers, without making progress, S.

Isl. hnudl-a, to catch any thing with the fingers, digitis prensare, tractare, hnill-a, vellico, to pinch, to pluck. G. Andr. Su.G. nudd-a, to touch lightly; from Isl. hnue, internodium digitorum.

To NIDDLE, v. a. To overcome. S.

To NIDGE, v. n. To squeeze through a crowd or any narrow place with difficulty. V. GNIDGE. S.

NIDGELL, s. 1. A fat froward young man. 2. A stiff lover; one whom no rival can displace. S.

NIEF, s. A female bond-servant. S.

NIEL, s. The abbreviation of Nigel. S.

NIEVE, s. The fist, S. V. NEIVE.

NIEVESHAKING, s. Something dropped from the hand of another; a windfall. V. NEIVE. S.

To NIFFER, v. a. To exchange. V. NEIVE.

To NIFFER, NYFFER, v. a. To exchange; to higggle. S.

To NIFFLE, v. n. To trifle; to be insignificant in appearance, in conversation, or in conduct. S.

NIFF-NAFFY, adj. Troublesome about trifles. S.

NIFFNAFFS, (pron. nyiffnyaffs), s. pl. 1. Articles that are small and of little value, S.

2. It is sometimes used in relation to a silly peculiarity of temper, displayed by attention to trifles, S.

3. In the singular it sometimes denotes a small person, or one who has not attained full strength; as, "A bit niff-naff of a callant." S.

Fr. nipes, trifles. This is most probably from Sw. nipp, pl. nipper, id. V. the v.

To NIFNAFF, v. n. To trifle; to speak, or act in a silly way, S. synon. kiow-ow, S.B.

O my dear lassie, it is but daffin

To had thy wooer up ay niff-naffin.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 263.

"Niffynaffy fellow, a trifler;" Grose's Class. Dict.

From the sense of the v., it might seem allied to Isl. hnefe, the fist, q. to play with one's hands or fingers, like an idle awkward person.

NIGER, (g hard,) s. Corr. of Negro. S.

NIGGAR, NIGRE, s. A miser. S.

NIGGARS, s. pl. Contractors for a grate. S.

To NIGHT, v. n. To lodge during night.

To NIGHT TOGETHER. To lodge under the same roof. S.

NIGHT-HUSSING, s. A night-cap for a female. S.

NIG-MA-NIES, s. pl. Unnecessary ornaments. S.

NIGNAG, s. A gimcrak; a variety of Nicknack. S.

NIGNAYES, NIGNYES, s. pl. 1. Gim-cracks, trinkets, trifles, Shirr. Gl. pron. nignies, S.

Fr. niquet signifies a trifle, a bauble.

He was not for the French nig naves,

But briskly to his brethren says;

Good gentlemen, we may not doubt,

Wherefore the Duke of York's left out,

And is exempted from the Test,

Wherewith he doth turmoyl the rest;—

He thinks not fit to flench and flatter,

But to prove gallant in the matter:

And when he his designs commences,

Rears up Rome's kennels, yairds & fences.

Cleland's Poems, p. 92.

Perhaps flench should be fleech.

Poor Pousies now the daffin saw,

Of gawn for nignyes to the law,

And bill'd the judge, that he wad please,

To give them the remaining cheese.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 479. 480.

2. Whims; trifling scruples; peculiarities of temper or conduct, S.

I will not stay to clash and quibble

About your nignaves, I'll not nibble;

I'll with a bare word you redargue,

Tho' till your wind pipes burst you argue.

— Consider who's the church's Head,

And at your leisure, pray you read

Your oath, and explicating act;

And all you say's not worth a plack.

Cleland's Poems, p. 98.

From the contempt which the vulgar affect to pour on the forms of courtesy, acquired in civilized life, we might almost suppose that this term, in the latter sense, had originated from Su.G. nig-a, A.S. hnig-an, Isl. hneig-a, Germ. neig-en, to bow, to court'sy.

NYKIS, 3. p. pres. v. NYKIT, 3. p. past.

The renk restles he raid to Arthour the king.

Said, "Lord wendis on your way:

Yone berne nykis you with nay.

To prise hym forthir to pray

It helpis na thing. Gawan and Gol. i. 9. Edit. 1508.

This may merely signify nicks or hits you with nay, i. e. gives you a denial. It may, however, be a tautology, such as is common with our old writers; allied to Su.G. nek-a, to deny, from nei, no; q. he flatly denies.

NILD, "expl. Outwitted." Gl. Sibb.

This refers to Mr. Pinkerton's query, Gl. Maitl. with respect to the following passage.

I semit sobir, and sueit, and sempil without fraude,

Bot I nild sextie desane that subtillar war halding.

Maitland's Poems, p. 54.

But, as has been observed since by the editor, (S.P. Repr. i. xxvi.) in Edit. 1508, it is,

I could sextie desave, &c.

NYLE, s. Corr. of navel. S.

NILL YE, WILL YE. A phrase still used in S. signifying, Whether ye be reluctant or well pleased. S.

NYMNES, s. Neatness.

Thy cumly corps from end to end

So clenlie wes inclos'd,

That Momus nocht culd discommend,

So weill thou wes compos'd:

Thy trymnes and nymnes,

N I P

Is turn'd to vyld estait,
Thy grace to, and face to,
Is alter'd of the lait.

Burel's Pilg. Watson's Coll. ii. 50.

The term may perhaps originally include the idea of smallness of size, often connected with that of neatness; as allied to Isl. naum-r, arctus, exiguus; A.S. naemingce, contractio. Fr. nimbot denotes a dwarf.

NINE-EYED-EEL, s. The Lesser Lamprey. V. EEL. S.

NINE-HOLES, s. pl. 1. The game of Nine Men's Morris. 2. The piece of beef that is cut out immediately below the brisket or breast. S.

To NIP, NIP up, or awa, v. a. To carry off any thing by theft; as implying the idea of alertness and expedition, S.

"Ye was set aff frae the oon for nipping the pyes;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 87.

Then said she, Frae this back near thirty year,
Which is as yesterday to me as clear,
Frae your ain uncle's gate was nipt awa'
That bonny bairn, 'twas thought by Junky Fa.

Ross's Helenore, p. 126.

Either immediately from the v. as used in the ordinary sense; or as allied to Su.G. napp-a, carpere, vellere, cito arripere; Isl. knippe, raptim moto, knupla, furtim derogito, paululum furari.

Nip signifies a cheat, in cant language. Grose's Class. Dict. To nip, "to—bite, cheat, or wrong;" Gl. Lancash. Tim Bobbin.

NIP, NIMP, s. A small bit of any thing, q. as much as is nipped or broken-off between the finger and thumb, S. See Sup.

Su.G. nypa, id., quantum primoribus digitis continere valemus; Ihre, vo. Nupa.

NIP, s. A bite, a term used in fishing, S.

NIPCAIK, s. A name given to one who eats delicate food clandestinely, S. from nip and cake.

Nyse Nagus, nipcaik, with thy schoulders narrow.

Dunbar, Evergreen, ii. 57.

Perhaps it may here be equivalent to parasite.

NIPPIT, adj. 1. Niggardly; parsimonious, S. See Sup.

This term bears a striking analogy to Su.G. napp, knapp, Isl. naufr, knapp-er, arctus, exiguus; naep-peligen, anc. naept, aegre, vix, Dan. neppe, Isl. knept, scarcely, with difficulty, narrowly. Ihre views knipa, to compress, as probably the origin. Kilian seems to be of the same opinion; giving Teut. knipper, homo praeparcus, sordidus, in immediate connexion with knyp-en, arctare, premere, E. nip.

"A nip. A neat, thrifty, or rather penurious housewife. Norf." Gl. Grose.

2. Too small, scanty, in any sense; often applied to clothes which confine, or are too short for, the person who wears them, S.

Solace is made to say that his coat is —— schort and nippit. Lyndsay, S.P.R. ii. 29.

A nippit dinner, a scanty one, S. Sw. knapp naering, short allowance. Haer aer knapt efter foedan; Food is scarce here, Wideg.

NIPUG, s. Persons are said to be at nipug, when they quarrel, and are at the point of laying hold of each other, q. ready to pinch one another's ears, S.

NIP,* s. Cheese, and sometimes bread, is said to have a nip when it tastes sharp or pungent. S.

NIPPERS,* s. pl. The common name for pincers. S.

NIPPERTIE-TIPPERTY, adj. Childishly exact, or affectedly neat. Syn. Hippertie-tippertie. S.

NIPRIKIN, s. A small morsel. S.

N I T

NIP-SCART, s. A niggardly, crabbed, or peevish person.

NIPSHOT, s. To play nipshot, to give the slip.

"Our great hope on earth, the city of London, has played nipshot; they are speaking of dissolving the assembly." Bailie's Lett. ii. 198.

Perhaps, q. to nip one's shot, to take one's play, by moving so as to preclude him. V. SHOT. Or it may have some allusion to a person's taking himself off, without paying his shot or share of a tavern-bill. Belg. knippe, however, signifies a snare, a trap; perhaps, q. to shoot the snare, i. e. to escape from it.

NIRB, s. Any thing of stunted growth; a dwarf. S.

To NYRE, v. a. To beat; to pommel; a boyish term. S.

NIRL, s. 1. A crumb; a small portion of any thing, S.

2. A small knot, S.B. perhaps the same with A. Bor. narle, "a knot in a tangled skein of silk or thread," Grose. 3. A puny dwarfish person, whether man or child; as, a weary nirl, a feeble pigmy. S.

In the last sense, it is certainly allied to Teut. knorre, tuber, nodus; E. knur, knurle.

To NIRL, v. a. 1. To pinch with cold. 2. To contract; to make to shrink. Thai pickles (grains of corn) hae been nirl'd wi' the drouth. S.

NIRLED, adj. Stunted; applied to trees. S.

NIRLIE, adj. Very small; nirl'd; niggardly. S.

NIRLES, s. pl. The designation given in S. to a species of Measles, which has no appropriate name in E. It is said to be the Rubeola variolodes of Dr. Cullen. In the Nirles, the pimples are distinct and elevated, although smaller; in the common measles, they are confluent and flat. See Sup.

—With Parlesse and Plurisies opprest,

And nip'd with the Nirles.

V. FEYK. Montgomerie, Watson's Coll. iii. 14.

NISBIT, s. The iron that passes across the nose of a horse, and joins the branks together, Ang.

From neis, nose, and bit. The latter is not, as Johns. imagines, from A.S. bitel, but Su.G. bett, lupula.

NISE, s. Nose; properly niz. S.

To NYSE, v. a. To beat; to pommel. S.

NISSAC, s. The name given to a porpoise. S.

NIT, s. A nut; a hazel-nut. 2. The wheel of a cross-bow. S.

NIT-GRIT, adj. Of the size of a nut; as large or great. S.

NITCH, s. A bundle or truss. V. KNITCH. S.

To NYTE, v. n. To deny; pret. nyt.

His name and his nobillay was noght for to nyte.

Gawan and Gol. iii. 20.

— Thy commandement and stout begynning

Is sa douchty, I may the nyte nathing.

Doug. Virgil, 286, 9.

For sum wald haiff the Balleoll king,

For he wes cummyn off the offspryg

Off hyr that eldest systir was.

And othir sum nyt all that case;

And said that he thair king suld be

That war in als ner degre,

And cummyn war of the neist male.

Isl. neit-a, Dan. nacgt-er, id. Barbour, i. 52. MS.

To NYTE, v. a. To rap; to strike smartly. V. KNOIT. S.

NITHER, NIDDER, adj. Nether, S. Isl. nedre. Rudd. vo. Nethirmare.

To NITHER, v. a. To depress. V. NIDDER.

NITHERIE, adj. Wasted; growing feebly. V. NIDDER. S.

NITTERS, s. A greedy, grubbing, impudent, and old withered female. V. NITTIE. S.

NITTY, s. A little knave. S.

N O B

NITTIE, NEETIE, adj. Parsimonious ; niggardly ; covetous, S.

Su.G. gnetig, Mod. Sax. netig, id. A.S. gnetenesse, parsimony. O.E. nything, used both as an adj. and s., seems radically the same.

If thou have hap tresour to win,
Delight thou not too mickle therein,
Ne nything thereof be.

Sir Penny, Ellis, Spec. E. Poetry, i. 271.

The ingenious Editor, after Warton, (Hist. Poet. iii. 94.) renders it careless. But the meaning is quite the reverse ; parsimonious. Somner refers to Medull. Grammat., where tenax is explained in E. nything. This he mentions under A.S. nithing ; which, if the origin, has considerably changed its meaning. This is the same with Su.G. niding, a worthless person, one on whom any abuse may be poured ; which Ihre derives from nid, contumelia. A. Bor. nithing, sparing ; as, nithing of his pains, unwilling to take any trouble. Sibb. views this as synon. with niddering ; Chron. S. P. i. 143. N. But it would seem that they are radically different. V. NIDDER, v.

NITTLES, s. Horns just beginning to sprout ; applied to the small stunted horns of a sheep. S.

NITTLED, adj. Having horns beginning to sprout. S.

NYUCKFIT, s. The snipe. S.

NIVIE-NICKNACK, s. V. NEIVIE-NICKNACK. S.

To NYVIN, v. a. To name. V. NEVIN.

NIVLOCK, s. A bit of wood, around which the end of a hair-tether is fastened, for holding by. S.

NYUM, Houlate, i. 3. V. NEVIN.

NIVVIL, s. The full of the fist, S.B. V. NEIVE.

NIXIE, s. A naiad ; a water-nymph. S.

NIXIN, s. A play at fairs and markets in which some cakes of gingerbread are placed on bits of wood in a straight line ; and he who pays a halfpenny to the owner is entitled to one throw at them with a rung, and to as many cakes as he can displace. It is called Rowlie-powlie in Loth. S.

NIXT HAND, prep. Nighest to.

Nixt hand hir went Lauinia the maid.
Doug. Virgil, 380, 33.

NIXTIN, adj. Next. S.

NIXTOCUM, adj. Next. S.

NIZ, s. The nose, Ang. V. NEIS.

NIZZARTIT, part. pa. Stunted in growth. S.

NIZZELIN, part. adj. 1. Niggardly ; parsimonious, S.B.

2. Spending much time about a trifling matter, especially when this proceeds from an avaricious disposition, S.B.

Su.G. nidsh, nish, covetous, from nid, avarice ; A.S. nedling, nidling, an usurer ; Belg. nyd-en, to grudge. See S.

NO, adv. This negative has peculiar force in the Scottish language, converting any adjective to which it is prefixed into a strong affirmative of the contrary to its proper meaning ; as, He's no wyss, he's mad ; no blate, impudent, arrogant, &c. S.

NOAH'S ARK. An aggregation of clouds, assuming the appearance of a boat or yawl pointed at both ends. S.

NOB, s. A knob.

My neb is nytherit as a nob. I am bote ane oule.

Houlate, i. 5.

The h used in the E. word is left out.

NOBLAY, s. 1. Nobleness of mind ; as respecting one faithful to his engagements.

—As a man of gret noblay,
He held toward his trist his way,

N O C

Quhen the set day cummyn was ;
He sped him fast toward the place
That he nemmyt for to fycht.

Barbour, viii. 211. MS.

Nobley, Chaucer, nobility ; noblay, Gower, id. In R. Glouc. description of King Lear, it is said ;

He thogte on the noblei, that he had in y be. P. 34.

i. e. The noble state that he had been in.

And afterwards of Arthur ;

Tuelf yere he bylevede tho here wyth nobleye y now.
P. 180.

i. e. He lived twelve years with dignity enough.

2. It immediately respects courage, intrepidity.

Bot he that, throw his gret noblay,

Till perallis him abandownys ay,

To recomfort his menye,

Gerris that he be off sa gret bounté,

That mony tyme wnlukly thing

Thai bring rycht weill to gud ending.

Barbour, ix. 95. MS.

Sibb. mentions Fr. noblesse. But it is from O. Fr. noblois, of the same meaning, nobilitas.

Si quiet les mondaines delices,

L'envoiserie, et le noblois.

Dict. Trev.

NOBLE, s. The Pogge, or Armed Bullhead, a fish ;

Cottus cataphractus, Linn. This is the name at Newhaven. See Sup.

NOCHT, adv. Not.

Yheyt has he nocht sa mekill fre

As fre wyll to leyve, or do

That at hys hart hym drawis to.

Barbour, i. 246. MS.

In The Bruce, nocht is almost uniformly the MS. reading, where we find not in the printed copies. This error in orthography has been owing to the carelessness of transcribers, who have not observed that nocht is often written not, as a contr.

Nogt is used in the same sense by R. Glouc., and noght by R. Brunne.

Moes. G. niwaiht, nihil, from ni, no, and waiht, Isl. waett, Su.G. waetta, the smallest thing that can be supposed ; hence E. whit, S. hait. A.S. naht, noht, nihil ; also, non.

NOCHT FOR THI, conj. Nevertheless.

And nocht for thi his hand wes yeit

Wndyr the sterap, magre his.

V. FOR THI.

Barbour, iii. 123. MS.

NOCHTGAYNESTANDARD. Notwithstanding. S.

NOCHTIE, adj. 1. Puny in size, and at the same time contemptible in appearance. 2. Bad ; unfit for any purpose ; applied to an instrument. S.

NOCHTIS, s. Naught ; of no value. S.

NOCK, NOK, NOKK, s. 1. The nick or notch of a bow or arrow. See Sup.

— The bowand nokkis met almaist,

And now hir handis raxit it euery stede,

Hard on the left neif was the scharp stele hede.

Doug. Virgil, 396, 35.

2. The corner or extremity of the sailyard.

Now the le scheyt, and now the luf thay slayk,

Set in ane fang, and threw the ra abake ;

Bayth to and fra, al dyd thare nokkys wry :

Prosper blastys furth caryis the nauy.

Doug. Virgil, 156, 17.

3. The notch of a spindle, Shirr. Gl. S.B.

—Ane spindle wantand ane nok.

Bannatyne Poems, p. 160. st. 7.

Teut. nocke, crena, incisura ; incisura sagittae. E. nock, is synon. with notch. Sw. nochor, denticuli incisi, Seren. Ital. nocchia. Isl. knocke, is used in relation to a spindle, apparently as in sense 3. Unciolus, qualis est in fuso; G. Andr. p. 118.

N O Y

NOCKIT, NOKKIT, part. adj. Notched.

With arrow reddy nokkit than Eurytione

Plukkit vp in hy his bow. Doug. Virgil, 144, 50.

NOCKIT, NOCKET, NOKKET. s. A luncheon; a slight repast taken between breakfast and dinner, S. Aust. (eleven-hours, synon.) "perhaps nooncate, or cake," Sibb. See Sup.

NOCKET-TIME, s. The time for taking a luncheon. S.

NOCKS, s. pl. Little beautiful hills. V. KNOCK. S.

NOD,  s.* The land of Nod, the state of sleep. S.

NODDY, s. 1. A one-horse coach, moving on two wheels, and opening behind; now called a Minibus.

2. A small coach on four wheels, drawn by one horse. S.

NODDLE-ARAD, adv. Head foremost. S.

To NODGE, v. n. 1. To sit or go about in a dull stupid kind of state. 2. To NODGE alang, to travel leisurely. S.

To NODGE, v. a. To strike with the knuckles, S.B.

This is nearly allied to Gnidge, although used in a different sense. V. GNIDGE and KNUSE.

NODGE, s. A push or stroke. Syn. Dunsh, Punsh. S.

NOG, s. 1. A knob; a stake or peg, driven into the wall, with a hooked head. 2. A large peg driven through divots to keep them on a cottage roof. S.

NOGGAN, part. pr. Walking steadily and regularly nodding the head. S.

NOGGIE, s. A small wooden vessel with an upright handle. The Coag is larger, and the Luggie of a size between it and the Noggie. S.

To NOY, v. a. To annoy; to vex; to trouble. See Sup.

The godly pepill he sall noy

Be cruell deith, and them distroy;

The King of Kingis he sall ganestand,

Syne be distroyit withouttin hand.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 150.

Teut. noy-en, noey-en, id. Sw. nog-a, laedere. Ihre derives it from noga, parcus, accuratus, as properly applied to those who hurt or injure others by confinement, or by treating them with too much strictness. Hence, NOYIT, part. pa. 1. Vexed; troubled, S.

2. Wrathful; raised to violent rage, S.B. hite, heyrd, synon. The term implies that there is at the same time a discovery of pride.

It may, in both senses, be from the v. But it seems doubtful, if, in the second, it be not rather allied to Isl. kny-a, knude, movere; whence ahnian, instigatio, commotio.

NOY, s. Trouble; annoyance.

The King thar at had gret pité:

And tauld thaim petwisly agayne

The noy, the trawail, and the payne,

That he had tholyt, sen he thaim saw.

Barbour, iii. 554. MS.

NOYIS, s. "Annoyance; damage," Gl. Wynt.

For constance, wyth a stedfast thowcht

To thole ay noyis, qwha sa mowcht,

May oftsys of wnlkly thyng

Meu rycht welle to thare purpos bryng.

Wyntown, viii. 36. 108.

This, however, I suspect is the pl. of noy.

NOYOUS, adj. Noisome; disgusting.

I am deformit, quoth the foul, with faltis full fele,

Be nature nytherit, ane oule noyous in nest.

Houlate, i. 20.

This is the reading in MS. instead of,

I am descernit of the foul, &c.

Be nature nicherit ane oule noy quhar in nest.

S. P. Repr. iii. 157.

N O L

NOYRIS, NORYSS, NURICE, s. Nurse; S. noorise.

Nyrrar that noyris in nest I nycht in ane.

Houlate, i. 4. MS.

His fyrst noryss, of the Newtoun of Ayr,

Till him scho come, quhilk was full will of reid.

Wallace, ii. 257. MS.

For hir awin nuris in hir natyue land

Was beryit into assis broun or than.

Doug. Virgil, 122, 25.

But harkee, noorise, what I'm gaing to sae,

We will be back within a day or twae.

Ross's Helenore, p. 95.

"Mony a ane kisses the bairn for love of the nurice;"

Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 55.

Norm. Sax. norice, Fr. nourisse, id.

Sibb. has ingeniously remarked the apparent affinity of this term to Su.G. naer-a, salvare; also, alere; whence Nerigend, the name of the Saviour, analogous to A.S. haelend, from hael-an, salvare. V. Neren, Gl. Schilter.

NOYNSANKYS, s. pl. Apparently, a meridian, or dinner at noon. S.

NOISOME, adj. Noisy. S.

NOIT, s. A small rocky height. S.

To NOIT, NYTE, v. a. To strike smartly; to give a smart rap or stroke, S. V. KNOIT.

NOITING, s. A beating. S.

NOITLED, part. adj. Intoxicated with spirits. S.

NOK, s. A notch, &c. V. Nock.

NOLD, would not.

I nold ye traist I said thys for dyspite,

For me lyst wyth no man nor bukis flyite.

Doug. Virgil, 7, 55.

Nolde, id. is often used by Chaucer, according to Tyrwhitt, for ne wolde. But A.S. nolde, frequently occurs in the sense of noluit, as the pret. of nell-an, nill-an, nolle, which is indeed contr. from ne and will-an, not to will. Ne willan sometimes occurs without the contr.

NOLDER, conj. Neither. V. NOUTHER.

To NOLL, v. a. To press, beat, or strike with the knuckles, S.B., sometimes null. See Sup.

"To Null, to beat; as, He nulled him heartily;" Grose's Class. Dict.

Alem. knouel, Dan. knogle, Germ. knochel, a joint, a knuckle. V. Nevell, under NEIVE.

NOLL, s. A strong push or blow with the knuckles, S.B.

NOLL, s. A large piece of any thing, as of bread, cheese, meat, &c. S.B.

It is equivalent to S. knot, Su.G. knoel, tuber, a bump. This seems the primary sense of E. knoll, q. a knot or bump on the surface of the earth. Knot and noll seem to have the same origin, Isl. hnue, as denoting the form of the knuckles. V. KNOT.

NOLT, NOWT, s. 1. Black cattle, as distinguished from horses, and sheep. It properly denotes oxen.

"All persons clemand the office of keiping of the Kings forests and parks, sall suffer na maner of gudes, horse, meiris, nolt, sheip or vther cattell, to be pastured within the Kings forests." Skene, Crimes, Tit. 4. c. 36. s. 7. V. also Pitscottie, p. 21.

Als bestial, as horss and nowt, within,

Amang the fyr thai maid a hidwyss din.

Wallace, viii. 1058. MS.

Although a collective n. it is used in composition for an individual of the kind, as a nowt-beast, S.

Isl. naut, Dan. nod, Sw. nood, not, an ox, not, oxen; Isl. nauta madr, a herdsman. These are radically the same with A.S. neat, jumentum, a labouring beast; niten, nitenu, pecora, Somner; E. neat.

But it is evident, that our term more nearly resembles those used in the Scandinavian dialects.

The description given of Bos by Linn. contains a striking proof of the great affinity between the S. and Sw.

2. Metaph. used to denote "a stupid fellow." S.

3. "A great muckle nout," a big, lumpish, inactive man. S.

Suecis Noet [nout, S. ;] mas, Tiur ; castratus Oxe ; junior Stut, [S. Stot, id. ;] foemin. Ko, donec prima vice peperit, Quiga, [before her first calf, a quoy, S.] Faun. Suec. p. 46. Ed. 1800.

NOLTHIRD, s. A neatherd ; a keeper of cattle, S.

— Like as that the wyld wolf in his rage,—

Quhen that he has sum young grete oxin slane,
Or than werryit the nolthird on the plane.

Doug. Virgil, 394, 35.

"Nout-herd, A neat-herd. North." Gl. Grose.

NOLT-TATH, s. Rich grass raised by manuring. V. TATH. S.

NOWT-HORN, s. The horn of an ox or a cow, on which one blows to collect the cattle, &c. S.

NOME, pret. Taken.

The croune he tuk apon that sammyne stane,
At Gadalos send with his sone fra Spaine,
Quhen Iber Scot fyrst in till Irland come,
At Cannmor syne king Fergus has it nome,
Brocht it till Scwne, and stapill maid it thar.

Wallace, i. 124. MS.

In all the edit. which I have seen, it is erroneously printed won, or wone.

This is an O.E. word, which I do not recollect to have met with in this form in any other S. work. Doug. writes nummyn. Both nam and nom are used in the same sense by R. Glouc. and R. Brunne ; Chaucer, nome, id. ; from the O.E. v. nime, to take ; A.S. Alem. nim-an, Moes. G. nim-un, Su. G. nam-a, naem-a, Isl. nim-a, nem-a, Germ. nehm-en. V. NUMMYN.

NONE, s. 1. Noon.

And, als sone as the none wes past,
Him thought weill he saw a fyr,
Be Turnberry byrnand weill schyr.

Barbour, iv. 617. MS.

The word formerly signified three o'clock afternoon, or the ninth hour, when the nones, a name hence given to certain prayers, were said. This term being used by Chaucer, Tyrwhitt expl. it, "the ninth hour of the natural day ; nine o'clock in the morning ; the hour of dinner." According to Sibb., "perhaps the prayers, called the nones, were, in Chaucer's time, recited three hours before, instead of three hours after, mid-day." But it is more natural to suppose that Tyrwhitt was mistaken in his definition. For there is no evidence that, in Chaucer's time, the nones were celebrated so early. A.S. non uniformly signifies "the ninth hour of the day, which was at three of the clock afternoon ;" Somner.

2. Dinner.

Gif seruandis of ane familie
Had daylie meit sufficientlie
Provydit for thame, and na mair ;
Than gif the Stewart sa wald spair
And on this sort their meit dispoine,
Of ane dayis meit mak four dayis none,
Wald not thay seruandis houngerit be,
And leif in greit penuritie ?

Diall. Clerk & Courteour, p. 21.

Fr. none, id. A.S. non-mete, "refectio, vel prandium, a meale or bever at that time," Somner ; so called, because the priests used to take a repast after the celebration of the nones.

NON-FIANCE, s.

"Essex much suspected, at least of non-fiance and misfortune ; his army, through sickness and runaways, brought to 4000 or 5000 men, and these much malcontented that their general and they should be misprised." Baillie's Lett. i. 391.

It seems to signify discredit, want of confidence ; from Fr. non the negative, and fiance, trust, confidence.

NONFINDING, part. pr. Not finding. S.

NONOBTANT. Notwithstanding. S.

NONREDDING, s. Not cleaning ; not clearing out. S.

NON-SOUNT, s. A term denoting a base coin.

"Now thay spair not planelie to brek down and convert gud and stark mony, cunyit in our cunye-house in our Soveranes les aige, into this thair corrupted scruef and baggages of Hard heidis and Nonsounts." Knox's Hist. p. 164.

This is not to be viewed as the designation of any particular coin, but of base money in general. It is of Fr. origin. Messieurs de non sont, is a phrase mentioned by Cotgr. as applied to men who are supposed to be imperfect in a physical sense ; perhaps from non the negative particle, and sonte, the use or profit of rents that have been mortgaged, or detained by judicial authority, q. no return ; or from L.B. sont-ius, verax, q. not genuine ; or still more simply, from the 3. p. pl. of the v. subst. q. they are not.

NON-SUCH, s. A person without a parallel. S.

NONE-SUCH, adj. Unparalleled. S.

NOOF, NUFE, (Fr. u.) adj. Neat ; trim ; spruce ; snug. S.

To NOOK, NEUK, v. a. 1. To check ; to snib ; to put down ; to humble. 2. To trick ; to outwit ; to take in. S.

NOOK, NEUK, s. 1. To Keep, or Hald one in his ain Nook, to keep a person under ; to keep one in awe. S.

2. To turn a Nook upon, to outwit ; to overreach. S.

NOOL, s. A short horn ; a bump or knob. S.

NOOPING, part. pr. Walking with the eyes cast on the ground, and the head nodding. S.

NOOST, s. The action of the grinders of a horse in chewing his food. S.

To NOOZLE, v. a. To press down ; to squeeze. S.

NOOZLE, s. A squeeze ; a crush. S.

NOP BED. A bed made of wool ; a flock-bed. S.

NOP SEK. Apparently a sack or bag made of hard or coarse cloth, perhaps for containing wool. S.

NOR, conj. Than, S.

The gudwyf said, I reid yow lat thame ly,
Thay had lever sleip, nor be in laudery.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 75.

"Sum thair be also that under cullour of seiking the Quenis authoritie, thinkis to eschape the punishment of auld faultis, and haue licence in tyme to cum to oppres thair nichtbouris, that be febillier nor thai." Buchanan's Admon. to Trew Lordis, p. 6.

It is used in the same sense, A. Bor. V. Gl. Grose.

This, as far as I have observed, is not very ancient.

Na, q. v. is used in the same sense by our earliest writers.

NORIE, s. The Puffin, Orkn. Alca arctica, Linn. ; the Tam Norie of the Bass. See Sup.

"Among these we may reckon—the pickternie, the norie, and culterneb." P. Kirkwall, Orkn. Statist. Acc. vii. 546. This in Orkn. is also called TOMMY NODDIE, q. v.

Norw. noere, signifies puellus, homuncio, G. Andr. p. 186. q. the boy, or mannikin. Hence perhaps the reason of his being otherwise called by the diminutive of a man's name.

NORIE, s. A whim ; a reverie, Perth ; a maggot. S.

Sw. narr-as, to trifle with one, illudere ; narr, a fool ?

NORIE, s. Abbrev. of Eleanor, or Eleanora. S.

NORYSS, s. Nurse. V. NOYRIS.

NORLAN, NORLIN, NORLAND, adj. Of or belonging to the North country, S.B.

N O S

Four and twanty siller bells
Wer a' tyed till his mane;
And yae tift o' the norland wind,
They tinkled ane by ane.

Percy's Reliques, ii. 235.

Quhan words he found, their elritch sound
Was like the norlan blast,
Frae yon deep glack at Catla's back,
That skeegs the dark-brown waste.

Minstrelsy, Border, iii. 359.

As the orthography of this word is various, I am at a loss whether it has been originally q. northland, or allied to Isl. nordlingr, norling-r, aquilonarius. Perhaps norlin is the proper form. Dan. nordlaend-r, however, signifies a northern man.

NORLINS, adv. Northward, S.B.

They rub their een, and spy them round about,
Thinking what gate the day to hadd their rout.
Nae meiths they had, but norlins still to gae,
Kenning that gate that Flaviana lay.

Ross's Helenore, p. 75.

NORLICK, KNURLICK, s. A lump; a tumor; a hard swelling occasioned by a blow, S.B.

"I wat she rais'd a norlick on my crown that wis nae well for twa days." Journal from London, p. 3.

A dimin. from E. knur, knurl, a knot; or immediately from Teut. knorre, a knot, a knob, a small swelling. Su.G. knorrlic is applied to the hair, when knotted or matted. These, perhaps, are all originally from Isl. hnue, internodius digitorum.

NORLOC, s. A cyst growing on the head of some persons, even to the size of an orange. S.

NOR'LOCH, s. The corr. of North loch, the name of a body of stagnant water which formerly lay in the hollow between the High Street of Edinburgh and the ground on which Prince's Street stands. It is now drained and laid out as pleasure grounds. S.

NOR'LOCH TROUT. A cant phrase formerly denoting a joint or leg of mutton; this being the only kind of fish which the North loch (in which the shambles were situated) could supply. S.

NORTHART, adj. Northern; corr. from Northward. S.

NORTHIN, NORTHYN, adj. Northerly.

"The thrid cardinal vynd is callit septemtrional or borial, quhilk vulgaris callis northen vynd." Compl. S. p. 95. Northyn, Barbour.

Sw. nord, norden, North; nordan-waeder, a north-wind, Seren.

NOSEBITT, s. Any thing acting as a check or restraint. S.

NOZEL, NOZLE, s. A small socket or aperture. S.

NOSEWISE, (pron. nosewyss), adj. 1. Having, or pretending to have, an acute smell, S. See Sup.

2. Used metaph. in relation to the mind, to denote one, who either is, or pretends to be, quick of perception.

"Your calumnies,—that the shew of worldly glorie hath turned me out of the path-way of Christ, that a man nose-wise (like you) might smell in my speeches the sanour of a vaine-glorious, and selfe-pleasing humour,—are but words of winde." Bp. Galloway's Dikaiologie, p. 173.

Germ. naseweis, self-witted, presumptuous, critical; Sw. naeswis, saucy, malapert.

NOSS, s. Apparently the same with Ness, a promontory. S.

NOST, s. Noise; talking; speculation about any subject, S.B. See Sup.

Allied perhaps to Su.G. knyst-a, Dan. knyst-er, to mutter, to make a low noise, from Su.G. kny, id.; or Isl. hnys-a, scrutari, sciscitari.

N O U

NOT, know not.

Bot Timetes exhortis first of all
It for to lede and draw within the wal,—
Quhiddir for dissait I not, or for malice.

V. NAT.

Doug. Virgil, 39, 43.

NOTAR, s. A notary public. S.

To NOTE, v. a. 1. To use, in whatever way, S.B. See S.

Than the agit Drances with curage hote
Begouth the fyrst hys tounge for to note,
As he that was bayth glaid, ioyful and gay

For Turnus slauchter.— Doug. Virgil, 466, 55.

A.S. not-ian, nytt-ian, Moes.G. niut-an, Su.G. niut-a, anc. nyt-a, Isl. niot-a, to use, to enjoy.

2. To take victuals; to use in the way of sustenance.

He notes very little, he takes little food, S.B.

Teut. nutt-en, uti; vesci, sobrie degustare; Isl. nautin, eating, from neitte, vescor; Su.G. noet-a, usu conficere, deterere, Ihre.

3. To need; to have occasion for, Ang. Mearns.

"He would note it, i. e. needs it, or has use for it."

Rudd. vo. Nate. Nott, needed, Euchan.

As used in this sense, it might seem a different v., formed from Moes.G. naud, Su.G. noed, Belg. nood, necessity. But indeed the idea of necessity is very nearly allied to that of use.

NOTE, NOTT, s. 1. Use; purpose; office.

Sum sleuit knyffis in the beistis throttis,

And vtheris (quhilk war ordant for sic notis)

The warme new blude keppit in coup and pece.

Doug. Virgil, 171, 47.

2. Necessity; occasion for, S.B.

Alem. not, Su.G. noed, id. Belg. nut, use, nuttelyk, useful.

NOTELESS, adj. Unnoticed; unknown; Gl. Shirr.

NOTH, s. Nothing; the cipher 0. S.

NOTOUR, NOTTOUR, adj. 1. Well known; notorious, S.

"Of things nottour, there are some which cannot be proven, and yet are true, as such a man is another's son.—Again, there are things nottour, which need no probation, which are facti transeuntis, as that a person did publicly commit murder." Steuart's Collections, B. iv. Tit. 3. § 18.

2. What is openly avowed and persisted in, notwithstanding all warnings to the contrary, S.

"We distinguish between simple and notour adultery. Notorious or open adulterers, who continue incorrigible, notwithstanding the censures of the church, were punished by 1551. c. 20. with the escheat of their moveables: but soon after, the punishment of notorious adultery was declared capital, by 1563. c. 74." Erskine's Instit. B. iv. T. 4. s. 53.

Fr. notoire, notorious, open.

NOUDS, NOWDS, s. Little fish, about the size of herrings, with a hornyskin; perhaps the Yellow Gurnard. S.

NOVITY, s. Novelty. S.

NOUP, NUPS, s. A round-headed eminence. V. KOOP. S.

NOURICE, s. A nurse. S.

NOURICE-FEE, s. The wages given to a wet-nurse. S.

NOURISKAP, s. 1. The place or situation of being a nurse, S.

2. The fee given to a nurse, S.

From A.S. norice, a nurse, and scipe, Belg. schap, Su.G. skap, a termination denoting a certain state. V. NOYRIS.

NOUST, s. 1. A landing-place, or inlet for admitting a boat to approach the shore. 2. A sort of ditch in the shore in which a boat may be moored. S.

NOUT, s. Black cattle. V. NOLT.

NOUTHER, NOWTHIR, NOLDER, conj. Neither, S. A.S. nouther, Franc. newether.

N O W

Nouther fortres, nor turrettis sure of were Now graith they mare.

Doug. Virgil, 102, 41.

Hardyng uses nother.

The yere so then viii. c. was expresse,
Four and thirtie, nother more ne less.

Chron. Fol. 104, b.

"And quhen thay haue gottin the benefice, gyf thay haue ane brother, or ane sone, ye suppose he can nolder sing nor say, norischeit in vice al his dayis, fra hand he sal be montit on ane Mule with ane syde gown, & ane round bonett, & than it is questioun, quether he or his Mule knawis best to do his office. Perchance Balaame's Asse knew mair nor thay baith." Kennedy of Crosraguell, Compend. Tractiue, p. 80.

NOUVELLES, NOUELLES, s. pl. News, S.

"Dauid said til hym, I pray the that thou declair to me all the nouvelles of the battel." Compl. S. p. 185.

During that nicht thair was nocht ellis,
Bot for to heir of his nouellis.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592.

NOW, s. The crown or top of the head, the noddle.

Out ovr the neck, athort his nitty now,
Ilk louse lyes linkand like a large lintbow.

Polwart's Flyting, Watson's Coll. iii. 23.

In the same sense must we understand the S. Prov.

He had need to have a heal pow,
That calls his neighbour nitty know. Kelly, p. 133.

"A little hill full of nits." Ibid. N. He mistakes it, as if it were the same with E. knoll. But Ferguson gives it thus:

He would need a heal pow,
That calls his neighbour nitty now.

A.S. hnol, id. vertex; whence E. jobbernol; Germ. nol, nal, id. Nal occurs in this sense in the Salic law. For in Franc. it was equivalent to sinciput. Like Lat. vertex, it not only denoted the head, but a mountain. See Sup. Thus in Otfred,

Berga sculun suinan,
Ther nol then dal rinan.
Montes debent tabescere,
Collis vallem contingere.

Lib. i. c. 23.

"Both," as Wachter observes, "denote something that is lofty and towering,—the head in the human frame, a hill in a plain." He is at a loss to determine which of these is the original sense. V. Wachter, vo. Nal. It seems, however, most likely that the metaph. was borrowed from the human body, as in other instances. The term swyre, signifying the neck, is transferred to the hollow or defile near the summit of a hill. A ridge of mountains undoubtedly derives its name from Isl. hryggr, Su.G. rygg, dorsum, S. rigging; as Lat. dorsum, which primarily signifies the back of an animal, is transferred to a ridge; Germ. rucken, id. The same is the origin of S. rig, E. ridge of land, because all ridges in ancient times were much raised towards the crown. It is probable, from analogy, that Su.G. backe, a hill, has the same origin, although it differs in orthography from bak, tergum, and is traced to a different source by Northern etymologists. Of the same description are, the brow of a hill, and ness, a promontory, from Isl. nes, the nose; the shoulder, i. e. the slope of a hill, the side, the hip, the shank, the foot, &c. of a hill, S. What is called the shank, is otherwise denominated the shin, denoting that part of a hill by which it is conjoined with the plain. V. GRUNE.

The term coast, Doug. coist, seems applied to land bordering on the sea, from coist, the side in the human body, q. the side of the sea. We may also mention Lat. os, ostium, Germ. munde, E. mouth, transferred from the human body, to the place where a river empties itself into a larger one, or into the sea. An isthmus is called S. a tongue of land, Lat. lingula, Fr. langue, as langue de terre; also, E. a neck of land.

N U M

NOW,* adv. Now is used in S. in a sense unknown in E. "He was never pleased with his work, who said Now, when he had done with it." S.

To NOW, v. n. To Now and Talk, to talk loudly, loquaciously, and in a silly manner. "A nowan talker." S.

NOWDER, conj. Neither. S.

NO-WYSS, adj. 1. Foolish; without thought or reflection. 2. Deranged; as, "That's like a no-wyss body." S.

To NOWMER, v. a. To reckon; to number. S.

NOWTIT, part. adj. A potato is said to be nowtit when it has a hollow in the heart. S.

NUB-BERRY, s. This, I am informed, is the Cloud-berry or Knoutberry, Rubus chamaemorus, Linn. See Sup.

"Upon the top of this hill, grows a small berry, commonly called the Nub Berry. It bears some resemblance to the bramble berry, and is pleasant enough to the taste. It is not improbable, that the hill might derive its name from this berry, which perhaps might be called the Queen of Berrys, or Queensberry, as being thought the most delicious of wild berries." P. Closeburn, Dumfr. Statist. Acc. xiii. 243.

Would it not have been worth while, to have brought some queen or other to this spot, who had left her designation to this berry, as being her favourite?

NUBBIE, s. A walking-staff with a hooked head. S.

NUBBIE, s. An unsocial person, worldly yet lazy. S.

NUCE, NESS, s. Destitute; in very necessitous circumstances, Aberd.

"A nuce or ness family, means a destitute family." P. Peterculter, Aberd. Statist. Acc. xvi. 385.

From Su.G. noed, necessity; or an oblique sense of nisk, parsimonious.

NUCKLE, adj. A nuckle cow, expl., a cow which has had one calf, and will calve soon again, Buchan.

Both this, and Neucheld, seem therefore to be originally the same with Newcal, q. v.

NUDGE, s. A push or stroke with the knuckles. S.

NUFE, adj. Neat; spruce; trim. V. Noof. S.

NUGET, NUDGET, s. A person of short stature with a large belly. S.

NUIF, adj. Intimate. V. KNUFF, v. S.

NUIK, s. The corner of any thing. E. nook. S.

NUKIT, NUIKEY, part. adj. Having corners. S.

To NUIST, v. n. To continue the action of eating; to be still munching. V. under Noost, s. S.

To NUIST, v. a. To beat; to bruise. V. KNUSE. S.

NUIST, s. A blow; a stroke. S.

NUIST, s. A greedy, ill-disposed ignorant person. S.

NUIST, s. A large piece of any thing. V. KNOOST. S.

NULE-KNEED, adj. Having the knees so close as to strike against each other in walking; knock-kneed, S. perhaps q. knuckle-kneed, from cnouel. V. NOLL, v.

NUMMYN, part. pa. 1. Taken.

Within the portis and entré
Of my faderis lugeing I am cumin,
My fader than, quham I schupe to haue nummyn,
And caryit to the nerrest hillis hicht.

Doug. Virgil, 60, 6.

2. Reached; attained.

Bot forthirmore I will vnto the say,
Quhen thai the grund of Italy haiff nummyn,

O B E

- Thay sall desire neur thidder to haue cummyn.
Doug. Virgil, 165, 43.
 Both Rudd. and Sibb. render this word as if it were the infin. of the verb, whereas it is the part. pa. V. NOME.
To NUMP, v. a. To nibble. S.
NUNCE, s. The Pope's legate, or nuncio. S.
NUNREIS, s. A nunnery.
 "He foundit the colleige of Bothwell and the nunreis of Lynclowden, quhilk wes eftir changit in ane colleige of preistis." Bellend. Cron. B. xvi. c. 12.
NUPE, s. A protuberance. V. NOUP. S.
NURDAY, NOORSDAY, s. New-year's-day. S.
NURDAY, adj. Of or belonging to New-year's-day. S.
NURG, NURGLE, s. A short, squat, savage man. S.
NURIS, s. A nurse. V. NOYRIS.
NURISFATHER, s. Nursing-father. V. NOYRIS. S.
NURLING, s. A person of a snarling disposition. S.
NURR, s. A decrepit person. V. KNURL. S.
To NURR, v. n. To growl; to snarl like a dog when irritated. S.
NURRIS-BRAID, adv. Applied to persons who begin to work too furiously to hold on. S.
NURRIT, s. An insignificant or dwarfish person. S.

O B L

- To NUSE, v. a.* To press down; to knead. V. KNUSE.
NUTTING-TYNE, s. Perhaps a forked instrument for pulling nuts from the tree. V. TYND. S.
To NYAFF, v. n. To yelp; to bark, S. It properly denotes the noise made by a small dog; although sometimes applied to the pert chat of a saucy child, or of any other person of a diminutive size. V. NIFF-NAFFS.
NYAFFING, part. adj. Idle, insignificant and chattering; as, "Had your tongue, ye nyaffing thing." S.
To NYAM, v. a. To chew. S.
To NYARG, v. n. To jeer; to taunt. S.
NYARGIE, adj. Jeering; taunting. S.
NYARGLE, s. A person fond of disputation. S.
NYARGLING, part. pr. Wrangling. S.
To NYARR, NYARB, v. n. To fret; to be discontented. S.
NYAT, NYIT, s. A smart stroke with the knuckles. S.
To NYAT, v. a. To strike in this manner. S.
To NYATTER, v. n. 1. To chatter. 2. To speak in a grumbling and peevish manner. V. NALTER. S.
NYATTERIE, NYATRIE, adj. Ill-tempered; peevish. S.

O.

It has appeared, from a great variety of examples, that instead of o in E. we use a. It is singular, that, on the other hand, as if it had been the effect of design, in several words, in which a occurs in E., we substitute o. Thus, instead of cave, lane, rave, &c. we say, cove, lone, rove, &c.

O, art. One, for a.

Mine hors the water upbrought
 Of o pow in the way. Sir Tristrem, p. 168.

O, s. Grandson. V. OE.

OAFF, OOFF, adj. Decrepit; worn down with disease. S.

To OAG, v. n. To creep. S.

OAY, adv. Yes. S.

OAM, s. Steam; vapour, arising from any thing hot.
Oam of the kettle, the vapour issuing from it when it boils, S.

This is probably the source of A. Bor. omy, mellow, applied to land. V. Ray. Su.G. em, im, imme, Isl. im, imma, vapor, fumus tenuis. Verel. derives the Isl. word from Moes.G. ahma, spiritus. A.S. aethm, "vapour, breath," Somner, is undoubtedly allied; and perhaps Isl.
hiomi, foam.

OAT-FOWL, s. The name of a small bird, Orkn.

"A small bird, rather less than a sparrow, resorts here in winter, supposed to be the same with what is by some called the Empress's bird in Russia, and is called by the people here oat-fowls, because they prey on the oats.
 Some who have eat both kinds say, this bird is equally delicate eating with the ortolan." P. Cross, Orkn. Statist.
 Acc. vii. 461.

OBEDIENCIARE, s. A churchman of inferior rank. S.

OBEFOR, prep. Before; q. of before. S.

To OBEY, v. a. To grant. S.

To BE OBEYIT of. To receive in regular payment; to have the full and regular use of. S.

OBEYSANCE, s. The state of subjection to, or holding of another; the state of a feudal retainer. S.

OBERING, s. A hint; an inkling of something important, yet thought a secret. S.

To OBFUSQUE, v. a. To darken.

— "The eclips of the soune cummis be the interposi-tione of the mune betuix vs and the soune, the quhilk empeschis and obfusquis the beymis of the soune fra our sycht." Compl. S. p. 87.

Fr. obfusquer, Lat. ob and fusc-are, id.

OBJECT, s.* A very deformed person; or one much diseased, or who has lost his faculties. He's a mere object; He is a perfect lazar. S.

OBIET SILVER. Money exacted by the priest, during the time of popery, on occasion of death in a family. S.

OBIT, s. The name of a particular length of slate, Ang.

To OBLEIS, OBLYSE, v. a. To bind; to oblige; corrupted from the Fr. word. This term is used, indeed, with the same latitude as E. oblige. See Sup.

Hence oblist, part. pa. stipulated, engaged to.

Or quhat aualis now, I pray the, say,

For til haue brokin, violate or schent

The haly promyssis and the bandis gent,

Of peace and concord oblist and sworne?

Doug. Virgil, 460, 4.

OBLISMENT, OBLEISMENT, s. Obligation. S.

O C K

OBLIUE, s. Forgetfulness; oblivion; Lat. ob-liv-io.

Pluto, thou patroun of the depe Acheron,—

Lethe, Cocyte, the wateris of obliue,—

Thyne now sall be my muse and drery sang.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 158, 10.

OBROGATION, s. Abrogation. S.

OBSCURE,* s. Secret; concealed. S.

OBSERVE, s. An observation; a remark, S.

—“ Their 7th Act, which was the occasion of great suffering afterward,—I have insert App. No. 8. and take the liberty to make some observes upon it.” Wodrow, i. 24.

To OBSET, OBSETT, v. a. To repair; sometimes, to refund. S.

OBTAKEN, part. pa. Taken up. S.

To OBTEMPER, v. a. To obey. S.

OC, OCK. A termination originally signifying young, used in forming diminutive nouns; as from Jean, Jeanock, young or little Jean; from Bess, Bessock; or from Bit, Bittock, a little bit, &c. S.

OCCASION, s. Setting; going down, (of the sun.) S.

OCCASION,* s. A term used to denote the dispensation of the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper. S.

OCH HOW, interj. Ah, alas! S.

OCHIERN, s. A person, according to Skene, of the same dignity with the son of a Thane; as appears from the marcheta of an Ochiern's daughter, being the same with that of the daughter of a Thane, and the Cro of a Thane being equivalent to that of an Ochiern.

“ Item, the marchet of the dochter of ane Thane or Ochiern, twa kye, or twelue schillings.” Reg. Maj. B. iv. c. 31.

This passage, however, would rather prove that the Ochiern was equal to a Thane; for their daughters are subjected to the same fine.

L.B. ogetharius. Sibb. rather fancifully supposes that “ the title might originally signify lord of an island, from Sax. aege, Heb. oghe, insula; and Scand. & Teut. herre, vel Sax. hearra, dominus.”

“ The word is undoubtedly Gaelic, contracted from Oge-Thierna, that is, the young lord, or heir apparent of a landed gentleman.” MacPherson's Crit. Diss. D. 13.

“ Ogetharius is derived from Oig-thear, that is, the young gentleman.” Ibid. N.

According to the same writer, “ the Greeks derived their Τυραννος from Tierna,” which he deduces from Ti, the one, and Ferran, lord, in the oblique case, Eran.

Lhuyd, however, inverts this process, deducing tiaern, from Lat. tyrannus. Lett. to the Scots and Irish, Transl. p. 12.

OCCIOSITE, s. Idleness. S.

OCKER, OCKIR, OCCRE, OKER, s. 1. Usury.

“ Paction anent ocker or vsurie sould nocht be keiped: but the aith interponed thereto sould be keiped.” Reg. Maj. B. i. c. 31. s. 3.

Occre; Hamiltoun's Rewl to discern trew from fals Religion, p. 401.

2. It seems also used in the sense of interest, even when legal.

“ Quhat is the perfection of vertew, quhilk God requiris to the rycht keiping of this command? To be liberal of thy awin geir at thy power, to gyf thame almous, quhen thay mister, to len thame gladlie, quhen thay wald borrow without hope of wyning or of ockir.” Abp. Hamiltoun's Catechisme, 1551, Fol. 57, a.

Su.G. ockr, okr, primarily increase of any kind, in a secondary sense, usury. Teut. oecker, Isl. okur, A.S. ocer, wocer, Belg. woeker, Germ. wucher, Dan. aager, are used in the latter sense. Teut. woecker-en, to lend on usury. Ihre, certainly with propriety, derives okr, from ock-a, augere, analogous to eik. Junius, in like manner, observes that Franc. uuachar and uuocher, denote fruit of any kind, as that of the ground, and also usury, q. the fruit or increase arising from money; from auch-on, Moes.G. auk-an, augere, as A.S. ocer is from eac-an, and Teut. oecker from ock-en. V. Gl. Goth. vo. Akran, fructus.

O D I

OCKERER, s. An usurer.

“ All the gudes and geir pertaining to ane ockerer, quhither he deceis testat or vntestat, perteins to the King.” Reg. Maj. B. ii. c. 54. s. 1.

Sw. ockrare, Belg. woekeraar, Germ. wucherer, id.

OCTIANE, adj. Of or belonging to the ocean.

Cesar of nobill Troyane blud born sal be,

Quhilk sal the empire dilate to the octiane se.

Doug. Virgil, 21, 48.

OD, interj. A minced oath; corr. of the name of God. S.

ODAL LANDS. V. UDAL.

ODD, used as a s. To go, or gae to the odd, to be lost. S.

ODDS AND ENDS. 1. Scraps; shreds; remnants. Syn.

Orrows. 2. Small or trifling pieces of business. S.

ODER, conj. Frequently used in the sense of either. S.

ODIN. Promise of Odin, a promise of marriage, or particular sort of contract, accounted very sacred by some of the inhabitants of Orkney.

“ At some distance from the Semicircle, to the right, stands a stone by itself, eight feet high, three broad, nine inches thick, with a round hole on the side next the lake. The original design of this hole was unknown, till about twenty years ago it was discovered by the following circumstance. A young man had seduced a girl under promise of marriage, and she proving with child, was deserted by him. The young man was called before the Session; the elders were particularly severe. Being asked by the minister the cause of so much rigour, they answered, You do not know what a bad man this is; he has broke the promise of Odin. Being further asked what they meant by the promise of Odin, they put him in mind of the stone at Stenhouse with the round hole in it, and added, that it was customary, when promises were made, for the contracting parties to join hands through this hole; and the promises so made were called the promises of Odin.” Remarks in a Journey to Orkney, by Principal Gordon, Transact. Soc. Antiq. Scot. i. 263.

This remarkable stone is connected with several others.

“ The largest [stones] stand between the kirk of Stenness and a causeway over a narrow and shallow place of the loch of Stenness. Four of these form a segment of a circle; and it is probable there has been a complete semicircle, as some stones broken down seem to have stood in the same line. The highest of those now standing is about eighteen feet above the level of the ground. At a little distance from these is a stone with a hole of an oval form in it, large enough to admit a man's head; from which to the outside of the stone, on one side, it is slender, and has the appearance of being worn with a chain.” P. Firth, Orkn. Statist. Acc. xiv. 134, 135.

The common tradition is, that this was a place consecrated to heathen worship, and that the sacrifices were bound to this stone; whence it is supposed to have derived that sanctity still ascribed to it by superstition.

We find a remarkable coincidence with that already mentioned, in a custom which existed among the Highlanders, at the western extremity of Scotland, and which might probably have been borrowed by their Saint from the Goths.

“ Couslan—inculcated in the strongest manner the indissolubility of the marriage tie, (a point probably as necessary to be inculcated in his time, as in our own;) and if lovers did not yet find it convenient to marry, their joining hands through a hole in a rude pillar near his church, was held, as it continued to be till almost the present day, an interim tie of mutual fidelity, so strong and sacred, that, it is generally believed, in the country, none ever broke it, who did not soon after break his neck, or meet with some other fatal accident." P. Campbellton, Argyles. Statist. Acc. x. 537. See Sup.

The custom mentioned above is evidently a relique of the worship of Odin, or Woden, whence our Wednesday. It had been established there, by some colony that left Scandinavia, before the introduction of Christianity; or which, although bearing the Christian name, retained, as was frequently the case, many of the rites of heathenism.

Nor is this the only memorial of this Northern deity, in the islands of Orkney. Those in the isle of Shapinshay shew that his worship has not been confined to one place; as well as that the ceremony above described has not received its designation incidentally.

"Towards the north side of the island, and by the sea side, is another large stone, called the Black Stone of Odin. Instead of standing erect, like the one above mentioned, it rests its huge side on the sand, and raises its back high above the surrounding stones, from which it seems to be altogether different in quality. How it has come there, for what purpose, and what relation it has borne to the Scandinavian god with whose name it has been honoured, not only history or record, but even tradition, is totally silent. As the bay in a neighbouring island is distinguished by the name of Guuden, or the Bay or Guo of Odin, in which there is found dulce that is supposed to prevent disease and prolong life; so this stone might have had sanctity formerly which is now forgotten, when the only office that is assigned it is to serve as a march stone between the ware strands or kelp shores of two conterminous heritors." P. Shapinshay, Statist. Acc. xvii. 235.

The place referred to is undoubtedly that in the island of Stronsay.

"There is a place called Guiyidn, on the rocks of which that species of sea-weed called dulce is to be found in abundance; which weed is considered by many to be a delicious and wholesome morsel." Statist. Acc. xv. 417. N.

"Such confidence do the people place in these springs, (which, together, go under the name of Kildinguie,) and at the same time in that sea-weed named Dulce, produced in Guiyidin, (perhaps the bay of Odin,) as to have given rise to a proverb, "That the well of Kildinguie and the dulce of Guiyidin will cure all maladies but Black Death." Barry's Orkney, p. 50.

"The resemblance in sound which two of these [nesses], Torness and Odness, have to Thor and Woden, the Teutonic deities, leaves room to conjecture their origin." Statist. Acc. xv. 388.

Besides what has been mentioned concerning Thor and Odin, there seem to be some vestiges of the worship of Saturn in the Orkney islands.

"In passing across the island [Eda], we saw at some distance the great stone of Seter,—a huge flag, rising about sixteen feet upright in the midst of a moor." Neill's Tour, p. 38.

I have not observed, indeed, that the Scandinavians had any deity of this name. But we know that he was worshipped by the Saxons, who were from the same stock. By them he was called Seater, and also Crodo. Verstegan thinks that he had no connexion with the Roman Saturn. V. Restitution, p. 85—87. Junius holds the contrary opinion.

We have no evidence, that the Saxons ever had any settlement in the Orkneys. But if we can give any faith to ancient history, the Picts had. Now, were we assured of what seems highly probable, that this stone, like that of Odin, had been consecrated to Seater; it would form no inconsiderable presumption of near affinity between the Saxons and Picts.

ODIOUS,* adj. Used in Mearns. as a mark of the superlative degree; synon. with Byous. S.

ODISMAN, ODMAN, s. A chief arbiter; one called in to decide when the original arbiters cannot agree. S.

ODWOMAN, s. A female called in to decide when the arbiters in a cause are equally divided. S.

ODOURE, s. "Nastiness; filth, (illuvies,)" Rudd.

We hym behald and al his cours gan se,
Maist laithlie full of odoure, and his berd
Rekand down the lenth nere of ane yerde.

Doug. Virgil, 88, 27.

Rudd. conjectures that it should be ordure. Yowther, however, is used S. for a bad smell. V. MISCHANT.

OE, O, OY, OYE, s. 1. A grandson, S. See Sup.

So in hys tyme he had a dochter fayr;—

Malcom Wallas hir gat in mariage,

That Elrislè than had in heretage,

Auchinbothe, and othir syndry place;

The secund O he was of gud Wallace:

The quhilk Wallas fully worthely at wrocht,

Quhen Waltyr hyr of Waillais fra Warayn socht.

Wallace, i. 30. MS.

This passage is obscure. But Malcom, the father of the Deliverer of his country, seems to be represented as the second grandson, i. e. not the heir, or, perhaps, the great-grandson of a former Wallace, who had been famous in his time.

Then must the Laird, the Good-man's Oye,
Be knighted streight, and make convoy.

Watson's Coll. i. 29.

Auld Bessie, in her red coat braw,

Came wi' her ain oe Nanny. Ramsay's Poems, i. 272.

2. In the Mearns it is used to denote a nephew. S.

Sibb., from too warm an attachment to system, endeavours to force a Goth. etymon. But it is unquestionably of Celtic origin. Gael. ogha, id. Ir. ua, according to Lhuyd, a grand-child. Obrien, however, says; "It signifies any male descendant, whether son or grandson, or in any other degree of descent, from a certain ancestor of stock." In composition, O; as O-brien, the son, grandson, or any other descendant of Brian; O-Flaherty, &c.

O'ERBLADED, part. pa. Hard driven in pursuit.

I was by Mortoun dogs

O'erbladed through the stanks and bogs.

V. BLAD, v.

Watson's Coll. i. 61.

O'ERBY, adv. Over; denoting motion from one place to another at no great distance from it. S.

O'ERCOME, s. 1. The overplus, S.

Were your bien rooms as thinly stock'd as mine,
Less ye wad loss, and less ye wad repine.
He that has just enough can soundly sleep;
The o'ercome only fashes fowk to keep.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 67.

2. The burden of a song or discourse. 3. A by-word; a hackneyed phrase; one frequently used by anyone. S.

O'ERCOME, s. Something that overwhelms one. S.

To O'EREND, v. a. To turn up; to turn over endwise. S.

To O'EREND, O'EREN', v. n. To be turned topsyturvy. S.

To O'ERGAE, O'ERGANE. V. OURGAE. S.

O'ERGAFFIN, part. adj. Clouded; overcast. S.

To O'ERHING, v. a. To overhang. S.

O'ERYEED, pret. of v. Overpassed; went beyond. S.

O'ERWORD, s. Any term frequently repeated, S. V.

OURWORD.

OFF-CAP, s. The act of uncovering the head, as a compliment or token of respect. S.
 OFF-COME, s. 1. Apology; excuse. 2. It also denotes an escape in the way of subterfuge or pretext. S.
 OFFENSIOUN, s. Injury; damage. S.
 OFFER of a brae. The overhanging bank of a river that has been undermined by the action of the water. S.
 OFF-FALLING, s. A declension. S.
 OFF-FALLER, s. One who declines from any course; an apostate. S.
 OFF-GOING, s. Departure; exit by death. S.
 OFFICEMAN, s. 1. A janitor. 2. An office-bearer about a court, or in a burgh. S.
 OFFICIAR, s. An officer of whatever kind. S.
 OFFSET, s. A recommendation, any thing that makes one appear to advantage, S.
 One mov'd beneath a load of silks and lace,
 Another bore the off-sets of the face.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 40.

OFFSKEP, s. The utmost boundary in a landscape. S.
 OFTSYIS, OFT-SYTHIS, adv. Oft-times, often. V. SYIS.
 OGART, s. Pride; arrogance.
 Cwmyn it is has gyffyn this consaill;
 Will God, ye sall off your fyrst purpos fail.
 That fals traytour, that I off danger brocht,
 Is wondyr lyk till bryng this realm till nocht.
 For thi ogart othir thow sall de,
 Or in prisoun byd, or cowart like to fle.
 Reskew off me thow sall get nane this day.

Wallace, x. 155. MS.

This is part of the reply of Wallace to Stewart of Bute, who had claimed the right of leading the van, and compared Wallace to the Houlate dressed in borrowed feathers. If the sense given above be the proper one, the term may be allied to Sw. hogfard, Alem. hohfart, Germ. hoffart, pride, which Wachter derives from hog, high, and far-a, to tend; Ihre, the last part of the word, from A.S. ferth, mind, soul. As ogertful, however, signifies nice, squeamish, the s. may be applied to the mind, by a figure borrowed from the reluctance manifested by one who has a squeamish stomach. V. next word.

OGERTFUL, OGERTFOW, UGERTFOW, adj. 1. Nice; squeamish, S.B.

"It was enough to gi' a warsh-stamack'd body a scunner; but ye ken well enough that I was never werra ogertfu'." Journal from London, p. 3.

2. Affecting delicacy of taste, S.B.

Our fine new fangle sparks, I grant ye,
 Gie poor auld Scotland mony a taunty,
 They're grown sae ugertfu' and vaunty,
 And capernoited.

Beattie's Address. Ross's Helenore.

A.S. oga, Isl. ogn, iggur, ugg, uggir, fear, horror; Moes.G. og-an, Isl. og-a, to fear; ugg-a, to fear evil beforehand, to have a presage of evil in the mind; Isl. ugglikr, metuendus. Ihre seems to view Moes.G. agis, or Su.G. aga, fear, as the radical term. Hence S. ugsum, frightful, ugsumnes, horror; and E. ugly, what causes horror, or disgust. The words originally used to denote terror of mind, seem to have been transferred to loathing or abhorrence; because we shudder at, and endeavour to avoid what we fear. V.
 SCUNNER, v. Sibb. unaccountably prefers "okyr, used for wealth, q. purse-proud," as the origin of ogertful.

OGIE, s. A vacuity before the fire-place in a kiln. S.

OGRIE, s. A giant with very large fiery eyes, supposed to feed on children. S.

OGRESS, s. A female giant, with the same characters. S.

OHON, interj. Alas, S. Gael.

OI, Oy. As oi or oy occurs in many of our old words now pronounced as if spelled with an u; it appears that this diphthong had been used by our ancestors as equivalent to Sw. ö, or o inflected, which is sounded as Gr. υ, the very sound retained in S. V. Oyss, Oyhlé, Oint, Poind.

OYE, s. Grandson. V. OE.

OIG. A term qualifying the names of persons in the Highlands of S., equivalent to younger; as, "Lauchlane oig Maklauchlane, his brother sone," &c. S.

OYHLE, s. Oil. V. OLYE.

OYILL, s. Oil. S.

OIL OF HAZEL a caning-match; a sound drubbing, S.
 This is a Belg. idiom. Rotting signifies a cane; rottin-goli, a beating with a cane, literally, the oil of ratan.

OYL-DOLIE, s. Oil of olives.

I lerid yow wylis mony fauld,
 — To sell right deir, and by gude chaip;
 And mix ry meill amang the saip,
 And saffron with oyl-dolie. Chron. S. P. ii. 341.

Fr. huile d'olive, Dict. Trev. As this oil has a yellowish tinge, the saffron had been meant to heighten the colour when the oil was of an inferior quality.

OYNE, s. An oven. V. OON. S.

To OYNT, OYHNT, v. a. To anoint. See Sup.

The oyhlé is hallowyd of the Pape,—
 Quhare-wyth Kyngis and Emperowris
 Are oyhntyd takand thare honowris.

Wyntown, vi. 2. 34.

"Edgar was the first king of Scottis that was ointit."

Bellend. Cron. B. xii. c. 13. Fr. oint, Lat. unct-us.

OYSE, OYCE, s. An inlet of the sea.

"They have also some Norish words which they commonly use, which we understood not, till they were explained, such as Air, which signifies a sand bank, Oyse, an inlet of the sea, Voe, a creek or bay, &c. And these words are much used both in Zetland and Orkney." Brand's Orkney, p. 70.

"At the back of the town, on the west side, there is an extensive salt water marsh, called the oyce of Kirkwall, which becomes a fine sheet of water at every flood of the tide. It is then called the Little Sea." Neill's Tour, p. 7.

Isl. oes, Su.G. os, ostium fluminis,

OISIE, interj. Expressive of wonder, or used as a note of attention. Originally the same with Oyes. V. HOYES. S.

OYSMOND Irne. Iron of a particular kind. S.

To OYSS, v. a. To use.

With schort awyss he maid ansuer him till;
 Sic salusyng I oyss till Ingliss men.

Wallace, vi. 892. MS.

OYSS, OYS, s. 1. Custom; rite.

— His body wytth honowre
 Wes put in-tyl honest sepultoure
 Wytth swylk oys and solempnyte,
 As that tyme wes in that cuntré. Wyntown, ii. 8. 85.

2. Manner of life.

He knew full weyll hyr kynrent and hyr blud,
 And how scho was in honest oyss and gud.

Wallace, v. 610. MS.

In wtlaw oyss he lewit thar but let;
 Eduuard couth nocht fra Scottis faith him get.

Ibid. vii. 1278. MS.

OIST, s. Host; army.

The peace and quyete, quhilk so lang did stand,
 He sall desolue and breke, and dolf men stere,—
 And thame array in oistis by and by.

Fr. ost, host, id.

Doug. Virgil, 194, 41.

OIST, s. A sacrifice.

And eik thou wat ful oft with large hand,
Wyth mony oistis, and rycht fare offerand,
Thy tempillis and thy altaris chargit has he.

Lat. host-ia, Fr. host-ie, id. Doug. Virgil, 340, 40.

OKRAGARTH, s. A stubble-field. S.

OLDER, conj. Either, for othir or outher.

"According to this purpose wrytis the Apostole on this maner. Brether, stand ye fast, & keip the traditionis quhilkis ye haue learnit, older be our precheing or be our epistole." Kennedy of Crosraguell, Compend. Tractiue, p. 71. He uses nolder for neither. V. OTHIR.

OLD MAN'S FOLD. A portion of ground devoted to the devil. V. GOODMAN, sense 8. S.

OLD MAN'S MILK. A composition of milk or cream, eggs, sugar, and whisky, used in the Highlands. S.

OLD WIFE'S NECESSARY. A tinder-box. S.

OLY, OLY-PRANCE, s. Expl. jollity.

All that luikit thame upon
Leuche fast at thair array;
Sum said that thai were merkat folk;
Sum said, the Quene of May
Was cumif.

Of Peblis to the Play.

Than thai to the taverne hous

With meikle oly prance. Peblis to the Play, st. 10.

"Oly-prance is a word still used by the vulgar in Northamptonshire, for rude rustic jollity." N. Pink. Select S. Ball. ii. 168. Can this term have any affinity to Isl. ol, Sw. oel, a feast?

Were it not from the use of this phrase in E., from the preceding description I would be inclined to view prance as a v., and to explain oly, ridicule, derision, from A.S. oll, ignominy, reproach.

OLICK, s. The torsk or tusk; a fish. S.

OLYE, OYHLÉ, OULIE, ULYE, ULIE, s. Oil.

The fat olye did he yet and pere
Apoun the entrellis to mak thayme birne clere.

Doug. Virgil, 172, 2.

"In this region ar mony fat ky & oxin.—The talloun of thair wambis is sa sappy, that it fresis neur, but flowis ay be nature of the self in maner of oulie." Bellend. Descr. Alb. c. 6.

"The punitione that the speritualitie remanent in ther abusione exsecutis on scismatikis, maye be comparit til ane man that castis olye on ane heyt birnand fyir, in hope til extinct it, and to droune it furtht, the quhilk olye makis the fyir mair bold nor it vas of befoir. The experiens of this is manifest; for as sune as ther is ane person slane, brynt, or bannest for the halding of peruest opinions, incontinent ther rysis up thre in his place." Compl. S. pp. 251. 252.

"S.B. ulye," Rudd. Oyhlé, used by Wyntown, (V. Oint,) seems to have been sounded as ulye. V. OI.

Moes.G. alewa, Dan. Belg. olie, Fr. huile, C.B. olew, Lat. ol-eum.

OLIGHT, OLITE, adj. 1. Nimble; fleet; active, S.B.

2. In Fife it signifies, willing to do any thing. S.

"An olight mother makes a sweir daughter;" S. Prov. Kelly, p. 22.

In Mr. David Ferguson's Proverbs, the orthography is exleit; in Ramsay's olite.

In Ang. it is somewhat differently expressed; "An oleit mother maks a daudie dother."

"Hae lad, rin lad, that makes an olite lad;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 29.

This is certainly the same with Su.G. oflaett, too light, from of, intensive, and laett, light; also, fleet, nimble, lightness of body being a prerequisite to agility.

OLIPHANT, s. An elephant. See Sup.

There sawe I—

The dromydare, the stander oliphant. King's Quair, v. 5. i. e. The elephant that always stands. According to the vulgar, the elephant was erroneously supposed to have no knees. N. Tytler.

Teut. olefant, O.Fr. oliphant, Romm. Rose; Chaucer olifaunt, id. In Moes.G. ulbands denotes a camel, Franc. olbent, olwund, id. Somner renders A.S. olfende, an elephant. But there is no evidence of its being used in any other sense than as denoting a camel.

OLLATH, adj. Willing to work. Olied, Fife. S.

LOUR, s. An herb of which swans are fond. S.

OMAST, adj. Uppermost.

The qwhipe he tuk, syne furth the mar can call,
Atour a bray the omast pot gert fall.

V. UMAST.

Wallace, vi. 455. MS.

OMNE-GATHERUM, s. A macaronic term, denoting a miscellaneous collection of a great variety of persons or things; a medley; a farrago, S. See S.

Than he packs up an army of vile scums;
Full fifteen thousand cursed rogues indeed,
Of omne-gathrums after him does lead.

Hamilton's Wallace, p. 147.

OMPERFITELY, adv. Imperfectly. S.

ON is often used in composition as a negative particle; as onmakin, without making; ondoin, not doing, S.B. See Sup.

It occurs also in writing.

"Resaif the haly spreit; quhais synnis saeuer ye forgeue, thai ar forgeuin to thame, and quhais synnis saeuer ye hald on forgeuin, thai ar on forgeuin." Abp. Hamilton's Catechisme, 1552, Fol. 119. a.

This exactly corresponds to the sense of Germ. ohn. Ohn schamroth, without shame or blushing, like S. Bor. onblushin. This is radically the same with A.S. Alem. un, which Junius deduces from Gr. ανε, sine, as if the Goths had been strangers to a negative particle, till they learned the use of it from the Greeks.

ONANE, ON-ANE, ONON, adv. 1. One in addition to another, in accumulation.

The heuy thochtis multiplyis euer on ane,
Strang luf beginnis to rise and rage agane.

Ingeminant curae, &c. Virg. Doug. Virgil, 118, 42.

2. Immediately; forthwith, E. anon.

Quhen thai the cummaundment had tane,
Thai assemblyt ane ost onane,
And to the castell went in hy. Barbour, iv. 86. MS.

Till him thai raid onon, or thai wald blyne,
And cryt, "Lord, abide, your men ar martyrit doun."

Wallace, i. 421. MS.

Four hundreth was with Wallace in the rycht,
And sone onon approachit to thair sight.

Wallace, viii. 92. MS.

This sayand, scho the bing ascendis on ane.

On-ane, onone, Wyntown. Doug. Virgil, 124, 17.

In this sense it occurs in O.E.

Sen that Henry was gone, Roberd went to France,
To Sir Lowys on one, & told him that greuance.

R. Brunne, p. 99.

A.S. on-an, in unum, unanimiter; etiam, continuo, sine intermissione; Lye. It does not appear, however, that the A.S. word was used precisely as the mod. anon. It signified, always, or in continuation. Seren. derives E. anon, but improperly, from West-Goth. anna, confestim, illico, Isl. ant, id. ann-a, festinare.

ON-BEAST, UNBEIST, VNBEASTE, s. 1. It seems to denote a monster. It occurs in Chapman and Miller's Collection, Edin. 1508, apparently in relation to sea-monsters.

- Scho sayde, Gude Sir, I yhow pray,
Lattis a preste a gospel say
For unbeistis on the flude. Sir Eglamour.
2. Any ravenous or wild creature, as the wolf, the fox, the rat, &c. S.B.
"Fye upon barnes [of corne,] a nest for myce and rattons. Would yee desire to lue for to enioye the leaninges of unbeastes?" Z. Boyd's Last Battell, i. 47.
— O 'oman, what maks a' your care?
Has the on-beast your lambie ta'en awa'?
Ross's Helenore, p. 15.
This designation is given to the owl.
The howlet shriek'd, and that was worst of a';
For ilka time the on-beast gae the yell,
In spite of grief, it gae her heart a knell. Ibid. p. 24.
Belg. ondier, a monster, a monstrous creature, is formed in the same manner, being compounded of on, denoting a fault in the subject, and dier, a beast, a living creature; Germ. unthier, a noxious beast. Su.G. o has a similar use; as, soid, a beast, osoid, a noxious animal.
3. The tooth-ache, S.B. Unbeast, id.
This is its common name, Ang. most probably from the idea that it is caused by a noxious creature. For the vulgar believe that the pain proceeds from the gnawing of a worm in the tooth. See Sup.
4. The term is metaph. applied to a noxious member of human society, Ang.
ONBRAW, adj. Ugly; not handsome; unbecoming. S.
ONBRAWNESS, s. Ugliness. S.
ON BREDE, adv. 1. Wide open; in the way of expansion.
On brede, or this, was warp and made patent
The heuinly hald of God omnipotent.
Doug. Virgil, 312, 17.
The dasy did on brede her crownel smale.
Ibid. 401. 8.
2. Largely; extensively.
Ane hale legioun in ane rout followis hym —
Al thay pepil on brede, bayth he and he,
That inhabitis the heich toun Preneste.
Doug. Virgil, 232, 34.
From A.S. on, in, and braed, latitudo. In the second example, sense 1., it may be viewed either as the adv. connected with the v. did, or as itself the v. from A.S. onbraed-an, expergefacerere, to excite; onbraed, "raised up, stirred up;" Somner.
- ONCOME, s. 1. A fall of rain or snow, S. synon. onding, onfall. 2. The commencement of a business, especially of one requiring great exertion, as in making an attack. 3. An attack of disease. S.
- ONCOST, s. 1. Expense before profit, as that which is laid out on land before there be any return, Loth. 2. Extra expense; additional expense, Fife. See S.
- ONDANTIT, part. pa. Untamed; rude.
"My tua brethir professis them to be gentil men, and reputis me and al lauberaris to be rustical and incivile, ondantit, ignorant, dullit slauis." Compl. S. p. 199. V. DANTER, DANTON.
- ONDER, prep. Under. S.
- ONDING, s. A fall of rain or snow, but especially of the latter, S.B. The word is sometimes used distinctively. Thus it is said, Onding's better than black weet, i. e. Snow is to be preferred to rain. V. DING ON. See Sup.
- ONDINGIN, s. Rain or snow. S.
- ONDISPONIT APOUN. Not disposed of by sale or otherwise. S.
- To ONDO, v. a. To ruin, &c. to undo, E. S.

- ONDREYD, part. pa. Left unexplained. S.
- ONE-ERIE. "One-erie, two-erie, tickerie, seven, a child's rhyme," of which the rest will be found in the S.
- ONEFILIT, part. adj. Undeified. S.
- ONEITH, adj. Uneasy. V. UNEITH.
- ONE LATE, adv. Of late; lately. S.
- ON-ENDYT, part. pa. Not terminated. S.
- ONESCHEWABIL, adj. Unavoidable.
The souir schaft flew quhissiland wyth ane quhir,
Thare as it slidis scherand throw the are,
Oneschewabil, baith certane, lang and square.
i. e. what cannot be eschewed. Doug. Virgil, 417, 49.
- ONE-VSIT, part. pa. Not being used. S.
- ONFA' o' the nicht. The fall of evening. Syn. Gloamin, S.
- ONFALL, s. A fall of rain or snow, S. See Sup.
- ONFALL, s. A disease which attacks one without any apparent cause.
Germ. unfall is used in a similar sense: casus extraordinarius, sed tristis et fatalis, vocatur unfall. Wachter, Proleg. Sect. 5. vo. Un. V. WEDONYPHA.
- ONFEEL, adj. Unpleasant; disagreeable; as, "an onfeel day, onfeel words," &c. V. FEEL, adj. S.
- ONFEIRIE, adj. Infirm; inactive. V. UNFERY.
- ON-FORGEWIN, part. pa. Not paid; not discharged. S.
- ONFRACK, adj. Not alert; not active. V. FRACK. S.
- ONGELT, ONGILT, part. pa. Not gilded. S.
- ONGOINGS, ONGAINS, ONGANGINS, s. pl. Conduct; procedure, S. See Sup.
- ONHABILL, adj. Unfit, or unable. S.
- ONY, adj. Any, S.
Gywe thare be ony that lykis
The lawch for to se led of this,—
To Cowpyr in Fyfe than cum he.
Wyntown, vi. 19. 41.
- "He comaundede hem that thei schulden not take ony thing in the weye but a yerde oneli." Wiclif, Mark 6.
- ONY GATE. In any place. S.
- ONY HOW, or AT ONY HOW. At any rate. S.
- ONKEND, part. adj. New; not known.
"This maner of handling being onkend and strange, [they] wer heavily spoken of." Knox's Hist. p. 383.
- ONKENNABLE, adj. Unknowable. S.
- ONKER, s. A small portion of land. S.
- ONLAYING, s. Imposition. S.
- ONLAND, or UNLAND, s. A designation of land occurring in some ancient charters. S.
- ON LIFE, ON LYFF, ONLYFF, ONLYVE. Alive. S.
- ONLOUPING, s. The act of getting on horseback. S.
- ON MARROWS. Sharers in a joint concern. S.
- ONMAUEN, part. adj. Unmown; not cut down.
"Than I departit fra that companye, and I entrit in ane onmauen medou, the quhilk abundit vitht al sortis of holisum flouris, gyrsis and eirbis maist conuenient for medycyn." S. p. 103.
- ONNAWAYES, adv. In no wise. S.
- ON ON, prep. On; upon; a vulgar reduplication. S.
- ON PAST. Not having passed, or gone forward. S.
- ON-SETT, ONSETTE, s. A term anciently used in S. to denote the messuage or manor-house of a barony. S.
- ONSETTAR, s. One who makes an attack on another. S.
- ONSETTEN', part. adj. Applied to one whose appearance is far from being handsome. V. SET, v. S.
- ONSETTING, s. An attack; an assault. S.
- ONSLAUGHT, s. A bloody fray or battle. S.
- ONSLAUGHT, s. Apparently, release after battle. S.

ONSTEAD, s. A steading; the building on a farm, S.
Aust. See Sup.

"All the onsteads upon this water are in the parish of Lyne, notwithstanding the great distance of the place and badness of the way." Pennecuik's Tweeddale, p. 25.

A.S. on, and sted, Moes.G. stads, locus.

ON-STOWIN, part. pa. Unstolen. S.

To ONTER, v. n. To rear; a term used concerning horses.

"Sir Patrick's horse ontered with him, and would no wise encounter his marrow, that it was force to the said Sir Patrick Hamilton to light on foot, and give this Dutch-man battle." Pitscottie, p. 104.

There may have been an O.Fr. v. of a similar form, from Arm. ont, aont, high.

ONTJETHS, s. Perhaps, erratum for outsets. S.

ON TO or TILL. Weil or Geylies on till, well nigh to. S.

To ONTRAY, v. a. To betray.

In riche Arthures halle,

The barne playes at the balle,

That ontray shal you all

Delfully that day. Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. i. 24.

This seems formed, but in an anomalous way, from on, and Fr. trah-ir, to betray. Germ. un is often used intensively.

ONTRON, s. Evening. V. ORNTREN. S.

ON-WAITER, s. 1. One who waits patiently for any thing future.

"I know, submissive on-waiting for the Lord, shall at length ripen the joy and deliverance of his own, who are truly blessed on-waiters." Rutherford's Lett. p. i. ep. 134.

2. One who attends another for the purposes of service.

ONWAITING, ONWAITTING s. 1. Attendance, S. See S.

"After presenting his petition, and long and expensive onwaiting, he [Mr. H. Erskine] was told for answer, That he could have no warrant for by-gones, unless he would for time to come conform to the established church." Wodrow's Hist. ii. 256.

2. Patient expectation of what is delayed.

"Onwaiting had ever yet a blessed issue, and to keep the word of God's patience, keepeth still the saints dry in the water, cold in the fire, and breathing and blood-hot in the grave." Rutherford's Lett. P. i. ep. 127.

ONWAITING, adj. Of, or belonging to, attendance. S.

ONWALLOWYD, part. pa. Unfaded.

A garland,—gottyn wytth gret peryle

Grene suld lestand be lang quhile,

Onwallowyd be ony intervale

Of tymys, bot ay in wertu hale.

V. WALLOW.

Wyntown's Prol. B. iv. 7.

ONWYNE. Wyne and Onwyne. V. WYNE. S.

ONWYNER, s. In a yoke of oxen the foremost ox on the left hand. S.

ONWITTINS, adv. Without the knowledge of; without being privy to. S.

OO, s. Grandson. S.

OO, s. Wool, S. Aw ae oo, a proverbial phrase, S. equivalent to, all one, all to the same purpose, q. all one wool.

To gather oo on one's claise, to feather one's nest. S.

Ooy, adj. Woolly. S.

OOBIT, s. A hairy worm, or caterpillar, with alternate rings of black and dark yellow. V. OUBIT. S.

OODER, s. Exhalation. V. OUDER. S.

OOF, s. A kind of ideal imbecile creature, with a face so covered with hair, that it can with difficulty see; an oaf, E. S.

OOF-LOOKING, adj. Having a look of stupidity. S.

OON, s. Used for woun', a wound. S.

OON, UNE, (pron. as Gr. u) s. An oven, S.

"This building, commonly called Arthur's Oon, or Oven, is situated on the North side of the same isthmus which separates the Firths of Cluyd and Forth in Stirlingshire." Gordon's Itiner. Septent. p. 24.

Moes.G. auhn, Su.G. ugn, Alem. ouan, ouen, id. V. ARTHURYS HUF.

OON EGGS, s. Eggs laid without the shell; addle eggs, S.O.

"O how he turn'd up the whites o's een, like twa oon eggs." Mary Stewart, Hist. Drama, p. 46.

Perhaps corr. from Sw. wind-egg, used in the same sense.

To OOP, OUP, WUP, v. a. 1. To bind with a thread or cord; to splice, S. Gl. Sibb.

2. Metaph. to join; to unite. S.

Sibb. views it as the same with E. hoop, which is from Teut. hoep, id. It seems rather allied to Moes.G. waib-jan, (whence waip, a crown, what is circular,) Su.G. wef-wa, Isl. waf-a, wef-a, to surround. Gulli wafdur medal-kafle; Manubrium filo auri circumductum, Ol.S. ap. Verel. i. e. the handle wupit with gold thread, S.

I hesitate as to its being synon. with hoop, especially because this E. term is not used in its primary sense in S.

We use gir, gird.

OORAT, adj. Applied to animals when the hair stands on end from cold or want of health. Syn. OORIE. S.

OORE, adv. Ere; before. S.

OORIE, OURIE, OWRIE, adj. 1. Chill, cold, bleak; primarily applied to that which produces coldness in the body; as, an oory day, S.

2. Having the sensation of cold, shivering, S.

Listning, the doors an' winnocks rattle;

I thought me on the owrie cattle,

Or silly sheep, wha bide this brattle

O' winter war.

Burns, iii. 150.

Whare'er along the swaird thou treads,

The owrie cattle hang their heads.

Rev. J. Nicol's Poems, i. 50.

Ourlach, id. Buchan; "shivering with cold and wet."

3. "Having the hair on end, like a horse overcome with cold," Sibb.

4. Drooping; sad-like; melancholy. S.

As the term properly denotes that chilness which proceeds from the dampness of the air, it may be from Isl. ur, rain, Su.G. ur, yr, stormy weather. As viewed more generally, it may however be allied to Belg. guur, cold, guur weer, cold weather; g being often sunk, or softened, in pronunciation.

OORINESS, s. Chilness, a tendency to shivering, S.

OORIE-LIKE, adj. Languid; apparently much fatigued. S.

OOTH, s. Value. "Keep it till it bring the full ooth." S.

OOWEN, adj. Woollen. S.

OOZE, OUZE, s. 1. The nap, or caddis, that falls from yarn, cloth, &c. 2. Cotton or silk put into an ink-stand, to prevent the ink from being spilled. S.

OOZLIE, adj. In a slovenly state. S.

OPENSTEEK, s. An ornamental stitch in sewing. S.

OPENSTEEK, adj. Building with similar ornaments. S.

OPENTIE, s. An opening; a vacancy. S.

OPINIOUN, s. Party; faction; any particular side of the question in a state of warfare.

"The Murrayis gaderit to thair opinioun the inhabitantis of Ros, Caithnes, with sindry othir pepill thairabout." Bellend. Cron. B. xii. c. 11.

"At last quhen he had inuadit the cuntre with gret trubill, he wes slane with v. m. men of his opinioun be the erle of Merche & Walter Stewart." Ibid. B. xiii. c. 15.

"He followis the tyme the opinioun of Inglismen." Ibid. B. xiv. c. 10. Anglorum sequutus partes; Boeth.

Lat. opinio was used in the same sense in the dark ages. Thus a vassal was said, quaerere opinionem facere domino suo, when he engaged with his lord in a hostile expedition, and behaved gallantly in battle. Leg. Bajwar. Tit. 2. c. 7. ap. Du Cange.

To OPPONE, v. a. 1. To oppose. See Sup.

"It wes concludit that faythefull rehersall sould be maid of suche personages as God had maid instruments of his glorie, by opponing of thameselfis to manifest abusses, superstitioun and idolatrie." Knox's Hist. Auth. Pref.

2. It is used to denote the proof exhibited against a prisoner at his trial. S.

This is immediately from Lat. oppon-ere; whereas the E. v. is formed from the Fr.

OPPROBRIE, s. Reproach; opprobrium. S.

To OPTENE, OUPTENE, v. a. To obtain. See Sup.

Quhare may we sua optene felicité;

Neuer bot in heuin, empire aboue the skye?

Doug. Virgil, 160, 29. Wyntown, id.

Optineo, as Rudd. has observed, frequently occurs, for obteneo, "in MSS. of less antiquity, and old charters."

OR, adv. 1. Before; ere, S.

And thai that at the sege lay,

Or it was passyt the v day,

Had maide thaim syndry apparal,

To gang eft sonys till assaill.

Barbour, xvii. 594. MS.

Wittail worth scant or August coud apper,

Throuch all the land, that fude was hapnyt der.

Wallace, iii. 15. MS.

Or thys, before this time.

Our schippis or thys full weile we gart addres,

And lay almaist apoun the dry sand.

Doug. Virgil, 71, 53.

Or than, before that time.

The Grekis chiftanis irkit of the were Bipast or than sa mony langsum yere. Ibid. 39, 5.

2. Rather than, S.

For giff thai fled, thai wyst that thai

Suld nocht weill feyrd part get away.

Tharfor in awentur to dey

He wald him put, or he wald fley.

Barbour, ix. 595. MS.

This is nearly connected with the former sense; q. "he would fight, before that he would flee." There is this difference, however, that fighting is not meant as the antecedent to fleeing, but as the adversative.

This, instead of being allied to E. or conj., seems radically the same with ar, before. Or, ar, ur, according to Wachter, in all the Goth. dialects, convey the idea of beginning; vo. Orlog. A.S. or, ord, principium; Lye. V. AIR.

OR, conj. 1. Lest.

That gud man dred or Wallace suld be tane;

For Suthroun ar full sutaille euir, ilk man.

Wallace, i. 272. MS.

Schyrreff he was, and wsyt thaim amang;

Full sar he dred or Wallas suld tak wrang;

For he and thai couth neur weyle accord.

Ibid. ver. 346.

Halyday said, "We sall do your consaille;

Bot sayr I dred or thir hurt horss will fayll.

Ibid. v. 792. MS. Also vi. 930.

2. Than.

— Felis thou not yit (quod he)

Othir strenth or manniss force has delt with the?—

The powir of goddis ar turnyt in thy contrere,

Obeie to God.—

Doug. Virgil, 143, 24.

Nor is more generally used in this sense.

ORAGIUS, adj. Stormy; tempestuous.

The storme wes so outragius,

And with rumlings oragius,

That I for fear did gruge.

Burel's Pilg. Watson's Coll. ii. 19.

Fr. orageux, id. orag-er, to be tempestuous, orage, a storm. Some derive the Fr. s. from Gr. οὐρανος, coelum;

Du Cange, from L.B. orago, used as the Fr. term, which he deduces from Lat. aura, the air. Perhaps it is of Goth. origin; from Su.G. Isl. ur, tempestas.

ORANGER, s. An orange. S.

ORATOUR, s. An ambassadour.

"Because we are nere equale to othir in power, thairfore it is best to send oraturis to Caratak kyng of Scottis, quhilk is maist cruell ennyme to Romanis, & desyre hym concur with ws to reuenge the oppressioun done to his sister Uoada." Bellend. Cron. Fol. 32. b.

Lat. orator, id.

ORATOURE, ORATORY, s. An oracle; a place from which responses were supposed to be given.

Bot than the King—gan to seik beliuie

His fader Faunus oratoüre and ansuare,

Quhilk couth the fatis for to cum declare.

Doug. Virgil, 207, 32.

Oratory, is used in the same sense, 215, 3.

The word, as Rudd. observes, properly signifies a chapel, or place of worship; Fr. oratoire, from Lat. or-are, to pray.

ORCHLE, s. A porch, Mearns.

Germ. erker, projectura aedificii, a balcony; L.B. arcora.

Frischius views this as derived from arcula. V. Wachter.

See Sup.

ORD, s. This word seems to signify, a steep hill or mountain. See Sup.

"The country is—confined on the East by the sea, on the West by lofty black mountains, which approach nearer and nearer to the water, till at length they project into it at the great promontory, the Ord of Caithness, the boundary between that country and Sutherland." Pennant's

Tour in S. 1769. p. 192.

"The hill of the Ord is that which divides Sutherland and Caithness. The march is a small rivulet, called The Burn of the Ord of Caithness." Statist. Acc. xvii. 629.

This is perhaps from Gael. ard, a hill. Isl. aar-dug-ur, however, signifies, arduus, acclivis, G. Andr. p. 15. and urd, montes impervii; Verel. Ind. He explains it by Sw.

holgryte and stenaklippor, as synon. terms; apparently calling them impervious because of the multitude of rocks.

ORDER,* s. To take order, to adopt a course for bringing under proper regulation. S.

ORDINARE, adj. Ordinary. S.

BY ORDINARE, adv. In an uncommon way. S.

ORE, s. "Grace; favour; protection," Tyrwhitt.

Now hath Rohand in ore

Tristrem, and is ful blithe;

The child he set to lore,

And lernd him al so swithe.

Sir Tristrem, p. 22.

This word frequently occurs in O. E.

The maister fel adoun on kne, and criede mercy and ore.

R. Glouc. p. 39. V. Ritson's Note, E.M.R. iii. 263.

According to Tyrwhitt, it is of A.S. origin. But it has been justly observed, that "this is a word of uncertain derivation, and various application," Gl. Tristrem. It might perhaps be viewed as the same with Fr. heur, equivalent to bonheur, felicity, good fortune. But I suspect that it is rather Gothic. The only word to which it seems allied is Isl. oor, aur, largus, munificus; aur oc blidr, lar-gus et affabilis, Verel. Ind.; Liberalis, Gl. Kristnis.; oor-leike, largitas, G. Andr. p. 14.

O R L

Lye, however, says that this term, as used by Chaucer, has flowed from A.S. are, honour, reverentia, misericordia; Belg. eere, Alem. eera, honour; Add. Jun. Etym.

ORERE, OURERE, interj. Avaunt; avast.

Gif ony nygh wald him nere,
He bad thame rebaldis orere,
With a ruyne.

Houlate, iii. 21.

Fr. arriere, behind, aloof.

ORETOWTING, part. pr. Muttering; murmuring; croyning, cruning, synon.

Not onely fleing fouls, I say,
Bot beists of diuers kynds,
Laich on the ground, richt lawly lay,
Amasit in thair mynds:

Sum shaking, and quaking,
For feire, as I esteeme,
Oretowting, and rowting,
Into that storme extreme.

Burel's Pilg. Watson's Coll. ii. 17.

Teut. oor-tuyt-en, susurrare, dimissa voce auribus obstrepere, mussitare, Kilian; from oor, the ear, and tuyt-en, to make a noise. V. Toot. By the use of oretowting and rowting, Burel represents some of the beasts as murmuring, and others as bellowing.

ORF, s. A puny contemptible-looking creature. S.

ORFEVERIE, ORPHRAY, s. Work in gold; embroidery.

About hir neck, qubite as the faire anmaille,
A gudelic cheyne of small orfeverye.—

King's Quair, ii. 29.

Chaucer, orfraye; Fr. orfevrerie, L.B. orfra, orfrea, aufirigium, id. Sibb. confounds orfeverie with Orphany,
q. v.

To ORIGIN, v. a. To originate. S.

ORIGINAL SIN, s. A cant phrase to denote debt on an estate to which one succeeds. 2. Also used to characterize the living proofs of youthful incontinence. S.

ORILYEIT, s. A piece of cloth, or bandage, used for covering the ears during the night. S.

ORINYE, adj. Apparently, orange-coloured. S.

ORISHEN, s. A person of savage manners. S.

ORISING, part. pr. Arising. S.

ORISON, s. An oration.

"The counsel (after this orison of Fergus) thoct plu-ralyte of capitaneis vnprofitabill, and thairfore be degest consultatioun condiscendit to be gouernit be empire of ane kyng." Bellend. Cron. B. i. Fol. 6. a.

Fr. oraison is used for a speech, as well as for a prayer.

ORLANG, s. A complete year; the whole year round,
Ang.

This very ancient and almost obsolete word is certainly of Scandinavian origin, as composed of Su.G. aar, annus, and lange, diu. Now aar is pron. q. E. oar.

ORLEGE, ORLAGER, ORLIGER, s. 1. "A clock; a dial; any machine that shews the hours," Rudd.

Speaking of the rising Sun, Doug. says,
—By his hew, but orliger or dyal,
I knew it was past four houris of day.

Virg. Prol. 404, 8.

E. horologe, Fr. horloge, Lat. horologium, id.

2. Metaph. applied to the cock.

Phebus crounit bird, the nichtis orlagere,
Clappin his wingis thryis had crawin clere.

Doug. Virgil, 202, 8.

3. Metaph. used in relation to man, as denoting strict adherence to the rules of an art.

—Venerabill Chaucer, principal poete but pere,

O R P

Heuinely trumpet, orlege and regulere,
In eloquence balme, conduct and diall.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 9, 20.

4. It is now used to denote the dial-plate of a church or town-clock, S. See Sup.

ORMAISE, adj. Of or belonging to the isle of Ormus. S.

ORNTREN, s. 1. The repast taken between dinner and supper, Galloway; fourhours, synon.

2. Evening, Ayrs.; written Ontron. S.

This must be merely a corr. and misapplication of A.S.
undern, tempus antemeridianum; whence undernmete, breakfast. O.E. ondron, (Chaucer, undern,) has been expl.
afternoon, although improperly. The term, however, was understood in this sense in Hen. VIII.'s time. V. Gl.
Brunner in vo. and Underntyde, Verstegan.

To ORP, v. n. To fret; to repine. It more generally denotes an habitual practice of repining, or of chiding, S.

This, in signification, nearly corresponds to the v. harp,
as denoting a querulous reiteration on the same subject;
although the latter is evidently a metaph. use of the E. v., which is formed from the musical instrument that bears
this name.

But ye'll repent ye, if his love grow cauld;
Wha likes a dorty maiden, when she's auld?
Like dawted wean that tarries at its meat,
That for some feckless whim will orp and greet:
The lave laugh at it till the dinner's past,
And syne the fool thing is oblig'd to fast,
Or scart anither's leavings at the last.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 76.

For tarries l. tarrows, as in former editions, Orp is expl.
"to weep with a convulsive pant;" Gl. But if ever used in this sense, it is obliquely. Hence,

ORPIT, part. adj. 1. "Proud; haughty," Rudd.

And how orpit and proudly ruschis he
Amyd the Troianis by favour of Mars, quod sche.

Doug. Virgil, 313, 10.

Tumidus is the only word in the original. But, I apprehend, that orpit here occurs in the common sense, as denoting ill humour conjoined with pride.

Rudd. has quoted Gower, as using orped in the sense of proud, haughty.

— They acorden at the laste
With such wyles, as they caste,
That they woll gette of their accorde
Some orped knyght to sley this lorde
And with this sleight they begynne
Howe they Helmege myght wyne,
Which was the kynges botyler,
A proude and a lusty bachyler.

Conf. Am. Fol. 22, p. 1. col. 2.

Orpede is used by R. Glouc. for fine, good. It also signifies, courageous, manful.

"They foughten orpedlyche with the Walysse men.—
They that wer ynne defendid the toun orpedly." Addit.
to R. Glouc.

2. Fretful; discontented; habitually chiding, S. It seems rather to imply the idea of childish fretfulness or discontentment, when one cannot well say what is wished for.

"You seeme to be very earnest here, but all men may see it is but your orpit or ironic conceit: so like as M.
David will be taught of Bishops, a sort of profane men without either learning or grace, in your account." Bp.
Galloway's Dikaiologie, p. 143.

As used in this, which is its only mod. sense, it might seem allied to A.S. earfoth, eorfath, earfelthe, difficult, troublesome; q. difficult to manage, of a troublesome temper. E. difficult is indeed used as synon. with orpit;

"hard to please, peevish," Johns. The A.S. term seems radically allied to Franc. arbeit, great pain, tribulation; from Moes.G. arbaid-jan, to toil, to labour. But the origin is uncertain.

ORPHANY, s.

I saw all claith of gold men nicht deuse,— Damesflure, tere, pyle quhairon thair lyis
Peirle, Orphany quhilk euerie stait renewis.

Palice of Honour, i. 46. Edin. Ed. 1579.

Cotgr. defines oripeau, as signifying "orpine, painters' gold, such gold as is laid on hangings," &c. Fr. or gold, and peau, (from Lat. pellis) a skin.

ORPHELING, s. An orphan. Fr. orphelin.

"The Blind, Crooked, Bedralis, Widowis, Orphelingis, and all uther Pure, sa visit be the hand of God as may not worke, To the Flockis of all Freiris within this realme, we wische Restitutioun of wrangis bypast, and Reforma-tioun in tymes cuming, for Salvation." Knox's Hist. p. 109.

ORPHIR, s.

Thay bure the Orphir in their back,
Bot and the Onix gray and black.

Pilg. Watson's Coll. ii. 12.

This is mentioned by Burel, as a precious stone; but, as would seem, by mistake for orfraye, embroidery. V. ORFEVERIE.

ORPHIS, s. Cloth of gold. S.

ORPIE, ORPIE-LEAF, s. Orpine or Livelong, S. Sedum telephium, Linn. See *Sup.*ORROW, ORRA, ORA, adj. 1. Not matched. Ane orrow thing is one that has not a match, where there should properly be a pair. Thus ane orrow buckle is one that wants its match.

2. Applied to any thing that may be viewed as an over-plus, or more than what is needed, what may be wanted, S.

Baith lads and lasses busked brawly,
To glowr at ilka bonny waly,
And lay out ony ora bodles
On sma' gimcracks that pleas'd their noddles.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 533.

Whan night, owre yirth, begins to fa',
Auld gray-hair'd carles fu' willin'
To tak their toothfu' gaung awa,
And ware their ora shillin.

Rev. J. Nicol's Poems, i. 39.

3. Not appropriated; not employed; used in regard to things. Ane orrow day, a day on which one has no particular work; a day or time distinguished from others by some peculiar circumstance.

— When my whistle's out of use,
And casting orrow through the house,
Gin she be sae for only while,
She never plays till she get oil.

Shirrefs' Poems, p. 334.

4. Not engaged. A person is said to be orrow, when he has no particular engagement, when he does not know well what to make of himself, S. "An orrow man, a day-labourer," Sibb. i. e. one who has not stated work.

5. Occasional; accidental; transient. Ane orrow body, an occasional visitor; one who comes transiently, or without being expected, S.

6. Spare; vacant; not appropriated; applied to time. S. It's wearin' on now to the tail o' May,
An' just between the beer-seed and the hay;
As lang's an orrow morning may be spar'd,

Stap your wa's east the haugh, an' tell the laird.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 4. 5.

7. Inferior; petty; paltry. 8. Base; low; mean; worthless; as, "He keeps orra company." 9. Odd; exceeding any specified or round number. S.

There are two Su.G. words, to either of which this may perhaps claim affinity, especially as the s. is sometimes pron. orrels. These are urwal, rejectanea, any thing thrown away, offals, and urfiell. The first is from ur, a particle, denoting separation, and wal-ia, to choose; quae post selectum supersunt; Ihre. Isl. aur, and Norw. or, also signify any thing small, a unit, the beginning of a series. Su.G. urfiell is a strip of a field separated from the rest; lacinia agri separata, separata pars terrae. It is properly a portion of a field, which is possessed by a different person from him who has the rest of the ground; or which is situated beyond the limits of the farm. The term frequently occurs in the Sw. laws; and, according to Ihre, is formed from ur, already mentioned, and fiell, asser, tabula, from its resemblance to a piece of wood, in the same manner as the inhabitants of Upland call a very small portion of a field spiall, i. e. a chip, S. a spail. V. the s.

ORROWS, ORRELS, s. pl. Things that are supernumerary; such as fragments of cloth that remain after any piece of work is finished. Orrels is used in Ang.

Perhaps the word has a more simple etymon than that given above, q. over alls. What attention this may deserve, I leave to the learned reader to determine. The l not being retained in the pronunciation of all, in any provincial dialect, renders it very doubtful.

ORRA-MAN, s. One whose work is of no determinate character; one who does all the jobs that do not belong to any of the other servants. V. JOTTERIE. S.

ORRELS, s. pl. The same with Orrows, q. v. S.

To ORT, v. a. 1. Applied to a cow that refuses, or throws aside its provender, S.

2. To crumble. A child is said to ort his bread, when he breaks it down into crumbs, S.B.

3. Metaph. used to denote rejection in whatever sense, S.O. The lasses nowadays ort nane of God's creatures; the reflection of an old woman, as signifying that in our times young women are by no means nice in their choice of husbands.

4. A father is said to ort his dochters (daughters) when he allows them to marry without attending to seniority.

It seems radically the same with E. orts, refuse, remains, what is left or thrown away; which Junius derives from Ir. orda, a fragment. But although orts is used in this sense S.B., words is the pron. S.A., as in the Prov. "E'en-ing's words are gude morning's foddering."

This orthography suggests a different origin. A.S. wyrt, weort, E. wort, Moes.G. aurt, Isl. Dan. urt, Su.G. oert, herba; the provender of cattle consisting of herbs.

The term may have originally denoted the provender itself.

OSAN, in Poems, 16th century, used for Hosanna. S.

OSHEN, s. A mean person; primarily a gosling. S.

OSLIN, OSLIN-PIPPIN, s. A species of apple. S.

OSNABURGH, s. The name given to a coarse linen cloth manufactured in Angus, from its resemblance to that made at Osnaburgh in Germany, S.

"A weaver in or near Arbroath (about the year 1738 or 1739) having got a small quantity of flax unfit for the kind of cloth then usually brought to market, made it into a web, and offered it to his merchant as a piece on which he thought he should, and was willing to, lose. The merchant, who had been in Germany, immediately remarked the similarity between this piece of cloth and the fabric of Osnaburgh, and urged the weaver to attempt other pieces of the same kind, which he reluctantly undertook. The experiment, however, succeeded to a wish." P. Forfar, Statist. Acc. vi. 514.

To OSTEND, v. a. To shew. Lat. ostend-ere. S.
OSTENSIOUNE, OSTENTIOUNE. s. 1. The act of shewing.
2. The formality of lifting up the hand in swearing. S.
OSTYNG, s. Encampment; or, the appearance of an army in camp.

Madem, he said, rycht welcum mot ye be,
How plessis yow our ostyng for to se?

Wallace, viii. 1235. MS.

Edit. 1648, hoasting. V. OIST.

OSTLEIR, s.

So wunnit thair ane wundir gay ostleir
Without the toun, intil ane fair maneir;
And Symon Lawder he was callit be name.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 67.

Mr. Pinkerton says that this simply signifies householder. But, from the connexion, it appears that he is mistaken. Besides, in our old laws, Hostillare, q. v. seems invariably to signify an inn-keeper.

OSTLER, s. An inn-keeper. V. HOSTELER. S.
OSTRYE, OSTRÉ, s. An inn. See Sup.

Till ane ostrye he went, and sojourned thar
With trew Scottis, quhilk at his freindis war.

Wallace, iv. 107. MS.

Ital. hostaria, Fr. hostellerie, id. from Lat. hospes.

OSZIL, OSILL, s. "The merle or thrush; also the blackbird;" Gl. Compl. See Sup.

"The lyntquhit sang contirpoint, quhen the oszil yelpit."
Compl. S. p. 60.

In Gl. it is added; "Sometimes the ouzel, merle, and mavis, are all distinguished from each other; thus,

Syne, at the middis of the meit, in come the menstrallis,
The Maviss and the Merle singis,

Osillis, and Stirlingis;

The blyth Lark that begynis,

And the Nychtingallis."

Houlate, iii. 6. MS.

The ingenious Editor has not observed that they are also distinguished in the very passage which he quotes, Compl. S. For a few lines before the author had said;

"Than the maucis maid myrtht, for to mok the merle."
Burel also distinguishes them.

The Merle, and the Mauice trig,

Flew from the bush quher thay did big,

Syne tuke thame to the flicht;

The Osill and the Rosignell, &c.

Pilgr. Watson's Coll. ii. 28.

Sibb. also defines the oszil, "the thrush, or blackbird." But it appears that this bird is mentioned by our writers, as different from both. It seems to be the Ring-ouzel of Pennant, which, he says, is "superior in size to the blackbird;" the Turdus torquatus of Linn. In Angus, the ouzel, or as it is called the oswald or oswit, is viewed as different both from the blackbird and thrush. From its similarity, however, osle, the A.S. name of the blackbird, seems to have been given to it, in common with the other.

O'THEM, Some of them: O'them faucht, O'them fled. S.
OTHEM UPOTHEM, Cold flummery, used instead of milk, along with boiled flummery, Aberd.; q. Of them, as well as upon them, i. e. the same sort of substance used at once both as meat and drink, or in a solid and fluid state.

OTHIR, OTHIRE, ODYR, adj. 1. Other.

Hys fadrys landis of herytage

Fell til hym be clere lynage,

And lauchful lele befor all othire.

Wyntown, v. 12. 1126.

It is also written odyr.

Ilkane til odyr in thare lywe

Twenty yhere were successywe.

Ibid, v. 1112.

2. The second, also tothir.

He sawe thre wemen by gangand;

And thai wemen than thowcht he Thre werd systrys mast lyk to be.

The fyrst he hard say gangand by,

'Lo, yhondyr the Thayne of Crwmbawchty.'

The tothir woman sayd agayne,

'Of Morave yhondyre I se the Thayne.'

The thryd than said, 'I se the Kyng.'

All this he herd in his dremyng.

Wyntown, vi. 18. 23.

I have not marked any place in which othir occurs, it being generally written tothir because of the final vowel in the preceding.

3. Each other, S.

Garnat mak-Downald, and Drust hys brodir,

Brud Byly's swne, before othire

Kyngis were in-til Scotland

A-toure the Peychtis than regnand.

Wyntown, v. 12. 1115.

"Moes. G. anthar, Gr. ἀντι-ος, ἐντι-ος. Sabine etru, A.S. other, Alem. othar, Germ. Belg. ander, O.Dan. Isl. annar, adra, Sw. andra, Ir. Gael. dara. This seems the true Gothic, Gaelic and Greek numeral, Secund being only in Latin, and the languages derived from it." Gl. Wynt.

OTHIR, OWTYR, conj. Either, S.

Othir yhe wyn thame to youre crown,

Or haldis thame in subjectiown.

Wyntown, ix. 18. 45.

"For thir causis desirit thaim to mak ane new band of confideracioun with Britonis, to that fyne, that Scottis may be outhir expellit out of Albion, or ellis brocht to vter destruction." Bellend. Cron. Fol. 5. a.

Owthyr he gert his men thame sla,

Or he thame heryd, sparand nane.

Wyntown, viii. 16. 24.

Isl. audr, Germ. oder, Moes. G. aiththau, uththa, A.S. oththe, Goth. oda, Alem. odo, edo, Lat. aut.

OTHIR, adv. Also, or besides.

And the sternes thar myd coursis rollis down,

Al the feildis still othir, but noyis or soun.

Doug. Virgil, 118, 31.

OTHIRANE, conj. Either, Ang. etherane.

And Eduuard chaip, I pass with him agayne,

Bot I throu force be othirane tane or slayn.

Wallace, x. 614. MS.

From othir, id., although the reason of the termination is not so evident. The word can scarcely be viewed as the accus. or abl. of A.S. othir, alter.

OTTEUS, s. pl. Octaves. V. UTASS. S.

OTTER-PIKE, s. The Common or Lesser Weever, Trachinus Draco, Linn.

"Draco sive Araneus minor; I take it to be the same our fishers call the Otter-pike or sea-stranger." Sibb. Fife, p. 127.

It is also called the Otter-pike, A. Bor. V. Penn. Zool. p. 136.

OU, interj. Expressive of some surprise. V. OW. S.

OUBIT, s. 1. Hairy oubit, a butterfly in the caterpillar state. 2. Oubit, a shabby, puny-looking person. S.

OUDER, OWDER, s. 1. A light mist or haze, as seen on a cloudy morning at sun-rise. 2. The flickering exhalations, seen to arise from the ground on a warm sunshiny day. V. SUMMER-COUTS. S.

To OVER, v. a. To get the better of any thing, especially of what is calamitous; as, "He never overed the loss of that bairn." S.

OUER, OUIR, OVIR, adj. 1. Upper, as to situation, uvir, S.B.

—Thay sall vnder thare senyeory
Subdew all hale in thirldome Italy,
And occupy thay boundis orientale,
Quhare as the ouir se flowis alhale.

Doug. Virgil, 245, 39.

It is often used as a distinctive designation of a place, S.
"Here stands—an herd's house called Blair-bog, and then Romanno, Grange Over and Nether." Pennecuik's Tweeddale, p. 13.

2. Superior, with respect to power. The uvir hand, the upper hand, S.B.

The samyn wyse enragit throw the feildis
Went Eneas, as victor with ouer hand.

Doug. Virgil, 338, 20.

I sall the send as victor with ouir hand.

Ibid. 456, 40.

It is sometimes written as a s.

And Ramsay wyth the ovyrhand
Come hame agayne in his awyne land.

Wyntown, viii. 38. 165.

Sw. oefre, oefwer, id. used both as to place and power; oefwerhand, the upper-hand or advantage, Seren. (pron. as our uvir) from oefwer, prep. super, Gr. ὑπερ, Moes.G. ufar, A.S. ofer, Alem. ubar, upar, Germ. uber, Belg. over. Whether this be a derivative, is doubtful. Ihre, explaining the inseparable particle oefwer, as denoting superiority, and also excess, remarks its affinity, both in sound and sense, to Su.G. of. V. UVER. Hence, OUERANCE, s. Superiority; dominion.

"And I trow surely that he sched his precious blude,—to mak peace betuix his father and vs, to slay syn and dede quhilk had ouerance apon vs." Abp. Hamiltoun's Catechisme, 1552, Fol. 104, b.

OUER, prep. Over. V. OUR.

OUER ANE, adv. In common; together. Al ouer ane, all together, q. in a heap above one. See Sup.

—Freyndis, certane duelling nane
In thys cuntre haue we, bot al ouer ane
Walkis and lugeis in thir schene wod schawis.

Doug. Virgil, 188, 41.

All samyn lay thare armoure, wyne, and metis,
Baith men and cartis mydlit al ouer ane.

Ibid. 287, 9. V. also 303, 37.

To OVERBY, v. a. To procure indemnity from justice by money.

Thay luke to nocht bot gif ane man have gude;
And it I trow man pay the Justice fude:
The theif ful weill he wil himself overby;
Quhen the leill man into the lack wil ly.

Priests of Peblis, S.P.R. i. 12.

A.S. ofer and byg-an, to buy.

OUER-BY, OVERBY, adv. A little way off; referring to the space to be crossed in reaching the place referred to, S. V. O'ERBY. S.

To OVERCAP, OWEPCAP, v. a. To project over. S.

To OVEREAT one's self. To eat to surfeiting. S.

OVERENYIE, s. Southernwood; Appleringie. S.

OUEREST, adj. Higher; uppermost; superl. of Ouer. S.

To OUERFLETE, v. n. To overflow; to overrun.

—With how large wepyng, dule and wa
Ouerflete sal al the cieté of Ardea.

Doug. Virgil, 460, 53.

—Teut. over-fleit-en, superfluere. V. FLEIT.

OUERFRETT, part. pa. "Decked over, embellished or beautified over; from A.S. over, super, and fraet-wan, ornare, exornare," Rudd.

The varyant vesture of the venust vale
Schrewdis the scherand fur, and euery fale
Ouerfrett with fulyeis, and fyguris ful dyuers—

Doug. Virgil, 400, 39.

"Embroidered," Ellis, Spec. E. P. i. 389.

To OUERGAF, v. n. To overcast; applied to the sky when it begins to cloud after a clear morning. S.

To OUERGEVE, OWEGRIFFE, v. a. To renounce, especially in favour of another. S.

OUERGEVIN, s. An act of renunciation. S.

To OUERHAILE, v. a. To oppress; to carry forcibly. S.

To OVERHARL, v. a. To oppress. V. OURHARL. S.

OUERHEDE, adv. Wholly; without distinction; S. ourhead or overhead, in the gross. See Sup.

The seyis mixt ouer ane, and al ouer hede,
Blak slike and sand vp poplit in the stede.

Doug. Virgil, 303, 37.

Quhil that he sang and playit, as him behuffit,—
In quhite canois soft plumes joyus,
Become ouerhede in liknes of ane swan.

Ibid. 321, 9.

Rudd. by mistake views it as a v., rendering it "covered over."

One is said to buy a parcel of cattle ourhead, when he gives the same price for every one of them, without selection.

Su.G. oefwer hufud is used in the same sense; upon an average, one with another, Wideg. I am doubtful, however, whether in the last quotation it may not signify, metamorphosed; A.S. ofer-hiuad, transfiguratus.

To OUERHEILD, v. a. To cover over.

—That riche branche the ground ouerheildis.

V. HEILD. Doug. Virgil, 169, 45.

To OVERHYE, OVERHIGH, v. a. To overtake. V. OURHYE. S.

To OUERHIP, v. a. To skip over; to pass by or overlook.

The thre first bukis he has ouerhippit quite.

Doug. Virgil, 5, 48. Also, 6, 14.

It occurs in O. E.

And ryght as mayster Wace says,
I telle myn Inglis the same way,
For mayster Wace the Latyn alle rymes,
That Pers ouerhippis many tymes.

R. Brunne, Prol. xcvi.

Pers is Peter Langtoft; R. Brunne having followed Wace, and not Langtoft, in the first part of the Chronicle, because Wace renders Geoffrey of Monmouth more fully. V. HIP, v.

OVERIN, s. A by-job. S.

OVERITIOUS, adj. Excessive; intolerable. 2. Boisterous; violent; impetuous; headstrong. S.

To OVERLAP, v. a. 1. Properly, to be folded over. S.

2. Applied to stones, in building a wall, when one stone stretches over another laid under it. S.

OVERLAP, s. The place where one object lies over part of another; in the manner of slates on a roof, &c. S.

OVERLAP, s. The hatches of a ship. S.

OVERLEATHER, s. The upper leather of a shoe. S.

OVERLY, adj. Careless; superficial; remiss in the performance of any action, S. See Sup.

A.S. overlice, incuriose, negligenter. This adj., it appears, must have been formerly used in E., as Somner mentions overly in rendering the A.S. word.

OVERLY, adv. 1. Excessively; in the extreme. 2. Prodigal; disposed to squander. S.

OUERLYAR, s. One who oppresses others, by taking free quarters, synon. sornar.

"It is statute and ordanit, for the away putting of Sornaris, ouerlyaris, & maisterfull beggaris,—that all officiaris—tak ane inquisition at ilk court, that thay hald, of the foirsaid thingis." Acts, Ja. II. 1449. c. 21. Edit. 1566.

A.S. ofer-ligg-an, to overlay.

OUERLOFT, OVERLOFT, s. The upper deck of a ship. Thare hetchis and thare ouerloftis syne thay bete, Plankis and geistis grete square and mete Into thair schippis joynand with mony ane dint.

Doug. Virgil, 153, 2.

This, however, may signify the sparedeck or orlope, as Sw. oefwerlopp does. See Sup.

OUERLOP, OURLOP, s. The upper deck of a ship. S.

OVERLOUP, s. The stream-tide at the change of the moon. S.

OVERMEIKLE, OURMEIKLE, adj. Overmuch. S.

OUERMEST, adj. The highest.

And of thare top, betwix thare hornes tuay,
The ouermost haris has sche pullit away.

Doug. Virgil, 171, 40.

A.S. ofer-maest is used differently. For it signifies, "very or over great, superfluous," Somner.

OUERQUALL'D part. adj. Overrun. S.

OVER-RAGGIT, part. pa.

And I cum thair my tail it will be taggit;
For I am red that my count be over-raggit.

Priests of Peblis, S.P.R. i. 38.

This is overlooked in Gl. It is used in the same sense, I suspect, with E. overhale, as denoting the re-examination of an account; either from Dan. over and rag-er, synon. with E. hale; or as allied to overregn-er, to calculate, to cast up an account, q. over-reckon.

OUER-RAUCHT, pret. Overtook.

— Quhat gift condigne

Will thou gyf Nisus, ran swift in ane ling?
And wourthy was the fyrst croun to haue caught,
War not the samyn mysfortoun me ouer raucht,
Quhilk Salius betid. Doug. Virgil, 139, 28.

It is evidently the pret. of Ouer-reik, used in a figurative sense.

To OUER-REIK, v. a. To reach or stretch over.

Ane hidduous gripe, with bustuous bowland beik,
His mawe immortall doith pik and ouer reik.

Doug. Virgil, 185, 20.

To OVERSAILYIE, v. a. To build over a close, leaving an opening or passage below. S.

To OUERSET, v. a. 1. To overcome, in whatever way.

Thy grete pieté and kyndnes weile expert
Vnto thy fader causit the and gert
This hard viage vincus and ouer set.

Doug. Virgil, 189, 23.

2. To overpower; as the effect of weight, sorrow, age, &c.

— He was ouerset,

And of the heuy byrdin sa mait and het,
That his micht failyeit. Doug. Virgil, 417, 16.

— Dido had caught thys frenessy,

Ouerset with sorow and syc fantasy. Ibid. 116, 35.

In form it most nearly resembles A.S. ofer-sett-an, superponere. But in sense it corresponds to ofer-swith-an, vincere, praevalere, from ofer, and swith-ian, from swith, nimis, as denoting too much force, more than one can resist. Su.G. saett-ia, cum impetu ferri, is perhaps allied. Forset, S. its synonyme, q. v. seems formed from A.S. for-swith-ian.

OUERSET, OURSET, s. Defeat; misfortune in war. S.
To OUERSYLE. V. OURSYLE.

OVERSMAN, OUREMAN, OURSMAN, s. 1. The term ouerman was anciently used to denote a supreme ruler, being applied to one of the Pictish kings.

Gernard-Bolg nyne yhere than

In-tyl Scotland wes Oure-man. Wyntown, v. 9. 452.

2. An arbiter, who decides between contending parties.

Our land stud thre yer desolate but King,—

Throuch ii clemyt, thar hapnyt gret debait,

So ernystfully, accord thaim nocht thai can;

Your King thai ast to be thair ourman.

Wallace, viii. 1329. MS.

3. It now signifies a third arbiter; he, who, in consequence of the disagreement of two arbiters formerly chosen to settle any point in dispute, is nominated to give a decisive voice, S. See Sup.

"Of the election of the Overs-man in arbitrie." Ja. I. 1426. c. 87. Tit. Skene.

"That in ilk Arbitrie be chosin ane od persoun." Edit. 1566. c. 98.

Teut. over-man, a praefect, provost, the master of a company, Kilian. Su.G. oefwerhet, a magistrate, from oefwer, superior; oefwerman, a superior, Wideg, Isl. yfer menn, magistratus, G. Andr. p. 137.

To OVERSPADE, OWERSPADE, v. a. To trench land by cutting it into narrow trenches, and heaping the earth upon an equal quantity of land not raised. S.

OUERSWAK, s. The reflux of the waves by the force of ebb.

— The flowand se with fludis roude—

Now with swift farde gois ebband fast abak,

That with hys bullerand iawis and ouer swak

With hym he soukis and drawys mony stane.

Doug. Virgil, 386, 44.

Aestn revoluta. Virg. V. SWAK, v. and s.

To OVERTAK, v. a. 1. To be able to accomplish any work or piece of business when pressed for time. 2.

To reach a blow at one; to strike. S.

To CUM O'ER, to TAK OER. To strike; as, "I'll tak ye o'er the head." S.

OVER-THE-MATTER, adj. Excessive. S.

OUERTHROUGH, adv. Across the country. S.

OUER THWERT, OUERTHOWRT. V. OURTHORT.

OUER-TREE, s. The stilt, or single handle of the plough used in Orkney. S.

OUER-VOLUIT, part. pa. Laid aside.

For besynes quhilk occurrit on case,

Ouer voluit I this volume lay ane space.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 202, 49.

Awkwardly formed from over, and Lat. volv-o.

OUERWAY, s. The upper or higher way. S.

OVERWARD, s. The upper district of a county. S.

OUF-DOG, s. A wolf-dog. S.

OUGHTLINS, OUGHTLENS, adv. In any degree; in the least. S.

OUGHTLINS, OUGHTLINGS, adv. In the least degree

Had I been thowless, vext, or oughtlins sour,

He wad have made me blyth in half an hour.

Ramsay's Poems, ii.

From A.S. auht, awiht, ought, and lingis, term. q. v.

It is also used as a s., but improperly.

Wow! that's braw news, quoth he, to make fools fain;

But gin ye be nae warlock, how d'ye ken?

Does Tam the Rhymer spae oughtlings of this?

Or do ye prophesy just as ye wish.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 53.

UGSUM, adj. Horrible; abominable. V. UGSUM.
OULIE, s. Oil. V. OLYE.

OULK, OWLK, (pron. ook), s. A week, S.B.

"It is statute,—that all Scotland mak thair weapon-schawinges vpon Thurs-day in Whitsunday oulk." Acts, Ja. IV. 1503. 75, Ed. Murray; wolk, Edit. 1566. c. 110.

"Schir William Montegew erle of Sarisbury come with new ordinance to sege the castel of Dunbar, & lay xxii. owlkis at the sege thair of." Bellend. Cron. B. xv. c. 10.

A.S. uca, wuca, id. Dan. uge, id.

OULKIE, OWKLIE, OUKLIE, adv. Weekly; once a-week; every week. S.

OULTRAIGE, s. An outrage.

—"It is conuenient tyl honest & prudent men to lyue in pace, quhen there nyctbours dois them na oultraige nor violens." Compl. S. p. 291.

O.Fr. oultrage, Ital. oltraggio, L.B. ultragium. Hence oultrageus, ibid. p. 124, outrageous. This word has been traced to Lat. ultra, beyond, as denoting excess in conduct.

OUNCE-LAND, s. A denomination of a certain quantity of land in Orkney. V. URE, s. S.

OUNCLE-WEIGHTS, s. pl. The weights used about farm-houses; generally sea-stones. S.

OVNE, s. An oven. S.

OUNKIN, adj. Strange; uncommon. S.

OUPHALLIDAY, s. V. UPHALIEDAY. S.

To OUPTENE, v. a. To obtain. V. OPTENE. S.

To OUR, OURE, v. a. To overawe; to cow. S.

OUR, OURE, OUER, OWRE, prep. 1. Over; across; beyond, &c. S.

— The thrid wes ane
That rowyt thaim our deliuerly,
And set thaim on the land all dry.—
Thai brocht thaim our, and all thair thing.

Barbour, iii. 428. 434. MS.

Doug. generally writes ouer, which is merely A.S. ofer, E. over, pron. soft.

Wenis thou vnerdit now, and thus vnabil,
Ouer Styx the hellis pule sic wise to fare?

Doug. Virgil, 176, 32.

2. Denoting excess; too much, S. Sometimes used as a s. "A (i. e. all) owres spills, Proverb. Scot. i. e. omne nimium vertitur in vitium;" Rudd.

OURACH, OORACH, s. A name for potatoes in Shetl. S.

OURBACK, s. A cow that has received the bull, but has not had a calf when three years old. S.

OURBELD, part. pa. Covered over.

Than to ane worthé lith wane went thay thair way;
Passit to a palice of price plesand allane;—
Braid burdis, and benkis ourbeld with bancouris of gold,
Cled our with clene clathis. Houlate, iii. 3. MS.

Allied perhaps to Su.G. byl-ia, aedificare. V. BELD.

To OURCOME, v. n. To revive; to recover from a swoon, or any malady, S.

He stert till him, and went he had bene deid,
And claucht him up, withouttin wourdis mair,
And to the dure delyverly him bayr.
And, for the wynd was blawand in his face,
He sone ourcome, intill ane lytill space.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 84.

Sick, sick she grows, syn after that a wee,
When she o'ercame, the tear fell in her eye.

Ross's Helenore, p. 26.

OURCOME, O'ERCOME, s. The overplus, S. See S.

He that has just enough can soundly sleep;
The o'ercome only fashes fowk to keep.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 67.

OURCOME, O'ERCOME, s. The chorus of a song. S.

OURE-MAN, s. Supreme ruler. V. OUERSMAN.

To OUREPUT, v. a. To recover from; to get the better of; applied to disease or evil. S.

OURFA'IN. At the ourfa'in, near the time of childbirth.

To OURGAE, OURGANG, v. a. 1. To overrun. He's ourgane with the scrubbie, S. overrun with scurvy.

2. To exceed; to surpass, S.

"The pains o'ergangs the profit," Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 68.

3. To obtain the superiority; to master. Let na your bairns ourgung ye; Suffer not your children to get the mastery over you, S.

And Vanity got in among them,

To give them comfort for their care,

For fear that Truth should clean ourgang them.

Many's Truth's Travels, Pennecuik's Poems, p. 94.

"The shots o'ergae the auld swine," Ferguson's S. Prov. p. 32. Does shots signify pigs?

"Your gear will ne'er o'er-gang you," Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 88.

In this sense A.S. ofer-gan is used; superare, vincere.

4. To overpower; as with labour, or as expressing great fatigue. "She's quite ourgane wi' wark." S.

5. To pass; to elapse, in a neut. sense. The ourgane year, the past year, S. See Sup.

A.S. ofer-gan, Sw. oefwer-gaa, excedere; A.S. ofer-gan, praeteritus.

OURGAÜN RAPES. Ropes put over corn-stacks to hold down the thatch. S.

OURGANG, s. 1. The right of first going over a water in fishing. 2. Extent. "The ourgang and boundis of the town." S.

To OURHARL, OVERHARL, v. a. 1. To "overcome;" Pink. literally, to drag over. See Sup.

Quha wait bot syne ourselves thai will assail?

Auld fayis ar sindill faythful freyndis found:

First helpe the halfe, and syne ourharl the hail,

Will be ane weful weirfair to our wound.

Maitland Poems, p. 162.

This refers to a violent seizure of property, in consequence of the inability of the owner to defend it. V. HARL.

2. To handle; to treat of; to relate. 3. To treat with severity; to criticise with acrimony; synon. To bring o'er the coals. S.

OURHEID, adv. Without distinction. V. OURHEDE. S.

To OURHYE, OVERHYE, v. a. To overtake. See S.

The sowmer man be folowed wondyr fast,

Be est Cathcart he our hyede thaim agayne.

Wallace, iv. 81.

From A.S. ofer, and hig-an, to make haste, q. to make haste beyond that of him whom one pursues.

In the following passage it seems doubtful, whether the sense be not to master, obtain the superiority over.

He gaiff ane schout, his wyff came out,

Scantlie scho nicht ourhye him:

He held, scho drew; for dust that day

Mycht na man se ane styme

To red thame.

Peblis to the Play, st. 15.

It may be from A.S. ofer-hycg-an, superare, praecellere.

OURIE, adj. Chill; also shivering. V. OORIE.

OURLAY, OWRELAY, s. A cravat, S. It formerly signified a neckloth worn by men, which hung down before, and was tied behind. See Sup.

He falds his owrelay down his breast with care,

And few gangs trigger to the kirk or fair.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 76.

To OURLAY, v. a. To belabour; to beat severely. S.

O U R

OURLAY, s. A kind of hem, in which one part of the cloth is folded, or laid over the other. S.

To OURLAY, v. a. To sew in this manner. S.

OURLEAT, O'ERLEET, s. Something that is lapped, laid, or folded over another thing. S.

OURLORD, OURE-LARD, s. An over-lord; a superior.

Full sutailly he chargit thaim in bandoune,
As thar our lord, till hald of him the toun.
— Byschope Robert, in his tyme full worthi,
Off Glaskow lord, he said, that we deny
Ony our lord, bot the gret God abuff.

Wallace, i. 64. 67. MS.

Thare is nane dedlyke Kyng wyth crowne,
That oure-lard til oure Kyng suld be
In-til superyorytè

V. LAIRD.

Wyntown, viii. 5. 75.

OUR-LOUP, OURLOP, s. An occasional trespass of cattle on a neighbouring pasture.

"In Scotland, an occasional trespass of cattle on a neighbouring pasture is still termed ourlop." Lord Hailes, Annals, i. 319.

A.S. ofer-leop-an, transire; whence O.E. ourlop, a transgression; sometimes the mulct paid for it.

OURMAN, OURISMAN, s. An arbiter. V. OVERSMAN. S.

OURNOWNE, s. Afternoon.

In a dern woode thai stellit thaim full law;
Set skourioris furth the contrè to aspye:
Be ane our nowne thre for rydaris went bye.

Wallace, iv. 432. MS.

A.S. ofer non, pomeridianus, afternoon; Somner.

OUR QUHARE, adv. V. QUHARE, and ALQUHARE.

OURRAD, leg. OUR RAD. Too hasty; rash.

To byd our King castellys I wald we had;
Cast we doun all, we mycht be demyt our rad.

Wallace, vii. 526. MS.

A.S. ofer, nimis, and hraed, celer, velox; to hraede, praeceps. Hraede has sometimes this sense by itself.

Early editors, not understanding the expression, have substituted a solecism used by the vulgar in modern times, too bad.

OUR-RYCHT, OURYCHT, adv. Awry.

Schir John Sinclair begowthe to dance,
For he wes new cum out of France.
For ony thing that he do nicht,
His ay futt yeid ay ouryght,
And to the tother would not gree.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 94.

As signifying, beyond what is right or proper; Fland. over-recht, praeposterus, praeter rectum; Kilian.

To OURRID, v. a. To traverse.

Bot Schyr Eduuard, his brodyr, then
Wes in Galloway, weill ner him by,
With him ane othyr cumpany,
That held the strenthis off the land.
For thai durst nocht yeit tak on hand
Till our rid the land planly.

Barbour, v. 471. MS.

A.S. ofer-ryd-an, equo aut curru transire, to ride over; Somner.

OURSHOT, O'ERSHOT, s. The overplus. Syn. O'ercome. S.

To OURSYLE, OUERSYLE, OVERSILE, v. a. 1. To cover; to conceal.

Tisiphone that furious monstoure wilde
In bludy cape reuestit and ouer sylde,
Sittis kepand but slepe bayth nycht and day
That sory entrè and this porche alway.

Doug. Virgil, 183, 40.

Yea, rather righteous Heav'n let firy blast
Light on my head that thou on Sodom cast,
Ere I my malice cloke or oversile,

O U R

In giving Izac such a counsell vile.

V. SILE.

Hudson's Judith, p. 10.

2. This word has also been rendered to beguile; to circumvent.

I have not met with any satisfying proof of its being used in this sense. This, however, may be from oversight. If really thus used, it should perhaps be viewed as radically different, and be deduced from A.S. ofer, and syll-an, to purchase.

OURTANE, part. pa. Overtaken; used metaph. to denote that one is overtaken by justice, or brought to trial by an assize for a crime.

Schir Gilbert Maleherbe, and Logy,
And Richard Broune, thir thre planly
War with a syis than ourtane;
Tharfor thai drawyn war ilkane,
And hangyt, and hedyt tharto;
As men had demyt thaim for to do.

Barbour, xix. 55. MS.

To tak one in our, is still a vulgar phrase, signifying to call one to account, to bring one to a trial, to bring to the bar, S.

OURTHORT, OWRTHORT, OUERTHWERT, OURTHOURTH, OUERTHORTOURE, prep. Athwart; across; overthwart, E. athort, S. ourter, Dumfr. Lying ourter, lying in an oblique position; a corr. of ouerthortore.

A loklate bar was drawyn ourthourth the dur.

Wallace, iv. 234. MS.

The Scottis men held the tothir way;
Syne owrthort to that way held thai.

Wyntown, viii. 31. 50.

Rycht ouer thwert the chamber was there drawe
A trevesse thin and quhite, all of plesance.

King's Quair, iii. 9.

Foryettis he not Eurialus luf perfay.

Bot kest him euin ouerthortoure Salius way.

Doug. Virgil, 138, 45.

A.S. thuyres signifies obliquely, transversely, from thweor, thwar, perverse, distorted; Belg. dweers, id., whence overdwars, overdweers, athwart, cross. The S. word, however, in all its ancient forms, has most affinity to the Sw., being merely twert oefwer, id. inverted. Ouerthortoure is redundant; the prep. being used both in the beginning and end of the word, q. oefwer twert oefwer. V. THORTOUR.

OURTILL, prep. Above, or beyond.

He hes so weill done me obey,
Ourtill all thing thairfoir I pray
That nevir dolour mak him dram.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 93.

It seems formed, although awkwardly, from A.S. ofer, above, and till, to.

To OUR-TYRVE, OWR-TYRWE, v. a. To turn upside down.

Reprowyd scho suld noucht be for-thi
Of falshede, or of trychery,
For til owrtyrwe that is abowe.—
Bot qwhen thai trayst hyr all thair best,
All that is gywyn be that Lady,
Scho owrtyrweys it suddanly.

Wyntown, viii. 40. 39. 46.

"Isl. tyrv-a, overwhelm; so we say now, topsy-turvy," Gl.

OURTURN, s. Ourturn of a sang, that part of a song which is repeated, or sung in chorus. S.

OUR-WEEKIT, O'ER-WEEKIT, part. adj. 1. Having outstaid one's time. 2. Applied to meat too long kept in the market. S.

To OURWEILL, v. a. To exceed; to go beyond.

Abbottis by rewll, and lordis but resson,

O U T

Sic senyeoris tymis ourweill this sessone,
Vpoun thair vyce war lang to waik.

Scott, Evergreen, ii. 187.

It is printed owerweil. Sibb. has taken an undue liberty with this passage. Not understanding the term ourweill, he has thus altered the line;

Sic senyeoris tynes our weill this sessone.

Chron. S. P. iii. 161.

I have given it according to the Bannatyne MS., which, if my memory does not deceive me, he also consulted. Our term seems to be from A.S. oferwyll-an, superfluere, ebullire, effervescere, ("to boyle over," Somn.) used figuratively. V. ABBOT of VNRESSONE.

OURWOMAN, s. A female chosen to decide, give a casting voice, when the arbiters are equally divided. S.

OURWORD, OWRWORD, OWERWORD, s. 1. Any word frequently repeated, in conversation or otherwise, S.

Her een sae bonie blue betray,
How she repays my passion;
But prudence is her o'erword ay,
She talks of rank and fashion.

Burns, iv. 30.

2. The burden (of a song,) the words which are frequently repeated.

Ay is the ourword of the gest,
Giff thame the pelf to part amang thame.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 104.

The starling flew to his mother's window stane,
It whistled and it sang;
And aye the ower word of the tune
Was—"Johnie tarries lang."

Minstrelsy, Border, i. 80.

OUSE, OWSE, s. An ox. S.

OUSSEN-BOW, s. A sort of ox-collar, made of curved wood, to which the draught was formerly fixed. S.

OWSSEN-STAW, s. An ox-stall. S.

OUSEL, s. V. OUZEL.

OUSEN, OWSEN, pl. Oxen, S. A. Bor.

He has gowd in his coffers, he has owsen and kine,
And ae bonie lassie, his darling and mine.

Burns, iv. 25.

Moes.G. auhsne, id. auhs, bos.

OUSEN MILK, sowens, or flummery not boiled; used in various parts of S. by the common people, instead of milk, alongst with their pottage; Dumfr.

This designation is of the ludicrous kind; q. the milk of oxen, because they give none; this being used only as a substitute for milk, when nothing better can be had.

OUSTER, s. The arm-pit; corr. from Oxter, q. v. S.

OUT, OWT, adv. "Fully; completely." Gl. Wynt.

He wantyd na mare than a schowt,
For til hawe made hym brayne-wode owt.

Wyntown, viii. 17. 6.

He also uses all owte.

Severyus sone he wes but dowte,
Bot he wes were than he all owte.

V. ALL OUT.

Ibid. v. 8. 172.

To OUT, v. a. To lay out; to expend; or, to find vent for.

"But alas! I can scarce get leave to ware my love on him: I can find no ways to out my heart upon Christ; and my love, that I with my soul bestow on him, is like to die in my hand." Rutherford's Lett. P. i. ep. 135.

Isl. yt-a, is nearly allied in sense, as signifying to cheapen; liceor, G. Andr. Its proper sense, I suspect, is to vend. Both it and our v. are from the prep. ut, out, q. to make a commodity find its way without. Hence, OUTING, s. A vent for commodities.

"My peace is, that Christ may find sale and outing of his wares in the like of me, I mean, for saving grace." Ibid. ep. 178.

O U T

OUT,* prep. Nearly the same with E. along. S.

OUT, adv. To gae out, to appear in arms; to rise in rebellion. V. GAE-OUT. S.

To OUT, v. a. To tell or divulge a secret. S.

To OUT, v. n. To issue; to go forth. S.

OUT-ABOUT, adv. Abroad; out of doors; in the open air, S.

But ae night as I'm spying out-about,
With heart unsettled aye, ye needna doubt,
Wha coming gatewards to me do I see,
But this snell lass, that came the day with me?

Ross's Helenore, p. 88.

OUT-ABOUT, adj. Out-about wark, work done out of doors.

OUT-AN'-OUT, adv. Completely; entirely. S.

OUT-BEARING, part. adj. Blustering; bullying. S.

OUT-BY, adv. 1. Abroad; without; not in the house.

2. Out from; at some distance, S. See Sup.

She met my lad hauf gates and mair I trow,
And gar'd her lips on his gee sic a smack,
That well out-by ye wad have heard the crack.

Ross's Helenore, p. 108.

Perhaps from A.S. ut, ex, extra, and by, juxta; as the term implies that one, although not immediately at hand, is not far distant.

OUT-BY, adj. Opposed to that which is domestic; as, out-by wark. 2. Remote or sequestered. S.

OUT-BLAWING, s. Denunciation of a rebel. S.

To OUT-BRADE, v. a. To draw out; also, as v. n. to start out. V. BRADE.

OUT-BREAKER, s. An open transgressor of the law. S.

OUTBREAKING, s. 1. An eruption on the skin, S.

2. Used in a moral sense, to denote the transgression of the law of God, S.

"If I could keep good quarters in time to come with Christ, I would fear nothing; but oh! oh! I complain of my woful outbreakings." Rutherford's Lett. P. i. ep. 162.

It is generally applied to open sins, and those especially of a more gross kind.

To OUTBULLER, v. n. To gush out with a gurgling noise, S.

The blude, outbullerand on the nakit sword,
Hir handis furth spreit.

V. BULLER.

Doug. Virgil, 123, 28.

OUTCA', s. 1. A place convenient for pasture, to which housed cattle are caw'd (or driven) out. 2. A wedding feast given by a master to a favourite servant. S.

OUTCAST, s. A quarrel; a contention, S.

"I tremble at the remembrance of a new out-cast betwixt him and me; and I have cause, when I consider what sick and sad days I have had for his absence." Rutherford's Lett. P. i. ep. 162.

OUTCOME, OUTECOME, OUTCUM, s. 1. Egress; the act of coming out.

And we sall ner enbuschyt be,
Quhar we thar outecome may se.

Barbour, iv. 361, MS.

2. Termination; issue, S.

And for the outcome o' the story,
Just leave it to your ni'bour tory.

R. Galloway's Poems, p. 13.

3. Increase; product, S.

Belg. uytkomst is used in all these senses; a coming forth, exit; event, issue; product; from uytkomen, to come out.

4. That season in which the day begins to lengthen.

Yet, quoth this beast, with heavy chear,
I pray you, Duncan, thole me here,

Until the outcum of the year,
And then if I grow better,
I shall remove, I you assure,
Tho' I were nere so weak and poor,
And seek my meat in Curry moor,
As fast as I can swatter.

Mare of Collingtoun, Watson's Coll. i. 43.

OUTCOMING, s. 1. Egress. 2. Publication. S.

OUT-DIGHTINGS, s. The refuse of grain. S.

OUTDRAUCHT, s. Synonymous with Extract. S.

OUTFALL, s. A quarrel; a contention, S. outcast, synon.

"The feuds at that tyme betwixt the familys of Gordone and Forbes wer not extinguished, therfor they ryled a cry, as if it hade been upon some outfall among these people, crying Help a Gordon, a Gordon, which is the gathering word of the friends of that familie." Pennant's Tour in S. 1769. p. 330. Append.

Teut. utvall signifies a hostile excursion, a sally; Sw. utfall, id. To fall out, E. to quarrel.

OUTFALL, s. A sally. S.

OUTFALLING, s. The same with Outfall. S.

OUTFANGTHIEFE, s. 1. The right of a feudal lord to try a thief who is his own vassal, though taken with the fang, or booty, within the jurisdiction of another. 2. Extended to the person thus taken. S.

OUTFIELD, adj. and s. A term applied to arable land, which is not manured, but cropped till it is worn out, so as to be unfit for bearing corn for some years, S. V. INFIELD.

OUTFIT, s. 1. The act of fitting out; applied to either persons or things. 2. The expense of fitting out. S.

OUTFORNE, pret. v.

O happy star at evening and at morne,
Quhais bright aspect my maistres first outforne!
O happy credle, and O happy hand,
Quhich rockit her the hour that scho wes borne!

Montgomery, MS. Chron. S. P. iii. 494.

It seems to signify, brought forth, or caused to come forth; from A.S. utfaer-an, egredi, exire, used obliquely. Thu utfore; tu egressus es.

OUTFORTH, adv. Apparently, henceforth; in continuation; onwards. S.

OUTGAÏN, s. The entertainment given to a bride in the house of her father or master, before she sets out to that of the bridegroom. S.

OUTGAÏN, adj. Removing; as "the outgaïn tenant." S.

OUTGAIT, OUTGATE, s. 1. A way for egress; used in a literal sense.

Baith here and thare sone vmbeset haue thay
The outgatis all, thay suld not wyn away.

Doug. Virgil, 289, 50.

2. A way of deliverance or escape; used with respect to adversity or difficulty of any kind.

"He falleth in the hands of ane terrible pest: and death is so present to him, that he seeth no out-gait." Bruce's Eleven Serm. Sign. F. 6, b.

—"It bringis contempt to our Soveraine Lordis authoritie, and castis the parties, havand their causes in proces—in great doubt, quhen they finde not ane out-gait, to have their causes decided quhair they are intended." Acts, Ja. VI. 1579. c. 92, Murray.

3. Ostentatious display. S.

OUTGANE, part. pa. Elapsed; expired, S. See Sup.

"It is ordanit, that na hors be sauld out of the realme, quhill at the leist thay be thre yeir auld out-gane, vnder the pane of escheit of thame to the king." Acts, Ja. I. 1424. c. 34. Edit. 1566.

OUTGANGING, s. The act of going out of doors. S.

OUTGIE, s. Expenditure; Synon. Outlay. S.

OUTGOING, part. pr. Removing. Syn. Outgaïn. S.

OUT-HAUAR, OUT-HAUER, s. One who carries or exports goods from a country.

"That of ilk pundis worth of wollin claith had out of the realme, the King sall haue of the out-hauar for custume ii. s." Acts, Ja. I. 1424. c. 44. Edit. 1566. Out-hauer, Skene. V. HAVE.

OUTHERANS, adv. Either. V. OTHIR. S.

OUTHERY, adj. A term applied to unthriving cattle. S.

OUTHIR, conj. Either. V. OTHIR.

OUTHORNE, s. 1. The horn blown for summoning the lieges to attend the king in feir of were. See Sup.

"That all maner of men, that hes land or gudis, be redde horsit and geirit, and efter the faculte of his landis and gudis, for the defence of the realme, at the commandement of the Kingis letters be bailis or outhornis." Acts, Ja. II. 1456. c. 62. Edit. 1566. c. 57. Murray.

Perhaps the blowing of a horn, by a post who carries the mail, is to be viewed as a relic of this ancient custom.

2. The horn blown by the king's mair or messenger, to summon the lieges to assist in pursuing a fugitive.

"Gif it happinnis the Schiref to persew fugitouris with the Kingis Horne as is foirsaid, and the countrie ryse not in his supporte, thay all or parte herand the Kingis Horne, or beand warnit be the Mairis, and followis not the outhorne,—ilk gentilman sall pay to the King vnforgeuin xl. s. and ilk yeman xx. s." Acts, Ja. I. 1426. c. 109. Edit. 1566. c. 98. Edit. Murray.

3. The "horn of a sentinel or watchman to sound alarm," Gl. Sibb.

Fra I be semblit on my feit,

The outhorne is cryde.

Thay rais me all with ane rout,

And chasis me the toun about;

And cryis all with ane schout,

"O traytor full tryde!" Maitland Poems, p. 198.

i. e. the alarm is sounded; unless there be an allusion to the practice of proclaiming a man to be a rebel, and making him an outlaw, by putting him to the horn. V. HORN.

OUTHOUNDER, s. An inciter; one who urges on another to some piece of business or mischief. S.

OUTHOUSE, s. An office-house of any kind, attached to a dwelling-house; as a stable, cow-house, cellar, &c. S. Sw. uthus, id. See Sup.

OUTING, OUTIN', s. The act of going abroad; a pretence for leaving the house. 2. A collection of people, of different sexes, met for amusement. S.

OUTISH, adj. Beauish, showy, and likewise fond of going to places of public amusement. V. OUTTIE. S.

To OUTLABOUR, v. a. To exhaust ground by too much tillage. S.

OUTLAY, s. Expenditure, S. See Sup.

"It is one which accumulates yearly in value, without an yearly outlay of expense." P. Dunkeld, Perth. Statist. Acc. xx. 437.

Sw. utlagg-a, to expend; whence utlaga, tax; utlagor, expenditure.

OUTLAYED, OUTLAID, part. pa. Expended. V. OUTLAY.

OUTLAK, prep.

Reuth have I none, outlak fortoun and chance,

That mane I ay persew both day and nicht.

King Hart. ii. 52.

Left by Mr. Pinkerton as not understood. But if not an error of some copyist for out-tak, except, it may be synon.; from out and lack, or Belg. uyt and lack-en. There seems to have been an old redundant word of this formation, especially as inlaik is still commonly used both as a v. and s. V. next word.

O U T

This agrees with the rest of the passage. "I have no sorrow, or cause for repentance, except what may arise from the common accidents of life." For reuth here does not signify compassion.

OUT-LAIK, OUT-LACK, s. "The superabundant quantity in weight or measure;" Gl. Sibb.

OUTLAN, OUTLIN, s. An alien. S.

OUTLER, adj. Not housed; a term applied to cattle which lie without during winter, S.

The deil, or else an outler quey

Gat up an' gae a croon.

Burns, iii. 137.

OUTLER, s. An animal that is not housed in winter. S.

OUTLETTING, s. Emanation; applied to the operations of divine grace. S.

OUTLY, s. The outly of money, is a phrase respecting the time that money lies out of the hands of the owner, either in trade or at interest, S.

OUTLY, adv. Fully, S.B.

But three haill days were outly come and gaen,
E'er he the task cou'd manage him alane.

Ross's Helenore, p. 43.

OUTLYER, OUTLAIR, s. A stone not taken from a quarry, but lying out in the field in a detached state, S.

Teut. wt-leggher is used in a sense somewhat analogous. It denotes a stationary ship, one fixed to a particular place for watching the enemy, as opposed to those which lie in a harbour.

OUTLOOK, s. A prospect; the view that a person has before him. Syn. To-look, To-luik, q. v. S.

OUTLORDSHIP, s. A property or superiority of lands lying without the jurisdiction of a borough. S.

OUTMAIST, adj. Outermost. S.

OUT ON, adv. Hereafter; by and by. S.

OUT OUR, OUT-OWRE, adv. 1. Over; across, S. from out, and ower, over.

And thai had, on the tothyr party,
Bannok burne, that sua cumbyrsun was,
For slyk and depnes for to pas,
That thar mycht nane out our it rid.

Barbour, xiii. 353, MS.

2. Out from any place; Stand outour, stand back; To stand out ower, to stand without the enclosure, &c. S.

3. Quite over; as, "to fling a stane outower the waw." S.

OUTOUTH, prep. Out from. V. OUTWITH.

OUTPASSAGE, s. Outgate. S.

OUTPASSING, s. Exit; exportation. S.

To OUT-PUT, v. a. A term used to denote the providing of soldiers by particular persons or districts. S.

OUTPUTTER, s. One who sends out or supplies soldiers. S.

To OUT-PUT, v. a. To eject from any possession; to throw out of any place or office. V. IMPUT, v. S.

OUTPUTTING, s. The act of ejecting another from the possession of any property, or from any place or office. S.

OUTPUTTAR, s. One who passes counterfeit coin. S.

OUTPUTTING, s. The act of passing counterfeit money. S.

OUTPUTTER, s. An instigator, or perhaps employer.

OUTQUENT, part. pa. Extinguished; spent.

Like as the pacient has hete of ouer grite fors,
And in young babbyis warmnes insufficient,
And to aget failyeis, and is out quent.

V. QUENT.

Doug. Virgil, 95, 30.

To OUTQUITE, v. a. To free a subject from adjudication, by full payment of the debt lying on it. S.

O U T

OUT-QUITTING, OUTQUYTTING, s. The act of freeing from any encumbrance by payment of debt. S.

To OUTRAY, v. a. To treat outrageously. S.

OUTRAY, s. Outrage. S.

OUT-RAKE, s. 1. An expedition; an out-ride. A.S. ut-raec-an, to extend.

2. An extensive walk for sheep or cattle, S. Gl. Sibb. V. RAIK.

OUTRANCE, s. Extremity.

Quhatevir chance

Dois me outrance,

Saif fals thinking

In sueit dreming.

Maitland Poems, p. 216.

i. e. "Every accident reduces me to an extremity, except the pleasant delusion of dreams." Fr. outrance, id.

To OUT-RED, v. a. 1. To disentangle; to extricate.

2. To finish any business, S.B. See Sup.

And what the former times could not outred,

In walls and fowsies; these accomplished.

Muse's Threnodie, p. 94.

3. To clear from encumbrances; to free one's self from any pecuniary obligations by a complete settlement of accounts. 4. To release what has been pledged or pawned. 5. To fit out; applied to marine affairs. S.

Isl. utrett-a, id. perficere negotium. V. RED.

OUTRED, s. 1. Rubbish, what is cleared out, S.

2. Clearance; finishing, S.B.

Had of the bargain we made an outred,
We'se no be heard upon the midden head,
That he's guede natured ony ane may see.

Ross's Helenore, p. 85.

3. Settlement; clearance; discharge in regard to pecuniary matters. 4. The act of fitting out a ship. S.

OUTRED, s. An inaccurate orthography for Out-raid, a military expedition. V. LEAP OUT. S.

To OUTREIK, OUTREICK, v. a. To fit out. V. REIK OUT.

OUTREICKET, part. pa. Equipped; rigged out. S.

OUTREIKE, OUTREIKING, s. Outfit; rigging out. S.

OUTREIKER, s. One who equips others for service. S.

OUTREYNG, s. Extremity; irremediable calamity.

For had thair owtrageous bounte
Bene led with wyt, and with mesur,
Bot giff the mar mysawentur
Bene fallyn thaim, it suld rycht hard thing
Be to lede thaim till outreyng.

Barbour, xviii. 182, MS.

Fr. oultrier, outrer, to carry things to an extremity; from Lat. ultra.

OUTRING, s. A term used in curling. S.

OUTRINNING, s. Expiration. S.

OUTS AND INS. The particulars of a story. S.

OUTSCHETT, part. pa. Shut out; excluded.

That Garritoure my nimphe unto me tald,
Was cleipit Lawtie keipar of that hald,
Of hie honour: and thay pepil outschett.

Palice of Honour, iii. 56.

A.S. ut, out, and scytt-an, obserare; utscytling, extraneus.

OUTSET, s. The commencement of a journey, or of any business, S. In this sense the v. to set out is used in E.

2. The publication of a book, S. To set out, to publish a work, S.

3. The provision made for a child when going to leave the house of a parent; as, "a daughter's outset." 4.

O U T

An ostentatious display of finery, in order to recommend one's self. "She had a grand outset." S.

To OUTSET, v. a. To display openly. S.

OUTSET, part. pa. Set off ostentatiously; making a tawdry display of finery. S.

OUTSET, s. Extension of cultivation in places not taken in before. S.

OUTSHOT, s. A projection in a building, S. Sw. utskiutande, id. skiut-a ut, to project, Belg. uytschiet-en, id. See Sup.

OUTSHOT, s. Pasture lands on a farm; also, rough untilled ground. S.

OUT-SIGHT, s. Goods, furniture, or utensils, out of doors; as insight denotes what is within the house, S. V. INSIGHT.

OUT-SIGHT, s. Prospect of egress. S.

OUTSIGHT PLENISHING. Goods out of doors; as, horses, cows, oxen; also implements of agriculture, &c. S.

OUTSPECKLE, s. "A laughing-stock."
"Whae drives thir kye?" can Willie say,
"To mak an outspeckle o' me?"
Minstrelsy, Border, i. 103.

q. something to be spoken out or abroad. For I question if speckle here has the same origin as in Kenspeckle, q. v.

OUTSPOKEN, adj. Given to freedom of speech; not accustomed to conceal one's sentiments, S. See Sup.

OUTSTANDER, s. One who persists in opposing, or in refusing to comply with, any measure. S.

OUTSTRAPOLOUS, adj. Obstreperous. S.

OUTSTRIKING, s. An eruption on the skin, S.

OUTSUCKEN, s. 1. The freedom of a tenant from bondage to a mill; or the liberty which he enjoys, by his lease, of taking his grain to be ground where he pleases. It is opposed to the state of being thirled to a mill, S.

2. The duties payable by those who are not astricted to a mill, S.

"The duties payable by those who come voluntarily to a mill are called outsucken, or outtown multures." Erskine's Instit. B. 2. Tit. 9. s. 20.

It is also used as an adj.

"The rate of outsucken multure, though it is not the same every where, is more justly proportioned to the value of the labour than that of the insucken; Ibid. V. SUCKEN, INSUCKEN.

OUTSUCKEN MULTURE. The duty for grinding at a mill, payable by those who come to it voluntarily. S.

OUT TAK, OWTAKYN, OWTANE, prep. 1. Except. See S.

Bot off thair noble gret affer,
Thar seruice, na thair realté,
Ye sall her na thing now for me;
Owtane that he off the barnage
That thiddir come tok homage.
Barbour, ii. 185. MS.

Here it is used elliptically, as if an adv.

And schortlye euery thyng that doith repare,
In firth or feild, flude, forest, erth or are,— Astablit lyggis styl to sleip and restis —
Out tak the mery nyctyngale Philomene,
That on the thorne sat syngand fro the splene.
Doug. Virgil, 450, 10.

This seems literally tane or taken out, as out tak, take out. V. Divers. Purley, i. 433.

"Every man that leveth his wyf, out teke cause of fornicaciown, makith hir to do lecherie." Wiclif, Matt. 5.

In alle Bretayn was nouht, sithen Criste was born,
VOL. II. 177

O U T

A fest so noble wrouht aftere no biforn,
Out tak Carleon, that was in Arthure tyme,
Thare he bare the coroune, thereof yit men ryme.
R. Brunne, p. 332.

Gower uses out-takyn in the same sense, Conf. Am. Fol. 25. a.

2. Besides, in addition.

The Erle off Murreff with his men,
Arayit weile, come alsua then,
In to gud cowyne for to fycht,
And gret will for to manteyme thair mycht.
Owtakyn thair mony barownys,
And knyghtis that of gret renowne is
Come with thair men, full stalwartly.
Barbour, xi. 232. MS.

This word is evidently formed in the same manner with Belg. uytgenomen, Germ. ausgenommen, except, from uyt, aus, out, and neem-en, nehm-en, to take. I need scarcely mention E. except as an example of the same kind; Lat. ex, from, and capere, to take.

OUTTANE, OUTETANE, part. pa. Excepted. S.

OUTTENTOUN, s. One not living in a particular town. S.

OUTTER, s. A frequenter of balls and merry-meetings, from the idea of going much out. S.

OUTTERIT, pret.

Bot Talbartis hors, with ane mischance,
He outterit, and to rin was laith.
Lyndsay's Squyer Meldrum, 1594, B. i. a.

Utterit, Edit. Pink. "Reared?" Gl. Perhaps literally, "would not keep the course," from Fr. outrer. V. OUTREYNG. Outré, however, was a term used in chivalry, denoting any atrocious injury. V. Dict. Trev.

OUT-THE-GAIT, adj. Honest; fair; not double, either in words or actions; q. one who keeps the straight road, without any circuitous course, S.

OUT-THE-GATE, adj. Honest; fair, &c. S.

OUT-THROUGH, OUTTHROWGH, OUTTHROW, prep. 1. Through any object, so as to go out at the opposite side. 2. Inthrow and Outthrow, in every direction. S.

OUTTHROW, adv. Thoroughly; entirely. S.

OUTTIE, adj. Addicted to company; much disposed to go out. OUTTIER is used as the comparative. S.

To OUT-TOPE, v. a. To overtop. S.

OUT-TOWN, s. The Outfield on a farm. S.

OUT-TURN, s. Increase; productiveness in grain. S.

OUTWAILE, OUTWYLE, s. Refuse; a person or thing that is rejected; properly, what is left after selection, S.

He gave me once a diuine responsaile,
That I should be the floure of loue in Troy;
Now am I made an vnworthy outwaile,
And ail in care translated is my joy.
Henryson's Test. Creseide, Chaucer, p. 182. Fol. ii. c. 1.

Isl. utvel-ia, eligere. Rudd. writes outweal, vo. Wale. V. WYLE, v.

To OUTWAIR, v. a. To expend.

To get sum geir yet maun I haif grit cair,
In vanitie syn I man it outwair—
Woun be ane wretche, and into waistrie spent.
V. WARE, v. Arbuthnot, Maitland Poems, p. 151.

OUTWARD,  adj.* Cold; reserved; distant in behaviour; not kind; opposed to Innerly, q. v. S.

OUTWARDNESS, s. Coldness; distance; unkindness. S.

OUT WITH. In a state of variance with one. S.

OUTWITH, OWTOUTH, WTOUTH, prep. 1. Without; on the outer side, denoting situation. So written, says Rudd., to distinguish it from without, sine.

"The Carmelite freris come at this tyme in Scotland, and ereckit ane chapell of oure lady outwith the wallis of Perth to be thair kirk." Bellend. Cron. B. xiii. c. 16.

It occurs in the same sense in our old Acts. V. PEILE, v.

2. Outwards; out from.

And off his men xiiii, or ma,
He gert as thai war sekkis ta
Fyllyt with gress; and syne thaim lay
Apon thair horss, and hald thair way,
Rycht as thai wald to Lanark far,
Owtouth qubar thai enbuschyt war.

Barbour, viii. 448. MS.

3. Separate from.

"This mentioun of David placed here, is to let the King see, that the readines of his comfort flowed from the Mesias, to wit, Jesus Christ, from whom al true comfort flowed, and out-with whome there is nather comfort nor consolation." Bruce's Eleven Serm. Sign. D. 5. a.

4. Beyond; in relation to time.

S.

This word is not, as Rudd. conjectures, from out and with. The oldest orthography is that of Barbour, wtouth, (V. the adv.) which both in form and signification agrees to Sw. utaat, pron. utot; outwards, exteriora versus; Seren. Aat is a prep. signifying, towards; as aat hoeger, towards the right hand; aat oester, towards the East, eastward. Verel. writes the Sw. prep. aath, uthi. V. At, Ind. Scytho-Scand.

I have observed no word in A.S. formed like outwith or wtouth. It may be merely without, A.S. withutan, inverted. As written outouth, however, the last syllable resembles the A.S. prep. oth, respecting place, and used as synon. with Su.G. aat. "Thou shalt spread abroad, from eastdaele oth westdaele, and from suthdaele oth northdaele; from the east quarter towards the west, and from the south quarter towards the north;" Gen. xxviii. 15. It occurs likewise in the composition of some A.S. verbs, in which its meaning seems to have been overlooked; as ut-oth-berstan, clam aufugere, perhaps rather fugere ad extra, S. to flee outwith; ut-oth-fleon, id. Oth, in the examples given, is synon. with the prep. with, versus. V. DOUNWITH, and WITHOUTYN.

OUTWITH, adv. 1. Out of doors; abroad, S.

Colin her father, who had outwith gane,
But heard at last, and sae came in him lane,
As he come in, him glegly Bydby spy'd;
And, Welcome Colin, mair nor welcome, cry'd.

Ross's Helenore, pp. 83, 84.

2. Outwards.

As he awisyt now have thai done;
And till thaim wtouth send thai sone,
And bad thaim herbery that nycht,
And on the morn cum to the fycht.

Barbour, ii. 299. MS.

S. "Yet we say, farthir outwith, or inwith, for more to the outward or inward," Rudd, OUTWITH, adj. More distant; not near.

S.

OUTWITTINS, OUTWITTENS, adv. Without the knowledge of; as, "Outwittens o' my daddie," without my father's knowledge. S.

OUTWORK, OUTWARK, s. Work done out of doors by one whose proper province it is to work within doors. S.

OUTWORKER, s. One who is bound at certain times to work out of doors though a house servant. S.

To OUZE, v. a. To empty; to pour out. V. WEESE. S.

OUZEL, OUSEL, s. A term still used in some places for the Sacrament of the Supper, Peebles.

This has evidently been retained from the days of Popery, being the same with E. housel, A.S. husl, id.

the term anciently used to denote the sacrifice of the Mass; Isl. husl, oblatio, from Moes.G. hunsl, a sacrifice. Armahairtida wiljau, jah ni hunsl; I desire mercy and not sacrifice; Matt. ix. 10. This term, as Ihre has observed, began to be applied to the Sacrament of the Supper, when men began to view it as a sacrifice for the quick and the dead. He deduces hunsl from hand, hond, the hand, and saljan, to offer; which word, according to Junius, is properly applied to sacrifices, and corresponds to Gr. θυσία, as in Joh. xvi. 2. Hunsla saljan Gotha, to offer sacrifice to God. A.S. hunsl, is sometimes used in the same sense, particularly by Aelfric. V. Mareschall. Observ. in Vers. A.S. p. 480. According to Seren., E. handsel, hansel, is radically the same with Moes.G. hunsl, as denoting the act of offering the hand, for the confirmation of a contract. From hunsl is formed hunslastaths, an altar, i. e. the stead or place of sacrifice.

OW, Ou, interj. Expressive of some degree of surprise. S.

OW AY, adv. Yes, ay. S.

OWE, prep. Above.

Thar mycht men se rycht weill assaile,
And men defend with stout bataill;
And harnys fley in gret foysoun;
And thai, that owe war, tumbill doun
Stanys apon thaim fra the hycht.

Barbour, xviii. 418. MS.

Our, Edit. Pink.; above, Ed. 1620.

A.S. ufa, supra, superne; onufa, from above, Luk. xxiv. 49. awefen on ufa, woven from the top, Joh. xix. 23. It would seem, from the superl. ufemest, that ufe was used as synon. V. UMAST. Isl. ofa, ofan, Su.G. ofwan, superne.

To OWERGIFFE, v. a. To renounce in favour of another; to give up. S.

OWERLOUP, s. The act of leaping over a fence, &c. S.

To OWERWEIL, v. a. To overrun; to exceed. V. OURWEILL.

To OWG, v. n. To shudder; to feel abhorrence at. S.

OWYNE, s. An oven. S.

OWKLIE, OWKLY, adj. Weekly. V. OULKLIE. S.

OWME, s. Steam; vapour; the same with Oam. S.

To OWN,* v. a. 1. To favour; to support. 2. To appear to recognise; to take notice of; as, "He did na own me." S.

To OWR one's self. To be able to do any thing necessary without help. V. OVER. S.

OURANCE, s. 1. Ability. 2. Mastery; superiority. S.

OWRDREVIN, part. pa. Overrun; covered; applied to land rendered useless by the drifting of sand. S.

OWRE BOGGIE. People are said to be married in an Owre-Boggie manner when they do not go through the forms prescribed by the national kirk. S.

To OWRE-HALE, v. a. To overlook; to pass over so as not to observe.

Thair be mae senses than the Sicht,
Quhilk ye owre-hale for haste.

Cherrie and Slae, st. 61.

Su.G. oefwer, A.S. ofer, over, and Su.G. Isl. hael-a, A.S. Alem. hel-an, Germ. hel-en, O.E. to hill, to cover, to hide; Sw. oefwerhael-ja, to cover.

OWRELAY, s. A cravat. V. OURLAY. S.

OWREHIP, s. "A way of fetching a blow with the hammer over the arm," Gl. Burns.

The brawnie, bainie, ploughman chiel
Brings hard owrehip, wi' sturdy wheel,
The strong forehammer.

q. Over the hip?

Burns, iii. 15.

OWRESKALIT, part. pa. Overspread.

The purpou hevin, owreskalit in silver sloppis,

O X E

Owregilt the treis, branchis, levis, and barks.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 8. st. 3.

V. SKALE, to scatter.

The silver sloppis are not, as Warton imagines, slips, Hist. Poet. ii. 265, but the white gaps made by light clouds amidst the azure sky.

OWRIE, adj. Chill. V. OORIE.

OWRIM AND OWRIM. When a band of shearers meet a flat of corn not portioned out to them by ridges, it is termed an owrim and owrim shear, i. e. over him and over him. S.

OWRLADY, s. A female superior. V. OURLORD. S. To OWRN, v. a. To adorn.

The Byschap Willame de Lawndalis

Owrnyd his Kyrk wyth fayre jewalis.

Fr. orn-er, Lat. orn-are. Wyntown, ix. 6. 144.

OWRTER, adv. Farther over. S.

OWSE, s. An ox. V. OUSE. S.

OWT, adj. Exterior; lying out.

Be-northt Brettane suld lyand be

The owt ylys in the se. Wyntown, i. 13. 58,

A.S. yte, exterus, from ut, ute, foris.

OWTH, prep. Above; over.

In Ycolmkil lyis he:

Owth hym thir wers yhit men may se.

Wyntown, vi. 9. 66. also x. 86. 107.

Bath wndyre, and owth that south part,

And the Northsyd swa westwart,

And that West gawil alsua

In-til hys tyme all gert he ma. Ibid. vii. 10. 273.

Mr. MacPherson mentions umast, uppermost, as if he viewed it as coming from the same root. This is evidently from ufe, A.S. ufemest. He refers also to A.S. oth-hebban, to extol or raise up; uthwita, a philosopher. f. as knowing above others, and Sw. utmer, upper, vo. Mer, Ihere. It is not improbable that owth is a corr. of owe, or of its root ufe. V. OWE.

OWTHERINS, adj. Either. S.

OWTING, s. An expedition.

— Alsone as the Lord Dowglas

Met with the Erle of Murreff was,

The Erle speryt at thaim tithing

How thai had farne in thair owting.

"Schyr," said he. "we haf drawyn blud."

Barbour, xix. 620. MS.

A.S. ut, abroad; Sw. uttaeg, an expedition abroad.

OXEE, OX-EYE, s. The Tit-mouse, a bird, S.

"The rede schank cryit my fut my fut, and the oxee cryit tueit." Compl. S. p. 60.

Willoughby calls it the Great Titmouse or ox-eye.

But the ox-eye of S. is viewed as the blue titmouse, Parus caeruleus, Gesner. P. Luss, Dunbartons. Statist. Acc. xvi. 250.

O Z I

The Sw. name talgoxe, might appear to have some affinity. OXGATE, OXENGATE, s. An ox-gang of land, as much as may be ploughed by one ox, according to the S. laws, thirteen acres.

"Alwaies, ane oxengate of land suld conteine threttene aicker." Skene, Verb. Sign. vo. Bovata.

"By act of sederunt, March 11, 1585, an oxengate, or oxgate, contains 13 acres, 4 oxengate a twenty-shilling land, 8 oxengate a forty-shilling land." P. Rhynie, Aberd. Statist. Acc. xix. 290. N.

Spelman renders it bovis iter, from ox and gate, iter, corresponding to gang in oxgang, i. e. quantum sufficit ad iter vel actum unius bovis; vo. Oxgang, and Bovata.

OXINBOLLIS, s. pl. Perhaps yokes for oxen. S.

OXPENNY, s. A tax in Shetland.

"The parish also pays to Sir Thomas Dundas, the superior, for scatt, wattle, and oxpenny." P. Aithsting, Statist. Acc. vii. 583.

"There is another payment exacted by the grantees of the Crown, called ox and sheep money, which is said to have been introduced by the Earls of Orkney, when they lorded it over this country." P. Northmavin, Shetl. Ibid. xii. 353.

OXTAR, OXTER, s. 1. The armpit, S. A. Bor.

"Thir ii. brethir succedit to thair faderis landis with equal auctorite & purpos to reuenge thair faderis slauchter. And becaus they fand thair gud moder participant thair-with, thay gart hir sit nakit on ane cauld study with hate eggis bound undir hir oxtaris, quhil scho was deid." Bel-lend. Cron. B. xi. c. 1.

"The wife is welcome that comes with the crooked oxter," S. Prov. "She is welcome that brings some present under her arm." Kelly, p. 319.

2. Used in a looser sense for the arm. To leid by the oxtar, to walk arm in arm; in which sense the vulgar still say, to oxtar ane, or, to oxtar ane anither, S.

Sum with his fallow rownis him to pleis,

That wald for envy byt aff his neis,

His fa him by the oxtar leidis.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 40. st. 3.

Four inch aneath his oxter is the mark,

Scarce ever seen since he first wore a sark.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 120.

The words used in this sense, in the Northern languages, differ considerably in form, yet evidently acknowledge the same origin. A.S. oxtan, Teut. oxel, Isl. oxlum, Belg. oksel, Germ. achselgrube. Whether these have been borrowed from Lat. axilla, id. seems doubtful.

To OXTER, v. a. To take an arm. S.

OYES, interj. A term used by public criers. V. HOYES. S.

OYESSE, s. A niece. S.

OZELLY, adj. Dark of complexion; resembling an ousel, Loth. V. OSZIL.

OZIGER, s. The state of fowls when moulting. S.

P.

P A C

This letter was unknown in the ancient Scandinavian dialects, B alone being used. Later Runic writers have therefore distinguished it from B, merely by the insertion of a point; and have reckoned by far the greatest part of the words, written with P, as exotics. In Alem. and Franc. B and P are used in common. This accounts for the frequent interchange of these letters in S. and other dialects derived from the Gothic.

To PAAK, v. a. To beat; to cudgel. V. PAIK, v.

PAAL, s. A post or large pole, S.B.

A.S. pal, Su.G. paale, Alem. Germ. pfal, Belg. pael, C.B. parwl, Lat. pal-us, Ital. pal-o, id.

PAB, s. The refuse of flax when milled, Loth. pob, S.B.

"At an old lint mill in Fife, a great heap of this refuse, or pab tow, as it is called, had been formed about 60 years ago.—The heap during that time having been always soaked and flooded with water, is now converted into a substance having all the appearance and properties of a flaw peat recently formed." Prize Essays, Highl. Soc. ii. 10. V. POB.

PACE, s. 1. Weight, in general. 2. The weight of a clock; generally used in pl. S. Also used metaph. See Sup.

"I am sure, the wheels, paces, and motions of this poor church, are tempered and ruled not as men would, but according to the good pleasure and infinite wisdom of our only wise Lord." Rutherford's Lett. P. i. ep. 130.

PACE, PAISS, PAISE, PASS, s. The distinctive name of one of those English gold coins called Nobles. S.

PACK, adj. Intimate; familiar, S.

Nae doubt but they were fain o' ither;
An' unco pack an' thick thegither. Burns, iii. 3.

Twa tods forgathert on a brae,
Whar Leithen spouts, wi' dashin din,
At Huthope owre a craggy lin.
They war auld comrades, frank an' free,
An' pack an' thick as tods cou'd be.

Rev. J. Nicol's Poems, ii. 89.

Probably a cant word from E. pack, "a number of people confederated in any bad design," Johns. Su.G. pack, faex hominum, proletariorum turba; which Ihre traces to Isl. piæckir, circumforanei, from piökur, fasciculus. Its connexion with thick, however, would suggest that it properly signifies closeness or contiguity, from Germ. Su.G. packe, sarcina, pack-en, pack-a, constringere, to pack, E.

PACKLIE, adv. Intimately; familiarly. S.

PACKNESS, s. Familiarity; intimacy. S.

To PACK, or PEIL, To PACK and PEIL. V. PEILE, v. S.

PACKALD, s. 1. A pack; a burden.

"O how loth are we to forego our packalds and burdens, that hinder us to run our race with patience." Rutherford's Lett. P. i. ep. 131.

2. A packet or parcel. S.

Belg. pakkaadie, luggage. L is often inserted in S. words; as in fagald, a faggot.

PACKET, s. A pannier; a small currach. S.

PACKHOUSE, s. A warehouse for receiving goods imported, or meant for exportation, S. Teut. pack-huys, promptuarium mercium.

P A D

PACKMAN, s. A pedlar; a hawker; properly, one who carries his pack or bundle of goods on his back, S. See Sup.

Hence the title of a poem satirizing the Romish religion, supposed to be written by Robert Semple, towards the beginning of the reign of James VI.;—The Packman's Paternoster.

PACKMAN-RICH, s. A species of barley (or beer) having six rows of grains on the ear. S.

PACKMANTIE, POCKMANTIE, s. Portmanteau. S.

PACK-MERCHANT, s. The same with Packman. S.

PACKS, s. The sheep which, in lieu of wages, a shepherd is allowed to feed along with his master's flock. S.

PACK-EWES, s. The ewes which a shepherd has a right to pasture in lieu of wages. S.

PACLOTT, PACLAT, s. Perhaps errat. for PATLAT. V. PAITLATTIS. S.

PACT, s. To spend the pact, (for pack,) to waste one's substance; to perish the pack, S.

— Thai get ane meir unbocht,

And sua thai think thai ryd for nocht,

And thinks it war ane fulische act

On ryding hors to spend the pact.

V. PACKMAN.

Maitland Poems, p. 184.

To PAD,* v. n. To travel, properly on foot. S.

To PADDER, v. a. To tread; to beat with frequent walking. PADDERT, padded; beat with walking. S.

PADDIST, s. A footpad; one who robs on foot. S.

PADDIT, part. pa. Beaten; formed and hardened into a footpath by treading. V. PAD and PAID. S.

PADDOCK, s. A low sledge for removing stones, &c. S.

PADDOCK-HAIR, s. The down that covers unfledged birds; also, that kind of down which is on the heads of children born without hair, S.

Teut. padden-hayr, lanugo, padde-blood, deplumis.

PADDOCK-PIPES, s. pl. Marsh Horsetail, S. Equisetum palustre, Linn. See Sup.

"Marsh Horse-tail. Anglis. Paddock-pipe, Scotis." Lightfoot, p. 648.

PADDOCK-RUDE, s. The spawn of frogs, S. Padow-redd, Gl. Sibb. Paddock-ride, Ramsay.

A shot starn—thro' the air

Skyts east and west with unco glare;

But found neist day on hillock side,

Na better seems nor paddock ride.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 334.

PADDOKSTANE, s. The toadstone, or stone vulgarly believed to grow in the head of a toad; esteemed precious on account of its medical and magical virtues. S.

PADDOCK-STOOL, s. This term is used to denote Agarics in general; but particularly, the varieties of the Agaricus fimetarius are thus denominated, S. See Sup.

Lightfoot gives this name exclusively to A. chantarellus.

P A G

"Yellow Agaric or Chanterelle. Anglis. Paddock-Stool, Scotis." P. 1008.

Teut. padden-stoel, boletus, fungus.

PADE, s. 1. A toad.

On the chef of the clolle,
A pade pik on the polle.

Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. i. 9.

i. e. A toad picked or fed on the poll or head.

2. It seems to signify a frog, as used by Wyntown.

Thare nakyn best of wenym may

Lywe, or lest atoure a day;

As ask, or eddyre, tade, or pade. Cron. i. 13. 55.

A.S. pade, Germ. Belg. padde, Su.G. padde, id.

PADELL, s.

—Ane auld pannell of ane laid sadill,

Ane pepper-polk maid of a padell.

Bannatyne Poems, p. 160. st. 7.

Lord Hailes says that he does not know the signification. Sibb. expl. padell, puddil, "a small leathern bag or wallet for containing a pedlar's wares. Teut. buydel, bulga, crumena, sacculus."

PADYANE, PADGEAN, s. A pageant.

Than cryd Mahoun for a Heleand padyane.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 30.

i. e. for a Highland pageant.

Dunbar also uses it metaph. in reference to poets.

I see the Makkaris amangis the laif

Playis heir their padyanis, syne gois to graif.

Ibid. p. 75.

They are represented as for a time actors on a stage, and then disappearing.

Knox employs this term in ridicule of the mummery of the Popish worship.

"They providit tables, quhairof sum befor usit to serv for Drunkardis, Dycearis, and Cairtaris (Cardplayers,) bot they war holie yneuche for the Preist and his Padgean." Hist. p. 139.

Mr. Tooke views pageant as merely the present part., paecceand, of A.S. paec-an, to deceive. Pacheand, Pacheant, Pageant." Divers. Purley, ii. 369, 370.

PADIDAY, s. The day of Palladius, a Scottish saint. S.

PADJELL, s. An old pedestrian; a person who has often been victor in foot races. S.

PADLE, PADDLE, s. The Lump fish, Orkn. V. Cock-PADDLE. See Sup.

PAFFLE, s. A small possession, in land, Perth. Poffle, Lanarks. Pendicle, synon. See Sup.

"Some places are parcelled out into small paffles, or farms, few of which are above 30 acres each. The occupiers of most of them are under the necessity of following some other occupation than that of farming. A considerable number are weavers." P. Kinclaven, Perth. Statist. Acc. xix. 328.

Isl. paufe, fasciculus.

PAFFLER, s. One who occupies a small farm, Perth.

"Some of these small farmers or pafflers are at times employed with their horses and carts at the roads," &c. Statist. Acc. ubi sup. p. 329.

PAGE, s. A boy.

Thai sparyt nowther carl na page.

Wyntown, viii. 11. 90.

Son nor man chyld nane had Kyng Latyne;

For als mekill as his young son ane page

Deceissit was within his tendir age

Doug. Virgil, 206, 19.

Fr. page, Ital. paggio, petit garçon. Gr. παις, Su.G. poike, Dan. pog, id. Pers. peik, pedissequus.

Mr. Tooke gives a different etymon. "Pack, patch, and page," he says, "are the past participle pac, (differently pronounced, and therefore differently written with k, ch, or ge,) of the Anglo-Saxon verb Paecan, Paeccean, to deceive by false appearances.—As servants were contemptuously called Harlot, Varlet, Valet, and Knave; so were they called Pack, Patch, and Page. And from the same source is the French Page and the Italian Paggio." Divers. Purley, ii. 369, 370.

P A Y

To PAY, v. a. 1. To please; to satisfy.

The Byschape that tyme of Glasgw,—

And Schyr Walter Alaynsown

Justys of Scotland, quhen this wes down,

Past a-pon delywerans

Oure se to-gyddre in-to Frans,

For to se thare Dame Mary,

Schyr Ingramys douchtyr de Cowey.

Thai held thame payid of that sycht;—

And browcht hyr wyth thame in Scotland.

Wyntown, vii. 9. 449.

Than Wallace said, This mater payis nocht me.

Wallace, ix. 789. MS.

Mon in the mantell, that sittis at thi mete,

In pal pured to pay, prodly pight.—

Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. ii. 2.

This seems to signify, "in fine cloth furred in such a manner as to please." V. PURRY.

Evil payit, not satisfied, ill pleased, S.

Sir, I pray you be not evil payit nor wraith.

Priests of Peblis, S.P.R. i. 35.

This is merely an oblique sense of Fr. pay-er, as signifying to discharge a debt, to satisfy a creditor. Teut. pay-en, solve, satisfacere; et pacare, sedare, Kilian. The Fr. say, payer de raison, to give good reasons. Payde, pleased. R. Glouc. and Chaucer use paie in the same sense, and John Hardyng.

If I the truth of hym shall saie,

That twenty yere he reigned all menne to paie;

The lawe and peace full aye conserued,

Of his commons the loue aye deserued.

Cron. Fol. 33, b.

2. To beat; to drub; as, "I gae him a weel paid skin." S.

3. To defeat; to overcome; as, "He's fully paid." S.

PAID, part. pa. Ill paid, sorry; as, "I'm verra ill paid for ye; I am very sorry for you." S.

PAY, s. Pleasure; satisfaction.

I can nocht get a freind yit to my pay,

That dar now tak in hand, for onie thing,

With me to compeir befor yon king.

Priests of Peblis, S.P.R. i. 41.

PAY, s. Beating; drubbing.

And he tauld how a carle him maid

With a club sic felloun pay,

That met him stoutly in the way,

That had nocht fortoun helpit the mar,

He had bene in gret perell thar.

Barbour, xix. 609. MS.

Wyth stans thare thai made swylk pay,

For thare-of thanne inew had thay,

That the Schyrrave thare wes slayne.

Wyntown, viii. 29. 193.

It is now used in pl. S., as A. Bor. "pays, strokes; threshing, beating." Gl. Grose.

The v. pay being used, E. as signifying to beat, it seems uncertain whether it be an oblique sense of Fr. pay-er, or from C.B. puyo, pulso, verbero; Lhuyd. Mr. MacPherson mentions Gr. παι-ω, id.

PAY.

Thus the Roy, and his rout,restles thai raid

Ithandly ilk day,

Our the mountains pay,

To Rome tuke the reddy way
Withoutin mare abaid.

Gawan and Gol. Edit. 1508. Pink. Ed. i. 24.

As Rome seems to be an error of the press for Rone, (the river Rhone,) Mr. Pinkerton has substituted the latter. But both here and in st. 18. he has altered pay to gay, without any intimation. The Alps, here referred to, could scarcely be denominated the mountains gay. The phrase seems to signify, "the mountainous region," or "the country of the mountain;" from Fr. pais, a region or country.

PAID, s. 1. A path, S.B. Alem. paid, via.

For her gweed luck a wee bit aff the paid,
Grew there a tree with branches close and braid:
The shade beneath a canness-braid out throw
Held aff the sun beams frae a bonny know.

Ross's Helenore, p. 27.

2. A steep ascent.

Belg. pad, A.S. paad. V. PETH.

To PAIDLE, v. n. 1. To walk, or move backwards and forwards, with short quick steps, like a child. 2. To work with the feet in water, or any liquid substance. S.

PAIDLE, s. A hoe. V. PATTLE. S.

To PAIDLE, v. a. To hoe. S.

PAIGHLED, part. pa. Overcome with fatigue. S.

To PAIK, v. a. To chastise; to beat; to drub, S. paak, S.B. See Sup.

The latter has both the sound and signification of Germ. pauk-en, to beat; whence arschpauker, one who whips the breech. V. the s.

"That day Mr. Armour was well paiked; so that town now has no ordinary ministers, but are supplied by the presbytery." Baillie's Lett. i. 74.

PAIK, PAICK, s. A stroke; a blow, S. It is most commonly used in pl., as denoting repeated strokes or blows; a drubbing. One is said to get his paiks, when he is soundly beaten, S.

And mony a paick unto his beef they laid,
Till with the thumps he blue and blae was made.

Ross's Helenore, p. 47.

—Throw Britain braid it sall be blawn about,
How that thou, poysond pelour, gat thy paiks.

Dunbar, Evergreen, ii. 51. st. 3.

Get I thame thay sall beir thair paikis.

I se thay playd with me the glaiikkis.

Lyndsay, S.P.R. ii. 156.

It seems uncertain whether Isl. pieck-a, to beat by a repetition of small strokes, minutim tundere, be a cognate term. This may perhaps be retained in E. peck, pick, as Seren. thinks; although Jun. traces the latter to Teut. beck, the beak.

It can scarcely be doubted that our term is allied to Isl. pak, Su.G. paak, fustis, baculus; especially as it more generally suggests the idea of being beaten with a cudgel.

PAIKIE, s. A piece of doubled skin, used for defending the thighs from the Flauchter-spade, by those who cast turfs or divots, Mearns.

In Ang. it is called a pelting-pock, i. e. a pock or bag for guarding the thighs from the stroke given by the spade. The analogy of the names naturally suggests that paikie is formed from the v. paik, or radically allied.

PAIK, s. Expl. "fault; trick." V. PAUKY. See Sup.

—In adulterie he was tane;
Maid to be punisit for his paik;
But he was stubborn in his talk.

Legend Bp. St. Androis, Poems 16th Cent. p. 317.

Perhaps originally the same with PAUK, q. v.

PAIKER, s. Calsay paiker, a street-walker in general.

Mak your abbottis of richt religious men:—
Bot nót to rebaldis new cum fra the roist;—
Of Rome raikeris, nor of rude ruffianis,
Of Calsay paikeris, nor of publicanis

V. next word. Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 278.

PAIKIE, s. A female street-walker; a trull, S.

Isl. pieck-ur, circumcursator, circumforaneus, a vagabond; troll-packa, a witch. Hence, PAIKIT-LIKE, adj. Having the appearance of a trull; having a shabby and exhausted appearance, S.

PAIL, s. A hearse. S.

PAILE, PALE, s. Apparently, a canopy. V. PALL. S.

PAILES, Leslaei Hist. Scot. pp. 57, 58. V. PELE.

PAILIN, PAILING, s. A rail; a fence made of stakes, S. from Lat. pal-us, a stake, whence E. pale.

PAILYOWN, PALLIOWN, s. A pavilion; a tent.

Off cartis als thar yeid thaim by
Sa fele that, but all thai that bar
Harnays, and als that charygt war
With pailyownys, and weschall with all,— viii scor, charygt with pulaile.

Gael. Ir. paillium, Fr. pavillon. Barbour, xi. 117. MS.

PAYMENT, s. Drubbing, S.

—He, that stalwart wes and stout,
Met thaim rycht stoutly at the bra;
And sa gud payment gan thaim ma,
That fyvesum in the furd he slew.

V. PAY, v. Barbour, vi. 148. MS.

PAYMENT, s. Pavement. V. PAITHMENT. S.

PAYN, A PAYN. V. APAYN.

PAINCHES, s. pl. The common name for tripe, S. V. PENCHE.

To PAYNE, PANE, v. n. To labour; to be at pains.

Gan him payne, Barbour; Began to be at pains.

Schyre Andrew syne, the gud Wardane,

—Wyth all poware can hym pane

For to recovir agane the land. Wyntown, viii. 34. 2.

Fr. se pein-er, to trouble one's self.

PAYNE, adj. Pagan; heathenish.

On the I cal wyth humyl hart and milde;

Calliope, nor Payne goddis wilde

May do to me no thing bot harme, I wene.

Panys, Pagans, O.E. Doug. Virgil, Pref. 11, 30.

Hys thre sones he byleved eyrs of ys kynedom,
That were panys alle thre, & agen Cristyndom.

R. Glouc. p. 238.

Fr. payen, from Lat. pagan-us. It is generally known, that, after the Christian religion was embraced by the Roman emperors, those, who were most warmly attached to the heathen worship, retired from the cities to the more remote villages, that they might be more secure from disturbance in the celebration of their rites. Hence the name Pagani came generally to be given to the heathen, from Lat. pag-us, a village.

PAINS, s. pl. The pains, a common designation for the chronic rheumatism. S.

PAYNTIT, Bannatyne Poems, p. 149. st. 4.

The poet, having warned James V. against covetousness, under the metaph. of a cramp in his hands, adds;

Bot quhen thyn handis ar bundin in with bandis,

Na surrigiane may cure thame, nor confort:

Bot thow thame oppin payntit as a port,

And frely gife sic guds as God thé send.

The allusion to an harbour plainly shews that Sibb. is right in viewing this, to which he undoubtedly refers, as "printed erroneously for paytent."

PAINTRE, s. A pantry. S.

P A I

PAINTRIE, s. Painting.

PAIP, s. The Pope. V. PAPE.

PAIP, s.

Play with thy peir, or I'll pull thee like a paip;
Go ride in a rape for this noble new-year.

Montgomerie, Watson's Coll. iii. 5.

Is there an allusion here to the artificial papingay, which is often shot to pieces by the archers, one wing after another? Or, to the play of paips among children? V. next word.

PAIP, s. A cherry-stone picked clean, and used in a game of children, S. Three of these are placed together, and another above them. These are called a castle. The player takes aim with a cherry-stone, and when he overturns this castle, he claims the spoil. See Sup.

The term pip is used in E. for the seed of apples, and perhaps of other fruit; probably from Fr. pepin, the seed of fruit.

This game is played with nuts in Germany. Teut. hoophens setten, hoophens schieten, castellatim nuces constituere; Kilian.

It was probably borrowed from the Romans. Ovid seems to allude to a game of this kind, as played with nuts.

Et condis lectas, parca colona, nuces.

Has puer aut certo rectas diverberat ictu,

Aut pronus digito bisve semelve petit.

Quatuor in nucibus, non amplius, alea tota est;

Cum sibi suppositis additur una tribus.

Nux, Elegia, ver. 72.

Other copies read dilaminat, dilaniat, &c. for diverberat.

Playing with nuts, in a variety of ways, was common with boys among the Romans. Hence the phrase, nuces relinquere, to become a man, to be engaged in manly employment. Isaac Casaubon mentions playing with nuts, by erecting castles or pyramids, as used in his time. His language seems to apply to England, where he resided during the latter part of his life. "Ludebant pueri nucibus variis modis, quorum nonnulli hodieque pueris in usu: ut cum in pyramidem quatuor nuces extruuntur." Comment. ad Persii Satyr. p. 51. It is remarkable, that the same game prevailed among the Jews, so early at least as the time of Philo. He accordingly says; "Id qui parum intelligit, è lusu quodam vulgato cognoscet. Qui nucibus ludunt, solent positus prius in plano tribus quartam super imponere, in formam pyramidis." De Mundi Opific. p. 8.

To PAIR, v. a. To impair. V. PARE.

PAIR, * s. Two things suiting one another.

PAIRTLES, adj. Having no part; free.

I, per me, Wolf, pairtles of frawd or gyle,

Undir the painis of suspensioun,

And gret cursing and maledictioun,

Sir Scheip, I chairge ye straitly to compeir,

And ansueir till a Dog befoir me heir.

Henrysone, Bannatyne Poems, p. 109.

PAIS, s. pl. Retribution; recompence.

Off his awin deid ilk man sal beir the pais,

As pyne for syn, reward for werkis rycht.

Henrysone, Bannatyne Poems, p. 117. st. 8.

Lord Hailes renders this "strokes, chastisement." This is indeed the sense in which the term is still generally used, S. pays. But here it seems to have greater latitude, including both punishment and reward, according to the distribution in the line immediately following; as Fr. pay-er signifies to requite, in whatever way.

To PAIS, PASE, v. a. 1. To poise; to weigh. See Sup.

Bot full of magnanymyte Eneas

Pais thare wecht als lichtlie as an fas,

P A Y

Thare hidduous braseris swakkand to and fro.

Doug. Virgil, 141, 16.

2. To raise; to lift up.

The wyffis come furth, and up thay paisit him,

And fand lyf in the loun.

Chr. Kirk, st. 13.

It is evidently synon. with E. poise, as denoting the caution requisite in attempting to raise any heavy and inert body.

Part. pr. paysand, pasand, and part. pa. paysit, pasit, are both used in the sense of ponderous, weighty, loaded.

Vnder the paysand, and the heuy charge

Gan grane or geig the euil ionit barge.

Doug. Virgil, 178, 10.

Thay dres anone, and furth of platis grete

With paysit flesche plennyst the altaris large.

Doug. Virgil, 251, 14.

Paise is used by Churchyard, with respect to the act of the mind, in weighing evidence, as pase by Chaucer.

"Then paise in an equall ballance the daungerous estate of Scotland once againe, when the king's owne subjects kept the castle of Edenbrough against their owne naturall lord and maister." Worthines of Wales, Pref. xiii.

"Fr. pes-er, Ital. pes-are, to weigh, from Lat. pens-are, from pendo," Rudd. Hence, PAISSES, s. pl. The weights of a clock, S.

"But againe I finde the desires of this life like weightie paisses drawing mee downe to the ground againe." Boyd's Last Battell, p. 67.

Fr. pesée, weight. V. PACE.

PAIS, PAISS, s. Weight.

S.

PAYS, PAS, PASE, PASCE, PASK, PASCH, s. Easter; pron. as pace, S.B. elsewhere as peace.

The sextene day eftyr Pase,

The Statis of Scotland gadryd wase.

Wyntown, viii. 1. 3.

I sall you schaw, by gude experience,

That my Gude-Fryday's better than your Pase.

Henrysone, Evergreen, i. 148.

And we hald nother Yule nor Pace.

Maitland Poems, p. 299.

Hence Pasche-ewyn, Barbour, the evening preceding Easter; and Payss-wouk, Easter-week.

Moes. G. pasha, pascha, A.S. pasche, Belg. paesch, paeschen, Isl. pasha, Su.G. pash, Gr. πασχα; all from Heb. פסח, pasahh, transiit.

In O.E. it is also written pasch, paske.

PAYS-EGGS. Eggs dyed of various colours, given to children, and used as toys, at the time of Easter, S.; Dan. paaske-egg, coloured eggs; Wolff. See Sup.

The same custom prevails, A. Bor.

"Eggs, stained with various colours in boiling, sometimes covered with leaf-gold, are at Easter presented to children at Newcastle, and other places in the north. They ask for their Paste Eggs, as for a fairing, at this season.—Paste is plainly a corruption of Pasche, Easter." Brand's Popul. Antiq. p. 310.

Su.G. pashegg has the same signification. The learned Ihre, when defining this term, gives the following account of its origin. "These eggs," he says, "are so called, which being variously ornamented, and stained with different colours, were anciently sent as presents at the time of Easter, in memory of the returning liberty of eating eggs, which, during the continuance of Popery, were prohibited during Lent." He adds, that, according to the accounts of travellers, the Russians present eggs to whomsoever they meet, and even to the Czar himself in token of honour.

Brand, speaking of this custom, says; "This is a relique of Popish superstition, which, for whatever cause, had made eggs emblematic of the Resurrection, as may be gathered from the subsequent prayer, which the reader will find in an "Extract from the Ritual of Pope Paul the Vth, made for the use of England, Ireland, and Scotland."—

"Bless, O Lord, we beseech thee, this thy creature of Eggs, that it may become a wholesome sustenance to thy faithful servants, eating it in thankfulness to thee, on account of the Resurrection of our Lord Jesus Christ."

"In the Romish Bee-hive, Fol. 15, I find the following catalogue of Popish superstitions, in which the reader will find our Paste Eggs very properly included:—"Many traditions of idle heads, which the holy Church of Rome hath received for a perfit serving of God: as fasting Dayes, Yeares of Grace, Differences and Diversities of Dayes, of Meates, of Clothing, of Candles, Holy Ashes, Holy Pace Egges and Flames, Palmes and Palme Boughes, Staves, Fooles Hoods, Shells, and Bells, (relating to Pilgrimages,) licking of rotten Bones, (Reliques,) &c. &c."

"The ancient Egyptians," Brand adds, "if the resurrection of the body had been a tenet of their faith, would perhaps have thought an egg no improper hieroglyphical representation of it. The exclusion of a living creature by incubation, after the vital principle has lain a long while dormant or extinct, is a process so truly marvellous, that if it could be disbelieved, would be thought by some a thing as incredible, as that the Author of Life should be able to reanimate the dead."

Dr. Chandler, in his Travels in Asia Minor, describing the celebration of Easter in the Greek Church, says; "They made us presents of coloured eggs, and cakes of Easter bread." This accounts for the custom in Russia mentioned above; as the Christian inhabitants of that empire adhere to the ritual of the Greek Church.

Brand thinks that the Romanists borrowed this custom from the Jews, who, among other rites, in celebrating their Passover, set on the table a hard egg, because of the bird Ziz. Popul. Antiq. pp. 310—312.

But it is probable that this custom had its origin in the times of heathenism. The egg, it is well known, was a sacred symbol in the pagan worship. Eggs are still used at the feast of Beltein, which had undoubtedly a heathen origin, and which is yet commemorated within a few weeks of Easter. V. BELTEIN.

Teut. pasch-eyeren, ova paschalia; Kilian; Germ. oster-ey, ovum paschale. Wachter (vo. Ey.) assigns the same origin as Ihre; only he adds, that the Oriental Christians are wont to abstain from Eggs during Lent, as well as the Catholics. "The play of eggs," he says, "among children, puerorum oviludium, in Sweden at this time, is well known."

PAYSYAD, s. A contemptuous designation conferred on a female, who has nothing new to appear in at Easter; originating from the custom which prevails with those adhering to the Episcopal forms, of having a new dress for this festival, S.B. See Sup.

From Pays, Easter, and probably yad, an old mare, q. one who appears in old or worn-out garments.

Although the term Paske is used by R. Brunne and some other O.E. writers, this feast has been generally known in England by the name of EASTER, a word which, as far as I have observed, was never used in S. till towards the close of the reign of James VI., when he attempted to enforce the observation of holydays. But although it is to us a foreign word, it may be acceptable to the reader to know something of its origin; especially, as it will appear that this, like Yule, Beltane, and most of the names of our feasts, may be traced to heathenism.

By the Anglo-Saxons, after they had embraced Christianity, the festival observed at the time of the Passover was called Easter, whence this term is retained in our translation, Acts, xii. 4, although Wiclif uses Pask. The ancient Germans called it Oostrun; and their posterity have changed the term to Ostern, Osterdag; also written Ooster, Oosteren, and Oosterdagh. Thence, the Pascal-lamb is, in their version, often rendered Oster lamb. The month of April was called, by Charlemagne, Oster-monat, i. e. the month of the Passover: and some still retain the term. "Eosturmonath," says Bede, "which is now rendered the Paschal month, formerly received its name from a goddess (worshipped by the Saxons and other ancient nations of the North) called Eostre, in whose honour they observed a festival in this month." "From the name of this goddess," he adds, "they now design the Paschal season, giving a name to the joys of a new solemnity, from a term familiarized by the use of former ages." De Temporum Ratione, ap. Hickes' Thesaur. p. 211.

It is surprising that Wachter should hesitate as to the justness of Bede's testimony in this instance. But the national pride of this learned writer seems hurt at the idea of the Germans, after they had embraced Christianity, retaining the name of a heathen deity for denominating one of their principal feasts. He wishes, therefore, to derive the term, by transposition of the letters, from ur-stend, resurrection. He is so zealous in the cause, as to produce a variety of arguments against the testimony of Bede.

"Before the Christian aera," he says, "all the months were anonymous, being only numbered." He refers, in proof of this, to what he elsewhere says on Weinmonat, the name of October: and there he quotes the testimony of Somner, that October was called Teothamonath, or the tenth month, as being the tenth from January. From this single instance, perhaps conjoined with what he has not mentioned, that January was by the Anglo-Saxons called Forma monath, or the First month, he concludes that all the rest must once have been designed in a similar manner. "This name," he says, "well deserves to be marked by antiquaries, as affording a manifest indication that the most ancient Germans did not name, but only numbered, the months."

This reasoning is very far from being logical. From particular premises he deduces an universal conclusion. It is certainly strange to infer, from a list of names, in which only two can be found favourable to his hypothesis, that all the rest were originally of this description. Besides, he does evident injustice to the venerable Anglo-Saxon. For in the passage Bede evidently gives the names of the months that were in use with his forefathers. He is here speaking of the Antiqui Anglorum populi; and in the period referred to, the name of October was not Teothamonath, but Winter-fyllith.

His next argument is, that "it evidently was not customary with the Saxons to give the names of their deities to the months." But this argument has as little weight as the former. For although it should be found that the name of no other month contained any reference to their religious rites, it would not follow that therefore the name of this month did not. In the account, however, given by Bede, we find that February was denominated Sol-monath, or the month of the Sun. As the Sun was worshipped by the ancient Goths, being the same false deity called Freij and Odin, it might seem probable at least that this worship was retained by the Anglo-Saxons, and that the month of February was therefore consecrated to him. V. Keysler, Antiq. Septent. p. 157. It has indeed been inferred from the language of Bede that this was the case; Ibid. p. 168. But from the laws of Canute, in reference to England, it would appear that this idolatry was not extinct in his time. For in one of them we find these words. "Adorationem barbaram plenissime vetamus. Barbara est autem adoratio, sive quis idola (puta gentium divos)"

Solem, Lunam, Ignem, Profluentem, Fontes, Saxa, cujuscunque generis arbores lignave coluerit." V. Keyser, ibid. p. 18. Wachter himself, in another place, quotes this as a proof that the Sun was worshipped by the ancient Saxons; vo. Sonne, p. 1542. Several of the other months were named from their idolatrous worship. September was called Haleg-monath, or the holy month, because of the religious rites performed at this season; and November received the name of Bloth-monath, because of the sacrifices then offered, as Keyser observes, ibid. p. 368.

Wachter further argues: "It is not probable that the first converts to Christianity among the Saxons would borrow a name for a sacred festival from an idol, or that the first preachers of the gospel would incline to permit it." He indeed admits that the Saxon divines, by what indulgence he cannot say, permitted the use of the pagan names of the days of the week: but argues very oddly, that it may reasonably be denied that they granted the same indulgence with respect to this festival, until there be better proof that they had such a deity as Eostre. The reasoning here is so flimsy as scarcely to require any answer. It is a fact universally admitted, that, among the various nations of the North, the first Christians, however erroneously, thought it necessary to please the heathen so far as to retain the ancient names of their festivals.

His only remaining argument is, that "concerning this imaginary goddess the whole of antiquity is silent." Let us inquire whether this assertion be well-founded.

Bochart observes that the name Aestar or Easter alludes to Astarte, the goddess of the Phenicians. Geograph. Sacr. Lib. i. c. 42. p. 751. The similarity of the name, if not of the worship, might be the reason why Tacitus says that part of the Suevi sacrificed to Isis. Pars Suevorum et Isidi sacrificat. De Mor. German. In the island of Cyprus, Isis was worshipped as Venus; Apul. Metam. ap. Banier Mythol. l. vi. c. 1. There seems to be no good reason, indeed, to doubt that Astarte was the Isis or Venus of the Egyptians. Plutarch and Lucian, among the ancients, held this opinion: and it has been espoused by many learned moderns, as Selden, Marsham, Le Clerc, &c.

A festival of the same kind with that of Osiris and Isis in Egypt, was celebrated by the Phenicians in honour of Adonis and Venus, or Tammuz and Astarte; and at the very same season. Both first mourned for the dead, and rejoiced as if there had been a resurrection. But, as Banier observes, the most decisive circumstance is, that the Egyptians, during the celebration of their festival, used to set down upon the Nile an osier basket, containing a letter, which, by the course of the waves, was carried to Phenicia, near Byblos; where it no sooner arrived, than the people gave over their mourning for Adonis, and began to rejoice on account of his return to life. Thus, there was a fellowship between Egypt and Phenicia, in the observation of this festival.

The Venus of the Northern nations was called Frea, or Frigga. She was also worshipped as the Earth. Hence some have remarked the similarity between Frea and Rhea, the name by which the Lydians and other people of Asia Minor acknowledged the Earth. As Isis was the wife of Osiris, and Astarte of Adonis, Frea was the wife of Odin, one of the great gods of the Northern nations. The name Odin may be originally allied to Adon, Lord, both in Hebrew and Phenician; whence the name of the Greek Adonis. Baal and Adonis seem to have been originally the same, as both words have the same meaning. Thence Baal and Ashtaroth are joined together, Judg. ii. 13. signifying the deities otherwise called Adonis and Venus.

As there is such similarity between the name of Odin and that of Adonis, there is no less between another by which Frea was known and that of Astarte. For she was called Astargydia, or the goddess of love. Hence an Icelandic writer says; Venus er their, kalla Astargydia; i. e. "Venus, whom they call the goddess of love." And another; Grimm vopn Astargydia sa fa ei lett sar; "The cruel weapons of Venus do not make slight wounds." V. Verel. Ind. vo. Astargydia. Astar is the word still used in Isl. for love. Mallet observes, that "it appears to have been the general opinion, that she was the same with the Venus of the Greeks and Romans, since the sixth day of the week, which was consecrated to her under the name of Freytag, Friday, or Frea's day, was rendered into Latin, Dies Veneris, or Venus's day." Northern Antiq. c. 6.

This idea is confirmed by an observation of Ihre; that April was called Easter monath, from Eostra, the Venus of the ancient Saxons, in the same manner as this month is supposed to have been called Aprilis, by the Romans, from Aphrodite, one of the appellations of Venus. The name Astargydia is not peculiar to the Isl. It is used in the same sense in Sw.; in which language Astril denotes Cupid; Astarhita, amor venereus, and Astvin, amasius.

Loccenius asserts that Ostern or Easter, among the ancient Germans, received its name from Venus, who was adored by them under the name Astara; and that they derived this false worship from the Assyrians. "Veneris festum quondam Germani circa ferias Paschales celebrarunt. Unde festum Paschatis adhuc, ut olim in gentilismo Ostern ab Astara Venere, quae Britannis Easter vel Aestar dicitur, appellant. Astara autem olim quoque fuit Assyriorum Venus, cujus idololatria ab illis ad Germanos migravit." Antiquit. Sueo-Goth. p. 24.

It is not improbable that the name Frea may have been originally derived from Heb. parah, fructuosus, fecundus fuit, foetavit; or parahh, germinavit, whence pirhah, puberty; as Heb. Ashtoreth and Goth. Astar, may both be traced to Heb. ashtarrah, foetus; fecundation being supposed to be peculiarly under her charge. Ihre, however, derives Astargydia and its cognates from Su.G. Ast, love.

Isl. astrad is rendered, consilia ex amore profecta; as would appear from ast, love, and rad, counsel. Olai Lex. Run. Estrid, Wormius observes, is a female name still frequently used among the Danes; Fast. Danic. p. 42. Astrid, the same name, according to a different orthography, occurs very often in Sturleson's Heimskringla, or History of the Norwegian kingdom.

We have already observed, that Isis was undoubtedly the Venus of the Egyptians, as their Osiris corresponded to Adonis, the Odin of the North. Now, it deserves to be mentioned, that Odin was also called As, which in pl. is Asir, the designation given to the principal gods of the Northern nations. The Etruscans called God Aesar, Esar, although some view this also as a pl. noun; the Arabs Usar. The Egyptians denominated the Sun Esar, Es-wara, Useri, Oisori, Oisleri. In the Hindostanee, the name of God is Eeshoor; in the language of the Aire Coti, or ancient Irish, Aosar. V. Ihre, vo. As, and Vallancy's Prospect. vo. Aos. "Astoreth," says the latter ingenious writer, "pronounced Astore, is applied to a beautiful female, a Juno, a Venus." Introd. p. 15.

PAISE, NOBLE OF PAISE, s. A gold coin. V. PACE. S.

PAIT, part. pa. Paid. S.

PAIT, PATE, PATIE, s. Abbrev. of Patrick or Peter. S.

PAITCLAYTH, PETCLAYTH, s. V. PAITLATTIS. S.

PAITHMENT, s. The ground; the soil; the Pavement.

In Aperill among the schawis scheyn,

Quhen the paithment was clad in tendyr greyn;

Plesand war it till ony creatur,

In lusty lyff that tym for till endur.

Wallace, viii. 935. MS.

This seems to be merely a metaph. use of pavement, E. pron. paidment, S.B. See Sup.

PAITLATTIS, s. pl. See Sup.

Sic skaith and scorne, sa mony paitlattis worne,
Within this land was nevir hard nor sene.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 44. st. 13.

Lord Hailes seems to view it as the same with E. partlet, which, he says, is a woman's ruff. According to Skinner, the latter is rather a napkin or neck-kerchief. It might perhaps be some sort of bandeau for the head, as Fr. patellette denotes the broad piece of leather which passes through the top of a headstall, Cotgr. Arm. patelet, however, according to Bullet, is a bib for children. Sibb. explains it ruff, viewing "poitral (pectorale) a cover for the neck and breast," as the origin.

This surely cannot be a corruption of O.E. paltoke, apparently a cloak or mantle.

Proude priests come with him, mo than a thowsand,
In paltokes and piked shoes, and pissers long kniues;
Comen agayne conscience, wyth couetyse they helden.

P. Ploughman, Hh. 4. a.

This word is perhaps from Su.G. palt, a garment; though immediately from Fr. palletoc, "a long and thick pelt, or cassock," Cotgr.

PAITLICH, adj. Meaning uncertain. S.

PAY-WAY, adj. Valedictory; q. what is given for bearing one's expenses on the road. S.

PAKE, s. A term applied in contumely to the females of domesticated animals; also to women; a cow is called an "auld pake;" a niggardly woman, a hard pake, &c. Syn. Hide.

PAKKALD, s. A packet. V. PACKALD. S.

PALAD, s. The head. V. PALLAT.

PALAUER, s. Idle talk; unnecessary circumlocution, S.

One might suppose some affinity to Fr. baliverner, "to cog, foist, lie, talk idly, vainly, or to no purpose;" Cotgr. The similarity of Moes.G. filuward, multiloquium, is also singular. The term has, however, been generally deduced from Hisp. palabra, a word, whence Fr. palabre, used as parole, Cotgr. This, it is supposed, is originally a Moorish term. Fr. palabre is used to denote the disgraceful present, which must be made to the petty Mohammedan princes, on the coast of Africa, on the ground of the slightest umbrage, real or pretended, which is taken at any of the European powers.

To PALAUER, v. n. To use a great many unnecessary words, S. "to flatter," Grose's Class. Dict.

To PALE (a cheese,) v. a. 1. To make an incision into a cheese by a circular instrument, for the purpose of judging of its quality by the part scooped out, S.

Demure he looks; the cheese he pales;

He prives, it's good; ca's for the scales.

Ramsay's Poems, ii, 479.

2. To Pale, to tap for the dropsy. S.

Flandr. poel-en, pol-en, excavare, suffodere; Kilian.

PALE, s. The instrument used for trying the quality of a cheese, S.

To PALE, PEAL, or PELL a candle. On seeing a Dead-Candle, to demand a view of the person's face whose death this fatal candle portends. S.

PALEY-LAMB, s. A very small or feeble lamb. S.

PALYARD, s. A lecher; a knave; a rascal. See S.

— That Hermit of Lareit,

He put the commoun pepill in beleue,

That blind gat sicht, and cruikit gat their feit;

The quhilk the Palyard na way can appreue.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592. p. 76.

Fr. paillard, id. Pailliard, a scoundrel. V. Grose's Class. Dict.

PALYARDRY, s. Whoredom.

Eschame ye not rehers and blaw on brede
Your awin defame? hawand of God na drede,
Na yit of hell, prouokand vtheris to syn,
Ye that list of your palyardry neuer blyn.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 96, 41.

PALYEESIS, PALLEISSIS, PALLIES, PALIZES, s. pl.

Apparently, straw mattresses. S.

PALL, PEAL, s. "Any rich or fine cloth, particularly purple," Rudd.

Thai plantit doun ane pailyeoun, upon ane plane lee,
Of pall and of pillour that proudly wes picht.

Gawan and Gol. ii. 1.

For the banket mony rich claith of pall

Was spred, and mony a bandkyn wonderly wrocht.

Doug. Virgil, 33, 14.

It seems to be the same word that is written peal.

"A peal of gold set with precious stones,—was hung about the king's head, when he sat at meat." Pitcottie, p. 155.

He "also commanded her to take what hingers, or tapestry-work, and peals of gold and silk, as she pleased, or any other jewels in his wardrobe." Ibid. p. 159.

Rudd. seems to derive it from Lat. pall-ium; but Sibb. more properly refers to "Scand. pell, panni serici genus; Theot. phelle, pannus pretiosus, pfeller, purpura, Fr. palle, poile." Isl. pell, indeed, denotes cloth of the most precious kind; textum pretiosum; pells klaedi, vestes ex tela ejusmodi, pretio et materia maximi aestimata. It is sometimes distinguished from silk; Klaeddos i pell oc silki, Verel. Ind. Wachter, however, thinks that it properly signifies silk, C.B. pali, id. Hence, he subjoins, L.B. pallium pro panno serico saepissime apud Cangium, et in Glossa Peziana; vo. Pfell.

O.Fr. paile, denoted cloth of silk.

Monlt m'a donè or et argent

Pierres et pailles d'Orient.

Roman de Partonopex, MS. ap. Du Cange, vo. Paliosus.

PALL, v. n. To strike with the fore-feet; applied to a horse. Syn. To kaim. S.

PALLACH, PALLACK, s. 1. A porpoise, S. Pollack, E. Delphinus phocaena, Linn.

"A Palack, a great destroyer of salmon." Sibb. Fife, p. 129. V. PELLACK.

2. Used metaph. for a lusty person, S.B. Hence it is expl. "fat and short, like a porpoise." Gl. Shirr.

"The second chiel was a thick, setterel, swown [swollen] pallack." Journal from London, p. 2.

3. A young or small crab. V. Poo and PALLAWA. S.

PALLALL, PALLALLS, s. A game of children, in which they hop on one foot through different triangular spaces chalked out, driving a bit of slate or broken crockery before them. From the figures made, it is also called The Beds, S. See Sup.

This seems to be originally a game of this country. In E. at least it is called Scotch hop, or Hop-Scotch.

"Among the school-boys in my memory there was a pastime called Hop-Scotch, which was played in this manner: A parallelogram about four or five feet wide, and ten or twelve feet in length, was made upon the ground, and divided laterally into eighteen or twenty different compartments, which were called beds; some of them being larger than others. The players were each of them provided with a piece of a tile, or any other flat material of the like kind, which they cast by the hand into the different beds in a regular succession, and every time the tile was cast, the player's business was to hop upon one leg after it, and drive it out of the boundaries at the end where he stood to throw it; for, if it passed out at the sides, or rested upon any of the marks, it was necessary for the cast to be repeated. The boy who performed the whole of this operation by the fewest casts of the tile was the conqueror." Strutt's Sports and Pastimes, p. 286.

Our word, from its form, may perhaps claim a Fr. origin. PALLAT, PALAD, s. The head; the crown of the head or scull, S.

Hys pallat in the dust bedowyne stude,
And the body bathyn in the hate blude
Enee ouerweltis.—— Doug. Virgil, 337, 43.

——Ye maid of me ane ballat,
For your rewarde now I sall brek your pallat.
Maitland Poems, p. 317.

Mr. Pinkerton oddly renders this, "cut your throat."
His peilet palad and unpleasant pow,
They fulsome flocks of flies doth overflow,
With wames and wounds all blackned full of blaims.
Polwart, Watson's Coll. iii. 23.

Palet is used in the same sense, O.E.
Ingli-men sall yit to-yere
Knok thi palet or thou pas,
And mak the polled like a frere;
And yit es Ingland als it was.
Minot's Poems, p. 31.

Rudd. says; "I very much incline to think that the E. pate, and the S. pallat, are originally the same." Perhaps because of its globular form, from O.E. pellet, a ball, (Arm. Fr. pelote,) for which bullet is now used. A round head is called a bullet-head, S.

PALLAWA, s. 1. A species of sea-crab. V. KEAVIE.
2. A term of the Buckhaven fishermen for a dastardly fellow; a poltroon. S.

PALLET, s.
Upon thair brest bravest of all,
Were precious pearls of the East,
The rubie pallet and th' opall,
Together with the amatist.
Burel, Watson's Coll. ii. 11.

Fr. pelotte, q. a ball of ruby.

PALLET, s. A skin; properly a sheep's skin not dressed, S.B. from the same origin with E. felt, pelt; Lat. pell-is, Belg. velt, id. Su.G. palt, a garment.

PALM, PALME, s. The index of a clock or watch, S.

"Mens dayes are destributed vnto them like houres seuerallie diuided vpon the horologe: Some must live but till One, another vnto Two, another vnto Three; The Palme turneth about, and with its finger pointeth at the houre: So soone as man's appointed houre is come, whether it bee the first, second, or third, there is no more biding for him." Z. Boyd's Last Battell, p. 519.

Fr. paulme, the palm of the hand, used, it would seem, as hand, when applied to an index.

PALMANDER, s. Pomander. S.

To PALMER, v. n. To walk about in a feeble way. S.

PALMS, s. The blossoms of the female willow. S.

PALM-SONDAY, s. The sixth Sabbath in Lent, according to the Romish ritual; or that immediately preceding Easter, S.

This ilke schip sone takyn wes
Ewyn upon the Palm-Sunday,
Before Pasch that fallis ay. Wyntown, ix. 25. 69.

It was so denominated by the church of Rome, because of palm-branches being carried, in commemoration of those that were strewed in the way, when our Saviour entered into Jerusalem. V. Du Cange, vo. Dominica, p. 1601. A.S. palm sunnan daeg. V. Mareschall. Observ. in Vers. A.S. p. 531.

PALSONDAY, s. Perhaps, Palmsunday or Paschsunday, i. e. Easter. V. PAYS. S.

PALSONE EVIN. Apparently signifying Passion Even; if not a corr. of Palm Sunday. S.

PALTRIE, s. Trash. V. PELTRIE.

PALWERK, s.
Her hode of a herde huwe, that her hede hedes,
Of pillour, of palwerk, of perre to pay.
Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. i. 2.

This may denote work made with spangles; Fr. paille, id. PAME HAMER. A kind of hammer. S.

PAMPHEIE, s. A vulgar name for the Knave of Clubs; he is also called Pawmie. E. Pam. S.

PAMPFIL, s. A square enclosure made with stakes; also, any small house, Aberd.; apparently the same with Paffle, q. v.

PAMPLËTTE, PAMPLERTE, PAMPHELET, s. A plump young woman. S.

To PAN, v. n. To agree; to correspond. See Sup.

For say and promeis quhat they can,
Thair wordes and deides will never pan.
Maitland Poems, p. 220.

Perhaps from A.S. pan, a piece of cloth inserted into another.

PAN, s. A hard impenetrable sort of crust below the soil, S. till, ratchel, synon.

"Towards the hills; it is a light black soil, and under it an obstinate pan. Owing to this pan in some places, and the clay bottom in others, the fields retain the rains long." P. Deskford, Banffs. Statist. Acc. iv. 360.

"In many places a black pan, hard as iron ore, runs in a stratum of two or three inches thick in the bottom of the clay, and about 8 or 9 inches below the surface, which in a rainy season keeps the water floating above, prevents early sowing, and sometimes starves the seed in the ground." P. Kilmuir, E. Ross, Statist. Acc. vi. 184.

Perhaps from Teut. panne, calva, q. the skull of the soil.

PAN, s. Part of the timbers of a cottage. S.

PANASH, s. A plume of feathers worn in the hat. See S.

There lyes half dozen elnes of pig-tail,
There his panash, a capon's big-tail.
Colvil's Mock Poem, P. ii. 8.

Fr. panache, pennache; from Lat. penna.

To PANCE, PANSE, PENSE, v. n. To think; to meditate.

Of perals pance; and for sum port provyde;
And anker sicker quhar thow may be sure.
Lord Thirlstane, Maitland Poems, p. 161.

"While as the king is musing & pansing vpon the greatnes of the benefit,—he bursteth foorth in these voyces of praise and thankesgiuing: What shall I say?" Bruce's Eleven Serm. Sign. L, 1. a.

Thay pens not of the prochene puir,
Had thay the pelf to part amang thame
Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 105.

O.Fr. pans-er, mod. panc-er, pens-er; perhaps from Lat. pend-o, pens-um, to weigh in one's mind.

PAND, s. A pledge, synon. wad.

——Quhilk is the pand or plege, this dare I say,
Of pece to be kept inviolate.
Doug. Virgil, 375, 14.

My hairt heir I present.——
Quhilk is the gadge and pand
Maist suir that I can geif. Maitland Poems, p. 265.

Here it is used as synon. with gage, that kind of pledge which knights were wont to give, who engaged their honour that they would fight.

Belg. pand, Germ. pfand, Alem. pfant, fant, Su.G. pant, Isl. pant-ur, id. pant-a, pignorate, C.B. pan, also a pledge.

P A N

Ihre thinks that Lat. pign-us, has been diffused through Europe.

Schilter viëws pfant, arrhabo, as the root of pfennig, a penny; because it was customary to give a piece of money as an earnest.

To PAND, v. a. To pledge; to pawn. Pandit, pawned. S.
PAND, s. A narrow curtain fixed to the roof, or to the lower part of a bed, S. pawn. S.

To PANDER, v. n. To go from one place to another in an idle or careless way. 2. To trifle at work. S.

PANDIE, PANDY, s. 1. A stroke on the hand, with the taws, given as a punishment to a schoolboy; the same with Pawmie. 2. Metaph. severe censure. S.

PANDIT, part. adj. Furnished with under-curtains. S.

PANDOOR, s. A large oyster, S.

"Those caught nearest to the town are usually the largest and fattest; hence the large ones obtained the name of Pandoors, i. e. oysters caught at the doors of the pans. The sea water, a little freshened, is reckoned the most nourishing to oysters. This may be the reason why those caught near to the town and shore are so large. P. Preston-pans, E. Loth. Statist. Acc. xvii. 70.

PANDROUS, s. A pimp; E. pandar. S.

PANE, s. 1. Stuff; cloth. See Sup.

— A palice of price plesand allane,
Was erectit ryelly, ryke of array,
Pantit and apparalit proudly in pane;
Sylit semely with silk, suthly to say.

Houlate, iii. 3. MS.

2. Perhaps, a piece.

He geif him robe of palle,
And pane of riche skinne,
Ful sket.

Sir Tristrem, p. 35.

It may, however, be used in the same sense as by Holland.

A.S. pan, lacinia, pannus; "a jagge, a piece." Fr. panne de soye, stuff made of silk, S. podesoy. Lat. pann-us seems the general origin.

To PANE, v. n. To labour. V. PAYNE.

PANE, s. A fine; mulct; or punishment; E. pain. S.

PANFRAY, s. A small riding horse.

"—Only the beast panfray (or horse) sall perteine to him, quhilk the Burges had (the time of his deceis.)" Burrow Lawes, c. 125. s. 4.

This is evidently corr. from Fr. palefroi, id. It should be read "the best panfray," melior palfredus, Lat.

To PANG, v. a. 1. To throng; to press, S.

Be that time it was fair four days,
As fou's the house could pang,
To see the young fouk ere they raise,
Gossips came in ding dang.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 271.

2. To cram, in whatever way, S.

St. Andrews town may look right gawsy,
Nae grass will grow upo' her cawsey;—
Sin' Sammy's head, weel pang'd wi' lear,
Has seen the Alma Master there.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 76.

3. To cram; to fill with food to satiety, S.

Whan they had eaten, and were straitly pang'd,
To hear her answer Bydby greatly lang'd.

Ross's Helenore, p. 52.

Sibb. derives it from Sw. pung, Moes.G. pugg, crumena. But the possession of a purse by no means necessarily implies that it is crammed. B and p being frequently interchanged, I would prefer O.Teut. bangh-en, in angustum eogere, premere, q. d. be-anghen, be-enghen; banghe, angustus, oppressus, Kilian.

P A N

PANG, adj. Crammed; filled with food.

Thair avers fyld up all the field,
They were sae fou and pang.

Scott, Evergreen, ii. 184.

PANG-FOU, adj. Crammed; as full as one can hold. S.

PANYELL CRELIS. Baskets for a horse's back. S.

PAN-JOTRALS, s. pl. A gallimaufry or kind of hotch-potch, made of different kinds of meat. 2. The slabbery offals of the shambles. Syn. Harrigals. S.

PAN-KAIL, s. Broth made of coleworts hashed very small, thickened with a little oat-meal. There is no animal food, but generally a little butter, in it, S.

Formerly a superstitious rite pretty generally prevailed in making this species of broth, S.B. The meal, which rose as the scum of the pot, was not put in any dish, but thrown among the ashes; from the idea, that it went to the use of the Fairies, who were supposed to feed on it.

This bears a striking resemblance to a religious ceremony of the ancient Romans. In order to consecrate any kind of food, they generally threw a part of it into the fire, as an offering to the Lares, or household-gods. They were hence called Dii Patellarii. Plaut. ap. Adam's Rom. Antiq. pp. 444, 445.

The Tartars, according to Marco Polo, have some similar customs. Before they eat, they anoint the mouths of their Lares, certain images which they call Natigay, with fat of their sodden flesh; and they cast the broth out of doors, in honour of other spirits, saying, that now their god, with his family, has had his part, and that they may eat and drink at pleasure. V. Harris's Voyages, i. 603.

PANNASIS, s. A rope to hoise up a boat or any heavy merchandise aboard a ship. S.

PANNEL, s. 1. Any person who is brought to the bar of a court for trial. 2. The bar of a court, S. See S.

"The defender is, after his appearance, styled the pannel." Erskine's Instit. B. 4. T. 4. c. 90.

The word, although used in a peculiar sense, must be viewed as the same with panel, E. which denotes a schedule, containing the names of a jury who are to pass on a trial. Thus the phrase, panel of parchment is used; L.B. panella, probably from panne, a skin, because parchment is made of skin, or paneau, a small square, from its form. Spelman unnaturally derives it from pagina, or rather pagella, supposing g to be changed into n.

PANNIS, s. Aberd. Reg. Left unexplained. S.

PANNS, s. pl. Timber for the roofs of houses, Aberd.

Su.G. takpanna is used in a similar sense, as denoting shingles; tegula. Ihre mentions paann, scandula; viewing Su.G. paen-a, to extend, as the general origin.

PANS, PANSE.

"That — ythers simpillar, of x. pund of rent, or fyftie pundis in gudis, haue hat, gorget, and a pesane with wambrasseiris and reirbrasseiris, and gluiffis of plate, breist-plate, pans and legsplentis at the leist, or gif him lykis, better." Acts, Ja. I. 1429. c. 134. Edit. 1566. c. 120. Murray.

—"Gorget or pesane, with splentis, panse of maillye, with gluvis of plate or maillye." Acts, Ja. V. 1540. c. 57. Edit. 1566. c. 87. Murray.

It seems to be the pl. of pan, as signifying a covering for the knee.

PANS, s. pl. A certain description of ecclesiastical lands.

PANSIS, s. pl. Perhaps, thought; imaginings. S.

PANST, part. pa. Cured; healed.

Gif any patient wald be panst,
Quhy suld he lowp quhen he is lanst?

Cherrie and Slae, st. 36.

Curari infirmus cupiens—Lat. vers.

Fr. pans-er, pens-er un malade, Thierry. Pans-er, pens-er,
 "to dress, to apply medicines," Cotgr.
 PANT, s. The mouth of a town-well or fountain. S.
 PANTAR, s. V. PUNSS. S.
 PANTENER, adj.
 Bot God that maist is off all mycht,
 Preserwyth thaim in hys forsycht,
 To wenge the harme, and the contrer,
 At that fele folk and pantener
 Dyd till sympill folk and worthy,
 That couth nocht help thaim self.—
Barbour, i. 462. MS.
 He wyst, or all the land war wounyn,
 He suld fynd full hard barganyng.
 With him that wes off England King:
 For thair wes nane off lyff sa fell,
 Sa pantener, na sa cruell. Ibid. ii. 194. MS.
 It is changed to oppressours, Edit. 1620.
 The term is used by R. Brunne.
 A boye full pantenere he had a suerd that bote,
 He sterte vnto the Cofrere, his handes first of smote,
Chron. p. 320.
 It corresponds to Fr. ribaud. The words in the original are; Le Cofrere vn ribaud, maintenant saisist, les mayns ly copayt.
 Sir Robert the Brus sent to Sir Eymere, & bad he suld refus that him had forsaken ilk a pan- tenere.
 The traytours of hise that him had forsaken,
 Thei suld to the Jewise, whan thei the toun had taken,
Ibid. p. 333.
 "Rascal; ilk a pantenere, every scoundrel," Gl. Hearne.
 I suspect that it is from O.Fr. pautonnier, Rom. Rose;
 "a lewd, stubborn, or saucy knave," Cotgr. V. PELTRY.
 PANTOUN, s. A slipper. See Sup.
 He trippet quhill he tuir his pantoun.
 A mirrear dance nicht na man se.
Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 95.
Panton, as used in E., denotes a shoe for a horse, "contrived to recover a narrow and hoof-bound heel;" Johns.
 V. Seren.
 I know not the origin; but can hardly think, with Sibb., that it is contr. from pantouffel. The latter term, being used in mod. E., does not properly belong to this work.
 But I may observe by the way, that Schilter seems to give the most natural etymon that I have any where met with.
 He derives Germ. bantoffel, Alem. bain-tofel, from bain, ban, the foot, and tofel, a table. Proprie notat tabulam pedibus suppositam, qualibus utebatur antiquitas.
 PANTON-HEEL-MAKER, s. One who made heels for slippers;
 formerly the designation of a trade in Edinburgh. S.
 PANTOUR, s. One who had charge of a pantry. S.
 PANT-WELL, s. A well arched or built up. S.
 PAN VELVET. Rough velvet, or plush. S.
 PANWOOD, s. The small coal used about salt-pans. S.
 PAP OF THE HASS, s. The uvula, S. denominated perhaps from its supposed resemblance of the nipple.
See Sup.
 To PAP, PAPE, v. n. 1. To move or enter with a quick, sudden, and unexpected motion, like E. Pop. 2. To gang pappin about, to go from place to place with a kind of easy elastic motion. 3. To let any thing fall gently, is to let it pap. S.
 To PAP, PAWP, v. a. To beat; to thwack. S.
 PAP, PAWP, s. A blow; a thwack. S.
 PAP, s. A piece of whalebone, connecting the ball of lead used in fishing with the hook-lines. S.
 PAP-BAIRN, s. A sucking child. S.

PAPE, PAIP, s. The Pope.
 In-to the Pape is the honoure,
 The state, the wurschype, and the cure
 Of the grettest governale. Wyntown, v. Prol. 57.
 The term occurs in O.E.
 Sithen he went to Rome, as man of holy wille,
 His sonne & he alle that yere with the pape duelled stille. R. Brunne, p. 20.
 "Fr. Germ. Belg. pape, Lat. pap-a, Gr. παππας, father, and in Homer, priest;" Gl. Wynt.
 PAPEJAY, PAPIGAY, PAPIGOE, s. 1. The popin-jay, a parrot or parroquet. O.E. popingay.
 Vnlike the cukkow to the philomene;—
 Vnlike the crow is to the papejay.
King's Quair, iii. 37.
 Of Caxtoun Doug. says;
 His buk is na mare like Virgil, dar I lay,
 Than the nyght oule resemblis the papingay.
Virgil, 7, 46.
 Belg. papegaai, Fr. papegay, Dan. papegoy, Ital. papa- gallo. Becan has supposed that it is q. gaia, the jay, or spotted pie, of the pope or priest, (paepe) because of the high estimation in which this bird was held. V. Pape- gay, Kilian.
 2. The name given, in the West of S., to the mark at which archers shoot, when this is erected on a steeple, or any elevated place. Hence, it is applied to the amusement itself.
 Kilwinning is the great resort for this amusement. The mark is a bird made of wood. This is called the Papingo.
 It is fastened on the battlement of the Abbey steeple.
 "The one is a perpendicular mark, called a Popingoe.
 The popingoe is a bird known in heraldry. It is, on this occasion, cut out in wood, fixed in the end of a pole, and placed 120 feet high, on the steeple of the monastery.
 The archer, who shoots down this mark, is honoured with the title of Captain of the Popingoe. He is master of the ceremonies of the succeeding year, sends cards of invitation to the ladies, gives them a ball and supper, and transmits his honours to posterity by a medal, with suitable devices, appended to a silver arrow." P. Kilwinning, Ayr. Statist. Acc. xi. 173.
 The wings are so lightly fastened, as to be easily carried away from the body. To carry off these, is the first object. Afterwards the archers shoot at the body of the bird, and he who brings this down is pronounced victor.
 There is, however, another trial of skill for the captaincy during the following year.
 That this has a Fr. origin, appears from the explanation given by Cotgr. of the word Papegay. "A Parrot, or popingay; also, a wooden parrot (set up on the top of a steeple, high tree or pole,) whereat there is, in many parts of France, a generall shooting once every yeare, and an exemption for all that yeare, from la taille, (the tax) obtained by him that strikes downe the right wing thereof, who is therefore tearmed le Chevalier; and by him that strikes downe the left wing, who is tearmed le Baron; and by him that strikes downe the whole popingay, who for that dexteritie, or good hap, hath also the title of Roy du Papegay, all the yeare following."
 This custom was formerly used in England. Stow speaks of a large close called the Tazell, let in his time to the cross-bow-makers, wherein, says he, they used to shoot for games at the Popinjay, which, Maitland tells us, was an artificial parrot. History of London, Book ii.
 p. 482. ap. Strutt's Games and Pastimes, p. 42, N.
 PAPELARDE, s. A hypocrite. S.
 PAPERIE, s. Popery. S.
 PAPIGO, s. A mark for shooting at. V. PAPEJAY.

PAPISH, s. The vulgar name for a Roman Catholic. S.
 PAPIST-STROKE, s. A cross; a childish term. S.
 To PAPLE, PAPPLE, v. n. 1. To bubble, or boil up like water, S.B. V. POPL. See Sup.

2. To be in a state of violent perspiration, Lanarks.
 3. Used to denote the effect of heat, when any fat substance is toasted before the fire. S.

PAPPANT, adj. 1. Rich; rising in the world, Ang.
Fr. popin, spruce, dainty.

2. Rendered pettish by indulgence, S.B. See Sup.
If radically different, perhaps from Teut. poppen, the dolls of children.

PAPPIN, POPPIN, s. A sort of paste or batter, made of flour and water, used by weavers to dress their webs. S.

PAPPLE, PAPLE, s. The corn cockle. V. POPPILL. S.

PAR, s. The Samlet, S. Branlin, Fingerin, Yorks.; not described by Linn. See Sup.

— The scaly brood

In myriads cleave thy crystal flood.
 The springing trout, in speckled pride;
 The salmon, monarch of the tide;
 The ruthless pike, intent on war;
 The silver eel, and mottled par.

Smollet's Ode to Leven Water.

"It is by several imagined to be the fry of the salmon; but Mr. Pennant dissents from that opinion.—These fish are very frequent in the rivers of Scotland, where they are called pars." Encycl. Britan. vo. Salmo.

"I mean the samlet of Berkenhout, called upon the Wye a skirling, in Yorkshire a branling, in Northumberland a rack-rider, and in Scotland a par; this singular fish is said, by some, to be a mule, the production of a salmon with a species of trout; its tail, like that of the salmon, is forked; it never exceeds eight inches, and is not to be found but in such rivers, or their branches, where salmon frequent." Prize Essays, Highland Society of S. ii. 406.

To PAR, v. n. To decrease; to fail.

It is weyle knawyne on mony diuerss syde,
 How thai haff wrocht in to thair mychty pryde,
 To hald Scotlande at wndyr euirmair;
 Bot God abuff has maid thar mycht to par.

Wallace.

This is merely a neut. use of the v. PARE, q. v.

PARA-DOG, s. V. PIRRIE-DOG. S.

PARAFLE, PARAFFLE, s. Ostentatious display. S.

PARAFLING, s. Trifling; evasion. S.

PARAGE, s. Kindred; parentage; lineage. Fr.

Turnus hir askit cummyn of hie parage,
 Aboue all vthir maist gudly personage.

Doug. Virgil, 206, 27.

PARAGON, s. A rich cloth anciently worn in S., and as would appear, imported from Turkey.

No proud Pyropus, Paragon,
 Or Chackarally, there was none.

V. DRAP-DE-BERRY. Watson's Coll. i. 28.

Parangon de Venise. On nomme ainsi a Smyrne quelques unes de plus belles etoffes que le Marchands Vene- tiens y apportent. Dict. Trev.

PARAMUDDLE, s. The red tripe of a cow or bul- lock; the atomasum, S.B.

PARATITLES, s. pl. See Sup.

To PARBREAK, PARBREKE, v. n. To puke. See Sup.

"I am one of those in whom Satan hath parbreked, and spewed the spawn of all sorts of sinne." Z. Boyd's Last Battell, p. 165.

V. BRAIK, v. and BRAKING. Par is oddly prefixed, as if it were a word of Fr. or Lat. origin.

To PARE, PAIR, PEYR, v. a. To impair.

Nor yit the slaw nor febil vnweildy age
 May waik oure sprete, nor mynnis our curage,
 Nor of our strenth to altere ocht or pare.

Doug. Virgil, 299, 29.

How may I succour the sound, semely in sale,
 Before this pepill in plane, and pair nocht thy pris?
Gawan and Gol. iv. 8.

i. e. "not impair thy honour."

Peyr and paire are used in O.E.

"What profiteth it to a man, if he wyne al the world, and suffre peyring of his soul?" Wiclif, Matt. 16.

Your father she felled, through false behest,
 And hath poysened popes, and peyred holy church.

P. Ploughman, Fol. 13, b.

This is said of Mede, or Reward, an allegorical person- age, representing corruption in the different orders of society.

Rudd. views this as the same with pare in the S. phrase, to eik or pare, addere vel demere. But it is certainly from Fr. pire, pejeur, worse; from Lat. peyor. Hence also empir-er, E. impair. V. APPAIR.

To PARE AND BURN. To take off the sward of moor- ish or heathy ground, and burn it on the soil for manure. S.

PAREGALE, PARIGAL, adj. Completely equal.

Yone tua saulis, quhilkis thou seis sans fale,
 Schynand with elike armes paregale,
 Now at gude concord stand and vnite.

Doug. Virgil, 195, 18.

Rudd. mentions O.Fr. peregale, a word which I have not found. More naturally from Fr. par and egal, q. equal throughout. Chaucer, peregale.

PAREGALLY, adv. Expl. particularly. V. PAREGALE. S.

To PARIFY, v. a. To make equal; to compare; Lat. par and fio.

Orosius a-pon syndry wys

Tyl Babylohe Rome parifies. Wyntown, v. Prol. 2.

To PARIFY, v. a. "To protect," Gl. Wynt.

PARISCHE, adj. 1. Of or belonging to the city of Paris. Parische work, Parisian workmanship. 2. Ap- plied to a particular colour introduced from Paris. S.

PARITCH, PARRITCH, s. The vulgar mode of pro- nouncing porridge, S. which has quite a different sense from that of the E. word, signifying hasty pudding. V. PORRIDGE.

— Eithly wad I be in your debt
 A pint of paritch.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 112.

But now the supper crowns their simple board,
 The healsome parritch, chief o' Scotia's food.

Burns, iii. 178.

To PARK, v. n. To perch; to sit down. Fr. perch-er.

Ane on the rolkis pennakil parkit hie,
 Celeno clepit, ane drery prophetes.

Doug. Virgil, 75, 54.

PARK, s. 1. Improperly used for a wood; as, a fir park, S.

2. Parks. The enclosed ground round a nobleman's or gentleman's dwelling; as, The Duke's Parks. S.

This is evidently from the idea of young trees being enclosed for their protection. A.S. pearroc, Su.G. C.B. park, properly denote an enclosure, whether by means of stone walls or hedges; from Su.G. berg-a, to defend, according to Wachter and Seren. The latter adds Alem. perg-an, tegere, munire.

PARK, s. A pole; a perch.

P A R

For al the Tuskane menye, as here is sene,
So grete trophee, and riche spulye hider bryngis,
On parkis richelie cled with thare armyngis,
Doug. Virgil, 366, 43.

Fr. perche, Hisp. perch-a, Lat. pertic-a.

PARLE, s. Speech.

A tocher's nae word in a true lover's parle,
But, gie me my love, and a fig for the warl'.

Burns, iv. 55.

Fr. parler, speech.

PARLEYVOO, s. A term used in ridicule of the French mode of address. Fr. parlez-vous. S.

PARLIAMENT, s. Perhaps the cape of a robe of state. S.

PARLIAMENT-CAKE, s. A thin crump species of gingerbread; perhaps originally used by members of the Scottish Parliament during their sederunts. S.

PARLOUR, s. "Conversation; debate," Pink.

Uprais the court, and all the parlour ceist.

Palice of Honour, ii. 26.

If this be the proper sense, it is from Fr. parloire, prattling, idle discourse. But it rather signifies assembly, public conference, from parlour, a parliament, or assembly of estates; also a public conference, one held at such an assembly. This exactly corresponds to the idea suggested by the other word, Court.

PAROCHIN, s. Parish, S.

"That euery Paroch kirk, and sameikil boundes as sall be found to be a sufficient and competent Parochin theirfoir, sall have their awin Pastour, with a sufficient and reasonable stipend." Acts, Ja. VI. 1581. c. 100, Murray.

Parichon occurs in the copy of an old Popish Prone, or form of bidding prayers. Hearne's Gl. to R. Glouc.
p. 682. Hardyng uses parishyn, in the account which he gives of the Bishops and Clergy during the reign of Rich. II.

Lewed men they were in clerkes clothynge
Disguysed fayre, in forme of clerkes wyse,
Their parishyns ful lytle enfourmyng
In lawe deuyne, or els in God his seruice.
But right practife they were in couetise,
Eche yere to make full great collection,
At home in stede of soules correction.

Chron. Fol. 194, a.

Teut. prochiaen-schap, curionatus, curia. Lat. paroecia,
Gr. παροικια.

PAROCHINER, s. A parishioner.

"Many of the Parochiners, dwelling in rowmes of the parochine, so remote,—cannot have accesse and repair to the Paroche kirks," &c. Acts, Ja. VI. 1621. c. 5. Murray.

PAROCHRIE, s. Parish. S.

PARPALL-WALL, s. A partition-wall. S.

PARPANE, PERPEN, s. 1. A wall in general, or a partition.

I thank yone courtayne, and yone parpane wall,
Of my defenss now fra yon crewell beist.

Henryson, Chron. S.P. i. 113.

"And what doth the multiplicatioun of sinne, bot hin-dreth our faith and perswasoun, and casteth a balk and a mist betwixt the sight of God & vs; and therefore the Prophet calleth it a parpane, whereby we are deprived of the sight of God quhilk wee haue in the Mediatour Christ." Bruce's Serm. 1591. I, 8, b.

"Bot gif thou build vp an perpen of thine awin making betwixt thee and him, then not he only, bot all his creatures shal be fearfull to thee, and readie to destroy thee."
Ibid. T. 5, b.

2. The parapet of a bridge; a parpane-wa'. S.

Fr. parpaigne, parpeine, a buttress, or supporter of stone work; or parpin, a great lump of stone unsquared.

P A R

To PARRACH, (gutt.) To crowd together in a confused manner; like many sheep in a small fold, or too many things in a small space. S.

PARRY. "Whan ane says Parry, aw says Parry;"
when a person of consequence says any thing, it is echoed by every body. S.

PARRIDGE, PARRITCH, s. Porridge made of meal. S.
To COOK THE PARRIDGE. To manage any piece of business.—But wha cookit the Parridge for him? S.

PARRITCH-HALE, adj. In such health as to be able to take one's ordinary food. Syn. Spune-hale. S.

PARRITCH-TIME, s. The hour of breakfast. S.

To PARRIRE, v. n. To present one's self; or to obey. S.

PARROCK, PARROK, s. A very small enclosure; a little apartment, Dumfr. See Sup.

A.S. pearroc, "septum, circus, clathrum, a park, a pound,
a barre or lattice," Somner.

To PARROCK a ewe and lamb. To confine a lamb with a ewe which is not its dam, that the lamb may suck. S.
PARROCK, s. A collection of things huddled together;
a group. S.

PARROT-COAL, s. A particular species of coal that burns very clearly, S.

"Besides these different seams, there is on the north parts of Torry, a fine parrott coal, in thickness 4 feet, which is very valuable, and is said to sell in the London market at a higher price than any other." P. Torryburn, Fifes. Statist. Acc. viii. 451.

PARSELLIT, part. pa. Striped. S.

PARSEMENTIS, PASMENTES, PASSMENTS, s. pl.
"Livery coats wrought with divers colours, or overlaid with galoons or laces." Rudd.

Twyis sex childer followis ilk ane about,
In thare parsementis, arrayit in armour bricht:
The chiftanis warren equale of ane hicht.

Doug. Virgil, 146, 27.

Rudd. doubts, however, and apparently with reason, whether it does not rather signify partitions or divisions;
especially as the phrase used by Virgil is, Agmine partito fulgent. He conjectures that it may be an error of the copier for partiment.

The word denoting livery, i. e. lace, or imitation of it, sewed on clothes, is properly written Pasments, q. v.

PARSENERE, s. A partner; colleague.

All this tyme Dyoclytyane
And his falow Maximiane
Of the empyre thretty yhere
Wes ane wytht othir parsenerere.

Wyntown, v. 9. 638.

Fr. parsonnier, id. L.B. pars-iare, to divide. Partionarii, coloni, qui ejusmodi praedium tenent.—Praeterea—ejusdem praedii seu feudi participes et domini. S. co-heirs, or those who have lands divided among them, are called Portioners.

PARSLIE BREAK-STONE. Aphanes arvensis. S.

PART, s. 1. Often denoting place; as, the ill part, hell.

2. What is incumbent on one, or what becomes one;
as, It's weel my part, it well becomes me, &c. S.

PARTAN, s. The Common sea Crab, S. Ir. Gael. See S.

"The philosophour Plutarque rehersis ane exempil of the partan, quhilk repreuit ane of hyr yong partans, because the yong partan vald nocht gang euyne furtht, bot rather sche yeid crukit, bakuart, and on syd. Than the yong partan ansuert, quod sche, Mother I can nocht gang of my auen natur as thou biddis me, bot nochtheles, vald thou gang furtht rycht befor me, than I sal leyrn to follou thy fut steppis." Compl. S. p. 249.

P A R

"Cancer marinus vulgaris, the common Sea Crab; our fishers call it a Partan; the male they call the Carle Crab, and the female the Baulster Crab." Sibb. Fife, p. 132.

PARTAN-HANDIT, adj. Close-fisted; griping; taking hold like a crab. Grippingie. S.

PARTY, s. Part; measure; degree; Fr. partie.
Bot othyr lordis, that war him by,
Ameysyt the King in to party.
Chaucer, id. Barbour, xvi. 134. MS.

PARTY, PARTIE, s. An opponent; an antagonist; Fr. parti.
Baith with swift cours and schuting so thay wirk,
Ilkane besy his party for to irk.
Doug. Virgil, 210, 48.

"The caus of his absens is the schortnes of tyme: and that he is denyit of his freindis & seruandis quha suld haue accompanyit him to his honour and suretie of his lyfe, in respect of the greitnes of his partie." Buchanan's Detect. E. iii. b.

This excuse was offered for the absence of the Earl of Lennox, when Bothwell was tried for the murder of Darnley.

PARTY, PARTIE, adj. Party-coloured variegated.
Thus sayand, the party popil grane
Heildit his hede with skug Herculeane.
V. PYK-MAW. Doug. Virgil, 250, 50.

"Like Lat. varius," Rudd.

To PARTY, To PARTY WITH. To take part with. S.

PARTICATE, s. A rood of land.
"One James Blair was taxed with one penny of the kingdom of Scotland, upon the ground of his half particate of land, for finding or furnishing one lamp, or pot, of burning oil, before the altar of the parish church of Hawick, in time of High Mass and Vespers, all holy days of the year, in honour of our Saviour Jesus Christ, and praying for the souls of the barons of Hawick, the founders of the lamp, and their successors." P. Hawick, Roxb. Statist. Acc. viii. 526, N.

L.B. particata. (V. Skene Verb. Sign. in vo.) from partica, a rod for measuring.

PARTICLE, PARTICKLE, PERTICKLE, PARTICULE, s. 1. A little chop or piece of animal food. 2. Applied to a small portion of land; nearly synon. with Pendicle. S.

PARTYMENT, s. Division; party.
And eftir that the trumpet blew ane syng,
Than euery partymēt bowndis to thare stand,
And gan thare speris stik doune in the land.
Doug. Virgil, 411, 23.

Fr. partiment, a parting, dividing; L.B. partiment-um, partitio, divisio.

PARTISIE, PAIRTISAY, adj. Belonging to, or accomplished by, two or more persons; as, a partisie wa, a wall built by conterminous proprietors; partisay wark, work done by a number of persons. S.

PARTISMAN, s. A partaker, a sharer; q. partsman, Rudd.

To PARTLE, v. n. To trifle at work. S.

PARTLES, adj. Having no part; free; deprived of; the same with PAIRTLES.
Gyve ony hapnyd hym to sla,
That to that lowch ware bwndyn swa;
Of that privylege evyr-mare
Partles suld be the slaare. Wyntown, vi. 19. 36.

PARTLYK, PARTLYIK, adv. In equal shares or parts. S.

PARTRIK, PAIRTRICK, PERTREK, s. A partridge, S.
Tetrao perdix, Linn. corr. from Fr. perdriz.
The cur or mastis he haldis at smale auale, 192

P A S

And culyeis spanyeartis, to chace partrik or quale.
Doug. Virgil, 272, 2.

The Airne and the Goshalk syne,
That dentely had wont to dyne
On Pairtrick or on Pliuer,
With feir thair famin wes foryet.
Burel, Watson's Coll. ii. 25.

Thair was Pyattis, and Pertrekis, and Plevaris anew.
Houlate, i. 14. MS.

PARURE, s. Ornament; trimming.
The Byschape Waltyr—
Gave twa lang coddis of welwete,— Wyth Twnykil, and Dalmatyk,
Albis wyth Parurys to tha lyk.
Wyntown, ix. 6. 154.

Fr. parure, id. L.B. paratura, ornatus, opus Phrygium; Du Cange.

PARUT, s. Synonymous with Parure. S.

PAS, PASE, s. Easter. V. PAYS.

PAS, s. 1. Division of a book.
In this next pas yhe sal se
Qwhat Empriowre fyrst tuk Crystyantè.
Wyntown, v. 9. Rubr.

2. A single place in a book, a passage.
"Attouir it is to be notit of this pas of scripture abone rehersit the seueur & rigorus sentence of almychtie God, that cumis vpon thaim quhilkis stubourne, and proudelie dissobeyis the deliberatioun, & judgement of sic as God hes appoyntit to be jugis vpon all materis brocht in debait concernyng the law of God." Kennedy of Crosraguelli, Compend. Tractiue, p. 16.

"Notheles he fortifiit his wickit heresy be thre score of passis of scripture allegit be hym." Ibid.

It is used, as Mr. MacPherson has observed, by R. Brunne.
Whan Philip tille Acres cam, litelle was his dede,
The Romance sais grete skam, who so that pas wille rede.
P. 157.

Mr. MacPherson has also observed, that it has a different meaning, p. 175.
Sithen at Japhet was slayn fanuelle his stede,
The romance tellis grete pas ther of his douhty dede.

As used in the two former examples, it is evidently the same with L.B. pass-us, locus, auctoritas, Du Cange; a place or passage in a work. Langland uses the L.B. word passus for dividing his Vision. In the last quotation, it may be from Fr. pas, a step or measure, q. great part.

To PASE, v. a. To poise. V. PAIS.

PASH, s. The head; rather a ludicrous term. A bare pash, a bare or bald head, S. "A mad pash, a mad-brains, Chesh." Gl. Grose.

I wily, witty was, and gash,
With my auld felni pauky pash. Watson's Coll. i. 69.

—Some were grieving, some were groaning;—
Some turning up their gay mustachoes,
And others robbing [rubbing] their dull pashes.
Cleland's Poems, p. 66.

Ramsay, alluding to his trade as a peruke-maker, says;
I theck the out, and line the inside
Of mony a douse and witty pash,
And baith ways gather in the cash. Poems, ii. 365.

PASMENTS, s. pl. 1. Stripes of lace or silk sewed on clothes; now used to denote livery; pron. pessments, S.B.
"That nane of his Hienes subjectes—use or weare—ony begairies, frenyies, pasments, or broderie of gold, silver, or silk." Acts, Ja. VI. 1581. c. 113. V. BEGAIRIES.

2. Metaph. for external decorations of religion.
"Time, custom, and a good opinion of ourselves, our good meaning, and our lazy desires, our fair shews, and the world's glistening lustres, and these broad passments and buskings of religion, that bear bulk in the kirk, is that wherewith most satisfy themselves." Rutherford's Lett. P. i. ep. 46.

P A T

Fr. pasement, lace; Teut. id. limbus intextus, fimbria praetexta; — aurea, argentea, aut serica fila intertexta, Kilian; perhaps from Teut. pass-en, to fit, to adapt; pas, fit. To PASMENT, v. a. To deck with lace.

—"These, who being clothed in coarse rayment, are ashamed to be seene among these who are pasmented with gold." Z. Boyd's Last Battell, p. 620.

PASMENTAR, s. A term now similar to upholsterer. S.

PASMOND, s. Thesame with Pasment. V. PASMENTS. S.

PASPER, s. Samphire. S.

PASPEY, s. A particular kind of dance. S.

To PASS,* v. a. 1. Not to exact a task that has been imposed. 2. To forgive; not to punish. E. To pass by. S.

PASS-GILT, s. Money that passes as current. S.

PASSINGEOURE, s. A passage-boat; a ferry-boat.

Vnlefull war, and ane forbodin thing,
Within this passingeoure ouer Styx to bring Ony leuand wicht. Doug. Virgil, 177, 18.

PASSIONALE, s. A state of suffering or martyrdom. S.

PASSIS, s. pl. Apparently equivalent to E. passages. S.

To PASSIVERE, v. a. To exceed. S.

PASTANCE, s. Pastime; recreation.

Quhat gudlie pastance, and quhat minstrelsie!
Fr. passetemps. Palice of Honour, i. 32.

PASTISAR, s. A pastry-cook. V. PATTICEAR. S.

PASUOLAN, PASVOLAND, s. A small species of artillery; Fr. passevolut. See Sup.

"Mak reddy your cannons,—murdresaris, pasuolans, bersis," &c. Compl. S. p. 64.

PAT, pret. of the v. To PUT. See Sup.

Feir pat my hairt in sic a flocht,
It did me much mischief.
Burel's Pilg. Watson's Coll. ii. 47.

PAT, PATT, s. A pot. S.

PAT-LUCK, s. To tak pat-luck, to take dinner with another upon chance, i. e. the chance of the pot. S.

PATE, PATIE, s. Abbrev. of Patrick or Peter. S.

PATELET, s. A kind of ruff or part of female dress. S.

PATENE, s. The cover of a chalice. S.

PATENT,* adj. Ready; willing; disposed to listen. S.

PATENTER, s. A patentee. S.

To PATER, v. n. To talk incessantly. V. PATTER. S.

PATER, s. A loquacious person; generally a female. S.

PATES, s. pl. The steps in the gable leading to the roof in old houses. Syn. Corbie-steps. S.

PATH, s. A steep and, at times, narrow way, S. V. PETH.

PATHIT, part. pa. Paved.

The fare portis alsua he ferlyt fast,—
The large stretis pathit, by and by
The bissy Tyrianis laborand ardently.
Doug. Virgil, 26, 12.

Teut. pad, semita, via trita; from pad, vestigium, in its primary sense, palma pedis. This word pathit, S. properly refers to a foot-path beaten hard by the feet of passengers.

PATHLINS, adv. By a steep path or declivity. S.

PATIENT OF DEATH, s. A throe; a struggle; one of the agonies that precede dissolution, S. See Sup.

Probably corr. from passion, suffering, agony. To denote mortal agony, the Fr. say, Il souffre mort et passion.

To PATIFIE, v. a. To make known; to manifest; literally, to lay open, Lat. patefio.

VOL. II. 193

P A T

"Beside that commoun light, and supernaturall vnderstanding, hee hath patified him selfe to vs be ane heauenlie light, and supernaturall vnderstanding." Bruce's Eleven Serm. Sign. P. 3. a.

PATRELL, s. "The poitrell, or breast leather of a horse, S. the tie," Rudd. See Sup.

For euery Troiane perordour thare the Kyng
With purpour houssouris bad ane cursoure bryng,
Thare brusit trappouris and patrellis reddy boun.

Fr. poitrail, L.B. pectorale. Doug. Virgil, 215, 24.

Sibb. conjectures that it probably signifies "also some defensive covering for the neck of a war horse." This seems the sense in the following passage.

—Eurialus with him tursit away,
The riall trappouris, and mychty patrellis gay,
Quhilkis were Rhamnetes stedis harnessyng.
Doug. Virgil, 288, 49.

"The poitrinal, pectoral, or breast plate, was formed of plates of metal rivetted together, which covered the breast and shoulders of the horse; it was commonly adorned with foliage, or other ornaments engraved or embossed." Grose's Milit. Antiq. ii. 260. O. E. poytrelle. V. Note, ibid.

PATRICK, s. A partridge. S.

PATROCYNIE, s. Patronage. S.

PATRON, s. A pattern.

Maistir Jhon Blayr that patron couth rasaiff,
In Wallace buk brewyt it with the layff.
Wallace, ix. 1940. MS.

i. e. He received the description formerly given, as sent from France. For that is here called patron, which in ver. 1908, is called descriptioun. What the E. call pattern, is in S. invariably, in vulgar language, pronounced patron. This might at first seem to be a corr. of the E. word. But the E. word is itself the corr.; from Fr. patron, id. This is merely the Fr. word, signifying a patron, a protector, as used in its secondary sense. And the transition is exceedingly natural. For nothing is more common than to propose him as a pattern, to whom we look up for patronage.

PATRONATE, s. The right of presenting to a benefice. S.

PATRON-CALL, s. The patronage of a church. S.

PATRONTASHE, s. A military girdle. S.

To PATTER, v. a. 1. To repeat in a muttering sort of way without interruption; to repeat as one who has learned any thing by rote. See Sup.

Sum patteris with his mowth on beids,
That hes his mind all on oppressioun.
Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 40, st. 3.
Before the people patter and pray.

In some places of E. they yet say, in derisory language, to patter out prayers. V. PITTER-PATTER.

2. To carry on earnest conversation in a low tone. S.

This term has been generally and very naturally deduced from the first word of the Pater-noster: Arm. pater-en, to repeat the Lord's prayer. Seren. however mentions Sw. paetra, Arm. patter-en, as synon.; deriving them from Isl. patte, puer, q. to imitate the language of boys.

PATTERAR, s. One who repeats prayers, who is engaged in the acts of devotion.

Preistis suld be patteraris, and for the pepyl pray,
To be Papis of patrymone and prelatis pretendis.
Doug. Virgil, Prol. 239, a. 8.

i. e. Priests, who should, &c.

PATTERING, PATTRING, s. Vain repetition.

Prudent S. Paul dois mak narratioun,
Tutching the divers leid of everie land,
2 B

Sayand thair bene mair edificatioun,
In five wordis that folk dois understand,
Nor to pronounce of wordis ten thousand,
In strange langage, sine wait not quhat it menis :
I think sic pattring is not worth twa prenis.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 17.

To PATTER, v. n. To move with quick successive steps, especially referring to the sound. V. Padder. S.
PATTICEAR, PASTISAR, s. A pastry-cook. S.
PATTLE, PETTLE, s. A stick with which the ploughman clears away the earth that adheres to the plough, S.

I wad be laith to rin an' chase thee,
Wi' murd'ring pattle. Burns, iii. 146.

This seems the same with E. paddle, as used to denote something resembling a shovel; C.B. pattal.

PAVADE, s. A dagger; an old word. S.

PAVASIES, s. pl. A kind of artillery on a car of two wheels, and armed with two large swords. S.

To PAUCE, v. n. To prance with rage; or to take long steps, in consequence of that stateliness which one assumes when irritated, S.B. perhaps from Fr. pas, E. pace; or in allusion to the capers made by a mettlesome horse.

PAUCHLE, s. An old and frail person; one low in stature and weak in intellect. S.

PAUCHTIE, PAUGHTY, adj. 1. Proud; haughty, S.
With hairt and mynd I luif humilitie;
And pauchtie pryd rycht sair I do detest;
But with the heich yet man I heichlie be :
Or with that sort I sall na sit in rest.

Maitland Poems, p. 153.

"A boon, a boon, my father deir,

A boon I beg of thee!"

"Ask not that paughty Scottish lord,

For him you ne'er shall see."

Minstrelsy, Border, ii. 10.

When trees bear naithing else, they'll carry men,
Wha shall like paughty Romans greatly swing
Aboon earth's disappointments in a string.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 326.

2. Petulant; saucy; malapert. This is the more general sense, S. It suggests the idea of conduct more contemptible and disgusting than even that which flows from haughtiness; being usually applied to persons of inferior rank who assume ridiculous airs of importance.

Scarce had he shook his paughty crap,
When in a customer did pap.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 456.

A paughty answer, a saucy reply. A paughty dame, a petulant woman, S.

Perhaps Belg. pochg-en, to vaunt, to brag, is allied; ge-poch, boasting; pochger, a boaster.

PAVEN, PAUAN, s. "A grave dance, brought from Spain, in which the dancers turned round one after another, as peacocks do with their tails, whence it has received its name;" Dict. Trev. i. e. Fr. parane, from paon, Lat. pavo, -onis, a peacock.

We sall leir you to daunce,
Within ane bonny littill space,
Ane new paven of Fraunce.

Lyndsay, S.P.R. ii. 183.

—"Pauuans, galyardis, turdions," &c. Compl. S. p. 102.

In Dict. Trev. a more particular account of it may be found. Dr. Johns. seems to have mistaken its nature, when, after Ainsworth, he defines it "a kind of light-tripping dance."

The ingenious Editor of the Compl. observes, that "the words pavie and paw seem to be contractions of this technical name." V. PAVIE.

To PAUGE, v. n. 1. To prance. Syn. Pauce. 2. To pace about in an artful way, till an opportunity occur to accomplish any object. 3. To tamper fool-hardily with what is hazardous. S.

PAVIE, PAW, s. Lively motion of whatever kind, S.
1. It is used to denote the agile exertions of a rope-dancer.

"The 10 of Julii, ane man, sume callit him a juglar, playit sic sowple tricks upon ane tow, qlk wes festinit betwix the top of St. Geill's Kirk steiple and ane stair beneath the crosse, callit Josias close heid, the lyke was nevir sene in this countrie, as he raid doune the tow, and playit sa maney pavies on it." Birrell's Diarey, Dalyell's Fragments, p. 47.

"To play sic a pavie, or paw, is a common expression in the south of Scotland;" Gl. Compl. p. 361. In this sense the Editor quotes a passage, in which paw is left by Ritson as not understood.

The durk and door made their last hour,
And prov'd their final fa', man;
They thought the devil had been there,
That play'd them sic a paw than.

Battle of Gillicrankie, Ibid.

For some of such had play'd a pavie,
Though all the cables of the navie
In one, should pass through needles-eye,
Whiggs still would doubt their honesty.

Colvil's Mock Poem, P. i. p. 72.

2. A ridiculous or fantastic air; a mighty flourish; as in bodily motion, or in the mode of doing courtesy, S.
He was well versed in court modes,
In French pavies, and new coin'd nods,
And finally, in all that can
Make up a compleat pretty man.

Cleland's Poems, p. 47.

"He came in with a great pavie," i. e. He entered the apartment with a great many airs. It is used to describe the manners of a fribble. V. PAWIS.

3. Transferred to rage; from the violent and ridiculous motions one sometimes makes under its influence, S.

Both paw and pavie may be contr. from paven, according to the conjecture mentioned under that word. But in this case, it must have been from a misapprehension of the proper meaning of paven. I suspect, indeed, that paw is merely Fr. pas, a step, and pavie, pas vif, a quick step, a lively motion, a term perhaps borrowed from the change of step in military manœuvres.

PAVIE, s. The same with Pavis, Pavis. S.

PAUYOT, s. Meaning not clear. S.

PAUIS, PAVIS, s. 1. A large shield.

Ane balen pauis coveris thare left sydis,
Maid of hart skyunis and thik oxin hidis.

Caetra, Virg.

Doug. Virgil, 235, 1.

Rudd. in his Gl. renders balen, "belonging to a whale." If this be the passage referred to, the only one indeed in which I have observed the epithet, he is certainly mistaken. For the caetra was a target or buckler made of the ounce's or buffalo's skin; used by the Africans and Spaniards. Scutum loreum, quo utuntur Afri et Hispani; Serv. in Virg. Now, balen seems to signify, belonging to a skin, q. pelliceus, from Su.G. Isl. baelg, Germ. balg, a skin of any kind.

It is this kind of shield which W. Britto is supposed to describe.

P A U

Hunc praecedebat cum parma gario, sub qua
Nil sibi formidans obsessos damnificabat
Assidue, poterat nec ab illis damnificari,
Asseribus latis dum parma protegit ipsum,
Quam nexu taurina tegit septemplace pellis.

V. Du Cange. Philipp. Lib. 10.

2. A testudo, used in assaulting the walls of a fortified city.

The Volscaners assemblit in ane sop,
To fyll the fowsyis, and the wallis to slop:
All samyn haistand with ane pauis of tre
Heissit togiddir, above thare hedis hie
Sa surely knyt, that manere embuschment
Semyt to be ane clois volt quhare thay went.

Doug. Virgil, 295, 5. also l. 24.

The term pauis is extended to this, because they were Vnder the volt of targis — l. 26.

"The pavais, pavache, or tallevas, was a large shield, or rather a portable mantlet, capable of covering a man from head to foot, and probably of sufficient thickness to resist the missile weapons then in use. These were in sieges carried by servants, whose business it was to cover their masters with them, whilst they with their bows and arrows shot at the enemy on the ramparts. As this must have been a service of danger, it was that perhaps which made the office of scutifer, or shield-bearer, honourable, as the mere carrying of a helmet or shield on a march, or in a procession, partook more of the duty of a porter than that of a soldier. — Under the protection of the pavaches, workmen also approached to the foot of the wall in order to sap." Grose's Military Antiq. ii. 257.

"Pavashes — were also used at sea to defend the sides of the vessels, like the present netting of our ships of war; this defence was called a pavisade, and may be seen in the representation of antient ships." Ibid.

Hence it is mentioned as one of the means of nautical defence employed by our ancestors.

"Boitis man, bayr stanis & lyme pottis ful of lyme in the craklene pokis to the top, and pauis veil the top vitht pauesis and mantillis." Compl. S. p. 64.

Here pauis is also used as a v. Mantil is the same with Mantlet mentioned by Grose, in his description of the pavais.

Fr. pavois, Ital. pavese, L.B. pavas-ium, paves-ium, paves-is, paves-us, paves-ius, &c. Gr. B. παβιστιον. C.B. pafais. Menage, in his usual way, by a very severe distortion, derives the word from Lat. parma. V. Rudd. Gl. Borel more rationally deduces it from Ital. paveso, Sp. pavez, Fr. pave, a covering. According to Boxhorn, C.B. pafais is formed from puys, to strike, and aes, a shield, because it receives the strokes. V. Wachter, vo. Puffen.

The soldiers, who carried shields of this kind, were called, L.B., pavisarii, pavexarii, pavesiatores, Tho. Walsingham, Edw. III. Fr. pavessiers, pavescheurs, Froissart, iv. 13. sometimes pavoisiers.

PAUK, s. Art; a wile, S.

Prattis are repute policy and perrellus paukis.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 238, b. 37.

Callander refers to Belg. paiken, to coax, to wheedle; Ancient Scot. Poems, p. 19. But I find no vestige of this word in any Lexicon. V. the adj.

PAUKY, PAWKY, adj. 1. Sly; artful, S. "Arch, cunning, artful, North;" Gl. Grose.

The pauky auld carle came o'er the lee,

Wi' mony gude e'ens and days to me.

Callander's A.S. Poems, p. 1.

Pauky, witty, or sly, in word or action, without any harm or bad designs; Gl. Rams. This word does not, indeed, in its modern use, properly denote that kind of design which has a hurtful tendency. But it appears to have been softened in its signification. For there seems no reason to doubt that it is from A.S. paec-an, paec-an, decipere, mentiri; whence paeca, deceptor. Thus it originally denoted that deception which implies falsehood, or lying. The E. terms packing, patcherie, and packe, as they are nearly allied in sense, seem to acknowledge the same origin.

P A U

— You hear him cogge, see him dissemble,
Know his grosse patchery, loue him, feede him,
Keepe in your bosome, yet remaine assur'd
That he's a made-up villaine. Timon of Athens.

— What hath bin seene
Either in snuffes, and packings of the dukes,
Or the hard reine which both of them hath borne Against the olde king. King Lear.

On this passage Mr. Steevens observes; "Packings are underhand contrivances. So in Stanihurst's Virgil, 1582. — 'With two gods packing, one silly woman to cozen.' We still speak of packing juries." V. Divers. Purley, ii. 368.

Some have a name for thefte and bribery,
Some be called crafty, that can pyke a purse,—
Som lidderous, som losels, som naughty patches,
Som facers, som bracers, som make gret cracks.

Shelton, p. 15. Edit. 1736.

Mr. Tooke traces these words to the A.S. verb. Had he been acquainted with our S. terms, he might justly have given them in confirmation of his etymon.

2. As applied to the eye, it signifies, wanton, Ang. See Sup.

It does not seem to admit this sense as used by Ramsay.

— But Mary Gray's twa pawky een

They gar my fancy falter. Poems, ii. 224.

PAWKERY, s. Cunning; sliness. S.

PAWKILY, adv. Slily; artfully. S.

PAUL, s. A hold; a leaning place. S.

PAULIE, PAILIE, adj. 1. Impotent or feeble, applied to any bodily member. 2. Small in size, applied to lambs. 3. Insipid; inanimate; applied to the mind. 4. Lame; dislocated or distorted. S.

PAULIE-(or) PAILIE-FOOTIT, adj. Flat-footed; splay-footed, or having the foot turned in. S.

PAULIE, PAWLIE, s. 1. A slow, inactive, inanimate person. 2. An unhealthy sheep. 3. Pawlies, the smallest lambs in a flock. S.

PAULIE-MERCHANT, s. A person who hawks through the country purchasing Paulie-lambs. S.

PAUSTIE, s. V. POUSTIE.

To PAUT, v. n. 1. To paw; to strike the ground with the foot; to stamp, S. "To kick; as, to paut off the bed-clothes. Yorks." Gl. Grose. See Sup.

The term is used metaph., in allusion to the prancing of a horse, in the following passage:

Up starts a priest and his hug head claws,
Whose conscience was but yet in dead thraws,
And did not cease to cave and paut,
While clyred back was prickt and gald.

Cleland's Poems, p. 66.

2. To push out the feet alternately, when lying in bed or otherwise. 3. To strike with the foot; to kick. 4. To move the hand as a person groping in the dark. S.

PAUT, s. 1. A stroke on the ground with the foot; He gae a paut with his fit, he stamped on the ground. 2. A stroke with the foot at any object; a kick, S. S.

Pant seems erroneously used for paut by Kelly. "She has an ill pant with her hind foot," S. Prov., "signifying that such a woman is stubborn. Taken from cows who kick when they are milked," p. 297.

P A W

Teut. pad, patte, Sw. pota, Fr. patte, the paw of a beast, whence the idea is borrowed. Kilian mentions Gr. παρῶν, calco, as synonym.

To PAUT, v. a. To paut one's foot at a person, to stamp with the foot in a menacing manner. S.

PAW, s. Quick motion. V. PAVIE.

PAW, PAUW, PAWAW, s. 1. The slightest motion; as, "He ne'er played pauw," he did not so much as stir.

2. Transferred to one who cannot eat or make the slightest exertion without difficulty. 3. To Play one's Paws, to act the part belonging to one. S.

PAWIS, s. pl. Parts in music. Lord Hailes.

Remane with me, and tarry still,
And se quha playis best thair pawis,
And lat fillok ga fling her fill.

Scott, Bannatyne Poems, p. 204.

From the allusion to music, or perhaps rather to dancing, it is here used for the part which one acts, in a general sense; from Fr. pas, a step. V. PAVEN, and PAVIE.

PAWKIE, s. A woollen glove or mitten, having a thumb without separate fingers. V. DODDIE MITTEN. S.

To PAWL, v. n. To attempt to catch ineffectively. S.

PAWMER, s. A palm tree; Fr. palmier.

—Hys handis maid rycht lik till a pawmer,
Off manlik mak, with naless gret and cler.

Wallace, ix. 1920. MS.

Naless, i. e. nails. This is a strange metaphor. But thus the Minstrel intimates that the hands of Wallace were large and well spread.

PAWMER, s. One who, in going from place to place, makes a shabby appearance, or wears a dress so threadbare as to convey the idea of poverty, S.

This has evidently had its origin from Palmer, a pilgrim who had been in the Holy Land, after pilgrimages came into contempt, in consequence of the superior light of the Reformation. According to Dr. Johns., the palmer received his name from the palms which he bore, when he returned from Palestine. Seren. gives the same etymon. But Ihre deduces Isl. palmare (peregrinator, wanderingman Sw. Verel.) from Su.G. palm, contus, fustis. They received this name, he says, because they set out on their journey with no other provision than a staff; whence Fr. prendre le bourdon, to set out on such a pilgrimage.

Spiut, swerd, oc mangel palm,
The af staden med sik baro.

Chron. Rhythm. ap. Ihre.

i. e. "They carried with them, from the city, javelins, swords, and many poles."

"Foreign writers," he adds, "commonly assert, that staves of this kind received their name from the wood of the palm tree, which was brought home [during the crusades] in token of the victory gained over the infidels." If the last assertion be true, both etymons run into one; with this difference, however, that Ihre supplies us with an intermediate link, in the use of the word palm, as transferred from the palm tree to a large staff.

To PAWMER, v. n. To go from place to place, in an idle way, without any determinate object, S. V. the s.

PAWMIE, PANDIE, s. A stroke on the hand with the ferula; a word well known in schools, S. from Lat. palm-a, the palm of the hand; synonym. Luffie, q. v. See Sup.

To PAWMIE, v. a. To strike the palm with a ferula. S.

PAWN, s. A narrow curtain fixed to the roof, or to the lower part, of a bed, S.

Belg. pand, a lappet, a skirt.

PAWN, PAWNE, PAWNIE, s. The peacock.

P E A

The papingo in hew

Excedis birdis all;

The turtill is maist trew;

The pawne but peregal. Maitland Poems, p. 142.

The paynted pawn with Argos eyis,

Can on his mayock call. Cherrie and Slae, st. 2.

Pitscottie writes it pawnie. The mod. pron. is pownie, S.B. V. BRISSEL-COCK.

Fr. paon, Lat. pavo-onis; C.B. payn, poin, pauon, Corn. paun, Arm. pain, id. Lhuyd.

PAWNS, s. pl. The timbers, in a thatched roof, which extend from the one gable to the other; being placed under the cabers, and supporting them, Ang. synonym. bougars.

Perhaps from Fr. panne, used in panne de bois, the piece of timber that sustains a gutter between the roofs of two houses, Cotgr.

To PAWVIS, v. n. To dally with a girl. V. PAVIE. S.

To PEAK, PEEK, v. n. 1. To peep, to speak with a small voice resembling that of a chicken, S.

2. To complain of poverty, S. synonym. peenge. Hence the prov. phrase; "He's no sae pur as he peaks."

Isl. puk-ra, insusurrare, occulte agitare, is perhaps a cognate term. Hence puk-r, mussitatio, occulta factio, G. Andr.

PEAK, s. 1. A triangular piece of linen, used for binding the hair below a child's cap or woman's toy, Ang. probably denominated from its form as resembling a peak, or point of a hill. 2. An old name for lace. See S.

To PEAL, PEEL, v. a. To equal; to match. V. PEEL, v. S.

PEANER, s. A cold-looking, naked, trembling being, of small size. S.

PEANERFLEE, s. An active light-looking person. S.

PEANIE, s. A hen-turkey; a pea-hen. S.

PEANT, s. The name of a particular kind of silk. S.

PEARA. Peara parabit, peara-bo. Left unexplained. S.

PEARIE, PEERY, PEAR, s. That instrument of play used by boys, S. in England called a pegtop. See S.

It seems to have been named from its exact resemblance of a pear. The humming-top of E. is in S. denominated a French pearie, probably as having been originally imported from France.

PEARL, s. The seam-stitch in a knitted stocking. S.

PEARL BARLEY. The finest kind of pot-barley. S.

PEARLED, part. adj. Having a border of lace. S.

PEARLIN, s. A species of lace, made of thread, or of silk; properly bone-lace, S. See Sup.

Then round the ring she dealt them ane by ane,

Clean in her pearlin keek and gown alane.

Ross's Helenore, p. 116.

—We maun hae pearlins, and mabbies, and cocks.

Song, Ibid. p. 137.

It is most probably the same that is meant in the following statute.

"That no person of whatsoever degree, shall have pearling, or ribbening, upon their ruffes, sarkes, napkins, and sockes: except the persons before privileged. And the pearling, and ribbening,—to be of those made within the kingdome of Scotland." Acts, Ja. VI. 1621. c. 25. Murray.

This is distinguished from "gold-smiths worke, stones, and pearles," in the next paragraph.

PEARL SHELL. The Pearl Mussel. S.

PEASE-BRUIZLE, s. Birsled pease. V. PEASE-KILL. S.

PEASE-KILL, s. 1. Field-pease broiled in the pods. 2.

Used figuratively for a confused scramble. 3. To mak a pease-hill of any thing, to dissipate it lavishly. S.

P E C

PEASE-MUM. To play pease-mum, to mutter. S.
 PEASY-WHIN, s. The greenstone. V. PEYSIE-WHIN. S.
 PEASSIS, s. pl. The weights of a clock. V. PACE. S.
 PEA-TREE, s. The Laburnum. S.
 PEAT, s. A contemptuous designation, accusing the person of pride to whom it is addressed. S.
 PEAT,* s. Vegetable fuel. The heart is said to grow as grit's a peat when ready to burst with suppressed sorrow. S.
 PEAT OF SAPE. A bar of soap; so called from its form. S.
 PEAT-CLAIG, s. A place built to hold peats. S.
 PEAT-CORN, s. Peat-dust. S.
 PEAT-CREEL, s. A basket for carrying peats in. S.
 PEAT-MOSS, s. The place whence peats are dug. S.
 PEAT-POT, PEAT-PAT, s. The hole from which peat is dug. S.
 PEAT-REEK, s. 1. The smoke of turf-fuel. 2. The flavour communicated to whisky, from being distilled by means of peats. 3. Highland whisky. S.
 PEAT-SPADE, s. The spade used in digging peats. S.
 PEAT-MOW, s. 1. The dross or dust of peats, S.B. See Sup.
 "Our great gilligapous fallow o' a coach-man turned o'er our gallant cart amon' a heap o' shirrrels an' peat-mow." Journal from London, p. 3.
 2. A quantity of peats built or piled up under cover. S. Perhaps allied to Su.G. mo, terra sabulosa, et prae ariditate sterilis. V. MOWE.
 PEATSTANE, s. The stone at the top of the wall of a house, which projects, and with which the angle towards the chimney begins, S. See Sup.
 PEAX, s. Peace; an old law term used in Retours. S.
 PECE, s. A vessel for holding liquids.
 And vtheris (quhilk war ordanyt for sic notis)
 The warme new blude keppit in coup and pece.
Doug. Virgil, 171, 47.
 It occurs in Ywayne and Gawin.
 A capon rosted brocht sho sone,
 A clene klath, and brede tharone,
 And a pot with riche wine,
 And a pece to fil it yne. Ritson's E. M. Rom. i. 33.
Fr. piece, id. "as S. a piece of wine, i. e. Hogshead," Rudd.
 PECE, s. Each. V. PIECE. S.
 PECES, s. pl. Apparently, pots. S.
 To PECH, PEACH, PEGH, (gutt.) v. n. To puff; to labour in breathing; to pant, S. hech, synon. See S.
 —Quhair sic wer wont brauely to mak thame bowne,
 With Lord or Laird to ryde to burrowis towne;
 Quhair sic wer wont at all games to be reddy,
 To schuit or loup, for to exerce thair body;
 Now mon thay work and labour, pech and pant,
 To pay thair Maisters maillis exorbitant.
L. Scotland's Lament, Fol. 5, b.
 This term expresses the sound emitted from the breast, which indicates oppression or great exertion.
 —Straight a grumbletonian appears,
Peching fou sair beneath a laid of fears:—
 "Wow! that's braw news," quoth he, "to make fools fain."
Ramsay's Poems, i. 53.
 He peching on the cawsey lay,
 O' kicks and cuffs weel sair'd.
Fergusson's Poems, ii. 29.
 "He will tye the burthen of them on their owne backes, whilst they grone and peach." Rollocke on the Passion, p. 188.

P E E

Sibb. views this as formed from the sound. But it is radically the same with Sw. pick-a, to pant, Seren. Dan. pikh-er. These verbs properly denote the palpitation of the heart; Germ. poch-en, id.
 PECH, s. The act of breathing hard.
 He gaif ane greit pech lyk ane weill fed stirk.
L. Scottl. Lament. Concl.
 PECHAN, s. The crop; the stomach, Ayrs.
 An' tho' the gentry first are stechin,
 Yet ev'n the ha' folk fill their pechan
 Wi' sauce, ragouts, and sicklike trashtrie,
 That's little short o' downright wastrie.
Burns, iii. 4.
 PECHLE, s. (gutt.) A parcel or budget carried by one in a clandestine sort of way, Loth.
 Most probably a dimin. from the same origin with E. pack, Su.G. packa, Isl. piack-ur, sarcina. Germ. paecklin, fasciculus.
 To PECHLE, v. n. To hechle and pechle, to pant sorely in doing any work. S.
 PECHTS, PEAGHTS, PEHTS, s. pl. The name given by the common people to the Picts in Scotland. S.
 To PECKLE, v. n. To peck at. V. PIKLAND. S.
 PECKMAN, s. One who carried smuggled whisky through the country in a dish like a peck measure. S.
 PEDDIR, PEDDER, s. A pedlar; a travelling merchant. See Sup.
 The pirate preissis to peil the peddir his pak.
Doug. Virgil, Prol. 238, b. 9.
 "Ane pedder is called an marchand, or creamer, quha beiris ane pack or creame vpon his back, quha are called beirares of the puddill be the Scottesmen of the realme of Polonia, quhair of I saw ane great multitude in the towne of Cracowia, anno Dom. 1569." Skene, Verb. Sign. vo. Pede-pulverosus.
Rudd. deduces it from Fr. pied, Lat. pes, the foot; because they commonly travel about on foot. Perhaps rather immediately from L.B. ped-are, pedibus metiri, or pedar-ius, nudis ambulans pedibus.
 PEDEE, s. A kind of footboy. S.
 PEDRALL, s. A child beginning to walk. S.
 To PEE, v. n. To make water. S.
 To PEE, v. a. To wet by making water. S.
 To PEEVER. The same; a diminutive from Pee. S.
 PEEBLE, s. The vulgar generic name for agates. S.
 To PEEBLE, v. a. To pelt, properly with stones. S.
 PEEGGIRINBLAST. A stormy blast; a heavy shower.
 To PEEL, PEAL, v. a. To equal; to match; to produce any thing exactly like another, Loth. S.O. See Sup.
 Allied perhaps to Teut. peyl-en, to measure, because in barter one quantity is given as an equivalent for another.
 PEEL, PEIL, s. A match; an equal, Loth. S.O. "Shew me the peil of that," Gl. Sibb. See Sup.
 In time of peace, he never had a peel,
 So courteous he was, and so genteel.
Hamilton's Wallace, p. 158.
 PEEL, s. A pool, the pron. of S.B.
 Sae she escapes by favour of her heels,
 And made nae stop for scrabs, or stanes, or peels.
Ross's Helenore, p. 58.
 PEEL, s. A place of strength. V. PELE.
 PEEL-A-FLEE, s. A light person lightly clothed. S.
 PEEL-AN'-EAT. Potatoes presented at table unpeeled.
 PEELED WILLOW-WAND. V. WILLOW-WAND. S.
 PEELER, s. A portmanteau; an old word. S.
 PEELIE, adj. Thin; meagre, S.
 Perhaps q. having the flesh peeled off the bones, Fr.

P E E

pelé. I am not certain, however, that it does not also include the idea of paleness.

PEELING. Travelling lightly clothed in a windy day. S.

PEEL-RINGE, PEEL-RANGE, s. 1. A scrub; a skin-flint. 2. A cauldrie dozent person. 3. A tall meagre-looking fellow. S.

PEEL-RINGE, adj. Lean; meagre; cauldrie. S.

PEEL-SHOT, s. The dysentery; a term used in regard to cattle. In horses called a Scourin. S.

PEELWERSH, adj. Wan; sickly in appearance. S.

PEEN, s. The sharp point of a mason's hammer. S.

To PEENGE, PINGE, v. n. 1. To complain; to speak in a querulous tone; to whine, S. pron. peenge. See S.

A bytand Ballad on warlo wives,
That gar thair men live pinging lives.
Fleming, Evergreen, 2. 51. Rubr.

2. To pretend poverty, S. To mak a puir mouth, synon. In the first sense, it might seem allied to Su.G. weng-a, id. S. whinge, v or w being often used for p in Goth.; in the latter, to Teut. pynigh-en, cruciare, affligere. It seems doubtful if the term, in the passage quoted above, does not denote a state of thralldom or oppression, including also the idea of murmuring under it.

PEENGIE, PEENJIE, adj. Not able to endure cold. S.

To PEENJURE, v. a. To hamper; to confine. S.

PEEOY, PIOYE, s. A little moistened gunpowder, formed like a pyramid, and kindled at the top. S.

To PEEP, v. n. To complain; to pule. V. PEPE, s.

PEEP, s. A feeble sound. S.

To PLAY PEEP. To utter a feeble sound. "He darna play peep," he dare not let his voice be heard. S.

PEEPER, s. A mirror; a looking-glass. S.

PEEPERS, s. pl. A cant term for spectacles. S.

PEEP-SMA' PIPE-SMA', s. A silly, useless, weak-minded person; one feeble in both body and mind. S.

PEEPIE-WEEPIE, adj. Of a whining disposition. S.

To PEER, v. a. To equal, S.

O that's the queen o' woman kind,
And neer a ane to peer her. Burns, iv. 395.

Fr. pair, a match.

To PEER, v. n. To appear; a very old word. V. PER. S.

PEERY, adj. Inquisitive; sharp-looking. S.

To PEERIE, v. n. To purl. S.

PEERIE, adj. Timid; fearful. S.

PEERIE, adj. Little; small. A peerie foal, a small bannock or cake, Orkn. Shetl. See Sup.

PEERIEWEERIE, adj. Very little. S.

PEERIEWEERIE-WINKIE, adj. Very little. S.

PEERIEWEERIE, s. 1. A slow-running stream. 2. A mysterious and hidden person. S.

PEERY-WEERY, adj. Expressive of the blinking motion of small eyes. S.

PEES, interj. A peculiar call made to calves. S.

PEESKIE, s. A term for short wool, stunted grass, &c. S.

PEESWEIP, PEEWEIP, PEESEWEEP, s. A lapwing, S. See Sup.

"Tringa vanellus, Linn. Lapwing, Teuchit, Peesweep." P. Luss, Dunbartons. Statist. Acc. xvii. 251.

Perhaps corr. from E. pewet, or formed, as this may originally have been in Teut. piewit, from the cry. This bird, however, is in Sw. called wipa, kowipa, Dan. vibe, kivit.

PEESWEEPY, adj. Poor; pitiful; silly; whining. S.

PEESWEEP-LIKE, adj. Having sharp features, the appearance of feebleness, and a shrill voice. S.

P E I

To PEEVER, v. n. To make water. V. under PEE. S.

To PEEUK, v. n. To peep; to chirp; Syn. Cheep. S.

PEE-WYT, s. The green plover or lapwing. S.

To PEG off, or away, v. n. To go off quickly, Loth. Dumfr. perhaps corr. from cant E. pike off, to run away; Grose's Class. Dict.

PEG, s. A stroke, Loth. Dumfr. Isl. piack-a, frequenter pungo.

PEG, s. The ball for playing at Shinty. S.

PEGGIN'-AWL, s. A shoemaker's awl for entering the pegs or wooden pins driven into the heels of shoes. S.

To PEGH, v. n. To puff or breathe hard. V. PECH. S.

PEGHIN, (gutt.) The stomach. V. PECHAN. S.

To PEGHLE, v. n. See under PECH, v. S.

PEGIL, s. The dirty work of a house. Working the pegil, Ang. is synon. with acting the scodgie, S.

As scodgie seems to be a corr. of Su.G. sko-swen, a servant who puts on the shoes of his master, pegil, may denote the employment of a young person, to whom the dirtiest part of the work is commonly allotted; from Isl. pijke, juvencula, puella, Su.G. poike, puellus; either from Isl. peige, juvencus bos et parvus, G. Andr.; or Pers. peik, a lacquey.

PE GOVNE. Some sort of gown for a man. S.

PEGPIE, s. The magpie. S.

PEG PUFF. A cant term for a young woman resembling an old one in her manners. S.

PEGRALL, PYGRALL, s. Petty; paltry.

Ane pegrall thief, that steilis a cow,
Is hangit; bot he that steilis a bow
With als mekill geir as he may turss,
That theiff is hangit be the purss.
Lyndsay's S.P.R. ii. 164.

And cheiflie Mortoun, and Lochlevin be name,
That of his bluide resavit the pygrall pryce,
So with the silver sall ye have the schame.
Maitland Poems, p. 233.

This refers to the money received for treacherously delivering up the Earl of Northumberland.

"Corr. from beggar, q. beggral;" Gl. Sibb. But this is quite improbable. Isl. pekill evidently signifies what is little; pekillhufa, a small coif or cap, capitium parvum; G. Andr.

PEYAY, interj. The milk-maid's call for calves to come to their mothers. S.

PEICE. The Fest of Peice, Pasch or Easter. V. PAYS. S.

To PEIFER, v. n. To be fretful; to whimper. S.

PEIK, LEAD-PEIK, s. A piece of lead for ruling paper. S.

PEIKMAN, s. The same with Pickie-man. S.

PEIKTHANK, adj. Ungrateful; unthankful. S.

PEIL, s. A place of strength. V. PELE.

PEIL, s. Equal; match to match. V. PEEL. S.

PEILD, adj. Bald.

"Q. peeled, from peil, to rob. Fr. piller;" Gl. Sibb.

Here two etymons seem conjoined, neither of which is the true one. For Fr. pelé is presently used in the sense of bald; pieled, Shaksp. id.

To PEILE, PELE, v. a. 1. To pache or peile fish.

—"Fra twa houris efter nune, to sax houris at euin, it sall not be lesum to by, pak or pele fische, bot that all our Souerane Lordis liegis, at the saidis tymes of day, may be seruit of all maner of fische, and by the samin for thair siluer, for sustentatiounis of thair house, and seruing of the cuntrie about." Acts, Ja. V. 1540, c. 78. Edit. 1566. Peile, Skene, c. 98.

More than a century ago, the sense of this term seems to have been lost.

P E K

"By the 84th act Parl. 1503, and 24th act 1633, the merchants must only pack and peil at free burghs: Now, loading and unloading is the same thing with packing and peiling. This was denied by the Dukes Advocates, who called "packing," the stowing of goods in packs, and "peiling," they did not agree what it meant; some thought it was the furring of goods like a pile of wood." Fountainhall's Decisions, i. 81.

We might view peil as allied to Teut. peghel, Belg. peyl, the capacity or measure of a vessel; peghel-en, peyl-en, to measure; metiri vasis capacitatem; and thus consider the phrase as probably of Belg. origin. For haering-pakkerij is a place where herrings are packed up in barrels and salted anew. But I am inclined to think that it is the same with the E. v. pile, "to heap, to coacervate." I prefer this sense, because peiling is not confined to fish, but extended to other goods, as wool, hides, &c.

— "That na persoun vse pakking nor peiling of woll, hydis, nor skinnis, lose nor laid, outwith fre burgh and privilege thair of." Acts, Ja. V. 1540. See Sup.

I am not certain, however, whether peiling, peiling, may not signify, pairing, adjusting to one size; which is generally attended to in packing fish in barrels. V. PEEL, v. and s.

2. Packing and peiling now denotes unfair means of carrying on trade in a corporation; as when a freeman allows the use of his name in trade to another who has not his privileges. S.

PEILOUR, s. A thief. V. PELOUR.

PEIMANDER, s. Perhaps, a pantler or confectioner. S.

To PEYNE, v. a. To forge. V. PENE.

To PEYR, v. a. To impair. V. PARE.

PEIR, s. Equal. Bot peir, matchless; unparalleled. S.

PEIRLING, PEARLING, s. Pearl-fishing. S.

PEIRS, adj. "A sky colour, or a colour between green and blue," Rudd.

— Behaldand thame sa mony diuers hew,
Sum peirs, sum pale, sum burnet, and sum blew.

Doug. Virgil, 401, 1.

Chaucer perse, "skie-coloured, of a blewish grey," Tyrwhitt.

O.Fr. pers, perse, caesius, glaucus; c'est un azur couvert et obscur qu'on pretend etre venu de Perse, ou de couleur de pêche Persienne. Dict. Trev.

To PEIS, PEISS, PESE, v. a. To assuage; to appease; according to Rudd. See Sup.

— And quhen he spak all ceissit,
The heuinlie hie hous of goddis was peissit.

Doug. Virgil, 317, 4.

Rudd. mentions O.Fr. paise as the origin, a word I cannot find in any dictionary. But as silescit is the term used by Virg., peissit properly signifies, was made, or became silent; corresponding to Fr. s'appaiser, as used by R. Stephens. Terent. Dum hae silescunt turbae, S'appaisent et cessant. Dict. Latinogallic. A. 1538. vo. Silescit.

PEYSIE-WHIN, s. The E. Greenstone; Sw. groensten, Germ. grunstein, Ang.; called peasie-whin in the neighbourhood of Edinburgh.

It has received its name from the resemblance of the spots in it to pease, Ang. pron. peyse.

PEYSLE, PEYZLE, s. Any small tool used by a rustic. S.

PEISLED, PYSLIT, part. adj. In easy circumstances. S.

PEYSTER, s. A miser who feeds voraciously. S.

PEYVEE, s. Nonsensical ceremonious bustle. S.

PEYZART, PEYSART, adj. Parsimonious; niggardly. S.

PEYZART, PEYSERT, s. A niggard; a miser. S.

PEKLE-PES, s. A name given to a hen. S.

P E L

PELE, PEYLL, PEILL, PEEL, PAILE, s. A place of strength; a fortification. See Sup.

— At Lythkow was then a pele,
Mekill, and stark, and stuffyt wele
With Inglis men; and wes reset
To thaim that, with armuris or met,
Fra Edynburgh wald to Strewelyn ga.

Barbour, x. 137. MS.

The site of this fortification at Linlithgow is still called the Peel.

— Men assayit mony wyss,
Castellis and peyllis for to ta. Barbour, x. 147. MS.

The Castele of Saynct Andrewys town,
And sere Pelys, sum wp, sum down,
This Edward, sa gret a lord wes then,
That all he stwffyd with Inglis men.

Wyntown, viii. 28. 94.

On Gargownno was hyggyt a small peill,
That warnyst was with men and wittaill weill,
Within a dyk, bathe closs, chawmer, and hall.

Wallace, iv. 213. MS.

This name is given to a Roman castellum at Kirkintilloch.

"At this town there is another fort upon the wall, called the Peel." Gordon's Itin. Septent. p. 54.

The term occurs in O.E., and is written pele, pell, pile.

The Romancer it sais, Richarde did mak a pele
On kastle wise, all wais wrouht of tre fulle welle.

R. Brunne, p. 157.

Here it is described as a wooden building.

Chaucer uses the term pell.

God saue the Lady of this pell,
Our owne gentill Ladie Fame.

House of Fame, iii. 220.

Urry has this note. "A house, a cell. Sp. and Sk. f. a pallace." But it is evidently used as equivalent to castell, the designation previously given to this house.

— It astonieth yet my thought,
And maketh all my witte to swinke,
On this Castell for to thinke.

— All was of stone of berile,
Both the Castell and the Toure. Ibid. ver. 88. 97.

Where piles be pulled down apace,
And stately buildings brought to ground;
The Scots, like loons, void of all grace,
Religious precepts sore did wound.

Battle of Flodden, ver. 144.

Lambe has the following note on this passage.

"In Lancashire, there is an old fort called the Pile of Fouldery. Peel, as it is called in Scotland, is a small castle, Bastillon, or Bastle; in French, Bicocque, which Cotgrave calls a little paltry town, hold, or fort, not strong enough to hold out a siege, nor so weak as to be given up for words." P. 34.

Bower uses municipium as corresponding to Pele. Hoc in anno municipium de Linlithgw, quod Anglicè Pele vocatur, per regem Angliae constructum est. Scotichr. Lib. xii. c. 1.

Municipium, in the dark ages, was generally thus understood. The only sense of it by Du Cange is, castrum, castellum muris cinctum.

A Pele, according to the proper sense of the term, was distinguished from a Castle, the former being wholly of earth. Such is the account given by Lesly, when describing the manners of the Scots Borderers. "They give themselves little concern," he says, "though their buildings, which are but huts and cottages, be burnt. For they construct for themselves stronger towers, of a pyramidal form, which they call Pailes, entirely of earth, which can neither be burnt nor overthrown, without great exertion on the part of the assailants." De Orig. Scot. p. 57—58. Aedificia, &c.

L.B. Pela is used in ancient MSS. for a tower or castle. Thus, in a charter of Henry IV. of England, A. 1399, it is said, "De gratia nostra speciali et ex certa scientia nostra, dedimus et concessimus eidem Comiti Northumbriae insulam, Castrum, Pelam et dominium de Man.—Castrum, Pelam et dominium predicta una cum regaliis." Rymer. Foed. Tom. viii. p. 95. ap. Du Cange.

Pelum is used in the same sense, in a charter of Edward III. concerning Scotland. "Quod custodes omnium aliorum castrorum, Pelorum et fortalitorum, in dicta terra Scotiae, et alii in eis ad fidem nostram commorantes, eadem castra, Pela et fortalitia libere et absque perturbatione qualibet exire." Rymer. Foed. Tom. iv. p. 686. Du Cange seems to think that this is originally the E. word pile. If so, we must trace it to A.S. pil, moles, cumulus, acervus. Bullet, however, gives pill as a Celtic word, signifying a castle, a fortress.

PELEY-WERSH, adj. Sickly. From Peelie and Wersh. S.

PELL, s. A soft, lazy, lumpish person, S.B. often conjoined with an adj.; as, lazy pell, nasty pell, Ang.

Perhaps from Teut. pelle, a husk, as the E. word slough is sometimes used S. as a reproachful term in a similar sense.

PELL, s. Buttermilk very much soured. S.

To PELL a dead candle. V. PALE, v. S.

PELLACK, PELLOCK, s. A porpoise. See Sup.

"There are likewise a great number of little whales, which sweep through these isles, which they call spout-whales, or pellacks;—and they tell us it is dangerous for boats to fall in among them, lest they be overturned by them." Brand's Descr. Orkn. p. 48.

This seems to be the palach of Sibb., now called pellock, S. the porpoise or sea-hog, Delphinus phocaena, Linn.

"A species of sea animals, most destructive of the salmon, are almost every summer found in numbers, playing in the Clyde off the Castle. These are called buckers, pellocks, or porpoises." P. Dunbarton, Statist. Acc. iv. 22. V. BUCKER.

"This firth [of Forth] is rycht plentuous of coclis, osteris, muschellis, selch, pellok, mereswyne, & quhalis." Bellend. Descr. Alb. c. 9.

Here he does not adhere to the Lat. of Boece. He distinguishes the pellock from the mereswyne, or what we now call the porpoise, because, in his time, the latter name seems to have been confined to the Dolphin. V. MERESWYNE.

Gael. pelog, id.

PELL-CLAY, s. Pure and tough clay. V. BALL-CLAY. S.

PELLET, s. The skin of a sheep without the wool. S.

PELLOCK, s. A ball; a bullet. See Sup.

Pellokis paisand to pase,

Gapand gunnys of brase,

Grundin ganyeis thair wase,

That maid ful gret dyn. Gawan and Gol. ii. 12.

i. e. "weighty bullets." It occurs also, Acts, Ja. V. 1540. c. 73. V. CALMES.

Corrupted from Fr. pelote, pelotte, a ball, C.B. pel, id.

PELLOTIS, s. pl.

Veneriall pastoris in vomiting thair faith,—

Filling thair purses with the spirituall grathe,

Plucking the pellotis or ever the scheip be slane.

Legend, Bp. St. Androis, Poems Sixteenth Cent. ii. 303.

This must mean skins; E. pelt, a skin; Fr. pellet-ier, a skinner.

PELONIE, s. A sort of dress. V. POLONIE. S.

PELOUR, PEILOUR, s. A thief.

Be I ane Lord, and not lord-lyk,
Than every pelour and purs-pyk
Sayis, Land war bettir warit on me.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 62. st. 3.

Pyloure, Pillour, O.E.

Without pitie, pyloure, pore men thou robbedst,
And bar hyr bras at thy backe, to Calleis to selle.

P. Ploughman, Fol. 14. b.

i. e. Carried their money to Calais, to dispose of it there.

Chaucer pillour, id. and pille, to rob; pylle, Gower, Conf. Fol. 60. b.; Fr. pilleur, a ravager, pill-er, to rob, to plunder. Hence E. pillage. Lat. pil-are, expil-are, compil-are, id. Pilare et compilare, qui Graece originis... Graeci enim fures piletas. This, from Du Cange, in Dict. Trev. is ascribed to Festus. But it is given as the language of Paulus Diaconus, Auctor. Lat. Ling. p. 367. 51.

PELT, s. A term of reproach.

The cuff is well wared that twa hame brings;

This proverb, foul Pelt, to thee is applyit:

First spyder of spite, thou spews out springs.

Montgomerie, Watson's Coll. iii. 12.

This may be equivalent to "foul skin." It may, however, be traced to Su.G. pilt, Isl. piltt-ur, a boy; whence pilt-skapr, loose morals, nequities; because, according to Ihre, youth is more prone to wickedness.

PELTIS HOYLL. A term of reproach for a female. S.

PELTIN-POCK, s. V. PAIKIE, s. 1.

PELTRY, PALTRIE, s. Vile trash; a term of contempt applied to any thing, S.

Sic peltrie was nevir sene. Spec. Godly Sangs. p. 7.

"Gif a man's heart be set vpon the geare of this warld, vpon the paltrie that is in it, greedines commandeth that man, as ordinarlie, and mair constantlie, nor any maister is able to command his seruand." Bruce's Eleven Sermon. Sign. Y. 4. a.

"Away with these fantasticke reuelations of the Anabaptistes.—The Spirite of Jesus shall abhorre that trashe and peltrie." Rollocke on the Passion, p. 418.

Su.G. paltor, old rags. This Ihere derives from palt, a shirt or smock. But Teut. palt, a fragment, is preferable. Hence Su.G. palt-byke, a beggar, Ital. paltone, paltonniere, Fr. pautonnier, id. and perhaps palleteaux, pieces of cloth for mending an old garment; Rom. de la Rose. This, or Teut. pelterije, pelles, is a more natural origin for E. paltry, mean, than poltron, from which Dr. Johns. derives it.

PELURE, PILLOUR, s. Costly fur.

This Jhon the Ballyol dyspoyld he

Of all hys robys of ryaltè.

The pelure thai tuk off hys tabart,

(Twme Tabart he wes callyt eftyrwart)

And all othire insyngnys,

That fel to kyngis on ony wys,

Bathe scepter, swerd, crowne, and ryng.

Wyntown, viii. 12. 19.

Her hode of a herde huwe, that her hede hedes,

Of pillour, of palwerk, of perre to pay.

Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. i. 2.

Langland uses pelure, evidently in the same sense.

I loked on my lefte halfe, as the lady me taught,

And was ware of a woman, worthelich clothed,

Purfiled with pelure, the finest vpon erthe.

P. Ploughman, Fol. 8. a.

Shal no sergeant for his seruice, wear no silke howne

Ne no Pelure in his cloke, for pleadyng at the barre.

Ibid. Fol. 16. a.

"Fr. pelure, peeling, paring," Gl. Wynt. This can scarcely be the origin. Pelurae occurs, Fleta, L. 2. c. 14.

P E N

rendered pelles by Du Cange. The word may be from L.B. pelipar-ius, peliper-ius, a currier, a preparer of skins, p being changed to v, as in the O.E. v. ipelved.

Har manteles wer of grene felwet,
Ybordured with gold, ryght well ysette,
Ipelved with grys and gro.

Launfal, Ritson's E. M. Rom. i. 180.

Launfal yn purple gan hym schrede,
Ipelved with whyt ermyne. Ibid. p. 187.

It must be observed, however, that Teut. palure, which so nearly resembles our word, is used with greater latitude; insigne gestamen. Kilian mentions liureye, livery, nota centurialis, as synon. Alem. pellele, by some rendered pelliculae, is by others expl. texta pretiosa, from Goth. pell, id. our pall. Schilter says; Dicitur etiam pfeler, pfeller. In Voc. Lat. Germ. eoccinus, rot pfeller.

PEN, s. A peak or conical top, generally in a range of hills; as, Eltrick-Pen, Penchrise-pen, &c. S.

PEN, s. Part of a stem of colewort. S.

PEN, s. The dung of fowls. V. HEN-PEN. S.

PEN, s. Expl. "an old saucy man with a sharp nose." S.

To PEN, v. n. To take snuff with a quill, or something made in a similar form. S.

PEN, PENN, s. A small conduit; a sewer. S.

PENCEFU' PENSEFU', adj. Proud; self-conceited. S.

PENCH, PENCHE, s. 1. Belly; paunch.

Swa live thir lyars, and thair lawis allane,
Packand thair penche lyk Epicurianis.

*Legend, Bp. St. Androis, Poems
Sixteenth Cent. ii. 307.*

2. PENCHES, pl. the common name for tripe, or the entrails of an animal, S.

PEND, s. 1. An arch; any kind of vault; as the arch of a bridge; a covered gateway, S. See Sup.

—— Thai yon image framit,
Aboon the pend quhilk I defend.——

Minstrelsy, Border, iii. 360.

2. It is used to denote the arch of heaven.

Begaried is the sapphire pend
With sprains of skarlet hew,
And precious from end to end,
Damasked white and blew.

Hume, Chron, S.P. iii. 387.

The word has no affinity with Gael. pen, a high mountain. It is evidently borrowed from the manner in which arches are built, the stones being in a pendent form; Lat. pend-ere; Fr. pend-re.

PEND-STANE, s. A stone for building an arch, as contradistinguished from one used for a wall. S.

PENDED, PENDIT, part. pa. Arched. S.

PENDE, s. A pendant. See Sup.

The fey girdil hie sette did appere,
With stuthis knaw and pendes schinand clere.

Doug. Virgil, 447, 37.

Bulla, Virg. The term used by Doug. refers to the convex or arched form of the Roman bullae. Speaking of pendants, Rudd. says, "S. we call them pendles." The latter is merely Fr. pendille, "a thing that hangs danglely," Cotgr.

PENDICE, PENDACE of a buckle, that part of it which receives and fastens the one latchet, before the shoe be straitened by means of the other, S. q. something that hangs from the buckle. See Sup.

PENDICLE, s. A pendant; L.B. pendiculum.

"But that which is the great remora to all matters is the head of Strafford: as for poor Canterbury, he is so contemptible that all casts him out of their thoughts, as a pendicle at the Lieutenant's ear." Baillie's Lett. i. 251.

P E N

PENDICLE, s. 1. A small piece of ground, either depending on a larger farm, or let separately by the owner, S. See Sup.

"Most of the farms have cottages, whence they obtain assistance in hay-time and harvest. Besides these, there are many pendicles (praediola) partly let off the farms, and partly let immediately by the proprietor." P. Kettle, Fife, Statist. Acc. i. 379.

2. Applied to one church dependent on another.

"It was called in ancient times the parsonage of Stobo. —It was a parsonage, having four churches belonging to it, which were called the Pendicles of Stobo, viz. the church of Dawick," &c. P. Stobo, Tweedd. Statist. Acc. iii. 330.

3. An appendage; one thing attached to another; a privilege connected with any office or dignity. 4. Any form in law depending on, or resulting from, another. S.

The word evidently denotes any thing depending on another. L.B. pendicularis is used in the second sense. "Intra Ecclesiam S. Francisci in editiori loco fabricata est Pendicularis capella." V. S. Stanisl. ap. Du Cange.

PENDICLER, s. An inferior tenant, S.

"The parish also abounded with pendiclors, or inferior tenants. These, therefore, with the cottagers, together with a considerable number of families employed in the coal-mines,—contributed much to the multiplication of the inhabitants." P. Denino, Fife, Statist. Acc. xi. 357. N.

PENDLE, PENDULE, s. A pendant; an earring. S.

To PENE, PEYNE, POYNE, PYNE, v. a. To beat out; to forge.

Amang thame self thay grisly smethis grete
With mekle force did forge, peyne, and bete.

Doug. Virgil, 258, 24.

—— The sikkir helmes penys and forgis out.

Ibid. 230, 21.

The hidduous Ciclopes forgit furth and draue,—
The glowand irne to wel and poyme anone.

Ibid. 257, 25.

Sum pynis furth ane pan boddum to prent fals plakkis.
Ibid. 238, b. 50.

Rudd. derives this word from Fr. pen-er, to toil, or poinconn-er, to prick or stamp with puncheons, &c. But it is undoubtedly allied to Su.G. paen-a, to extend, paena ut en ting, rem aliquam in latum deducere; Ihre. This learned writer observes, that some view this as the root of panna, a term used to denote a variety of things which are concave in their form. Verelius mentions Isl. paen-a, as signifying to strike with a hammer; paen-at, that which is thus struck; pentar-ar, those who beat metals into thin plates, as coppersmiths, those who work in the mint, &c. Lundius very naturally derives Germ. paening, pfenn-ig, a penny, from Isl. paen-a, cudere, signare; to strike. Not. ad Verel. Ind. p. 1.

PENEKIS, s. pl. Meaning doubtful. S.

PENETRIVE, adj. Penetrative. S.

PEN-FAULD, s. The close or yard near a farmer's house for holding his cattle; a pin-fold, E. S.

PEN-GUN, s. A quill open at each end, used as an offensive weapon by children; a pop-gun. S.

To CRACK LIKE A PEN-GUN. To be very loquacious. S.

PENHEAD, s. The upper part of a mill-lead, where the water is carried off from the dam to the mill, S.

"Depones, That they take in water from the river Don, at the intake or penhead of the meal-mill, for their whole operations of bleaching and driving their machinery." State, Fraser of Fraserfield, &c. 1805, p. 229.

"That the mill-lead of said field may be about four feet broad near to the penhead, and about a foot of water deep at that place in general." Ibid. p. 235.

P E N

A.S. penn-an, pynd-an, includere, to enclose. Hence E. pen, pin-fold, according to Seren. from Su.G. pinne, clavus ligneus; q. to hedge in with pins of wood.

PENKLE, s. A rag; a fragment. S.

PENNED, part. pa. Arched; more properly pended. S.

PENNER, PENNAR, s. A pen case. S.

To PENNY, v. n. To fare, S.B.

And there she gets them black as ony slae.

On them she penny'd well, and starker grew,

And gather'd strength her journey to pursue.

Ross's Helenore, p. 58.

This v. seems formed from the idea of the necessity of money in purchasing provisions, which are q. the return for one's penny.

PENNIE-BRYDAL, PENNY-WEDDING, s. A wedding at which the guests contribute money for their entertainment, S.

"The General Assemblie, considering the great profanitie and severall abuses which usually fal forth at Pennie-Brydals, proving fruitful seminaries of all lasciviousnesse and debauserie, as well by the excessive number of people convened thereto, as by the extortion of them therein, and licentiousnesse thereat,—ordain every Presbyterie in this kingdom, to take such special care for restraining these abuses—as they shall think fit in their severall bounds respectivé." Act, Gen. Assembly, 13. Feb. 1645.

"A penny-wedding is when the expence of the marriage entertainment is not defrayed by the young couple, or their relations, but by a club among the guests. Two hundred people, of both sexes, will sometimes be convened on an occasion of this kind." P. Drainy, Elgin, Statist. Acc. iv. 86. N.

"One, two, and even three hundred would have convened on these occasions, to make merry at their own expence for two or more days. This scene of feasting, drinking, dancing, wooing, fighting, &c. was always enjoyed with the highest relish." P. Montquhitter, Aberd. Statist. Acc. xxi. 146.

One great absurdity, and natural source of disorder at such meetings, is the welcome given, in various quarters at least, to every one who chooses to attend the wedding, if willing to pay his share, although not invited, and a stranger to the whole company.

We learn from Loccenius, that penny-bridals are common in Sweden. The custom has probably existed from an early period. "In nonnullis locis sumtus nuptialis ab invitatis hospitibus in cranio vel collectis solent adjuvari ac sublevari: quum plures unum facilius, quam unus et solus seipsum impensis majori instruere possit." Antiq. Sueo-Goth. p. 109.

It is probably a relique of the ancient custom of friends conferring gifts on the married pair on the morning after marriage. Some, by the savings of such a wedding, avowedly gain as much as to form a small stock; others scorn the idea of a wedding of this kind, because, as they say, "they will not begin the world with begging."

PENNY-DOG, s. A dog that constantly follows his master, S.

His wink to me hath been a law;

He haunts me like a penny-dog;

Of him I stand far greater awe,

Than pupil does of pedagogue.

Watson's Coll. i. 11.

It might be supposed that this term denoted a dog of the meanest species, q. one that might be bought for a penny, as the metaph. borrowed from it is always used in relation to a contemptible character, one who implicitly follows another. But this, although the general pronunciation, is not universal. In Ang. paradog is used in the same sense.

P E N

PENNY-MAILL, s. 1. Rent paid in money, as distinguished from what is paid in kind. See Sup.

"The uther nine parts thereof sall pertaine to our Soveraine Lorde: and this to be nocht onelie of the penny-maill, but of all uther dewties, that suld be payed for teind and stock." Acts, Ja. VI. 1587. c. 29. Murray.

2. A small sum paid to a proprietor of land, as an acknowledgment of superiority, rather than as an equivalent.

It is accordingly contrasted with deir ferme, or high rent.

Sum with deir ferme ar hirreit haill,

That wount to pay bot penny maill.

Maitland Poems, p. 321.

From Penny, used in the sense of money, and Mail, q. v.

PENNYSTONE, PENNY-STONE, s. A quoit made of stone; or a flat stone used instead of a quoit. To play at the pennystone, to play with quoits of this kind, a common game in the country, S.

"Most of the antient sports of the Highlanders, such as archery, hunting, fowling, and fishing, are now disused; those retained are;—throwing the penny-stone, which answer [s] to our coits: the shinty, or the striking of a ball of wood," &c. Pennant's Tour in S. 1769. p. 214.

Hence a penny-stane cast, the distance to which a stone quoit may be thrown.

Mycht nane behind his falowis be

A pennystone cast, na he in hy

Wes dede, or tane deliuerly.

Barbour, xiii. 581. MS.

———— The way

Wes not a pennystone cast of breid.

Ibid. xvi. 383. MS.

Qu. because it was usual to play for money? Or, as allied to Sw. pen-a, utpen-a, to flatten, because only flat stones can be used?

PENNY-WHEEP, PENNY-WHIP, s. Small beer, Aberd. Gl. Shirr. perhaps from its briskness, or flying off quickly. V. WHIP. See Sup.

PENNY-WIDDIE, s. V. PIN-THE-WIDDIE.

PENNY, s. An indefinite designation of money without respect to its relative value; a coin. S.

To MAK PENNY of a thing. To convert any thing into money by the sale of it. S.

PENNY-FEE, s. Wages paid in money. S.

PENNY-FRIEN', s. A deceitful interested friend. S.

PENNIE BLAINCH. 1. A phrase apparently denoting the payment of a silver penny as quitrent.

2. Afterwards transferred to a particular mode of holding lands. V. BLANCHE. S.

PENNY-MAISTER, s. A term once used for the treasurer of a town, society, or corporation; now Box-master. S.

PENNY-PIG, s. A piece of crockery used by children for collecting money, which, from the construction of the pig, could not be got at without breaking it. S.

PENNY SILLER, s. An indefinite quantity of money. S.

PENNY UTOLE. In law deeds, the symbol used for the infestment or resignation of an annual rent. S.

PENNIRTT, s. A pence; generally made of tin. S.

PENNON, s. A pendant; a small banner.

Thar speris, pennonys, and thair scheldis,

Off lycht enlumynyt all the feldis.

Barbour, viii. 227. MS.

P E N

"The pennon was the proper ensign of a bachelor or simple knight. Du Fresne shews that even the esquires might bear pennons, provided they could bring a sufficient suite of vassals into the field." Grose's Milit. Antiq. i. 179. N.

"The pennon was in figure and size like a banner, with the addition of a triangular point.—By the cutting off of this point, on the performance of any gallant action by the knight and his followers, the pennon was converted into a banner; whereby the knight was raised to the degree of a banneret." Ibid. ii. 52.

This I cannot view as a corr. of pendant, although penant E. is also used, but as the same with O.Fr. pennon. This word was used in the first age of Fr. poetry to denote a feather, or any thing similar, fixed to the end of an arrow. Gl. Romm. de la Rose. It seems to be from Alem. fan, fanen, fanden, fanon, vexillum, whence Fr. gonfanon, Alem. chundfanon, from chund, kund, a public indication, and fanon, the instrument by which it is made. V. Schilter, p. 77. Banner has, according to this learned writer, the same origin with fanon; ban, fan, van, being promiscuously used in the sense of fascia.

To PENS, v. n. To think. V. PANCE.

PENSEIL, PINSEL, s. A small streamer borne in battle.

Baneris rycht fayrly flawmand,
And penselys to the wynd wawand,
Swa fele thar war off ser quentiss,
That it war gret slycht to diuise.

Pinsel, Doug.

Barbour, xi. 193. MS.

Mr. Pinkerton describes these as "small pennons with which the spears of knights were ornamented." But we learn from Grose, that "the pensil was a small streamer fixed to the end of a lance, and was adorned with the coat armour of the esquire by whom it was carried, and served to point him out in the day of battle." Milit. Antiq. ii. 53. The pennon was worn by a knight bachelor. V. PENNON.

This word is also used in O.E.

Mekill pride was thare in prese,
Both on pencell and on plate.

Minot's Poems, p. 28.

Rudd. deduces it from Fr. pennonceau, penoncel, a flag, a streamer. Some write pignonciel. Du Cange mentions L.B. penicell-us, penuncell-us, penonsell-us, as dimin. from pennon.

PENSY, PENSIE, adj. 1. Having a mixture of self-conceit and affectation in one's appearance, S.

Furth started neist a pensy blade,
And out a maiden took;
They said that he was Faikland bred,
And danced by the book.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 263.

A pensy ant, right trig and clean,
Came ae day whidding o'er the green. Ibid. ii. 476.

2. Expl. "spruce; clean and neat in one's dress and appearance, as rich people in low life are expected to be."

There, couthie, and pensie, and sicker;
Wonn'd honest young Hab o' the Heuch.

Jamieson's Popular Ball. i. 292.

Probably from Fr. pens-er, to think, pensif, "thinking of," Cotgr., because a person of this description seems to think much of himself. As, however, the term is applied to one who walks in a stiff, erect, or stately manner, it may be from Fr. pancu, gorbellied, great-paunched, used obliquely. See Sup.

PENSYLIE, adv. In a self-important manner, S.

He kames his hair indeed, and gaes right snug,
With ribbon knots at his blue bonnet lug,

P E R

Whilk pensylie he wears a thought a-jee.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 76.

PENSIENESS, s. Self-conceitedness and affectation. S.

PENTEISSIS s. pl. Perhaps corr. of penthouses. S.

PENTHLAND, s. The name given to the middle part of Scotland, especially to that now called Lothian.

"The secound and myd part (becaus it was inhabit be Pichtis) wes namit Penthland." Bellend. Descr. Alb. c. 3. Elsewhere he says, that Forth is "ane arme of the see diuyding Pentland fra Fiffe." Cron. B. iv. c. 5.

This is undoubtedly a corr. of Pichtland, or Petland, in the same manner as the designation of Pichtland Firth has been changed to Pentland. For the oldest Norwegian writers call this Petlandz-fiaerd; Heimskringla, II. 50, Ed. Peringskiöld.

To PENTY, v. a. To fillip, S.

Or shall I douk the deepest sea
And coral pou for beads to thee;
Penty the pope upon the nose?

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 550.

As Fr. poincte, point, denotes the tip of any thing, whence the phrase, point du nez, the tip of the nose; the v. poinct-er, pointer, is expl. blessor, porter des coupes de la pointe; Dict. Trev. I have observed nothing else that has any resemblance.

PENTY, PENTIE, s. A fillip, (talitrum,) S.

PEP, s. A cherry-stone. V. PAIP.

PEPOCH, s. The store of cherry-stones from which the castles of peps are supplied; called also Feeddow. S. PEPE, s. 1. The chirp of a bird, S.

Now, swete bird, say ones to me pepe,
I dee for wo; me think thou gynis slepe.

King's Quair, ii. 38.

He dares na play peep, a S. prov. phrase; He dares not mutter.

2. The act of speaking with a shrill small voice, S. peep. The tothir ansueris with ane piteous pepe.

Doug. Virgil, 175, 30.

This implies the idea of a plaintive voice. Thus the v. peep, although properly an E. one, is used, in a proverbial phrase, in a peculiar sense; Ye're no sae puir as ye peep, Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 85. You complain more of poverty than your situation warrants.

Teut. piep-en, Su.G. pip-a, Fr. pep-ier, Lat. pip-ire.

To PEPPEN, v. a. To bring up young persons or beasts so delicately, as to render them unfit for the ordinary duties of life. S.

PEPPER-CURNE, s. A handmill used for grinding pepper. Peppercurns, pl. A simple wooden machine used for the same purpose. S.

PEPPER-DULSE, s. Jagged fucus, S. Fucus pinna-tifidus, Linn. V. DULSE.

To PER, v. n. To appear.

The Ingliss wach that nycht had beyne on steir,
Drew to thair ost rycht as the day can per.

Wallace, vi. 541. MS.

Pere, Chaucer, id. E. peer is used as signifying, just to come in sight, contr. from appear.

PERALIN, PERALING, s. Perhaps a kind of dress. S.

PERANTER, adv. Peradventure, contr. from Fr. par aventure.

Howbeid ane hundreth standis heirby,
Peranter ar as gauckit fulis as I.

Lyndsay, S.P.R. ii. 93.

To PERBRAIK, PERBREK, v. a. To break; to shatter.

Perbrekit schyppis bot cabillis thare mycht ryde,
Nane anker nedis make thame arreist nor bide.

Doug. Virgil, 18, 22.

P E R

Rudd. views it as perhaps from Fr. pour, or Hisp. para, q. profractis, or semifracta. It is more natural to view this term as formed directly in imitation of Lat. perfractus, thoroughly broken. PARBREAK, q. v. is used in a different sense.

PERCEPTIONE, s. The act of gathering or receiving rents. S.

PERCONNON, PERCUNNANCE, s. Expl. condition, proviso, S.B.

But upon this perconnon I agree,
To lat you gae, that Lindy marry me.

Ross's Helenore, p. 51.

Sibb. strangely views these terms as connected with park, to perch. But they seem compounded of Fr. par, by, and convine, convenance, both used in the sense of condition. V. CONUYNE.

PERCUDO, s. Some kind of precious stone.

Vpon thair brest bravest of all,
Were precious pearls of the Eist;—
Thair micht ye se, mangs moné mo,
The Topaz and the Percudo.

Burel, Watson's Coll. ii. 11.

I find no similar word. The first syllable may be from Fr. pietre, a stone. Cueut signifies a whetstone.

PERDE', adv. Verily; truly.

The samyn wise did grete Elymus perde',
Richt so himself King Acestes the auld.

Doug. Virgil, 129, 48.

"From the Fr. pardieu, pardieu, per Deum, per Deos. Though this be the true etymon of the word, yet it is not to be thought that our religious Prelate, by using it, swears or prophanes the name of God: For the word had been long before received by the common people, who either not knowing, or not adverting to the primary signification of it, meant no more by it but truly, surely, or such like," &c. Rudd.

But the "religious Prelate" certainly was better instructed in the meaning of words than the common people. Tyrwhitt, without ceremony, calls it an oath.

PERDEWS, s. pl. Soldiers appointed to the forlorn hope.

"The king presented him battle, waiting in vain a whole day, to see if he might be provoked to come forth: and for that effect sent a number of infantry perdews to his trenches to bring on the skirmish." Melvil's Mem. p. 15.

Fr. enfants perdus, "the forlorn hope of a camp, commonly gentlemen of companies," Cotgr.

PERDUE, adj. Driven to the last extremity, so as to use violent means. S.

PERDUELLION, s. A designation for treason. S.

PERDURABIL, adv. Lasting.

—"And als it var verray necessair that Kyng Darius furnest the Atheniens vitht sa mekil money as may resist the Lacedemoniens, and that sal gar al the cuntrey of Greice hef perdurabil veyr amang them selvis." Compl. S. p. 137.

Fr. perdurable, from Lat. perdur-o.

To PERE, v. a. To pour.

The fat olye did he yet and pere
Apoun the entrellis to mak thaym birne clere.

Doug. Virgil, 172, 2.

"But pour, and pere, S., differ in this, that we commonly use pour, when greater quantities issue forth; and pere, when the liquor trickles down by drops, or as it were small threads, when there is little remaining in the vessel." Rudd.

Pere, I suspect, however, is merely a provinc. pron. of the E. word, although used in a peculiar sense.

PERELT, adj. Paralytic; affected with palsy. S.

PEREMPOR, PEREMPER, adj. Precise; very nice. S.

P E R

PEREMPTORS, s. pl. "He's ay upon his peremptors," he is always so very precise or nice. S.

PEREMPTOUR, s. Apparently used in the sense of an allegation, for the purpose of defence. S.

PERFAY, adv. Verily; an asseveration common both with S. and O.E. writers; properly, an oath, although Rudd. thinks that it admits of the same apology with perde'.

I persais, Syr Persoun, thy purpois perfay,
Quod he, and drew me doun derne in delf by ane dyke. Doug. Virgil, Prol. 239, b. 11.

Fr. par foy, Lat. per fidem.

PERFITE, adj. 1. Perfect.

For vertew is a thing sa precious,—
It makis folk perfite and glorious.

Palice of Honour, iii. 80.

2. The term is still used to denote one who is exact in doing any work, or who does it neatly, S. The accent is on the last syllable.

PERFYTLIE, adv. Perfectly.

—My sonne, I hartlie the exhort:
Perfytelie print in thy remembrance
Of this inconstant warld the variance.—

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592. p. 119.

PERFITENESS, s. Exactness; neatness, S.

"Use makes perfyttness;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 79.

To PERFYTE, v. a. To finish; to bring to perfection. S.

PERFYTIT, part. adj. Perfect; complete. S.

PERFORCE, s. The name given to a particular officer in a regiment; probably a drum-major. S.

To PERFURNIS, PERFURMEIS, v. a. To perform; to accomplish.

All that thou aucht to Deiphobus, ilk dele
Thou hast perfurnist wourthely and wele.

Doug. Virgil, 181, 50.

Quhen thay had done perfurmeis his intents,
In danting wrangous pepill schamefullie:
He sufferit thame be scurgit cruellie.

Fr. parfourn-ir, id. Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592. p. 120.

PERGADDAS, s. A heavy fall or blow. S.

PERILS, PERLS, s. An involuntary shaking of the head or limbs in consequence of a paralytic affection. S.

PERITE, adj. Skilled. S.

PERJINK, PERJINCT, adj. 1. Exact; precise; minutely accurate, S. prejink, Fife. See Sup.

2. Trim, so as to appear finical, S.

Qu. parjoinct, from Fr. par and joinct, or Lat. per and junct-us, accurately joined? In the latter sense, it would seem more allied to Fr. accoinct, neat, spruce, tricked up.

PERK, s. 1. A pole; a perch. 2. A rope extended for holding any thing in a house. S.

PERLASY, s. The palsy.

Heidwerk, Hoist, and Perlasy, maid grit pay;
And murmours me with mony speir and targe.

King Hart, ii. 57.

Fr. paralysie, Lat. paralysis, Alem. perlin, perli, Schilter.

PERLASSENT, part. pr. Parleying; in parley. S.

PERLIE, s. The little finger, Loth. q. peerie, little, Orkn. (probably an old Pictish word) and lith, joint.

PERMUSTED, part. adj. Scented; perfumed.

No sweet permusted shambo leathers.

V. DRAP-DE-BERRY.

Watson's Coll. i. 28.

Fr. par, through, and musqué, scented with musk. V. MUIST.

P E R

PERNICKITIE, adj. Precise in trifles; applied also to dress, denoting trimness, S. perjink, synon.

Perhaps from Fr. par, through, in composition often signifying, thoroughly, and niquet, a trifle, or nigaud-er, to trifle; whence nigaud, a fop, a trifling fellow.

PERNSKYLE of skinnis. A certain number of skins. S.

PERONAL, s. A girl; a young woman, Maitl. Poems. O. Fr. peronnelle.

PERPEN, s. A partition. V. PARPANE.

PERPETUANA, s. A kind of woollen cloth. S.

PERPLE, s. A wooden partition. S.

PERPLIN, s. A wall made of cat and clay, between the kitchen and the spence of a cottage. S.

PERQUER, PERQUEIR, PERQUIRE, adv. 1. Exactly; accurately. "He said his lesson perqueir," S. See S.

Na he, that ay hass levyt fre,
May nocht knaw weill the propyrté,
The angyr, na the wrechyt dome,
That is cowplyt to foule thyrdome.
Bot gyff he had assayit it,
Than all perquer he suld it wyt.

Barbour, i. 238. MS.

Had I levit bot half an yeir,
I sould haif leird yow craftis perqueir,
To begyle wyffe and man. Lyndsay, S.P.R. ii. 190.

"A number of othir passages I had perquire: so I was heard with very great applause, and ere even was to be as famous a man as was in all the town." Baillie's Lett. i. 17.

2. Also used in an improper sense, as signifying, distinctly in respect of place, or separately.

"Mr. Guthrie is still in contest with the people of Stirling, but in more vexation than formerly; for his colleague Mr. Matthias Simpson is as heady and bold a man as himself, and has good hearing with the English, so that he is like to get the stipend, and Mr. Rule to live perquire." Baillie's Lett. ii. 408.

Mr. Ellis derives it from Fr. par coeur. Spec. i. 235. We indeed say that one has a thing by heart, when he can repeat it from memory. But it is doubtful whether we should not view it as signifying by book, q. per quair. The following passage, quoted by Mr. Pinkerton, seems to confirm this etymon.

The blak bybill pronounce I sall perqueir.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 207.

i. e. Repeat verbatim, or as it is found in the book. V.

QUAIR.

PERQUEIR, PERQUIRE, adj. Accurate; exact, S.B.

At threeps I am na sae perquire,
Nor auld-farren as he,
But at banes-braken, it's well kent,
He has na maughts like me.

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 2.

PERRAKIT, s. A sagacious, talkative, or active child. S.

PERRE, s. Precious stones. Sibb. views this as signifying apparel, and formed from it by abbreviation.

Her hode of a herde huwe, that her bede hedes,
Of pillour, of palwerk, of perre to pay.

Sir Gawain and Sir Gal, i. 2.

Her perre was praysed, with prise men of might.

Ibid. ii. 3.

Bullet says that Fr. per was anciently used for pierre. This sense is confirmed by the mention afterwards made of saffres and scladynes, or sapphires and chalcedonies. Chaucer, pierrie, jewels.

"She—had on a ryche collar of pyerrery.—His churte [shirt] was bordered of fyne pierrery and pearles." Marriage of Ja. IV. and Margaret of England, Leland's Collect. iv. 300.

P E S

PERSHITTIE, adj. Precise; prim; stiff in trifling matters, S. See Sup.

The only word I have met with, which has any resemblance, either in form or signification, is O.E. pergitted, signifying, perhaps, tricked up.

"The court which was seeled, pergitted, sumptuously decked and prepared for dauncing, leaping, and other pastyme, to make a pleasant and ioyful mariage, was now converted to another vse; namely, to keepe the kinges deade bodie." Ramus's Commentaries Civil Warres of France, i. 35.

Can it be corr. from Fr. projecté, also pourjecté, drawn, delineated, portrayed, as denoting a person who adheres rigidly to his own plan?

PERSYALL. Persyall gilt, parcel gilt. S.

PERSIL, s. Parsley, an herb, S. Apium petroselinum, Linn. Fr. id. See Sup.

PERSONARIS, s. pl. Conjoint possessors. S.

PERTICIANE, s. A practitioner; an adept. S.

PERTINER, s. A partner in any undertaking or business. S.

PERTRIK, s. A partridge. V. PARTRIK.

To PERTROUBIL, v. a. To trouble or vex very much; Fr. partroubler.

—Wod wraith sche suld pertroubil al the toun.

Doug. Virgil, 218, 42.

PERTRUBLANCE, s. Great vexation; perturbation.

At first the schaddois of the pertrublance
Was dryue away, and his remembrance
The licht of ressoun has recouerit agane.

Doug. Virgil, 435, 32.

PESANE, PISSAND, PYSSEN, s. A gorget, or armour for the neck.

"And vtheris simpillar of x. pund of rent,—haue hat, gorget, and a pesane with wambrasseiris and reirbrasseiris." Acts, Ja. I. 1429, c. 134. Edit. 1566, c. 120, Murray.

The thrid he straik through his pissand of maile,
The crag in twa, no weidis mycht him wail.

Peasant, Edit. 1648.

Wallace, ii. 112. MS.

It occurs in O.E.

Lybaeus hytte Lambard yn the launcer
Of hys helm so bryght;

That pysane, aventayle, and gorgere

Fell ynto the feld fer. Lybaeus, E. M. Rom. ii. 69.

As this piece of armour in part defended the breast, it might seem to be derived from O. Fr. peis, pis, id. corr. from Lat. pectus. But from all the traces we can observe of this word, it will scarcely admit of this derivation.

In an inventory of the armour of Louis the Great of France, A. 1316, mention is made of 3 coleretes Pizaines de Jazeran, i. e. three pesane collars of the kind of mail called Jazerant. Grose, Milit. Hist. ii. 246, N.

L.B. pisanum occurs in the letters of Edw. III. of England, A. 1343, ap. Rymer. Foed. Tom. 5, p. 384. Cum triginta paribus plataram, basinetorum Pisanorum cum eorum adventalibus pretii 30 librarum.

Du Cange thinks that the word is probably corr., unless it be a proper name. And indeed, as it is here applied to the bassinet or head-piece, it might seem to refer to some armour then in great estimation, made at Pisa in Italy; as a broadsword of a particular kind has, in latter times, been called a Ferrara, as being made by an Italian of that name. But there is scarcely room for this supposition. For the term appears elsewhere in another form.

Quoddam magnum colerum, vocatum Pusan, de operationibus coronarum et bestiarum, vocatarum Antelopes, confectum, et de albo inamelatum, bestiis illis super terragio viridi positus, &c. Charta, Hen. V. Reg. Angl. Rymer, Tom. ix. p. 405. V. Du Cange, vo. Colerum.

P E T

He expl. L.B. pusa as the same with picta, painted; which idea might correspond to the description here given.
PESS, s. Easter.

— He curst me for my teind;
And haldis me yit undir the same process,
That gart me want my sacrament at Pess.

V. PAYS. Lyndsay, S.P.R. ii. 65.

PESS. The pess, covering for the thigh, Wallace, viii. 265. V. THE.

PESS, s. Pease. S.

PESSE PIE. Apparently a pie baked for Easter. S.

PESSMENTS, s. pl. V. PASMENTS.

To PET, PETTLE, v. a. 1. To fondle; to indulge; to treat as a pet, S. See Sup.

"The tenth command—requireth such a puritie into the heart of man, that it will not onelie haue it to be cleane of grosse euill thoghts fedde and petted with yeelding and consent, but also it requireth that it be free of the least impression of anie euill thought." Z. Boyd's Last Battell, p. 324.

Sae roos'd by ane of well-kend mettle,
Nae sma' did my ambition pettle,
My canker'd critics it will nettle.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 329.

2. To feed delicately; to pamper. S.

As pet, E. denotes "a lamb taken into the house, and brought up by the hand," and S. more generally, any creature that is fondled and much indulged; it is not improbable that it is from Teut. pete, a little god-daughter, also a god-mother; attachments of this kind being often very strong, and productive of great indulgence.

Pet, E. "a slight fit of anger," is by Johns. deduced from Fr. despit. What if it be from Ital. petto, the breast? Aver male al petto, to have a sore breast; tenere una cosa in petto, to keep a thing in one's breast; isfogare il petto, to ease one's mind. To be in the pet, S. may thus signify, to retain something in one's breast; for as we use the phrase, it properly includes the idea of taciturnity and sullenness.

PET, s. A term applied to a good day when it occurs, and the weather is generally bad. S.

To PET, v. n. To take offence; to be in bad humour at any thing; to be in a pet. S.

PETAGOG, s. Pedagogue; tutor. S.

PETCLAYTH, s. V. PAITCLAYTH or PAITLATTIS. S.

PETE-POT, s. A hole out of which peats have been dug, S.

A gredy carle swne eftyr wes
Byrnand in swylk gredynes,
That his plwyrnys hym-self stall,
And hyd thame in a pete-pot all.

Wyntown, viii. 24. 46.

Pot is from Teut. put, lacus, locus palustris; or, as the same with E. pit, from Teut. put, putte, puteus, lacuna, L.B. putt-a. Du Cange, indeed, derives L.B. pet-a, a peat, from Teut. pet vel put, lacus, &c. Sw. paat-a, pron. pot-a, fodere.

PETER'S PLEUGH. The constellation Ursa Major. S.
PETER'S STAFF (St.), Orion's Sword, a constellation.

"Orion's sword they name St. Peter's staff," Rudd. vo. Elwand.

PETH, s. A steep road up a brae or hill; a path on an acclivity, S.

Bot betwix thaim and it thair wass
A craggy bra, strekyt weill lang,

206

P E U

And a gret peth wp for to gang,
Barbour, xviii. 366. MS. Edit. 1620, path.
Himself ascendis the hie band of the hill,
By wentis strate, and passage scharp and wil,
Schapis in our cieté for to cum preuilye.
Tharfor ane prattik of were deuyse wyl I,
And ly at wate in quyet enbusehment,
At athir pethis hede or secret went.

Doug. Virgil, 382, 9.

This seems merely an oblique sense of A.S. paeth, semita, callis, Teut. pad, Germ. pfad, which Wachter deduces from pedd-en, pedibus calcare, a term, he says, of the highest antiquity.

PETHER, s. A pedlar. S.

PETHLINS, adv. By a steep way or Peth. S.

PETYRMES, PETERMAS, s. 1. The day of St. Peter and St. Paul, 29th June. 2. A squabble; properly at a feast or entertainment. S.

PETIT TOES, s. pl. The feet of pigs. S.

PET-LOLL, s. A favourite; a darling. S.

PETMOW, s. Dross of peats. V. PEAT-MOW. S.

PETT, PETTIT, s. The skin of a sheep without the wool. S.

PETTAIL, PITALL, s. The rabble attending an army.

Off fechtand men I trow thai war
xxx thowsand, and sum dele mar;
For owtyn eariage, and pettail,
That yemyt harnayis, and wittail.

Barbour, xi. 238. MS.

Syne all the smale folk and pitall,
He send with harneyss, and with wittail
In till the park, weill fer him fra.

Ibid. ver. 420. MS.; spittal, Edit. Pink.; changed to purail, Edit. 1620.

This is undoubtedly the same with pedaile, O.E.

The maistir of ther pedaile, that kirkes brak & brent,
& abbeis gan assaile, monkes slouh & schent,
Was born in Pikardie, & his name Reyuerere.

R. Brunne, p. 124.

Pitaile also occurs.

—Thare was slayne and wounded sore
Thretty thowsand, trewly tolde;
Of pitaile was thare mekill more.

Minot's Poems, p. 28.

Fr. pitaud, a clown. Pitauz, by corr. for petaux, the peasants who were embodied for going to war. Pictaille, infanterie, milice a pied. Gl. Rom. Rose. They were otherwise called Bidaux; all, according to Menage, from pied, the foot.

PETTICOAT TAILS. A kind of tea-bread baked with butter. S.

PETTE QUARTER. A little quarter of a hundred weight, perhaps twenty-five, instead of twenty-eight pounds. S.

PETTIE-PAN, s. A white-iron mould for pastry. S.

PETTIE-POINT, s. A peculiar sort of sewing stitch. S.

To PETTLE, v. a. To fondle, &c. V. PET, v. S.

PETTLE, s. A ploughstaff. V. PATTLE.

PETTLES, s. pl. The feet. S.

PEUAGE, PEUIS, PEUSCHE, adj. "Peevish; or rather, base, malicious, cowardly. The word peerish among the vulgar of S. is used for niggardly, covetous, in the N. of England for witty, subtle, Ray." Rudd.

For thou sall neuer leis, schortlie I the say,
Be my wappin nor this rycht hand of myne,
Sic ane peusche and eatue saul as thine.

Doug. Virgil, 377, 20.

This ilk Aruns was ful reddy thare,— Lurkand at wate, and spyand round about

P H A

Now his to cum, now that onset but dout,
At euery part this pevess man of were.

Ibid. 392, 40.

Here it evidently means dastardly. Steevens expl. peevish, silly, as used by Shakspeare in Cymbeline. The origin is quite uncertain.

PEUAGELY, adv. Carelessly, in a slovenly manner.

His smottrit habit ouer his schulderis liddir,
Hang peuagely knit with ane knot togidder.

Doug. Virgil, 173, 48.

PEUDENETE, PUDINETE, s. Perhaps a kind of fur. S.

PEUGH, interj. Expressive of contempt. E. Pugh. S.

To PEUGHLE (gutt.), v. n. To attempt any thing in a feeble manner; to do any thing inefficiently. S.

PEUGHLE, s. A stifled cough. S.

PEUGHT, adj. Asthmatic; having great difficulty in breathing. S.

To PEUTER, v. n. To canvass. V. PEUTHER. S.

To PEUTHER, PUTHER, v. n. To canvass; to bustle about assiduously in order to procure votes. S.

To PEUTHER, PUTHER, v. a. He has peuthered Queensferry, and means next to peuther Inverkeithing. S.

PEUTHERING, PEUTERING, s. The act of canvassing. S.

PEUTHERER, PEUDRAR, s. A pewterer; or one who works in pewter. S.

PEW, s. "An imitative word, expressing the plaintive cry of birds."

Birdis with mony pieteous pew,
Effeirtlie in the air they flew.

V. the v. Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 40.

To PLAY PEW, with the negative particle.

He canna play pew, is a phrase still used to denote a great degree of inability, or incapacity for any business, S.; also, He ne'er play'd pew, he did not make the slightest exertion.

Wi' that he never mair play'd pew,

But with a rair,

Away his wretched spirit flew,

It maksnae where. Ramsay's Poems. i. 311.

It is also used differently. It never played pew on him, it made no impression on him whatever. S.

To PEW, PEU, v. n. 1. To emit a mournful sound; a term applied to birds.

We sall gar chekinnis cheip, and gaislingis pew.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 208.

"The chekyns began to pew, quhen the gled quhissillit."

Compl. S. p. 60.

2. It is sometimes used as equivalent to peep, or mutter.

I may not pew, my panis bin sa fell.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 210.

The v. pew might seem allied to Fr. piaill-er, "to cheepe, or cry like a chicke;" Cotgr.

To PEWIL, PEWL, PEUGHLE on, v. n. Used to denote the falling of snow in small particles, without continuation, during a severe frost. S.

PEWTENE, s.

Fals pewtene hes scho playit that sport,
Hes scho me handlit in this sort?

Philotus, S.P.R. iii. 32.

"Whore, Fr. putain," Gl. Sibb. Isl. puta, scortum, meretrix. This is evidently the origin of the Fr. word, as well as of Hisp. puta, id. For it appears in Isl. with a number of derivatives; putuborinn, spurius; putuson, filius spurius; putnahus, meretricum cella; putnamadr, scortator, adulter; Verel. Ind.

PHANEKILL, s. Perhaps a flag. S.

P H R

PHARIS, s.

For your abuse may bee ane brother,
To Pharis als like in similitude, &c.

Spec. Godly Sangs, p. 12.

Not for Pharisees, as Lord Hailes supposes, but Pharaoh's, in the gen., as the strain of the passage shews.

PHEERING, s. The act of turning, or veering. S.

PHESES, s. pl. Traces, or breeching of ordnance. S.

PHILIBEG. V. FILIBEG.

PHINGAR, s. A hanger, or whinger. S.

PHINGRIM, s. The same as Fingrom. V. FINGERIN. S.

PHINOC, s. A species of trout.

"Phinocs are taken here [Fort William] in great numbers, 1500 having been taken at a draught. They come in August, and disappear in November. They are about a foot long, their colour grey, spotted with black, their flesh red; rise eagerly to a fly. The fishermen suppose them to be the young of what they call a great Trout, weighing 30 lb., which I suppose is the Grey." Pennant's Tour in S. 1769, p. 229. V. FINNACK.

PHIOLL, s. "A cupola," Rudd. V. FYELL.

PHISES GAMMIS. Cords joined to the breeching. S.

PHITONES, s. A woman who pretends to foretell events; a Pythoness; a witch. See Sup.

This name is given to the witch of Endor both by Barbour and Douglas.

— As quhylum did the Phitones,

That quhen Saul abaysyt wes

Off the Felystynys mycht,

Raysyt, throw hyr mekill slycht

Samuelis spyrite als tite,

Or in his sted the iwill spyrite.

Barbour, iv. 753. MS.

— The sprete of Samuell, I ges,

Rasit to Kinge Saul was by the Phitones.

Doug. Virgil, Pref. 6. 51.

Phitonesse, a witch, Chaucer.

Phetanissa is used for a witch by R. Semple.

For Phetanissa hes he send,

With sorcerie and incantationes

Reising the devill with invocationes.

Legend Bp. St. Androis, Poems 16th Cent. p. 318.

Lat. Pythonissa, Gr. Πυθωνισσα. Hence, as Rudd, has observed, the woman mentioned Acts xvi. 16, is said to have had πνευμα Πυθωνος, a spirit of Python. The name Πυθων was given to a daemon, by whose afflatus predictions were supposed to be uttered; and this from Pytho, the city of Delphi, where the oracle of Apollo was. He was designed the Pythian Apollo, from the fable of his having killed the serpent Python. The name of this serpent has been derived from πυθω, to cause to putrefy, from the idea of its being generated from putridity. Bochart, however, asserts, that Apollo Pythius, the son of Jupiter, was no other than Phut, the son of Ham, worshipped as Jupiter Hammon. Geograph. Sac. L. 1. c. 2.

PHIZ, s. Expl. "image," in reference to the Palladium.

Can Ajax count his sculls wi' me?

Fan I brought Priam's sin,

And Pallas' phiz, out thro' my faes;

He needs na' mak sic din.

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 33.

This is merely a peculiar sense of the abbreviated term as used in E.

To PHRASE, FRAISE, v. a. To talk much about; to talk of with some degree of boasting.

"And for that present tumult, that the children of this world fraise, anent the planting of your town with a pastor, believe and stay upon God; and the Lord shall either let you see what you long to see, or then fulfil your joy more abundantly another way." Rutherford's Lett P. ii. ep. 8.

PHRASER, s. 1. One whose actions are not so powerful as his words, a sort of braggadocio.

"Through grace we both doe and dare doe to the glorie of our God, when you, if you continue in this Pharisaeicall boasting, will proue but a phantasticall phraser." Bp. Galloway's Dikaiologie, p. 75.

2. It is now used to signify a wheedling person, S.

To PHRAISE, PHRASE, v. n. To use coaxing or wheedling language, S. See Sup.

Were it not that the E. s. is used in a similar sense, one might suppose, that this were allied to Moes.G. frais-an, to tempt. V. the s.

PHRAIZIN', s. The act of cajoling. S.

PHRAISE, FRAISE, s. To mak a phrase, 1. To pretend great regard, concern, or sympathy, S. When used in this sense, it conveys the idea of a suspicion of the person's sincerity. See Sup.

"To make a phrase about one; to make a great work about one." Sir J. Sinclair's Observ. p. 21.

He may indeed for ten or fifteen days
Mak meikle o' ye, with an unco fraise,
And daut ye baith afore fowk and your lane.
Ramsay's Poems, ii. 78.

2. To use the language of flattery. Thus fraise denotes flattery, S.

Some little fraise ane might excuse,
But ha'f of yon I maun refuse.
R. Galloway's Poems, p. 156.

3. To pretend to do a thing; to exhibit an appearance without real design, S.

"The Treasurer, and some of the Lords came, and made a phrase to set down the Session in the palace of Linlithgow." Baillie's Lett. i. 26.

4. To use many words about a thing, as expressive of reluctance, when one is really inclined, or perhaps desirous, to do what is proposed, S.

A-well, an't like your honour, Colin says,
Gin that's the gate, we needna mak great phrase,
The credit's ours, and we may bless the day,
That ever keest her in your honour's way.
Ross's Helenore, p. 110.

5. To talk more of a matter than it deserves, S.

I sometimes thought that he made o'er great fraise,
About fine poems, histories, and plays.
Ramsay's Poems, ii. 138.

6. To mak a phrase about one's self, to make much ado about a slight ailment; to pretend to suffer more than one does in reality, S.

PHRENESIE, s. Frenzy. S.

PY, RYDING-PY, RIDING-PIE, s. A loose riding-coat or frock, S.

PYARDIE, s. One of the names of the Magpie. S.

PYAT, PYOT, s. The Magpie; Corvus pica, Linn.

"Thair wes pyattis, and pertrekis, and plevaris anew."
Houlate, i. 14. MS.

The pyot furth his pennis did rug.
Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 21. st. 11.

"All, both men and women will be, for-sooth, of a partie;—no more vnderstanding what they speake of, than doe Pyots, or Parockets, those words which they are taught to prattle." Forbes's Eubulus, Pref. p. 5.

Fr. pie, Lat. pica. But from the termination of our word, its proper origin seems to be Gael. pighaidi; In C.B. pioden, See Sup. This by the vulgar in our times, as also by our ancestors, has still been accounted an ominous bird. During sickness in a family, it is reckoned a very fatal sign, if the pyat take his seat on the roof of the house. The same opinion has been formed by other Northern nations. See Sup.

Ihre testifies, that "the vulgar in Sweden suspend this bird to the doors of their stables, with the wings expanded, that he may, as Apuleius says, in his own body expiate that ill fortune that he portends to others." A similar idea may have given rise to the custom of nailing up hawks, the heads of foxes, &c. on the doors or walls of stables, still preserved in S. Wachter imagines, that in Germ. it is called specht, from Alem. spach-en, augurare, q. avis auguralis, i. e. the spay-bird. V. SPAE. Ihre thinks, that it has the name skata, from skad-a, to hurt, to skath. But this superstitious idea of the magpie was not confined to the Northern nations. Among the Romans, he was much used in augury, and was always reckoned among the unlucky birds. V. Plin. Hist. Nat. L. x. c. 18. See Sup.

PYAT-HORSE, s. A Pybald horse. S.

PYATIE, PYOTIE, adj. Variegated like a magpie; having pretty large white distinct spots. S.

PYATED, part. adj. Freckled; spotted. S.

PYATT, PYET, adj. Perhaps ornate. S.

PIBROCH, s. A Highland air, suited to the particular passion which the musician would either excite or assuage; generally applied to those airs that are played on the bagpipe, before the Highlanders, when they go out to battle.

Thou only saw'st their tartans wave,
As down Benvoirlich's side they wound,
Heard'st but the pibroch, answering brave
To many a target clanking round.
Minstrelsy, Border, ii. 415.

"Pibroch—a piece of martial music adapted to the Highland bagpipe." N. Ibid.

Gael. piobaireachd, "the pipe music, a march tune, piping," Shaw. Piob, a pipe.

PICHT, PYCHT, PIGHT, part. pa. 1. Pitched; settled. See Sup.

Gawayn, grathest of all,
Ledes him oute of the halle,
Into a pavilion of pall,
That prodly was pight.
Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. ii. 8.

2. In the same sense, it seems to be metaph. transferred to a person. See Sup.

Thocht subtile Sardanapulus,
A prince were picht to rule and reigne,
Yet, were his factes so lecherous,
That euerie man might se them plaine.
Poems Sixteenth Century, p. 203.

Expl. "strong," Gl. It certainly denotes establishment in empire.

3. Studded with gold, silver, or precious stones.

Lyke as an gem wyth his brycht hew schinyng,
Departis the gold set amydwart the ryng,
Or in the crownell picht, or riche hingare.
Doug. Virgil, 318, 24.

Tyrwhitt mentions O.E. pice, as signifying to pitch. Skinner derives the latter from Ital. appicciar, castra metari. See Sup. V. PIGHT.

PICHT, s. Pith; force; pl. pichtis.

The felloun thrang, quhen horsse and men remowyt,
Wp drayff the dust quhar thai thair pichtis prowyt.
Belg. pitt, A.S. pitha, id. Wallace, x. 288. MS.

PICHT, s. A very diminutive and deformed person. S.

To PICK, v. a. To throw; to pitch at a mark; to pick stains, to throw stones at any object, S.B.

P I C

Either from the same source with E. pitch, or allied to Su.G. pick-a, minutis ictibus tundere.

PICK, s. The best; the choice, S.

Either from E. pick, to cull, or Belg. puyk, choice, excellent.

PICK, s. Pitch. V. PIK. S.

PICK-BLACK, adj. Black as pitch. V. PIK-MIRK. S.

PICK, s. A pick-axe. S.

PICK, s. A spade at cards. V. PICKS. S.

PICK, s. Used for E. pike. S.

To PICK, v. a. To pick a Mill-stane, to indent it by slight strokes. V. PIK, v. S.

PICKEN, PICKENIE, adj. Pungent to the taste, S.

Su.G. pikande, Fr. piquant, id. See Sup.

PYCKER, s. One chargeable with petty theft. S.

PICKEREL, s. The Dunlin, Tringa alpina, Linn.

Avis cinerei coloris Alauda major, rostro rubro. Aquas frequentat. Pickereel, dicta. Sibb. Scot. p. 22.

PICKERY, s. Rapine; also theft. V. PIKARY.

To PICKET, v. a. To project a marble or taw smartly against the knuckles of the losers in the game. S.

PICKET, s. 1. A stroke of this description. 2. The punishment inflicted for forfeiture at tennis, or handball, of holding the hand against a wall while others strike it with the ball. S.

To PICK FOAL. To bring forth a foal prematurely. S.

PICKIE-MAN, s. The name formerly given to a miller's servant, from his work of keeping the mill in order, S.B. V. PIK, v.

PICKIE-FINGERED, adj. Inclined to steal; applied, as Tarry-fingered, to one to whose fingers the property of his neighbour is apt to adhere. S.

PICKLE, PICKIL, PUCKLE, s. 1. A grain of corn, S.

"As breid is maid of mony pickillis of corne, & wyne is maid of mony berryis, and ane body is maid of mony membris, sa the kirk of God is gadderit togidder with the band of perfit lufe & cheritie & festinit with the spreit of God." Abp. Hamiltoun's Catechisme, Fol. 141. b.

"This venome and poyson of humane bishops, degenerating into Satanicall, hath filled the ecclesiastical and civil histories full of such effects, the smallest haire of roote and pickle of seed is therefore to be fanned away and plucked out of all kirkes, kingdomes, and commonwealthes." Course of Conformitie, p. 40.

O gin my love were a pickle of wheat,
And growing upon yon lily lee,
And I mysell a bonny wee bird,
Awa wi' that pickle o' wheat I wad flee.

Minstrelsy, Border, ii. 328.

2. A single seed, of whatever kind, S.

"Oh, but for a dramme of God's grace! Oh, for the greatnesse of the pickle of mustarde seede thereof!" Z. Boyd's Last Battell, p. 193.

3. Any minute particle, as a grain of sand, S.

"When — the last pickle of sand shall be at the nick of falling down in your watch-glass; — ye will esteem the bloom of this world's glory like the colours of the rainbow, that no man can put in his purse and treasure." Rutherford's Lett. P. 1. ep. 130.

"As one of the Lord's hirelings, ye must work till the shadow of the evening come upon you, and ye shall run out your glass even to the last pickle of sand." Ibid. ep. 6.

"What if the pickles of dust and ashes of the burnt and dissolved body were musicians to sing his praises." Ibid. ep. 28.

4. A small quantity, consisting of different parts, or particles, conjoined, S.

VOL. II.

209

P I C

Your doghter wad na say me na; —

Say, what'll ye gi' me wi' her?

Now, wooer, quo' he, I ha'e no meikle,

But sic's I hae ye's get a pickle. —

A kilnfu of corn I'll gi'e to thee,

Three souns of sheep, twa good milk ky.

Ritson's S. Songs, i. 199.

There was an old wife and a wee pickle tow,

And she wad try the spinning o't.

Ross's Helenore, Song, p. 123.

The term is never used of liquids, any more than its synon. curn.

5. A few, relating to number; A pickle fock, a few people, S. 6. Viewed also as equivalent to berry.

Ere Simois' stream rin up the hill,

Ida wi' pears not clad,

He'll gar a little pickle Greeks

Ding a' the Trojans dead.

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 31.

I know not the origin, unless it be Su.G. pik, spik, which seem to have been both used to denote grain when it begins to germinate, Lat. spic-a; or Su.G. pick, Dan. pik, a prick, a point, q. the small impression left by a sharp-pointed instrument.

This might seem allied to Ital. piccolo, (from Lat. pau-culi), little, small, un piccolo numero, a few. But this corresponds only to the secondary senses of the term.

To PICKLE, v. a. To commit small thefts; to pilfer. S.

To PICKLE, v. a. To peck at, as a fowl. S.

To PICKLE, v. n. To pick. S.

To PICKLE in one's ain pock-neuk. To depend on one's own exertions; as, "E'en pickle in your ain pock-neuk." S.

To PICKLE out o' one's ain pock-neuk. To depend on one's own exertions, without expecting support from others. S.

To PICKLE out o' ae pock. Applied to the married state. S.

To PICKLE up. To pick up, applied to fowls collecting grains or food of any kind. S.

PICK-MAW, s. A bird of the gull kind. V. PYK-MAW. S.

PICKS, s. pl. The suit of cards called spades. S.

PICKTARNITIE, s. The Pewit, or Black-headed Gull. S.

PICKTELIE, s. A difficulty. S.

PI-COW, pron. pee-cow, also pi-ox, s. The name given to the game of Hide and Seek, Ang. When the hiding party have concealed themselves, one of them cries pi-cow, as a sign that the one who is to seek may set to work. For a more particular description of this game, See Sup.

From the last syllable in each of these designations, they have an evident affinity to the Germ. name of Blind man's buff, die blinde kuh, i. e. the blind cow. V. BELLY-BLIND.

Perhaps the first syllable is from A.S. Su.G. piga, Dan. pige, pie, a girl, q. the girl who mimics a cow. If the masculine gender be supposed to correspond most to the ox, Su.G. Isl. poike, a boy, is not very dissimilar, Dan. pog, id. whence E. pug.

PICTARNIE, s. The Great Tern or sea swallow; Sterna hirundo, Linn. S. See Sup.

"Hirundo Marina, Sterna Turneri; our people call it the Pictarnie;" Sibb. Fife, p. 108.

"The birds that breed on the isles [of Lochleven] are Herring gulls, Pewit gulls, and great Terns, called here Pictarnés." Pennant's Tour in S. 1769, p. 81.

In Orkn. and Caithn. this bird is called Picketarnie.

"The name Picketarnie," it has been said, is a close imitation of the call of the bird." Neill's Tour, p. 42.

The last part of the word, however, corresponds to its

2 D

P I G

- name in other countries; Sw. tarna, Dan. taerne, Norv. Sand-taerne. Penn. Zool. p. 545.
- PICTS' HOUSES. The name of those mounds which contained cellular enclosures under ground. V. BRUGH.
- To PIDDLE, v. n. To walk with quick short steps. S.
- To PIDDLE, v. n. A childish term for, to urinate. S.
- PYDLE, s. A kind of bag-net used for catching fish. S.
- PY-DOUBLET, s. A sort of armour for covering the breast or forepart of the body. V. PY, RYDING-PY. S.
- To PYE, PIE, PYE about, v. n. To pry; to peer; to squint. S.
- PYE, PIE, s. A potato-pie. V. PIT, s. S.
- PIECE, conj. Although; albeit. V. ABIES. S.
- PIECE,* PECE, s. For the piece, each. E. a piece. S.
- PIEGE, s. A trap, as one for catching rats or mice; a snare of any kind, Perth. puge, Border; Fr. piege, id.
- PIE-HOLE, s. A small hole for receiving a lace, an eye-hole, S. See Sup.
- Perhaps allied to Dan. pig, pyg, Su.G. pigg, a prick, a point, q. a hole made by a sharp-pointed instrument, as a bodkin.
- PIEL, s. An iron wedge for boring stones, S.B. A.S. pil, stylus; Teut. pyle, spiculum, telum.
- PIEPHER, s. An extremely useless creature. S.
- PIER, s. "A key, quay, wharf, or harbour; as Leith pier;" Sir J. Sinclair's Observ. p. 125, S.
- PIERCEL, s. A gimlet. S.
- PYET, adj. V. PYATT. S.
- PIETE, PIETIE, s. Pity; compassion; clemency. Haue reuth and pietie on sa feill harmes smert, And tak compassioun in thy gentile hart. Doug. Virgil, 43, 22.
- Fr. piété, Ital. pieta, id. from Lat. pietas. This word deserves attention. For, as Rudd. has justly observed, where Virg. uses pius, the distinguishing character of his hero, Doug. renders it pitiful, compacent (compassionate;) whence, he says, it is "plain, that originally, the E. pity and piety are the same."
- PIETIE. Our Lady Pietie, the Virgin Mary. S.
- To PYFER, PEIFER, PIFFER, v. n. 1. To whimper; to complain peevishly for little cause. 2. To do any thing in a feeble and trifling way. S.
- PIFFERIN', part. pr. Trifling; insignificant. S.
- PIG, PYG, s. 1. An earthen vessel, S. Doug. uses it for a pitcher. The kepare eik of thys maide Argus Was porturit thare, and fader Inachus, Furth of ane payntit pyg, quhare as he stude, Ane grete ryuere defoundand or ane flude. Doug. Virgil, 237, a. 39.
- Caelata urna, Virg. Pigg, V. LAME.
2. A pitcher. S. She that gangs to the well with ill will, Either the pig breaks, or the water will spill. Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 61.
- It is also a proverbial phrase, applied to death, as expressive of indifference with respect to the place where the body may be interred: "Where the pig's broken let the sherds lie," S. Ferguson's S. Prov. p. 34.
3. A can for a chimney-top for increasing the draught. S.
4. Any piece of earthen ware, a potsherd, S. Gael. pigadh, pigin, an earthen pitcher, Shaw. But as I can perceive no vestige of this word in any of the other Celt. dialects, I suspect that it has been borrowed from the language of the Lowlanders.
- PIG-MAN, s. A seller of crockery, S. It is some stratagem of Wallace, Who in a pig-man's weed, at Bigger,

P I K

- Espied all the English leagure. Colvil's Mock Poem, P. ii. 24.
- PIG-WIFE, s. A woman who sells crockery, S. See S.
- To GANG TO PIGS AND WHISTLES. To go to wreck; to be ruined in one's circumstances. S.
- PIGFULL, s. As much as fills an earthen vessel. S.
- PIGGERIE, s. The place where earthen ware is manufactured; a pottery. S.
- PIGGEIS, s. pl. "Flags, streamers,—or perhaps it may signify ropes, cables, from Fr. poge or pogge, the sheet or cable that fastens the mainyard on the right hand of the ship;" Rudd. —The wedir prouokis vs to assay Our salis agane, for the south wyndis blast Our piggeis and our pinsellis wait fast. Doug. Virgil, 80, 2.
- May it not rather mean the spikes or iron rods on which the pinsellis or streamers were suspended? Su.G. pigg, stimulus, stilus, vel quod stimuli formam acutam habet, Ihre in vo.; also peka.—A spike, Wideg.
- PIGIN, s. A milking-pail, S., "a little pail or tub, with an erect handle, North." Gl. Grose. See S.
- PIGHT, pret. Pierced; thrust. Of al tho that there were, Might non him felle in fight, But on, with tresoun there, Thurch the bodi him pight, With gile: To deth he him dight, Allas that ich while. Sir Tristrem, p. 18.
- Germ. pick-en, pungere, punctim ferire, acutum figere in aliquid, Wachter; Sw. pick-a, Stiernhelm. Gl. Ulph. Franc. pick-en, C.B. Arm. pigo, Fr. piquer, Su.G. pigg, C.B. pig, stimulus.
- PYGRAL, adj. Mean; paltry. V. PEGRALL.
- PIGTAIL, s. A kind of twisted tobacco, S. denominated perhaps from its supposed resemblance to the tail of a pig.
- To PIK, v. a. To give a light stroke with any thing that is sharp-pointed, S. Thus, to pik or pick a millstane, to indent it slightly by such strokes, in order to make it rough, S. V. Rudd. Su.G. pick-a, minutis ictibus tundere, Isl. piacck-a, frequenter pungere.
- PIK, PYK, s. A light stroke with any thing that is sharp-pointed, S. Thus sayand the auld waikly but force or dynt Ane dart did cast, quhilk wyth ane pik dyd stynt On his harnes, and on the scheild dyd hyng, But ony harme or vthir damnagyng. Doug. Virgil, 57, 13.
- PIK, PYK, PICK, s. Pitch, S. See Sup. And pyk, and ter, als haiff thai tane; And lynt, and herdis, and brynstane. Barbour, xvii. 611. MS. Fagaldys off fyr amang the ost thai cast, Wp pyk and ter on feyll sowys thai lent. Wallace, viii. 773. MS. Ane terribil sewch, birnand in flammis reid,— All full of brinstane, pick, and bulking leid— I saw. — Palice of Honour, iii. 4. A.S. pic, Belg. picke, Isl. bik, Su.G. bek.
- PIKARY, PICKERY, s. 1. Rapine. "Quhen he was cumyn to mannis age, he conquest his leuyng on thift and pikary." Bellend. Cron. B. ix. c. 21. In MS. penes auct. it is "thift and roborie." Latrocinium, Boeth. 2. Petty theft; pilfering, S. See Sup.

P I K

"The stealing of trifles, which in our law-language is styled pickery, has never been punished by the usage of Scotland, but by imprisonment, scourging, or other corporal punishments, unless where it was attended with aggravating circumstances." Erskine's Instit. B. iv. Tit. 4. s. 59.

The first sense is most correspondent to Fr. picorée, plundering, from picor-er, to forage, to rifle, to rob; Ital. picar-e; hence E. pickeer, id. It is highly probable that the Fr. have borrowed this word from the Ital., and that the latter have retained it since the time of the Gothic irruptions; as Su.G. puck-a, seems to convey the radical idea of extorting any thing by means of threatening; imperiose et minaciter aliquid efflagitare. Germ. pock-en, poch-en, signifies both to threaten and to strike.

To PIKE, v. a. To cull; to select, Doug. E. Pick. See S.

Ihre observes that E. pick out, seligere, is of the same origin with Su.G. pek-a, indice vel digito monstrare, "to point out by the finger, or by any other instrument, the thing that we choose from among many."

To PIKE, v. n. To poke cautiously with the fingers. S.

To PIKE, v. a. To sail close by. See Sup.

—Sone the cieteis of Corcyra tyne we,
And vp we pike the coist of Epirus,
And landit thare at port Chaonius.

Doug. Virgil, 77, 36.

Rudd. views this as a metaph. sense of pike, to choose; but without any apparent relation. It might seem rather allied to Su.G. pek-a, to point towards the land. V. preceding word.

To PYKE, PIKE, v. a. To make bare; to pick. S.

PyKIT, part. adj. Having a meagre or emaciated appearance. Syn. Mootit, Worm-eaten. S.

To PIKE, v. a. To pilfer; to be engaged in petty theft. S.

PIKIE, adj. Dishonest; apt to pilfer. S.

PIKE-A-PLEA BODIE. A litigious person; a person who is fond of lawsuits. S.

PIKEMAN, s. A miller's servant. Syn. Pickie-man. S.

PYKEPURS, s. A pickpocket. E. pickpurse. S.

PIKES, s. pl. Short withered heath. V. PYKIS. S.

PIKE-STAFF, s. A long staff with a sharp pike in it, carried as a support in frosty weather. S.

PYKIS, s. pl. Prickles.

Throw pykis of the plet thorne I presandlie luikit, Gif ony persoun wald approche within that plesand garding. Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 45.

The blomit hauthorne cled his pykis all.

Doug. Virgil, 400, 48.

Su.G. pigg, stimulus; Germ. pick-en, pungere.

"Pikes, short withered heath," S.B. Gl. Shirr. seems to acknowledge the same origin.

PIKKY, adj. Pitchy, resembling pitch.

The tuffing kindillis betuix the plankis wak,
Quharfra ouerthrawis the pikky smok coil blak.

Doug. Virgil, 150, 40.

PIKKIT, part. pa. Pitched; covered with pitch.

Wyth prosper cours and sobir quhispering
The pikkit bargis of fir fast can thring.

Doug. Virgil, 243, 8.

Teut. peck-en, pick-en, Lat. pic-are.

PIKLAND, part. pr. Picking up.

Phebus rede foule his curale creist can stere,
Oft strekand furth his hekkil, crawand clere
Amyd the wortis, and the rutis gent,
Pikland hys mete in alayis quhare he went.

Doug. Virgil, 401, 53.

A dimin. from pick. Or, if we may view the word as signifying to scrape, it would be the same with Teut. pickel-en, bickel-en, scalpere.

P Y L

PYK-MAW, PICK-MAW, s. A bird of the gull kind, Gl. Sibb. the Larus ridibundus of Linn. See Sup.

Perfytelie thir Pik mawis as for priouris,

With thair partie habitis, present thame thair.

Houlate, i. 15. MS.

The description here given agrees better with the Wagel, Larus Naevius of Linn., le Goiland varié, Brisson.

PIK-MIRK, adj. Dark as pitch, S. Resembling Belg.

pikdonker, id. Teut. peck-swert, black as pitch. See S.

Pit-mirk, used in the same sense, seems a corr. of this.

To lye without, pit-mirk, did shore him,

He coudna see his thumb before him.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 521.

Sometimes it is resolved.

As mark as pick night down upon me fell.

Ross's Helenore, p. 87.

PILCH, s. 1. A gown made of skins.

And sum war cled in pilchis and foune skynnis.

Doug. Virgil, 220, 42.

A.S. pylece, toga pellicea. Hence O.E. pilch, "a piece of flannel, or woollen cloth to be wrapt about a young child; also, a covering for a saddle," Phillips: E. pilcher, a gown lined with fur; and, as Rudd. has observed, L.B. superpelliceum, E. surplice, q. sur-pilch. Su.G. pels, Alem. pelez, Germ. pelz, Fr. pelisse, Ital. pellicia, Hisp. pellico, are all synon.

2. A tough skinny piece of meat, S.

3. Any object that is thick or gross; also used as an adj.; as, a pilch carl, a short and gross man, S.

4. A kind of petticoat open before; worn by infants. S.

5. Any thing hung before the thighs to prevent them being injured by the Flauchter-spade. S.

PILCHER, s. The marble which a player uses in his hand, as distinguished from the others used in play. S.

PILCHES. Errat. for Pitches, used for Pitchfirs. S.

PILE, s. The motion of the water made by a fish when it rises to the surface. S.

PILE, PYLE, s. 1. In pl. "down, or the soft and tender hairs which first appear on the faces of young men," Rudd.

My grene youth that tyme, and pylis ying,

Fyrst cled my chyn or berd, begouth to spryng.

Doug. Virgil, 246, 11.

2. A tender blade of grass, one that is newly sprung, S. A. Bor. id.

For callour humours on the dewy nycht,
Rendryng sum place the gyrs pylis thare licht,
Als fer as catal the lang somerys day
Had in thare pasture ete and gnyp away.

Doug. Virgil, 400, 42.

3. A single grain; as, a pile of caff, a grain of chaff, Shirr. Gl. See Sup.

Teut. pyl, Fr. poil, Lat. pil-us, a hair.

PYLE, s. A small javelin; or perhaps a quarrel, an arrow with a square head, used in a cross-bow.

"And all others quha may haue armour: sall haue ane bow, and arrowes out with the forrest: and within the forrest, ane bow, ane pyle." Stat. Will. c. 23. s. 5.

Du Cange is at a loss as to the determinate meaning of this term, as well as of L.B. pilatus, which occurs in a mandate of Hen. III. of England, containing the same injunction with that of William. Teut. pyl, signifies an arrow; Su.G. pil, any weapon that may be thrown with the hand; Lat. pil-um, a kind of small spear, a javelin.

PYLE AND CURSELL. V. CURSELL. S.

PYLEFAT, s.

Off strang wesche sheill tak a jurdane
And settis in the pylefat. Lyndsay, S.P.R. ii. 193.
This, as Sibb. has observed, is undoubtedly by mistake for Gylefat, q. v.
PILGET, PILGIE, s. A contention; a quarrel; a broil,
S.B.
I need na' tell the pilgets a'
I've had wi' feirdy foes;
It cost baith wit and pith to see
The back-seams o' their hose.
Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 19.
A.S. abilg-ian, exacerbare, aebligith, indignation; Belg.
belgh-en, to be enraged; to combat, to fight; Isl. bilgia, procella. A keen etymologist might view Heb. פֶּלֶג, peleg, division, as the root.
To PILGET, v. n. To quarrel; usually applied to the contentions of children. S.
PILGATting, s. The act of quarrelling. S.
PILGREN, PYLGRYNE, s. A pilgrim.
Bot I who wes ane pure pilgren,
And half ane Stronimeir,
Forschew thair, and knew thair,
Sick tempest suld betyde.
Fr. pelegrin. Bure's Pilg. Watson's Coll. ii. 22.
PILYEIT, part. pa. Pillaged. V. PILYIE. S.
To PILYIE, v. a. To pillage; misprinted Pilzie. S.
To PILK, v. a. 1. To shell peas, to take out of the husk; also, to pick periwinkles out of the shell, S.B.
2. Metaph. to pilfer, to take away, either a part, or the whole; as, She has pilkit his pouch, she has picked his pocket, S.B.
This is apparently corrupted from E. pluck, or Teut.
plock-en, id.
PILLAN, s. The name of a species of sea-crab, Fife.
"Cancer latipes Gesneri, the Shear Crab." Sibb. Fife,
p. 132. "Our fishers call them Pillans;" N. ibid.
PILLAR, s. Stane of Pillar, some kind of gem. S.
PILLEIS, s. pl. Left unexplained; perhaps pulleys. S.
PILLEY-STAIRES, s. pl. Apparently pilasters. S.
PILLEIT, part. pa. Pillaged. S.
PILLIE, s. A pulley. S.
PILLIE SHEVIS. Pulleys; S. pullishees. S.
PILLIEFEE, s. Left unexplained. S.
PILLIEWINKES, PILNIEWINKS, PINNIEWINKS, PIN-NYWINKLES, s. pl. An instrument of torture formerly used, apparently of the nature of the thumb-screws. S.
PILLIE-WINKIE, PINKIE-WINKIE, s. A barbarous sport among children, described in the Sup.
PILLIONS, s. pl. Rags; tatters. S.
PILLOUR, s. Costly fur. V. PELURE.
PILLOW, s. A tumultuous noise, S.B. V. HILLIE- BILLOW.
PILLOWBER, s. The covering of a pillow. S.
PILSOUCHT, s. A cutaneous disease affecting sheep. S.
PILTOCK, s. The same with the Cuth or Cooth of Orkney and Shetland.
"Piltocks, sillocks, haddockes, mackarels, and flounders, are got immediately upon the shore.—Piltocks—are used as bait [in fishing for ling, cod, and tusk.] P. Unst, Shetl.
Statist. Acc. v. 190. 191.
The piltock is the coal fish, when a year old. At Scarborough, they are called Billets at this age. Penn. Zool.
iii. 153.
PIN, s. Pinnacle; summit.
Sa mony a gin, to haist thame to the pin,
Within this land was nevir hard nor sene.
Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 44. st. 11.

"So many devices to forward their preferment." Lord Hailes.
Teut. pinne, Germ. pfin, pinn, summitas. Excelsarum rerum summitates dicimus pinnen, et singulari numero.
Cluver. Germ. Antiq. Lib. i. c. 26. s. 15. He observes, that the high mountain, among the Alps, which the Fr.
inhabitants called Mont Jou, and the Ital. Monte Jove, was anciently denominated Summum Penninum; concluding that Jupiter was by the ancient Germans called Pen or Pin, and that this name was given to him as being the supreme God. He adds, in confirmation, that the dies Jovis of the Romans is in Germ. still called Pendag, Pin- dag, and Pfindag. He seems, indeed, to view this name as originally given to the true God.
It appears to be allied to C.B. Arm. penn, head. According to Bullet, pin signifies the top or head of any thing.
To PIN, v. a. To break by throwing a stone, so as to make a hole. To pin a lozen; to break a pane of glass. S.
PINALDS, s. pl. A spinet. S.
PINCH, PUNCH, s. An iron crow or lever, S. Fland. pinsse, Fr. pince. See Sup.
To PIND, PYND, v. a. To distrain. V. POIND. S.
PINDING, s. A disease of lambs. S.
PINE, PINING, s. A disease of sheep, caused by ful-ness of the blood and condition. Daising. Vanquish. S.
To PYNE, v. a. To subject to pain; to punish, S. See S.
The lordis bad that thai suld nocht him sla,
To pyne him mar thai chargyt him to ga.
Wallace, ii. 138. MS.
Isl. pyn-a, A.S. pin-an, torquere, affligere, punire.
PYNE, s. 1. Pain; punishment, S.
Thire tyrandis tuk this haly man,
And held hym lang in-til hard pyne.
Wyntown, vi. 12. 132.
The king Latyne the spousesage of Lauine,
And thy dowry, bocht with thy blude and pyne,
Denyis for to grant the.—Doug. Virgil, 221, 47.
2. Labour; pains.
— Quhilk that he sayis of Frensche he did tran-slait—
Haue he na thank tharfore, bot lois his pyne.
Doug. Virgil, Pref. 5. 38.
A.S. pin, Teut. pyne, Isl. pyna, passio, cruciatus; Gael.
pein, Fr. peine, Lat. poen-a.
To TAKE PINE. To be at pains; to excite one's self. S.
To PINE, PYNE, v. a. To take pains. S.
PYNEBAUKIS, s. The rack. S.
PYNE DOUBLET. A concealed coat of mail; also called a secret.
— "Mr. Alexander [Ruthven] being almost on his knees, had his hand upon his Majesty's face and mouth;
and his Majesty seeing the deponent, cry'd, Fy! strike him laigh, because he has a pyne doublet upon him." Cromerty's Gowrie's Conspiracy, p. 61.; secret, p. 47.
Perhaps from Su.G. pin-a, coarctare, because it was such a doublet as must have greatly confined the body. I scarcely think that it can be traced to Germ. pantzer, Belg. pansser, Su.G. pansar, Fr. panze, a coat of mail;
from Germ. panz, the belly.
To PINE FISH. To dry fish by exposing them to the weather. S.
PYNE PIG. A vessel used for keeping money. S.
PINERIS, PYNORIS, s. pl. Pioneers.
"And so was sche lapped in a cope of leid, and kept in the Castell, fra the nyute of Junii, unto the nynetein of October, quhen sche by Pyneris was caryed to a schip, and so caryed to France." Knox's Hist. p. 271. Pynoris, MS. i.

P I N

PINET, s. A Scotch pint; two quarts.

To PINGE. V. PEENGE.

To PINGIL, PINGLE, v. n. 1. To strive; to endeavour to the utmost, S. It generally signifies, to labour assiduously without making much progress. The term involves the idea of difficulty.

With al thare force than at the vterance,
Thay pingil airis vp to bend and hale,
With sa strang rouchis apoun athir wale;
The mychty caruel schudderit at euery straike.

Doug. Virgil, 134, 12.

2. To contend; to vie with. See Sup.

To se the hewis on athir hand is wounder,
For hicht that semes pingill with heuin, and vnder
In ane braid sand, souir fra all wyndys blawis.

Doug. Virgil, 18, 11.

3. To procure a scanty sustenance, although at the expence of much toil.

Bettir thou gains to leid a dog to skomer,
Pynd pyck-purse pelour, than with thy Maister pingle;

Thou lay richt prydles in the peis this sommer,
And fain at euin for to bring hame a single.

Dunbar, Evergreen, ii. 53.

4. v. a. To reduce to difficulty.

Thare restis na ma bot Cloanthus than,
Quham finalie to persew he addrest,
And pingillis hir vnto the vttermest.

Doug. Virgil, 135, 4.

Rudd. derives it from "Belg. pyn-en, to take great pains, to toil extremely." It has more resemblance of Germ. peinig-en, to pain, to trouble, a frequentative from pein-en, id. However, Su.G. ping denotes labour, care, anxiety.

PINGIL, PINGLE, s. 1. A strife; a contention, S.

Tho' Ben and Dryden of renown
Were yet alive in London town,
Like kings contending for a crown,

'Twad be a pingle,

Whilk o' you three wad gar words sound
And best to gingle.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 324.

2. Difficulty, S. "With a pingle, with a difficulty, with much ado," Rudd.

"Syne we laid our heads together, an' at it wi' virr; at last, wi' great pechin an' granin, we gat it up wi' a pingle." Journal from London, p. 6.

3. Apparently used to denote hesitation, q. difficulty in the mind.

His bairnly smiles and looks gave joy,
He seem'd sae innocent a boy.
I led him ben but any pingle,
And beckt [beekt] him brawly at my ingle.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 145.

PINGLING, s. Difficulty.

"They were all Borderers, and could ride and prick well, and held the Scottish men in pingling by their pricking and skirmishing, till the night came down on them." Pitscottie, p. 175.

I was na ca'd, says Lindy, but was knit,
And in that seet three langsome days did sit;
Till wi' my teeth I gnaw the raips in twa,
And wi' sair pingling wan at last awa.

Ross's Helenore, p. 48.

PINGLE, PINGLE-PAN, s. A small tin goblet with a handle, used in S. for preparing children's food. S.

P I N

PINYIONE, s. A handful of armed men. Acts, Mar. c. 14. V. PUNYE, s.

PINION, s. A pivot. S.

PYNIT, part. pa. Dried or shrunk. S.

To PINK, v. n. To contract the eye in looking at an object; to glimmer, S.

Teut. pinck-ooghen, oculos contrahere, et aliquo modo claudere. E. pink is used in a different sense; as properly signifying to wink, to shut the eyes entirely, or in a greater degree than is suggested by pink as used in S. Hence, PINKIE, adj. 1. A term applied to small eyes, or to one who is accustomed to contract his eyes, S. 2. Pinkie Een, eyes that are long and narrow, and that seem half-closed. 3. Small, in a general sense; as, "There's a wee pinkie hole in that stocking." S.

Meg Wallet wi' her pinky een

Gart Lawrie's heart-strings dirle.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 262.

PINKIE, s. Any thing small; a person blind-folded. S.

To PINK, v. n. To trickle; to drop; applied to tears, S.B. And a' the time the tears ran down her cheek,
And pinked o'er her chin upon her keek.

Ross's Helenore, p. 29.

This is perhaps merely a metaph. sense of the v. explained above; a tear being said to steal over a woman's cheek to the lower part of her cap, in allusion to the stolen glance which the eye often takes when it seems to be nearly shut.

PINKIE, s. The little finger; a term mostly used by children, or in talking to them, Loth.

Belg. pink, id. pinck, digitus minimus, Kilian.

PINKIE, s. The weakest kind of beer brewed for the table, S. perhaps from pink, as expressing the general idea of smallness.

PINKIE, s. The smallest candle that is made, S.

O. Teut. pincke, id. cubicularis lucerna simplex; also, a glow-worm.

PINKING, adj. A term expressing the sound of a drop of water falling in a cave or grotto. S.

PINKLE-PANKLE, s. The sound of liquid in a bottle. S.

To PINKLE-PANKLE, v. n. To emit such sound. S.

PINKLING, s. Thrilling motion. S.

PINNAGE, s. A boat belonging to a ship of war. S.

PYNNEKILL, PINNOKIL, s. A pile. S.

PINNER, s. 1. A head-dress or cap formerly worn by women of rank, having lappets pinned to the temples reaching down to the breast, and fastened there. It is now almost entirely disused, S. See S.

And I man hae pinners

With pearling set round,

A skirt of puddy,

And a wastcoat of broun.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 312.

2. A fleeing pinner, such a head-dress, having the ends of the lappets hanging loose, Ang.

It has been supposed that the name has originated from its being pinned. Johnson defines E. pinner, "the lappet of a head which flies loose;" deriving it from pinna or pinion. It is more probably a Fr. word. In the celebrated History of Prince Erastus, the term pignoirs occurs in such connexion, as to indicate that some kind of night-dress for the head is meant, such as might anciently be used even by males. "Outre cela elle y mit plusieurs autres besongnes de nuict, comme Coiffes, Couurches, Pignoirs, Oreilliers, et Mouchoirs fort subtilement ouurez." Histoire Pitoyable du Prince Erastus, Lyon,

P Y R

1564, pp. 12. 13. I have not met with this word in any Fr. Dict. L.B. pinna, is used in the sense of ora, limbus, as denoting the border of a garment.

PINNER-PIG, s. V. PIRLIE-PIG.

PINNING, s. A small stone for filling up a crevice in a wall, S.

"They are found in various shapes and sizes, from that of the smallest pinnings, to the most solid binding masses employed in building." P. Falkland, Fifes. Statist. Acc. iv. 438.

Q. a stone employed as a pin.

PINNING, s. Diarrhœa. S.

PINNED, PINNIT, part. adj. Seized with a diarrhœa. S.

PINNYWINKLES, s. pl. An instrument of torture. S.

PYNOUR, s. A sort of scavenger. S.

PINSEL, s. A streamer. V. PENSEL.

PYNONS, s. pl. Slippers. S.

To PYNT, v. a. To paint; to colour; to disguise. S.

PINT, s. A liquid measure of two quarts in S. S.

PINT-STOUP, s. 1. A tin measure capable of containing two quarts. 2. A spiral shell of the genus Turbo. S.

PIN-THE-WIDDIE, s. 1. A small dried haddock not split, Aberd. corruptly pron. penny-widdie, Loth.

2. Metaph. used to denote a very meagre person. S.

PINTILL-FISH, s.

"In this ile (Eriskeray) ther is daylie gottin abundance of verey grate pintill-fishe at ebbe seas, and als verey guid for uther fishing, pertaining to M'Neill of Barray." Monroe's Isles, p. 34.

This seems either a species of the Pipe fish; or the Launce, or Sand-eel.

PYNT-PIG, s. The same with Pirlie-Pig, q. v. S.

PINTS, s. pl. Shoe-thongs. S.

PIOYE, s. Moistened gunpowder, &c. V. PEEYOY. S.

PYOT, s. A magpie. V. PYAT.

PYOTIE, adj. Having pretty large white spots. S.

PIPES. To tune one's pipes, a metaph. phrase, signifying to cry, S.

PIPE, *s. To TAK A PIPE. To tune one's pipes; to cry. S.

PIPES, s. pl. The common name for the bagpipe. S.

PIPER, s. 1. One who plays on the bagpipe. 2. A half-dried haddock. 3. The name given to the Echinus Cedaris. 4. The insect called Father-long-Legs. S.

PIPER'S NEWS. News known to every body. S.

PIPE-STAPPLE, s. 1. Windle-strae or smooth-crested grass. 2. The stalk of a tobacco-pipe. 3. Any thing very brittle. S.

PIPE-STAPPLES, s. pl. A play of children, in which two pins are put cross-wise through a green pea or Rowan, which is then placed at the upper end of the pipe-stapple; and by holding it vertically, and blowing gently through it, the pea is made to dance. S.

PIPPEN, s. A doll; a baby; a puppet for children. S.

To PIPPER, v. n. To tremble; to vibrate quickly. S.

PIRE, s. A seat of some kind, not clear. S.

PIRKUZ, s. Any kind of perquisite. S.

To PYRL, v. n. To prick; to stimulate.

On athir side his eyne he gan to cast;—
Spyand full fast, quhar his awaill suld be,
And couth weyll luk and wynk with the ta e.—
Sum seornyt hym, sum gleid carll cald hym thar.—
Sum brak a pott, sum pyrlit at hys E.
Wallace fled out, and prewalé leit thaim be.

Wallace, vi. 470. MS.

In Edit. 1648,—Some pricked at his ee.

Dan. pirr-er, to prick, to irritate, to stimulate; Sax.

214

P I R

pur-en, id.; Su.G. purrig, irascible. Or it may be allied to Su.G. pryl, a long needle, an awl, pryl-a, stylo pungere.

To PIRL, v. n. To whirl, S.A.

An' cauld December's pirlin drift

Maks Winter fierce an' snell come.

Rev. J. Nicol's Poems, i. 25.

This seems originally the same with Birle. V. under BIRR.

To PIRL, v. a. To stir any thing with a long rod. S.

PIRLING-STICK, PIRLIN-WAND, s. The rod used for stirring shilling seeds to make them burn, when they are used for fuel on the hearth. V. PYRL, v. n. S.

To PIRL, v. a. To twist; to twine. S.

To PIRL, v. n. To be gently rippled; as the surface of a body of water by a slight wind. S.

PIRL, s. A slight rippling. "A pirl on the water." S.

PIRLIE, adj. 1. Crisp; having a tendency to curl up.

2. Pirlie fellow, one very difficult to please. S.

PIRLEY PEASE-WEED. A game among boys. S.

PIRLET, PIRLIT, s. A puny or contemptible figure. S.

PIRL-GRASS, s. Creeping wheat-grass, S. V. FELT, 1.

PIRLIE, s. A childish name for the little finger. S.

PIRLIE-PIG, PURLIE-PIG, s. A circular vessel of crockery, resembling what is called a Christmas box, which has no opening save a slit at top, only so large as to receive a half-penny; used by children for keeping their money, S.B. Pinner-pig, S.O.

The box receives this form, that the owner may be under less temptation to waste his hoard, as, without breaking it, he can get out none of the money.

The same kind of box is used in Sweden, and called sparbossa; Testacea pyxis, in quam nummi conjiciuntur per adeo angustum foramen, ut inde, nisi fracto vase, depromi nequeant; Ihre.

This learned writer is at a loss, whether the name may be from spar-a, to spare, to preserve with caution, or sparr-a, to shut, and byssa, a box. In Su.G. it is also denominated girigbuk, literally greedy belly, because it keeps all that it receives; a term also metaph. applied to a covetous person. The Fr. name is Tirelire.

Pirlie-pig may be allied to Su.G. perla, union, and pig, a piece of crockery; because the design is to preserve small portions of money till they form a considerable sum. Or shall we suppose, that it was originally birle-pig, from A.S. birle-ian, to drink, as thus those who wished to carouse together, at some particular time, might form a common stock?

Pinner, as it is pron. in the West, may be allied to Teut. pennne-waere, merx, or Dan. penger, pl, money, literally, pennies; q. a vessel for holding money.

PIRLIEWINKIE, s. The little finger. Syn. Pirlie. S.

PIRN, s. 1. A quill, or reed on which yarn is wound, S. See Sup.

"In this manufacturing country, such as are able to go about and beg, are generally fit, unless they have infant children, to earn their bread at home, the women by spinning, and the men by filling pirns, (rolling up yarn upon lake reeds, cut in small pieces for the shuttle.)" P. Kirkden, Forfars. Statist. Acc. ii. 510.

2. The bobbin of a spinning-wheel. S.

3. The name is transferred to the yarn itself, in the state of being thus rolled up, S. A certain quantity of yarn, ready for the shuttle, is said to consist of so many pirns.

"The women and weavers Scot. call a small parcel of yarn put on a broach (as they name it,) or as much as is put into the shuttle at once, a pyrn." Rudd. vo. Pyrnit.

P I R

4. It is often used metaph. One, who threatens evil to another, says; I'll wind you a pirn, S.
 Whisht, ladren, for gin ye say ought Mair, I'se wind ye a pirn,
 To reel some day.
Ramsay's Poems, i. 277.
 To redd a ravell'd pirn, to clear up something that is difficult, or to get free of some entanglement, S.
 Ance let a hissy get you in the girn,
 Ere ye get loose, ye'll redd a ravell'd pirn.
Shirrefs' Poems, p. 52.
 As a pirn is sometimes called a broach, the yarn being as it were spitted on it, shall we view Su.G. pren, any thing sharp-pointed, as the radical word?
PIRN, s. The wheel of a fishing-rod, S.
 "A pirn (for angling,) a wheel." Sir J. Sinclair's Observ. p. 159.
 This seems to be merely an oblique use of the preceding word; from the circumstance of a weaver's pirn being turned round, both when the yarn is put on it, and when taken off.
PIRN-CAP, s. A wooden bowl for holding weaver's quills. S.
PIRNYT, PYRNIT, part. pa. "Striped; woven with different colours," Rudd. See Sup.
 Ane garment he me gaif, or knychtly wede,
Pirnyt and wouyn ful of fyne gold threde.
Doug. Virgil, 246, 30.
 The term, however, respects the woof that is used, corresponding to subtemine, Virg., especially as the woof is immediately supplied from pirns.
PIRNIE, adj. Used to denote cloth that has very narrow stripes, S. "Pirny cloth, a web of unequal threads or colours, striped," Gl. Rams.
 The famous fiddler of Kinghorn
 — Gart the lieges gawff and girn ay,
 Aft till the cock proclaim'd the morn;
 Tho' both his weeds and mirth were pirny.
Ramsay's Poems, i. 232.
 Those who were their chief commanders,
 As such who bore the pirnie standarts,
 Who led the van, and drove the rear,
 Were right well mounted of their gear;
 With brogues, and trews, and pirnie plaids,
 With good blew bonnets on their heads.
Cleland's Poems, p. 12.
PIRN-STICK, s. The wooden broach on which the pirn is placed, while the yarn is reeled off. S.
PIRNIE, s. A woollen nightcap; a Kilmarnock cowl. S.
PIRNIE-CAP, s. A nightcap; perhaps of striped stuff. S.
PIRNICKERIE, adj. Troublesome. S.
PIRR, s. A gentle breeze. It is commonly used in this connexion; There's a fine pirr of wind, S.
 Isl. byr, bir, ventus secundus.
 To PIRR, v. n. To spring up, as blood from the wound made by a lancet. S.
PIRR, adj. Smart; a girl is said to look pirr when she is gaily dressed. S.
PIRR, s. A sea-fowl, having a long tail and black head, without webbed feet. S.
PIRRAINA, s. A female child. S.
PYRRE, s. A name given to the Par or Samlet. S.
PIRRIE, adj. 1. Trim; nice in dress. 2. Precise in manner. 3. Having a tripping mode in walking; walking with a spring. S.
 To PIRRIE, v. a. To follow a person from place to place, like a dependent. S.

P I T

- PIRRIE-DOG*, s. 1. A dog that is constantly at his master's heels. 2. A person who is the constant companion of another in the character of a parasite. S.
PIRRIHOUDE, adj. Fond; doating. S.
PIRZIE, adj. Conceited. S.
PYSAN, PYSSEN, s. A gorget. V. PESANE.
PYSENT, adj. Expressive of lightness of conduct. S.
PYSERT, s. A miser. S.
PISHMOTHER, s. An ant. S.
PISK, s. A dry-looking saucy girl. S.
PISKIE, PISKET, adj. 1. Dry. Pisket grass, dried, shrivelled grass. 2. Cold and reserved in manner. S.
PISKIE, adj. Marshy. S.
PISMINNIE, s. The vulgar name for an ant. S.
PISMIRE, s. A steelyard, Orkn.
 "Their measure is not the same with ours, they not using peck and firlo, but instead thereof, weigh their corns on Pismires or Pundlers." Brand's Descr. Orkney, p. 28.
 This is the same with BISMAR, q. v.
PISSANCE, s. Power.
 Syne the pissance come of Ausonia,
 And the pepil Sicany hait alsua.
Doug. Virgil, 253, 20.
 Bellend. uniformly uses the same word. Fr. puissance, from puis, Lat. poss-um.
PISSANT, adj. Powerful; Fr. puissant.
 Lord, our protectour to al traistis in the
 But quham na thing is worthy nor pissant.
 To vs thy grace and als grete mercy grant.
Doug. Virgil, Prol. 126, 22.
PYSSLE, s. A trifle; a thing of no value. S.
 To PYSTER, v. a. To hoard up. S.
PYSTERY, s. Any article hoarded up. S.
 To PIT, v. a. Vulgar pronunciation of E. v. To Put. S.
 To Pit ane's sell down. To commit suicide. S.
 To Pit in. To contribute a share. Inpit or Input. S.
 To Pit one through a thing. To clear up; to explain a thing to a person. S.
PIT,* s. A conical heap of potatoes, covered with earth, and drained by a trench dug round them. S.
PIT and GALLOWS, a privilege conferred on a baron, according to our old laws, of having on his ground a pit for drowning women, and gallows for hanging men, convicted of theft.
 This is mentioned by Bellend. as one of the privileges granted to barons by Malcolm Canmore.
 "It was ordanit als be the said counsal, that fre baronis sall mak jebattis, & draw wellis, for punition of criminabyll personis." Cron. B. xii. c. 9.
 This, however, very imperfectly expresses the meaning of the original passage in Boeth.
 "Constitutum quoque est eodem consilio a rege, uti Barones omnes puleos faciendi ad condemnatas plectendas foeminas, ac patibulum ad viros suspendendos noxios potestatem haberent." In this sense are we to understand furca et fossa, as privileges pertaining to barons. Reg. Maj. B. i. c. 4. s. 2. Quon. Attach. c. 77. In some old deeds, written in our language, these terms are rendered furc and fos.
 This mode of punishment, by immersion, was also known in England. Spelman gives an account of a remarkable instance of it, in the reign of Rich. I., A. 1200. Two women, accused of theft, were subjected to the ordeal by fire, or by burning ploughshares. The one escaped; but the other, having touched the shares, was drowned in the Bike-pool. V. Spelm. vo. Furca.

P I T

It was one of the ancient customs of Burgundy, that women found guilty of theft, were condemned to be cast into a river. V. Chess. Consuetud. Burgund. ap. Skene, Verb. Sign. vo. Fossa.

Mr. Pink. observes, that the punishment of drowning, now unknown, was formerly practised among the Gothic nations. The Swedes boasted of drowning five of their kings. He considers the pit as a relic of this practice; Enquiry, i. 30. This conjecture seems highly probable. Various writers have asserted, that the ancient Goths were wont to sacrifice men to their false deities, by precipitating them into a well, preserved for this purpose in the vicinity of their temples, or altars. V. Keysler. Antiq. Septentr. p. 47.

In the great solemnities of the heathen at Upsal in Sweden, the one whose lot it was to be immolated to the gods, was plunged headlong into a fountain adjoining to the place of sacrifice. If he died easily, it was viewed as a good omen, and his body was immediately taken out of the fountain, and hung up in a consecrated grove. For it was believed, that he was translated to a place among the gods. Worm. Monum. p. 23. 24.

It was one of the attributes of Odin, the great god of the Scandian nations, and doubtless a singular one, that he presided over the gallows. Hence he was called Hango; as being the god of those who were hanged. For the same reason, he was also designed Galgavalldr, i. e. the Lord of the Gallows; q. he who rules over, or wields, it. Landnamabok, pp. 176. 361. 412. 417.

This phrase is known in Germany. Teut. Put ende Galghe; put, a well or pit, galghe, the gallows. Kilian, however, does not translate this phrase literally. "The right or power of the sword," he says, "supreme right, absolute power."

It deserves observation, that in the account which Tacitus gives of the punishments used by the ancient Germans, we may distinctly trace the origin of the Pit and Gallows. "Proditiores transfugas arboribus suspendunt; ignavos et imbelles, et corpore infames, coeno ac palude, injecta insuper crate, mergunt." De Mor. German.

PITALL, s. The rabble. V. PETTAIL.

PYTANE, s. A young child; generally used as a term of endearment, S.

It has been supposed, that this is from Fr. petit, little, and ane, one. But it is more probably from Fr. peton, properly, "a little foot; also, the slender stalk of a leaf, or of a fruit. Mon peton, my little springall, my gentle impe; any such flattering, or dandling phrase, bestowed by nurses on their suckling boyes," Cotgr.

PITCAKE, s. An imitative designation for the plover. S.

To PITY, v. n. To regret.

"I pitied much to see men take the advantage of the time to cast their own conclusions in assembly-acts, though with the extreme disgrace or danger of many of their brethren." Baillie's Lett. i. 133.

To PITY, *v. a. To excite pity in; to cause compassion for. S.

PITIFUL, adj. Mournful; what may be regretted or lamented, S.

"God grant I may prove a false prognosticator. I look for the most pitiful schism that ever our poor church has felt." Baillie's Lett. i. 2.

PITILL, s.

The Pitill and the Pipe gled cryand pewé,
Befoir thir princes ay past, as pairt of purveyoris;
For thay culd cheires chikkynis, and purchase poultré,
To cleik fra the commonis, as Kingis katouris.

Houlate, iii. 1. MS.

These, from their employment, seem to be both birds of prey. The latter is evidently some kind of hawk, denominated from its cry, perhaps the kestrel, or Falco tinnun- culus, Linn. The former in name resembles A.S. bleri-pittel, in Gl. Aelfr. translated storicarius, by Lye scoricarius. Qu. the hen-harrier, le Lanier cendré of Brisson?

P L A

PITMIRK, adj. Very dark; dark as pitch. S.

PITTANE SILWR. A very small coin levied as duty, and exclusive of feu-duty. S.

To PITTER-PATTER, v. n. 1. To repeat prayers after the Romish manner.

— The Cleave geese leave off to clatter,—

And priests, Marias to pitter-patter.—

V. CLAIK, CLAKE.

Watson's Coll. i. 48.

2. To move up and down inconstantly, making a clattering noise with the feet, S.

"Pitter patter is an expression still used by the vulgar; it is in allusion to the custom of muttering pater-nosters." Bannatyne Poems, N. p. 247.

It is, I believe, also used as a s. V. PATER.

PITTER-PATTER, PITTIE-PATTIE, adv. All in a flutter. S.

PITTIVOUT, s. A small arch or vault. S.

PIXIE, s. A spirit with the attributes of the fairies. S.

PIZAN, s. To play the pizan with one. To get the better of one in some way or other. S.

To PIZEN, v. a. Corr. of E. To Poison. S.

PIZZ, s. Pease. S.

PLACAD, PLACKET, s. A placard, S.

"Some explorators were sent to the town of Edinburgh, to spy the form and fashion of all their proceedings; who, at their masters commands, affixed plackets upon the Kirk-doors, sealed with the Earl's own hand and signet." Pit-scottie, p. 44.

Teut. plackaet, decretum, Su.G. placat, Germ. plahat; from plach-en, figere, because a placard, as Wachter observes, is affixed to some place for general inspection.

PLACE, s. 1. The mansion house on an estate is called the Place, S. 2. The term is also used by some of our old writers to denote a castle or strong-hold. S.

"In the month of December 1636, William earl of Errol departed this life in the Place of Errol." Spalding's Troubles in Scotland, i. 54.

"In the middle of the moor-land appears an old tower or castle.—It is called the old Place of Mochrum." P. Mochrum, Wigtons. Statist. Acc. xvii. 570.

It may appear that this is an E. sense of the word, as Johnson explains it "a seat, a residence, a mansion." In support of this sense he quotes 1 Sam. xv. 12. "Saul set him up a place, and is gone down to Gilgal." But place here is to be understood of a monument or trophy of his victory over the Amalekites; according to the sense of the same term, in the Hebrew, 2 Sam. xviii. 18., where it is rendered a pillar.

The idiom is evidently Fr.; place being used for a castle or strong-hold. It was most probably restricted in the same manner, in its primary use in S., although now vulgarly applied to the seat of any one who is the proprietor of the estate on which it is built. Ihre views the Fr. term as allied to A.S. plaece, a street, Su.G. plats, Teut. plaetse, an area.

PLACEBOE, s. A parasite; one who fawns on another. See Sup.

"The Bischope of Brechine, having his Placeboes and Jackmen in the toun, buffetit the Freir, and callit him Heretyck." Knox's Hist. p. 14.; rendered Parasites and Jackmen, Lond. Edit. p. 14.

As denoting one who virtually takes for his motto the Lat. word Placebo; or as referring to the promise which he makes, that he will please his superior at all events. That this was viewed as the origin two centuries ago, appears from the following passage.

For no reward they work but wardlie gloir,
Playing placebo into princes faces;
With lewis and letteris doing thair devoir.

Legend, Bp. St. Andros, Poems 16th Cent. p. 306.

PLACK, PLAK, s. 1. A billon coin, struck in the reign of James III.; the Cochrane Plack. See Sup.

"Our Souerane Lord—hes ordanit to ceis the cours and passage of all the new plakis last cuinyeit and gar put the samin to the fyre. And of the substance, that may be fynit of the samin to gar mak ane new penny of fyne siluer." Acts, Ja. III. 1483. c. 114. Edit. 1566. c. 97. Murray.

This passage clearly proves that the placks referred to were of copper mixed with silver.

2. A small copper coin, formerly current in Scotland, equal to four pennies Scots, or the third part of an English penny. Although the word is still occasionally used in reckoning, it is now only a nominal coin, S.

"Of these some are called — placks, which were worth four pennies." Morysone's Itin. ap. Rudd. Pref. to Diplom. p. 137.

"The plack is an ideal coin at this present time in Scotland." Cardonnel's Numism. Pref. pp. 33, 34.

The word is often used to denote that the thing spoken of is of no value; It's no worth a plack, S. It has been early used in this sense.

Ye're nae a prophet worth a plak.

Cherrie and Slae, st. 83.

When one adopts any plan supposed to be unprofitable, or pursues a course offensive to a superior, it is frequently said; You'll no mak your plack a bawbee by that, S. See Sup.

Teut. placke, plecke, according to Kilian, a coin of various value in different countries; in Louvain, the third part of a stiver, or the same with a groat; in Flanders, a stiver; Ital. piaccha, Hisp. placca, L.B. placa, a coin mentioned in a statute of Henry VI. of England, made at Paris 20th November A. 1426, equal to four greater Blancs. The blanc is half a sol, or about a farthing English. Du Cange also mentions plaque as a Fr. denomination of money; and indeed it seems to have been from the Fr. that the unfortunate Henry borrowed it. He afterwards observes, that the Placa weighed 68 or 69 grains.

As, in Louvain, placke was equivalent to a groat; this denomination might be adopted in S., because our plack contained the same number of pennies Scots, as there were English pence in a groat.

PLACK-AILL, s. Beer sold at a plack per pint. S.

PLACKLESS, adj. Moneyless; having no money, S. See S.

PLACK-PIE, s. A pie formerly sold for a plack. S.

PLACK'S-WORTH, s. A thing of very little value; literally, of the value of a plack. S.

PLACKIT, part. pa. Meaning not clear. S.

PLAGE, s. Quarter; point.

Ane dyn I hard approaching fast me by,
Quhilk mouit fra the plage septentrionall.

Lat. plag-a.

Palice of Honour, i. 8.

To PLAY,* v. n. To boil with fervour. E. to wallop. S.

To PLAY BROWN. To assume a rich brown colour in boiling; a phrase descriptive of substantial broths. S.

To PLAY CARL-AGAIN. To return a stroke; to give as much as one receives. V. CARL-AGAIN. S.

To PLAY PAUW, or PLAY PEW. V. PAW or PEW. S.

PLAID, s. Plea. V. PLEDE.

PLAID, s. "A striped or variegated cloth; an outer loose weed worn much by the Highlanders in Scotland," Johns.

"Their brechan, or plaid, consists of twelve or thirteen yards of a narrow stuff, wrapt round the middle, and reaches to the knees: is often fastened round the middle with a belt, and is then called brechanfeill; but in cold weather is large enough to wrap round the whole body from head to feet; and this often is their only cover, not only within doors, but on the open hills during the whole night. It is frequently fastened on the shoulders with a pin, often of silver, and before with a brotche, (like the fibula of the Romans) which is sometimes of silver, and both large and extensive; the old ones have very frequently mottos." Pennant's Tour in S. 1769. p. 209.

The women also wear a plaid, but it is so narrow as seldom to come below the waist.

"The tonnag, or plaid hangs over their shoulders, and is fastened before with a brotche; but in bad weather is drawn over their heads." Ibid. p. 212.

The plaid, however, is not confined to the Highlands. It is generally worn, by herds and others, in the South and West of S. It is in some places called a Rawchan, in others a Maud. The female plaid is also worn in Ang. and many other counties in the Lowlands.

"The women still retain the plaid, but among the better sort it is now sometimes of silk, or lined with silk." P. Tealing, Forfars. Statist. Acc. iv. 103.

Gael. plaide, id. Shaw. It seems doubtful if this be properly a Gael. word; as it does not occur in the other Celt. dialects; unless we view it as the same with C.B. pleth, plica, a fold. V. Ihre, vo. Faall. Teut. plets signifies a coarse kind of cloth, panni vilioris genus. The same word also denotes, a patch or piece of cloth, segmentum, commissura panni, Kilian. Moes.G. plat, assumentum, Alem. blezz, id. flezzi, vestimentum. The ingenious editor of Popular Ballads says, in Gl.; "The word in the Gaelic, and in every other language of which I have any knowledge, means any thing broad and flat; and when applied to a plaid or blanket, signifies simply a broad, plain, unformed piece of cloth." V. PLAİK.

PLAIDEN, PLAIDING, s. A coarse woollen cloth, not the same with flannel, as Sibb. says, but differing from it in being tweeled, S. See Sup.

"A good many weavers are constantly employed in making coarse cloth, commonly called plaiden, from the produce of their sheep, which, in the summer markets, is sold for from 9d. to 1s. the Scotch ell." P. Dallas, Elgin, Statist. Acc. iv. 109.

Either from plaid, as being cloth of the same quality with that worn in *plaid*s; or Teut. plets, q. v. under PLAID.

PLAY-FEIR, PLAY-FERE, PLAYFAIR, s. 1. A play-fellow. See Sup.

But saw ye nocht the King cum heir?

I am ane sportour and playfeir

To that yung King.

Lyndsay, S.P.R. ii. 29.

"Play with your playfairs;" Ferguson's S. Prov. p. 27. Play feres; Ramsay, p. 58. Play feers, Kelly, p. 281. expl. "fellows."

From play, and ferre, a companion, q. v.

2. Improperly used for a toy, a play-thing, S.

O think that eild, wi' wyly fit,

Is wearing nearer bit by bit!

Gin yence he claws you wi' his paw,

What's siller for? —

But gowden playfair, that may please

The second sharger till he dies.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 107.

PLAYRIFE, adj. Syn. with E. playful and playsome. S.

PLAIG, s. A toy; a play-thing. V. PLAYOKIS. S.

PLAİK, s. A plaid; a loose covering for the body, Ang. Su.G. Isl. plagg, vestimentum, pannus; Belg. plaghe.

V. Seren. vo. Placket, Note.

PLAYN, PLAYNE. In playne. 1. Plainly; clearly.

Neuo he was, as it was knawin in playn,
To the Butler befor that thai had slayn.

Wallace, iv. 585. MS.

Till Saynet Jhonstone this wryt he send agayn,
Befor the lordis was manifest in playne.

Ibid. viii. 34. MS.

i. c. By a pleonasm, plainly manifest. In to playn, ibid.
iii. 335.

2. It seems to be sometimes used in the same sense with Fr. de plain, immediately; out of hand.

Comfort thai lost quhen thair Chyftayne was slayn,
And mony ane to fle began in playne.

Wallace, vii. 1203. MS.

To PLAINE, v. a. To shew; to display. S.

PLAINEN, s. Coarse linen. S.

To PLAINYIE, v. n. To complain. Fr. plaindre.

"Many seeing place given to men that would plainyie, began, day by day, more and more to complain upon his tyranny." Pitcottie, p. 34.

Pleyn, v. and pleynt, s. are used in O.E.

Erles & barons at ther first samnyng,
For many maner resons pleyned of the kyng.—
& yit thei mad pleynt of his tresorere.

R. Brunne, p. 312.

PLAINSTANES, s. pl. 1. The pavement, S. See S.

—The spacious street and plainstones
Were never kend to crack but anes,
Whilk happen'd on the hinder night
Whan Fraser's uly tint its light.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 67.

2. In some places used to denominate the cross or exchange, as being paved with flat stones, S.

To PLAINT, PLENT, v. n. To complain of, S. but now nearly obsolete.

"There is one point that we plaint is not observed to us, quhilk is, that na soldiour suld remane in the toun efter your Grace's departing." Knox's Hist. p. 143.

The pure men plentis that duellis besyde him,
How [he] creipis in a hoill to hyde him,
And barris them fast without the yettis,
When they come there to crave there debtis.

Legend, Bp. St. Androis, Poems 16th Cent. p. 323.

The s. is used in S. as in E.

This is from the same origin with Plainyie.

PLAINTWISS, adj. Disposed to complain of; having ground of complaint against. S.

PLAYOKIS, s. pl.

This Bischap Willame the Lawndalis
Owrnyd his kyrk wyth fayre jowalis,
Westymentis, bukis, and othir ma
Plesand playokis, he gave alsua.

Wyntown, ix. 6. 146.

Mr. MacPherson thinks this probably corrupted. In another MS. pheralis occurs. This word is commonly used in the West of S. for toys or playthings. We can scarcely suppose that Wyntown should so remarkably depreciate the Bishop's donations, as to give them so mean a designation. Such language would have been natural enough for Lyndsay or some of his contemporaries.

PLAIT-BACKIE, s. A kind of bedgown, reaching down to the knees, with three plaits in the back, worn by old women in Aberds. and Angus. S.

PLAITINGS. V. SOLESHOE.

PLAITT, s. Perhaps plan; or controversy, altercation. S.

PLANE, adj. Apparently as signifying, full, consisting of its different constituent branches. See Sup.

"The haill thre Estatis of the Realme sittand in plane
Parliament, that is to say, the Clergy, Barronis, and Commissionaris of Burrowis be ane assent, nane discreipand, weill auisit and deliuerit, hes renokit all alienatiounis," &c.

Acts, Ja. II. 1437. c. 2. Edit. 1566.

Lat. plen-us, Fr. plein.

PLANE-TREE, s. The maple, S.

"Acer pseudo-platanus. The great Maple, or Bastard Sycomore, Anglis. The Plane-Tree, Scotis." Lightfoot,
p. 639.

To PLANK, v. a. To divide, or exchange pieces of land possessed by different people, so that each person's property may lie together. S.

PLANK, s. A term applied to regular divisions of land, in distinction from the irregular ridges of Run-rig. S.

PLANT-A-CRUIVE, PLANTA-CREW, s. A small enclosure surrounded by a feal-dyke, for raising cole-worts, &c. S.

PLANTEVSS, adj. Making complaint. S.

PLANTTIS, s. Perhaps errat. for plattis, plates. S.

To PLASH, v. n. 1. To make a noise by dashing water,
S. Pleesh, to dash and wade among water, S.B.

Thro' thick and thin they scour'd about,

Plashing thro' dubs and sykes.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 278.

2. To bedaub with mire; to splash, S.

3. It is applied to clothes, or to any thing, which, in consequence of being thoroughly drenched, emits the noise occasioned by the agitation of water. My claise are aw plashing, S.

Germ. platz-en est ex incussione aut praecipiti lapsu resonare. V. Wachter. Su.G. plask-a, aquam inter abluendum cum sonitu movere; Ihre. Belg. plass-en, to dabble.
to swash. Gael. platseadh, a squash, Shaw. V. PLISH-PLASH.

To PLASH, v. a. 1. To strike water forcibly. 2. Fig. to denote any ineffectual endeavour; as, "Ye're just plashing the water." S.

PLASHMILLER, s. A fuller; one who fulls cloth. S.

PLASH, s. PLASH of rain; a heavy fall of rain, S. See S.

Germ. platzregen, densa pluvia, q. pluvia sonora ex lapsu. V. Wachter. Belg. plasregen, praeceps imber, pluvia lacunas faciens, Kilian. E. plash, "a small lake of water, or puddle," is evidently allied; and flash, expl. "a body of water driven by violence."

PLASH-FLUKE, PLASHIE, s. The fish called Plaice. S.

PLASKET, s. Apparently a variation of Pliskie, q. v. S.

PLASMATOR, PLASMATOUR, s. The former; the maker; Gr. πλασματωρ.

"The supreme plasmator of hauyn ande eird hes permittit them to be boreaus, to puneis vs for the mysknaulage of his magestie." Compl. S. p. 41.

Thir monarcheis, I understand,
Preordinat war be the command
Of God, the Plasmatour of all,
For to dounthring, and to mak thrall.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 106.

PLASTROUN, s.

A plastroun on her knee she laid,
And there on love justly she plaid.

There to her neighbours sweetly sang;

This lady sighed oft amang. Sir Egeir, p. 11.

A musical instrument is certainly meant. The writer may have mistaken the name. Gr. πληκτρον, Lat. plectrum, denote the instrument with which the strings of an harp are struck. Hence, perhaps, the term is here applied to the harp itself.

To PLAT, PLET, v. a. To plait; to fold; used to denote the act of embracing.

P L A

Wyth blyth chere thare he hym plet,
In [his] armis so thankfully,
That held his ward so worthely.

Wyntown, ix. 27. 430.

PLAT, adj. 1. Flat; level.

The quiet closettys opnyt wyth ane reird,
And we lay plat grufelyngis on the erd.

Doug. Virgil, 70, 26.

2. Low, as opposed to what is high.

Thair litil bonet, or bred hat,
Sumtyme heiche, and sumtyme plat,
Waites not how on thair hede to stand.

Maitland Poems, p. 184.

3. Close; near.

The stede bekend held to his schoulder plat,
And he at eis apoun his bak doun sat.

Doug. Virgil, 351, 46.

Plat is often used by Chaucer and Gower in the sense of flat.

He leyth doun his one eare all plat.

Conf. Am. Fol. 10.

Su.G. platt, Teut. plat, Arm. Fr. plat, Ital. platto, piatto, planus.

PLAT, adv. Flatly.

Plat he refuses, enherding to his entent,
The first sentence haldand euer in ane.

Doug. Virgil, 60, 40.

Teut. plat, planè et aperte; Su.G. platt, penitus.

Chaucer and Gower also use plat as an adv.

But notheles of one assent

They myghte not accorde plat.

i. e. They could not entirely agree. Gower, Conf. Am. Fol. 16. a.

PLAT, adv. Flat. Plat contrary, directly contrary. S.

To PLAT, v. a. To flat; to place flat or close. S.

PLAT, PLATT, s. A model; a plan. See Sup.

And this Electra grete Atlas begat,

That on his schuldir beris the heuynnis plat.

Doug. Virgil, 245, 13.

"By an act of Platt, dated at Edinburgh the 22d of November [1615] the several Dignit[ar]ies and Ministers, both in the Bishoprick and Earldom, were provided to particular maintenances—payable by the King and Bishop to the Ministers in their several bounds respectivè." Wallace's Orkney, p. 90.

In the same sense must we understand the legal phrase, "Decrees of plat—and valuation of Teinds." V. Jurid. Stiles, Vol. iii. Stile of Summons of Adjudication.

Teut. plat, exemplar. Hence E. plat-form. Plot, as signifying a plan, seems radically the same. The parent-term is plat, planus, aequalis; also, latus. Hence the word denoting a plan; q. something laid out plainly, or in all its extent; also Germ. plat, a table, a plate of metal, a plate for holding food; all from their being plain or level.

PLAT, PLATT, PLATE, s. 1. A dash; a stroke to the ground.

— Chorineus als fast

Ruschit on his fa,——

Syne with his kne him possit with sic an plat,

That on the erde he speldit hym al flet.

Doug. Virgil, 419, 26.

Wythin thare tempil haue thay brocht alsua

The bustuous swyne, and the twyuteris snaw quhite,
That wyth thare clufis can the erde smyte,

Wyth mony plat scheddand thare purpoure blude.

Ibid. 455, 49.

i. e. With many or repeated dashings of themselves on the ground, in consequence of the pain of the mortal blow they have received.

P L E

2. A blow with the fist.

Sapience, thow servis to beir a platt;

Me think thow schawis the not weill wittit.

Lyndsay, S.P.R. ii. 117.

Speid hame, or I sall paik thy cote.

And to begin, fals Cairle, tak thair ane plate.

Ibid. p. 9.

Rudd. views this as the same with plat, flat, q. beating flat to the ground. But Teut. plets-en signifies, palma quater; depserere, subigere; plett-en, conculcare, contundere; Germ. pletz-en, cum strepitu et impetu cadere. Perhaps it is still more nearly allied to A.S. plaett-as; "alapae, cuffs, blows, buffets," Somner. Su.G. plaett, ictus levis, (plaett-a, to tap, Wideg.) A.S. plaet-an, ferire; whence Fr. playe, Bremens. pliete, a wound.

PLAT, COW-PLAT, s. A cake of cow's dung. S.

To PLATCH, v. n. To make a heavy noise in walking, with quick short steps. S.

PLATCH, s. A plain-soled foot. S.

PLATEGLUFE, s. A glove made of mail; a piece of armour anciently worn. S.

PLATFUTE, s. A term anciently used in music.

This propir Bird he gave in gouerning

To me, quhilk was his simpill seruiture;

On quhome I did my diligence and cure,

To leirn hir language artificial,

To play platfute, and quhissil fute befoir.

Papingo, Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 187.

Platfute seems to have been a term of reproach, originally applied to one who was plain-soled, and thence ludicrously to some dance. Teut. plat-voet, planipes; plancus. As corresponding to plancus, it was, therefore, also synon. with splay-foot.

To PLAT UP, v. a. To erect; perhaps including the idea of expedition.

"Leith fortifications went on speedily; above 1000 hands, daily employed, plat up towards the sea sundry perfect and strong bastions, well garnished with a number of double cannon, that we feared not much any landing of ships on that quarter." Baillie's Lett. i. 160.

Can this signify, plaited up, from the ancient custom of wattling? Hence, perhaps, A.S. plett, pletta, a sheepfold.

PLAWAY, adj. A term applied to bread. S.

To PLEASE a thing. To be pleased with it. S.

To PLECHE, v. a. To bleach. Pleching, bleaching. S.

PLED, s. Perhaps, private corner, but doubtful. S.

PLEDE, PLEID, PLEID, s. 1. Controversy; debate.

— Quhare thar is in plede twa men

Askand the crowne of a kynrike,——

But dowl, the nest male in the gre

Preferryd to the rewme suld be.

Wyntown, viii. 4. 40.

And he denyit, and so began the pleid.

Henryson, Bannatyne Poems, p. 112.

Bot pleid, without opposition.

— Bot gif the fatis, but pleid,

At my plesure sufferit me life to leid,——

The cieté of Troy than first agane suld I

Restore.——

Doug. Virgil, 111, 34.

Plaide is used, Baron Lawes.

2. A quarrel; a broil.

He gart his feit defend his heid,——

Quhile he was past out of all pleid.

Chr. Kirk, st. 17.

3. Care; sorrow; metaph. used.

Sche fild ane stoip, and brought in cheis and breid:

Thay eit and drank; and leuit all thair pleyd.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 68.

P L E

The transition is natural enough, as strife or debate generally produces sorrow.

Belg. Hisp. pleyte, lis, litigium; Fr. plaid. Kilian thinks that it is perhaps from plactse, area, forum. It may be radically allied to Plat, a dash; a blow, q. v.; or rather to A.S. pleo. V. PLEY.

To PLEDE, PLEID, v. n. To contend; to quarrel, Doug. Virgil. V. the s.

To PLEDGE, v. a. "To invite to drink, by accepting the cup or health after another," Johns.

This term is not peculiar to S., but used by Shakspeare and other E. writers. I mention it, therefore, merely to take notice of the traditionary account given of its origin. It is said that in this country, in times of general distrust in consequence of family feuds, or the violence of factions, when a man was about to drink, it was customary for some friend in the company to say, I pledge you; at the same time drawing his dirk, and resting the pommel of it on the table at which they sat. The meaning was, that he pledged his life for that of his friend, while he was drinking, that no man in company should take advantage of his defenceless situation.

Shakspeare would seem to allude to this custom, when he says;

— The fellow, that
Parts bread with him, and pledges
The breath of him in a divided draught,
Is the readiest man to kill him. Tim. of Athens.

The absurd and immoral custom of pledging one's self to drink the same quantity after another, must have been very ancient. "Alexander, the Macedonian, is reported to have drunk a cup containing two Congii, which contained more than one pottle, tho' less than our gallon, to Proteas, who commending the King's ability, pledged him, then called for another cup of the same dimensions, and drank it off to him. The King, as the laws of good fellowship required, pledged Proteas in the same cup, but being immediately overcome, fell back upon his pillow, letting the cup fall out of his hands, and by that means was brought into the disease whereof he shortly after died, as we are informed by Athenaeus." Potter's Antiq. Greece, ii. 396. Such was the end of Alexander the Great!

PLEENGIE, s. The young of the Herring Gull. S.

PLEY, PLEYE, s. 1. A debate; a quarrel; a broil, S.

O worthy Greeks, thought ye like me,
This pley sud seen be deen;
The wearing o' Achilles graith
Wad be decided seen.

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 14.

2. A complaint or action at law, whether of a criminal or civil nature; a juridical term, S. plea, E.

"The pley of Barons pertains to the Schiref of the countrie." Reg. Maj. 1. c. 3. s. 1.

"Criminall pleyes, touches life or lim, or capitall peines." Skene, Verb. Sign. vo. Mote.

Placitum is the correspondent term, L.B.

3. A quarrel of whatever kind. S.

Skene derives this word from Fr. plaidier, to plead, to sue at law. But its origin is certainly A.S. pleo, pleoh, danger, debate.

To PLEY, v. n. To plead; to answer in a court of law.

"Gif ane Burges is persewed for any complaint, he sall not be compelled to pley without his awin burgh, bot in default of Court, not balden." Burrow Lawes, c. 7. s. 1. V. the s.

PLEYABLE, adj. Debateable at law. S.

PLEYARE, PLEYERE, s. A litigator. S.

To PLEID, v. a. To subject to a legal prosecution. S.

PLEINYEOUR, s. A complainer. Acts, Ja. II.

P L E

To PLENYE, v. n. To complain, Barbour. V. PLAINYIE.

To PLENYS, PLENYSS, PLENISH, v. a. 1. To furnish; most generally to provide furniture for a house. V. the s. It also signifies to stock a farm, S. See Sup. 2. To supply with inhabitants; to occupy.

Quhen Scottis hard thir fyne tythingis off new,
Out off all part to Wallace fast thai drew,
Plenyst the toun quhilk was thair heretage.

Wallace, vi. 264. MS.

Thai will nocht fecht thocht we all yher suld bid;
Ye may off pess plenyss thir landis wid.

Ibid. xi. 46. MS.

To PLENYSS, v. n. To spread; to diffuse itself. S.

PLENNISSING, PLENISING, s. Household furniture.

"His heire sall have to his house this vtensell or insicht (plennissing)." Burrow Lawes, c. 125. s. 1.

—"Ye ar uncertaine in what moment ye wil be warned, it becommeth vs to send our plenising, substance and riches befor us." Bruce's Eleven Serm. H. 6. b.

"S. plenishing, household furniture, supellex;—to plenish a house, to provide such furniture;" Rudd.

PLENISHMENT, s. The same with Plenissing. S.

PLENSHER NAIL. A large nail. S.

PLENSHING-NAIL, s. A large nail, such as is used in nailing down a floor to the joists. S.

To PLENT, v. n. To complain. V. PLAINT.

PLENTE, s. Complaint; E. plaint. S.

PLENTEOUS, adj. Complaining.

"Attachments ar to be called ane lawful binding, be the quhilk ane party is constrained against his wil to stand to the law, and to doe sic right and reason as he aught of law to ane other partie, that is plenteous to him." Baron Courts, c. 2. s. 3.

From Fr. plaintif, plaintive, complaining; or formed like those Fr. words ending in eux.

PLEP, s. Any thing weak or feeble, S.B. Hence, PLEPPIT, adj. Feeble; not stiff; creased. A pleppit dud, a worn-out rag; weffil, synon.

Perhaps q. belappit, a thing that has been creased and worn in consequence of being wrapped round something else.

PLESANCE, s. Pleasure; delight. Fr. plaisance.

Quhen other lyvit in joye and plesance,
Thaire lyfe was noucht bot care and repentance.

King's Quair, iii. 18.

To PLESK, v. n. V. PLASH.

To PLET, v. a. To quarrel; to reprehend.

First with sic bustuous wourdis he thame gret,
And but offence gan thame chiding thus plet.

Doug. Virgil, 177, 10.

Rudd. views this as corr. for the sake of the rhyme, from plede or plead. There is, however, no occasion for this supposition. The term exactly corresponds to Teut. pleyt-en, litigare.

PLET, pret. and part. pa. Plaited; folded. S.

PLET, adj. Due; direct; as, Plet South, due South. S.

To PLET, PLETTIN, PLATTEN, v. a. To rivet; to clench; as blacksmiths turn down the points of the nails in the operation of shoeing horses. S.

PLETTIN-STANE, s. The large flat stone on which the horse's foot was set that the nails might be riveted. S.

PLEVAR, s. A plover.

Thair was Pyattis, and Pertrekis, and Plevaris anew.
Houlate, l. 14. MS.

PLEUAT, s. A green turf or sod for covering houses. S.

PLEUCH, PLEUGH, s. 1. A plough.

In the meyn tyme Eneas with ane pleuch

P L E

The cieté circulit, and markit be ane seuch.

Doug. Virgil, 153, 10.

A.S. Su.G. plog, Alem. pluog, phluog, Germ. pflug, Belg. ploeg, Pol. plug, Bohem. pluh. Some derive this term from Syr. pelak, aravit.

2. That constellation called Ursa Major, denominated from its form, which resembles a plough, fully as much as it does a wain, S.

—The Pleuch, and the poles, and the planetis began,
The Son, the seuin sternes, and the Charle wane.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 239, b. 1.

There is an evident impropriety here; as the good Bishop mentions the same constellation under two different names.

Our forefathers may have adopted this name from the Romans. For they not only called it plaustrum, from its resemblance to a waggon, but Triones, i. e. ploughing oxen, q. teriones, enim propriè sunt boves aratorii dicti eo quòd terram terant; Isidor. p. 910. This name was properly given to the stars composing this constellation, in number seven; therefore called septem triones, whence septentrio, as signifying the North, or quarter in which they appear. Another constellation, because of its vicinity to this, is called Bootes, i. e. the ox-driver. Bootem dixerunt eo quòd plastro haeret. Isidor. ut sup.

3. The quantity of land which one plough will till. S.

PLEUCH-AIRNS, s. pl. V. PLEUCH-IRNES. S.

PLEUCH-BRIDGE, s. What is attached to the head or end of a plough-beam, for regulating the depth or breadth of the furrow; the double-tree being fixed to it by a hook resembling the letter S. S.

PLEUCH-GANG, PLOUGH-GANG, s. As much land as can be properly tilled by one plough, S. See Sup.

"The number of plough-gangs, in the hands of tenants, is about 141½,—reckoning 13 acres of arable land to each plough-gang." P. Moulin, Perth. Statist. Acc. v. 56.

This corresponds to plogland, a measure of land known among the most ancient Scythians, and all the inhabitants of Sweden and Germany. We also use the phrase a pleuch of land, S. in the same sense.

"Hida terrae, ane pleuch of land," Skene, Verb. Sign. vo. Hilda.

PLEUCH-GATE, PLOUGH-GATE, v. The same with plough-gang, S. A plough-gate or plough-gang of land is now understood to include about forty Scots acres at an average. S.

"There are 56 plough-gates and a half in the parish." P. Innerwick, Haddington, Statist. Acc. i. 121. 122.

Gate is evidently used in the same sense with gang, q. as much land as a plough can go over. Gate seems to be most naturally deduced from Su.G. gaa, to go, as Lat. iter from eo.

PLEUCHGEIRE, v. The furniture belonging to a plough, as coulter, &c., S. Pleuch-irnes, synonym.

Quhat-sum-ever persone—destroyis pleuch and pleuchgeire, in time of teeling,—sall be—punished therefore to the death, as thieves." Acts, Ja. VI. 1587, c. 82. Murray. V. GER.

PLEUCHGRAITH, s. The same with pleuchgeire, S.

"Destroyers of—pleuchgraith—suld be punished as thieues." Ind. Skene's Acts. V. SOWME, SOYME.

PLEUCH-HORSE, s. A horse used in ploughing. S.

PLEUCH-IRNES, PLWYRNYS, s. pl. The iron instruments belonging to a plough, S.

He pleyhnyd to the Schyrrawe sare,
That stollyn his plwyrnys ware.

Wyntown, viii. 24. 48.

Isl. plogiarn signifies the ploughshare. Thus in the account given of the trial by ordeal, which Harold Gilli was to undergo, in proving his affinity to the royal family of Norway, it is said: ix. plog-iarn gloandi voro nidrlogd, oc geck Haralldr thar eptir, berom fotom: Nine burning ploughshares were laid on the ground, through which Harold walked barefoot. Heimskringla, ap. Johnst. Antiq. C. Scand. p. 246.

P L I

PLEUCH-MAN, s. A ploughman. S.

PLEUCH-SHEARS, s. pl. A bolt with a crooked head, for regulating the Bridle and keeping it steady when the plough is to be raised or depressed. S.

PLEUCH-SHEATH, s. The head of a plough on which the sock or ploughshare is put when at work. S.

PLEW, PLOW, s. A plane for making what joiners call "a groove and feather;" a match-plane, E. S.

PLEWIS, s. pl. For pleyis, debates. S.

PLY, s. Plight; condition, S.

Thy pure pynd thropole peilt, and out of ply.—

Gars men dispyt thair flesch, thou spreit of Gy.

Fr. pli, habit, state. Dunbar, Evergreen, ii. 56.

PLY, s. A fold; a plait, S. See Sup.

This is given by Johns., on the authority of Arbuthnot, as an E. word. But it will be found, in various instances, that the words quoted from Arbuthnot as E. are in fact S.

PLY, s. A discord; a quarrel, To get a ply is to be scolded. V. PLEY. S.

PLICHEN, (gutt.) s. Plight; condition. S.

PLICHEN, s. Used to denote a peasant. S.

PLYCHT, s.

For my trespass quhy suld my sone haif plycht?

Quha did the myss, lat thame susteine the paine.

Henrysone, Bannatyne Poems, p. 117. st. 8.

Lord Hailes gives this among words not understood. Mr. Pinkerton, when explaining some of these, says; "Plycht is injury; literally, sad case; a man is in a sad plight. See King Hart." But this word needs no adj. to express its meaning. This is to make it merely the common E. word. It may signify either obligation or punishment, although the latter seems preferable.

Teut. pflicht, obligatio; Holland, judicium. Su.G. plikkt, pligt, denotes both obligation, and the punishment due in consequence of the neglect of it; kirkoplikkt, poena ecclesiastica. The word in the first sense, is from A.S. plihtan, Su.G. pligta, spondere. But Ihre thinks that, as used in the second, it may be from Su.G. plaaga, cruciatus.

PLYDIS, s. pl. Perhaps, plaids. S.

PLIES, s. pl. Very thin strata of freestone, separated from each other by a little clay or mica. S.

To PLYPE, v. n. 1. To paddle or dabble in water. 2. To fall into water. S.

PLYPE, s. 1. A heavy rain. 2. A fall into water. S.

PLIRRIE, s. V. PLEENGIE. S.

To PLISH-PLASH, v. n. A term denoting the dashing of liquids in successive shocks, caused by the operation of the wind or of any other body, S.

Now tup-horn spoons, wi' muckle mou,

Plish-plash'd; nae chiel was hoolie.

Rev. J. Nicol's Poems, i. 144.

This is a reduplicative word, formed, like many others in our language, from the v. PLASH, q. v.

PLISH-PLASH, adv. A thing is said to play plish-plash, S. in the sense given of the v.

PLISKIE, s. 1. Properly, a mischievous trick; although sometimes used to denote an action, which is productive of bad consequences, although without any such intention, S. See Sup.

Their hearts the same, they daur'd to risk aye
 Their lugs in onie rackless pliskie;
 For, now, inur'd to loupin dykes,
 They nouthar dreaded men nor tykes.

V. SNACKIE. Rev. J. Nicol's Poems, ii. 90.

2. It is used in the sense of plight, condition. S.

This is perhaps formed from A.S. plaega, plega, play, sport, by means of the termination isc, Goth. isk, expressive of increment, q. plegisc, sport degenerating into mischief. V. Wachter, Proleg. Sect. 6. vo. Isch. It confirms this etymon, that it is commonly said, He has play'd me a bonny pliskie, S.

— She play'd a pliskie
 To him that night. Ibid. i. 149.

PLIT, s. The slice of earth turned over by the plough in earing. S.

PLYVENS, s. pl. The flowers of the red clover. S.

PLOD, s. A green sod or turf. S.

To PLODDER, v. n. To toil hard. S.

PLODDERE, s. "Banger; maunder; fighter."

Of this assege in thare hethyng
 The Inglis oysid to mak karpynge:
 "I wowe to God, scho mais gret sterc,
 "The Scottis wenche ploddere.
 "Come I are, come I late,
 "I fand Annot at the yhate."

Wyntown, viii. 33. 142.

This refers to Black Agnes of Dunbar.

"O.Fr. plaud-er, bang, maul, &c." Gl. Perhaps from the same origin with Plat, s. q. v.

PLOY, s. 1. A harmless frolic; a piece of entertainment, S.

"Aploy, a little sport or merriment; a merry meeting." Sir J. Sinclair's Observ. p. 125.

It properly denotes that sort of amusement in which a party is engaged; and frequently includes the idea of a short excursion to the country.

2. It sometimes denotes a frolic, which, although begun in jest, has a serious issue, S.

— Ralph unto Colin says;

Yon hobbleshow is like some stout to raise.—
 Says Colin, for he was a sicker boy,
 Neiper, I fear, this is a kittle ploy.

Ross's Helenore, p. 89.

It is even used with respect to a state of warfare.

John was a clever and auldfarrand boy,
 As you shall hear by the ensuing ploy.

Hamilton's Wallace, p. 263.

Altho' his mither, in her weirds,
 Fortald his death at Troy,
 I soon prevail'd wi' her to send
 The young man to the ploy.

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 18.

I am inclined to view it as formed from A.S. pleg-an, to play. V. PLISKIE.

PLOY, s. An action at law. S.

PLOOKY, s. A slight stroke. S.

PLOOKY, adj. Covered with pimples. S.

To PLOPE, v. n. To fall with noise like that made by falling into water. E. to plump. S.

PLOP, s. A fall of this description. S.

To PLORE, v. n. To work amongst mire, generally applied to children when thus amusing themselves. S.

PLORIE, s. Any piece of ground wrought into a mire. S.

To PLOT, v. a. 1. To scald; to burn by means of boiling water, S.

E'en while the tea's fill'd reeking round,
 Rather than plot a tender tongue,

Treat a' the circling lugs wi' sound,
 Syne safely sip when ye have sung.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 199.

2. To make any liquid scalding hot, S.

3. To burn, in a general sense; improperly used. See S.

I never sooner money got,
 But all my poutches it would plot,
 And scorch them sore, it was sae hot.

Forbes's Dominie Depos'd p. 26.

To PLOT, v. a. 1. To plot a hen, to pluck off the feathers.

2. To make bare; to fleece, used in a general sense. S.

PLOTTIT, part. adj. Insignificant; looking poorly. S.

PLOT-HET, PLOTTIN-HET, adj. So hot as to scald. S.

PLOTTIE, s. A hot drink; mulled wine. S.

To PLOTCH, v. n. To dabble; to work slowly. S.

PLOTCKOCK, s. A name given to the devil.

"In this mean time, when they were taking forth their artillery, and the king [James IV.] being in the Abbey for the time, there was a cry heard at the market-cross of Edinburgh, at the hour of midnight, proclaiming as it had been a summons, which was named and called by the proclaimer thereof, The Summons of Plotcock; which desired all men, to compear, both Earl and Lord, and Baron and Gentleman, and all honest Gentlemen within the town (every man specified by his own name) to compear, within the space of forty days, before his master, where it should happen him to appoint, and be for the time, under the pain of disobedience." Pitcottie, p. 112.

This is said to have taken place before the fatal battle of Flodden.

This name seems to have been retained in Ramsay's time.

At midnight hours o'er the kirkyard she raves,
 And seven times does her prayers backward pray,
 Till Plotcock comes with lumps of Lapland clay,
 Mixt with the venom of black tairs and snakes:
 Of this unsensy pictures aft she makes
 Of ony ane she hates, and gars expire
 With slow and racking pains afore a fire,
 Stuck fou of prines; the devilish pictures melt;
 The pain by fowk they represent is felt.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 95.

This has been supposed to be a corr. of Pluto, the name of that heathen deity who was believed to reign in the infernal regions. It does not appear that this name was commonly given to the devil. It may be observed, however, that the use of it in S. may have originated from some Northern fable; as our forefathers seem to have been well acquainted with the magical operations of Sweden and Lapland; and according to the last passage, Plotcock brings Lapland clay, which, doubtless, would have some peculiar virtue. B may have been changed to P; for according to Rudbeck, the Sw. name of Pluto was Blut-mader; Atalant i. 724. In Isl. he is denominated Blotgod, i. e. the god of sacrifices, from Su.G. blot-a, Moes.G. blot-an, to sacrifice, and this from bloth, blood.

PLOTTER-PLATE, s. A wooden platter with a place in the middle to hold salt. S.

PLOUD, s. A green sod, Aberd.

"They are supplied with turf and heather from the muirs, and a sort of green sods, called plouds, which they cast in the exhausted mosses." P. Leochel, Aberd. Statist. Acc. vi. 218.

Fland. plot-en, membranum sive corium exuere. A piece of green sward is called S. flag, for the same reason, from flag-a, deglubere, because the ground is as it were flayed.

PLOUK, s. A pimple. V. PLUKE. S.

PLOUKIE, adj. Covered with pimples; full of little knobs.

PLOUKINESS, s. The state of being pimpled. S.

PLOUSSIE, adj. Plump; well-grown. S.
To PLOUT, v. n. To splash; the same as Plouter. S.
PLOUT-KIRN, s. The common churn, wrought by dashing the kirn-staff up and down. S.
To PLOUT, v. a. To poke. S.
PLOUT, s. The poker, or any implement used for stirring the fire, as a rod of iron, &c. S.
PLOUT, s. 1. A heavy shower of rain, S. 2. The sound made by a heavy body falling into the water, or by the agitation of water. S.
 Belg. plots-en, to fall down suddenly, to fall down plump, Sewel.
To PLOUTER, v. n. To make a noise among water, to work with the hands or feet in agitating any liquid, to be engaged in any wet and dirty work, S. nearly synon. with paddle, E.
 Sibb. writes plowster, which he resolves into poolstir. But it may more naturally be traced to Germ. plader-n, humida et sordida tractare; plader, sordes; Wachter. This is evidently from the same root with Teut. plots-en, plotsen int water, in aquam irruere, Plash, q. v. is certainly from the same common stock. This observation applies perhaps to E. splutter.
PLOUTER, s. The act of floundering through water or mire, S.
 He'd spent mair in brogues gaun about her,
 Nor hardly was weel worth to waur;
 For mony a foul weary plouter
 She'd cost him through gutters and glaur.
Jamieson's Popular Ball. i. 294.
A. Bor. plowding, wading through thick and thin, is evidently from the same fountain. V. Grose.
PLOUTIE, s. A fall; generally a sudden one. S.
PLOUT-NET, s. A small net for fishing, shaped like a stocking, affixed to two poles. Syn. Pout-net, Hose-net.
To PLOWSTER, v. n. The same with Plouter, q. v. S.
PLUCHET, s. Something pertaining to a plough. S.
PLUCK, s. The Pogge, or Armed Bullhead, a fish; small and ugly, supposed by the fishers to be poisonous, S. Cottus Cataphractus, Linn. See Sup.
PLUCK, s. A two-pronged fork, with the prongs at right angles to the shaft, for taking dung out of a cart. S.
PLUCKER, (GREAT). The fishing frog. S.
PLUCKUP, PLUKUP, s. See Sup.
 —Na expensis did he spair to spend,
 Quhill pece was brocht vnto ane finall end.
 Quhar as he fand vs at the plukup fair,
 God knawis in Scotland quhat he had ado
 With baith the sydis, or he could bring vs to.
Poems Sixteenth Century, p. 299.
 This is left without expl. in Gl. But, at the plukup fair certainly signifies, completely in a state of dissension, ready to pull each other's ears.
Pluck, v. S. B. signifies to spar; They pluckit ane anither like cocks. The E. phrase, to pluck a crow, is allied; also Belg. plukhaair-en, to fall together by the ears. The word in form, however, most nearly resembles the E. v. to pluck up, as signifying to pull up by the roots.
To PLUFF, v. a. 1. To throw out smoke in quick and successive whiffs. 2. To set fire to gunpowder. 3. To throw out hair-powder in dressing the hair. S.
To PLUFF, v. n. 1. To puff; to blow; to pant. 2. To PLUFF awa, to set fire to suddenly. "He's pluffin awa at pouter." S.
PLUFF, s. 1. A pluff of reek, the quantity of smoke emitted at one whiff from a tobacco-pipe. A pluff of pouter, the smoke caused by the ignition of a small quantity of gunpowder. 2. A small quantity of dry gunpowder set on fire. 3. The implement used for throwing out hair-powder. 4. The act of throwing hair-powder on a head or wig. 5. A rotten and dried mushroom which goes to dust upon being touched. 6. A pear with a fair outside but within entirely rotten. 7. A simple kind of bellows made of bourtree. S.

PLUFFINS, s. pl. Any thing easily blown away. S.
PLUFFY, adj. Applied to the face when very fleshy; chubby, S.
Su. G. plufsig, facies obesa, prae pinguedine inflata; Ihre.
PLUKE, PLOUK, pron. plook, s. 1. A pimple, S. A. Bor.
 "The kinde of the disease—was a pestilentious byle,—striking out in many heades or in many plukes." Bruce's Serm. 1591. V. ATRIE.
 To whisky plooks that burnt for wooks
 On town-guard soldiers' faces,
 Their barber bauld his whittle crooks,
 An' scrapes them for the races.
Fergusson's Poems, ii. 50.
 2. The small dot or knob that used to be near the top of a metal measure of liquids, to mark the difference between Scottish and English measure. S.
 Not, as Sibb. says, "corr. from Sax. pocca." For it is merely Gael. plucan; Shaw, vo. Carbuncle.
PLUKIE-FACED, adj. Having the face studded with pimples, S.
 And there will be—
 —Ploukie-fac'd Wat in the mill.
Ritson's S. Songs, i. 210.
PLUM, PLUMB, s. 1. A deep pool in a river or stream. 2. The noise a stone makes when plunged into a deep pool of water. S.
PLUMASHE, s. Corr. of plumage, a plume of feathers. S.
PLUMBE-DAMES, s. A prune; a Damascene plum, S.
 "It is—ordayned, that no person use anie maner of desert of wette and dry confections, at banquetting, marriages, baptisimes, feastings, or any meales, except the fruites growing in Scotland: As also figs, reasins, plumbe-damies, almonds, and other unconfected fruites." Acts, Ja. VI. 1621. c. 25.
 "Plumb dames (i. e. prunes) per pound £0: 0: 4." Diet Book, King's Coll. Aberd. 1630. Arnot's Hist. Edin. p. 169.
PLUMMET, s. The pommel of a sword. S.
PLUMP, s. A cluster. S.
PLUMP, adj. and s. A plump shower, a heavy shower that falls straight down. This is also called a plump; as a thunder plump, the heavy shower that often succeeds a clap of thunder, S. See Sup.
 Teut. plomp, plumbeus; plomp-en, mergere cum impetu. Sw. plump-a, id.
PLUMROCK, s. The primrose, a flower. S.
To PLUNK, v. n. 1. To plunge with a dull sound, to plump, S.
 Either a frequent. from plunge, or allied to C. B. plungk-io. id.
 2. It is also used, S. O. as a school-term, signifying to play the truant; q. to disappear, as a stone cast into water.
 Teut. plenck-en, however, signifies, vagari, palari, to straggle; plencker, qui vagando tempus consumit; Kilian.
PLUNK, s. 1. The sound made by a heavy body falling into water. 2. The sound produced by the drawing of a cork. 3. That emitted by the mouth in smoking tobacco. 4. The sound used to express the cry of the raven. S.

P O D

To PLUNK, v. n. To emit such a sound as the raven does.
PLUNKER, s. One who frequently plays the truant. S.
To PLUNK, v. n. In playing at the game of marbles or taw, to lay the bowl on the bent forefinger, and propel it forcibly forward with a jerk of the thumb, against another bowl. S.
PLUNK, s. The act of propelling a marble by the thumb and forefinger as above. S.
PLUNKIE, s. A trick. S.
PLUNTED.

I may compair them to a plunted fyre,
 But heit to warme you in the winteris cauld.

Legend, Bp. St. Androis, Poems 16th Cent. p. 304.

This has undoubtedly been written planted, or peinted.

PLURACIE, s. Plurality. S.

PLWYRNYS, s. pl. V. PLEUCH-IRNES.

POATCHIE, adj. Apt to be turned up, or trampled into holes by the feet; applied to the sward of land. S.

POATCHING, s. A turning up of the sward of land, or trampling it into holes by the feet. S.

POB, POB-TOW, s. The refuse of flax from the mill, consisting chiefly of the rind, used as fuel, S.B. See S.

"One night I perceived the atmosphere illumined in quick succession of red flashes, like the Aurora, to an angle of 20° or 30° elevation, and found it was done by boys burning pob-tow, about a mile distant, and that the successive coruscations of the atmosphere were occasioned by the tossings of the tow." P. Bendochy, Perth. Statist. Acc. xix. 366. Also pron. Pab, q. v.

POBIE, s. A foster father. S.

POCK, POIK, s. A bag, sack, or poke. S.

POCK, POKE, POIK, s. 1. A bag growing under the jaws of a sheep, indicative of its having the rot. 2. The disease itself. Rot or Poke. S.

To Pock, to be Pockin. To be seized with the rot. S.

POCKED SHEEP. Old sheep afflicted with a disease resembling scrofula. S.

POCK-ARRS, s. pl. The marks left by the smallpox. V. ARR.

POCK-ARRIE, POCKIAWRD, adj. Full of smallpox scars. S.

POCK-BROKEN, adj. Pitted with smallpox. S.

POCK-MARKS, s. pl. The marks left by the smallpox. S.

POCK-MARKIT, part. adj. Pitted by the smallpox. S.

POCK-PIT, s. A mark made by the smallpox. S.

POCK-PITTED, adj. Pitted by the smallpox. S.

POCKMANTEAU, POCKMANKY, s. A portmanteau. S.

POCK-NOOK, s. Literally, the corner of a bag. On one's ain pock-neuk, on one's own means. V. under PICKLE. S.

POCK-PUD, POCK-PUDDING, s. A bag-pudding; a poke-pudding. 2. A contemptuous term, vulgarly applied to an Englishman, from the idea of his being fond of good living. S.

POCK-SHAKINGS, s. pl. A vulgar term, used to denote the youngest child of a family, S. See Sup.

It often implies the idea of something puny in appearance. Hence it is usual to say of a puny child, that he seems to be the pockshakings. This probably alludes to the meal which adheres to a pock or bag, and is shaken out of it, which is always of a smaller grain than the rest.

It is remarkable, that the very same unpolished idea occurs in Isl. Belguskaka, vocatur a vulgo ultimus parentum natus vel nata, from belg-ur, a bag or pock, and shak-a, to shake. V. G. Andr. p. 211.

POD, s.

With a willie wand thy skin was well scourged;
 Syne feinyedly forge how thou left the land.

P O I

Now, Sirs, I demand how this Pod can be purged?

Montgomery, Watson's Coll. iii. 4.

This is probably a term denoting smallness of size; as the poem abounds with words of this description. A plump or lusty child is called a pod, often a fat pod, S. Or it may be the same with pade, a toad, q. v. as implying the idea of pollution; Teut. podde, bufo. V. POID.

POD, s.* The capsule of legumes. S.

To POD, v. n. To walk with short steps. S.

PODDASWAY, PODDISOY, s. A stuff of which both warp and woof are silk; a rich plain silk. S.

PODDLIT, part. adj. Plump; in good condition, applied to poultry. V. PODLE, sense 2. S.

PODDOCK, PUDDOCK, s. A frog. S.

PODDOCK, s. A rude kind of sledge for drawing stones, made of the glack of a tree with narrow pieces of wood nailed across. S.

PODEMAKRELL, s. A bawd.

"Douchter, for thy luf this man has grete diseis,"

Quod the bismere with the slekit speche:

"Rew on him, it is merit his pane to meis."—

Sic pode makrellis for Lucifer bene leche.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 97, 3.

i. e. Act as the Devil's physicians.

"From Fr. putte, meretrix, and maquerelle, lena," Sibb.

V. MACRELL.

PODGE, s. Hurry; bustle; state of confusion. S.

PODLE, s. 1. A tadpole, S. synon. pow-head, q. v.

2. A fondling term for a thriving child; "a fat podle." S. This seems a dimin. from Teut. podde, a frog.

PODLIE, PODLEY, s. A term used to denote fish of different kinds, in different counties of S.

1. The fry of the coal fish; Gadus carbonarius, Linn. This is most commonly known by the name of podly, Loth. It is the silluk or cuth of Orkn.

"Fish of every kind have become scarce, in so much that there is not a haddock in the bay. All that remain are a few small cod, podlies, and flounders." P. Largo, Fifes. Statist. Acc. iv. 537.

"The fish most generally caught, and the most useful, is a grey fish here called cuths, of the size of small haddocks, and is the same with what, on the south coast, is called podley, only the cuth is of a larger size." P. Cross, Orkney, Statist. Acc. vi. 453.

These seem to be the fish called padles, Ross-shire.

"Prawns, small rock and ware cod, gurnet, turbot, and padles, are found; but for the last 3 years all the small fish have decreased very much, except flounders." Statist. Acc. iii. 309.

2. This name is frequently given to the Green-backed Pollack or Gadus Virens, Loth.

"Asellus virescens Schonfeldii; our fishers call it a Podly." Sibb. Fife, p. 123.

"Podley, a small fish, (Gadus virens, Linn.)" Sibb. Gl.

3. This name is also sometimes given to the true Pollack, or Gadus Pollachius, S.

Can it be a corr. of pollack? Fland. pudde, mustela piscis?

POFFLE, s. A small farm; a piece of land. Syn. Pendicle. S.

To POY, v. n. To work diligently and anxiously. S.

To POY upon, v. a. To use means of persuasion, so as rather unduly to influence another. S.

POID, s. Pal. Hon. i. 57.

— Quhair is yone poid that plenyeyt,

Quhilk deith deseruis comittand sic despite?

Mr. Pinkerton asks if this means poet? But the term seems the same with Pod, q. v.

POIK, Pock, s. A bag; a poke. S.

POIND, s. A silly, useless, inactive person. S.

To POIND, POYND, v. a. 1. To distrain, S. a forensic term; pron. pund, as Gr. v.

"All othir beistis that eittis mennis corne or gres salbe poyndit quhil the awnar thairof redres the skaithis be thaym done." Bellend. Cron. B. x. c. 12.

2. To seize in warfare, as implying that what is thus seized is retained till it be ransomed.

The qwhethir off ryot wald thai ma
To pryk and poynd bathe to and fra.

Wyntown, viii. 43. 134.

A.S. pynd-an, to shut up; whence E. pound, a pinfold, or prison in which beasts are enclosed; and the v. pound, "to shut up, to imprison as in a pound," Johns. Mr MacPherson mentions Belg. poyntinge, exaction, as allied. We may add Isl. pynding, carcer, a prison, Verel.

The original idea is still retained in S. He who finds cattle trespassing on his ground, is said to poind them, when he shuts them up, till such time as he receives a sufficient compensation from the owner for the damage done.

Germ. pfand-en also signifies to distrain. Sw. utpanta is used in the same sense, as quoted by Verel. Ind. vo. Atfor, p. 19.; and pant-a, to take in pledge. These are from Germ. pfand, Su.G. pant, a pledge.

This seems to lead us to the true origin of poind. For this, in the L.B. of our law, is called Namare, namos capere, which Skene expl. pignorare, sive pignus auferre, and derives from Naman, a Saxon word. Name is mentioned by Lye, as denoting what is now called distress, E. (poinding, S.) and deduced from A.S. nim-an, capere. Su.G. nam-a, naem-a, signifies to seize any thing as a pledge. What is thus seized is called nam. Namfae denotes cattle seized in pledge; Akernam, the poinding of cattle that have trespassed, till the damage be paid, from aker, a field, and nam. What confirms this derivation is, that whereas Belg. pand, is a pledge, a pawn, and panden, to pawn, pander signifies a distrainer. Thus, to poind properly signifies, to take something as a pledge of indemnification.

POYND, POWND, s. 1. That which is distrained, S.

"The sergents sall cause the poynds to be delivered to the creditour, vntill the debt be fullie payed to him." Sec. Stat. Rob. I. c. 20. s. 6.

2. The prey taken in an inroad.

— A cumpany gat he,
And rade in Ingland, for to ta
A pound, and swne it hapnyd sa,
That he of catale gat a pray. Wyntown, ix. 2. 12.

POINDABLE, POINDABILL, adj. Liable to be distrained, S.

"This exemption from poinding was—extended by analogy to the bucket and wand of a salt-pan, which can at no time be poinded if the debtor has sufficiency of poindable good." Erskine's Instit. s. 23.

POINDING, s. The act of poinding, S.

"Poinding is that diligence by which the property of the debtor's moveable subjects is transferred directly to the creditor who uses the diligence." Erskine, ibid. B. iii. Tit. 6. s. 20.

POYNDER, PUNDARE, s. One who distrains the property of another, S.

"The poynds, and the distresses quhilkis are taken, salbe retained, and remaine in the samine baronie quhere they are taken: or in sic ane place pertaining to the poynder, gif he any hes, quhere sic poynds—may remaine and be kept." First Stat. Rob. I. c. 7. s. 5.

Holland writes pundare, q. v.

DEAD-POIND. The act of distraining any goods except cattle or live stock. S.

POYNDFALT, s. A fold in which cattle were confined, as being poinded or distrained. S.

POINER, s. One who gains a living by digging feal, divots, or clay for covering houses, &c. Syn. Piner. S.

POINYEL, s. A bundle carried by one in travelling. S.

POYNIES, s. pl. Gloves.

"Twelue dowzane of glooues, or ledder poynies, makis ane grosse." Skene, Verb. Sign. vo. Serplaith.

Probably from Fr. poing, the fist; as a glove in Germ. is handschuh, literally a shoe for the hand; Sw. handske.

POINT, s. State of body. S.

POINT, s. A bodkin, used in female dress. S.

POYNT, POYNT, s. A Scotch pint, or half a gallon. S.

To POINT, v. a. To insert lime, with a small trowel, in the interstices between the stones of a wall. S.

POYNTAL, s. 1. Some instrument used in war, resembling a javelin, or a small sword.

With round stok swerdis faucht they in melle

With poyntalis or with stokkis Sabellyne.

Doug. Virgil, 231, 53.

Et tereti pugnant mucrone veruque Sabello.

Virg. Aen. vii. 665.

2. A pointed instrument, with which musicians play on the harp, a quill.

Thare was also the preist and menstrale sle

Orpheus of Trace —

Now with gymp fingeris doing stringis smyte,

And now with subtell euore poyntalis lyte.

Doug. Virgil, 187, 38.

Fr. pointille, a prick or point, from point, id. Lat. pung-ere, punct-um.

POINTED,  part. pa.* 1. Exact; accurate; distinct.

2. Regular; punctual, as in payment. 3. Precise. S.

POINTEDLY, adv. 1. Exactly; accurately; distinctly.

2. Punctually; without fail. S.

POIS, s. Treasure. V. Pose. S.

POISONABLE, adj. Poisonous. S.

To POIST, PUIST, v. a. "To urge, to push; Fr. pousser," Sibb. V. Poss,

To POIST, Poost, v. a. To cram the stomach with food. S.

POISTER'D, part. adj. Petted; indulged; spoiled. S.

POKE, s. A disease of sheep, affecting their jaws, S.

The rot. V. Pock, Poik. See Sup.

"They smear, however, all those which are not housed. The latter are seldom subject to that disease called by sheep-farmers the poke, (a swelling under the jaw) or to the scab. The poke, particularly, often proves fatal." P. Dowally, Perth. Statist. Acc. xx. 469.

Apparently denominated from its assuming the appearance of a bag or poch.

POLDACH, s. Marshy ground lying on the side of a body of water; a term used in the higher parts of Ang.

Belg. polder, a marsh, a meadow on the shore; or, a low spot of ground enclosed with banks.

POLE, s. The kingdom of Poland. S.

POLICY, POLLECE, s. 1. The pleasure-ground, or improvements about a gentleman's seat, especially in planting, S.

"For policie to be had within the realme, in planting of woddis, making of hedgeis, orchardis, yairdis, and sawing of brome, it is statute—that euerie man, spirituall and temporall within this realme, hauand ane hundreth pund land of new extent be yeir, and may expend samekill, quhair thair is na woddis nor forestis, plant wod and forest, and mak hedgeis and haning for him self, extending to thre akers." Acts, Ja. V. 1535, c. 10, Edit. 1566.

In the reign of Ja. VI. we find that an act was passed against "the destroyers of planting, haning, and policie." A. 1579. c. 84.

"The Pychtis spred fast in Athole, & maid syndry strenthis and polecys in it." Bellend. Cron. B. vii. c. 6. Regionem et agros vicinia arcibus, munitionibus castellisque plurimum ornantes; Boeth.

"Scho knew the mynd of Kenneth geuyn to magnificent bygging & polesy." Ibid. B. xi. c. 10. Magnifica aedium structura atque ornatus delectaret; Boeth.

— My Lord Temporalitie,
In gudly haist I will that yie
Lett into few your temporall landis,
To men that labouris with thair handis;
Bot nocht to Jenkyne Gentill man,
That nowdir will he work, nor can;
Quhairby that pollece may encrese.

Lyndsay, S.P.R. ii. 165.

"On a considerable eminence—stands the present mansion-house of Greenock.—It is a large house. Its policy (as they call it) or pleasure ground, has been extensive, but has fallen into decay." P. Greenock, Renfrews. Statist. Acc. v. 568. N.

"His lordship's policy surrounds the house.—The word here signifies improvements or demesne: when used by a merchant, or tradesman, it signifies their warehouses, shops, and the like." Pennant's Tour in S. 1769. p. 94.

I have not remarked the use of the term in the latter sense.

2. It is also used to denote the alterations made in a town, for the purpose of improving its appearance. S.

It has undoubtedly been formed from Fr. police. Droit de police, "power to make particular orders for the government of all the inhabitants of a town or territory, extending to—streets or highways." Hence, policier, -ere, "belonging to the government of a town or territory," Cotgr.

POLIST, adj. Artful; designing; generally as including the idea of fawning; as, a polist loun, a crafty knave, S.

It is evidently from the v. polish, Fr. polir, to sleek; and used in the same metaph. sense as S. sleekit.

POLK, s. A bag; a poke or sack. S.

POLKE, Pock, s. A kind of net.

—"Ordanis the saidis actes to—have effect—against the slayers of the saidis reid fish, in forbidden time, be blesis, casting of wandes or utherwise: or that destroyes the smoltes and frye of salmound in mil-dammes, or be polkes, creilles, trammel-nets, and herrie-waters." Acts, Ja. VI. 1579, c. 89.

The same term is used for a pock or bag, Bannatyne Poems, p. 160.

—Ane pepper-polk maid of a padell.

As used in the Act, it evidently denotes a net made in form of a bag.

POLLAC, s. The name of a fish.

"In Lochlomond there are salmon-trout, eel, perch, flounder, pike, and a fish peculiar to itself, called pollac." P. Buchanan, Stirl. Statist. Acc. ix. 16.

This seems merely the Gael. name of the Powan or Gwiniad. V. POWAN.

POLLACHIE, s. The crab-fish. Syn. Partan. S.

POLLIE-COCK, POUNIE-COCK, s. A turkey, S.

Both names are used; and both have been borrowed from Fr., in which language the cock is denominated Paon d'Inde, and the hen Poule d'Inde.

POLLIS, s. pl. Paws.

The wod lyoun, on Wallace quhar he stud,
Rampand, he braid, for he desyryt blud;
With his rude pollis in the mantill rocht sa,
Awkwart the bak than Wallace can him ta.

Wallace, xi. 249. MS.

POLLOCK, s. The name given to the young of the coalfish, Shetland.

"Pollocks, or young seath, caught in summer,—sell for 1d. per dozen." P. Aithsting, Statist. Acc. vii. 589. V. SEATH.

POLONIE, POLLONIAN, POLONAISE, PELONIE, s. 1. A dress for very young boys, including a sort of waistcoat with loose sloping skirts. 2. A great-coat for boys farther advanced. 3. A dress formerly worn by men in the Hebrides. 4. The name given to a surtout. S.

POME, s. Perhaps the pome-citron; if not, as conjoined with ointments, what we now call pomatum.

—Seropys, sewane, succure, and synamome,
Pretius inuntment, saufe, or fragrant pome.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 401, 41.

POME, s. Apparently, an ornament in jewellery. S.

POMELL, s. Properly, a globe; used for the breast.

Hir lips, and cheikis, pumice fret;

As rose maist redolent:

With yvoire nek, and pomells round.

Maitland Poems, p. 239.

Chaucer uses pomel for a ball, or any thing round. L.B. pomell-us, globulus; Fr. pommel-er, to grow round as an apple, from pomme, Lat. pom-um.

POMER, s. The old name in E. for Pomerania. S.

POMERIE, s. An orchard. S.

POMET, s. Pomatum. S.

To POMP, v.a. To draw up water by means of a pump. S.

POYNYE, POYNYHÈ, POYHNÈ, PONYHÈ, s. A skirmish.

Till Cragfergus thai come again;

In all that way wes nane bargain.

Bot giff that ony poynye wer,

That is noucht for to spek of her.

Barbour, xvi. 307. MS.

— Welle thre hundyr and fourty

Of Inglis at that poynyhè war tane.

Ponyhè, viii. 36. 32.

Wyntown, ix. 3. 43.

O.Fr. poignee, id. Lat. pugna.

PONE, s. A thin turf. S.

To PONE, v.a. To pare off the surface of land. S.

PONEY-COCK, s. A turkey. S.

PONYEAND, adj. Piercing; pungent.

The Scottis on fute gret rowme about thaim maid,

With ponyeand speris throuch platis prest of steylle.

Fr. poignant, id.

Wallace, iii. 141. MS.

PONNYIS, s. "Weight; influence; Teut. pondigh, ponderosus;" Gl. Sibb.

PONNYIS, Houlate, iii. 26. Leg. pennyis, as in Bann. MS.

Ye princis, prelettis of pryd for pennyis and prow,

That pullis the pure ay —

Perhaps it is this very word that Sibb. has expl. "weight, influence."

PONTIOUNE, s. A puncheon. S.

POO, s. A crab. This word is used in Dunbar, E. Loth. In Arbroath a young crab is called pulloch.

The words seem allied. But I cannot say whether they have any affinity to Fr. poul, the sea-louse, a fish not bigger than a bean; Cotgr.

POOGE, s. A hut; a hovel. V. PUDGE. S.

To POOK, POUK, PUIK, v. a. 1. To pull with nimbleness or force. E. pluck. 2. To strip off feathers. S.

To POUK a hen. To pluck a hen. S.

POUKIT, POOKIT, part. adj. 1. Plucked; lean and bony; shabby in appearance; stingy. S.

POUKIT-LIKE, POOKIT-LIKE, adj. Having a puny, meagre, or half-starved-like appearance. Syn. Moutis. S.

POUK, POOK, s. 1. The disease to which fowls are subject when moulting. 2. One is said to be on or in the pouk when in a declining state of health. S.

To Pook and Rook. To pillage. S.

POOKS, POWKS, s. pl. 1. The short unfledged feathers on a fowl when they begin to grow after moulting. 2. Down or any similar substance adhering to one's clothes; the ends of threads. S.

POOLLY-WOOLLY, s. An imitative term, meant to express the cry of the curlew. S.

POOR-MAN-OF-MUTTON, s. The remains of a shoulder of mutton, broiled the second day. S.

POORTITH, s. Poverty. V. PURTYE.

POOSIE, s. A kitten; a little cat. S.

POOT, POUT, s. A small haddock. S.

POOTIE, adj. Niggardly; mean; stingy. Syn. Foutie. S.

POPE'S KNIGHTS, s. A designation formerly given to priests of the church of Rome, who were at the same time distinguished by the title of Sir.

"Sir Andrew Oliphant, one of the Archbishops Priests, commanded him to arise (for he was upon his knees) and answer to the articles, said [saying,] Sir Walter Mill, get up and answer, for you keep my Lord here too long; he notwithstanding continued in his devotion, and that done he arose, and said, he ought to obey God more then men; I serve a mightier Lord than your Lord is. And where you call me Sir Walter, they call me Walter, and not Sir Walter; I have been too long one of the Popes Knights: now say what you have to say." Spotswood's Hist. p. 95.

Tyrwhitt says, that "the title of Sire was usually given by courtesy to Priests, both secular and regular;" Canterbury Tales, iii. 287, Note; and that "it was so usually given to Priests, that it has crept even into acts of Parliament." Of this he gives different examples, in the reigns of Edw. IV. and Henry VII. Gl. vo. Sire.

"An instance of the title Sir being applied to our clergy, occurs in Froissart; who, in speaking of some of the earl of Douglas's knights, that kept by him after he fell at Otterburn, mentions also one of his chaplains, that fought valiantly, Sir William of Norberrich [probably North-Berwick.] The clerical application of the title became common with us, whether derived from the custom of France, from some pontifical grant, or from the establishment which the eastern monastic knights, particularly those of St. John, had acquired in this country." Brydson's View of Heraldry, pp. 174, 175.

It was used in the same manner by O.E. writers.

The preste hihte sire Cleophas,
And nempuede so the soudan of Damas,
After his owne name.

Kyng of Tars, E. M. Rom. ii. 191.

This is the same with Sir, which is generally written in this form through the Poem, as in v. 817. 875. In v. 909. the priest is called Sir Cleophas.

It occurs also in R. Brunne's Chronicle, pp. 257. 258.

The ersbisshop of Denelyn he was chosen his pere,—
Of Krawecombe Sir Jon, a clerke gode & wys.—
Sir Hugh was man of state, he said as I salle rede.—
This Sir Hugh was a simple friar.
Frere Hugh of Malmcestre was a Jacobyn.

Although it appears that in Scotland this title was more generally conferred on priests, it was occasionally given to the regular clergy. "The proprietor of Cross-Ragwell abbey, Sir Adam Fergusson, has a copy of a testamentary deed, dated M.D.XXX.; wherein a number of monks, to whom it relates, have each the title sir [dominus] prefixed to his name. Some more recent instances of this title being applied to the clergy, occur in Malone's notes on Shakspeare [character of Sir Hugh Evans,] Brydson, p. 176.

My ingenious friend, Mr. Brydson, referring to W. Mill's reply, when arraigned before the Archbishop, observes that "a title thus judicially employed, and disclaimed as characterising the pope's knights, appears to have had some other foundation than mere courtesy." Ibid. p. 175.

I have met with no evidence, however, that it had any other foundation. During the reign of James V. this title seems to have been commonly given to priests. The persons who apprehended W. Mill, are designed, "Sir George Strachen, and Sir Hugh Torry, two of the Archbishop of St. Andrews Priests;" Spotswood ubi sup. The priest, who interrogated him, is, as has been seen, designed Sir Andrew Oliphant. Spotswood elsewhere mentions Sir William Kirk Priest, Sir Duncane Simpson Priest, p. 66. "a priest called Sir John Weighton," p. 77. &c.

Sir David Lyndsay evidently views it as merely complimentary.

The sillie Nun will thinke greit schame,
Without scho callit be Madame.
The pure priest thinkis he gettis na richt,
Be he nocht stilit like ane knicht,
And callit Schir, befor his name;
As Schir Thomas, and Schir Williame.
All Monkis, ye may heir and sie,
Ar callit Denis, for dignitie:
Howbeit his mother milk the kow,
He mon be callit Dene Androw,
Dene Peter, Dene Paull, and Dene Robart.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 133.

Dene is undoubtedly the same with Dan, used by Doug. O. Fr. dam. V. DAN.

In an early period, in England priests were denominated God's knights. Langland, having described temporal knights, gives the following account of the spiritual ones.

For made neuer king a knight, but he had catel to spend,

As befell for a knight, or founde him for his strenght.—

The bishop shal be blamed before God, as I leue,
That crowneth such gods knightes that can not sapienter

Synge ne psalme read, ne say a masse of the daye;
And neuer nether is blamles, the bishop or the chaplen,
For here ether is indited, & that is ignorantia.

P. Ploughman, Fol. 57, b.

This was most probably the designation that the clergy took to themselves, in allusion to the injunction given to Timothy, to "endure hardness, as a good soldier of Jesus Christ." I need scarcely observe that miles, the word which occurs in the Vulgate, is often used as equivalent to eques, a knight, Fr. chevalier. Hence the Knights Templars adopted this honourable designation; and had this inscription on the seal of their order, Sigillum Militum Christi. V. Monastic. Anglican. ii. 997. Du Cange, vo. Miles. Monks, in general, were also occasionally designed Christ's Knights, Equites Christi; Du Cange, vo. Eques. The phrase, Pope's Knights, seems to have been used only in contempt.

Some of the Prebendaries, in cathedral churches in France, especially in Vienne, were distinguished by the title of Milites Ecclesiastici. This distinction was conferred, however, by a royal charter, A. 1307. Du Cange, ubi sup. p. 749.

But, in general, the title referred to has been given merely in compliment. This custom has reached even to Iceland. G. Andr. informs us that Isl. saera, sira, is a praenomen expressive of dignity, as Sira Canzeler, Dominus Cancellarius. "In like manner," he says, "the Pastors of the church are denominated Saera Jon, Saera Petur." This corresponds to Sir John, Sir Peter, &c. as the ancient mode of addressing a priest in S.

There is no term resembling Sir in Sw. But herre, dominus, the synon., is used in the same manner. "Among our ancestors," Ihre says, "none but Kings and Princes were called Herre: afterwards it was transferred to Knights;—then to Bishops, Abbots, and clergy of the first rank;—for even Rural Deans did not receive this title. But as titles are never permanent, this became at length so common, that it was given, by right, not only to Deans, but to ordinary Pastors. Thus in Sweden, and Alsace, when the peasants mention der Herr, they intend their Parish Minister." Vo. Herre.

This title, although claimed by the clergy, and at first conferred as honorary, towards the time of the Reformation came to bear a ludicrous sense. Thus it is used by the famous Henry Stephen, or his translator, who appropriates it to Priests.

"But how comes it to passe (may some say) that these poore Franciscans are more commonly flouted and played upon than the other fry of Friars? Verily it is not for want of examples as well of other Monks as of simple Sir Johns.—I will alleadge some rare examples of simple Sir Johns, that is, of such as are not Monks, but single soled Priests." World of Wonders, p. 179.

Even so early as Chaucer's time, this title had been used ludicrously; connected with the name John, which, as Tyrwhitt has observed, "in the principal modern languages,—is a name of contempt, or at least of slight;" Notes to Third Vol. p. 287.

Than spake our Hoste with rude speche and bold,
And sayd unto the Nonnes Preest anon,
Come nere thou preest, come hither thou Sire John,
Telle us swiche thing, as may our hertes glade.

Nonnes Preestes Prol. ver. 14816.

I shall only add, that James Tyrie, a Jesuit, entitles his work in reply to Knox, printed at Paris 1573, "The Refutation of an Answer made be Schir Johne Knox, to ane letter send be James Tyrie, to his vmquhyle brother." He continues this title through the whole work.

This, indeed, has been viewed as done in derision. Thus Forbes of Corse says:

"If they were not blindlie miscarried, they might perceive, that what they speake and write of our men in derision and contumelie, (calling them Sir John Knox, and Frere Johne Craig, &c.) it verifieth their ordinarie vocation." Calling of Ministers of Reformed Churches, p. 5. See Sup.

POPIL, s. A poplar.

"Sic lyik, throucht the operatione of the sternis, the oliue, the popil, & the oszer tree, changis the cullour, and ther leyuis, at ilk tyme quhen the soune entris in the tropic of Cancer." Compl. S. p. 88.

Fr. peuple, Lat. popul-us, Teut. pappel-boom.

POPIL, adj.

"Within ane schort tyme eftir the confederate kyngis with capitane Gyldo went to Forfair, in quhilk sumtyme was ane strang castel within ane loch, quhare sindry kingis of Scottis maid residence efter the proscription of the Pichtis, thocht it is now but ane popil town." Bellend. Cron. B. iv. c. 14. In vicum redactum, Boeth.

Perhaps mean, plebeian; Teut. popel, plebs.

POPINGOE, s. A mark for shooting at. V. PAPE-JAY, sense 2.

To POPE, PAPLE, v. n. 1. To bubble or boil up, like water; implying an allusion to the noise of ebullition, S. See Sup.

The veschel may no more the broith contene,
Bot furth it poplis in the fyre here and thare,
Quhil vp fleis the blak stew in the are.

Doug. Virgil, 223, 30.

Populand, part. pr., is used in the same sense in the description of Acheron.

—Skaldand as it war wode,

Populand and boukand furth of athir hand,

Vnto Cocytus al his slike and sand. Ibid. 173, 39.

2. To purl; to ripple. S.

3. To boil with indignation. I was aw paplin, S.B.

Rudd. derives it from Lat. bullio. But he has not observed that Teut. popel-en conveys the same idea, that, at least, which seems the primary one, the noise made by a vessel in boiling; murmur edere, murmurare; whence popelinghe, murmur humilesque susurri, Kilian. Belg. popel-en, to quiver, to throb; which respects the motion, although not the sound; and, if I mistake not, the word as used S.B. expresses the tremulous and spasmodic motions of the body, when agitated with rage.

POPLESY, s. Apoplexy. See Sup.

"Utheris of thaym ar sa swollyn, and growin full of humouris, that thay ar strikin haistely deid in the poplesy." Bellend. Descr. Alb. c. 16.

Teut. popelcye, id.

POPPIN. A kind of paste used by weavers. V. PAPPIN.S.

POPPILL, POPPLE, s. Corn campion or cockle; Agrostemma Githago, Linn. id. A.Bor. usually pron. papple, S. See Sup.

All ipocritis hes left thair frawardness,

Thus weidit is the poppill fra the corne.

Bannatyne Poems, p. 166. st. 6.

"Touching our Church and Bishops being in it before you were borne, if so be, so is popple among wheate before it be shorne, of great auncientnesse." D. Hume, ap. Bp. Galloway's Dikaiologie, p. 116.

Teut. pappel is used in a different sense, signifying the herb mallow. However, C.B. popple is given as synon. with our word.

POP-THE-BONNET, s. A game of children. S.

POPULAND, part. pr. V. POPLA.

POR, s. A thrust with a sword. V. PORR, v. S.

To PORE, PORE down, v. a. To purge or to soften leather, that the stool or bottom of the hair may come easily off. S.

PORICE, s. Perhaps errat. for Parwe or Parve. S.

PORKPIK, PORKEPIK, s. A porcupine. S.

PORPLE-WALL, s. A partition-wall. S.

To PORR, v. a. To stab. S.

PORR, s. The noise that a sharp instrument makes darting into the flesh. V. POR, s. S.

PORRING IRON. Apparently a poker. S.

PORRIDGE, PORRITCH, s. That which in E. is called hasty-pudding; oatmeal, sometimes barley-meal, mixed in boiling water, and stirred on the fire till it be considerably thickened, S. See Sup.

"The diet of the labouring people here, and in general all through the Lowlands of the North of Scotland, is porridge made of oat-meal, with milk or beer, to breakfast." P. Speymouth, Moray, Statist. Acc. xiv. 401.

PORT, s. A catch, S. expl., the "generic name for a lively tune; as, The horseman's port, Gael." Sibb. Gl.

"What the English call a catch, the Scottish call a Port; as Carnegie's Port, Port Arlington, Port Athol, &c.:" Kelly, p. 397.

Their warning blast the bugles blew,

The pipe's shrill port aroused each clan.

Lay of the Last Minstrel, C. v. 14.

"A martial piece of music, adapted to the bagpipes," N. From Gael. port, a tune, a jig, adopted into S. Hence, PORT-YOUL, PORT-YEULL. To sing Port-youl, to cry, to weep, S. See Sup.

"I'll gar you sing Port Youl;" S. Prov. Kelly, ut sup. I'll make them know they have no right to rule, And cause them shortly all sing up Port-yeull.

Hamilton's Wallace, p. 161.

Formed by the addition of youl, to cry, with Port. PORTAGE, s. Cargo; goods to be put on board ship. Ye mycht heue sene, the coistis and the strandis Fillit with portage and pepil tharon standis.

Doug. Virgil, 69, 35.

Fr. portage, Ital. portaggio; from Lat. portare. PORTATIBIS, Houlate, iii. 10.

Clarions loud knellis
Portatibis and bellis, &c.

The latter part of this word has been altered in MS., so that it is impossible to distinguish its form with any degree of certainty. It may be read Portatives.

To PORTE on, v. a. To bring on; to direct. S.

PORTEOUS, PORTUOUS, PORTOWIS, or PORTUIS-ROLL, s. A list of the persons indicted to appear before the Justiciary Aire, given by the Justice clerk to the Coroner that he might attach them in order to their appearance.

"It is ordanit, that all Crounaris sall arreist all tyme, als weill befor the cry of the Air, as efter, all thame that sall be geuin to him in portowis be the Justice Clerk, & nane vthers." Acts, Ja. I. 1436. c. 156. Edit. 1566. Portuous, c. 139. Murray.

"This method of taking up of dittay or indictments is substituted by 8. Ann. c. 16. § 3. 4. in place of the old one by the stress (traistis) and porteous rolls in 1487. c. 99." Erskine's Instit. B. iv. Tit. 4. § 86.

Skene says that this word is a portando, which signifies to carry, or bear. In Fr. Portes-vous. Skinner observes, that Skene passes this word, as he does the most of those that are difficult, superficially; and conjectures that it is from Fr. portez, or apportez, as containing an order that those thus indicted present themselves personally; and that the form begins in words to this purpose.

Chaucer uses Portos for a Breviary or Mass-Book.

For on my Portos here I make an oth.
Shipmannes Tale, v. 13061.

Porthose, Speght's Edit.

Tyrwhitt observes that Portuasses are mentioned among other prohibited books. Stat. 3 and 4 Edw. IV. c. 10. And in the Parliament roll of 7th Edw. IV. n. 40, there is a petition that the robbing of Porteous should be made felony without clergy. The word was used in the same sense in S. For in the most ancient specimen of Scottish typography known, the collection printed at Edinburgh 1508, at the end of The twelve virtues of ane nobleman, it is said, "Heir ends the Porteous of Noblenes." The meaning of the title is explained by this line, Nobles report your matynis in this buke.

As a Breviary might be viewed as a roll of prayers, it had at length come to signify a roll of indictments.

The form of the Portuous roll anciently was this. On one column was the Indictment, &c. and in the opposite column were the names of the Assisers, or Jurymen and the witnesses.—This was not used in the stationary Justiciary court, which sits at Edinburgh, but only in the circuits. The name Porteous, as originally applied to a breviary or portable book of prayers might easily be transferred to a portable roll of indictments.

It occurs also in a curious account, given by Spotswood, of the extent of the learning and piety of the Bishop of Dunkeld, A. 1538. Having cited Dean Forrest, Vicar of Dolour, to appear before him, for the heinous crime of "preaching every Sunday to his parishioners upon the Epistles and Gospels of the day," he desired him to forbear, "seeing his diligence that way brought him in suspicion of heresie." If he could find a good Gospel, or a good Epistle, that made for the liberty of the holy Church, the Bishop willed him to preach that to his people, and let the rest be. The honest man replying, That he had read both the new Testament and the old, and that he had never found an ill Epistle or an ill Gospel in any of them; the Bishop said, I thank God I have lived well these many years, and never knew either the old or new. I content me with my Portuise and Pontificall, and if you dean Thomas leave not these fantasies, you will repent, when you cannot mend it. Spotswood's Hist. 1655, p. 66-67.

It is written Portas, by Bale, and used in the same sense for a Breviary, "None ende is there of their babiling prayers, theyr portases, bedes, temples, aulters, songes," &c. Image of both Churches, Pref. B. 4.

It occurs so early as the time of Langland.

— If mani prists beare for hir bastards & her brochis

A payre of bedes in their hands, & a book under their arme,

Sir John & Sir Jeffery hath a girdle of silver,
A baselard or a ballocke knife, with bottons onergilt,
And a Portus that shuld be his plow, Placebo to synges. P. Ploughman, F. 79. a. See Sup.

In L.B. this was called Portiforium. We find this term used by Ingulphus, Abbot of Croyland, who flourished A. 1076.

"Restituit Monasterio nostro calicem quondam capellae suae, unum Portiforium de usu nostrae Ecclesiae et unum Missale." P. 907.

The Breviary for the use of Sarum, published at London A. 1555, has this title, Portiforium seu Breviarium ad insignes Ecclesiae Sarisbur. usum accuratissime castigatum, &c. Junius defines Porthose to be "a book of prayers which the priests carried with them in their journeys, that they might have it always at hand:" and imagines that it is probably from Fr. port-er, to carry, and hose, the stockings or rather trousers worn by our ancestors. In confirmation of this etymon, he refers to that passage in Chaucer.

A Sheffield thwitel bare he in his hose.

Reves T. ver. 3931.

Du Cange in like manner thinks that the breviary received this name, ab eo quod foras facile portari possit, because it might be easily carried abroad. But it seems more probable that this was a Fr. or Alem. word, and that according to the customs of the dark ages, it had been Latinized.

PORTER, s. A term used by weavers, including twenty splits, or the fifth part of what they call a Hundred. S.

PORTIE, s. Air; mien; carriage; behaviour. S.

PORTIONER, s. One who possesses part of a property, which has originally been divided among co-heirs, S.

"There are sixteen greater, and a considerable number (about a hundred) smaller proprietors called here Portioners, from their having a small portion of land belonging to them." P. Jedburgh, Statist. Acc. i. 9.

For the reason of the designation, V. PARSENERE.

PORTRACT, s. Portrait. S.

PORTURIT, adj. Pourtrayed.

He saw porturit, quhare in sic ane place
The Grekis fled, and Troianis followis the chace.

Doug. Virgil, 27, 35.

P O S

"Fr. pourtraire, Lat. protrahere, i. e. delineare, as we say, to draw," Rudd.

PORTUS, s. A skeleton, Ang.

POSE, POIS, POISE, s. A secret hoard of money, S.
 "Thir said princis gat, in the spulye of the France men, the kyng of Francis pose, quhilk was al in engel noblis." Compl. S. p. 138.
 "The King maid inventoris of his pois, of all his jewells and uther substance." Knox's Hist. p. 31.
 "He came to the castle of Edinburgh, and furnished it in like manner, and put his whole poise of gold and silver in the said castle." Pitscottie, p. 87.
 Thus, to find a pose, is to find a treasure that hath been hid.
 Sibb. derives it from Fr. pos-er, seponere. But in Gl. Compl. it is traced, undoubtedly with greater propriety, to A.S. pusa, posa, a pouch, a purse. Dan. pose corresponds to Lat. pera, denoting a bag; a pocket, a pouch; hence pengepose, a purse; Su.G. posse, puse, Fenn. pusa, a purse.

POSNETT, s. A bag in which money is put.
 "His heire sall haue—an e brander, ane posenett, (ane bag to put money in,) ane enlcruik." Burrow Lawes, c. 125. s. 1.
 It seems evident that the words enclosed as above, and in Italics, should have been printed in this manner, as is the custom observed by Skene elsewhere. For they undoubtedly contain his note for explaining posnett; to which Fiscina is the only correspondent term in the Lat. copy, q. a net used as a purse; or, a net for holding a pose. V. POSE.

POSNETT, s. A skillet; a small pan; a kitchen utensil. S.

To POSS, v. a. 1. To push; S. pouss, as to pouss one in the breast, to pouss one's fortune. V. Rudd. See S.
 —To the erth ouerthrawin he has his fere,
 And possand at him wyth his stalwart spere,
 Apoun him set his fute.— Doug. Virgil, 345, 49.
 Syne with his kne him possit with sic ane plat,
 That on the erde he speldit hym al flat.
Posse, Chaucer, id. Ibid. 419, 26.
 Thus am I possed up and downe
 With dole, thought and confusiounne.
 Rom. Rose, ver. 4479.

2. To pound. S.

To POSS CLAES. To wash clothes by repeatedly lifting them up from the bottom of the tub, and then kneading them down with some force. S.
 Fr. pouss-er, Lat. puls-are. V. Pouss.

POSSING-TUB, s. A tub for one branch of washing. V. S.

POUSS, v. S.

To POSSED, POSSEDE, POSSEID, v. a. To possess. S.

POSSEDIE, s. Probably for Posset, a drugged potion. S.

To POSSESS, v. n. Possest in, infeoffed; having legal possession given. S.

POSSODY, s. Used as a ridiculous term of endearment.
 —My hinnytops, my sweet possody,
 V. POW-SOWDIE. Evergreen, ii. 19.

POST, s. Stratum in a quarry. S.

POSTIT, part. pa. "Postit wi' sickness," overpowered by it; having no interval of relief. S.

POSTROME, s. A postern gate.
 —"Syne stall away be a private postrome." Bellend.
 Cron. B. vi. c. 2. Posticum, Boeth.
 Corr. from L.B. posturium, id.

POST-SICK, adj. Bedrid. Often used. S.

To POSTULE, v. a. "To elect a person for bishop who is not in all points duly eligible," Gl. Wynt.
 And eftyre that this Willame wes dede,
 Thare postulyd [wes] in-til his sted
 Of Dunkeldyn the Byschape

P O T

Joffray. Bot til hym the Pape
 Be na way grant wald hys gud will.
 Wyntown, vii. 9. 426.

"One is said to be Postulate Bishop, who could not be canonically elected, but may through favour, and a dispensation of his superior, be admitted." Rudd. Life of G. Doug. p. 5. N.
 This was indeed the restricted sense of the term. But, in a more general sense, he was said to be postulate, who was elected to a Bishopric by the voice of the clergy. V. Postulari, Du Cange. Fr. postul-er, to sue, to demand; postulé, elected.

To POT, v. a. To stew in a pot; potted meat, stewed meat, S.

POT, POTT, s. 1. A pit; a dungeon.
 The paill saulis he cauchis out of helle,
 And vthir sum thare with gan schete ful hot
 Deip in the soroufull grislé hellis pot.
 Doug. Virgil, 108, 16.

2. A pond full of water; a pool or deep place in a river, S. Rudd. See Sup.
 The deepest pot in a' the linn,
 They fand Erl Richard in;
 A grene turf tyed across his breast,
 To keep that gude lord down.
 Minstrelsy, Border, ii. 48.

"The deep holes scooped in the rock, by the eddies of a river, are called pots; the motion of the water having there some resemblance to a boiling cauldron." Ibid. N. p. 51.

3. A moss-hole from whence peats have been dug. V. S.

PETE-POT. 4. A shaft, or pit in a mine. S.

POT,* To have Pot or Pan in any place, to have the evidences of residence in that place. S.

POT AND GALLOWES. The same as Pit and Gallows. S.

POTAGE, s. Broth with vegetables in it. S.

POTARDS, s. pl. More's True Crucifixe, p. 96.
 Whatever superstitious potards dreame,
 Forbidden meanes he hates, and these by name.
 In another copy, dotards is the word, which seems the true reading.

POTATOE-BOGLE, s. A scare-crow placed in a potato-field to frighten rooks. S.

To POTCH, v. a. To drive backwards and forwards; applied to a dirty way of using food. V. KEIR. S.

POTENT, adj. Rich; wealthy; q. powerful in money; a peculiar sense of the E. word, S.
 And efter that sone saylit he the sey;
 Than come he hame a verie potent man;
 And spousit syne a michtie wife richt than.
 Priests of Peblis, S. P. R. i. 10.

POTENT, s. 1. A gibbet.
 "He gart his flaschar lay ther craggis on ane stok, and gart heyde them, and syne he gart hyng ther quartars on potentis at diuerse comont passagis on the feildis." Compl. S. p. 254.

2. A crutch, "a walking staff with a hand in a cross form." Sibb. Gl.
 Chaucer uses potent for a crutch.
 So old she was that she ne went
 A foot, but it were by potent.
 Rom. Rose, Fol. 110, b. col. 2.
 Fr. potence, a gibbet; also a crutch, i. e. a staff resembling a gibbet in its form. L.B. potent-ia, scipio, fulcrum subalare.

POTIGARIES, s. pl. Drugs. S.

POT-PIECE, s. An old name for the piece of ordnance called a mortar, from its resemblance of a pot. S.

POTTIE, s. A diminutive from E. pot. S.

P O U

To HAUD THE POTTIE BOILIN'. To keep up the sport. S.
POTTINGAR, s. An apothecary.

For harms of body, hands or heid,
The pottingars will purge the pains.

Evergreen, i. 109. st. 2.

"All Pottingareis quhilk takis siluer for euil & rottin stufe and droggaris can nocht be excusit fra committing of thift." Abp. Hamiltoun's Catechisme, 1551, Fol. 61. a.

Fr. potagerie, herbs or any other stuff whereof pottage is made, Cotgr. Apothecaries might anciently receive this name, because they dealt chiefly in simples. L.B. Potagiar-ius, coquus pulmentarius. It might, however, be traced to Ital. botte-ghiere, one who keeps shop; as the modern designation is from Gr. αποθηκη, repository. Hence, POTTINGRY, s. The work of an apothecary.

In pottingry he wrocht grit pyne,
He mureidreist mony in medecyne.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 19. st. 4.

POTTINGER, s. A jar; a kind of earthen vessel. S.

POTTISEAR, s. A pastry-cook. S.

POUDER, POWDER, s. Dust; Fr. poudre.

— Sic a stew raiss out of thaim then,
Off aneding bath off horss and men,
And off powdyr; that sic myrknes
In till the ayr abowyne thaim wes,
That it wes wondre for to se.

Barbour, xi. 616. MS.

"Suppose the bodies die & be resouled in powder he reasoun of sin: yit the soule liueth be reasoun of righ-teousnes." Bruce's Sermon. 1591. Sign. O. 3. p. 2.

Johnson gives one example of E. powder, as signifying dust; but it differs from this. It is used, however, in the same sense by Wiclif.

"And whoever resseyve you not ne here you go ye out fro thennis and schake away the powdir fro youre feet into witnessyng to hem." Mark vi.

POUERALL, PURELL, s. The lowest class of people; the rabble. See Sup.

Sa hewyly he tuk on hand,
That the King in to set bataill,
With a quhone, lik to pouerall,
Wencusyt him with a gret menye.

Barbour, viii. 368. MS.

It is used for the mixed rabble attending an army.
Behind thaim set thai thair pouerail,
And maid gud sembland for to fycht.

Barbour, ix. 249. MS.

It must be observed, however, that in the latter passage there is a blank in MS. where pouerail is in the copies.

This word was not unknown in O.E.

Bote yt were of poveral, al bar hii founde that londe.

R. Glouc. p. 254.

They found that land quite empty of inhabitants, except those of the lowest class.

He coyned fast peny, half peny and farthyng
For poraill to buye with their leuyng.

Hardyng's Chron. Fol. 157. a.

It is written pouraille, Ritson's Anc. Songs, p. 15.

Skinner explains poraile, base, beggarly, from O.Fr. povrail, paurail, paupertinus, vilis, sordidus. I have not met with the word elsewhere in either of these forms. See S.

POVIE, adj. 1. Snug; comfortable; applied to living. Povie folk, people possessing abundance without making any show. Syn. Bein, Bene. 2. Conjoining the ideas of spruceness and self-conceit. S.

POUK, s. A little pit or hole containing water or mire. S.

To POUK, v. a. To pluck. Poukit-like. V. under Pook. v.

To POULLIE, v. n. To look plucked-like. S.

P O U

POULLIE-HENS, s. pl. Plucked-looking hens. S.

POUNCE, s. Long meadow-grasses, of which ropes are made; Orkn.

"Tethers and bridle-reins were wrought of long meadow grasses, such as Holcus lanatus, which grasses here receive the name of pounce, or puns." Neill's Tour, p. 17.

POUNDLAW, s. An amerciament paid for delivery of goods that have been pounded or poinded. S.

POUNE, POWNE, s. A peacock; S. pownie.

The payntit powne paysand with plumys gym,
Kest vp his tele ane proud plesand quhile rym.

Doug. Virgil, 402, 1.

Pownie seems immediately from paonneau, a young peacock. V. PAWN and POWIN.

POUNIE, s. The turkey-hen: the cock Bubblie-jock. S.

To POUNSE, PUNSE, v. a. To cut; to carve; to engrave.

The thrid gift syne Eneas gaif in deid,—

Tua siluer coppis schapin like ane bote,

Punsit full weill, and with figuris engraif.

Doug. Virgil, 136, 36.

This seems properly to signify, embossed; aspera signis, Virg.

Rudd. derives it from Hisp. pensar, distincte secare, Ital. ponzon-are, Fr. poissonner, to prick, or pierce, all from Lat. pung-ere. But he has overlooked Teut. punts-en, punts-en, ponss-en, punctim effigiare; caelare, scalpere.

POUNT, s. A point. S.

POUR, s. 1. A small quantity of any liquid. 2. A Pour of rain, a heavy shower or fall of rain; as, "It's just an even-down pour." S.

POURIE, s. 1. A vessel for holding liquids with a spout for pouring; a decanter. 2. A cream-pot; a small ewer. S.

POURIN, s. A very small quantity of any liquid, S. q. something exceeding a few drops; as much as may be poured, but nothing more.

POURINS, s. pl. The thin liquid poured off from sowens after fermentation; that only being retained which gives them proper consistence: this is sometimes called whey or whig. S.

POURIT, part. adj. Impoverished; meagre; Fr. ap-pauvreté. V. PURE, v.

POURPOURE, s. Purple.

— Young gallandis of Troy to meit set was,
Apoun riche bed sydis, per ordour,

Ouersprede with carpettis of the fyne pourpoure.

Doug. Virgil, 35, 28.

Fr. pourpre, Ital. porpora, Lat. purpura.

To POUSLE, v. n. To trifle. V. POUZLE. S.

To POUSS the Candle. To snuff the candle. S.

To POUSS, v. n. 1. To push; as, "To pouss one's fortune," to try one's fortune in the world, S. S.

"Now, herewithall, the earnest petition of Saintes pous-sing thereto;—nothing so much carried me to the publike reading thereof as a holy indignation at the dealings of Romanists in our quarters too carelessly exposed to their seduction." Forbes on the Revelation, Pref. C. 1. a.

2. Applied to the washing of clothes. It does not however denote washing in general, but that branch of it, in which the person employed drives the clothes hastily backwards and forwards in the water, S. See S.

This may be merely a peculiar sense of the v. as signi-fying to push. But it may be observed, that the meaning of Sw. puts-a is, to rub, to scour; Wideg. For the active sense, V. Poss.

Pouss, s. A push, S. Fr. pousse.

P O U

POUST, s. Power; ability; bodily strength, S. "S.B. corruptly pron. pousture. Thus they say that he has lost the pousture of his side or arm, when he has lost the use of either." Rudd.

O.Fr. poesté, id. V. Rom. de Rose. This is evidently corrupted from Lat. potest-as, or posse, in barbarous Latinity often used for potestas.

POUSTÉ, POWSTÉ, s. Power; strength.

O ye (quod he) Goddis, quhilkis haldis in pousté
Woddir and stormes, the land eik and the see,
Grant our vayage ane easy and reddy wynd.

Doug. Virgil, 86, 9.

In to swilk thrillage thaim held he,
That he ourcome throw his powsté.

Barbour, i. 110. MS.

Hence the phrase, used in our laws, lege poustie, full strength or perfect health.

"It is lesome to ilk man to giue ane reasonabill portion of his lands, to quhom he pleases, induring his lifetime, in his liege poustie." Reg. Maj. B. ii. c. 18. s. 7.

"The term properly opposed to death-bed is liege poustie, by which is understood a state of health; and it gets that name, because persons in health have the legitima potestas, or lawful power of disposing of their property at pleasure." Erskine's Inst. B. iii. Tit. 8. s. 95.

POUT, s. 1. A young partridge or moorfowl, S.

"Because ane of the greatest occasions of the scarcie of the saids Partridges and Moore-fowles, is by reason of the great slaughter of their pouts and yong anes:—Our Sovereigne Lord hes discharged all his Heighnes subjects whatsomever, in any wyse to slay or eat any of the saids Moore-pouts, or of any other kyndes, before the thrid day of Julie; or Partridg-pout, before the aught day of September." Acts, Ja. VI. 1600. c. 23.

— "Seven moor-fowls, fifty pouts." Household Book, Earl of Hadington, 1678. Arnot's Hist. Edin. p. 175.

'Twas a muir-hen, an' monie a pout
Was rinnin, hotterin round about.

Rev. J. Nicol's Poems, ii, 103.

2. In vulgar language applied to the chicken of any domesticated fowl, S. See Sup.

3. Metaph. for a young girl, a sweetheart.

— The Squire—returning, mist his pout,
And was in unco rage, ye needna doubt,
And for her was just like to burn the town.

Ross's Helenore, p. 93.

4. Caller Pout, a small haddock; a small trout. S.

Fr. poulet, a chicken, a pullet; from Lat. pullus. Hence the phrase, to go a pouting, to go to shoot pouts.

To POUT, v. n. To shoot at young partridges, &c. S.

POUTER, s. A sportsman who shoots young partridges or moorfowl. S.

POUTING, POUTTING, s. The Pouting, the sport of shooting young partridges or grouse. S.

To POUT, POUTER, v. n. To poke; to stir or search any thing with a long instrument, S. "To Powt. To stir up, North." Gl. Grose, also written pote, to poke. See Sup.

Su.G. pott-a, digito vel baculo explorare; Belg. poter-en, peuter-en, fodicare, Kilian.

POUT, s. A poker, S.A. See Sup.

POUT-NET, s. This seems to be a net fastened to poles, by means of which the fishers poke the banks of rivers, to force out the fish, S.

"Their Association—have in the present season, for protecting the fry, given particular instructions to their Water Bailiffs, to prevent, by every lawful means, their shameful destruction at Mill-dams and Mill-leads, with Pocks or Pout Nets." Edin. Even. Courant, April 16, 1804.

P O W

POUTSTAFF, s. A staff or pole used in fishing with a small net; employed for the purpose of poking under the banks, in order to drive the fish into the net.

Till Erewyn wattir fysche to tak he went.—

To leide his net a child furth with him yeid.—

Willyham was wa he had na wappynis thar,

Bot the poutstaff, the quhill in hand he bar.

Wallace with it fast on the cheik him tuk,

With so gud will, quhill of his feit he schuk.

Wallace, i. 401. MS.

In Edit. 1648 improperly printed pault-stafe.

To POUT, v. n. To start up on a sudden, as something from under the water. S.

To POUTHER, v. n. To canvass. V. PEUTHER. S.

POUTHER, s. 1. Hair-powder. 2. Gunpowder. S.

POUTHERED, part. pa. 1. Powdered; wearing hair-powder. 2. Corned; slightly salted; applied to meat. S.

POUT-WORM, s. The grub. S.

To POUZLE, v. n. 1. To search about with uncertainty for any thing; to bewilder one's self, as on a strange road, S.B.

2. To trifle. Pouzin', part. adj. Trifling. 3. Applied to one who is airy and finical. 4. Also to one who boasts of his wealth without having reason to do so. S.

This seems to have the same origin with E. puzzle, which Skinner derives, q. posle, from pose, to confound by questions. But the origin of both is more probably Su.G. puss, a slight trick, Isl. puss-a, Su.G. puts-a, imponere, illudere; Germ. possen, ineptiae. Perhaps it may be allied to Isl. pias-a, adnitor, q. to make all possible exertion.

POW, s. The poll; the head, S. "the head or skull,"

A. Bor. Gl. Grose. See Sup.

Abiet my pow was bald and bare,

I wore nae frizzl'd limmer's hair,

Which taks of flour to keep it fair

Frae reesting free,

As meikle as wad dine, and mair,

The like of me.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 306.

The word was thus written at least as early as the time of Henrysone, who inscribes one of his poems, The thré Deid Powis.

As we ly thus, so sall ye ly ilk ane,

With peilit powis, and holkit thus your heid.

Bannatyne Poems, p. 140.

To POW, v. a. To pluck; to pull, S. See Sup.

Quhen Sampson powed to grond the gret pillar,

Saturn was than in till the heast sper.

Wallace, vii. 189. MS.

But quha war yon three ye forbad

Your company richt now?

Quod Will, Three prechours to perswad

The poysond slae to pow.

Cherrie and Slae, st. 45.

POW, s. A pool; l being changed to w, as commonly occurs in S.

Her hors a pow stap in,

The water her wat ay whare.—

Mine hors the water upbrought,

Of o pow in the way.

V. next word.

Sir Tristrem, pp. 167, 168.

POW, Pou, pron. poo, s. 1. A slow-moving rivulet, generally in carse lands, S.

"The country is intersected in different places by small tracts of water, called pows, which move slowly from the N. to the S. side of the carse, and which are collected mostly from the trenches opened for draining the ground." P. Errol, Perth. Statist. Acc. iv. 490.

2. It is sometimes used to denote a watery or marshy place, Stirlings.

"Powmilne and Polmaise appear to be derived from pou, a provincial word, signifying a watery place." P. St. Ninians, Statist. Acc. xviii. 386.

"This confluence takes place near the church, where a small river, called, in Gaelic, the Poll, i. e. the stagnating water, falls into the Forth at right angles." P. Aberfoyle, Perth. Statist. Acc. x. 113.

3. A small creek, that affords a landing-place for boats. The term bears this sense in the counties of Perth, Stirling, and Clackmannan.

"The quay is built of rough hewn stone, in a substantial manner; and runs within the land, and forms a pow, or small creek, where the rivulet that runs through the N.E. end of the town falls into the river." P. Alloa, Clackmann. Statist. Acc. viii. 595.

4. The term seems hence transferred to the wharf or quay itself; as the Pow of Alloa,—of Clackmannan, &c. See Sup.

Hence the males and females, employed in driving coals to the quay, are humorously called the Pow-lords and Pow-ladies.

This term seems radically the same with E. pool, Belg. Su.G. poel, Germ. pfuhl, Isl. paala, stagnum; C.B. pulh, Arm. pull, lacuna; Ir. Gael. poll, a hole or pit. It may have been transferred to water moving with a very gentle fall, because to the eye it differs little from a pool, its motion being scarcely discernible. Hence, in common language, a very slow-running water is tautologically called a dead pow, Perth. This, it would appear, is a Gael. idiom.

Its application, in sense 2. is also from the Gael. Shaw mentions poll-marcachd as signifying a creek; and poll-accairaidh, a bay to anchor ships.

Were it not that the fourth seems merely an oblique sense, the term might be viewed as akin to Belg. puy, podium, suggestus, (Kilian,) used to denote scaffolding; especially as the most of the wharfs, thus denominated, are constructed with wood.

POW, s. A crab. Syn. Partan. S.

POW-TAE, s. A crab's claw; a partan-tae, S. S.

POWAN, POAN, s. The Gwiniad, a fish; Salmo Lavaretus, Linn. See Sup.

"The Albula nobilis of Schonevelde is the Salmo Lavaretus of Linné, the Gwyniad of Pennant, and the Vengis and Juvengis of the Lake of Lochmaben." Note, Sibb. Fife, p. 125.

"Besides the fish common to the Loch, are Guiniads, called here [at Lochlomond] Poans." Pennant's Tour in S. 1769. p. 245.

The people in the neighbourhood imagine that this fish is peculiar to that lake; and several writers have fallen into the same mistake. But it is the Vangis or Juvangis of Lochmaben. V. VENDACE.

This name is probably of Celt. origin. For Pennant says, that "it is the same with—the Pollen of Lough Neagh." Zool. iii. 268. In Gael. it is called Pollag. P. Luss, Dunbartons. Statist. Acc. xvii. 253.

POWART, s. 1. Apparently the same with Powhead, q. v., unless it mean the very small brood of some kind of fish.

"When he strak her, she said that she should cause him rue it; and she hoped to see the powarts bigg in his hair; and within half a year, he was casten away, and his boat, and perished." Trial for Witchcraft, Statist. Acc. xviii. 655.

2. The minute-hand of a clock. 3. A seal; a phoca. S. POWDERBRAND, s. A disease in grain. S.

POW-EE, s. The name given to a small haddock, in the fresh state, Montrose.

POW-HEAD, s. A tadpole; generally pron. powet, S. powie, Perth. synon. A. Bor. pohead, Grose; synon. podle, q. v. See Sup.

"In Scotland, tadpoles are called pow-heads, from their round shape, and their being found in pools." Gl. Tristrem, vo. Pow.

It seems rather from Mod. Sax. Sicambr. pogghe, a frog, q. pogghe-hoofd, the head of a frog.

POWIE, s. A young turkey. S.

POWIN, s. The peacock.

William his vow plicht to the Powin,
For favour or for feid.

Scott's Justing, Evergreen, ii. 179.

This refers to an ancient rite in chivalry, the reason of which is not understood. Lord Hailes, in reference to a vow made by Edward III., has the following remarks. "The circumstances attending this vow, as related by M. Westm. p. 454. are singular. 'Tunc allati sunt in pompatica gloria duo cygni vel olores ante Regem, phalerati retibus aureis vel fistulis deauratis, desiderabile spectaculum intuentibus. Quibus visis, Rex votum vovit Deo coeli et cygnis,' &c. This is a most extraordinary passage, for the interpretation of which I have consulted antiquaries, but all in vain. The same ceremony is mentioned in Le livre des trois filz de Roys, f. 91. 'Après parolles on fist apporter ung paon par deux damoiselles, et jura le Roy premier de deffendre tout son dit royaume à son pouvoir,' &c.

"Sir Henry Spelman, Aspilogia, p. 132, observes, that the ancient heralds gave a swan as an imprese to musicians and singing men. He adds, 'sed gloriæ studium ex eodem hoc symbolo indicari multi asserunt.' He then quotes the passage from M. Westm.; but he neither remarks its singularity, nor attempts to explain it.

"Ashmole, History of the Garter, c. v. sect. 2. p. 185, observes, that Edward III. had these words wrought upon his 'surcoat and shield, provided to be used at a tournament.

'Hay, Hay, the wythe swan,

'By ———, I am thy man.'

"This shews that a white swan was the imprese of Edward III. and perhaps it was also used by his grandfather, Edward I. How far this circumstance may serve to illustrate the passage in M. Westm. I will not pretend to determine." Annals, ii. 4.

In the additions to his Annals, he gives the following account of it, as communicated by a learned friend. "One of the most solemn vows of knights was what is termed the vow of the Peacock. The bird was accounted noble. It was, in a particular manner, the food of the amorous and the valiant, if we can believe what is said in the old romances of France; St. Palaye, Memoirs sur L'ancienne Chevalerie; T. i. p. 185. and its plumage served as the proper ornaments of the crowns of the Troubadours or Provençal Poets, who consecrated their compositions to the charms of gallantry, and the acts of valour.

"When the hour of making the vow was come, the peacock, roasted, and decked out in its most beautiful feathers, made its appearance. It was placed on a basin of gold, or silver, and supported by ladies, who, magnificently dressed, carried it about to the knights assembled for the ceremony. To each knight they presented it with formality; and the vow he had to make, which was some promise of gallantry, or prowess, was pronounced over it.

"Other birds besides the peacock were beheld with respect, and honoured as noble. Of this sort was the pheasant. St. Palaye, T. i. p. 186. Vows and engagements, accordingly, were made and addressed to the pheasant. A vow of this sort, of which the express purpose was to declare war against the infidels, was conceived in these words: 'Je voue à Dieu mon Createur tout premierement, et à la glorieuse Vierge sa mere, et apres aux dames et au faisan,' &c. Ibid. T. i. p. 191.

"This serves to prove that vows were made to Peacocks and Pheasants, and that, by analogy, they might have been made to swans likewise. But the origin of a custom seemingly so profane and ridiculous still remains unknown."

POWLICK, s. A tad-pole. S.

POWLINGS, s. pl. Some kind of disease.

— The Powlings, the Palsey, &c.

V. FEYK. Montgomerie, Watson's Coll. iii. 14.

This may denote a swelling of the body or limbs; Teut. puy-en, to swell, puyt, a tumour. Or it may be the poll-evil, a disease of horses behind the ears, where a large abscess is formed.

POWRIT, s. A tad-pole. S.

POWSOWDIE, s. 1. "Sheephead broth," q. poll-sodden, Sibb. Gl. See Sup.

There will be tartan, dragen, and brochan,—
Pow-sodie, and drammock, and crowdie,
And callour nout feet in a plate.

"Ram-head soup," Gl. Ritson's S. Songs, i. 211.

2. Milk and meal boiled together; any mixture of incongruous sorts of food, S.B. See Sup.

Sw. saad, pron. sod, signifies broth; from siud-a, Isl. siud-a, A.S. seod-an, Germ. sied-en, (E. seethe) to boil.

To POWT, v. n. To make short and as it were convulsive motions with the hands or feet. S.

POWT, s. A short and kind of convulsive motion. S.

POWTE, s. A young partridge or moorfowl. S.

POWTER, v. n. 1. To do little easy jobs. 2. To rummage in the dark. POWTERING, POLTERING. Groping and rummaging in the dark. S.

PRACTAND, part. pr. Perhaps, prating. S.

PRACTICK, PRACTIQUE, s. Uniform practice in the determination of causes; a forensic term. S.

PRACTING, part. pr. Accomplishing. S.

PRAELOQUUTOIR, s. An advocate. V. PROLOCUTOR.

PRAY, s. A meadow.

The varyant vesture of the venust vale
Schrowdis the scherand fur, and euery fale
Ouerfrett wyth fulyeis, and fyguris ful dyuers,
The pray bysprent wyth spryngand sproutis dyspers.

Doug. Virgil, 400, 40.

Rudd. renders this shrubs, viewing it as a mistake of the transcriber for spray. But Warton derives it from Fr. pré, which is corr. from Lat. prat-um, a meadow; Hist. Poet. ii. 284. In one MS. Libr. Univ. Edin. it is pray; in another, ibid., once the property of William Lord Ruthven, which Rudd. had not seen, it is spray. The latter is considered as the more ancient of the two.

PRAISE,* s. Figuratively used as a designation for God, the object of praise. S.

To PRAM, v. a. To press; to straiten for room. S.

PRAN, PRANN, v. a. 1. To hurt; to wound; to bruise. S.

2. Apparently, to chide; to reprehend. S.

PRANE HYIR. Perhaps, boat's hire. S.

PRAP, s. A mark, S. V. PROP.

To PRAP, v. a. 1. To set up any thing as a mark, S.

2. To prap stanes at any thing; to throw stones, by taking aim at some object, S.B.

To PRAP one's self up. To support one's self on some ground of confidence or other, generally a frivolous one.

PRAT, PRATT, s. 1. A trick; a piece of roguishness.

"Thus Scot. we say, He played me a prat, S. Bor. prot., i. e. tricked me, or served me an ill turn;" Rudd.

Prattis are reputed policy and perellus paukis.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 238, b. 37.

2. A wicked action, S.

The Kirk then pardons no such protts.

— Your prats, she says, are now found out,

The Kirk and you maun hae a bout.

Dominie Depos'd, p. 31. 33.

Rudd. derives this word from Fr. pratique, which signifies the course of pleading in a civil court, and is also used for an intrigue or underhand dealing. But its origin is Goth.; for we find it in different forms in various Northern dialects. A.S. praett, craft, praettig, crafty, Isl. prett-ur, guile, prett-vis, guileful, prett-a, to deceive; Teut. praette, fallacia, argutia.

PRATTY, adj. Tricky; mischievous, S.; pretty, S.B. often ill-pratty, ill-pretty.

"Roguish or waggish boys are called ill-pratty;" Rudd. vo. Prattis.

To PRATT, v. n. To become restive, as a horse or ass that refuses to move. S.

To TAKE THE PRATE. To become restive, applied to a horse. S.

PRATFU', PRETFU', adj. Trickish; full of prats. S.

PRATTIK, PRETTIK, PRACTIK, PRACTIQUE, s. 1. Practice; experience.

To speik to me thow suld haue feir;

For I haue sic prattik in weir,

That I wald not effeir it be

To mak debait aganis sic thre.

Lyndsay's Squyer Meldrum, 1594. A. VI. a.

2. An exploit in war, but such a one as especially depends on stratagem; protick, S.B. In this sense Doug. always uses it.

Tharfor ane prattik of were deuyse wyl I,

And ly at wate in quyet enbuschment.

Virgil, 382, 7.

Orodes was of prettik mare al out,

Bot the tothir in dedis of armes mare stout.

Ibid. 345, 46. See also 389, 46.

My prottiks an' my doughty deeds,

O Greeks! I need na tell,

For there's nane here bat kens them well:

Lat him tell his himsell.

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 2.

3. A form of proceeding in a court of law; a forensic term. Fr. pratique.

"This Argyle and Wariston made clear by law and sundry palpable pratiques, even since King James's going to England, where the estates have been called before the King was acquainted." Baillie's Lett. i. 361.

4. A stratagem; an artful mean.

Sum gevis in prattik for supplé,

Sum gevis for twyis als gud agane.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 48.

i. e. Some pretend to give, as an artful mean for receiving supply.

It sometimes denotes tricks of legerdemain, Sibb. Gl.

5. A necromantic exploit, S.

— I have mony sundry prattiks feyr,

Beyond the sey in Paris cuth I leyr.—

"Brother, my hart will neir be hail,

Bot gif ye preif that prattik, or we part,

P R E

- Be quhatkin science, nigromansy, or airt."
V. FREIT. Dunbar, Maitland Poems, pp. 76, 77.
6. A trick, such as that played by a mischievous boy ; or any wicked act, S. synon. with E. prank.
"It is eith learning ill pratticks;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 45.
For proticks past,
She blew me here before the wind.
Dominie Depos'd, p. 29.
- To PRIEVE PRATTIKS. To attempt to play tricks. S.
As Su.G. praktik signifies craft; Ihre views it as immediately formed from Fr. pratique, science de Palais, because of the guile practised at court. The word, as used in sense 3, nearly corresponds to Mod. Sax. Sicambr. practycke, astrology.
- PRECABLE, adj. What may be imposed in the way of taxation. S.
- PRECARIE, s. Indulgence; an old law term. S.
- To PRECELL, v. n. To excel.
That prudent Prince, as I heir tell,
Did in Astronomie precell.
Lat. praecll-ere. Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 78.
- PRECEPTORIE, s. A body of knights professedly devoted to the cause of religion; a commandery. S.
- PRECLAIR, adj. Super-eminent; illustrious.
Consider weill thow bene bot officiair,
And vassal to that King incomparabill,
Preis thow to pleis that puissant prince preclair.
Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 194.
Fr. preclare, Lat. praeclar-us, id.
- To PREE, v. a. To taste; as, Pree that whisky. S.
- To PREEK, v. n. To be spruce; to crest. V. PRINK. S.
- PREEK, s. Impatient desire to accomplish any thing. S.
- PREES, s. Crowd; press. S.
- To PREEVE, v. n. To stop at any place at sea, in order to make trial for fish. S.
- To PREF, v. a. To prove. S.
- PREF, PREIF, s. A proof; a legal probation. S.
- To PREFACE, v. n. To give a short practical paraphrase of those verses of the Psalm which are to be sung in church before prayer. S.
- To PREFFER, v. a. To exceed; to excel; Lat. praefer-o.
"Nor Orpheus that playit sa sueit quhen he socht his vyf in hel, his playing prefferrit nocht thir foir said scheip-hirdis." Compl. S. p. 102.
- To PREIF, PRIEVE, PREVE, PREE, v. a. 1. To prove; to try.
And quhen thay by war runnyng, thare horse thay stere,
And turnis agane incontinent at commandis,
To preif thare hors, with jauillingis in thare handis.
Doug. Virgil, 147, 7.
In this sense, it is also used as v. n.
Ye'll say, that I've ridden but into the wood,
To prieve gin my horse and hounds are good.
Jamieson's Popular Ball, i. 221.
2. To taste; as, "to preif meat, is to taste it;" Rudd. corr. prie.
Temperance is cuik his meit to taist and preif.
Palice of Honour, iii. 58.
Dare she nane of her herrings sell or prive,
Afore she say, "Dear Matkie, wi' ye'r leave?"
Ramsay's Poems, i. 55.
Nae honey beik that I did ever pree,
Did taste so sweet and smervy unto me.
Ross's Helenore, p. 108.
- Teut. proer-en, gustare, labris primoribus attingere, Kijian.

P R E

3. To discover; to find by examination.
Thai haiff him tane, put him in presone sor,
Quhat gestis he had, to tell thai mak raquest.
He said it was bot till a kyrkyn fest.
Yeit thai preiff sone the cumyng off Wallace,
Knewlage to get thai kest a sutell cace.
O.E. preve, preeve. Wallace, xi. 353. MS.
What riot is, thow taastid haast and preeved.
Hoccleve's Poems, p. 53.
- PREYNE, PRENE, PREIN, PRINE, PRIN, s. 1. A pin made of wire, used by women for fastening their clothes, S. Prin, A. Bor. id. Gl. Grose. See Sup.
For spleen indulg'd will banish rest
Far frae the bosoms of the best;
Thousand's a year's no worth a prin,
Whene'er this fashious guest gets in.
Ramsay's Poems, ii. 385.
"Begin with needles and prines, and leave off with horse and horn'd nout;" S. Prov.; "intimating that they who begin with pilfering and picking, will not stop there, but proceed to greater crimes." Kelly, p. 68.
2. This term is often used to denote a thing of no value, S.
Quhat gentill man had nocht with Ramsay beyne;
Off courtlynes thai cownt him nocht a preyne.
Wallace, vii. 910. MS.
Thocht I ane servand lang hes bene,
My purchess is nocht worth ane prene.
Lyndsay, S.P.R. ii. 29.
This word is not, as might be supposed, a corr. of E. pin, but immediately allied to Su.G. Dan. pren, the point of a graving tool, or any sharp instrument; Isl. prionn, a needle, bodkin, or large pin; A.S. preon, fibula, spinther; Dan. preen, fibula, G. Andr. p. 192.; Gael. prine, a pin; Isl. prion-a, connectere, consuere. Belg. priem, a bodkin, an awl, and Germ. pfriem-en, to prick, are evidently allied.
- PREIN-HEAD, s. The head of a pin. S.
- To PREIN, PRENE, PRIN, v. a. To pin. See Sup.
I wald me prein plesandlie in precious wedis.
Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 58.
Mr. Pinkerton renders this pin. But although the v. is used in this sense, S. yet it seems questionable, if here it does not rather signify, deck, trim, as the same with proyne, q. v.
My collar of trew Nichtbour lufe it was,
Weill prenit on with Kyndnes and Solas.
Lament. L. Scotland, Sign. A. 2. b.
Prin up your aprons baith, and come away.
Ramsay's Poems, ii. 178.
- PREIN-COD, s. A pin-cushion, S. Prin-cod, id. A. Bor. See Sup.
- PREJINK, adj. Trim; finically tricked out. S.
- PREJINCTLY, adv. With minute exactness. S.
- PREJINKITIE, s. Minute nicety or accuracy. S.
- PREIS, PRES, s. Heat of battle.
The self stound amynd the preis fute hote
Lucagus enteris into his chariote.
Doug. Virgil, 338, 32.
He come rynnand in gret hast,
As owt of pres he had bene chast,
And fenyheyd hym a sympil knyght,
That eschapyd fra that fycht. Wyntown, vi. 11. 26.
- To PREIS, v. n. To attempt; to endeavour earnestly. S.
- To PREK, PRYK, v. n. To gallop; to ride at full career. See Sup.
Wyth that word at his fa ane darte lete fle,—
And syne ane vthir has he fixit fast,

P R E

About him prekand in ane cumpas large.

Doug. Virgil, 352, 31.

Makbeth turnyd hym agayne,
And sayd, "Lurdane, thow prykys in wayne,
For thow may nowcht be he, I trowe,
That to dede sall sla me nowe."

Wyntown, vi. 18, 390.

This is by a metonymy of the cause for the effect; from the pricking or spurring of a horse. It is also common in O.E.

His hakeney, which that was al pomelee gris,
So swatte, that it wonder was to see,
It semed as he had priked milès three.

Chauc. Chan. Yem. Prol. v. 16029.

"Scot. they say that cattle prick, when they run to and fro in hot weather, being sting'd with gadflies or such insects."—Also, "in a prick haste, i. e. as if he were spurred," Rudd.

A.S. pricc-ian, Belg. prick-en, pungere; Su.G. prick, punctum. Although this is not a Fr. word, it is a Fr. idiom, verbally accommodated to our own language; Piquer au travers des champs, to gallop across the fields.

PREKAT, s. The same certainly with O.E. pryket. S.
To PREMIT, v. a. To premise; to explain previously. S.
To PRENE, v. a. To fix with a small pin. V. PREIN, v.
To PRENT, v. a. 1. Used as print and imprint, E.

"That na prentar presume, attempt or tak vpone hand, to prent ony bukis, ballattis, sangis, blasphematiounis, rymes or Tragedeis, outhir in Latine or Inglis toun in ony tymes to cum, vnto the tyme the samin be sene, vewit and examit be sum wyse and discreit persounis depute thairto." Acts Marie, 1551, c. 35. Edit. 1566.

Isl. prent-a, typis excudo.

2. To coin, i. e. to impress a piece of metal with a figure or image.

Sum pynis furth ane pan boddum to prent fals plakkis.
Doug. Virgil, 238, b. 50.

"It is declared—that our Sovereine Lorde, with advise of his Regent, may cause prent and cuynie golde and silver of sik fynesse as uthers countreis does, to passe within this realme to the lieges of the samin." Acts, Ja. VI. 1567, c. 17.

Su.G. prent-a, imprimere, from pren, a graving-tool; as properly denoting the cutting of figures on plates of brass.

PRENT, s. 1. Print, impression made by types, S.

"All vthir faultis, other committit be negligens,—or be imperfection of the prent,—ane gentil reider may esely persais, and thairfor suld reid thame as weil as he can in the best maner." Abp. Hamiltoun's Catechisme, Errata.

2. Impression of a die.

—"The said penny of golde to haue sic prent and circumscription as salbe auysit be the Kingis Hienesse." Acts, Ja. III. 1483, c. 108. Edit. 1566.

3. Metaph. to a deep impression made on the mind, as with a sharp instrument.

Wallace hyr saw, as he his eyne can cast,
The prent off luff him punyeit at the last,
So asprely, through bewté off that brycht,
With gret wness in presence bid he mycht.

Wallace, v. 606, MS.

"The judgements of God make sik a prent in the soule, it is lang or sin can blot it out." Bruce's Eleven Sermon. L. 5. a.

4. Likeness.

Troyanis resauis thaim, and rycht gladlie
Thare uisage gan behald, and did espy
The prent of faderis facis in childer ying.

Doug. Virgil, 146, 51.

P R E

PRENTAR, s. A printer. V. the v.

PRENT-BUKE, s. A book in print. S.

PRENTICE, PRENTEISS, s. An apprentice. S.

PRES, s. Throng, heat of battle. V. PREIS.

To PRESCRYVE, PRESCRIVE, v. n. 1. To prescribe; applied to property when lost by the lapse of time.
2. Used in reference to legal deeds, which lose their force from not being followed up in time; old forensic terms. S.

PRESERVES, s. pl. Spectacles, which magnify little or nothing; used for preserving the sight, S.

PRESOWNE, s. A prisoner, Fr. prisonnier.

And wyth hym than all his men

As presowneis war takyn then.

Wyntown, viii. 28, 59.

PRESSYT, part. pa. Praised. Read prissyt.

Thir war the worthie poyntis thre,

That I trow euirmar sall be

Prissyt, quhile men may on thaim mene.

Praised, Ed. 1620, p. 307. Barbour, xvi. 525, MS.

PREST, PRETE, part. pa. Ready. Fr. Chaucer, id. Lat. praest-o.

As the diuyn furie gan fyrst ceissing,
And eik hir rageand mouth begouth to rest;
Deuote Eneas beginnis als prest.

Doug. Virgil, 166, 25.

The term is used in O.E.

Roberd mad him all preste, the wynde gan him drive.

R. Brunne, p. 96.

Thow art our prete to spill the process of our play.

Lyndsay, S.P.R. ii. 63.

PRESTABLE, adj. Payable, or what may be made good.

"After discussing of the first suspensioun for liquid soumes or deeds presentlie prestable, the Lords ordaines no suspensioun to be past againis the samyne decreittis respective, but upon consignation." Act Sederunt 29. Jan. 1650.

Fr. prest-er, Lat. praest-are.

PRET, s. A trick; the same with PRAT, PRATT, q. v. S.

To PRETEND, v. a. Left unexplained. S.

PRETENSE, s. Design; intention. S.

To PRETEX, v. a. To frame; to devise. S.

PRETFU, adj. Trickish. V. PRATFU. S.

PRETTY, adj. 1. Small in size; pron. e as ai in fair, a pretty man, a little man; S.B. See Sup.

This seems to be merely an oblique sense of the E. word, or of A.S. praete, ornatus; especially as pretty, S.B. often includes the idea of neatness conjoined with smallness of size.

2. Mean, in a moral sense; contemptible, insignificant.

Freynd ferly not, na cause is to compleyne,
Albeit thy wit grete God may not atteyne:
For mycht thou comprehend be thine engyne
The maist excellent maiesté dyuine,
He mycht be repute ane pretty God and meyne.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 310, 2.

i. e. so mean, as to be unworthy of the character of deity. I am surprised that Rudd. should conjecture that it should perhaps be read petty; as pretty is commonly used in Ang. in this very sense. A pretty affair! a paltry business, what is unworthy of attention.

3. "A pretty man; a polite, sensible man. In Scotland, it is often used in the sense of graceful, beautiful with dignity, or well accomplished." Sir J. Sinclair's Observ. pp. 52, 53. See Sup.

4. Handsome; well-made; able-bodied. 5. Brave; intrepid. 6. Possessing mental as well as corporeal accomplishments. S.

PRETTIKIN, s. A feat; also a trick. S.

PRETTY-DANCERS, s. pl. A name given by the vulgar to the Aurora Borealis; S.B. also, Merry-dancers, q. v.

To PREVADE, v. n. To neglect.

"My man, James Lawrie, gave him letters with him to the General, Major Baillie, to Meldrum and Durie; prevade not to obtain his pay." Baillie's Lett. i. 298.

Perhaps from Lat. pervad-o, to go through, to escape; q. let it not escape from your recollection.

PREVE. In preve, in private; privily. V. A PERTHE. S.

To PREVEENE, PREVEEN, v. a. To prevent, to pre-occupy; immediately from Lat. praevenio.

But he remembring on his moderis commaund,
The mind of Sichyus her first husband,
Furth of hir thocht pece and pece begouth drife,
And with sharp amouris of the man alife
Gan hir dolf sprete for to preuene and stere.

Doug. Virgil, 36, 14.

PREVENTATIVE, s. Preventive, S.

To PREVERT, v. a. To anticipate; Lat. praevert-o.

To suffare bargane doure, and hard debate,
Bot yit this maide was wele accustumate
And throw the spede of fute in hir rynnynge
The swift wyndis preuert and bakwart dyng.

Doug. Virgil, 237, b. 23.

PREVES, PREVIS, pl. Literally, proofs; used in a personal sense, as synon. with witnesses. See Sup.

"That the disobedient, obstinat, and relapse persones, —sall not be admitted as preves, witnesses, or assisoures, against ony professing the trew religion." Acts, Ja. VI. 1572. c. 45. Murray.

PRY, s. Refuse; small trash; as the pry of onions, &c. S.

PRY, s. Different species of carex; sheergrass. S.

PRYCE, PRICE, PRYS, PREIS, s. 1. Praise.

Quhat pryce or lowding, quhen the battle ends,
Is sayd of him that overcomes a man;
Him to deffend that nowther dow nor can?

Henryson, Evergreen, i. 192.

It bears the same sense in O.E.

Pris than has the sonne, the fadere maistrie.

R. Brunne, p. 222.

Su.G. prisa, Isl. prysa, Dan. prise, Belg. prijs, id. Belg. prys-en, Fr. pris-er, to praise.

Chaucer uses prys in the same sense, and Gower;
Or it be prys, or it be blame. Conf. Am. Fol. 165.

2. Prize.

The thre formest sall ber the price and gre
Thare hedis crounit with grene olyue tre.

Doug. Virgil, 138, 4.

Rudd. has observed that price and prize are originally the same, as Fr. prix, from which they come, signifies both. Junius views praise as derived from Teut. prijs, pretium, because we praise those things only on which we set a value.

To PRICK, v. n. To run as cattle do in a hot day. S.

PRICK, s. 1. A wooden skewer, used for securing the end of a gut containing a pudding, S. See Sup.

"If ever you make a good pudding, I'll eat the prick;" S. Prov. i. e. "I am much mistaken if ever you do good;" Kelly. p. 198.

2. A wooden bodkin or pin for fastening one's clothes.

3. An iron spike. V. PRICK-MEASURE. S.

To PRICK, v. a. To fasten by a wooden skewer.

"Better fill'd than prick'd;" S. Prov. "taken from blood puddings, apply'd jocoselie to them who have often evacuations;" Kelly, p. 67.
237

PRICKIE OR JOCKIE. A game of children, played with pins, and similar to Odds or Evens. Prickie denotes the point, and Jockie the head of the pin. One end of the concealed pin is held to the player, who is desired to say Prickie or Jockie. If he guess aright, he gains the pin; if wrong, he forfeits one. S.

PRICKSWORTH, s. A term used to denote any thing of the lowest imaginable value. He did na leave me a pricksworth; he left me nothing at all, S.

PRICKED HAT, a part of the dress required of those who bore arms in this country.

"That ilk man, that his guds extendis to twentie markes, be bodin at the least with a jack, with sleeves to the hand, or splents, and ane pricked hat, a sword and a buckler," &c. Acts, Ja. II. 1456. c. 56. Murray. Priket, c. 62. Ed. 1566.

The meaning of this term is uncertain; perhaps q. a dress-hat, Teut. priek-en, ornare. Or, the morion may be meant, which, as Grose observes, somewhat resembled a hat. Military Ant. ii. 244. It might be called pricked, as being pointed at the top.

PRICKER, s. A name given to the Basking shark, S.B. the Cairban of the Western islands.

"When before Peterhead, we saw the fins of a great fish, about a yard above the water, which they call a Pricker." Brand's Descr. Orkney, p. 4.

PRICKERS, s. pl. Light horsemen. See Sup.

"Johnston, not equalling his forces, kept aloof, and after the Border fashion, sent forth some prickers to ride, and make provocation." Spotswood, p. 401. V. PREK.

PRICKLY TANG. Fucus serratus. S.

PRICKMALEERIE, adj. Stiff and precise. S.

PRICK-MEASURE. The legal measure for grain. S.

PRICKMEDAINTY, s. One who dresses in a finical manner, or is ridiculously exact in dress or carriage, S. q. I prick myself nicely; Teut. priek-en, ornare, E. prick, id.

PRICK-ME-DAINTY, PRICK-MY-DAINTY, adj. Finical in language or manner. S.

PRICKSANG, s. Pricksong, E. song set to music.

In modulation hard I play and sing

Faburdoun, pricksang, discant, countering.

Palice of Honour, i. 42.

PRIDEFOW, PRYDFULL, PRIDEFU', adj. Proud, S. q. full of pride. See Sup.

PRIDEFULLY, adv. Very proudly; with great pride. S.

PRIDEFULNESS, PRIDEFOWNESS, s. A great degree of pride or haughtiness. S.

PRIDYEAND, part. pr.

And for to lende by that lak thocht me levare,

Becauss that thir hertis in herdis coud hove;

Pransand and pridyeand, be pair and be pare.

Houlate, i. 2. MS.

Q. setting themselves off; Su.G. pryd-a, id.

To PRIE, v. a. To taste. V. PREIF. S.

To PRIE one's MOU'. To take a kiss. S.

PRIEST, s. A great priest; a strong but ineffectual inclination to go to stool; a tenesmus. S.

PRIEST. To be one's priest, to kill him; probably from the idea of a priest being sent for, in the time of Popery, in articulo mortis, to administer extreme unction, as the patient's passport to the other world, S.B. See Sup.

P R I

PRIEST-CAT, PREEST-CAT, s. A fireside game; the same as, Le petit bon homme vit encore, or Jack's Alive, q. v.
PRIESTCRAFT, s. The clerical profession. S.
PRIEST-DRIDDER, s. The dread of priests. S.
To PRIEVE, v. a. To prove, &c. V. PREIF.
PRIEVIN, s. A tasting. V. PREIF, v. S.
To PRIG, v. n. 1. To haggle about the price of any commodity, S. See Sup.

Sum treitcheoure crynis the cunye, and kepis corne stakkis;

Sum prig penny, sum pyke thank with preuy promit.
Doug. Virgil, Prol. 238, b. 55.

In comes a customer, looks big,
 Looks generous, and scorns to prig.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 439.

2. To importune, to entreat.

Fat gars you then, mischievous tyke!

For this propine to prig?

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 12.

But they're mair modest in their minds

Than prig o' sic a pley;

Yet gin they did, I'm sure they wad

Be sure to won the day.

Ibid. p. 17.

According to Shaw, Gael. prigin-am is used in the same sense. But this word, not being mentioned by Lhuyd or O'Brien, is probably of S. origin.

Sibb. derives it from Teut. prek-en, orationem habere; q. d. to preach over the bargain. But it has more resemblance to prach-en, parcere sumptui; Belg. prachg-en, to beg, to go begging. Probably Su.G. prut-a, to haggle, is radically allied, q. prygt-a.

PRIGGER, s. A haggler in making a bargain. S.

PRIGGING, s. 1. The act of haggling, S.

"The frank buyer—cometh near to what the seller seeketh, useth at last to refer the difference to his will, and so cutteth off the course of mutual prigging."
Rutherford's Lett. P. II. ep. 11.

2. Entreaty, S. V. the v.

PRIGGA TROUT. The Banstickle. S.

PRIGMEDAINTY, s. The same as PRICKMEDAINTY. S.

PRIGNICKITIE, adj. The same as PERNICKITIE. S.

To PRYK, v. n. To gallop. V. PREK.

PRIMANAIRE, s. Perhaps corr. of Premunire. S.

PRIMAR, s. A designation formerly given to the Provost of a college. Syn. Principal. S.

PRIMARIAT, s. The principality in a university. S.

To PRYME, v. a. To stuff; to fill.

Our caruellis howis ladnis and prymys he,

Wyth huge charge of siluer in quantité.

Doug. Virgil, 83, 46.

"Isl. prym signifies sub onere duro, which very much alludes to the word," Rudd. But this term does not occur in any Isl. Lexicon I have seen.

To PRIME, v. a. 1. To drink largely of intoxicating liquor; as, "That lad's weel primed." 2. Transferred to the feelings or affections; as, He's weel primed wi' passion. S.

PRYMEGILT, PRYNGILT, s. Harbour dues. S.

To PRIMP, v. a. To deck one's self in a stiff and affected manner. Primpit, stiffly dressed; also ridiculously stiff in demeanour, S.

Probably allied to Su.G. pramper-a, to be proud, to walk loftily.

To PRIMP, v. n. To assume prudish, self-important airs.

PRIMSIE, s. Demure; precise, S., from E. prim.

Poor Willie, wi' his bow-kail runt,

Was brunt wi' primsie Mallie.

Burns, iii. 129.

P R O

To PRIN, v. a. To fasten by a pin. V. PREIN, v.

PRINCIPAL,* adj. Prime; excellent. S.

PRINCIPAL, s. The Provost of a college. S.

PRYNES, s. pl. V. COWPES.

To PRINK, PRINCK. To deck; to prick, S. "Prinked. Well-dressed; fine; neat; Exmore," Gl. Grose. See S.

The term occurs in a poem undoubtedly written by Ramsay.

Quhais rufe-treis wer of rainbows all,

And paist with starrie gleims,

Quhilk prinked and twinkled

Brichtly beyont compair. Vision, Evergreen, i. 122.

If this be the true reading, it may be the same with E. prink, prank, as respecting the adorning of the sky; Teut. pronck-en, ornare; Sw. prunk-a, to cut a figure, Wideg. But I suspect that it is an error of the press for prinkled, which the rhyme requires, as perhaps synon. with twinkle.

To PRINKLE, v. n. The flesh is said to prinkle when one feels that thrilling or tingling which is the consequence of a temporary suspension of circulation, S. See Sup.

This word occurs in the explanation given by Kelly of the term dirle; "Prinkle, smart;" p. 396.

Belg. prekel-en, prickel-en, to prick or stimulate. The same analogy may be observed in Sw. For stick-a, to prick, signifies also to tingle, Seren.

PRINKLING, s. A tingling or thrilling sensation. S.

PRINTS, s. pl. The vulgar name for Newspapers, S.

The term had been used in this sense in E. so late as the age of Addison. V. Johns.

PRYORESSE, PRIORISSIE, s. A nunnery. S.

PRIORIE, s. Precedence; priority. S.

PRYS, s. Praise. V. PRYCE.

PRYSAR, s. An appraiser or prizer of goods. S.

To PRISE, PRIZE up, v. a. To force a lock open, by means of some implement or lever pushed between the bolt and the socket. S.

Perhaps obliquely from Fr. prise, "a laying hold on, a lock or hold in wrestling; Estre aux prises, to be closed, locked or grapled together;" Cotgr. Or, from press-er, to force.

PRISE, PRIZE, s. A lever. S.

PRISONERS, s. pl. To play at Prisoners, a game. S.

PRIVY SAUGH, Common Privet, a plant, S. Ligustrum vulgare, Linn. V. Lightfoot, p. 1131.

PRIVIE, s. The privet; a shrub. S.

PRIZATION, s. Valuation. S.

PROBATIONER, s. A person, who, after he has gone through his theological studies, and been tried by a Presbytery, is licensed to preach in public, as preparatory to his being called by any congregation, to whom he may be acceptable, and ordained to the office of the ministry, S.

"The Assembly appoints, that when such persons are first licensed to be Probationers, they shall oblige themselves to preach only within the bounds, or by the direction of that Presbytery which did license them.—'Tis provided and declared, that the foresaid Probationers are not to be esteemed, by themselves or others, to preach by virtue of any pastoral office, but only to make way for their being called to a pastoral charge." Act 10. Assembly 1694.

The reason of the designation is obvious. For the same reason they were formerly called Expectants, q. v.

To PROCESS, v. a. To proceed against one in a legal manner, S. See Sup.

P R O

"The next week he [Strafford] may be processed.—There is a committee for processing the judges, and my Lord Keeper Finch, for their unjust decret." Baillie's Lett. i. 226, 227.

To PROCH, v. a. To approach.

The day was downe, and prochand wes the nycht.

Wallace, v. 987. MS.

Fr. proche, near, nigh. This Menage derives from Lat. prope. But it is certainly corr. from proximus, id. Prochain is still more evidently so.

PROCHANE, PROCHENE, adj. Neighbouring.

"Your foir grandscheir Godefroid of Billon kyng of Jherusalem, hes—kep it ande deffendit his pepil ande subiectis of Loran, fra his prochane enemeis that lyis contigie about his cuntre."—Compl. S. p. 5.

Fr. prochain. V. PROCH.

PROCUIRE, s. Procurement.

S.

PROCURATOR, s. 1. Properly, an advocate in a court of law; corr. Procurator, S. commonly used to denote a solicitor, or one who is allowed to speak before an inferior court, although not an advocate.

"That all and'quhat-sum-ever lieges,—accused of treason, or for quhat-sum-ever crime, sall have their Advocates and Procuratoures, to use all the lauchfull defenses." Acts, Ja. VI. 1587. c. 90. Murray.

I have not observed, that this word occurs in our Acts before this reign.

The Procurators bad him be stout,

Care not for Conscience a leek;

Faint not, my friend, nor flee for doubt,

Ye shall get men enough to speak.—

Poor Procurators then cry'd Alace!—

Truth's Travels, Pennecuik's Poems, 1715. pp. 106, 108.

2. Any one who makes active appearance for any cause, or in behalf of any person or society, though not feed for this service.

S.

L.B. procurator. For he, who is commonly called Procurator Fiscal, S. is designed Procurator Fiscalis; Du Cange. It literally denotes one who acts instead of another, from pro and curo, -are; as taking charge of his business. V. PROLOCUTOR.

To PROCURE, v. n. To act as a solicitor; to manage business for another in a court of law.

S.

PROD, s. 1. A pin of wood; a wooden skewer, Ang. "Prod. An awl. Also a goad for driving oxen. North." Gl. Grose. 2. A pointed instrument. 3. A prick with a pointed weapon; a stab.

S.

Su.G. brodd, Dan. brod, cuspis, aculeus.

To PROD, v. a. To job; to prick.

S.

PROD, CRAW-PROD, s. A pin fixed in the top of a gable, to which the ropes, fastening the roof of a cottage, were tied, S.B.

It was also used as a prognostic of the weather. If, on Candlemas day, this pin was so covered with drift, that it could not be seen, it was believed that the ensuing spring would be good; if not, the reverse.

The last syllable is undoubtedly from the same origin with Prod, mentioned above. The first may be from Su.G. and Isl. krake, contus, stipes hamatus, q. a pointed piece of wood, hooked at the top, for keeping hold of the ropes. It is probable, however, that the word is properly crap-prod, or the pin at the top of the roof; the crap of the wa, being a phrase commonly used for the highest part of it.

To PROD, v. n. To move with short steps as children. S.

PRODINS, s. pl. Small feet, as those of children. S.

To PRODDLE, v. n. To move quickly with short steps. S.

P R O

PRODLER, s. A small horse which takes short steps. S.

To PRODDLE, v. a. To prick; to job. S.

PRODIE, s. A toy. An Edin. High-school-boy term. S.

PROFESSION, s. The name given to an annual examination of the students in some of our universities. S.

PROFITE, adj. Exact; clever. S.

PROFITER, s. A gainer. S.

PROFORCE, s. The provost-marshal of an army. S.

PROG, PROGUE, s. 1. A sharp point, S.

2. An arrow.

And sin the Fates hae orders gi'en

To bring the progues to Troy,

Send me no for them, better far

Is Ajax for the ploy.

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 31.

3. The act of pricking. 4. Metaph. a sarcasm. S.

V. BROG, s.

PROG-STAFF, s. A staff with a sharp iron point in its extremity, S.B. V. BROG, v.

To PROG, PROGUE, v. a. To prick; to goad; to probe. S.

PROGNOSTIC, s. An almanac. S.

To PROYNE, PRUNYIE, v. a. 1. To deck; to trim; used with respect to birds trimming their feathers.

And, efter this, the birdis everichone

Take up ane other sang full loud and clere;—

We proyne and play without dout and dangere,

All clothit in a soyte full fresch and newe.

King's Quair, ii. 45.

And in the calm or loune weddir is sene,

Above the fludis hie, ane fare plane grene,

Ane standyng place, quhar skartis with thare bekkis

Forgane the son gladly thaym prunyeis and bekis.

Doug. Virgil, 131, 46.

2. Used to denote the effeminate care of a silly man to deck his person.

And now that secund Paris, of ane accord

With his vnworthy sort, skant half men bene,

Above his hede and halffettis wele besene

Set like ane myter the foly Troyane hatt,

His hare anoyntit wel prunyet vnder that.

Doug. Virgil, 107, 23.

Chaucer uses proin in both senses. Rudd. derives prunye from Fr. brunir, to polish; which Lye inclines to approve; Add. Jun. Et. Tyrwhitt, vo. Proine, refers to Fr. provign-er, to take cuttings from vines, in order to plant them out. But perhaps it may be rather traced to Germ. prang-en, to make a show or parade, from which Belg. pronk-en, id. seems to be a frequentative; or, to Su.G. pryd-a, ornare, whence prydn-ad, and prydn-ing, trimming, ornament.

To PROITLE, v. a. To stir after a plashing manner. S.

PROKER, s. A poker for stirring fires. S.

PROKET, s. Proket of wax, apparently a small taper.

"The Prince was carried by the French Ambassadour, walking betwixt two ranks of Barons and Gentlemen that stood in the way from the chamber to the chappel, holding every one a proket of wax in their hands." Spotswood, p. 197.

Fr. brochette, a prick or peg; as, brochette de bois, a prick or peg of wood, brochette d'argent, a little wedge of silver; Cotgr. Skinner, however, gives priket as expl. a small wax candle, perhaps from Belg. pricke, orbis.

To PROLL THUMBS. To lick and strike thumbs for confirming a bargain. S.

PROLOCUTOR, s. A barrister; an advocate; a term formerly used in our Courts of Law.

"It sall be neidfull to all the personis warnit, and their prolocutors, to propone all the defences peremptors with that allegiance that ony evidence producit, for pursuit of the action, is fals, and fainzeit:—and the said Lords declarit the sam to all the prolocutors at the bar." Act Sed. 15. June 1564. This is corruptly pronounced procutor, V. Quon. Att. c. 35. s. 1.

The term is used by Matth. Par. An. 1254. "Prolocutor domini Regis, qui nostris Advocatus Regius."

From pro and loqui, to speak for, or in behalf of another, although some view it as the same with praelocutor, one who speaks before another; Fr. avant parlier.

Praeloquutour occurs in the same sense.

"That na Advocate, nor Praeloquutour, be nawaies stopped, to compeir, defend, and reason for onie person, accused in Parliament for treason, or utherwaies." Acts, Ja. VI. 1581. c. 38. Murray.

As this is synon. with Prolocutor, it might be supposed that the common term Procutor were a contraction of the latter. But Procuratour, from which Procutor is formed, although used as synon. with Praeloquutour, is given as a distinct term. For the title of the act above-quoted is; "Procuratours may compeir for all persons accused." This therefore confirms the derivation given of Procutor, vo. PROCURATOUR, q. v.

PROLONG, s. Delay; procrastination,

But mar prolong through Lammer-mur thai raid.

Wallace, viii. 179. MS.

Fr. prolong-er, to protract.

To PROMIT, v. a. To promise; Lat. promitt-o.

"King Edward promittit be general edict syndry landis with gret sowmes of money to thame that wald deliyuer the said Wallace in his handis." Bellend. Cron. B. xiv. c. 8.

PROMIT, s. A promise.

In thair promittis they stude euer firme and plane.

Palice of Honour, iii. 76.

To PROMOVE, v. a. To promote, Acts Parl. pass.; immediately from Lat. promov-eo. See Sup.

PROMOQUER, s. A promoter; a furtherer. S.

PROMOVAL, s. Promotion; furtherance. S.

PRON, s. 1. The name given to flummery in some parts of the N. of S. 2. The term is also applied to the bran of oatmeal, of which flummery is made. S.

PRONACKS, s. pl. Crumbs. Syn. Mulins. S.

PRON'D, PRAN'D, part. pa. Bruised; wounded, Buchan.

PRONEPTE, s. Grand-niece. S.

PRONEVW, PRONEVOY, PRONEPUOY, s. A great grandson; Lat. pronepos. See Sup.

Bot fra the stok down ewynlykly

Discendand persownys lynealy

In the tothir, or the thryd gre,

Newu, or Pronevw suld be. Wyntown, viii. 3. 116.

"The son in the first degree, excludis the nepuoy in the second, & the nepuoy excludis the pronepuoy in the thrid degree." Skene, Verb. Sign. vo. Eneya.

PRONYEAND, part. pr. Piercing; sharp. S.

PROOCHIE, interj. A call to a cow to draw near. S.

PROOF OF LEAD, PROOF OF SHOT. A supernatural protection from the influence of leaden bullets. S.

PROOF-MAN, s. The person who measures and determines how much grain is in a corn-stack. S.

PROOP, s. The breaking of wind in a suppressed way. S.

PROP, s. A mark; an object at which aim is taken; a landmark, S. prap. See Sup.

The only instance I have met with of this word being used in this sense is by Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 53. He uses it, however, metaph.

A mark, or butt, seems to receive this name, as being something raised up, or supported, above the level of the ground, that persons may take aim at it.

To PROP, v. a. To designate by landmarks. S.

PROP, s. A wedge. S.

PROPICIANT, adj. Favourable; kind. S.

PROPYNE, PROPINE, s. 1. A gift; a present, S.

—Bot my propyne come fra the pres fute hate,—

Unforlatit, not jawyn fra tun to tun.

In fresche sapoure new from the bery tun.

V. JAW, v.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 126, 7.

Here the word is used in a very close allusion to its original sense, as denoting the act of handing drink to another, especially in the way of previously drinking to him and expressing a wish for his health. This custom prevailed among the Greeks, from whom the term has been transmitted to us.

"It was customary for the Master of the Feast to drink to his guests in order, according to their quality, as we learn from Plutarch. The manner of doing this was, by drinking part of the cup, and sending the remainder to the person whom they nam'd, which they term'd προπινειν: but this was only the modern way, for anciently they drank μεσον τον σκυφον, the whole cup, and not a part of it, as was usual in Athenaeus's time." Potter's Antiq. ii. 393.

Propines like this I'll get nae mair again,

Frae my dear Lindy; mony a time hast thou

Of these to me thy pouches feshen fu.'

Ross's Helenore, p. 26.

2. Drink-money.

"But certainly, I could wish such spiritual wisdom, as to love the Bridegroom better than his gifts, his propine or drink-money." Rutherford's Lett. P. i. ep. 120.

3. The power of giving.

"And if I were thine, and in thy propine,

O what wad ye do to me?"

"'Tis I wad clead thee in silk and gowd,

And nourice thee on my knee."

Minstrelsy, Border, iii. 262.

"Usually gift, but here the power of giving or bestowing." N.

From the Gr. v. comes Lat. propin-o, id. Hence Fr. propine, drink-money.

It is most probable that this formerly signified the beverage itself, as we learn from Du Cange that O.Fr. propine denotes a feast.

To PROPINE, v. a. 1. To present a cup to another, the prep. with being sometimes added; used metaph. with respect to adversity.

"The Father hath propined vnto mee a bitter cuppe of affliction.—If the Lord propine thee with a cup of affliction, if thou drinke it not willingly (heere is the danger) thou shalt be compelled to drinke the dregs thereof."—Rollock on the Passion, pp. 21. 22. O.E. id.

2. To present; to give, in a general sense. See Sup.

—Garlands made of summer flowers,

Propin'd him by his paramours.

Muse's Threnodie, p. 4.

To PROPONE, v. a. To propose; Lat. propon-o.

The Poete first proponying his entent,

Declaris Junois wrath, and matelent.

Doug. Virgil, Rubr. 13, 3.

"Man propones, but God disposes;" Ferguson's S. Prov. p. 25.

To PROPORTE, v. n. To mean; to shew, E. purport. See Sup.

Virgill is full of sentence ouer al quhare,

Bot here intil, as Seruius can proporte,

His hie knowlege he schawes, that euery sorte

P R O

Of his clausis comprehend sic sentence.
 L.B. proport-are. Doug. Virgil, Prol. 158, 37.

PROPPIT, part. pa. Propped, in reference to time. S.

PROROGATE, part. pa. Prorogued. S.

PROSPECT, s. The vulgar name for a perspective glass, S.
 "The King himself beholding us through a prospect, conjectured us to be about 16, or 18,000 men." Baillie's Lett. i. 174.

From Fr. prospicere, synon. with perspective, the optic art, or Lat. prospicio.

PROSSIE, PROWSIE, adj. Vexatiously nice and particular in dress, or in doing any work. A prossie body. S.

PROT, s. A trick, S.B. V. PRATT.

PROTEIR. In the description of the Lion, Thistle and Rose, st. 17, Bannatyne Poems, it is said;
 Quo'is noble yre is Proteir Prostratis.
Proteir is certainly a blunder of some transcriber for protegere, i. e. to protect the fallen.

PROTY, PROTTY, adj. 1. Handsome; elegant, S.B.
 Tho' she had clad him like a lass,
 Amo' bra' ladies fair;
 I shortly kend the proty lad,
 As I was selling ware.
Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 17.

Perhaps here it signifies small, like Pretty, q. v.
 There's mony a proty lad amon's
 As guid's you, i' their kind. Ibid. p. 36.

2. Honourable; possessing mettle or spirit, S.B.
 [I] never heard that e'er they steal'd a cow;
 Sic dirty things they wad hae scorn'd to do.
 But tooming faulds or scouring of a glen,
 Was ever deem'd the deed of proty men.
Ross's Helenore, p. 122.

This is nearly allied to E. pretty; Su.G. prud, magnificus, Isl. prud-r, decorus, modestus, Goth. prydīs, A.S. præte, ornatus.

PROTICK, s. An achievement. V. PRATTICK.

PROTTY, adj. Mischievous. V. PRATTY.

PROUD, adj. Protuberant; applied to a projection in a corn or haystack, during the act of rearing it. S.

PROUD-FULL, adj. Swollen out; a term applied to skins when swollen by the operation of lime. S.

PROUDNESS, s. Pride; the state of being swollen out. S.

PROVEANT, s. Purveyance in food. V. PROVIANT. S.

PROVEIST, s. The president or provost of a collegiate church. V. PROVOST. S.

PROVESTERIE, s. The provostship of a collegiate church. S.

To PROVEENE, v. n. To proceed from. S.

PROVENIENTIS, adj. pl. Forthcoming. S.

PROVENTIS, s. pl. Profits; emoluments.
 "The saids Deputtes offered thair labours to mak meditationis to the King and Quene, for menteining pensiouns and expenses of the saids Counsaillours, and ordinary officers of the said counsaill, to be provyded of the rents and proventis of the Crown." Knox's Hist. p. 231.

"That her Majestie is likewise infest in life-rent, in—all proventes, rentes and emolumentes of the same propertie, pertaining to his Hienesse." Acts, Ja. VI. 1593. c. 191.

Lat. provent-us, increase, profit.

PROVIANT, adj. Provided for a special purpose. S.

PROVIANT, s. Purveyance in food; victuals. S.

PROVIDING, s. The paraphernalia of a bride; or the preparation of cloth, articles of household furniture, &c., which a young woman lays in for herself. S.

P R O

PROVOST, s. 1. The mayor of a royal burgh, S.
Prouest seems to have been used in the same sense in E. in R. Brunne's time.
 The prouest of the toun, a wik traytour & cherle,
 He thought to do tresoun vnto his lord the erle.
Chron. p. 294.

2. The dean or president of a collegiate church. S.

PROW, s. Profit; advantage. See Sup.
 Scho luikis down oft, lyk ane sow,
 And will nocht speik quhen I cum in:
 I spak ane wourde, nocht for my prow,
 To ding her weill it war na syn.
Maitland Poems, p. 201.

This word, in the silly Envoy, Bannatyne Poems, p. 201. is rendered by Lord Hailes, honour. But it seems rather to mean profit.
 This now, for prow, that yow, sweit dow, may brace.
 Chaucer uses it in the same sense. We find it as early as the time of R. Glouc.
 Ac notheles, ys conseil hym gan ther to rede,
 And saide, that it was to hym gret prow and honour
 To be in such mariage alied to the Emperour.
Cron. p. 65.

Sibb. derives it from Fr. preux, faithful. But it is merely prou, profit. V. Cotgr.

PROWAN, s. Provender; Fr. provende. See Sup.
 "He's a proud horse that will not bear his own prowan;"
S. Prov. "An excuse for doing our own business ourselves." Kelly, p. 131.

PROWDE, adj. "Powerful," Gl. Wynt.
 Downald-Brec, Sonn [of] Hecgedbwd,
 Kyng wes fourtene wynter prowde.
Wyntown, iv. 8. 49.

Mr. MacPherson adopts the sense given by Innes, in his Crit. Essay, p. 825. Perhaps we may rather understand it in the original sense, to be found in Su.G. prud, magnificent.

PROWDE, s.
 Ane fair sweit may of mony one
 Scho went on feild to gather flouris:
 By come ane gymp man, thay calt him Johne,
 He luifit that prowde in paramouris.
Maitland Poems, p. 190.

Mr. Pinkerton inquires, if this may be prude? Certainly, it is not. For it corresponds to a fair sweit may. Prowde seems therefore to signify a beautiful or elegant woman.
 Su.G. prud, ornatus, pryd-a, ornare, Isl. fryd-a; from frid, pulcher, pryd-a, and frid-a being originally the same.

PRUDENTIS, s. pl. Perhaps, sail-ropes of a ship. S.

To PRUNYIE, v. a. To trim; to deck. V. PROYNE.

PTARMIGAN, s. The white game, S. Tetrao Lagopus, Linn.
 "Lagopus Avis, Aldrov. Perdix alba, Sabaudis, Francolinus Italis, nostratibus the Ptarmigan." Sibb. Scot. p. 16.
Ptarmigans are found in these kingdoms only on the summits of the highest hills of the highlands of Scotland and of the Hebrides; and a few still inhabit the lofty hills near Keswick in Cumberland.—Erroneously called the white partridge," Penn. Zool pp. 271, 273.

Shaw renders Gael. tarmochan, "the bird termagant."

PTRU, PTROO, PRU, interj. A call to a horse or cow. S.

PRUCHIE, PRUTCH-LADY. A call to a cow to draw near. S.

To PU' one by the sleeve. To use means to recall the attentions of a lover, who seems to have cooled in his ardour. S.

To PUBLIC, PUBLICQUE, PUBLICTE, v. a. To publish; to make known openly. S.

P U D

PUBLIC, s. An inn or tavern. S.
PUBLIC-HOUSE, s. "An inn, a tavern, or hotel, S."
 Sir J. Sinclair's Observ. p. 170.
PUBLICK, adj. Adapted to the state of the times. S.
To PUBLIS, v. a. To confiscate. S.
PUBLISHIE, adv. Publicly. S.
PUBLISHT, adj. Plump; en bon point. A weel-pub- lisht bairn, a thriving child. S.
PUCKER, s. Pother; perplexity. S.
PUCK HARY, s. The designation anciently given to some sprite or hobgoblin, S. See Sup.

He doth so punctually tell
 The whole oeconomy of hell,
 That some affirm he is Puck Hary,
 Some, he hath walked with the Fairy.

Colvil's Mock Poem, i. 61.

Johnson defines Puck, "some spirit among the fairies, common in romances," observing that it is "perhaps the same with pug."

But in O.E. the term has been used rather with respect to a spirit supposed to possess more malignity than that ascribed to the Fairies. Helle-pouke occurs in P. Ploughman, in the sense of demon, in a passage misquoted by Skinner. Elsewhere the devil is call the pouke.

He should take the aquaitaunce as quycke,
 And to the queed shew it, Pateat, &c. per passionem
Domini,

And put of so the pouke, and preuen vs vnder borow.

Fol. 74, b. Sign. T. ii.

The queed seems synon. V. QUAID. Skinner gives the same account as Johns., q. "pug of hell." Lye has justly observed that it is purely Isl. puke, daemon; Add. Jun.
 Et. Su.G. puke, satanas, spectrum. Ser han at puki kemr;
Videt diabolum venire; Ihre.

PUD, Inkpud, s. An inkholder, Loth.; perhaps corr.
 from pot; Teut. enck pot, atramentarium.

PUD, s. A fondling designation for a child. V. Pod. See S.

PUD-DOW, s. A pigeon; a fondling term. S.

PUD, s. The belly. S.

PUDDIE, PUDDY, s. "Expl. a kind of cloth."

And I maun hae pinner,
 With pearling set round,
 A skirt of puddy,
 And a wastecoat of broun.

Ritson's S. Songs, i. 172.

Perhaps originally denominated from Teut. poote, pooten- vel, pellis cervaria, hart's skin; also, the skin (or wool) of sheep drawn off by their feet. V. Kilian.

PUDDILL, s. "A pedlar's pack; or rather perhaps a bag or wallet for containing his ware;" Gl. Sibb. V.
PEDDIR.

Teut. buydel, sacculus, locus, crumena; with a change of one labial letter into another; as in Fris. puyl is used in the same sense. V. Kilian.

PUDDING-BROO, PUDDING-BREE, s. The water, or broth, in which puddings have been boiled. S.

PUDDINGFILLAR, s. A reproachful term, apparently equivalent to glutton.

Sic pudding-fillaris, descending down from millaris,
 Within this land was nevir hard nor sene.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 44. st. 14.

q. One who crams his guts.

To PUDDLE, PUDLE, v. n. 1. To work in a laborious way, on a low scale, S.

"Jean Adamson deponed, that she heard Alison Dick say to her husband William Coke; 'Thief! Thief! what is this that I have been doing? keeping thee thretty years from meikle evil doing? Many pretty men has thou put-ten down both in ships and boats.—Let honest men puddle and work as they like, if they please not thee well, they shall not have meikle to the fore when they die." Trial for Witchcraft, Statist. Acc. xviii. 654.

242

P U L

2. It is applied, in contempt, to laborious and frivolous engagement in the Popish ceremonies.

"For as to the multitude, ye see that they haue alreadie preferred the leauen of the Pharises, and gone to mum-chances, mumries, and vnknawin language, wherein they puddled of befoir." Bruce's Eleven Serm. M. 8. a.

The allusion is to toiling in the mire. The E. s. puddle has been generally derived from Teut. poel, a pool. Certainly, a more natural origin is put, given by Kilian as synon. with poel, lacuna, palus; Germ. putte, properly a pit, or place dug, from which water is drawn; Lat. pute- us, whence puteal-is.

PUDDOCK, s. 1. A frog. 2. Applied in a contemptuous sense to a female; as, "Janet's a spitefu' puddock." S.

PUDGE, s. Any very small house, a hut, Perth. synon.
crue.

This, by a common interchange of letters, seems derived from Isl. bud, taberna, Teut. boede, bode, domuncula, casa.
 V. the letter P.

PUDGET, s. A term applied to a person who is thick and short; one who feeds well. Used also as an adj. S.

PUDGETTIE, adj. Short and fat; having a large belly. S.

PUDICK, PUDICT, adj. Chaste; untainted. S.

PUDINETE, s. A species of fur. V. PEUDENETE. S.

To PUE, v. n. To puff: applied to smoke emitted. S.

PUE, PUE O' REEK. A little smoke. S.

PVEDIS, s. pl. Perhaps errat. for Ploudis, green sods. S.

To PUG, v. a. To pull, Perth. See Sup.

PUGGIE, s. A monkey. S.

To PUIK, v. a. To pull; to pluck. V. Pook, v. S.

PUINT, s. A point. S.

PUIR, adj. Poor. V. PURE.

To PUIR, v. a. To impoverish. V. PURE, v.

PUIRTITH, s. Poverty. V. PURE, PUIR. S.

PUIST, PUISTIE, adj. Snug; in easy circumstances. S.

PUIST, s. A person who is thick and heavy. S.

PUKARE, s. Perhaps errat. for Pulaile, poultry. S.

PUKE, s. An evil spirit. V. PUCK HARY. S.

PULAILE, POULAILE, s. Poultry.

Off cartis als thar yeid thaim by—

VIII scor, chargyt with pulaile.

In edit. corr. to fewal. Barbour, xi. 120. MS.

Chaucer, pullaile. L.B. poyllayllia, id. Du Cange from Fr. poule, a hen. Hence poulailler, a henhouse; also, a poulterer.

To PULCE, v. a. To impel; Lat. puls-o.

—"Your ignorance, inconstance, and inciulite, pulcis you to perpetrat intollerabil exactions." Compl. S. p. 217.

PULDER, PULDIR, s. 1. Powder; dust; Fr. poudre.

"Quhar is the toune of Cartage that dantit the elephantis, ande vas grytumly doutit & dred be the Romans? Vas it nocht brynt in puldir ande asse?" Compl. S. p. 31.

2. Used to denote gunpowder. S.

PULDERIT, part. pa. Mixed; sprinkled.

—The schene lyllies in ony stede

War pulderit with the vermel rosis rede.

Doug. Virgil, 408, 26.

Tanquam pulvere inspersus; Rudd.

PULE, s. Pule of smoke, a small puff of smoke. S.

To PULE, v. n. To puff out smoke in this way. S.

To PULE, v. n. To eat without an appetite. S.

PEULS, s. pl. Small bits which sick oxen eat. S.

P U N

PULLAINE GREIS, s. Greaves worn in war.

"Ilis schen and schoys, that burnyst was full beyn,
His leg harnes he clappyt on so clene,
Pullane greis he braissit on full fast,
A closs byrny with mony sekyr clasp,
Breyst plait, brasaris, that worthi was in wer."

Wallace, viii. 1200. MS.

L.B. polena; which is defined by Du Cange, pars vestis militaris, qua genua muniuntur. Lobinell. Hist. Brit. Tom. 2. p. 566. Fecit sibi per Oliverium auferri a genibus Polenas, et antebrachia a brachiis.

But Du Cange restricts the meaning of the term too much, misled by the use of genibus, in his authority. Although they might reach to the knees, they were certainly meant especially for the defence of the legs. The name seems to have been borrowed from Fr. poulaine; L.B. poulainia, the beaks or crooked points of shoes. Hence souliers de poulaine, which Cotgr. describes as "old fashioned shooes, held on the feet by single latches running overthwart th' instup, which otherwise were all open; also, those that had a fashion of long hookes, sticking out at th' end of their toes." The part of military dress here meant might be called pullane greaves, as being laced, or fastened somewhat like the shoes of the description given above.

PULLISEE, s. A pulley, S. pullishee. V. PILLIE SCHEVIS.

Lang mayst thou teach,—

How wedges rive the aik: how pullisees

Can lift on highest roofs the greatest trees.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 393.

PULL LING, s. A moss plant. V. LING.

PULLOCH, s. A young crab. V. Poo.

PULOCHS, s. pl. Clouts; patches, S.B.

Teut. pulallen, Su.G. paltor, Mod. Sax. pulten, id.

PULTIE, s. A short-bladed knife; properly, one that has been broken, and has received a new point. S.

PULTIS, s. pl. V. TOD PULTIS. S.

PULTRING, part. adj. Rutting. A pultring fallow, a lascivious fellow, Perth. ; allied perhaps to Fr. poultre, a horse-colt.

PULTROUS, adj. Lustful; lascivious. S.

To PUMP, v. n. To break wind softly behind; also used as a s. in the same sense, S.

Isl. prump-a, crepitare; Teut. poep-en, submissè sive submissim pedere.

PUMP, s. Perhaps, the sink of the pump of a ship. S.

To PUNCE, v. a. To push or strike with the head. S.

To PUNCH, v. a. To jog with the elbow; to push slightly, S. dunch synon. See Sup.

Johns. does not acknowledge this v., although it is mentioned by Bailey; who derives it from Fr. poinconner. Seren. refers to Sw. bung-a, bunk-a, cum sonitu ferire.

PUNCH, s. A jog; a slight push, S.

PUNCHING, s. The act of pushing; applied to the feet. S.

PUNCH, s. An iron lever. V. PINCH. S.

PUNCH, PUNCHIE, adj. Thick and short. S.

PUNCKIN, PUNKIN, s. The foot prints of horses or cattle in soft ground are so termed. S.

PUNCT, s. 1. A point; an article in a deed. 2. It is also apparently used for a button. S.

PUNCT, s. A Scotch pint, or two quarts. S.

PUND, s. A small fold for sheep. V. POYNDFALT. S.

PUNDAR, s. One who has the charge of hedges, woods, &c. and who pounds cattle that trespass. S.

PUNDELAYN, s. See Sup.

And to the Lord off Lorne said he;
Sekyrlly now may ye se

P U N

Betane the starkest pundelan,
That ewyr your lyff tyme ye saw tane.
For yone knyght, throw his douchti deid,
And throw hys owtrageous manheid,
Has fellyt intill litill tyd
Thre men of mekill [mycht and] prid.

Barbour, iii. 159. MS.

Podlane, Ed. 1620.; Pondlyane, Ed. 1670.; Pundelayn, Edit. Pink.

This word might perhaps be viewed as a corr. of Fr. Pantalon, a stage-dancer; used improperly, in allusion to the quick motions and violent exertions of people of this description; as the speaker refers to the King's great activity, in so often turning his steed. But I am rather inclined to think that it is from Fr. Pantaleon, the proper name of a man, by corruption, as it is said, from Pantaléemon, as expressed by the Greeks. A saint, called Pantaléemon, being worshipped, not only in the East, but in the countries of Europe, his name was changed to Pantaleon; according to the account given in the Dict. de Trevoux. Pantaléemon signifying entirely merciful, the other term means entirely cruel, or cruel as a lion. It is probable, however, that as cruelty is not the characteristic of the lion, this name might be formed intentionally, as expressive of intrepidity resembling that of this noble animal.

PUNDIE, s. A small white iron mug, used for heating liquids on the fire, Perth.

Denominated, perhaps, as originally containing a pound weight of water. I find this conjecture confirmed by what Somner says concerning A.S. pynt, pinta. "A pint or measure so called of a pound; for that a pint contained twelve ounces, even as a pound weighed twelve."

PUNDLAR, PUNDLER, s. An instrument for weighing, resembling a steelyard, Orkn. See Sup.

"The instruments they have for the purpose of weighing, are a kind of staterae or steelyards; they are two in number, and the one of them is called a pundlar, and the other a bismar." P. Kirkwall, Statist. Acc. vii. 563.

The pundlar is used for weighing malt, bear, &c. "The bismar is a smaller weight,—used for weighing butter, and other things of less bulk." P. Cross, ibid. p. 477.

"The pundler is a beam about seven feet long, and between three and four inches in diameter, somewhat of a cylindrical form, or rather approaching to that of a square, with the corners taken off; and is so exactly similar to the statera Romana, or steelyard, as to supersede the necessity of any further description." Barry's Orkney, p. 212.

Su.G. pyndare, pundare, statera, mensura ponderis publica; from pund, libra, a pound. V. Ihre.

PUNDLER, s. 1. A distrainer.

I hard ane pundler blaw ane elrich horne;

—This pundler was fast faynand for to find

Thir quhailis thre upoun his gers to pind.

V. Gl. Compl. p. 363. Lichtoun's Dreame, Bann. MS.

Even of late, a person employed to watch the fields, in order to prevent the grain from being stolen or injured, was called a pundler, Ang.

Pinder is used in a similar sense in some parts of E. It frequently occurs in O.E.

There is neither knight nor squire, said the pinder,

Nor baron that is so bold,—

Dare make a trespass to the town of Wakefield,

But his pledge goes to the pinfold.

Ritson's Robin Hood, ii. 17.

Tories Turk, your captain's dead and gone,

The trusty Punler of the Newland pease.

V. POINDER. Pennecuik's Poems, 1715, p. 52.

2. A stalk of peas bearing two pods, Ang.
To PUNGE, v. a. To sting. V. PUNYE, v.

P U R

PUNGER, s. A species of crab.
Pagurus, the Punger. Sibb. Scot. p. 26. In the Hist. Fife, N. the Black-clawed crab is called Cancer Pagurus; p. 132.

PUNGITIVE, adj. Pungent. S.

PUNYE, s. A small body or company of men.
For in punye is oft happyne
Quhile for to wyn, and quhill to tyne,
And that in to the gret bataill,
That apon na maner may faill. Barbour, xii. 373. MS.
Fr. poignée de gens, a handful of people, from poignée, a handful; poing, the fist, Lat. pugn-us. Rudd.
Pinyone seems to be used in the same sense, Acts, Mar. 1551. c. 14.
—"Men assurit or vnassurit, raid in particular pinyounis, and small companyis of Inglismen, the Scottismen, being the greitest number, and inuadit the Scottismen," &c.
It may, however, be the same with Punyoun, q. v. as signifying party.

To PUNYE, v. a. Perhaps to spoil; to deprive of. S.

To PUNYE, PUNGE, v. a. 1. To pierce.
The Sotheron men maid gret defens that tid,
With artailye, that felloun was to bid;—
Punyeid with speris men off armys scheyn.
Wallace, vii. 996. MS.

2. Punge, which is evidently the same, is used as signifying, to sting.
Wyth prik youkand eeris as the awsk gleg;
Mare wily than a fox, pungis as the cleg.
V. LAIT, v. Fordun. Scotichr. ii. 376.

3. To prick, to sting; applied to the mind.
The preut off luff him punyeit at the last
So asprely, throuch bewte off that brycht,
With gret wness in presence bid he mycht.
Wallace, v. 606. MS.
The print of love him prunyied at the last.
Edit. 1648.; punced, Ed. 1758.
Fr. poind-re, Lat. pung-ere.

PUNYOUN, s. Side; party.
Than to the wod, for thaim that left the feild,
A rang set, thus thai may get na beild.
Yeid nayn away was contrar our punyoun.
Wallace, ix. 1110. MS.
In Edit. 1648 opinion; and indeed it is merely a corr. of this word. V. OPINION.

To PUNISH,* v. a. To reduce much in cutting or dressing; a term used by workmen. S.

PUNK-HOLE, in a moss. A peat-pot. S.

To PUNSE, v. a. To emboss. V. POUNSE. S.

PUNNIS, PUNCIS, s. pl. Pulses.
My veines with brangling lyk to brek,
My punnis lap with pith. Cherrie and Slae, st. 20.
Thy puncis renouneis
All kynd of quiet rest. Ibid. st. 70.
This seems corr. from pulse, as Fr. punesie from pleurisie.
V. Cotgr.

PUNSS, s. Left unexplained. S.

PUPILL, s. People; subjects. S.

PURALL, PURALE, s. The lower classes. Paupers. S.

PURCHES, PURCHASE, s. 1. An amour; an intrigue. S.
And first has slane the big Antiphates,—
Son to the bustuous nobyl Sarpedoun,
In purchases get ane Thebane wensche apoun.
i. e. Begotten in bastardy. Doug. Virgil, 303, 4.

2. Room for operation; space for exertion; as, I had nae purchase for a stroke, I had not sufficient room to wield my arm. 3. To have a purchase in pulling or lifting a thing; to have a local or accidental advantage. 4. To Live on one's Purchase, to support one's self by expedients or shifts. S.

P U R

"Thus we say Scot. He lives upon his purchase, as well as others on their set rent, Prov. applied commonly to the same purpose," Rudd.
This Prov., in its literal sense at least, has been borrowed from Fr. Ses pourchas lui valent mieux que ses rentes. We still say, He lives on his purchase, of one who has no visible or fixed means of sustenance, S. The idea is evidently borrowed from one living in the woods by the chase, Fr. pourchasse; hence applied to any thing that is acquired by industry or eager pursuit.

PURCOMMONTIS, s. Common people; poor commons.

PURE, PUIR, adj. Poor, S.
The tothir is of all prowes sa pure,
That euer he standis in fere and felloun drede.
Doug. Virgil, 354, 55.
The adv. is used as signifying, humbly.
Richt thair King Hart he hes in handis tane,
And puirlic wes he present to the Quene.
King Hart, i. 30.

PUIR-BODY. A beggar, whether male or female. S.

PURE MAN. 1. A mendicant. 2. A ludicrous designation given to a heap of corn-sheaves, consisting of four set upright on the ground, and one put above them: this is practised in wet seasons. S.
Have pitee now, O brycht blissful goddess,
Off your pure man, and rew on his distresse!
King's Quair, iii. 28.
This, as Mr Tytler observes, is the common S. phrase for beggar. But here it signifies wretched vassal. It bore the sense of beggar, at least as early as the reign of James V., to whom the Jollie Beggar is ascribed.
They'll rive a my meal pocks, and do me mickle wrang.
—O dool for the doing o't! Are ye the poor man?
Pink. Sel. S. Ball. ii. 34.
O. Fr. paovre, poure, id. See Sup.

PURE-MAN-OF-MUTTON. V. POOR-MAN-OF-MUTTON. S.

PUIR MOUTH. To mak a puir mouth, to pretend poverty when one is known to have abundance. S.

PURE PRIDE. Ostentation; grandeur without means. S.

To PURE, PUIR, v. a. To impoverish.
Your tenants, and your leill husbands, ar puird:
And, quhan that thay ar puird, than ar ye pure.
The quhilk to yow is baith charge and cure.
Priests of Feblis, S.P.R. i. p. 14.
This land is puird off fud that suld us beild.
Wallace, xi. 43. MS.

PURED, part. adj. Furred.
Mon in the mantel, that sittis at thi mete,
In pal pured to pay, prodly pight.
Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. ii. 2.
Puryd, id. Rits. Gl. E. M. Rom. V. PURRY.

PURELLIS, s. pl. The lowest class. V. POUERALL.

PURFITTIE, adj. Fat; short-necked; asthmatical. S.

PURFLED, PURFILLIT, part. adj. Short-winded, especially in consequence of being too lusty, S. See Sup.
According to Sibb. q. pursillit, from pursy, q. v. But as E. purfle is used S. for drawing cloth together so as to form cavities in it; this may be merely an oblique sense, as denoting that one is as it were drawn together, so as to prevent freedom in breathing.

To PURGE,* v. a. Strictly to interrogate a witness if he be free from any improper influence before he is examined in a court of justice as to the cause on which he is summoned. 2. To clear the house in which a court meets of those who are not members. S.

PURIE, s. A small meagre person. S.

P U R

PURL, s. The seam-stitch in a knitted stocking. S.
To PURL, v. a. To form that stitch in knitting or weaving stockings which produces the hollow or fur, called the Purled or Purlin-steek, while the stockings are termed Purled Stockings. S.

PURL, PURLE, s. 1. A portion of the dung of animals, particularly of horses or sheep, as it has been dropped on the ground, somewhat hard and of a roundish form. 2. Dried cow-dung used for fuel, S. perhaps from Su.G. port-a, scaturire, because they are scattered through the pastures and roads. S.

To GATHER PURLS. To collect horse-dung or cow-dung for fuel. S.

PURLE, s. A pearl.

— A belt embost with gold and purle.

V. GOUHERD.

Watson's Coll. i. 29.

PURLICUE, PIRLICUE, PARLICUE, s. 1. A dash or flourish at the end of a word in writing; a school term, Aberd.

This seems the primary sense; perhaps from Fr. parler, to speak, or parole, a word, and queue, the tail, q. the termination of a word; or, from pour le queue, q. for the tail, by way of termination. A phrase of this kind may have been introduced by some French writing-master, or by one who had been taught in France.

2. In pl. whims, particularities of conduct, trifling oddities, Ang.

3. The peroration or conclusion of a discourse; also, the discourse itself. 4. A recapitulation of the heads of the discourses delivered at the dispensation of the Sacrament of the Supper. S.

To PURLICUE, PIRLICUE, PARLICUE, v. n. To give exhortations after sermon at a sacrament. S.

PURLIE-PIG, s. V. PIRLIE-PIG.

PURN, s. A quill of yarn. V. PIRN. S.

PURPIE, adj. Purple; of a purple colour. S.

PURPIE-FEVER. The vulgar name for a putrid fever. S.

PURPIR, adj. Of a purple colour. S.

PURPOSE, adj. Neat; neatly dressed; well-adjusted; exact; methodical. S.

PURPOSE-LIKE, adj. Having the appearance of being fit for answering any particular design. S.

"A purpose-like person,—a person seemingly well qualified for any particular business or employment;" Sir J. Sinclair's Observ. p. 16.

To PURPRESS, v. a. To violate a superior's property. S.

PURPRESTRE, s. A violation of the property of a superior.

"Purprestre is, quhen ane man occupies vnjustlie anie thing against the King, as in the King's domain (and propertie), or in stoppin the King's publick wayis, or passages, as in waters turned fra the richt course;—be bigging vpon the Kings streit or calsay." Reg. Maj. B. ii. c. 74. s. 1. 2.

This might also be committed against an overlord. Ibid. s. 8. V. Erskine's Instit. B. ii. Tit. 5. s. 52. In the E. law pourpresture, from Fr. pourprendre; L.B. porprendre, invadere, aliquid sua auctoritate capere; Du Cange.

PURPRISIONE, PURPRISING, PURPRUSITION, s. The invasion of the rights of a superior; a forensic term. S.

COURT OF PURPRISIONE. A court that seizes or divides common property without legal warrant. S.

PURRAY, PURRY, s. Some kind of fur.

"Na man sall weir clathis of silk na furringis of Mer-trickis, Funyeis, Purray, na greit na rychear furring, bot allanerly knychtis and lordis of twa hundreth merkis at the leist of yeirly rent, and thair eldest sonis and thair airis, but speciall leif of the King, askit and obteinit." Acts, Ja. I. 1429. c. 133. Ed. 1566. Purry, Murray, c. 118.

P U T

This seems to be merely Fr. fourrée, varied in the initial letter; f and p being frequently interchanged.

PURRY, s. A kind of porridge, Aberd.

Come in your wa's, Pate, and sit down,

And tell us your news in a hurry—

And, Meggie, gang you in the while,

And put on the pat wi' the purry.

V. TARTAN-PURRY.

Jamieson's Popul. Ball. i. 312.

PURRING-IRNE, s. A poker, an iron for stirring the fire, Ang. This word is now nearly obsolete; synon. pout.

Purr is used in the same sense, Norfolk; Gl. Grose.

Teut. poyer-en, fodicare; porr-en, urgere; Mod. Sax. purr-eu, irritare.

PURSE-PENNY, s. 1. A piece of money kept in a purse without being exchanged or given away. 2. Applied to any thing that one cannot get rid of. 3. Metaph. something retained in the heart or memory as of the greatest worth. S.

PURSEPHAND, s. A pursuivant. S.

PURSY, s. Short breasted and fat. See Sup.

Sibb. has given this as a S. word, although indeed E. I mention it merely to refer to the proper etymon. Both Johns. and Sibb. derive it from Fr. poussif, suspiriosus. But its origin undoubtedly is Teut. borstigh, asthmaticus; either from borste the breast, the seat of the lungs, or borst-en, rumpi, q. broken-winded, a term used with respect to a horse, S.

PURSILL, s. As much money as fills a purse; a pursill of siluer, S.B.

A number of words have the same termination; as a cappil, cogill, cartill, sackill, the fill of a cap, cog, cart, and sack. The same peculiarity is "observable on the banks of Dee and Don, and the interjacent district,—Cartful, cartill, potfull, pottle, &c." P. Peterculter, Aberd. Statist. Acc. xvi. 385.

The only difficulty as to this etymon is, that it is a deviation from the usual pron., as l final is scarcely ever sounded.

PURSILL, PURCILL, s. A species of edible fucus. S.

PURS-PYK, s. A pickpocket.

Be I ane lord, and not lord-lyk,

Than every pelour and purs-pyk

Sayis, Land war bettir warit on me.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 62. st. 3.

To PURSUE, v. a. 1. To prosecute in a court of law.

2. To assail; to attack. S.

PURSUIT, s. Attack. S.

PURTYE, POORTITH, s. Poverty. The last is still used, S.

Thay passit by with handis plett,

With purtye fra I wes ourtane;

Than auld kindnes was quyt foryett.

Bannatyne Poems, p. 185. st. 6.

"Poortith parts good company;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p.

58. Kelly writes poortha, p. 278.

But poortith, Peggy, is the warst of a',

Gif o'er your heads ill chance should begg'ry draw.

O.Fr. poureté.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 81.

PUSLICK, s. Cow's dung dropped in the field. S.

PUSSANCE, s. Powerfulness. S.

PUSSANT, adj. Powerful. S.

PUSSIE, POUSSIE, s. A fondling designation for a cat. S.

To PUT, v. n. "To throw a heavy stone above-hand; formerly a common amusement among country people. Fr. bout-er." Sibb.

P U T

When thou ran, or wrestled, or putted the stane,
And came off the victor, my heart was ay fain.
Ramsay's Poems, ii. 106.

This manly, but severe, exercise is still used in some places.

"The dance and the song, with shinty and putting the stone, are their chief amusements." Islay, Argyles. Statist. Acc. xi. 287. V. PUTTING-STONE.

PUT, s. The act of throwing a stone abovehand. S.

PUTTER, s. A person who is habituated to the exercise of putting the stone. S.

To PUT, v. n. To push with the head or horns, S. Yorks. id. To jog.

The beist sall be full tydy, trig and wicht,
With hede equale tyll his moder on hicht,
Can all reddy with hornes kruynand put,
And scraip and skattir the soft sand wyth his fut.
Doug. Virgil, 300, 14.

"He looks like a putting stott, i. e. frowns or threatens by his looks," S. Prov. Rudd.

He derives it from Fr. bout-er, to thrust or push forward. E. butt is used in the same sense; Teut. bott-en, id. Kilian gives it as synon. with stoot-en, Germ. stoss-en, arietare. C.B. put-iaw, however, signifies, to butt.

To PUT at, v. a. To push; to exert power against.

"The fourth Artickle puttis me in remembrance how dangerous it is gif the authoritie wald put at me and my hous, according to the Civill and Canone Lawis, and our awin Municipall Lawis of this realme, and how it appeareth to the decay of our hous." Knox's Hist. p. 105.

"So the seconde assault shall come, and in his greate rage, hee [the king of Spain] shal put at that same stane, as he and his forbears hath done of before." Bruce's Eleven. Serm. 1591. Sign. T. 8. b.

Putte was anciently used in E. in the same sense. It occurs in the legendary account of the removal of Stonehenge.

Merlyn said, "Now makes assay,
"To putte this stones down if ye may.
"& with force fond tham to bere,
"Ther force is mykille the lesse wille dere."
The oste at ons to the hille went,
And ilk man toke that he mot hent,
Ropes to drawe, trees to put,
Thei schoued, thei thrist, thei stode o strut,
One ilka side behynd beforne,
& alle for nouht ther trauaile lorn.
Whan alle the had put & thrist,
& ilk man don that him list,
& left ther puttyng manyon,
Yit stired thei not the lest ston.

R. Brunne, App. to Pref. cxiv.

This has probably the same origin with the preceding v. To PUT on. To give a gentle push or jog, as when one intends to give a hint to another. S.

PUTTER, s. An animal that butts with the head or horns. S.

PUT, s. 1. A sort of buttress erected for supporting a wall. 2. A mass of stones placed in a river for altering the direction of the current; a jettee. S.

To PUT, v. a. To lay or place, &c. with the following varieties.

To PUT about, v. a. To subject to inconvenience or difficulty; as, "I was sair put about to get that siller." S.

To PUT by, v. a. To lay any thing aside carefully. S.

To PUT by, v. a. To delay; to defer. E. To put off. S.

To PUT down, v. a. To murder; to put to death violently; to commit suicide; as, "He put himsell down." S.

P U T

To PUT hand in one's self. To commit suicide. V. HAND.

To PUT on, v. a. To invest with, as clothes or covering.

Weel put on, having good clothes; ill put on, ill-clothed.

To PUT on, v. n. To dress one's self. S.

To PUT on, v. a. To dun for debt, without shewing lenity or forbearance; as, "He's sair put on for siller." S.

To PUT on, v. n. To push forward; to go at full speed; applied either to riding or walking. S.

To PUT out, v. a. To exert or put forth. S.

To PUT out, v. a. To discover; to make a person known who wishes to conceal himself, S.

"The two Earles fleeing into Scotland, Northumberland was not long after put out by some borderers to the Regent, and sent to be kept in Lochlevin." Spotswood's Hist. p. 232.

To PUT to, or till, v. a. 1. To interrogate; to pose with questions, S. Shirr. Gl. See Sup.

2. To be put or putten till, to be straitened in whatever respect. I was sair putten till't to mak throw the winter.

3. To be abashed; to be put out of countenance. S. Hence put till, straitened, at a loss, S.

To PUT up, v. a. To give entertainment to; to accommodate with lodging. v. n. To be lodged; ill put up. S.

PUT, PUTT, s. 1. A thrust; a push, S.

"They desyre bot that ye begin the bargan at us; and quhen it beginnis at us, God knawis the end thair of, and quha sall byde the nixt put." Knox's Hist. p. 108.

"If ever I get his cart whemling, I'll give it a putt;" S. Prov. "If I get him at a disadvantage, I'll take my revenge on him." Kelly, p. 197.

Teut. bot, botte, impulsus, ictus. V. the v.

2. Metaph. an attempt, or a piece of business.

You must with all speed reconcile
Two jangling sons of the same mother,
Elliot and Hay, with one another;
Pardon us, Sir, for all your wit,
We fear that prove a kittle putt.

Pennecuik's Poems, 175, p. 2.

To MAK one's PUT GUDE. To gain one's object. S.

PUT and Row, adv. With difficulty, S. Gl. Shirr. See S.

A hail hauf mile she had at least to gang,
Thro' birns and pikes and scrabs, and heather lang:
Yet, put and row, wi' mony a weary twine,
She wins at last to where the pools did shine.

Ross's Helenore, p. 26.

The phrase may contain an allusion to the exertion of putting, in which the rolling of the stone is as it were necessary to make up for the deficiency of the put. Or, perhaps to sailing without wind in shallow water, when it is necessary both to push forward the boat with the boom, and to use the oars.

PUTTING-STONE, s. A heavy stone used in the amuse- of putting, S.

"Most of the antient sports of the Highlanders, such as archery, hunting, fowling and fishing, are now disused: those retained are, throwing the putting-stone, or stone of strength (Cloch neart), as they call it, which occasions an emulation who can throw a weighty one the farthest." Pennant's Tour in S. 1769. p. 214. V. PUT, v. 1.

PUTTER, s. Left unexplained. S.

PUTTER, s. A short piece of ordnance. Petard. S.

PUTTERLING, s. A small petard. S.

PUTTIS, s. pl. The young of moorfowl. S.

Q.

Q U A

QUAD. In quad, in prison; in a bad state. S.
QUADRANT, s. The quadrans, or fourth part of the Roman As. S.

To QUADRE, v. n. To quadrate. S.

QUAY, imperat. Come away; as, "Quay, woman, what needs ye stand haverin' there a' day?" S.

QUAICH, QUEYCH, QUEGH, QUEFF, s. A small and shallow cup or drinking vessel, with two ears for handles; generally of wood, but sometimes of silver, S. See Sup.

— Did I sae aften shine
Wi' gowden glister thro' the crystal fine,
To thole your taunts, that seenil has been seen
Awa frae luggie, quegh, or truncher treein!

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 73.

— Brawly did a pease-scon toast
Biz i' the queff, and flie the frost.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 218.

Sibb. derives it from Germ. kelch, Dan. kalk, Franc. kelih, Lat. calix. A.S. calic, cealc, and Alem. choli, have also a considerable resemblance. But perhaps the true etymon. is Ir. Gael. cuach, a cup or bowl. I observe that this is the very term, occurring in the Poems of Ossian, rendered shells. Whether this be used in that phrase, the feast of shells, I cannot say. But Fingal is designed from this term.

Thachair Mac Cumhail nan cuach—
There met the son of Comhal of shells—

Report Committ. Highl. Soc. Append. pp. 84. 85.

QUAID, adj. Evil; bad.

Yit first agane the Judge quihlk heer I se,
This inordinat court, and proces quaid,
I will object for causes twa or three.

Palice of Honour, i. 62.

Mr. Pinkerton leaves this word unexplained. But there can be no doubt as to its signification. Chaucer and Gower use quad, quade, in the same sense; and R. Glouc. qued.

Wyllam the rede kyng, of wan we abbeth y sed,
Byleuede here in Engeland luther euere & qued.

Cron. p. 414.

Alem. quad, quat, quot, Belg. quaad, malus; Teut. quaed, malum, res mala, infortunium, Kilian. C.B. gwaeth, worse. Wachter views Germ. at, malum, from Gr. ατ-ω, noceo, as the root. He mentions a curious observation of Grotius relating to this word, and to the two ancient nations called Gothi and Quadi. "The Goths, that is, the good, received this name from their neighbours, because of their hospitality; as the Quadi were thus denominated, because of their manners being the reverse.

Hearne renders qued, "Devil, evil," Gl. R. Glouc.; and it is evident that the qued is used for the Devil in P. Ploughman, as synon. with Pouke. V. PUCK HARY. This is analogous to Gr. ὁ πονηρος, the evil one; or, as sometimes expressed by the vulgar S., the ill man. Isl. kwid-a, invidere, also expl., malum metuere, is perhaps allied.

QUAIFF, QUEIF, s. A coif; a cap for a woman's head. S.
QUAIFFIS, s. pl. Coifs; female head-dress.

Than may ye have baith quaiiffs and kellis,
Hich candie ruffes and barlet bellis,

Q U A

All for your weiring and not ellis.

Philotus, S.P.R. iii. 12.

Hir bricht tressis inuoluit war and wound

Intil ane queif of fyne golde wyren threde.

Doug. Virgil, 104, 35.

Teut. koiffe, capillare, reticulum, Kilian. Isl. hufa, caputium; Fr. coiffe. It is radically the same word which is now pron. Quich, q. v.

QUAIK, s. The wheezing, or inarticulate sound emitted by one engaged in any hard labour, in consequence of great exertion; as in cleaving wood, beating iron, &c.

— Bissy with wedgeis he

Stude schidand ane fouresquare akyn tre,

With mony pant, with felloun hauchis and quaikis,

Als oft the ax reboundis of the straikis.

Doug. Virgil, 225, 28.

The word seems still retained in the v. quhawch, (pron. gutt.) Aw quhawchin, breathing very hard, Ang. Hauchis, and quaikis are nearly allied. But the first signifies the act of panting; the second seems rather to denote a wheezing sound. Quhawch and wheeze are most probably from one root.

Teut. quack-en, queken, Lat. coax-are, L.B. quax-are, mentioned by Rudd., all express the same idea with quaik and quhawch.

QUAILYIE, QUALYIE, s. A quail; a bird.

"Item, the snype and qualyie, price of the peice, twa d."

Acts, Mar. 1551, c. 11. Ed. 1566. Quailyie, Murray, c. 12.

QUAIR, QUERE, s. A book.

Thou litill quair, of mater miserabill,

Weil aucht thow couerit for to be with sabil.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, Epist. Nuncup.

To cutte the wintir nycht and mak it shorte,

I toke a quere, and left al othir sporte,

Wrytin by worthy Chaucer glorious

Of faire Creseide and lusty Troilus.

Henryson's Test. Creseide, Chron. S. P. i. 158.

"Perqueir, that is, by book," says Mr. Pinkerton, "with formal exactness." Quair is book, whence our quire of paper. 'Go thou litil quayer,' Caxton, Proverbs of Christine, 1478. He also often uses quaires for books in his prose.

Go, litil quaire, unto my livis quene.

Chaucer, Complaint of Black Knight.

The blak bybill pronounce I sall per queir.

Lyndsay.

The word Quair, in this acceptation, is rendered immortal by the the King's Quair of James I." Maitland Poems, Note, p. 423.

Warton, speaking of the MS. from which the King's Quair was published, says, "It is entitled The King's COMPLAINT. Hist. Poet.

This might seem to suggest that it received its name from Lat. quer-i, to complain. Tanner, in his Biblioth. Britan-Hibern., referring to the same MS. in the Bodleian Library, mentions it under the following description; Lamentatio facta dum in Anglia fuit Rex. Tytler's Poetical Remains, p. 46. We are informed, however, by Mr. Tytler, ib. p. 45. that "the title which this manuscript bears is, The Quair, maid be King JAMES of Scotland the First, callit THE KING'S QUAIR. Maid q' his Ma. was in England.

Q U A

Tanner probably misunderstanding the term, meant to translate it; and one might suppose that Warton had again translated his language.

Isl. kver has the same meaning. Libellus, codicillus, unico pergamento conscriptus; a ku et ver; G. Andr. p. 156. But he does not say, in what sense he understands these terms. In O.Fr. quayer signifies a book; or, as mod. cahier, a few leaves slightly stitched together, that may be transposed at pleasure. V. Dict. Trev.

QUAIST, s. 1. A rogue. 2. A wag. S.

QUAKING ASH, s. The asp or aspen, the trembling poplar, S. Populus tremula, Linn.

To QUALIFY, * v. a. To prove; to make good. S.

QUALIM, s. Ruin; destruction.

Of battall cum sal detfull tyme bedene,
Hereftir quhen the feirs burgh of Cartage
To Romes boundis, in thare fereful rage,
Ane huge myscheif and grete qualim send sall,
And thryll the hie montanis lyke ane wall.

Doug. Virgil, 312, 47.

A.S. cwealm, mors. Qualm was used to signify death, so late as the reign of Edw. I.

So gret qualm com ek among men, that hii, that were alyue,

Ne mygte not al burye that folc, that deyde so ryue [rife]. R. Glouc. p. 252.

Alem. qualm, excidium. Schilter deduces it from quell-en, tormentare, qual-en, supplicio ultimo afficere; and these from O.Flandr. quale, quaele, malitia, nequitia. Rudd. strangely refers to dualming, as if radically the same; whereas there is no connexion, except in meaning.

QUALITY BINDIN'. A sort of worsted tape commonly used for binding the borders of carpets. S.

QUANTITE, s. Size; applied to the human body. S.

QUARNELT, part. adj. Cornered; having angles. S.

QUARRANT, s. A rude shoe made of untanned leather, with the hair outward. Syn. Rough Rullion. S.

To QUARREL, * v. a. To reprove; to find fault with. S.

To QUARREL, v. a. To raise stones in a quarry. S.

QUARREL, s. 1. An old term for a stone quarry, S.

2. Materials from a quarry. V. QUERRELL. See Sup.

QUARTARLE, s. The quarter or fourth part of an ell. S.

QUARTER-ILL, s. A disease among cattle, affecting them only in one limb or quarter, S.

Sic benison will sair ye still,—

Frae cantrip, elf, and quarter-ill;

Sae let the drappie go, hawkie.

Jamieson's Popular Ball. i. 363.

"A very gross superstition is observed by some people in Angus, as an antidote against this ill. A piece is cut out of the thigh of one of the cattle that has died of it. This they hang up within the chimney, in order to preserve the rest of the cattle from being infected. It is believed that as long as it hangs there, it will prevent the disease from approaching the place. It is therefore carefully preserved; and in case of the family removing, transported to the new farm, as one of their valuable effects. It is handed down from one generation to another.

QUARTERS, s. pl. Lodgings in general. S.

QUARTES, s. pl. Perhaps the fourth of the great tithes.

To QUAT, v. a. To set free; to let go; to quit, S. See S.

QUAT, adj. Free; released from, S.

"Ye're well away if ye bide, and we're well quat;"

Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 85.

To QUAT, v. n. To give over. S.

To QUAVE a brae. To go zig-zag up or down a brae. S.

Q U E

QUAUIR, QUAYR, s. A quiver.

Ane curtly quair, ful curiously wrocht,
Wyth arrowis made in Lycia, wantit nocht,
Ane garment he me gaif.— Doug. Virgil, 246, 27.

QUAW, s. A quagmire; a hole whence peats have been dug. S.

BOBBIN'-QUAW. A spring or Wallie, over which a tough sward has grown, sufficient to support a person's weight though it shakes or bobs under him. S.

QUAKIN-QUAW, s. The same with Bobbin' quaw. S.

QUEED, QUIDE, s. A tub. Aberd. pron. of Cud. S.

QUEEDIE, QUIDDIE, s. A small tub, Cudie. S.

To QUEEL, v. n. To cool. Aberd. pron. S.

To QUEEM, v. a. To fit exactly; as, to queem the mortice, or joint in wood. S.

QUEEM, QUIM, adj. 1. Neat; fit. 2. Applied to what is made close and tight. 3. Calm; smooth. 4. Quim and Cosh, familiar. S.

QUEME, adv. Exactly; fitly; closely. S.

QUEEMER, s. One skilled in fitting joints. S.

QUEEMNESS, s. Exact adaptation in a literal sense. S.

QUEEMLY, adv. 1. In a state of exact adaptation. 2. Calmly; smoothly. S.

QUEEN'S-CAKE, s. A white sweet cake. S.

QUEEN'S CUSHION. The plant called cropstone. S.

QUEEN'S or KING'S, CUSHION. V. KING'S CUSHION.

QUEER, s. The choir. S.

QUEER, * adj. Odd; strange; original; also, entertaining; amusing; affording fun. S.

QUEERS, s. pl. News; any thing odd or strange. Syn. Uncos. S.

QUEET, s. The ancle. Aberd. pron. of Cute. S.

His queets were dozen'd, and the fettle tint.

V. CUTE.

Ross's Helenore, p. 44.

QUEETIKINS, s. pl. Gaiters; spatterdashes. Ibid. S.

QUEEZIE, adj. Disordered; squeamish. S.

QUEEZ-MADDAM, s. The Cuisse Madame, or French jargonelle pear. S.

QUEY, QUY, QUOY, QUYACH, QUOYACH, QUEOCK,

QUYOK, s. A young cow or heifer, a cow of two years old, S. why, A. Bor.

"At and above 4 years old, the bullocks and—queys are driven to the English market, and fetch great prices." P. Kirkmichael, Ayr. Statist. Acc. vi. 105.

"They ordeined to the Crowners, for their fie, for ilke man vnlawed, or that componis, ane colpindach (ane quyach (or ane young cow) or threttie pennies." Acts, Malc. ii. c. 3. s. 3. Quoyach, De Verb. Sign. vo. Colpindach.

Betwix the hornes tua furth yet it syne,

Of ane vntamyt young quy, quhite as snaw.

Doug. Virgil, 101, 40.

Quo Colin, I hae yet upon the town

A quoy, just gaing three, a berry brown;

A tydy beast, and glittering like the slae,

That by gueed hap escap'd the greedy fae.

Weel will I think it wair'd, at sic a tyde,

Now when my lassie is your honour's bride.

Quoy is the pron. Ang.

Ross's Helenore, p. 113.

— In the caue as that ane quyok lowis,

Wyth loud voce squeland in that gousty hald,

Al Cacus craft reuelit scho and tald.

Doug. Virgil, 248, 35.

"Scot. Bor. a queock, id." Rudd.

"The quikis war neuir slane, quhill thay wer with calfe, for than thay ar fattest and maist delicious to the mouth." Bellend. Descr. Alb. c. 16.

A quey cawf, a female calf, S.

Ten lambs at spaining time as lang's I live,
And twa quey cawfs I'll yearly to them give.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 116.

"Quey cawfs are dear veal;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 59. This is said probably, because it is more profitable to rear them.

"Whee, whi, or whey. An heifer; the only word used in the East Riding of Yorkshire in this sense." Gl. Grose.

Rudd. (vo. Ky) derives the term from Teut. koeye, vacca. But it is more immediately allied to Dan. quie, Su.G. quiga, id. juvenca quae nondum peperit; Ihre. This learned writer indeed derives it from ko, a cow, as brigga, a bridge, from bro, id. sugga, a sow, from so, id.

QUEYN, QUEAN, s. A young woman, S. See Sup.

Sibb. has justly observed that this word is "not always" used, "as Junius would have it, with an implication of vice," Gl.

It is never a respectful designation; but it is often used, in familiar language, without any intentional disrespect; as, a sturdy queyne, a thriving queyne. It is generally accompanied by some epithet, determining its application; as, when it bears a bad sense, a loun queyne, a worthless queyne; and as denoting a loose woman, S.B. a hure-queyne, pron. q. koyne. When applied to a girl, the dimin. queynie is frequently used.

It occurs in almost all the Goth. dialects; Moes.G. queins, quens, (the most natural origin of E. wench.) quin-o, Alem. quen-a, A.S. cwen, Su.G. quinna, kona, Isl. kwinna, mulier, uxor. This is nearly allied to Gr. γυνή, id. Those who wish to see the various conjectures with respect to the root, may consult Jun. Et. vo. Quean, Goth. Gl. vo. Queins, Quino, and Ihre, vo. Kona, Quinna.

QUEYNIE, s. A diminutive denoting a little girl. S.

QUEINT, QUENT, adj. 1. Curious; elegant, E. quaint.

For so the Poetis, be thare craftye curys,
In similitudis, and vthir quent figuris,
The soithfast mater to hide and to constrene.

Doug. Virgil, 6, 35.

2. Strange; wonderful.

The byisning beist the serpent Lerna,
Horribill quhissilland, and queynt Chimera
With fire enarmyt on hir toppis hie.

Doug. Virgil, 173, 16.

3. Cunning; crafty.

Or gif ye traist ony Grekis giftis be Without dissait, falset or subtelite,
Knaw ye not bettir the quent Ulixes slycht?

Doug. Virgil, 40, 6.

It is used by Chaucer in the two last senses, and in one nearly connected with the first, trim, neat.

Fr. coint, elegant, from Lat. compt-us; or, as some think, from. Arm. coam, beau et joli, Dict. Trev. Par cointise, d'une façon propre et ajustée; Gl. Rom. Rose.

QUENTISS, s. Neatness; elegant device.

Baneris rycht fayrly flawmand,
And penselys to the wynd wawand,
Swa fele thar war off ser quentiss,
That it war gret slycht to diuise.

Barbour, xi. 194. MS.

Quayntise, O.E. signifies skill, slight.

Than said Merlyn to the kyng,
"Quayntise ouercomes alle thing."
"Strength is gode vnto trauaile,
"Ther no strength may sleght wille vaile."

Chaucer, queyntise, id. R. Brunne, App. to Pref. cxc.

QUEINT, QUEYNT, s. A wile; a device, O.Fr. cointe.

"Wheint; cunning; subtle. Var. Dial." Gl. Grose.

And part he assoylyd thare,
VOL. II. 249

That til hym mast plesand ware
Be giftis, or be othir thyngis,
As queyntis, slychtis, or flechyngis.

Chaucer, queyntise, cunning. Wyntown, vii. 9. 222.

To QUEINTH, v. a. "To compose; to pacify," according to Rudd.

Qubarfor Enee begouth again renew
His faderis hie saul queinth: for he not knew
Qubidder this was Genius, the god of that stede,
Or than the seruand of his fader dede.

Doug. Virgil, 130, 31.

Na licence grantit was, nor tyme, ne space,—
As for to tak my leif for euer and ay,
The last regrait and quenthing wordis to say.

Ibid. 294, 11.

"Our author uses it for the solemn valediction given to the dead, when they were a burying, which was essentially necessary (according to their superstition) in order to compose them, and give them rest in their graves, and to procure them passage over the Stygian Lake into the Elysian Fields. The word originally is the same with Quench, and is used for it by Chaucer." Thus he expl. queinth words, composing, pacifying. Chaucer indeed uses queinte as the pret. and part. of quench; but in a sense strictly literal. It would be more natural to understand this term as signifying to bewail, from Isl. kuein-a, to complain, Moes.G. quain-on, to mourn. Matt. xi. 17. Ni quaino-deduth, ye have not lamented. Alem. Uuein-on, id. This signification corresponds to the language used by Virg. "Coelum questibus implet;" and, "Adfari extremum miseræ matri."

Jun. thinks that it ought to be quething, notwithstanding the authority of the MS. to the contrary; in opposition to which Rudd. acknowledges that he rashly wrote quething, according to the printed copy A. 1553, in the following passage.

So, so, hald on, leif this dede body allane,
Say the last quething word, adew, to me.

I sall my deith purches thus, quod he. Virg. 60, 21.

Jun. renders it, valedictory; Lye derives it from Isl. kwedia, salutatio, valedictio. V. Jun. Etym.

The Su.G. Isl. v. qwaed-ia, to salute, was used by ancient writers, to denote a solemn address to God.

Since this article was sent to press, I find that, in the MS. which Rudd. used, the word (p. 130.) is quheith; in the other, (Univ. Libr.) queith. That, in passage second, is quenthing, MS. I. quething, MS. II. which corresponds to the conjecture of Junius. In the third passage, quenthing occurs in both MSS.

QUEIT, QUIET, s. A species of bird. A Coot. S.

QUELLES, s. pl. "Yells," Pinkerton.

With gret questes and quelles,
Both in frith, and felles,
Al the deeren in the delles

Thei durken, and dare. Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. i. 4.

Alem. qual-en sih, lamentari, Schilter. Su.G. Isl. qwill-a, ejulare, which Ihre derives from quid-a, id. Here we have the origin of E. squeal and squawl, as well as of Su.G. squael.

Quelles, however, might denote the disturbance made by the huntsmen, in their questing, in order to rouse the game; Belg. quell-en, to vex, to trouble, to tease, to pester.

QUELT, s. A kilt, or petticoat worn in the Highlands. S.

QUEME, adv. Exactly; fitly; closely. "Wheam, close, so that no wind can enter it. Also, very handsome and convenient for one. Chesh." Gl. Grose. See Sup.

Ane hundreth brasin hespys tham claspyt queme.

Doug. Virgil, 229, 25.

He thristis to the leuis of the yet,
And closit queme the entre.—

Ibid. 304, 10.

Q U E

Teut. quaem, in be-quaem, aptus, commodus; Franc. biquam, congruit, convenit, Schilter. Su.G. quaemelig, conveniens.

Ihre derives the Su.G. word from Moes.G. quiman, to come, as Lat. conveniens a veniendo. Schilter, in like manner, gives biquam under Teut. quheman, venire.

QUEMIT, part. pa. Exactly fitted.

Yit round about full mony ane beriall stone,
And thame conjunctlie jonit fast and quemit.

Palice of Honour, iii. 67.

Gower uses queme in the sense of fit, or become.

And loke how well it shuld hem queme,
To hyndre a man that loueth sore.

Conf. Am. Fol. 51. a.

This use of the term confirms the derivation given under Queme. E. become is formed indeed in the same manner with Lat. convenire, and the Teut. terms.

QUENELLE, adj. Of or belonging to a queen. S.

QUENYIE, s. A corner. V. QUYNIE. S.

QUENRY, s. Abundance of bad women; from queyn, as used in a bad sense. See Sup.

Quhair hurdome ay unhappis
With quenry, cannis and coppis,
Ye pryd yow at thair proppis,
Till hair and berd grow dapill.

Scott, Chron. S.P. iii. 148.

QUENT, adj. QUENTISS, s. V. QUEINT.

QUENT, adj. Accustomed to, or familiar with, any state or condition. S.

"As new seruandis ar in derisioun amang the quent seruitouris, sa we as vyle & last pepyll of the world in thair sycht ar dayly inuadit to the deith." Bellend. Cron. Fol. 49. a.

Fr. accoint, id. Lat. cognit-us.

QUERD, s. A vessel formerly used for holding fish. S.

QUERING, s. Franch quering. Left unexplained. S.

QUERN (of a fowl,) s. The gizzard. S.

QUERNALLIT, part. pa. Apparently denoting the form of kirnels or interstices in battlements. V. KIRNEL. S.

QWERNE, s. Left unexplained. S.

QUERNEY, s. A species of rot in sheep. S.

QUERNELL, s. Apparently, Cornelian stone. S.

QUERNELL, adj. Square. S.

QUERNIE, adj. Granulated; as, Quernie honey. S.

QUERNIE, s. A hand-mill. Dim. from E. Quern. S.

QUERRELL, QUAREL, s. A quarry.

"Aboue thir cruelteis infinite nowmer of thame wer condampnyt to the Galionis, wynnyng of querrellis & mynis." Bellend. Cron. B. vi. c. 9. Lapidibus excidendis, Boeth.

This might indeed be rendered square stones, from Fr. quarrel-er, to pave with flat stones. It is used, however, for quarries by Doug.

This campioun —————
Eftir al kynd of wappinnis can do cry,
With branchis rent of treis, and quarel stanys
Of huge weicht down warpand all atanys.

Virgil, 249, 53.

In this sense quarrel is still used, S.B.; from the Fr. v., which is formed from quarré, square; because the proper work of quarriers is to raise stones of such a shape, that they may be hewn for pavement or for building.

QUERT, s. In quert, in good spirits, in a state of hilarity. See Sup.

And ever quhill scho wes in quert
That wass hir a lessoun.

So weill the lady-luvit the Knycht,

Q U E

That no man wald scho tak.

Bludy Serk, S.P.R. iii. 193.

Sibb. renders quert "prison, any place of confinement; perhaps also, sanctuary; abbrev. from Sax. cwertar, carcer."

He has been misled, either by its resemblance to the A.S. word, or from mention being made of a deip dungeoun in the preceding line; and has not observed that the Lady had been delivered from this at the expense of her lover's life. He had bequeathed to her his bloody shirt, and desired her to hang it up in her sight, as an antidote to any future attachment.

'First think on it, and syne on me,

'Quhen men cumis yow to wow.'

The Lady said, "Be Mary fre, Thairto I mak a wow."

Thus she kept the bludy serk still in her view; and it was a memorial of his love, and of her vow, when at any time she felt an inclination, from the liveliness of her spirits, to listen to any other lover.

In this sense it occurs in Gawan and Gol. ii. 22.

Quhill this querrell be quyt I cover never in quert.

i. e. "Till this quarrel be settled, I can never recover my spirits." V. COWER.

This agrees with the sense given of it by Ritson, Gl. E. M. Rom., as it occurs in a variety of instances in these remains of antiquity. All the examples, indeed, except one, are from what is undoubtedly a Scottish poem. This is Ywaine and Gawin. Here it has evidently the signification given above.

Madame, and he war now in quert,

And al hale of will and hert,

Ogayns yowr fa he wald yow wer.

Vol. i. 73.

Swilk joy tharof sho had in hert,

Hir thought that sho was al in quert.

Ibid. p. 141.

It occurs in Sir Eglamore, an O.E. romance, printed with the S. poems, Edin. 1508.

All bot the Erll thai war full feyn,

In quert that he was cumyn hame,

Hym welcumyt les and mare.

The knight here referred to returned victorious, and was entitled to marry the Earl's daughter.

I have met with it once in R. Brunne, p. 123.

He turned his bridelle with querte, he wend away haf gone,

The dede him smote to the herte, word spak he neuer none.

Hearne thinks that it is for thuerte, as if it signified, athwart, obliquely. But it undoubtedly means, briskly, in a lively manner.

This sense is much confirmed by the use of the adj. quierty. This is still retained, as signifying lively, possessing a flow of animal spirits, S.

In one passage, the sense seems more obscure. It contains the advice given to Waynour, Arthur's Queen, by the ghost of her mother.

"Als thou art Quene in thi quert,

Hold thes wordes in hert.

Thou shal leve but a stert:

Hethen shal thou fare."

Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. i. 20.

It seems, however, to denote her present state of health, prosperity, and joy, as contrasted with its brevity, and the certainty of death.

Ritson thinks that it is "possibly from quert, cuer, or coeur, Fr." But there seems to be no evidence that coeur was ever written quert. The only word that seems to have any connexion in sense, is Gael. cuairt, a visit; whence cuairtachas, a visiting, gossiping; unless we should suppose it to be corr. from Fr. guer-ir, to heal; to recover; also, to assuage; as originally denoting a state of convalescence.

Q U H

QUERTY, QUIERTY, adj. Lively; possessing a flow of animal spirits; active. S.

QUESTES, s. pl. Noise of hounds, Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. i. 4. V. QUELLES.

Fr. quest-er, "to open as a dog that seeth or findeth his game."

QUETHING, Doug. Virgil, 60, 21. V. QUEINTH.

QUH, a combination of letters, expressing a strong guttural sound, S.

"The use of Quh," Sibb. has observed, "instead of Wh, or Hw, is a curious circumstance in Scottish orthography, and seems to be borrowed immediately, or at first hand, from the Gothic, as written by Ulphilas in the fourth century. In his Gothic Gospels, commonly called The Silver Book, we find about thirty words beginning with a character (O with a point in the centre) the power of which has never been exactly ascertained. Junius, in his Glossary to these Gospels, assigned to it the power and place of Qu; Stiernhielm and others have considered it as equivalent to the German, Scandinavian, and Anglo-Saxon Hw; and lastly, the learned Ihre, in his Suio-Gothic Glossary, conjectures that this character did not agree in sound with either of these, but "sonum inter hu et qu medium habuisse videtur." Unluckily he pursues the subject no farther, otherwise he could scarcely have failed to suggest the Scottish Quh; particularly as a great proportion of these thirty Gothic words can be translated into Scottish by no other words but such as begin with these three letters." Gl.

This writer has discovered considerable ingenuity in his reflexions on this singularity in our language. But he could not mean, that Quh, in our orthography, could be borrowed immediately from the Gothic, as written by Ulphilas. For it had been in use in S. for several centuries before the Codex Argenteus was known to exist, or at least known in this country. It was probably invented by some very early writer, in order to express the strong guttural sound of which it is the sign. This perhaps seemed necessary; for as the E. pronounce their wh much softer than we do quh, they probably gave a similar sound to A.S. hw, ever after the intermixture of Norman.

Sibb. has partly mistaken Junius, who, after observing that the Goths, by the letter referred to, expressed Q, in the place of which the A.S. used cw, adds; "But whether the Goth. letter in every respect corresponds to Q, does not sufficiently appear to me, because there are not a few words in the Codex Argenteus, which do not seem so much to have the hard sound which belongs to Q, as that softer aspiration which is found in A.S. hw, or E. wh."

Notwithstanding the idea at first thrown out by Sibb., that our quh has been "immediately borrowed from the Gothic," he afterwards, although not very consistently, "to avoid any charge of hypothetical partiality," assumes "a different element or combination of letters,—viz. Gw,—a sound—which," he says, "occurs not unfrequently in the antient language of Germany; ex. gr. gwaire, verus, gwallich, potentia, gloria.—When this harsh sound," he adds, "gave way almost every where to the hw,—the character, which Ulphilas had invented to express it, fell of course to be laid aside. In Scotland alone the sound was preserved, and appears to this day under the form of Quh."

This assumption, which he retains in his Gl., is totally groundless. In what way soever we received our quh, there seems no reason to doubt that it expresses the sound of the letter employed by Ulphilas. This appears incontestable from the very examples brought by Sibb.

This letter could not be meant to express the sound of A.S. cw, because the words in which this occurs in A.S.

Q U H

are denoted by another Goth. character, resembling our vowel u; as quairn, mola, A.S. cwearn; queins, uxor, A.S. cwen, quithan, dicere, A.S. cwethan, &c. To the latter the learned Verel. gives the sound of qu; but to the former, of hw or ghw; Runograph. Scandic. p. 69.

It has been observed, that "this Goth. character appears to be the antient Aeolic Digamma asperated in pronunciation." This supposition is founded on the probability, that "the Gothic tongue was from the same stem as the antient Pelasgic, the root of the Greek." I am not, however, disposed to venture so far into the regions of conjecture; especially as some learned writers have contended that, as Ulphilas used several Roman characters, as F, G, H, R, he also borrowed the form of this from their Q. V. Michaelis' Introd. Lect. N. T. sect. 70.

As little can be said with respect to its resemblance to the Hebrew Ain; it being generally admitted that the sound of this letter is lost. It is, however, a pretty common opinion among the learned, that it denoted a very strong guttural sound.

I shall only add, that where there is no difference between the E. and S. words, except what arises from this peculiar orthography, it is unnecessary to give examples. There is no occasion for this in most cases, even where there is a change of the vowel.

Mr. Macpherson has so distinctly marked the relation of the different dialects to each other, and also to the Lat., as to the pron. who, that I shall make no apology for inserting his short table.

S.	Moes.G.	A.S.	O.Sw.	Lat.
Quha ,	quhas ,	hwa ;	huo ,	quis ,	} who:
Quhay ,	quho ,		hua ,	qui ,
			hue ,	quae ,
Quhays ,	quhis ,	hwaes ;	huars ,	cujus ;	} whose:
Quham ,	quamma ,	hwam ;	huem ,	quem ;
				quam ;	} whom.

I have not observed, however, that quhay occurs in a different sense from quha. They are used in common for E. who.

"Quhay sall haue the curage or spreit to punis thaym for feir of this insolent prince?" Bellend. Cron. Fol. 11. a.

Anone Eneas induce gan to the play

With arrowis for to schute quhay wald assay.

Doug. Virgil, 144, 8.

The use of quhay is now become provincial, being almost peculiar to Loth.

QUHA, QUHAY, pron. Who. S.

QUHAYE, s. Whey. Flot quhaye, whey, after being pressed from the cheese curds, boiled with a little meal and milk, in consequence of which a delicate sort of curd floats at top, S.

"Thai maid grit cheir of euyrie sort of mylk baytht o ky mylk & youe mylk, sueit mylk and sour mylk, curdis and quhaye, sourkittis.—flot quhaye." Compl. S. p. 66.

A.S. hweg, Belg. weye, huy.

QUHAYNG, QUHANG, WHANG, s. 1. A thong, a strap of leather, S. See Sup.

"Sum auctouris writtis, quhen Hengist had gottin the grant of sa mekill land (as he mycht circle about with ane bull hyde) he schure it in maist crafty and subtell quhayngis. In witnes heirot they say Towquhan in the language of Saxonis is callit ane quhayng." Bellend. Cron. B. viii. c. 12. Twhan, Boeth.

This seems to have been borrowed by Boece, from Geoffrey of Monmouth, lib. 6. c. 11. who says, that this in British was called Caer correi, and in Saxon, Thwang-castre, which in Lat. signifies the Castle of the Thong, from A.S. thwang, id. Boece says this castle was in Yorkshire. But, according to Verstegan, c. 5. it was "situated near unto Sydingborn in Kent." Junius approves of this derivation of the name of the castle.

The hardy brogue, a' sew'd wi' whang,
With London shoes can bide the bang,
O'er moss and muir with them to gang.

R. Galloway's Poems, p. 27.

"Whangs. Leather-thongs. North." Gl. Grose.

Sw. tweng, id. sko-tweng, corrigia calceamentorum. Seren. deduces it from twing-a, arctare.

2. A thick slice of any thing eatable; as, a whang of cheese, S. in allusion to the act of cutting leather into thongs. For it properly denotes what is sliced from a larger body.

The lasses, skelpin barefit, thrang,
In silks and scarlets glitter;

Wi' sweet-milk cheese, in monie a whang.—

Burns, iii. 31.

An' kebbocks auld, in monie a whang,
By jock-ta-legs are skliced.

Rev. J. Nicol's Poems, ii. 26.

"Quhank (of cheese.) A great slice of cheese. North." Gl. Grose. Hence,

To QUHANG, WHANG, v. a. 1. To flog, to beat with a thong, S.

2. Metaph. to lash in discourse.

— Heresy is in her pow'r,
And gloriously she'll whang her.

Burns, iii. 62.

3. To cut in large slices, S. See Sup.

QUHAIP, QUHAUP, WHAAP, s. A curlew, S. Scolopax arquata, Linn.

"That the wylde-meit, and tame meit vnderwritten, be sald in all tymes cumming of the prices following;—the Quhaip, vi. d." Acts Marie, 1551. c. 11. Edit. 1566.

"The wild land fowls are plovers, pigeons, curlews, (commonly called whaap.)" P. Unst, Shetl. Statist. Acc. v. 188. The name is the same in Orkn. V. Barry's Orkney, p. 307.

"A country gentleman, from the west of Scotland,—being occasionally in England for a few weeks, was, one delightful summer evening, asked out to hear the nightingale: his friend informing him, at the same time, that this bird was a native of England, and never to be heard in his own country. After he had listened with attention, for some time, upon being asked, if he was not much delighted with the nightingale: "It's a' very gude," replied the other in the dialect of his own country; "but I wad na gie the wheuple of a whaup for a' the nightingales that ever sang." P. Muirkirk, Ayrs. Statist. Acc. vii. 601. N.

Sibb. thinks that it is named ex sono. Perhaps it is from the same origin with the v. Wheep, q. v. Its name, however, resembles that of the Lapwing in Sw. and Dan. V. PEEWEIP. In Dan. the curlew is called Regn-spaer, apparently as being supposed to spae or predict rain.

QUHAIP, QUHAUP, s. A goblin or evil spirit, supposed to go about under the eaves of houses after the fall of night, having a long beak resembling a pair of tongs for the purpose of carrying off evil doers, Ayrs.

This goblin appears to have borrowed its name from the curlew.

QUHAIRANENT, adv. Concerning which. S.

QUHAIRTHROW, adv. Whence; in consequence of which. S.

QUHAIS, QUHAUSE, pron. The genitive of Quha; whose. S.

QUHAM, s. 1. A dale among hills. 2. A marshy hollow, whether with or without stagnant water, S. S.

Isl. hwamm-r, convallacula seu semivallis; a hwome, vorago, gula. G. Andr. It is elsewhere defined; Vallicula, locus depressior inter duos colliculos.

QUHARBE, adv. Whereby. S.

QUHARE, adv. Apparently, since or whereas. S.

QUHARE, adv. Where. All our quhare, every where. And suth it is and sene, in all our quhare, No erdly thing bot for a tyme may lest.

Ballad, Edin. 1508. S.P.R. iii. 127.

This is perhaps the passage referred to by Mr. Pinkerton, when he renders quhare, "place," in Gl. But although it is probable that the term was used in this sense, here it is certainly adverbial. It is merely an inversion of the more common phraseology our al quhare, q. over every place. V. ALQUHARE.

QUHAIRINTIL, adv. In which; wherein.

"I giue you twa points; quhairintil euery ane of you aught to try and examine your consciences." Bruce's Serm. on the Sacr. P. 1. b.

QUHA-SAY, s. It seems to signify pretence. S.

QUHATKYN, QUHATEN. What kind of; S. whattin. See Sup.

The King Robert wüst he wes thar,
And quhat kyn chyftanys with him war.

Barbour, ii. 226. M.S.

Quhat will ye say me now for quhaten plycht?
For that I wait I did you nevir offence.

V. KIN.

King Hart, i. 31.

QUHAT-RAK. An exclamation; What avails it?

What care I for it? V. RAIK, s. care. S.

QUHATSUMEUR, adj. Whatsoever.

"In the chyir of Moyses sittis Scribes, and Phariseis, quhatsumeir thing they bid yow do, do it, but do nocht as thay do; because they bid do, and dois nocht." Kennedy, of Crosraguell, Compend. Tractiue, p. 60.

To QUHAUK, v. a. To beat, S. thwack, E.

Our word is probably the corr. The E. word has been traced to Teut. zwack-en, urgere, percutere; A.S. tacc-ian, ferire, Isl. thick-a, affligere.

QUHAUP, s. A curlew. V. QUHAIP. See Sup.

QUHAUP-NEBBIT, adj. Having a long sharp nose. S.

QUHAUP, WHAAP. There's a whaup in the raip, S. Prov. There is something wrong; properly, as denoting some kind of fraud or deception, V. Kelly, p. 305.

I have observed no other example of the use of the term, except in a silly performance, which exhibits Presbyterians in so ridiculous a light, that he must be credulous indeed, who can believe that many of the ludicrous sayings, there ascribed to them, were ever really uttered.

"I'll hazard twa and a plack,—there is a whap in the rape, Ede, has thou been at barn-breaking, Ede? Come out of thy holes, and thy bores here, Ede," &c. Presbyterian Eloquence, p. 139.

The inhabitants of the county of Mearns ascribe the origin of the proverb to a circumstance respecting the fowl that bears this name. Their traditionary account of it, indeed, has much the air of fable. It is customary to suspend a man by a rope round his middle from a rock called Fowls-heugh near Dunnottar, for the purpose of catching kittieweaks and other sea-fowls, by means of a gin at the end of a pole. V. Statist. Acc. xi. 216. On one occasion, he, who was suspended in this manner, called out to one of his fellows who were holding the rope above; "There's a faut [fault] in the raip." It being supposed that he said, "There's a whaup in the raip," one of those above cried, "Grup till her, man, she's better than twa gow-maus." In consequence of this mistake, it is said, no exertion was made to pull up the rope, and the poor man fell to the bottom, and was dashed to pieces.

The word may originally have denoted some entanglement in a rope; as when it is said to be fankit. It may thus be allied to Isl. hapt, vinculum; or rather to Su.G. wefw-a, implicare, Moes.G. waib-an, id.

Q U H

QUHAUP, s. 1. A pod in the earliest state, S. synon. shaup. Hence peas are said to whaup or be whauped, when they assume the form of pods. 2. A pod after it is shelled. 3. A mean or low fellow; a scoundrel. S.

Whaup is used S.B. Shaup, S.O. V. SHAUP.

To QUHAUP, v. a. To shell peas, S.B.

To QUHAWCH, v. n. V. QUAHK.

QUHAWE, s. A marsh, a quag-mire. See Sup.

Wyth-in myris in-til a quhawe,
That wes lyand nere that schawe,
The knychtis, that sawe his wyth-drawyng,
Thai folowyd fast on in a lyng.

Wyntoun, viii. 39, 41.

Su.G. ques-a, a marshy whirlpool.

QUHEBEIT, adv. Howbeit. S.

QUHEEF, s. A fife; a musical instrument. S.

QUHEYNE, QUHENE, QUHOYNE, QUHONE, WHEEN. adj. Few. See Sup.

Thought thai war quheyn, thai war worthy,
And full of gret chewalry. Barbour, ii. 244. MS.
— We ar quhoynes, agayne sa fele.

Ibid. xi. 49. MS.

And thai war quhone and stad war sua
That thai had na thing for till eyt.

Ibid. ix. 163. MS.

To quhone, too few.

He had to quhone in his cumpany.

Ibid. xiii. 549. MS.

Ane few wourdis on sic wyse Jupiter said:
But not in quheyn wordis him ansuere maid
The fresche goldin Venus.—

Paucus, Virg. Doug. Virgil, 312, 54.

It is sometimes contrasted with mony.

Of mony wourdis schortlie ane quhene sall I Declare——— Doug. Virgil, 80, 43.

"In mod. S.," as Mr. Macpherson observes, "it is used exactly as the Eng. few, prefixing the sing. article a, and sometimes also wee (little) e. g. a wee quhene, a very few; also, a gay quhene, a tolerable number or quantity."

A.S. hwaene, hwene, aliquantum, paulo, hwon, paululum, pusillum; Belg. weynigh, Germ. wenig, parvus; paucus.

To QUHEMLE, WHOMMEL, v. a. To turn upside down, S. whummil.

And schyll Triton with his wyndy horne,
Ovir quhemlit all the flowand ocean.

Bellend. Proheme to Cron. st. 2.

On whomelt tubs lay twa lang dails,
On them stood many a goan.—

V. LOAN. Ramsay's Poems, i. 267.

"Whemml. To turn any vessel upside down. North." Gl. Grose.

Sibb. (vo. Whommel) thinks this a corr. of E. whelm, from Isl. hilm-a, obtegere. But it is evidently the same with Su.G. hwiml-a. Thet hwimlar i hufvudet, caput vertigine laborat, ubi omnia intus volvi videntur, perinde ac si cerebrum rotaretur; Ihre. Sw. hummel om tummel, topsy-turvy; Seren. Teut. wemel-en, circumversari.

QUHENSUA, adv. When so, or, when thus. S.

QUHERTIE, adj. Apparently hearty or liberal. S.

QUHETHIR, THE QUHETHYR, conj. However; notwithstanding; although.

Thai durst nocht fecht with thaim, for thi
Thai withdrew thaim all halily;
The quhethyr thai war v hundre ner.

Barbour, xvi. 571. MS.

Early editors, either not understanding the term, or supposing that it would not be understood by the reader, have always substituted another; sometimes yet, as in the passage quoted; elsewhere, but, then, howbeit, &c. as in Edit. 1620.

Q U H

The Erle of Murreff, and his men
Sa stoutly thaim contenynt then,
That thai wan place, ay mar and mar,
On thair fayis; quhethir thai war
Ay ten for ane, or may, perfay.

Although, Ed. 1620. Barbour, xii. 564. MS.

Mr. Macpherson gives also the sense of wherefore. But if used in this sense, I have not observed it.

A.S. hwaethere, id. tamen, attamen, verum. This adverbial and adversative sense seems merely a secondary use of the term, properly signifying whether, as still relating to two things opposed, or viewed in relation, to each other. Moes.G. quhadar, id. Whether or no, is still frequently in the mouths of the vulgar, as signifying, however.

To QUHETHIR, v. n. V. QUIDDIR.

QUHEW, LE QUHEW, s. A disease of the febrile kind, which proved extremely fatal in Scotland, A. 1420. It appears to have been a sort of influenza, occasioned by the unnatural temperature of the weather.

Infirmities ista, quæ non solum magnates, sed et innumera- biles de plebe extincti sunt, Le QuheW à vulgaribus dice- batur, quæ, ut physici ferunt, causabatur ex inæqualitate vel intemperantia hiemis, veris et aestatis precedentium: quia hiems fuit multum sicca et borealis, ver pluviosum, et similiter autumnus; et tunc necesse est in aestate fieri febres acutas, et ophthalmias, et dysenterias, maximè in hu- midis. Fordun. Lib. xv. c. 32.

The origin is uncertain. From le being prefixed, one would think that it must have had a Fr. origin. But in the Scotichronicon, le is often prefixed to names where there is no connexion with Fr. A tower, in the Castle of Edinburgh, is called le Turnipyk, Lib. xiii. c. 47. The county of Kincardine is designed le Mernis, ibid. c. 39. Besides, the word both in form and signification is pretty nearly allied to Su.G. queisa, Isl. kweisa, also hweisa, a fever, morbi in Hyperboreis frequentis species; G. Andr. Ihre has mentioned A.S. hweos, as having the sense of, febricitare. But he has not attended to the passage quoted by Somner, in which it means, expectorated; He hrithod and egeslic hweos; febricitavit et terribiliter ex- spumavit.

To QUHEW, v. n. To whiz; to whistle. See Sup.

— Euris with loud schouts and schill
His braith begud to fynd;
With quhewing, renewing
His bitter blasts againe.

Burel's Pilgr. Watson's Coll. ii. 31.

One might suppose this word to be the root of Su.G. hwis-a, id.

QUHEW, s. The sound produced by the motion of any body through the air with velocity.

Than from the heuyn down quhirland with ane quhew
Come Quene Juno, and with her awin handis Dang vp the yettis— Doug. Virgil, 229, 50.

"S. Bor. a few, vox ex sono conficta," Rudd. It may, however, be radically the same with Quhich, q. v.

To QUHEZE, v. a. To pilfer growing fruits, apples, &c. S.

QUHY, s. A cause, or reason.

And other also I sawe compleynyng there
Vpon fortune and hir grete variance,
That quhere in love so well they coplit were
With thair suete makis coplit in plesance,—
So sodeynly maid thair disseverance,—
Withoutin cause there was non other quhy.

King's Quair, iii. 20.

This resembles the scholastic use of Lat. quare.

Q U H

Bot quhat awalis bargane or strang mellé,
Syne yeild the to thy fa, but ony quhy,
Or cowartlye to tak the bak and fle?

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 356, 50.

I am uncertain whether the latter be merely the adv. used as a s. signifying question, dispute; or if it mean delay, Su.G. hui, nictus oculi, particula temporis brevis-sima.

QUHICAPS, s. pl. Apparently Quhaips, curlews. S. To QUHICH, QUHIGH, QUHIIHER, (gutt.) v. n. To move through the air with a whizzing sound, S.B. See Sup.

It gaid whichin by, spoken of that which passes one with velocity, so as to produce a whizzing sound, in consequence of the resistance of the air. Cumb. to whiew, to fly hastily.

Now in the midst of them I scream,
Whan toozlin' on the haugh;
Than quihher by thaim down the stream,
Loud nickerin in a lauch.

Minstrely, Border, iii. 361.

The word, in this form, is properly used to denote the quick fluttering of a bird, Ang.

This might seem nearly akin to Isl. quik-a, motio, inquietata motatio; from hwik-a, moto, moveor, G. Andr. p. 157. hwecke, celeriter subtraho, ibid. p. 125. But I would rather deduce it from A.S. hweoth, hwith, hwitha, flatus, aura lenis, "puffe, a blast, a gentle gale of wind;" Somner. This is evidently the origin of A.S. hwother-an, hweother-ung. V. QUHIDDIR, v. To the same fountain may we probably trace A.S. hweos-an, Su.G. Isl. hwaes-a, E. whiz, as all originally expressing the sound made by the air.

To QUHID, WHUD, v. n. To whisk; to move nimbly; generally used to denote the quick motion of a small animal, S. See Sup.

O'er hill and dale I see you range
After the fox or whidding hare.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 419.

An' whuddin hares, 'mang brairdit corn,
At ilka sound are startin.

Rev. J. Nicol's Poems, ii. 1.

Isl. hwida, fervida actio (impetus, Verel.) hwid-rar, pernix fertur, (is hurried away, or carried swiftly;) G. Andr. p. 125. He derives hwida from vedr, the air. Hwat, citus; hwat-a, properare, ib. p. 126.

QUHYD, WHID. 1. A quick motion, S.

2. A smart stroke, synonym. thud.
For quhy, the wind, with mony quhyd,
Maist bitterly thair blew.

Burel's Pilgr. Watson's Coll. ii. 24.

3. In a whid, in a moment, S.
He lent a blow at Johnny's eye,
That rais'd it in a whid,
Right blue that day.

R. Galloway's Poems, p. 96.

4. Metaph. "a lie." Gl. Shirr. S. properly in the way of evasion, q. a quick turn. If I mistake not, the v. is also used in this sense.

Isl. hwida, mentioned above, denotes both action and passion, fervida actio vel passio pressa; G. Andr.

The ingenious editor of Popular Ballads confounds this with FUD, q. v.

To QUHIDDIR, QUHETHYR, v. n. To whiz. It is used to denote the sound which is made by the motion of any object passing quickly through the air, S. pron. quhithir. See Sup.

The gynour than deliuerly
Gert bend the gyn in full gret hy;
And the stane smertly swappyt owt.

254

Q U H

It flaw owt quhethirand with a rout.

Barbour, xvii. 684. MS.

Whiddering, Edit. 1620.

In Mr. Pinkerton's Ed. the sense is lost.

It flaw owt quhethyr, and with a rout.

Young Hippocoon, quhilk had the fyrst place,
Ane quhidderand arrow lete spang fra the string,
Toward the heuin fast throw the are dide thryng.

Doug. Virgil, 144, 35.

Rudd. as in many other instances, when no plausible etymon occurred, supposes both v. and s. to be voces ex sono factae. But there is no necessity for such a supposition, when there is so evident a resemblance to A.S. hwother-an, "to murmur, to make an humming or rumbling noise," Somner. Hence, hweotherung, a murmuring. V. QUHICH, v. Or we may trace quhiddir to Isl. hwat, quick in motion, hwat-a, to make haste.

QUHIDDER, QUHIDDIR, s. A whizzing sound, S. whither. Rudd. mentions also futhir, which most probably belongs to Aberd.

Than ran thay samyn in paris with ane quhidder.

Doug. Virgil, 147, 3.

Quham baith yfere, as said before haue we,
Saland from Troy throw out the wally see,
The dedly storme ouerquhelmit with ane quhidder;
Baith men and schip went vnder flude togiddir.

V. the v.

Doug. Virgil, 175, 9.

QUHIDDER, s. A slight and transient indisposition, pron. quhither; a quhither of the cauld, a slight cold, S. toult, synonym.

Perhaps from A.S. hwith, a puff, a blast, q. a passing blast; or Isl. hwida, impetus. It may be allied to A. Ber. whither, to quake, to shake; Gl. Grose.

QUHIG, WHIG, s. "The sour part of cream, which spontaneously separates from the rest; the thin part of a liquid mixture," S. Gl. Compl. vo. Quhaye. See Sup.

A.S. hwaeg, serum, whey, Belg. wey. V. WHIG.

QUHILE, QUHILIS, adv. At times; now; then, S. while; often used distributively.

For Romans to rede is delytabyle.
Suppose that thai be quhyle bot fable.

Wyntown, 1. Prol. 32.

For of that state quhile he, quhil he,
Of syndry persownys, held that Se.

Wyntown, vi. 13. 53.

Both words in Wyntown are undoubtedly the same; signifying, now one, then another; or S. "whiles the tane, whiles the tothir."

For feir the he fox left the scho,
He wes in sic a dreid:

Quhiles louping, and scowping,
O'er bushes, banks and brais;
Quhiles wandring, quhiles dandring,
Like royd and wilyart rais.

Burel's Pilgr. Watson's Coll. ii. 18. 19.

"There was established by common consent, to reside at Edinburgh constantly, a general committee of some noblemen, barons and burgesses; also in every shire, and whiles in every Presbytery, a particular committee for the bounds, to give order for all military affairs." Baillie's Lett. i. 154.

This is evidently from quhile, E. while, time, Moes.G. quheil-a, A.S. hwil; q. one while, another while; or as in mod. S. the pl. is used, at times.

In A.S. an adv. has been formed on purpose; hwilon, aliquando; hwilon an, hwilon twa, "now (or sometime) one, now two," Somner.

QUHILE, QUHIL, adv. Some time, formerly.

Q U H

Tharfor he said that thai that wald
Thair hartis undiscumfyt hald,
Suld ay thynk ententely to bryng
All thair enpress to gud ending;
As quhile did Cesar the worthy.

Barbour, iii. 277. MS.

QUHILE, QUHILLE, adj. Late; deceased, S. umquhil.

I drede that his gret wassalage,
And his trawail, may bring till end
That at men quhile full litill wend.

Barbour, vi. 24. MS.

— And Scotland gert call that ile
For honowre of hys modyr quhille,
That Scota was wytth all men calde.

Wyntown, ii. 8. 126.

Isl. Sw. hwil-a, to be at rest, Gl. Wynt. V. UMQUHIL.

QUHILK, pron. Which; who, S. quhilkis, pl.

Of hym come Reyne, that gat Boe,
The quhilk was fadyr to Toe. Wyntown, i. 13. 96.

This writer, as far as I have observed, generally uses it when denoting a person, demonstratively, with the prefixed.

The auld gray all for nocht to him tais
His hawbrek, quhilk was lang out of vsage.

Doug. Virgil, 56, 11.

“ Abone the commoun nature and conditioun of doggis, quhilkis ar sene in all partis, ar thre maner of doggis in Scotland.” Bellend. Descr. Alb. c. 11.

Whilk, whilke, is used by O.E. writers, so late, at least,
as the time of Chaucer.

And gude it is for many thynges,
For to here the dedis of kynges,
Whilk were foles, & whilk were wyse,
& whilk of tham couth mast quantyse;
And whilk did wrong, & whilk ryght,
& whilk mayntend pes & fyght.

R. Brunne, Prol. p. xcvi.

A.S. hwile, quis, qualis, who, what; Somner. Moes.G.
quheleiks, quhileiks, qualis, cujusmodi; Alem. huuieleich, Sw. hwilk-en, Dan. hwile, Belg. welk, Germ. welche, welch- er, who, which.

Moes.G. quheleiks, the most ancient, is evidently a compound word, from quha and leiks, like. This indeed expresses the idea conveyed by qualis, cujusmodi, of what kind, of what manner, i. e. like to what. With respect to the affinity between the Lat. term lis, and Goth. leiks, V. LUK, adj.

QUHILK, s. “ An imitative word expressing the short cry of a gosling, or young goose.” Gl. Compl.

“ The gayslingis cryit, Quhilck, quhilck, & the dukis cryit, Quack.” Compl. S. p. 60.

QUHILL, conj. Until, S.

— Man is in to dreding ay
Off thingis that he has herd say;
Namly off thingis to cum, quhill he Knew off the end the certanté.

Barbour, iv. 763. MS.

A.S. hwile, donec, untill, Somner. Or more fully, tha hwile the, which seems to signify, the time that. For this conj. is evidently formed from the s., as marking the time that elapses between one act or event and another. I prefer deriving it from the s., as the v. does not occur in Moes.G. or A.S.; although some might be inclined to view it as the imperat. of Su.G. Isl. hwil-a, quiescere.
Thus these words might be resolved, “ Wait for me till gloamin;” i. e. “ wait for me; the Time, that which intervenes between and twilight.”

Upon looking into the Diversions of Purley, i. 363, I find that I have given materially the same explanation of this particle with that of Mr. H. Tooke. But he seems to give too much scope to fancy, when he says of the

Q U H

synon. Till, that it is a word composed of to and while,
i. e. Time.”

It is scarcely supposable, that there would be such a change of form, without some vestige of it in A.S. or O.E.
If there ever was such a change, it must have been previous to the existence of the language which we now call English. For in A.S. til signified donec or until, at the same time that the phrase tha hwile, (not to while) was used in the very same sense. Although they occur as synon., there is not the least evidence that the one assumed the form of the other.

Besides, one great objection to the whole plan of this very ingenious work, forcibly strikes the mind here. Mr.
Tooke scarcely pays any regard to the cognate languages.
In Su.G. not only is hwila used, as denoting rest, cessation; being radically the same word with A.S. hwile, and expressing substantially the same idea: but til is a prep.
respecting both time and place. In Moes.G., as hwila signifies time, til denotes occasion, opportunity. Now, it would be far more natural to view our till as originally the Moes.G. term, used in the same manner as A.S. hwile, to mark the time, season, or opportunity for doing any thing.

But it appears to me still more simple and natural, to view till as merely the prep. primarily used in the sense of ad, to. The A.S. word til, or tille, is rendered both ad, and donec. Su.G. till also admits of both senses.
It is thus defined by Ihre; Till, praepositio, notans motum ad locum, et id diverso modo; dum enim genitivum regit, indicat durationem, secus si accusativo jungatur. Thus all the difference between till, ad, and till, donec, is that the former denotes progress with respect to place, the other, progress as to time. As till and to are used promiscuously in old writing, in the sense of ad; till, donec, may be often resolved into to. Thus, “ I must work from twelve till six,” i. e. from the hour of twelve to that of six; marking progressive labour. In one of the examples given by Dr. Johns. under until, which he properly designs a prep., the substitution of to would express the sense equally well: “ His sons were priests of the tribe of Dan. until the day of the captivity.”—I have observed that, by our old writers, unto is occasionally used in the sense of until. V. UNTO, in Sup.

It is no inconsiderable confirmation of this hypothesis, that although til does not occur in the Teut. dialects, tot, to, is used in this sense; the same prep. denoting progress both with respect to place and time. Tot huys gaen, to go home, to go to one's house; Tot den nacht to, till night.
I might add, as analogical confirmations, Fr. jusque à, Lat.
usque ad, &c. used in the same sense.

I did not observe, till I had written this article, that Lye throws out the same idea; Add Jun. Etym.

QUHILLY BILLY. A phrase expressive of the noise made by a person in violent coughing or reaching.

Sche bokkis sic baggage fra hir breist,
Thay want na bubblis that sittis hir neist,
With ilka quhillly billy. Lyndsay, S.P.R. ii. 88.

V. HILLIE BILLOW; which seems originally the same.

QUHYLUM, QUHILOM, adv. 1. Formerly; some time ago.

This tretys furtht I wyll afferme,
Haldande tyme be tyme the date,
As Orosius quhyllum wrate. Wyntown, 2. Prol. 22.

2. At times; sometimes.

A gret stertling he mycht haiff seyne
Off schippys; for quhilum sum wald be
Rycht on the wawys, as on mounté:
And sum wald slyd fra heycht to law.

Barbour, iii. 705.

V. UMQUHILE, which is used in both senses.

3. Used distributively; now; then.

He girnt, he glourt, he gapt as he war weid;
And quhyllum sat still in ane studying;
And quhyllum on his buik he was reydng.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, 77. 78.

O.E. id. A.S. hwilon, hwilom, hwilum, aliquando, sometime, Somner.

QUHYN, QUHIN, QUHIN-STANE, s. 1. Greenstone; the name given to basalt, trap, wackin, porphyry, or any similar rock, S. The resounding stone. See Sup.

Thou treuthles wicht bot of ane could hard quhyn
The clekkit that horribil mont Caucasus hait.

Doug. Virgil, 112, 32.

On ragged rolkis of hard harsk quhyn stane,
With frosyn frontis cald clynty clewis schane.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 200, 44.

2. Metaph. used as an emblem of obstinacy or want of feeling; as, "His heart's as hard as a whinstane." S. To QUHYNGE, v. n. To whine; applied to the peevish crying of children, or the complaints made by dogs, S. pron. wheenge.

In the last sense it is used by Doug.

Than the remanyng of the questyng sort—
Wythdrawis, and about the maister huntar
Wyth quhyngand mouthis quaikand standis for fere,
And with gret youling dyd complene and mene.

Virgil, 459, 4.

"From the same original as the word whine or whrine," Rudd. It is quite different from quhrine, and allied to E. whine only in the second degree. The E. v. is evidently from A.S. wan-ian, Germ. wein-en; whyng is more immediately connected with Su.G. weng-a; plorare. Graa-tha oc wengha, plorare et ejulare, Ihre. In S. it is inverted, to whinge and greet. "Whinge. To moan and complain with crying. North." Gl. Grose.

To QUHIP, WIPP, v. a. To bind about, S.

Sibb. mentions Goth. wippian, coronare, praetexere. But this word I have not met with. The only cognate term in Moes.G. is waib-jan, bi-waib-jan, to surround, to encompass. "Thine enemies biwaib-jand thuk, shall compass thee about," Luke x. 43. Isl. wef, circumvolvo. E. whip, as applied to sewing round, is radically the same with the S. v.

QUHIPPIIS, s. pl. Crowns; garlands, Gl. Sibb.

Moes.G. waips, corona; accus. wipja.

To QUHIR, v. n. To whiz, S. whurr, synonym. quhiddir, S.

It may be observed, however, that E. whiz does not fully express the idea; as properly denoting a hissing sound. But whir signifies a sound resembling that which is made when one dwells on the letter r.

Furth flew the schaft to smyte the dedely straik,—
And quhirrand smat him throw the the in hy.

Doug. Virgil, 447, 1.

If not formed from the sound, as expressing the noise made by a body rapidly whirled round in the air; it may be allied to Isl. hwerf-a, volvi, hyr-a, vertigine agi.

QUHIR, s. The sound of an object moving through the air with great velocity.

The souir schaft flew quhissilland wyth ane quhir,
Thare as it slidis scherand throw the are.

Doug. Virgil, 417, 47.

To QUHISSEL, WISSIL, v. a. 1. To exchange.

Here is, here is within this corpis of myne
Ane forcy sprete that dois this lyffe dispise,
Qubilk reputis fare to wissil on sic wyse
With this honour thou thus pretendis to wyn,
This mortall state and liffe that we bene in.

Doug. Virgil, 282, 15.

2. To change; used with respect to money, S.B.

"Gold suld be quhisseled & changed with quhite money, with the price thereof allanerly." Index Skene's Acts, vo. Gold.

"Sindrie persones havand quhite money, will not change for gold, bot takis therefore twelue pennies, or mair for quhisseling of the samin, in high contempt of our Sovereign Lord, and his authoritie." Acts, Ja. V. 1540. c. 99. Murray. In Edit. 1566. c. 79. wissilling, which seems the more ancient orthography.

Belg. wissel-en, Germ. wechsel-n, permutare, nummo majoris pretii accepto minutam pecuniam per partes redere; Kilian. Su.G. waexl-a, id. waexel, vicissitude, the state of changing; Isl. vixl, vices, vygse, vyxe, per vices. Ihre observes, that the most ancient vestige of the word is in Moes.G. wik, which he understands as equivalent to Lat. vice; alleging that the terms are allied, and that the Goth. word has the greatest appearance of antiquity, because the Lat. one stands singly, without any cognates, whereas Goth. wik-a signifies cedere, to give way, to leave one's place, which is the true idea of vicissitude.

The learned Lord Hailes, mentioning A.S. gislas, hostages, says; "It may be considered whether this be not the same with wissles, i. e. exchanges; wisselen, to exchange, is still used in Low Dutch. The Scots used it in the reign of James V." Annals, i. 17. N.

The worthy Judge had not heard of the term, although still used in some counties. His idea as to gislas, notwithstanding the apparent analogy of idea, is not supported by fact. For they appear as words radically different in all the languages in which both are preserved. Franc. gezal, kisal, obses; uehsal, permutatio; Germ. gisel, wechsel; Su.G. gissel, gislan, waexel; A.S. wrixl-an, permutare. As to the conjectures concerning the origin of the word denoting an hostage, V. Gisel, Ihre, Geisel, Wachter.

QUHISSEL, WHISSEL, WISSEL, s. Change given for money, as silver for gold, or copper for silver. Thus it is commonly said, Gie me my wissel, i. e. Give me the money due in exchange, S.B.

This phrase occurs in a metaph. sense. The whistle of your groat, skaith and scorn. Wife of Beith, Old Ball.

I was suspected for the plot;
I scorn'd to lie;
So gat the whistle o' my groat,
An' pay't the fee.

Burns, iii. 260.

Whistle of his plack, V. CULYON.

Belg. wissel, Germ. wechsel, Su.G. waexel, id.

QUHYSSALAR, s. "A changer of money; also, a white bonnet, i. e. a person employed privately to raise the price of goods sold by auction. Teut. wisseler, qui quaestum facit foenerandis permutandisque pecuniis." Sibb. Gl.

Sibb. mentions the s. as occurring in our Acts of Parliament. But I have not observed it.

QUHIT, QUHYTT, s. Wheat. S.

To QUHYTE, WHEAT, v. a. To cut with a knife; whittle, E. It is almost invariably applied to wood.

"Scot. to wheat sticks, i. e. to whittle or cut them," Rudd. more generally pron. white. A. Bor. "white, to cut sticks with a knife." Gl. Grose. See Sup.

Johnson derives the v. whittle from the s. as signifying a knife; Seren. from white, probably as referring to the effect of cutting wood, which is to make it appear white, especially when the bark is cut off. For, in proof of his meaning, he refers to Isl. hwitmylingar, an arrow, thus denominated from the white feathers fixed to it.

It is possible, however, that this term might be originally applied to the act of cutting wood with a view to bring it to a point, or to sharpen it, by giving it the form of a dart or arrow; from A.S. hwett-an, Isl. hwet-ia, Su.G. hwaet-ia, acuere, exacuere, E. whet; from A.S. hwaet, Isl. Su.G. hwass, acutus. There is no ground to doubt that this is the origin of whittle, A.S. hwitel, a knife, q. a sharp instrument. Teut. wette, wacte, acies cultri; from wett-en, acuere.

QUHYTE, adj. Hypocritical; dissembling, under the appearance of candour.

Thay meruellit the ryche gyftis of Eneas,
Apon Ascanus feil wounder was,
The schining vissage of the god Cupide,
And his dissimillit slekit wourdes quhyte.

Doug. Virgil, 35, 48.

It is used in a similar sense by Chaucer.

Trowe I (quod she) for all your wordès white,
O who so seeth you, knoweth you full lite.

Troilus, iii. 1573.

There is an evident allusion to the wearing of white garments, as an emblem of innocence, especially by the clergy in times of Popery, during the celebration of the offices of religion.

This term occurs in the S. Prov., "You are as white as a loan soup," Kelly, p. 371. i. e. milk given to passengers at the place of milking. Kelly, in expl. another proverb, "He gave me whitings, but bones," i. e. fair words, says; "The Scots call flatteries whitings, and flatterers white people," p. 158. The latter phrase, I apprehend, is now obsolete. Whether flatteries were ever called whitings, I question much. As this writer is not very accurate, he might have some recollection of a proverbial phrase, still used to denote flattery; "He kens how to butter a whiting." The play on the word whiting, which signifies a fish, seems to refer to the metaph. sense in which white was formerly used, as denoting a hypocritical person.

QUHYTE CRAFT. A designation formerly given to the trade of glovers. S.

QUHITE FISCH. The distinctive name given to haddocks, cod, ling, tusk, &c. in our old Acts. S.

QUHIT-FISCHER, s. One who fishes for haddocks, cods, &c. S.

QUHITE HARNES. Apparently, polished armour, as distinguished from that of the inferior classes. S.

QUHITE MONEY. Silver. V. QUHISSEL, v. See S. This is a Scandinavian idiom. Su.G. hwita penningar, silver money. See Sup.

QUHYT WERK. A phrase used to denote silver work. S.

QUHITELY, QUHITLIE, adj. Having a delicate or fading look. V. WHITLIE. S.

QUHITHER, s. A transient indisposition. V. QUHIDDER. QUHYTYSS, s. pl.

"Armys and quhytyss, that thai bar,
With blud wes sa defoulyt thar,
That they mycht nocht descroyt be."

Barbour, xiii. 183. MS.

Mr. Pinkerton says, "Quhytys are coats; the word is disfigured by an odd orthography." In Edit. 1620, it is coats.

I cannot think, however, that quhytyss simply signifies coats. The same word is used as an adj. in our old laws.

"Quhite harnes" (harness) is connected with "steel bonnets" and "uther munition bellical." Acts Mar. c. 75. Murray.

From still more ancient laws it appears that this kind of military dress was restricted to those of the first rank.

"It is ordained—that everie noble-man, sik as Earle, Lorde, Knicthe, and Barronne, and everie greate landed-man, havand ane hundreth pounce of yeirlye rente, bee an-armed in quhite harnesse, licht or heavie as they please, and weaponed effeirand to his honour." Acts, Ja. V. c. 87. 88. Murray.

The only word, that seems to have any affinity, is Fr. hoqueton, a military garment. A.S. hwitel, however, denotes a mantle, a soldier's cloak.

By comparing Bellend. with the Lat. of Boece, it appears that the term quhytis was used, originally at least, to denote very fine and pure cloths made of wool. They seem to have been so called from their whiteness, and to have been an article of luxury. "In Niddisdail is the toun of Dunfreis, quhair mony small and deligat quhytis ar maid, haldin in gret daynte to marchandis of vncouth realmes." Descr. Albion, c. 5.

"In ea oppidum est Dumfries, insigne laneis pannis candidissimis, subtilissimoque contextis filo, Anglis, Gallis, Flandris, Germanisque, ad quos ferunt, in deliciis." Boeth.

QUHITSTANE, s. A whetstone.

— Sum polist scharp spere hedis of stele,—

And on quhitstanis thare axis scharpis at hame.

Doug. Virgil, 230, 11.

Teut. wet-steen, cos. V. QUHYTE, v.

To QUHITTER, QUITTER, v. n. 1. To warble, to chatter; applied to the note of birds, S.

The gukkow galis, and so quhitteris the quale,
Quhil ryveris reirdit, schawis, and euery dale.

Doug. Virgil, 403, 26.

The sma' fowls in the shaw began

To quhitter in the dale.

Jamieson's Popular Ball. i. 226.

"To whitter, i. e. to warble in a low voice, as singing birds always do at first, when they set about imitating any sweet music, which particularly attracts their attention." N. ibid.

2. It is applied, with a slight variation, to the quick motion of the tongue; as of that of a serpent, which, as Rudd. observes, moves so quickly, that it was "thought to have three tongues."

Lik to ane eddir, with schrewit herbis fed,—

Hie vp hir nek strekand forgane the son,

With fourkit toung into hir mouth quitterand.

Doug. Virgil, 54, 49.

Linguis micat ore trisulcis. Virg.

Su.G. quitr-a, garrire instar avium, cantillare, from quid-a, ejulare; Germ. kutter-n, queder-en, Belg. quetter-en, garrire, a frequentative from qued-en, dicere, cantare; as quitr-a from quid-a.

QUHITRED, QUHITTRET, s. The Common Weasel, S. Mustela vulgaris, Linn. V. Statist. Acc. P. Luss, Dunbartons. xvii. 247. whitrack, Moray.

"Mustela vulgaris ea est, quae Whitred nostratibus dicitur. Sylvestris (ea quae Weesel) altera major et saevior." Sibb. Scot. p. 11.

"Amang thame ar mony martrikis, beuers, quhitredis and toddis." Bellend. Descr. Alb. c. 8.

Out cume the Quhittret furwith,

Ane littill beist of lim and lith,

And of ane sobir schaip.

Burel's Pilgr. Watson's Coll. ii. 22.

The writer distinguishes this animal from the Fittret, which he introduces in the stanza immediately preceding.

The Fumart and the Fittret straue,

The deip and howest hole to haue,

That wes in all the wood.

But there is certainly no difference, except in the orthography. He seems to have adopted the pron. of Aberd., merely for the sake of alliteration.

Her minnie had hain'd the warl,

And the whitrack-skin had routh.

Jamieson's Popular Ball. i. 294.

i. e. there was money enough in the purse made of the weasel's skin.

Quhittret has been derived from Teut. wilttern, odorare, odorem spargere; Gl. Sibb. This indeed expresses one quality of the animal, as when pursued it emits an offensive smell. But I would rather deduce its name from another, which would be more readily fixed on, as being peculiarly characteristic, and more generally obvious. This is the swiftness of its motion; Isl. hwatur, Su.G. hwat, quick, clever, fleet. Thus we proverbially say, As clever's a quhittret, S. V. QUHID, v.

QUHOYNE, adj. Few. V. QUHEYNE.

QUHOMFOR. For whom. S.

To QUHOMMEL, v. a. To turn upside down. V.

QUHEMLE.

QUHONNAR, adj. Fewer; the comparative of Quheyne quhone.

The Erle and his thus fechtand war

At gret myscheiff, as I yow say,

For quhonnar, be full fer, war thai

Than thair fayis; and all about

War enweround. — Barbour, xi. 605. MS.

Fewer is substituted in all the Edit. I have seen, Pinkerton's not excepted.

QUHOW, adv. How. See Sup.

"Heir it is expedient to schaw quhat is sweiring, & quhow mony verteous conditionis ar requirit to lauchful sweiring." Abp. Hamiltoun's Catechisme, 1551. Fol. 30. b.

This orthography frequently occurs in his work; and, if I recollect right, in a few instances, in the MS. of Bl. Harry's Life of Wallace. But it is without any proper authority.

To QUHRYNE, v. n. 1. To squeak, to squeal.

"Than the suyne began to quhryne, quhen thai herd the asse tair, quhilk gart the hennis kekkyl quhen the cokis creu," Compl. S. p. 59.

They maid it like a scraped swyne;

And as they cow'd, they made it quhryne.

Montgomerie, Watson's Coll. iii. 19.

2. To murmur, to emit a querulous sound, to whine. See S.

— All the hyll resoundis, quhrine and plene

About thare closouris brayis with mony ane rare.

Doug. Virgil, 14, 49.

Tharon aucht na man irk, complene nor quhryne.

Ibid. 125, 41.

It is called "an imitative word," Gl. Compl. But it is evidently derived from A.S. hrin-an, Isl. hrin-a, ejulare, mugire; hrina, a stentorian voice. It seems radically the same with Croyn, q. v.

QUHRYNE, s. A whining or growling sound. S.

In first edition given as "A wild roar; a yell."

The birsit baris and beris in thare styis

Raring all wod furth quhrynis and wyld cryis.

V. the v. Doug. Virgil, 204, 52.

To QUHULT, v. a. To beat; to thump. S.

QUHULT, s. A large object; "An unco quhult of arung."

QUY, QUYACH, s. A young cow. V. QUEY.

QUIB, s. Used for quip, a taunt or sharp jest. S.

QUIBOW, s. A branch of a tree, S.B. Gael. caobh, a bough; a branch. S.

QUICH, (gutt.) s. A small round-eared cap for a woman's head, worn under another, its border only being seen, Ang.

The quich was frequently used along with pinnars, which formed a head-dress resembling a long hood and pets.

Su.G. hwif; whence our coif. V. QUAIF, of which quich seems a corr.

QUICKEN, s. Couch-grass, Dogs-grass, S. Triticum repens, Linn. "The Quicken. Scot. aust." Light-foot, p. 1131. This is also the name S.B. Quicks, A. Bor. E. quick-grass, Skinner. It is generally used in the pl.; as, This ground is full of quicken. S.

Denominated perhaps because of its lively nature; as every joint of the root, which is left in the ground, springs up anew.

In Loth. it is also called ae-pointed grass, as springing up with a single shoot.

"The most troublesome weed to farmers, and which it is the object of fallow chiefly to destroy, is that sort of grass called Quicken, which propagates by shoots from its roots, which spread under ground." P. Bendothy, Perth. Statist. Acc. xix. 351. 352. N.

The Sw. names, quick-hwete, quick-rot, and quicka, are evidently allied.

QUICKENIN, s. Ale or beer in a state of fermentation thrown into dead or stale ale or porter. S.

QUIDDERFUL, adj. Of or belonging to the womb, or what is contained in it. S.

QUIERTY, adj. Lively, in good spirits, S. V. QUERT.

QUIET, adj. 1. Retired; as, a quiet place. 2. Applied to persons, as signifying concealed; skulking. S.

QUIETIE, s. Privacy, retirement; from Lat. quies, rest.

Sum wemen for thair pusilianimitie,

Ouirset with schame, thay did thame neuer schriue,

Of secreit sinnis done in quietie.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592. p. 233.

QUYLE, s. A cock, or small heap of hay; a coll or coil. S.

To QUYLE, v. a. To put into cocks. S.

QUIM, adj. Intimate. V. QUEEM. S.

To QUIN, v. a. To con.

My counseill I geve generallie

To all wemen, quhat ever thay be;

This lessoun for to quin per queir.

Maitland Poems, p. 329.

QUYNYIE, QUYNIE, QUEINGIE, s. A corner. O.Fr. coing, id. See Sup.

"I believe an honest fallow never—cuttit a fang frae a kebbuck, wi' a whittle that lies i' the quinyie o' the maun oner the claith." Journal from London, p. 1. 2.

QUINK, QUINCK, s. The Golden-eyed duck, Anas clangula, Linn. Orkn.

Praeter Solandos illos marinos,—alia sex Anserum genera apud nos inveniuntur.—Vulgus his vocibus eos distinguit: Quinck, Skilling, Klaik, Routhurrok, Ridlark. Leslaeus, De Orig. & Mor. Scot. p. 35.

"The claik, quink, and rute, the price of the peice, xviii. d." Acts Marie, 1551. c. 11. Edit. 1566.

A literary friend supposes that this fowl has been denominated from its cry, as it flies aloft, which may be fancied to resemble Quink, quink. But I suspect that the term may be corr. from its Norw. designation. Hwijn-and, Quijn-and. V. Pennant's Zool. p. 587.

QUINKINS, s. pl. 1. The scum or refuse of any liquid.

2. Metaph. nothing at all. S.

QUINQUIN, s. A small barrel; the same with Kinken. S.

QUINTER, s. "A ewe in her third year; quasi, twinter, because her second year is completed." Sibb. Gl.

In this case it must be formed from twa winter, as our forefathers denominated the year from this dreary season. Rudd. has observed that, "to the West and South, whole counties turn W, when a T precedes, into Qu, as que, qual, quanty, bequeen, for two, twelve, twenty, between, &c." Gl. lett. Q.

QUINTRY, s. Provincial pronunciation of Countrij. S.

QUIRIE, s. The royal stud.

Q U O

"Now was Sir George Hume one of the Masters of the Quirie preferred to the office." Spotswood's Hist. p. 466.
He was one of the equerries. Fr. escuyrie, ecurie, the stable of a prince or nobleman.

QUIRK*, s. A trick; an advantage not entirely opposed to law, nevertheless scarcely honest. S.

QUIRKIE, adj. Tricky; sportively tricky. V. SWICKY. S.

QUIRKLUM, s. A cant term for a puzzle. S.

QUIRTY, adj. Lively; in good spirits. V. QUERT. S.

QUISCHING, s. A cushion. S.

QUISQUOUS, adj. Nice, perplexing, difficult of discussion, S.

"Besides, the truths delivered by Ministers in the field, upon quisquous subjects, with no small caution by some, and pretty safely, were heard and taken up by the hearers, according to their humours and opinions, many times far different from, and altogether without the cautions given by the Preacher, which either could not [be], or were not understood by them." Wodrow's Hist. i. 533.

Can this be viewed as a reduplication of Lat. quis, of what kind; or formed from quisquis, whosoever? It may be borrowed from the scholastic jargon, like E. quiddity.

QUYT, QUITE, QUYTE, adj. Innocent; not culpable. S.

QUITCHIE, adj. Very hot; applied to any liquid. S.

To QUYTCLEYME, QWYT-CLEME, v. a. To renounce all claim to. O.E. quit-claim. V. Phillips.

— Frely delyveryd all ostagis,
And qwyt-clemyd all homagis,
And alkyn strayt condytyownys,
That Henry be his extorsyownys
Of Willame the Kyng of Scotland had.

Wyntown, vii. 8. 490.

My reward all sall be askyng off grace,
Pees to this man I broucht with me throu chans:
Her I quytcleym all othir gyftis in Frans.

In Perth Edit. quyt cleyn. Wallace, ix. 387. MS.

QWYT-CLEME, s. A renunciation. See Sup.

Of all thir poyntis evyr-ilkane,— Rychard undyr hys gret sele
As a qwyt-cleme fre and pure
Be lettyre he gave in fayre tenwre.

Wyntown, vii. 8. 501.

QUITCLAMATIOUNE, s. Acquital. S.

QUYTE, part. pa. Requited, repaid.

This kyndnes sal be quyt, as I am trew knight.

Gawan and Gologras, i. 16.

Fr. quit-er, to absolve. Quit is used in the same sense by Shakspeare.

QUITOUT, QUET OUT, part. pa. Cleared from debt. S.

To QUYTE, v. n. 1. To skate; to use skates for moving on ice. 2. To play on the ice with curling-stanes. S.

QUYTE, s. The act of skating. S.

To QUITTER, v. n. To warble, &c. V. QUHITTER.

QUO, pret. v. Said; abbrev. from quoth or quod. S.

QUOAB, s. A reward; a bribe. V. KOAB. S.

QUOD, pret. v. Quoth, said, S.

"Alexander ansuert to the imbassadour, quod he, it is as onpossibil to gar me and kyng Darius duel to giddir in pace and concord vndir ane monarche, as it is onpossibil that tua sonnis and tua munis can be at one tyme to giddir in the firmament." Compl. S. p. 166.

"A.S. cwoath. The Saxon character which expresses th, is often confounded with d in MSS., and in books printed in the earliest periods of typography." Gl. Compl.

This observation certainly proceeds on the idea that quod is an error of some old transcriber or typographer. But it has not been observed, that it frequently occurs in Chaucer.

Q U O

Lordinges (quod he) now herkeneth for the beste.

— Sire knight, (quod he) my maister and my lord.

Cometh nere, (quod he) my lady prioress.

Prol. Knichtes T. ver. 790. 839. 841.

It may also be often found in P. Ploughman.

A.S. cweth-an, cwoath-an, Moes.G. cwith-an, Alem. qued-an, quhed-an, Isl. qwed-ia, dicere. Quod is most nearly allied to Alem. and Isl. Alem. quhad, dicit, dixit, quad ih, dixi. Schilter, vo. Cheden.

QUOY, s. A young cow. V. QUEY.

QUOY, s. A piece of ground, taken in from a common, and enclosed, Orkn.

"The said Quoy of land, called Quoy-dandie, is to be exposed to sale, &c.—What is called a quoy in Orkney, is a piece of ground taken in from a common, and inclosed with a wall or other fence; and its boundaries being thus precisely fixed and ascertained, no doubt can arise as to its extent." Answers for A. Watt, to Condescendence D. Erskine, Kirkwall, Nov. 27. 1804.

The term sheep-quoy is also used as synonym. with bucht, Orkn.

Isl. kwi conveys the same idea, for it denotes a fold or bucht for milking ewes. Clastrum longum et angustum, quale paratur, ubi oves ordine mulgendo includuntur; G. Andr. p. 156. Septum quo pecudes per noctem in agro includuntur. Vestro-Gothi dicunt, kya; Verel. It is certainly the same word which is transferred to a long and narrow way enclosed. Kui, qui, Via porrecta, hominibus utrinque clausa; Su.G. qvia. Teut. koye, locus in quo greges quiescunt stabulanturque; koye van schaeppen, ovile, Kilian.

The primary idea conveyed by this word is that of an enclosure. Perhaps the Gothic inhabitants of Orkney originally used it to denote a fold, as in Isl.; and it has been afterwards transferred to a piece of ground enclosed for culture; from its resemblance to a fold. The word seems radically to have been common both to Goths and Celts. Wachter, vo. Koie, refers to C.B. cau, claudere; kay, Lhuyd.

A ringit quoy is one which has at least originally been of a circular form. See Sup. Ring-fences, I am informed, are used in England.

QUOYLAND, s. Land taken in from a common. S.

QUOK, pret. Quaked; trembled; quuke, S.A. S.

QUOTHA, interj. Forsooth. S.

QUOTT, QUOTE, QUOITT, s. The portion of the goods of one deceased appointed by law to be paid for the confirmation of his testament, or for the right of intromitting with his property.

From this fund the salaries of the lords of Session were to be paid, by order of Queen Mary. In a precept addressed "to the collectoris and ressaveris of the quotts for confirmation of the testaments of the personis decessand within oure realme," she enjoins "the soume of ane thousand six hundredth pounds, usuale money of our said realm, to be upliftit and uptaken yeirlye—off the fyrst and reddiest fruits, and profits, that hereafter sall happen to be obtaint of the said quotts, for the confirmation of the said testaments of the persons decessand." Acts Sederunt, 13th April, 1564. It is afterwards ordained, that "twelve pennies of every pound of the deads part shall be the quote of all testaments, both great and small, which shall be confirmed." Ibid. 28th Feb. 1666. p. 101.

Fr. quote, the several portion or share belonging or falling to every one. La quote des tailles, the assessing of taxes. L.B. quota, share, portion.

R.

R A B

RA, RAY, s. The sail-yard.

"And the maistir quhislit and cryit, Tua men abufe to the foir ra, out the raibandis, and lat the foir sail fal.—Tua men abufe to the mane ra." Compl. S. p. 62.

"Our Scottis schipis war stayit, the saillis tane frae the rayes, and the merchands and marineris war comandit to suir custodie." Knox's Hist. p. 37. Printed rigs, Lond. Edit. p. 41.

Isl. raa, Belg. ree, Su.G. segelraa, from segel, a sail, and raa, a stake, a perch; antenna, quasi veli perticam diceres; Ihre.

RA, RAA, RAE, s. A roe; pl. rais.

"That the justice Clerk sall inquiry of Stalkaris, that slayis Deir, that is to say, Harte, Hynde, Daa and Raa." Acts, Ja. I. 1424. c. 39. Edit. 1566. Rae, Murray, c. 36.

— Kiddis skipband throw ronny's eftir rais.

Doug. Virgil, 402, 22.

Isl. ra, Su.G. Dan. raa, A.S. raege, rah, Belg. ree, Germ. reh.

RA'AN, part. pa. Torn; rent; riven. S.

RAAND, s. A mark or stain. V. RAND. S.

To RAAZE, v. a. To madden; to inflame. Syn. Raise. S.

RAB, s. Abbreviation of Robert. S.

RABANDIS, RAIBANDIS, s. pl. The small lines which make the sail fast to the yard, E. corr. robbins. See S.

Do lous your rabandis, and lat down the saile.

Doug. Virgil, 76, 37.

Compl. S. raibandis. V. RA, 1.

"The phrase, cutting the raibandis, alludes to a mode of furling the sails to the yards, similar to that still practised in the Mediterranean, where bands of rushes and long grass are employed; which are cut or torn when the sails are unfurled." Gl. Compl.

Su.G. refband, robbings, Seren. This seems differently formed from our term ref, signifying the side, q. the sidebands. But Wideg. gives raaband, as signifying rope-band.

To RABATE, REBATE, v. a. To abate. S.

RABBAT, s. A cape for a mantle. S.

To RABBLE, RABLE, v. a. To assault in a riotous and violent manner; to mob; from E. s. Rabble. S.

RABLER, s. A rioter; a mobber. S.

RABLING, RABBLING, s. The act of mobbing. S.

RABBLE, RABLE, s. A rhapsody, idle incoherent discourse; as a mere rabble of nonsense, S. See Sup.

— "That unexampled manifesto, which, at Canterbury's direction, Balcanqual, Ross, and St. Andrews, had penned, was now printed in the King's name, and sent abroad, not only through all England, but over sea, as we heard, in divers languages, heaping up a rabble of the falsest calumnies that ever was put into any one discourse that I had read." Baillie's Let, i. 172. V. also p. 362.

Teut. rabbel-en, garrere, nugari, blaterare, praecipitare, vel confundere verba: Kilian. Isl. rabb-a, to speak as a buffoon, to trifle in conversation; rabb, confabulatio, quasi pluralitas verborum; G. Andr. "Rabble-rote, a repetition of a long round-about story; a rigmerole. Exmore." Gl. Grose. q. a rhapsody learned by rote. V. RATTRIME.

R A C

To RABBLE, RAIBLE, v. n. "To rattle nonsense," Shirr. Gl.

To RABBLE aff, v. a. To speak in a careless and hurried manner. V. RABBLE, RAIBLE, v. S.

RABIL, s. "A disorderly or confused train or going; something different from the present acceptation of the word rabble;" Rudd.

It seems very doubtful if this be the sense in which it is used by Doug.

And euery wicht in handis hynt als tite
Ane hate fyrebrand, eftir the auld ryte,
In lang ordoure and rabil, that al the stretis
Of schynand flambis lemys brycht and gletis.

Virgil, 365, 35.

Here it is conjoined with ordoure, in translating Lat. ordo, so as rather to convey the idea of some regularity.

— Lucet via longo

Ordine flammaram.—

Virg.

It corresponds more to file, or row. Thus it is used as to swans, which observe a certain order in their flight.

The flight of birdis fordynnys the thik schaw,
Or than the rank vocit swannys in ane rabil,
Soundand and souchand with nois lamentabill.

Ibid. 379, 33.

In ane lang rabill the wemen and matronis

With al thare fors fled reuthfully attonis

From the bald flambis.—

Ibid. 462, 26.

The term used by Maffei is ordo; and rabill is the only one employed for translating it.

It seems a derivative from Germ. rube, now obsolete, Alem. ruava, roabu, numerus; C.B. rhiv, id.

RABIATOR, s. A violent greedy person. S.

RABSCALLION, RAPSCALLION, s. A low worthless fellow; something like a tatterdemalion. S.

To RABUTE. V. REBUTE.

RACE, pret. v. Dashed. Race down, precipitated, threw down with violence.

His Banerman Wallace slew in that place,
And sone to ground his baner down he race.

Wallace, x. 670. MS.

It is evidently the same with the v. a. Rasch, q. v.

This word is ejected in old Edit., and the passage thus altered.

His bannerman in that place Wallace slew,
And then to ground the banner soon it flew.

RACE, s. 1. A strong current in the sea, S. V. RAISS.
2. The current of water which turns a mill, S.B.

"He remembers the waulk-mill at Kettock's Mill, which stood in the same place where the present waulk-mill is, upon a small island, lying between the meal-mill race, and the north grain of the river." State, Leslie of Powis, &c. 1793. p. 67.

The current, in its passage from a mill, is called the tail-race, q. from behind.

"Depones, That the refuse at the Gordon's Mill field is discharged into the river by the tail-race of their mill." Ibid. p. 164.

R A C

3. Obliquely applied to the connexion or train of historical narration.

"Bot gif yee weigh the mater weill, and consider the race of the historie, yee shall finde that he had many particulars that mooved him to seeke the prorogatioun of his dayes." Bruce's Eleven Serm. I. 6. a.

It is used in a sense pretty similar in E.

RACE, s. Course at sea.

Rany Orioun with his stormy face
Bywauit oft the schipman by hys race.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 200, 33.

Su.G. resa signifies a course, whether by land or water, Belg. reys, a voyage.

RACER, s. A common trull.

S.

RACHE, (hard,) s. 1. Properly, a dog that discovers and pursues his prey by the scent; as distinguished from a greyhound. See Sup.

Also rachis can ryn undir the wod rise.

Gawan and Gol. iv. 27.

"The secound kynd is ane rache, that sekis thair pray, baith of fowlis, beistis and fische, be sent and smell of thair neis." Bellend. Descr. Alb. c. 11.

"He tuke gret delyte of huntynge rachis and houndis. He ordanit,—that ilk nobill suld nuris twa rachis and ane hound to his huntynge." Bellend. Cron. B. ii. c. 4. Duos odorisequos, unum venatorium canem aleret; Boeth.

O.E. rach, rache, ratche, id.

But thou the rach me leve,

Thou pleyyst, er hyt be eve,

A wonder wylde game.

Lybaeus, Ritson's E. M. Rom. ii. 46.

2. A poacher; a night-wanderer.

S.

Isl. rache, canis sagax, G. Andr. A.S. raecc; Su.G. racha, canis foemina quippe quae continuo discurrit; L.B. racha; Norm. racches, cani venatici, Hickes, A.S. Gramm. p. 154. Teut. brache, used in the same sense, is probably from the same root. Verel. derives Isl. rakhe, rakka, from rahka, prahka, circumcursitare. Another, says Wachter, might possibly deduce it from Germ. riech-en, vestigia odorari, and brack from be-riechen, odoratu investigare. Fr. braque, Ital. bracc-o, L.B. bracc-us, bracc-o, E. brache, id. V. BRACHELL.

RACHE, Houlate, iii. 16. 18. V. RAITH and RATH.

RACHLIE, (gutt.) adj. Dirty and disorderly, S.B. See S.

Isl. rugl, miscellanea; rugla, miscere, G. Andr. V. next word.

RACHLIN, adj. 1. Unsettled; a term applied to a person who is of the hare-brained cast, S.B.

2. Noisy; clamorous; as, a rachlin queyn, a woman who talks loud and at random; synon. rollochin, E. rattling. See Sup.

Su.G. ragl-a, incertis gressibus ire, huc illuc ferri, ut solent ebrii; Ihre. Isl. ragalinn, perversè delirans, from rag-a, evocare ad certamen. Su.G. rafgalen, furiosus; rugla, ineptire.

RACHTER, RAYCHTER, RAUCHTER, s. Perhaps a batten, or scantling of wood.

S.

To RACK, v. n. To stretch; to extend.

S.

To RACK up, v. n. To clear up; as when the clouds begin to open, so that the sky is seen.

S.

RACK, s. A very shallow and broad ford.

S.

RACK, s. The course in curling. V. RINK.

S.

RACK, s. Couch-grass; Triticum Repens. Quicken.

RACK, s. An open frame, fixed to the wall, for holding plates, &c. S. Probably denominated from its resemblance to the grate in which hay is put before horses. See Sup.

RACK (of a mill,) s. A piece of wood used for the purpose of feeding a mill, S.

R A C

RACKABIMUS, s. A sudden or unexpected stroke or fall; a cant term; Ang. It resembles RACKET, s. 2. q. v.

RACKART, s. A severe stroke. Corr. from Racket. S.

RACKEL, RACKLE, RAUCLE, adj. 1. Rash; stout; fearless, S.

Auld Scotland has a raucle tongue;—

An' if she promise auld or young

To tak their part,

Tho' by the neck she should be strung,

She'll no desert. Burns, iii, 25.

It denotes haste or rashness both in speech, and in action.

This is evidently the same with Rakel, in O.E. hasty, rash; Tyrwhitt.

O rakel hond, to do so foule a mis.

O troubled wit, o ire reccheles,

That unavised smitest giltèles.

Chauc. Manciples T. ver. 17227.

He also uses rakelnesse for rashness.

2. Stout; strong; firm; as, "He's a rackle carle at his years." 3. Bearing the idea of clumsiness conjoined with strength.

S.

Shall we view it as a dimin. from Isl. rach-r, ready, brave; fortis, impiger; Gl. Gunnlaug, S. Su.G. reke, recke, heros?

RACKEL-HANDIT, adj. Careless, rash; precipitate, S. See Sup.

This is used in the same sense with Rackless, E. reckless. "One who does things without regarding whether they be good or bad, we call rackless-handed." Gl. Shirr.

RAUCLENESS, s. Vigour and freshness in old age. S.

RACKET, s. A dress frock; cattouche, or cartouche, an undress frock, Loth.

Su.G. roche, A.S. roce, Alem. rahh, Germ. roek, Belg. roch, L.B. rocc-us, roch-us, Arm. roket, Fr. rochet, toga. Ihre traces E. frock to this source.

RACKET, s. 1. A blow; a smart stroke, S. See Sup.

"Scot. we use Racket; as, He gave him a racket on the lug, i. e. a box on the ear," Rudd. vo. Rak, 2.

2. A disturbance; an uproar.

S.

Perhaps from the instrument with which balls are struck at tennis, called a racket, Fr. raquette. V. KETCHEPILLARIS. Or, both may be from Isl. rek-a, hrech-ia, propellere; Belg. rach-en, to hit. Of racket, as used at tennis, Johns. says;—"whence perhaps all the other senses." But racket, common to S. and E., as denoting a bustle or confused noise, caused by a multitude, seems rather allied to Su.G. ragat-a, tumultuari, grassari. Hence, according to Ihre, Ital. ragatta, altercation, strife.

RACKLE, s. A chain, S.B. See Sup.

Rakyl occurs in the same sense in an O.E. poem, published from Harl. MS. 78.

He dyght hym in a dyvell's garment; furth gan he goo;—

Rynnyng, roaryng, wyth his rakyls as devylls semid to doo. Jamieson's Popular Ball. i. 259.

Belg. reeks, O.E. raktyne, id.

RACKLER, s. A land-surveyor, as he uses a chain. S.

RACKLESS, adj. Heedless; regardless, S. O.E.

"Rackless youth makes rueful age," S. Prov. "People who live too fast when they are young, will neither have a vigorous, nor a comfortable old age." Kelly, p. 284. V. RAK, s.

RACKLIGENCE, s. Chance; accident, S.B. It seems properly to signify carelessness, that inattention which subjects one to disagreeable accidents.

By racklidge she with my lassie met,

That wad be fain her company to get,

R A D

Wha in her daffery had run o'er the score.

Ross's Helenore, p. 90.

RACKMERESLE, adv. In a state of confusion; higgledy-piggledy; a term used in some parts of Fife and Perth. But it seems merely local, and is now almost obsolete.

To RACKON, v. n. To fancy; to imagine; to suppose. S.

RACKSTICK, s. A stick for twisting ropes. S.

To RACUNNYS, v. a. To recognise in a juridical sense, to subject to a recognisance by an assize, in consequence of which execution is made on the whole property of the recognisee, either for debt, or for some crime.

His wncle may Schyr Ranald mak this band;

Gyff he will nocht racunnyss all his land

On to the tyme that he this werk haiff wrocht.

Wallace, iii. 276. MS.

Fr. reconoitre, L.B. recognoscere. V. Cowel, vo.

Recognisance; Du Cange, vo. Recognitio.

RAD, RADE, RED, adj. Afraid; red, Clydes. I se rad, I am afraid, Dumfr.

Bot sa rad wes Richard of Clar,

That he fled to the south countré.

Edit. 1620. feared. Barbour, xv. 76. MS.

The Bischop than began tretty to ma,

Thair lyffis to get, out off the land to ga.

Bot thai war rad, and durst nocht weill affy.

Wallace, vii. 1050. MS.

— I am rycht rade,

To behald your Hellynes, or my taill tell.

Houlate, i. 8. MS.

At the quhilk tre, quhen thay eschapid had

The stormes blast, and wallis made thaym rad,

Thareon thare offerandis wald thay affix and hing.—

Doug. Virgil, 440, 10.

Yit we maun haif sum help of Hope.

Quod Danger, I am red

His hastyness bred us mishap,

Quhen he is highlie horst.

Cherrie and Slae, st. 100.

Now I am red ye leave an hand.

—For he was red that young Sir Gryme

In his travel he should them tine.

Sir Egeir, pp. 30. 31.

This word occurs in our old Ywayne and Gawin; but it was unknown to Ritson.

And if it so bytide this nyght,

That the in slepe dreche ani wight,

Or any dremis mak the rad,

Turn ogayn, and say I bad. E. M. Rom, i. 21.

I have not met with this word, or one derived from it, in any O.E. work; unless redde should be thus expl. in the following passage.

The abbas be the honde hur toke,

And ladd her forthe, so seyth the boke,

She was redd for ronne.

Le Bone Florence, ibid. iii. 80.

Su.G. rone signifies a young boar. But the sense of this term is uncertain.

It is evidently an old participle. For the v., I red, is used both in the South and West of S. i. e. I am afraid.

Rudd. oddly deduces this, per aphaeresin, from fraid, afraid, or dread, in Spenser drad. The obvious origin is Su.G. raed-as, radd-a, to fear, Alem. red-en, id. Isl. hraede, terreo; timeo. Hence Su.G. raedd, Dan. raed, red, afraid; raedde, fear, reddelig, terrible, ofraedd, greatly affrighted, from of intensive, and raedde. From the last word the learned Ihre derives E. afraid. This, however, is perhaps more directly from Fr. affray-er, to frighten; though the origin of the Fr. word is most probably Goth.

R A D

RADDOUR, s. Fear; timidity. See Sup.

Off Wallace com the Scottis sic comfort tuk,

Quhen thai him saw, all raddour thai forsuk.

Wallace, x. 94. MS.

Mr. Pink. to the expl. of the term, adds, "rubor, pudor," Gl. S. P. R.; as if it were derived from the terms denoting redness. But it is evidently from the same origin with the adj. Rad. V. REDDOUR.

RAD, s. Counsel; advice. V. RED.

To RADDLE, v. a. To riddle; to pierce with shot. S.

RADDMAN, s. A counsellor; a term formerly used in the Orkney Islands. LAGRAETMAN.

RADDOWRE, s. Rigour; severity. Chaucer, reddour, violence. See Sup.

Set hys will war to do sic

Almows, perchawns his successoure

Wald thame retrete wyth gret raddowre,

And dyspoyle thame halily. Wyntoun, vii. 6. 97.

Radure in Prynce is a gud thyng;

For but radure all governyng

Sall all tyme bot dispysyd be:

And quhare that men may radure se,

Thai sall drede to trespas, and swa

Pesybil a kyng his land may ma.

Thus radure dred than gert hym be.

V. REDE, adj.

Ibid. viii. 43. 115. &c.

RADE, RAID, s. 1. An invasion; properly, of the equestrian kind.

Schyr Andrew syne wyth stalwart hand

Made syndry radis in Ingland,

And brynt, and slewe, and dyde gret skath,

And rychid and stuffid his awyne bathe.

Wyntoun, viii. 34. 34. V. also Wallace, viii. 1485.

"The conspirators, without regarding his tears or indignation, dismissed such of his followers as they suspected; and though they treated him with great respect, guarded his person with the utmost care. This enterprise is usually called the Raid of Ruthven." Robertson's Hist. Scotl. p. 365. Ed. 1791.

2. Used in contempt for denoting a ridiculous enterprise or expedition. "Ye made a braw raid to the fair."

O.E. rode, road, is used precisely in the same sense. "Whither make ye a rode to-day?" 1 Sam. xxvii. 10.

A.S. rad, rade, equitatio, iter equestre;—item, invasio, incursio,—an invasion,—inrode or irruption, Somner; from A.S. rid-an, to ride, as Germ. reite, id. from reit-en; herireita, a military invasion, from her an army, and reiten. Ihre views Su.G. rid, Isl. hrid, an attack, a combat, as a cognate. Hence skothrid, a battle in which men fight with weapons; griothrid, one in which they fight with stones. But it seems doubtful, if these terms be from the same root. The analogy of derivation from reid-a, to ride, is lost in Isl. hrid. This also seems primarily to signify a storm.

RADE, RAID, s. A road for ships. See Sup.

Now is it bot ane firth in the sey flude;

Ane rade vnsikkir for schip and ballingere.

Doug. Virgil, 39, 22.

—On I stalk

From the port, my nauy left in the raid.

Ibid. 77, 52.

"Gif it happins, that—he quha is challenged payes his custome;—and his schippe is in the radde, they may pas away weill, and in peace." Burrow Lawes, c. 27. s. 2.

The word was used so late as the reign of Charles I. For in a charter granted by him to the city of Edinburgh, he gives "the port-customs, harbour, soil, and raid of Leith." Maitland's Hist. Edin. p. 264.

Fr. rade, Belg. rede, Su.G. redd, id. which Ihre derives from red-a, parare, because ships are there prepared for sailing. Rudd. after Skinner, perhaps more naturally, from the v. ride, as we say, to ride at anchor; and as the v. is used in the following passage:

R A F

Furth of the foreschip lete thay ankiris glide,
The nauy rade endland the schoris side.

Doug. Virgil, 198, 35.

It seems to have been a figure of considerable antiquity, to call a ship, a rider of the main.

The only difficulty I have as to this etymon, is that Isl. brimreid occurs in Hervar. S. c. 15. as denoting an estuary or firth. V. Verel. Ind. vo. Brimsamt. But the learned writer, neither here, nor in his Notes on Hervar. S., gives any light as to the proper meaning of reid in this connexion.

RADE, adv. Rather.

To the thow thought I was not wort an prene,
And that I am ful rade on the besene,
And yit the lytil kyndnes that thow
To me hes had weil sal I quite it now.

Priests of Peblis, S.P.R. i. 43.

i. e. Thou thoughtest that I was much rather dependent on thee. This is the same with rathe, used by Chaucer, soon; whence rather, sooner, the original sense of the E. comparative adv. V. RATH.

RADNESS, s. Fear; timidity.

Sa did this King, that Ik off reid;
And, for his wtrageouss manheid,
Confortyt his on sic maner,
That nane had radness quhar he wer.

Barbour, ix. 104. MS.

To RADOTE, v. n. To rave, particularly in sleep;
Fr. radot-er.

Than softlie did I suoufe and sleep,—
Radoting, starnoting,
As wearie men will do.

Burel's Pilg. Watson's Coll. ii. 34.

To RADOUN, v. n. To return.

Sum wytt agayn to Wallace can radoun;
In hys awn mynd so rewlyt him resoun,
Sa for to do him thoct it no waslage.

Wallace, x. 413. MS.

Fr. redoun-er, to restore, to give back again.

RAE, WRAE, s. An enclosure for cattle, S.B.

Isl. ra, Su.G. raa, wraa, a corner, a landmark; Dan. vraa, id. also a hiding-place.

RAE, s. A roe. V. RA.

RAEN, s. A raven. S.

RAF. In raf.

He dede als so the wise
He gaf has he gan winne
In raf;

Of playe ar he wald blinne,

Sex haukes he gat and gaf. Sir Tristrem, p. 24.

"Equivalent to rathely, speedily, from Rathinga, Sax. subito;" Gl. Tristr.

The word seems rather allied to Su.G. rapp, citus, rafsa, celeriter, from rifwa, rapere.

RAFE, pret. Tore, from the v. to rive. S.

RAFF, s. Plenty; abundance, S.B. V. RAFFIE. See S.

The Laird aye bade me deal a piece of bread;
And I thought aye ye wad break naithing aff,
I mind ye liked aye to see a raff.

Ross's Helenore, p. 95.

He'll bless your bouk whan far awa,—
And scaff and raff ye ay sall ha'.

Jamieson's Popular Ball. ii. 363.

Notwithstanding the change of the vowel, most probably from the same source with E. rife. Isl. riff-ur, liberalis, whence riffd, liberalitas. Su.G. rif, frequens, largus, A.S. ryfe, id.

R A G

RAFF, s. A flying shower; skarrach, shift, synonym. Ang.

Allied perhaps, because of the impetuosity with which such showers are frequently attended, to Su.G. rafs-a, celeriter auferre, a frequentative, says Ihre, from the v. rifw-a or reff-a, rapere.

To RAFF, v. n. Perhaps a provincial variety of Rave. S.

RAFFAN, adj. "Merry; roving; hearty," Gl. Rams.

Thy raffan rural rhyme sae rare,—

Sae gash and gay, gars fowk gae gare

To ha'e them by them.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 350.

Qu. raving, or allied to Isl. raf-a, vagari.

RAFFING-FELLOWS. Ranting, roaring, drinking fellows. S.

RAFFEL, s. Doe-skin.

Thair gluves wer of the raffel richt,

Thair schone wer of the straitis. Chr. Kirk, st. 2.

From ra, rae, a roe, and fell, a skin.

RAFFIE, adj. 1. Applied to what springs rapidly, and grows rank; as, raffy corn. 2. Plentiful; abundant. S.

To RAG, v. a. To rally; also, to rate; to reproach; for it is applied to what is spoken in this way, whether in jest or in earnest, S.

The latter seems the original application; Isl. raeg-a, Alem. ruag-en, Germ. rug-en, Su.G. roej-a, to accuse. V. BULLIRAG.

RAG, s. 1. The act of rallying, or reproaching roughly.

2. A debate or contention. S.

To RAG, v. n. A term applied to the shooting of grain. S.

To RAG, v. a. A term to denote a partial winnowing. S.

RAG-A-BUSS, RAGABUSH, s. A tatterdemalion; a ragamuffin; a vagabond; a scoundrel. S.

RAG-A-BUSS, adj. 1. Applied to those who are very poor. 2. Mean; paltry; good for nothing. S.

RAG-FALLOW, s. A species of fallow used before sowing wheat in which grass land is broken up in the summer, after the hay is cut, and three times ploughed and dunged. S.

RAG-FAUCH, RAG-FAUGH, s. The same as Rag-fallow.

RAGGIT STAFF. Raggit, jagged or notched. S.

To RAGGLE, v. a. 1. To ruffle; to tear the skin, S.

2. In architecture, to jagg, to make a groove in one stone for receiving another, S. See Sup.

Most probably of the same family with E. ragged, a term applied to stones that are indented, or jagged.

RAGYT CLATHES. Apparently slashed clothes. S.

RAGLAT PLANE. A species of plane used by carpenters, in making a groove for shelves of drawers, &c.

RAGLISH, RAGGLISH, adj. Rough; boisterous; harsh; severe. V. RACHLIN. S.

RAGMAN, RAGMENT, s. 1. A long piece of writing; sometimes used to denote a legal instrument, bond, or agreement.

— Swa thai consentyd than,

And mad a-pon this a ragman

With mony selys of Lordis, thare

That that tyme at this Trettè ware.

Wyntown, vi. 17. 26.

The Bruce and he completyt furth thar bandis,
Syn that samyn nyct thai sellyt with thar handis.
This ragment left the Bruce with Cumyn thar,
With King Eduuard haym in Ingland can far.

Wallace, x. 1149. MS.

2. A discourse, resembling a rhapsody; a loose declamation; a collection full of variety.

Of my bad wit perchance I thoct haue fenit
In ryme an ragmen twise als curiouse,

Bot not be twentye part sa sentenciis.

Doug. Virgil, 8, 24.

With that he raucht me ane roll : to rede I begane,
The royetest ane ragment with mony ratt rime.

Ibid. 239, a. 53.

3. An account, especially one given in order to a judicial determination.

Yit to the Judge thow sall give compt of all ;
Ane raknyng rycht cumis of ane ragment small.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 55.

Ragman occurs in O.E. apparently as synon. with breuet, i. e. a brief, in the account given of a preacher and vender of Indulgences.

There preached a pardoner, as he a priest were,
Brought forth a bul with many bishops seales;
And said that himselfe might absöyle hem al
Of falsehode, of fasting and of vowes broken.
Lewde men leued him wel, and liked his wordes,
Commen up kneling, to kisse his bulles.
He bouched hem with his breuet, and blered her eies,
And raughte, with his ragman, both ringes & broches.
Thus thei giuen her gold, glotons to kepe.

P. Ploughman's Vision, A. 2, a. Ed. 1561.

Skinner derives bouched from Fr. bouch-er, obturare. But here it evidently signifies, hoodwinked, which is one of the senses of the Fr. word. V. Bouscher, Cotgr.

Rudd., with considerable plausibility, derives this term from Ital. ragionamento, a discourse, ragionare, to reason, from Lat. ratiocinari, ratio. But he is certainly mistaken in connecting this with the "famous Ragman's Row, or Roll," q. v.

It would appear, that the term Rageman anciently signified some office allied to that of a herald, or rather of a recorder.

Ther is non heraud hath half swich a rolle
Right as a rageman hath rekned hem newe.
Tombes vpon Tabernacles, tylde vpon lofte.

P. Ploughman's Crede.

This word may perhaps be derived from Teut. reghe, ordo, series; or Germ. rache, a cause, a narration, an explanation of any thing by its causes; also, in a forensic sense, a cause under litigation. A history, which related a series of events, was denominated, by the ancient Franks, katatrahha, and an historian, katatrahhari; from katat, res gesta, and rachi. Among the Salii, and Ripuarii, there were judges and assessors with the Counts, whose business it was to inquire into causes, and of consequence to protect the innocent, to whom the name of Rachimburgii was given; from rache, a cause, and bergen, to protect; Wachter, vo. Rache.

RAGMAN'S ROW, or ROLL, "a collection of those deeds by which the Nobility and Gentry of Scotland were tyrannically constrained to subscribe allegiance to Edward I. of England, A. 1296; and which were more particularly recorded in four large rolls of parchment, consisting of thirty-five pieces bound together, kept in the Tower of London, and for the most part extant in Prynne's 3d vol. from p. 648. to 665." Rudd.

This learned writer views the phrase as having the same origin with Ragmen, ragment, a rhapsody, q. v. The editors of the Encycl. Britan. say that it is more rightly Ragimund's roll, so called from one Ragimund a legate in Scotland, who calling before him all the beneficed clergymen in that kingdom, caused them upon oath to give in the true value of their benefices; according to which they were afterwards taxed by the court of Rome; and that "this roll, among other records, being taken from the Scots by Edward I. was redelivered to them, in the beginning of the reign of Edward III."

But this derivation evidently rests on a misnomer. No legate of the name of Ragimund ever came into this country. The name of the legate referred to was Bagimund. In our old laws this assessment is called "the auld taxatioun of Bagimont," and "the auld taxatioun, as is contenit in the buik of Bagimontis taxt." Acts, Ja. III. 1471. c. 54. Ed. 1566. c. 43. Murray. Ja. IV. 1493. c. 70. Ed. 1566. c. 39. Murray. V. Aw, v.

According to Spotswood, the lists taken at this time were afterwards called Bagiment's Rolls. "The same year," (1274) he says, "was one Bagimund a Legate directed hither, who calling before him all the beneficed persons within this kingdom, caused them upon their oath give up the worth and value of their benefices; according to which they were taxed. The table (commonly called Bagiment's rolls) served for the present collection, and was a rule in aftertimes for the prizes taken of those that came to sue for benefices in the court of Rome." Hist. p. 46.

This legate is called by Fordun, Bajamondus. Lib. x. c. 36. p. 122.

But although there had been a legate of the name of Ragimund, who had done what is here ascribed to him, still there would have been reason to doubt whether this was the origin of the phrase. For it appears to have been early used in England; and it is not probable that it would be adopted in the laws of that country, as a phrase of general use, merely from the circumstance of its having been given in Scotland to a particular roll. Rageman is defined by Spelman, "a statute concerning justices appointed by Edward I. and his council to make a circuit through England, and to hear and determine all complaints of injuries done for five years preceding Michaelmas in the fourth year of his reign;" Gl. vo. Rageman. V. also Cowel.

We find, indeed, the phrase "Ragman's Roll," used by E. writers, in particular reference to Scotland. Baker, in his Chronicle, says, "that Edward III. surrendered, by his charter, all his title of sovereignty to the kingdom of Scotland, restored divers deeds and instruments of their former homages and fealties, with the famous evidence called Ragman's Roll;" Fol. 127.

Otterbourne also speaks of the restitution of these deeds, and of "the letter which is called Ragman, with the seal of homage made to the noble king Edward I.;" Chron. Angl. ap. Du Cange.

It does not appear, however, that we are therefore to conclude that the phrase originated from this deed. It seems to have been of general acceptance in E., as signifying those letters patent which were delivered by individuals into the hands of government, in which they confessed themselves guilty of treasonable acts, misprisions, or other crimes, and submitted themselves to the will of their sovereign. In the letters of Henry, A. 1399, de Ragemannis comburendis, Rymer, Tom. 8. p. 109, we have the following passage; Licet nuper, tempore D. Ricardi nuper regis Angliae—quamplurimi subditi—regni nostri Angliae per diversa scripta, cartas, sive literas patentes, vocata Raggemans sive Blank Chartres, sigillis eorundem subditorum separatim consignata et in cancellaria ipsius nuper regis postmodum missa, se reos et culpabiles de diversis prodicionibus, ac misprisionibus et aliis malefactis, per ipsos contra ipsum nuper Regem et regaliā suā factis, fore cognoverint—ordinavimus, quod omnia singula scripta, cartae, seu literae, praedictae—comburantur et destruantur. Ap. Du Cange.

Thus we find that Rageman is expl. as denoting a statute which respected complaints of injuries, and also such letters as contained self-accusations of certain crimes committed against the State. It is probable, therefore, that the word, according to its original meaning, necessarily included the idea of accusation or crimination. This sense, indeed, even its structure seems to require. Isl. raega signifies, to accuse, to criminate; whence raegd-r, an accused person, rogur, a calumny, raege, raetr, and raekall, an accuser. Moes. G. urrah-jan, A.S. wreg-an, Alem. ruag-en, ruog-en, Germ. rug-en, Belg. wroegh-en, Su.G. roj-a, accusare. To this origin Junius traces E. rogue. A.S. wregere, as well as wregend, signifies an accuser. V. Wachter, vo. Rugen. According to Schilter, Alem. ruagstab, ruogstab, properly signifies letters of accusation, from ruag-en, to accuse, and stab, A.S. staef, a letter.—Proprieque adeo ruogstab literas actoris ad judicem directas sive libellum accusatorium designat. It seems thus in some degree to correspond to the Porteous-roll of later times.

R A Y

This etymon is not a little confirmed by the use of the term Rageman, in P. Ploughman, as applied to the Devil, in allusion perhaps to his being called "the accuser of the brethren," Rev. ii. 10.—When describing an allegorical tree, Langland says that when it was shaken, the devil gathered all the fruit both great and small: by which he seems to mean that he held even the saints in Limbo Patrum. Then Pierce is introduced as trying to hit him with an apple, that if possible he might make him quit his prey.

Adam, and Abraham, and Esay the prophete,
Sampson, Samuell, and Saynct John the Baptist,
Bare hem forth boldly, no body him let;
And made of holy men his horde, in limbo inferni.
There is darckenes, and drede, and the deuell mayster,
And Pyers of pure tene of that apple he caught
He hit oft at him, hit if it might,
Filius, by the Faders will and frenes of, Spiritus Sancti,
To go rob that rageman and reue the fruit from him,
And speke, Spiritus Sanctus, in Gabriels mouth.

Fol. 88, a.

It would appear, that the word had been sometimes used in Scotland as expressive of the strongest obligation. Thus in the account given in Fordun, of a conspiracy against David Bruce, it is said that the conspirators having formed their plan, lest any of them should flinch from it, Editae sunt indenturae ragmannicae hinc inde firmiter roboratae; or as it is expressed in the MS. of Coupar, Litterae ragmannicae sigillis firmiter roboratae. Scotichron. L. xiv. c. 25.

RAGNE, pret. v. Reigned. S.
RAGWEED, s. Ragwort, an herb, S. Senecio jacobaea, Linn.

Let warlocks grim, an' wither'd hags,
Tell how wi' you on ragweed nags,
They skim the muirs, an' dizzy crags,
Wi' wicked speed.

Burns, iii. 72.

This passage shews, that the vulgar still view ragwort as one of those herbs which have been subjected to magical influence; especially as being employed by witches as a steed in their nocturnal expeditions. It also confirms the explanation given of Buneward, q. v.

To RAY, v. a. To array; to put in order of battle.
The rang in haist thai rayit sone agane.

Wallace, iv. 681. MS.

RAY, s. Military arrangement.

Rudly to ray thai ruschit thaim agayne,
Gret part off thaim wes men of mekill mayne.

Wallace, vii. 819. MS.

To BREAK RAY. To go into disorder. S.

RAY, s.

Thir romanis ar bot ridlis, quod I, to that ray,
Lede, lere me ane vthir lessoun, this I ne like.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 239, b. 9.

The meaning of this word is very uncertain. It is most probably, however, a term of reproach, corresponding to a variety of the same kind in this curious Prologue; and may be allied to Su.G. ra, genius, daemon; Isl. raege, id. Raege watter, mali genii; or to Isl. raeg-a, raeg-ia, Su.G. roej-a, accusare, q. an accuser.

R A I

Mr. Tooke, I find, views it as the same with rogue, g being softened to y; deducing it from A.S. wrig-an, to cover, to cloak. He quotes the term as used in P. Ploughman, Fol. 23. p. 2.

Than draue I me among drapers, my donet to lerne
To drawe the lyser a longè the lenger it semed
Among the riche rayes I rendred a lesson
To broche them with a packnedle and plitte togethers,
And put hem in a presse and pynned them therin.

V. Divers. Purley, ii. 228.

RAY, REE, adj. "Rude; mad; wild. To go ray, to go mad; from Sax. reth, ferox, saevus, infestus," Gl. Sibb. V. REE.

RAY, s. Song; poem. S.

RAYAYT, "terrified," Gl. Pink., "same with rad," Sibb.

But the passage referred to is the following.

Quhen Schir Aymer, and his meny
Hard how he rayayt the land,
And how that nane durst him withstand;
He wes in till his hart angry.

Edit. 1620, rioted.

Barbour, viii. 127.

This is the proper term; ryoty being that in the MS.

RAIBANDIS, s. pl. V. RABANDIS. S.

To RAICHIE (gutt.,) v. a. To scold. S.

RAICHIE, s. The act of scolding. S.

RAICH, RAICHIE (gutt.,) s. Abbrev. of Rachel. S.

RAID, s. A hostile or predatory incursion; an inroad, S. V. RADE.

RAID, s. A road for ships. V. RADE.

RAIDTIME. The time of spawning. V. REDE FISCHE. S.

RAYEN, RAYON, s. A term apparently used to denote the exhalations as seen to arise from the earth.

The subtil motty rayens light
At rifts they are in wonne;
The glansing thains, and vitre bright,
Resplends agains the sunne.
— The rayons of the sunne we see
Diminish in their strenth.

Hume, Chron. S.P. iii. 386. 390.

Fr. rayon, a ray or beam. Thains is perhaps allied in sense; A.S. than, madidus, humidus; thaenian, madescere. Perhaps it may denote the gossamer.

RAIF, part. pa. Riven; rent.

My rauist spreit on that desert terribill,
Approchit near that uglie flude horribill—
With brayis bair, raif rochis like to fall.

Su.G. rifw-a, to rive.

Palice of Honour, i. 2.

RAIF, s. Robbery; rapine.

"Persauand the grit solistnes of diuerse staitis in con-quessing reches, — sum be raif and spulye, and sum be trason," &c. Compl. S. p. 264.

A.S. reaf, spolia; reaf-ian, to rob; Su.G. rof, from rifw-a, rapere; Isl. rif. V. REIFE.

To RAIF, v. n. To rave; to be delirious.

Thair lyif is now in ieoperdy, thay raif,

Full nere thare dede thay stand—

Belg. rev-en, Fr. resv-er.

Doug. Virgil, 279, 36.

To RAIK, RAKE, RAYK, REYKE, v. n. 1. To range; to wander; to rove at large, S.

Full wele sufferit hir handis the tame dere;—
Ouer all the wodis wald he raik ilk day

And at euin tide return hame the strecht way.

Doug. Virgil, 224, 39.

The rankest theif of this regioun
Dar pertly compeir in session,
And to the tolbut sone ascend,
Syne with the lordis to raik and roun.

Bannatyne Poems, p. 162. st. 7.

Holde thi greyhounds in thi honde;
And cupull thi raches to a [tre];
And lat the dere reyke over the londe;
Ther is a herd in Holteby.

True Thomas, Jamieson's Popular Ball. ii. 31.

2. When cattle will not remain on their proper pasture, but move off to the corn, &c. they are said to be raikin. S.

3. To walk with a long or quick step; to make great progress in walking; to move expeditiously, S.

—A lady, lufsom of lete, ledand a knight
Ho raykes up in a res bifor the rialle.

Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. ii. 1.

In this sense Rudd. expl. the following passage.

—Wide quhare all lous ouer feildes and the land
Pasturit thare hors rakand thame fast by.

Doug. Virgil, 187, 51.

But it seems rather to signify, ranging. The term, however, is frequently used in this sense, S. "Raiking, making much way.—To raik home, i. e. go home speedily," Rudd.

4. To raik on raw, "to go or march in order;" Rudd.
This scarcely expresses the sense. It is certainly, to go side by side, q. in a row.

Accepitque manu, dextramque amplexus inhaesit,
Progressi subeunt luco. Virg.

And furth anone he hynt hym by the hand,
Ane wele lang quhile his ryght arme embrasand.
Syne furth togither rakit thay on raw,
The flude thay leif, and enteris in the schaw.

Doug. Virgil, 244, 39.

5. To be copious in discourse; to extend a conversation.

Than all thay leuche upon loft, with laiks full mirry;
And raucht the cop round about full of ryche wynis;
And raiket lang, or thay wald rest, with ryatus speiche. Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 50.

V. the s. sense 5.

Su.G. rek-a, Isl. reik-a, to roam, to wander abroad, reikun, travelling; Vel til reika, able to range. The second sense is correspondent to Su.G. rak-a, to run, to go swiftly.
In illustrating this v. Ihre refers to our S. term. Su.G.
rack-a, Isl. rakk-a, to run hither and thither; hrakningar, cursitationes. Ir. rach-a, ire.

RAIK, RAYK, RAKE, s. 1. The extent of a course, walk, or journey, S. A lang raik, a long extent of way;
also a long excursion; a sheep raik, a walk or pasture for sheep, S. also cattle-raik, q. v.

—That land, thai oysyd all
The Barys rayk all tyme to call,
Wes gyvyn on that condytyowne
To fownd thare a relygyowne.

Wyntown, vii. 6. 104.

Cursum Apri beato Andreae contulit. Fordun. Lib. v.
c. 36.

"A sheep-raik, and a sheep-walk, are synonymous."
Bannatyne Poems, Note, p. 277.

2. A swift pace. Thus it is said of a horse, that takes a long step, or moves actively, that he has a great raik of the road, S.

Of well-drest footmen five or sax or more,
At a gweed rake were running on afore.

Ross's Helenore, p. 96.

The verbs mentioned above perhaps primarily imply the idea of extension; from Su.G. raeck-a, Isl. reik-ia, &c. extendere. What is a lang raik, but a great extent of ground? Or, a great raik, but the capacity of reaching far, as including a considerable space in each step? Ihre mentions Scot. a long raik, rendering it, longa viae series, longum iter. For he improperly traces it to Su.G. raecha, ordo, series.

3. The act of carrying from one place to another, whether by personal labour or otherwise, S.

4. As much as a person carries at once from one place to another. S.

He brings twa, thrie, &c. raik a day; applied to dung, coals, &c. in which carts and horses are employed, as equivalent to draught. It is also applied to the carriage of water in buckets. In this sense, a raik, S.A. is synon.
with a gang, S.B. I need scarcely add, that both these terms primarily respect motion, or the extent of ground passed over.

Suppois that he, and his houshold, suld dé
For falt of fude; thairof thay gif no rak,
Bot our his heid his maling thay will tak.

Henryson, Bannatyne Poems, p. 119.

5. A term used with respect to salmon-fishings; probably denoting the extent to which the boats are rowed, or of the fishing ground itself. See Sup.

—Et specialiter salmonum piscarias super dicta aqua de Dee vulgo nuncupat. lie raik et stellis, midchingle, pott et fuirdis;—Chart. Jac. VI. 1617. State, Fraser of Fraserfield, p. 298.

6. The direction in which the clouds are driven by the wind. S.

7. It is transferred to discourse. Tongue-raik, elocution; flow of language, S.B. either as originally implying the idea of prolixity, i. e. extension in speaking, or of fluency, q. quick motion of the tongue.
V. the v. sense 4.

RAIK, RAK, RACK, s. Care; account; reckoning.
Quhat raik? what avails it? what account is to be made? what do I care for it? The phrase is still used in vulgar language, S. See Sup.

Quhat raik of your prosperetie,
Gif ye want Sensualitie? Lyndsay, S.P.R. ii. 31.

Flattry. I will ga counterfeite the freir.

Dissaitt. A freir! quhairto? thow cannot preiche.

Flatt. Quhat rak? bot I can flatter and fleiche:

Peraventur cum to that honour

To be the King's Confessour.

Ibid. p. 109.

The Merss sowld fynd me beiff and caill,

Quhat rack of breid?

Ibid. p. 180.

Thocht ane suld haif a broken back,

Haif he a Tailyor gude, quhat-rak,

Heill cover it richt craftely.

Dunbar, Evergreen, i. 255.

Rax seems to be used either as the pl., or instead of raik is.

Falsat, I wald we maid ane band;

Now quhill the King is sound sleipand,

Quhat rax to steill his box?

Lyndsay, S. P. Repr. p. 145.

Mr. Pinkerton renders rak, fault. But it is certainly from A.S. recce, cura, O.E. reck. The v. is still used, Isl. raegt, cura; raek-ia, curare, Verel.

RAIK, s. An idle person; a loungers. S.

RAIL, s. "A woman's jacket, or some such part of a woman's dress; called also a collar-body." Sibb. Gl.

This is mentioned by Rudd, as S.B. vo. Ralis, Belg.

ryglyf, a boddice stays; from ryg-en, to lace, and lyf, the body, q. laced close to the body.

RAIL'D, part. pa. Entangled; ravelled. S.

RAIL-EE'D, adj. Wall-eyed. Syn. Ringle-eyed. S.

To RAILL, v. n. To jest.

Let no man me esteeme to rail,

Nor think that raschellie I report;

Thair theis were like wais garnist haill;

With gold cheins of that saming sort.

Burel's Pilg. Watson's Coll. ii. 12.

Fr. raill-er, id. whence E. rally; Teut. rall-en, Sw. rall-a, jocari.

RAILYEAR, s. A jester; a scoffer.

The raileare rekkinis na wourdis, bot ratlis furth rany,

Ful rude and ryot resouns bayth roundalis and ryme.

V. RANE. Doug. Virgil, Prol. 238, b. 21.

RAILLY, s. An upper garment worn by females. S.

RAIL-TREE, s. A large beam in a cow-house, in which the upper ends of the stakes are fixed. S.

RAILYA. Apparently striped; streaked. S.

RAILYETTIS, s. pl. Perhaps bands or ribbons. S.

RAIN.* For Superstitions regarding rain, See MARRIAGE in Sup.

RAYNE, s. A continued repetition. V. RANE.

RAYNE, s. Perhaps a roe or kid. S.

RAING, RANG, s. Row; line, S. V. RANG.

To RAING, v. n. 1. To rank up; to be arranged in a line, S.

To town-guard drum, of clangour clear,

Baith men and steeds are raingit.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 53.

2. To go successively in a line; to follow in succession. The folk are raingin to the kirk, S.B.

RAIN GOOSE. The Red-throated Diver, Colymbus Septentrionalis, Linn. thus denominated, because its crying is thought to prognosticate rain. Shetl. Caithn.

"The birds are, eagles,—marrots or auks, kings fishers, rain geese, muir fowls, &c. P. Reay, Caithn. Statist. Acc. vii. 573.

"The raingoose of this place—in flying,—utters a howling or croaking noise, which the country people consider as an indication of rain, and from this circumstance, it has got the name which it bears, with the addition of goose, an appellation bestowed on almost every swimming bird in this country." Barry's Orkney, p. 304.

To RAINIE, v. a. To repeat the same thing over and over. V. RANE. S.

RAIP, s. 1. A rope, S.

Turnand quhelis thay set in by and by,

Under the feit of this ilk bysnyng jaip,

About the nek knyt mony bassin raip.

Doug. Virgil, 46, 38.

A Scottis sqwyare of gud fame,

Perrys of Curry cald be name,

Amang the rapys wes all to rent,

Of tha schyppys in a moment.

Wyntown, vii. 10. 197.

Moes.G. raip, A.S. rape, Precop. Su.G. rep, Isl. O.Dan. reip, Belg. reep.

2. A measure of six ells in length; a rood; so called, as being measured by a rope, as rood is from the use of a rod, and line E. metaph. used for an inheritance.

"Ane rod, ane raip, ane lineall fall of measure, are all ane;—for ilk ane of them conteinis sex elnes in length, albeit ane rod is ane staffe, or gade of tymmer, quhairwith land is measured, in Latine Pertica. Ane raip is maid of towe, sik as hemepe, or vther stuffe, and sa meikle lande, as in measuring, falles vnder the rod or raip, in length is called ane fall of measure, or ane lineall fall, because it is the measure of the line, and length allanerly." Skene, Verb. Sign. vo. Particata.

It is a striking coincidence, that Su.G. rep also denotes a measure of length. Notat funem mensorium, vel certum spatium longitudinis; Ihre. The length seems to be lost among the inhabitants of Scandinavia. For Ihre mentions it as the conjecture of Du Cange, that it denoted a fathom, observing, however, that it must be larger; as, from the quotation referred to, the author mentions eighty-six reep, and three ells.

Su.G. rep-a, to measure by a line. It does not certainly appear, that A.S. rap has been used in this sense. The only circumstance that would seem to indicate this, is that E. rape denotes a portion of a county; the land of Sussex being divided into six rapes of this description. Somner derives the word from A.S. rap, a rope, q. "meted out and divided by ropes; as of old were the fields and inheritances of certain nations." He refers to Kilian, vo. Kavel. Spelm., vo. Rapa, views it as a larger division of a country, equivalent to Lathe, including several Hundreds.

Measuring by line seems to have been the most ancient custom, as it was undoubtedly the most simple; Job xxxviii. 5.; 2 Sam. viii. 2.

3. What is strung on a rope. Twelve raips of onions. S.

RAIPFULL, s. 1. The full of a rope. 2. Widdifow, syn. q. v.

RAIR, s. A roar. V. RARE.

To RAIR, v. n. To roar. V. RARE. S.

To RAIRD, v. n. 1. To bleat; to low; applied to sheep or cattle. 2. To make a loud noise or report. 3. To make a noise by eructation. 4. To let wind backwards. S.

RAIRD, s. 1. The act of lowing or of bleating. 2. A sudden and loud noise; a loud report. 3. The noise made by eructation, or by passing wind backward. S.

RAIRUCK, s. A small rick of corn. S.

RAIS, s. A voyage. V. RAISS. S.

To RAISE, RAIZE, v. a. To madden; to inflame; applied to a horse of mettle, S.

He should been tight that daur't to raize thee,

Ance in a day. Burns, iii. 141.

RAIS'D. Delirious; in a state of insanity; applied to man, S. It sometimes also signifies to provoke to violent passion; as Alem. raiz-en, irritare. Ihre mentions S. rees as signifying furor, and res-en, furere. But these terms are used by Chaucer. See Sup.

— He fill sodenlich into a wood rese,

— She sterith about this house in a wood rese.

Pardonere and Tapstere, 498.—548. Urry.

For ther nas knyght, ne squyer, in his fathir's house,—

That did, or seyde, eny thing Berinus to displese,

That he n'old spetously anoon oppon him rese.

Hist. Beryn, Urry, p. 601.

The Northern Etymologist traces these terms to Su.G.

ras-a, Germ. ras-en, insanire. Su.G. raseri, furor.

RAIS'D-LIKE, adj. Having the look of derangement. S.

RAISE-AN-WAND, s. The apparatus formerly used in bringing home a millstone from the quarry. S.

RAISE-NET, s. A net that rises and falls with the tide. S.

RAISE-NET FISHING.

"The fourth method is called raise-net fishing.—It is so called from the lower part of the net rising and floating upon the water with the flowing tide, and setting down with the ebb. This is also called lake-fishing, from the nets being always set in lakes, or hollow parts of the tide-way, and never either in the channel of the river, or on the plain sand." P. Dornock, Dumfr. Statist. Acc. ii. 16. 17.

R A I

RAISS, RASSE, RASE, RACE, s. A strong current in the sea, S.

—Als gret stremys ar rynnand,
And als peralous, and mar,
Till our saile thaim into schipfair,
As is the raiss of Bretangye.—
Thai raysyt saile, and furth thai far,
And by the mole thai passyt yar,
And entryt sone in to the rase,
Quhar that the stremys sa sturdy was,
That wawys wyd, wycht brekand war,
Weltryt as hillys her and thar.

Barbour, iii. 687. 697. MS.

"Within three or four miles of the Irish shore, when the flood returns, there is a regular current which sets off strongly for the Mull of Galloway. It runs at the rate of seven knots an hour, and is so forcible, that when the wind opposes it, it exhibits, for a great way, the appearance of breakers. It is called the Race of Strangers, and is a very curious spectacle." P. Port-Patrick, Wigt. Statist. Acc. i. 40.

It seems to be a current of this kind, between Alderney and France, which is called the Race of Alderney. Edin. Even. Courant, p. 2. Sep. 14. 1805.

Su.G. ras, alveus amnis, ubi aqua decurrit, from ras-a, currere, praecipiti lapsu ferri; Isl. watraser, torrentes; Teut. raes, aestuarium.

RAISS, RAIS, s. A voyage. S.

RAITH, REATH, s. The fourth part of a year, S.

—Fu soon as the jimp three raiths was gane,
The daintiest littleane bonny Jean fuish hame.

Ross's Helenore, p. 12.

—Little mair than half a reath,
Than, gin we a' be spared frae death
We'll gladly prie

Fresh noggans o' your reaming graith.—

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 47.

"Perhaps corr. of feird or feirth, fourth," Sibb. But it is more probably allied to Su.G. ret, Isl. reitr, any thing that is quadrangular; quadratum quodvis; ruta, Germ. raute, id. As this is applied only to space, some might prefer rid, Isl. hrid, spatium temporis. See Sup.

RAITH, RATH, adj. 1. Sudden; quick.

The Tuquheit gird to the Gowk, and gaif him a fall,
Raiff his taill fra his heid, with a rathe pleid.

Houlate, iii. 16. MS.

Thus the term ought to be read, instead of rache in the printed copy.

A.S. rath, raethe, hraeth, citò, are certainly to be viewed as originally the same with hrad, hraed, hraeth, celer, velox; and both as corresponding to Belg. rad, radde, reede, expeditus, rapidus, celer; Su.G. rad, citus, velox, whence radt, cito; Isl. hradr, hrad-ur, promptus.

"Mr. Tooke says; In English we have Rath, Rather, Rathest; which are simply the Anglo-Saxon Rath, Rathor, Rathost, celer, velox." But this acute writer does not seem to have observed, that celer is not the only sense of A.S. rath. Hrath, hraed, radically the same with rath, signify both citus and promptus, paratus, Lye; hraedlice, adv. quickly, readily, Somner; as, when used as an adj., it has the sense of, maturus. It is most probable that the signification, prepared, is the primary one; and that A.S. rath, hraeth, is the part. raed, ge-raed, from ge-raed-ian, parare, whence E. ready. Thus Teut. reed, in like manner, has both senses. Reed, ghe-reed, paratus, promptus; et, expeditus, celer, Kilian; from reed-en, ghe-reed-en, parare. Isl. reid-a, rad-ast, Su.G. red-a, parare, praeparare. Ihre, however, derives red-a from rad, celer.

R A K

2. Ready; prepared. This seems at least the sense of the term in the following passage.

The princis tho, quhylk suld this peace making,
Turnis towart the bricht sonnys vprisng,
Wyth the salt melder in thare handis raith.

Doug. Virgil, 413, 19.

RAITH, adv. Quickly; hastily.

His feris has this pray ressaut raith,
And to thare meit addressis it for to graith.

Doug. Virgil, 19, 31.

Rathe is used as an adv. by Chaucer, in the sense of soon, early.

What aileth you so rathe for to arise?

Shipman's Tale, ver. 13029.

It also signifies, speedily.

A.S. rath, raethe, hraethe, id. But although it occurs, in these forms, only as an adv., it seems to have been originally an adj. There are various proofs of this use both in O.E. and in provincial language. V. Diversions of Purley, i. 506-513., also in S.

E. rath fruit, i. e. early fruit, or what is soon ripe. Rather is the compar. of rath, and rathest the superl. The latter is used by Chaucer, soonest; and also by our Hume of Godscroft.

It occurs as signifying, first, soonest.

"King Robert in his flight, or retreat, divided his men into three companies, that went severall wayes, that so the enemie being uncertaine in what company he himself were, and not knowing which to pursue rathest, he might the better escape." Hist. Doug. p. 28.

He also uses it as signifying, most readily, i. e. most probably.

"He means rathest (as I think) George now Lord Hume, (for he is Lord ever after this) and Sir David of Wedderburn with his brothers," &c. Hist. Doug. p. 248.

RAIVEL, s. 1. A rail, as the raivel of a stair, of a wooden bridge, &c. S. The tops of a cart are also called raivels, S.B. 2. The cross-beam to which the upper ends of cowstakes are fastened. Rail-tree, id. S. RAIVEL (of a spur,) s. The rowel. S.

RAIVEL, s. An implement with pins in it, used by weavers for spreading out the yarn, or warp, that is to be put on the beam before it is wrought. S.

To RAK, v. a. To reach; to attain.

To sum best sall cum best
That hap, Weil rak weil rins.

Cherrie and Slae, st. 68.

This is an old proverbial phrase signifying that "he runs well, who is successful in attaining the end he had in view." Moes.G. rah-jan, A.S. raec-an, Su.G. raeck-a, id. Heb. רקק, rakah, extendit.

To RAK, REK, v. a. To regard; to care for.

O haitful deith!—

To all pepill elyke and commoun ay
Thou haldins euin and beris the scepture wand,
Eternally obseruand thy cunnand,
Quhilk grete and small down thringis, and nane rakkis.

Doug. Virgil, 465, 1.

"What raks the feud, where the friendship dow not?" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 76.

From the same origin with E. reck; A.S. rec-an, Isl. raek-ia, Su.G. rykt-a, curare; Moes.G. rahn-an, aestimare.

RAK, s. Care; regard. V. RAIK.

RAK, RAWK, ROIK, ROOK, s. A thick mist or fog; a vapour. Rak seems confined to S.B.

—The day was dawing wele I knew;—
Persaut the morning bla, wan and har,

Wyth cloudy gum and rak ouerquhelmyt the are.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 202, 26.

The rane and roik reft from vs sycht of heuin.

Ibid. 74, 12.

—The laithly odoure rais on hicht
From the fyre blesis, dirk as ony roik,
That to the ruffis toppis went the smoik.

Ibid. 432, 19.

“Scot. and Ang. Bor. rack or rawk, Rudd.”

Isl. rak-ur, humidus, Verel.; rakr, subhumidus, udus, rek-ia, irrigare, unde rekia, raekia, pluvia, pluvia irrigua, humor, G. Andr. p. 194. 197. He traces the Isl. terms to Heb. רִוּחַ, רִוּא, ravah, riah, rigatus, irrigatus, humectatus fuit. Teut. roock, vapor, Dan. Sax. racu, pluvia, unda, humor; Isl. roka, unda vento dispersa. We may perhaps also view Isl. rok-r, the twilight, and rokv-a, (vesperascere,) to draw towards evening, as allied; especially as we say that it is a rooky day, when the air is thick and the light of consequence feeble. We may add Moes.G. riquis, darkness, riquis-an, to grow dark.

Rudd. thinks that reek has the same origin with rak and roik. The idea is extremely probable. For Teut. roock denotes smoke, as well as vapour. Although Isl. reik-r, fumus, be deduced from rijh, riuk-a, fumare, it may be radically the same with rek-ia mentioned above. The Su.G. for smoke is roek, pron. ruh, as Gr. υ; and A.S. roec is used in the same sense. Ihre observes, concerning the Su.G. term, that it denotes any thing which resembles darkness in colour, or otherwise.

Mr. Tooke, Divers. Purley, i. 390. justly censures Dr. Johns. for defining E. rack, “the clouds as they are driven by the wind.” For some of the passages, which the Doctor himself has quoted, disown this interpretation. Mr. Tooke might justly have referred to one of these, as clearly contradicting the definition. It is from the learned Bacon.

“The winds, in the upper region, which move the clouds above, which we call the rack, and are not perceived below, pass without noise.”

The Doctor seems to have understood this passage, as if these words, “which we call the rack,” were expletive of all the preceding part of the sentence. But they evidently refer only to “the clouds above.” Thus, according to Bacon, the rack denotes the thin vapours in the higher region of the air, which may either be moved by the winds, or stand still.

But Mr. Tooke, although he has quoted all the passages in Doug. Virgil that seemed to bear on his explanation of the term, and corrected the reading in several passages that cannot be brought to apply to it, (V. WRAITH,) has overlooked one material passage, in which the term is undoubtedly used in another sense, nearly allied to that adopted by Dr. Johns.

And trumpettis blast rasyt within the toun
Sic manere brute, as thoct men hard the soun
Of crannis crowping fleing in the are
With speddy fard in randoun here and thare;
As from the flude of Tráce, hate Strymonye,
Under the dirk cloudis oft we se:
Thay fle the wedderis blast and rak of wynd,
Thare gladsum sownes followand thaym behynd.

P. 324, 36.

Mr. Tooke has quoted a passage from Shakspeare, which would seem to convey a similar idea.

Dazzle mine eyes, or doe I see three sunnes?
Three glorious sunnes, each one a perfect sunne,
Not seperated with the racking clouds,
But seuer'd in a pale cleare shining skye.

Third Part Henry 6.

Rak of wind certainly signifies the wind opening or extending the clouds. In the same sense they are said to be racked. Rak, S.B. denotes both the thin white clouds, which are scarcely visible, and their motion. Rack of the weather, A. Bor., “the track in which the clouds move;” Gl. Grose.

Isl. rakin conveys the same idea; ventus nubes serenans et pellens; G. Andr. But perhaps the origin is A.S. recc-an, Su.G. raeck-a, to extend. Isl. rakin may be from rek-a, pellere, to drive.

RAK, RAWK, s. The rheum which distils from the eyes, during sleep, or when they are in any degree inflamed, S.B. gar, synon.

“We call—the viscous humor in sore eyes, or in one not well awak’d, a rawk. Hence the common expression among us, Before ye have rawk’d your ene, i. e. before ye be awak’d;” Rudd. vo. Rak, 1.

It seems doubtful, however, if rawk’d, as a v., does not rather signify, opened, q. stretched.

This is probably from the same source with the preceding, as having the general sense of humour or moisture. It may, however, be allied to Isl. hrak, rejectaneum quid, from hrek-ia, rek-a, pellere, reka ut, ejicere; hence rek, Su.G. wrak, whatever is thrown out by the sea on the shore.

RAK, RAWK, s. The greenish scum which covers water in a state of stagnation, S.B.

“We call the moss that grows over spring-wells, when neglected,—a rawk,” Rudd. ubi sup. V. RAK, s. 3.

RAK, s. “A stroak, a blow,” Rudd.

The stedis stakerit in the stour, for streking on stray.

The bernys bowit abak,

Sa woundir rude wes the rak. Gawan and Gol. iii. 21.

It seems to be the word, as here used, which Mr. Pinkerton renders vengeance.

Thay met in mellé with ane felloun rak,

Quhill schaftis al to schudderis with ane crak.

Doug. Virgil, 386, 14.

—From the rutis he it lousit and rent

And tumblit down fra thyne or he wald stent:

The large are did reirding with the rusche,

The brayis dynlit and all down can dusche:

The riuer wox affrayit with the rak,

And demmyt with the rolkis ran abak. Ibid. 249, 31.

Rudd. observes, that S. we more frequently use racket. But rak, I suspect, here signifies shock, as equivalent to rusche, v. 29. and included in impetus, the term used by Virg.

Thus it may be allied to Isl. rek-a, hreck-ia, propellere, quater. Hence perhaps Su.G. raak, ruptura glaciei.

To RAKE, v. n. To turn to the left hand, a term used with respect to the motion of cattle in husbandry. S. RAKE, s. A very lank person. “He’s a mere rake.” S. RAKE.

“Tristrem, for thi sake,

For sothe wived hath he;

This wil the torn tow rake;

Of Breteyne douke schal he be.”

Sir Tristrem, p. 175.

This is certainly an error, instead of—torn to wrake, i. e. turn or bring thee to wreck or ruin. The connexion evidently requires this sense; although the passage is rendered in Gl., “Matters will take this turn.”

A.S. wrace, wraec, ultio; To wraec sendan, in ultionem mittere, Lye.

RAKE, s. A swift pace. V. RAK, s.

To RAKE THE EEN. To rub the rheum from the eyes on awaking; to open the eyes. V. RAK, rheum. S.

RAKES, s. A duty of three goupens exacted at a mill. S.

RAKKIS, s. The irons on which a spit turns. V. RAXES. S.

RAK-SAUCH, s. A reproachful term applied to Kennedy by Dunbar.

Filling of tauch, Rak sauch, cry Crauch, thou art owreset.

Evergreen, ii. 60.

R A L

Equivalent to S. widdifow; as being one who deserves to rack, or stretch, a withy, or twig of willow, the instrument of execution anciently used, i. e. to be hanged. V. SAUCH, and WIDDIE.

RAKYNG, part. pr.

Schir, I complaine of injure;
A resing storie of rakyng Mure
Hes mangillit my making, throw his malise.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 107.

Mr. Pinkerton views it as signifying, acting the part of a calumniator and sycophant, from Isl. rackall, delator. This is corr. from rae-karl. The v. is raeg-a, accusare. It perhaps rather signifies, wandering, from the v. Raik, q. v. RAKKET, s.

He tellis thame ilk ane caik by caik;
Syne lokkes thame up, and takis a faik,
Betwixt his dowblett and his jackett,
And eites thame in the buith that smaik;
— that he mort into ane rakket.

Bannatyne Poems, pp. 171. 172.

"Blow, box on the ear." L. Hailes. This does not correspond. It is an evil wish, either that the person might die in a hurry or bustle, as racket is used in this sense; or, it may denote a vile termination of life, from Fr. raque, filth, ordure, Teut. rack-en, purgare latrinas, racker, cloacarius.

RAKLESS, adj. Careless; rash, S. the same with E. reckless; A.S. recceleas.

To RAKLES one's self. To deviate from proper conduct. S. RAKLESLIE, adv. Unwittingly.

— Blind Lamech rakleslie
Did slay Cayn unhappelie.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 32.

To RALE, v. n. To spring; to gush forth; to flow.

— Lichtlie, as the happy goishalk, we se—
Thristand his tallouns so throw hir entrallis,
Quhil al the blude haboundantly furth ralis.

Doug. Virgil, 390, 43.

Junius derives rayled, as used by Chaucer in the same sense, from Isl. ryll, rivus tacitè labens; vo. Rill.

To RALEIFF, v. n.

Ye se the Scottis puttis feill to confusioun,
Wald ye wyth men agayn on him raleiff,
And mer thaim anys, I sall, quhill I may leiff,
Low you fer mar than any othir knyght.

Wallace, x. 723. MS.

Him in MS. is certainly a mistake for thaim. Raleiff seems to signify Rally, as relewynt is elsewhere used, q. v. RALYEIT, part. pa. Perhaps, striped, &c. V. RAILYA, &c. RALIS, s. pl. Nets.

— Quben that he is betrappit fra hys feris,
Amyd the hunting ralis and the nettys,
Standis at the bay, and vp the birsis settis.

Doug. Virgil, 344, 45.

— Fast to the yettis thringis
The chois gallandis, and huntmen thaim besyde,
With ralis, and with nettis strang and wyde.

Ibid. 104, 20.

It properly denotes nets of a close texture, retia rara, Virg.

Rudd. gives as the reason of the name, that, by means of these nets, the wild beasts are enclosed as with rails. I do not see any more probable etymon; unless we should suppose it derived from Franc. rigil-on, custodire, praeservare, defendere; Schilter.

RALLY, adj. Mean; unhandsome; ungenteel. S.

RALLION, s. Clattering; noise, S.B.

His shoon wi' tacketts weel were shod,

R A M

Which made a fearfu' rallion.

Morison's Poems, p. 24.

RALLION, s. A ragged fellow. S.

RAMAGIECHAN, s. 1. Expl. "a large raw-boned person, speaking and acting heedlessly," Ang. 2. A false-hearted fellow; a back-biter; a double-dealer. S.

RAMBALEUGH, adj. 1. Tempestuous; as, "A rambaleugh day." 2. Metaph. A rambaleugh temper. S. To RAMBARRE, v. a. To stop; to restrain; also, to repulse; Fr. rembarre, id.

"They were quickly rambarred, and beaten back by those that had been left of purpose in the court by Morton." Hume's Hist. Doug. p. 290.

RAMBASKIOUS, RAMBASKISH, adj. Unpolished. S.

RAMBLEGARIE, s. A forward person. S.

RAMBOUNGE, s. A severe brush of labour. S.

RAMBUSK, adj. Robust. S.

To RAME, v. n. To shout; to cry aloud; to roar, S.B.

Reem, to cry aloud, or bewail one's self, A. Bor. See S.

Furth fleis sche wyth mony schout and cry,— Takand nane hede, nor yit na maner schame,
Sa amang men to ryn, roup and rame.

Doug. Virgil, 293, 48.

Sche full vnhappy in the batell stede —

Hir mynd trublit, can to rame and cry;

Sche was the caus and wyte of al thys greif.

Ibid. 432, 38.

A.S. hream-an, clamare, whence the E. rame or ream, "loud weeping," Rudd. We may add, Su.G. raam-a, Isl. hrym-a, boare, Germ. ram-en, ramm-en, clamorem edere quocunque modo, Alem. ruom, clamor; Su.G. rom, Isl. rom-ur, clamor applaudentium; rom-a, Su.G. be-roem-a, applaudere, Germ. ruhm-en, rum-en, laudare; Franc. ruoman, gloriari. Wachter refers to Gr. ἀρρομαί, lamentor, intense clamo.

RAME, s. A cry, especially when the same sound is reiterated. It is said of one, He has aye ae rame, when he continues to cry for the same thing, or to repeat the same sound, S. V. the v.

RAMYNG, s. A loud cry; a shout.

Tho Salius fillis al the court about

With loude ramyngis, and with many ane schout.

Doug. Virgil, 138, 55.

RAMEDE, s. Remedy; Fr. remede.

Bot God abowyn has send ws sum ramede.

Wallace, i. 178. MS.

RAMEL, s. V. RAMMEL.

RAMFEEZLED, part. adj. "Fatigued; exhausted; over-spent," S.

The tapetless ramfeezl'd hizzie,
She's saft at best, and something lazy.

Burns, iii. 243.

Teut. ramme, vectis, a lever, and futsel-en, agitare, factitare, q. exhausted in working with a lever? or shall we rather trace it to ramme, aries?

RAMFEEZLEMENT, s. 1. Disorder, from fatigue or otherwise. 2. Confused discourse, or a violent quarrel. S.

To RAMFORSE, v. a. 1. To strengthen; to supply with men and warlike stores. 2. To cram; to stuff hard. S.

RAMFORSIT, part. pa. Crammed; stuffed hard; q. rammed by force, a tautological phraseology.

His boss bellie, ramforsit with creisch and lie,

Will serve to be a gabion in neid;

His heid a bullat with pouldre far to flie.

Nicol Burne, Chron. S.P. iii. 455.

R A M

To RAMFWRE, v. a. To fortify. S.
RAMGUNSHOCH, adj. Expl. rugged.

"What makes you so ramgunshoch to me, and I so corcuddoch?" S. Prov. "a jocose return to them who speak hastily to us, when we speak kindly to them." Kelly, p. 348.

Qu. Teut. ram, aries, and goyen, jactare cum impetu, quater, batuere; q. to strike or butt like a ram? Isl. gunnar, aries pugnant.

RAMYD, s. The same with Ramede, remedy. S.

RAMIST, adj. Fatigued from being disturbed in sleep. S.

RAMMAGE, s. The sound emitted by hawks. S.

RAMMAGE, adj. Rash; thoughtless; furious. S.

RAMMAGED, adj. Delirious from intoxication. S.

RAMMAGE, adj. Rough-set, applied to a road. S.

RAMMASCHE, adj. Collected; Fr. ramassé.

"There eftir I herd the rumour of rammasche foulis ande of beystis that maid grite beir." Compl. S. p. 59.

RAMMEKINS, s. "A dish made of eggs, cheese, and crumbs of bread, mixed in the manner of a pudding;" Gl. Sibb.

It seems to be the same dish which the Fr. call ramolles; "past-meats fashioned like sausages, and made of the juyce of herbes, the yolkes of egges, cheese, and meale seasoned with salt, and boiled in water; when they are taken out of it, and served up hot;" Cotgr.

Kilian gives Flandr. rammeken, as synon. with roosteye, roosteyken; panis escharites, panis supercraticula tostus, i. e. S. girdle-bannocks. It seems, however, to be the origin of the term.

RAMMEL, RAMEL, s. Small branches, shrubbery.

In tapestries ye nicht persaeue
Young ramel, wrocht like lawrell treis.

Burel, Watson's Coll. ii. 1.

— Full litill it wald delite,
To write of scroggis, brome, hadder or rammell.

Doug. Virgil, 271, 44.

Fr. ramilles, id. Lat. ramul-us, a little branch.

RAMMEL, adj. 1. Branchy; Fr. ramillé.

"There vas ane grene banc ful of rammel grene treis." Compl. S. p. 57.

2. Rank, applied to straw; rammel strae, straw that is strong and rank, S.B. q. branched out.

A. Bor. rammely, tall, and rank; as beans; Gl. Grose.

RAMMEL, RAMBLE, s. Mixed or blended grain, S.

"Blanded bear, or rammel, as the country people here call it, is the produce of barley and common bear sown in a mixed state." P. Markinch, Fife, Statist. Acc. xii. 531.

—"Many farmers in this and the neighbouring parishes, still prefer for seed a mixture of bear or big and barley, in different proportions, which they call Ramble." P. Crail, Fife, Statist. Acc. ix. 441.

Perhaps from Teut. rammel-en, tumultuari, q. in a confused state, as being blended.

RAMMER, s. A ramrod, S.

To RAMMIS, RAMMISH, v. n. To go about in a state approaching to frenzy; to be driven about under the impulse of any powerful appetite, S.B. See Sup.

Thus one is said to rammis about like a cat, in allusion to a female cat seeking the male. One is also said to be rammissing with hunger.

Alem. romisch pfaerd, equus salax; Su.G. roensk, used in the same sense. O. Teut. ramm-en, salire, inire more arietum; from ramme, a ram, because of the liquorish disposition of this animal. Hence, RAMMIST, part. adj. Furious; raging.

"The residew seyng thair capitaine and thair freindis slane, come with ane huge nowmer of stanis (becaus thay wantit thair swerdis) on the kyngis army; as rammist and wod creaturis, to haue reuengit the slauchter of thair freindis." Bellend. Cron. B. v. c. 11.

R A M

RAMMISH, adj. To a certain degree deranged. S.

RAMMISHT, part. adj. Crazy; deranged. S.

RAMMLEGUISHON, s. A sturdy rattling fellow. S.

RAMNATRACK, s. Ill-spun yarn. S.

To RAMORD, v. n. To feel remorse for. V. REMORD.

To RAMP, v. n. 1. To be rompish, S. as ramp is synon. with E. romp. See Sup.

2. To rage: rampand, raging, Wallace.

The pepill beryt lik wyld bestis in that tyd,

Within the wallis rampand on athir sid,

Rewmyd in reuth, with mony grysly grayne.

Wallace, vii. 458. MS.

"And that the deuil is our ennymye Sanct Petir testifis plainly, sayand thus: Brethir be sobir and walk, for your aduersarye the deuil, lyk ane ramping lyoun, gais about seikand quhome he may deuoire & swallye, to quhom do ye resist, being stark in your faith." Abp. Hamiltoun's Catechisme, Fol. 133. a.

Chaucer uses rampe in the same sense.

Whan she cometh home she rampeth in my face,

And cryeth, False coward, wreke thy wif.

Monkes Prol. ver. 13910.

A.S. rempend, praeceps; Isl. ramb-a, superbire; Ital. ramp-are, to paw like a lion.

RAMP, adj. 1. Riotous; disorderly.

"It was urged for him, the confession proven was merely extrajudicial, and he was not presumed to be the aggressor, he being but a tradesman, and old, near the age of fifty, the other a gentleman, and young, and known to be ramp." Fountainhall's Decisions, i. 2.

2. Vehement; violent, S.

When frank Miss John came first into the camp,
With his fierce flaming sword, none was so ramp;
He look'd like Mars, and vow'd that he would stand,
So long's there was a rebel in the land.
He rym'd, he sung, he jocund was and frolick,
Till Enoch Park gave master John the collick.
And so of all the troop there was not one,
That turn'd his tail so soon as frank Miss John.

Pennecuik's Poems, 1715. p. 27.

RAMP, s. A romp. S.

RAMPAGIOUS, adj. Furious; vehement. S.

RAMPAUGER, s. One who prances about furiously. S.

RAMPAUGIN, s. The act of prancing about furiously. S.

To RAMP, v. n. Milk is said to ramp, when, from some disease in the cow, it becomes ropy, and is drawn out into threads, like any glutinous substance, S.B.

Perhaps from Fr. ramp-er, to climb, because of the appearance the milk makes, when poured out. Or, as the vulgar view this as the effect of witchcraft, from O. Flandr. ramp-en, dira imprecari, from Teut. ramp, infortunium, malum; Kilian.

To RAMP, v. a. To trample; Gl. Sibb.

RAMP, adj. Strong; rank; as, "a rank smell." S.

To RAMPAGE, v. n. To rage and storm; to prance about with fury, S.

Psewart rampag'd to see both man and horse

So sore rebuted, and put to the worse.

Hamiltoun's Wallace, p. 244.

Then he began the glancing heap to tell.

As soon's he miss'd it, he rampaged red wood,

And lap and danc'd, and was in unco mood.

Ross's Helenore, p. 64.

Perhaps from the same origin with Ramp, to be in a rage, q. v.

R A M

RAMPAR-EEL, RAMPER-EEL, s. A lamprey, S. Petromyzon marinus, Linn. See Sup.

"These spotted eels are called rampar eels. It is said, they will attack men, or even black cattle, when in the water." P. Johnston, Dumfr. Statist. Acc. iv. 217. N.

This is evidently a corr. of lamprey. It is also called a nine ee'd eel. V. EEL.

RAMPLON, s. The lamprey. S.

RAMPLOR, RAMPLER, adj. Roving; unsettled. S.

RAMPLOR, s. A gay rambling fellow. S.

RAMPS, s. A species of garlick. S.

RAM-RAIS, RAM-RACE, s. 1. The race taken by two rams before each shock in fighting. 2. A short race in order to give the body greater impetus before taking a leap from the starting place. 3. The act of running in a precipitous manner, with the head inclined downward, as if one meant to butt with it, S.

Sum haisty and vnwarly at the flicht
Slakis thare brydillis, spurrand in all thare mycht,
Can with ane ram rais to the portis dusche,
Like with thare heddis the hard barris to frusche.

Doug. Virgil, 397, 47.

This term, which is overlooked by Rudd., may have been formed from the name of the ram; as it literally expresses the sense of the word, arieto, used by Virg. from aries, id.; like Teut. ramey-en.

It is evident that Doug., in using this term, in the translation of arieto, has viewed it as derived from ram, aries. But it is doubtful, whether it may not be allied to Su.G. ram, Isl. ramm-ur, robustus. The Icelanders have a similar phrase, Ham ramr, violentia ac viribus Cyclopis grassatus; from ham-ast, delirare, giganteo modo grassari. V. G. Andr. p. 105. Ramleike, cyclopicae vires.

RAM-REEL, s. A dance by men only. S.

RAMSH, adj. 1. Strong, robust. A woman of unusual strength, or masculine in her manners, is called a ramsh queyn, S.B.

Su.G. ram, Isl. ramm-ur, robust; also, deformed, quum qui robusti suut, non semper formam delicatissimam habent, Ihre.

As, however, the term sometimes implies the idea of salacious, it may be the same with E. rammish, used by Chaucer as signifying, "rank, like a ram;" Tyrwhitt. V. RAMMIS.

2. Harsh to the taste, S.B.

3. Inconsiderately rash; arrogant. 4. Lascivious. S.

As animals, or vegetables, that have a strong growth, are generally unsavoury, it may, in this sense, be from the origin already mentioned. Accordingly ram, strong, is also rendered rank, olidus; En ram lukt, odor graveolens; Norw. romms, rank. Isl. rammr, however, signifies bitter; Fland. wransch, Belg. rinsch, sour.

To RAMSH, v. n. To eat voraciously with noise. S.

RAMSH, s. The act of masticating, with noise, coarse or rank food, as raw vegetables, &c. S.

RAMSH, s. The name of a species of leek. S.

RAMSHACHLED, part. pa. Loose; disjointed; in a crazy state. V. SHACHLE. S.

RAMSHACKLE, s. A thoughtless fellow. S.

RAMSKERIE, adj. Restive and lustful as a ram. S.

RAMSTAGEOUS, adj. Applied to any thing coarse. S.

RAMSTALKER, s. A clumsy blundering fellow. S.

RAMSTACKERIN', part. pr. Acting in a clumsy and blundering manner. S.

RAM-STAM, adj. Forward, thoughtless; used also adv., precipitately, headlong. To come on ram-stam, to advance without regard to the course one takes, or to any object in the way, S.

R A N

Nae ferly tho' ye do despise
The hairum-scairum, ramstam boys,
The rattlin squad.

Burns, iii. 91.

As this word conveys a similar idea to that of ram-rai, the first syllable may allude to the ram; or it may be from Su.G. ram, strong. The second may be formed, either, as in many cases, for the metrical alliteration; or from Su.G. staemm-a, tendere, cursum dirigere, q. to direct one's course, or rush forward like a ram; or to do it forcibly, like the action of a strong man. Isl. stame, careless, remiss, may have a superior claim; as denoting the carelessness, with which the force referred to, is exerted. V. RAM-RAIS.

RAMSTAM, adv. Precipitately; headlong. S.

RAMSTAM, s. 1. A giddy forward person. 2. The strongest home-brewed beer. S.

RAMSTAMPHISH, adj. 1. Rough; blunt; uncere- monious. 2. Forward and noisy. S.

RAMSTAM'AN, part. pr. Rushing on headlong. S.

RAMSTOUGAR, RAMSTOUGEROUS, adj. 1. Rough, with strength. 2. Rough, applied to cloth. 3. Used to characterize a big, vulgar, masculine woman. 4. Heedless; hair-brained; also, rough; boisterous; disposed to be riotous; quarrelsome. S.

RAMSTUGIOUS, adj. The same as Ramstougerous. S.

RAM-TAM, adv. Precipitately. Syn. Ramstam. S.

RAMTANGLEMENT, s. Confusion; disorder. S.

RAMUKLOCH. To sing ramukloch, to cry, to change one's tune from mirth to sadness; synon. with Bamullo.

It hes bene sene, that wyse wemen,

Eftir thair husbands deid,

Hes gottin men,——

With ane grene sling, hes gart thame bring

The geir quhilk won wes be ane dring;

And syne gart all the bairnis sing

Ramukloch in thair bed.

Bannatyne Poems, p. 180. st. 9.

To RANCE, v. a. To prop with stakes; to barricade, S.

Su.G. raenn-a, to place a stake behind a door, in order to keep it shut; Ihre, vo. Ren.

RANCE, s. 1. A prop, a wooden stake employed for the purpose of supporting a building, S.

2. The cross bar which joins the lower part of the frame of a chair together, Ang.

3. The fore part of the roof of a bed, or the cornice of a wooden bed. Fore-rance, the slip of timber which secures the lids of a wooden bed, and forms a mortice for them, in which they run backwards and forwards, S.

Su.G. ren, a stake, C.B. rhæin, a pole.

To RANCE, v. a. To fill completely; to choke up. S.

RANCE, adj. Rhenish; belonging to the Rhine. S.

To RANCEL, RANSEL, v. a. To search throughout a parish for stolen or for insufficient goods; also to inquire into every kind of misdemeanour. S.

RANCELLING, s. The act of searching for stolen goods. S.

RANSELLOR, RANSELMAN, s. A kind of constable; one employed in the investigation described above. S.

RAND, s. A narrow stripe. 2. A stripe of any breadth, if of a different colour in cloth. 3. A streak of dirt left on any thing imperfectly cleaned. S.

RANDIT, part. adj. Striped with different colours. S.

R A N

RANDAN, s. V. RANDOUN.

RANDER, s. Order, strict conformity to rule, S.B.
The Squire ordain'd nae rande to be kept,
And rous'd him always best that lightest leapt:
Lest Nory, seeing dancing by a rule,
Should blush, as having never been at school.

Ross's Helenore, p. 116.

Perhaps from Isl. raund, Su.G. rand, margo, linea, pl. rande; q. to keep no determinate line, as a line is often the mark by which one is directed in any work or amusement.

To RANDER, v. n. To ramble idly in discourse. S.
Fland. rand-en, delirare, ineptire, nugari; Kilian.

RANDER, s. A great talker. "A perfect rande." S.

RANDERS, s. pl. Idle discourse; incoherent talk; that which has little sense in it. Syn. Haivers, Maundrels. S.

RANDEVOW, s. Rendezvous. S.

RANDY, RANDIE-BEGGAR, s. 1. A sturdy beggar; one who exacts alms by threatenings and abusive language, especially when there are none but females at home, S.

"Many Randies (sturdy vagrants) infest this country from the neighbouring towns and the Highlands." P. Kirkden, Statist. Acc. ii. 515.

I'm sure the chief of a' his kin
Was Rab the beggar randy.

Ritson's S. Poems, i. 183.

"The place is oppressed with gangs of gypsies, commonly called Randy-beggars, because there is nobody to take the smallest account of them." P. Eaglesham, Renfrews. Statist. Acc. ii. 124.

2. A scold; appropriated to a female, S.

This might appear at first view to be the primary sense. But it is certainly only a secondary one; although the more common use of the term in towns. It seems merely a general application, borrowed from the abusive language used by the vagrant tribes; in the same manner as S. tinkler, properly the name of a profession, has come to signify a scold, and also a sturdy mendicant, because of the rude manners and wandering life of tinkers.

3. Often applied to an indelicate romping hoyden. S.

A.S. regn-theof, dominans fur. But it seems properly to denote the spoiler of a kingdom. Su.G. runtiuf fur fugiens, one who steals and runs away. This might agree pretty well with the character of our vagrants. As, however, randie-beggar is exactly analogous to what our law calls maisterful beggar or sornare; the term may probably be traced to ran, which, in almost all the Goth. dialects, signifies the act of spoiling. If we shall suppose that the A.S. term theof, Su.G. tiuf, Germ. dieb, a thief, has been conjoined, the compound word would denote one who not only takes what is not his own, but does so forcibly; as resembling Stouthrie, q. v. It might easily be softened to Randie.

Some might prefer A.S. rand-wiga, clypeatus bellator, miles; because soldiers have too often acted as freebooters; or Gael. ranntaich, a songster, because bairds, when their consequence had declined, were classed with maisterful beggars, Acts, Ja. VI. 1579, c. 74.

Randy is used as an adj. A. Bor.; "riotous, obstreperous, disorderly;" Grose's Prov. Gl.

RANDY, adj. Vagrant; disorderly; quarrelsome. S.

RANDY-LIKE, adj. Having the appearance of a scold. S.

RANDLE-TREE, s. Crook-tree. V. RANTLE-TREE. S.

RANDOUN, s. The swift course, flight, or motion of any thing.

It is used to denote the swift motion of a horse, a gallop.

Schyr Amer then, but mar abaid,
VOL. II. 273

R A N

With all the folk he with him haid,
Ischyt in forcely to the fycht,
And raid in till a randoun rycht,
The strawcht way towart Meffen.

Barbour, ii. 311. MS.

It denotes the swift motion of birds.

And trumpettis blast rasyt within the toun
Sic manere brute, as thocht men hard the soun
Of crannis crowping fleing in the are,
With spedy fard in randoun here and thare.

Doug. Virgil, 324, 33.

Also, the flight of a javelin or arrow.

— Bot throw his gardy sone
The grundin hede and bludy schaft are done,
Furth haldand the self randoun as it went,

Doug. Virgil, 327, 45.

Fr. randon, the swiftness or force of a violent stream. This is the primary sense, as found in the v. V. RANDONIT. Norm. Sax. randun, a rennan, fluere, and dun, deorsum; Franc. rentdun, a torrent, a cataract; Hickes' Thes. i. 232. Rennun, id. Schilter, vo. Rinnan. Hence E. random. Randan is used in a similar sense, S.B. A thing is said to come at a randan, when it comes by surprise.

RANDONIT, pret. v.

Apone that riche river, randonit full evin,
The side wallis war set, sad to the see.

Gawan and Gol. i. 20.

"Arranged," Gl. Pink. But it seems to signify, that the river ran down swiftly in a straight line, q. which randonit; Fr. randonn-er, id.

RANE, RAYNE, RAIN, REANE, s. 1. "Tedious idle talk;" Gl. Wynt.

Mater nane I worthy fand,
That tyl yhoure heryng were plesand.
In-tyl this tretys for to wryte:
Swa suld I dulle hale yhoure delyte,
And yhe sulde call it bot a rane,
Or that I had thame half ourtane,
Gyf I sulde tell thaim halyly,
As thai are in the Genalogy.

Rayne, viii. Prol. 24.

Wyntown, ii. 10. 25.

2. Some idle, unmeaning, or unintelligible language, especially of the rhythmical kind, frequently repeated; metrical jargon. See Sup.

Sa come the Ruke with a rerde, and a rane roch,
A bard out of Irland with Banochadee!
Said, Gluntow guk dynydrach hala mischty doch.

Houlate, iii. 13. MS.

This is evidently meant to ridicule the profession of Bards.

The railyeare rekkinis na wourdis, bot ratlis furth ranys,

Ful rude and ryot resouns bayth roundalis and ryme.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 238, b. 21.

At nicht is some gayne,—

This is our auld a rayne;—

I am maist wilsum of wane,

Within this world wyde. Maitland Poems, p. 198.

The author, in the first verse, seems to quote the beginning of some old song.

The word, as used by Wyntown, may admit of the same sense. Rainie still denotes any metrical jargon, or idle repetition, used by children, S.B. tronie, synon.

3. A frequent and irksome repetition of the same sound or cry.

I herd a peteous appeill, with a pure mane.

Sowlpit in sorrow, that sadly could say,

"Woes me wreche in this world, wilsum of wane!"

With mair murnyng in mynd than I mene may;

2 M

R A N

Rowpit rewhfully rolk in a rud rane.

Houlate, i. 4. MS.

All the kye in the country they skared and chased,
That roaring they wood ran, and routed in a rean.

Montgomerie, Watson's Coll. iii. 21.

"You're like the gowk (cuckow), you have not a rain but one," S. Prov. applied to those who often repeat the same thing; Rudd.

He supposes it may be the same with rane, m being changed into n, or rather from Isl. hryn, exclamo. The latter is certainly preferable. We may add hrin, vociferatio.

But perhaps it is allied to Moes. G. runa, consilium, Su. G. runa, incantatio, as those, who pretended to magical power, used a certain rhythmical sort of gibberish, which they frequently repeated. Germ. raun, a mystery, an incantation, A. S. ge-ryne, mysterium, C. B. rhin, id. Isl. reyn-a eptir, to inquire after things secret, is traced to runir, literae; Landnam. Gl. Gael. rann denotes a song, a genealogy; rannach, a songster; ranaighe, a romancer, a story-teller; Shaw. It is a singular coincidence, that Heb. רנה, ranah, signifies sonuit, רננ, ranan, cecinit, clamavit; רנה, ranah, clamor, cantus, and רנ, ron, also, a song.

It seems to be radically the same word that Warton refers to, as used in a MS. in the Harleian Coll.

————— Herkne to my ron. Hist. P. i. 32.

To RANE, v. a. To cry the same thing over and over.
Grete routis did assemble thidder in hy,
And roupit efter battell earnestfully;
The detestabyl weris euer in ane
Agane the fatis all they cry and rane.

Doug. Virgil, 228, 17.

To RANE ONE DOWN, v. a. To speak evil of one. S.
RANEGALD, adj. Acting the part of a renegado.

Rawmoud rebald, and ranegald rehator,

My lynage and forbeirs war evir leil.

Renegade, Edit. 1508. Kennedy, Evergreen, ii. 68.

To RANFORCE, v. a. 1. To reinforce; to add new means of defence. 2. To storm; to take by mere strength. S.
RANG, RANG, s. A row, a rank, S. A ruing of soldiers, a file, S. B.

Fr. rang, id. Sw. rang, C. B. rhenge, ordo, series.

RANG, pret. Reigned, S.

Thou rang in rest, and holilie thou held
Thy vowed word, and when th' invious wold
True vertue wrong, thy power thairs repeld.

V. RING, v. Garden's Theatre, p. 2.

RANGALE, RANGALD, RINGALD, RANGAT, s. 1. The rabble. This is the primary and most ancient sense.

On this wyss him ordanys be.
And syne assemblit his mengne,
That war vi hunder fechtand men,
But rangale, that was with him then,
That war as fele as thai, or ma.

Barbour, viii. 198. MS.

Sibb. is mistaken when he renders "of smal rangale," Barbour, of low rank. It literally signifies the low rabble.

For thai war on the lest party
Ane hundreth armyd jolyly
Of Knychtis and Sqwyeris, bot Rangale.

Wyntown, viii. 36. 35.

2. A crowd, a multitude, a mob, S. B.

His son and eik the prophetes Sibylla,
Amyddis of that sorte flokkis to the bra,
And grete routis with rangald in ledis he.

Doug. Virgil, 192, 10.

———— Syne all the ringald persewis
With grunden arrowis, amang the thik wod bewis.

V. REPAIR. Ibid. 18, 54.

R A N

This properly denotes a crowd composed of the vulgar.

A rangel o' the common fouk

In bourachs a' stood roun'.

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 1.

3. Anarchy, disorder.

Gud rewl is banist our the bordour,

And rangat rings, bot ony ordour,

With reird of rebalds, and of swane.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 116.

Here the word is metonymically used, the cause being put for the effect; as anarchy and tumult are the consequences of the rabble, or swains, getting uppermost.

Rudd. mentions ran and gild, sodalitiū, q. the running together or concourse of people. Ran, spoliatio, would have been more natural; q. a society for spoil. As the word is sometimes written ringald, he also mentions ring, because such crowds stand in a ring or circle. He might rather have referred to Su. G. ring, as signifying a circle of men, especially of those convened for judging in public concerns. Our ancestors, says the learned Ihre, held their public conventions in the open air, and a circle was formed, generally marked out by stones, where the judges and their assessors had their stations, within which the litigants, or those who consulted about public affairs, were admitted. Hence the phrase, A thing oc a ring, i. e. in the judgment and circle.

It would be stretching etymology too far, to suppose that this term had any connexion with Franc. rungall, L. B. roncalia, concilium, curia Gallorum. V. Jun. Goth. Gl. vo. Runa. Wachter, however, renders Galle convocatio.

But I have met with nothing that can be viewed as a satisfactory etymon of our term.

RANGE, s. 1. A company of hunters.

Quhen that the range and the fade on brede

Dynnys throw the grauis, sercheing the woddiss wyd,—

I sall apoun thame ane myrk schoure doun skale.

Doug. Virgil, 103, 49.

2. The advanced body of an army, which makes an attack, as distinguished from the staill, or main body.

The ost thai delt in diuerss part that tyde.

Schyr Garrat Herroun in the staill can abide,

Schyr Jhon Butler the range he tuk him till,

With thre hundir quhilk war of hardy will;

In to the woode apoun Wallace thai yeid.

Wallace, v. 33. MS.

Fr. rang, rangée, a rank, row, file. V. RANG.

To RANGE, v. n. To agitate water by plunging, in order to drive fish from their holds. S.

RANGEL, s. A crowd. V. RANGALE.

RANGEL, s. A heap, applied to stones. Syn. rickle. S.

RANGER, HEATHER-RANGER or RANGE. V. REENGINE, S.

RANIE, s. Perhaps abbrev. of the name Renwick. S.

RANK, adj. 1. Strong; used to denote bodily strength.

"In the mene tyme certane wycht and rank men take hym be the myddill." Bellend. Cron. B. v. c. 6. Viribus validiores, Boeth.

2. Harsh; applied to the voice, in the sense of hoarse.

———— Nane vther wise than as sum tyme we knaw

The flicht of birdis fordynnys the thik schaw;

Or than the rank vocit swannys in ane rabill,

Soundand and souchand with nois lamentabill.

Doug. Virgil, 379, 33.

q. Harsh to the ear. Both seem to be oblique senses of the E. word.

RANKRINGING, adj. Perhaps, wild; coarse. S.

RANNEL-TREE, s. Crook-tree. V. RANTLE-TREE. S.

RANNYGILL, s. A bold, impudent, unruly person. S.

R A N

RANNLE-BAUKS, s. 1. The Crook-tree. 2. The beam extending from one gable to another in a building to support the couples. S.

RANNOK FLOOK, a species of flounder. Sibb. Fife, p. 120.

Can this be an erratum for Bannock Flook, the name given in Ang. to that species which is reckoned the true Turbot?

To RANSH or RUNSH, v. n. To eat voraciously, and with noise, any fruit or roots; as, to ransh at an apple or turnip, employing the teeth as carvers. S.

To RANSHEKEL, v. a. To search carefully. S.

RANSIE, RANCIE, adj. Red; sanguine. A rancie-luggit carle, an old man with a high complexion. S.

RANSOM,* s. Extravagant price. "How can the puir live in thae times, when every thing's sic a ransom?" S.

RANSOUNE, RANSOWN, s. Ransom.

Fortrace thai wan, and small castellis kest down,

With aspir wappynnys payit thair ransoun.

Wallace, viii. 522. MS.

It is common in O.E.

— Som gaf ransoun after ther trespass.

R. Brunne, p. 329.

Fr. ranson, id. Loccenius, speaking of the redemption of captives, mentions the word ranson as comp. of ran, rapine, and son-a, to appease or redeem. Illud pretium redemptionis vulgò Ranson vel Ransun veteri voce Gotho-Teutonica appellatur, a raun vel ran rapina, et sona vel *sun*a, pacare vel placare, aut redimere. Sic in Legibus Gulielmi Regis Angliae, cap. lxii. Ran dicunt apertam rapinam; et in Lege Salica, cap. lxiv. Charaena, quasi abacti pecoris raptus, ut Gartiuf Sueticè abigeus. Est ergo Ranson, vel Ransun, idem quod compositionis aut redemptionis pretium pro rapto vel abrepto captivo. Antiq. Sueo-Goth. p. 133. V. also Ran, Ranzion, Wachter.

To RANT, v. n. To be jovial or jolly in a noisy way; to make noisy mirth. S.

RANT, s. 1. The act of frolicking or toying. 2. A merry-meeting, with dancing. S.

RANTER, s. A roving fellow. "Rob the Ranter." S.

RANTY, adj. Cheerful; gay; tipsy; riotous. S.

RANTING, adj. In high spirits; exhilarating. S.

RANTING, s. Noisy mirth; generally with drinking. S.

RANTINGLY, adv. With great glee. S.

To RANTER, v. a. 1. To sew a seam across so nicely that it is not perceived, S. Fr. rentraire, id. 2. To darn in a coarse manner, Ang. 3. Metaph. to attempt to reconcile assertions or propositions that are dissonant.

RANTY-TANTY, s. 1. A weed which grows among corn, with a reddish leaf, boiled along with langkail. 2. In Renfrews., the broad-leaved sorrel. 3. A kind of beverage, made from heath and other vegetable substances, formerly used by the peasantry. S.

With crowdy mowdy they fed me,

Lang-kail and ranty-tanty. Ritson's S. Poems, i. 182.

RANTLE-TREE, RAN-TREE, RANDLE-TREE, s. 1. The crook-tree, or that beam which extends from the fore to the back part of a chimney, out of reach of the fire, on which the crook is suspended, S. See Sup.

"I—clam out at the t'ither door o' the coach, as gin I had been gaen out at the lum o' a house that wanted baith crook an' rantle-tree." Journal from London, p. 4.

It is not the roof-tree, as Sibb. conjectures, but much lower. Qu. Sw. rundel, a round building, from the circular form of the chimney in many cottages?

Ran-tree, Fife; Roost-tree, Aberd. id.

R A P

"Rannel-tree, cross-beam in a chimney, on which the crook hangs; sometimes called Rannebauk; North." Grose's Prov. Gl.

2. "The end of a rafter or beam," Shirr. Gl.

3. Randle-tree. Metaph. a tall raw-boned person. S.

According to this definition, it may rather be from Isl. raund, Su.G. rand, extremity, and tilia, A.S. thil, a board, a plank, a joist. It is not improbable, that anciently it was a continuation, or the extremity, of the roof-tree; especially as Su.G. roeste, which seems to enter into the composition of the synon. term, roost-tree, denotes the upper part of a building which sustains the roof, the gable-end.

RANTREE, s. The mountain-ash. V. ROUNTREE.

RANVERSION, s. The act of eversion; overthrowing. S.

RANUNGARD, s. A renegade; an apostate. S.

RAP, RAPE, s. A rope. V. RAIP.

To RAP, v. n. To drop or fall in quick succession.

Thus, tears are said to come rapping down, when there is a flood of them, S.

It seems questionable if this be not the sense of the v. as used by Doug., where Rudd. renders it, raps, beats.

Als fast as rane schoure rappis on the thak,

So thik with strakis this campoun maist strang

With athir hand fele syis at Dares dang.

Virgil, 143, 12.

Now, by this time the tears were rapping down,

Upon her milk-white breast, aneth her gown.

Ross's Helenore, p. 70.

Su.G. rap-a, praeceps ruo, procido; Isl. id. hraparlíga, praecipitanter.

RAP, s. 1. A cheat; an impostor, S.

2. A counterfeit coin; a mere rap, S.

Allied perhaps to Su.G. rapp-a, vi ad se protrahere; or Isl. hroop, a term applied to very coarse cloth; Lanificium grossum, et crassa fila; G. Andr. p. 124.

RAP, s. In a rap, in a moment, immediately, S. See S.

Su.G. rapp, Belg. rap, quick, sudden. Hence,

To RAP aff a thing, to do it expeditiously, Loth.

Rape, O.E. occurs as a v., signifying "to hie, to hasten."

The folk that ascaped on Malcolme side,

To Scotland tham raped, & puplised it fulle wide.

R. Brunne, p. 90.

To RAP AFF, v. n. To go off hastily with noise. S.

To RAP FORTH, or RAP OUT, v. a. To throw out with noise, rapidity, or vehemence, S. See Sup.

The brokin skyis rappis furth thunderis leuin.

Doug. Virgil, 74, 13.

In a similar sense it is said, He rappit out a volley of oaths, S.

This may be also from Su.G. rapp, citus, velox.

RAP AND STOW. A phrase meaning root and branch. S.

RAPE, adv. Quickly; hastily.

Then Will as angrie as an ape,

Ran ramping sweiring rude and rape

Saw he none uther schift.

Cherrie and Slae, st. 64.

Chaucer uses rape, id. V. RAP, s. 3.

RAPEGYRNE, s. The name anciently given to the little figure made of the last handful of grain cut on the harvest field, now called the Maiden.

Statuit etiam primipilum unum reliquos praecedentem, in palo autumnalem nymphulam, quam Rapegyrne vulgus soleat appellare, ad altum gerentem, et ante cameram regis de lecto surgentis classicum subito fecit insonari, &c. Fordun. Scotichron. ii. 418.

Reaps, A. Bor. denotes "parcels of corn laid by the reapers to be gathered into sheaves by the binders;" GL. Grose. V. RAP.

R A R

It might be deduced from A.S. raep-an, to lead captive, and girn-an, to strive, q. to strive to carry off the prize; as the gaining of the Maiden is generally the result of a contest among the reapers. This handful of corn, as well as the feast at the end of harvest, is called the Kirn. A.S. rip, however, signifies harvest, and ripa, ripe, a handful of corn, hripe-man, a reaper: Su.G. repa, Moes.G. raup-jan, to pluck, applied to ears of corn, Mark ii. 23. The last syllable may have originally been kirn, or of the same meaning. But I can find nothing certain as to the etymon of this word.

A superstitious idea is attached to the winning of the Maiden. If got by a young person, it is considered as a happy omen, that he or she shall be married before another harvest. For this reason perhaps, as well as because it is viewed as a sort of triumphal badge, there is a strife among the reapers as to the gaining of it. Various stratagems are employed for this purpose. A handful of corn is often left by one uncut, and covered with a little earth to conceal it from the other reapers, till such time as all the rest of the field is cut down. The person who is most cool generally obtains the prize, waiting till the other competitors have exhibited their pretensions, and then calling them back to the handful which had been concealed. V. MAIDEN.

RAPLACH, RAPLACK, RAPLOCK, REPLOCH, s. 1. "Coarse woollen cloth, made from the worst kind of wool, homespun, and not dyed," Sibb. Gl. S.

Hence rapplack gray, reploch gray.

The udir cow he cleikis away,

With hir peur coit of rapplack gray.

Lyndsay, S.P.R. ii. 168.

Thair * * * clais, quhilk wes of reploch gray,

The vicar gart his clark cleik thame away,

Ibid. p. 65.

2. The skin of a March hare killed in December. S.

Sibb. observes, concerning Su.G. rapp, Indicat colorem qui inter flavum et caesium medius est, Lat. ravus. But the colour does not correspond. Perhaps rather from lock, cirrus, and rep-a, vellere, q. the lock of wool, as plucked from the animal, without any selection. Hence, RAPLOCH, adj. Coarse.

The Muse, poor hizzie!

Tho' rough an' raploch be her measure,

She's seldom lazy.

Burns, iii. 376.

RAPPARIS, s. pl. Wrappers. S.

To RAPPLE up, v. n. To grow quickly and rankly; applied either to quick vegetation, or to rapid growth in young people. S.

To RAPPLE up, v. a. To do work in a hurried and imperfect manner. One who spins fast and coarse, is said to rapple up the lint, S.B.

This is probably a dimin. from RAP aff, v. q. v.

RAPSCALLION, s. V. RABSCALLION. S.

RAPT, s. Robbery; rapine. S.

RAP WEEL. Hap weel, rap weel. Come of it what will; whatever be the result; hit or miss. S.

To RARE, RAIR, v. n. 1. To roar.

—Be the noyis, and the cry

Of men, that slayne and stekyd ware,

That thai herd heyly cry and rare,

Thai wüst, thare fays war by thame past.

Wyntown, viii. 26. 124.

2. To emit a continued loud report, like that caused by the cracking of a large field of ice. S.

Vnder thy feit the erd rair and trymbil

Thou moist se throw hir incantatioun.

A.S. rar-an, Belg. reer-en.

Doug. Virgil, 117, 15.

RARE, RAIR, s. 1. A roar; a cry.

R A S

Than with ane rair the eirth sall ryue,
And swallow them baith man & wyue:
Than sall those creatures forlorne
Warie the hour that thay war borne.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 173.

2. A loud report of any kind; as, a violent eructation, S. To RAS, v. a. To raise.

The Kyng of Frawns set hym to ras

And set a sege befor Calays.

Wyntown, viii. 40. 3.

To RASCH, v. a. To dash; to beat; to drive or throw with violence; synon. dusch.

"Suddanly rais ane north wynd, & raschit all thair schippis sa violently on the see bankis and sandis, that few of thaym eschapit." Bellend. Cron. B. xv. c. 14. Illisa ad scopulos classe, Boeth.

The lion, wounded by a shaft sticking in his breast, is described as —Begynnyng to rais his sterne mude,

Reiosit of the batal, feirs, and wod

Unabasitlie raschand the schaft in sounder.

Frangit, Virg.

Doug. Virgil, 405, 35.

The thrid with full gret hy with this

Rycht till the bra syd he yeid,

And stert be hynd hym on hys sted.

—And syne hyme that behynd hym wass,

All magre his will him gan he rass

Fra be hynd hym, thocht he had sworn,

He laid hym ewyn hym beforne.

Barbour, iii. 134. MS.

i. e. He dashed, or violently threw down, the man before him, who had leaped on behind him on his horse.

Race is used in the same sense by Henry the Minstrel. V. RACE.

"Than the bel veddir for blythtnes bleyttit rycht fast, and the rammis raschit there heydis to gyddir." Compl. S. p. 103.

Rudd. views the word as formed from the sound, in which he is followed by Sibb. With far greater propriety Lye derives raschand, as used by Doug., corresponding to frangit, Virg., from Isl. rash-a, frangere, perdere, corrumpere; Add. Jun. Etym. To this Germ. reiss-en, rumpere, is undoubtedly allied; riss, ruptura. As, however, rasch admits of a more general sense, it may perhaps be viewed as an active use of Su.G. ras-a, praecipiti lapsu ferri. Isl. ras, precipitancy in words, counsels, or actions.

RASCH, RASCHE, s. 1. Dash; collision.

Sa felloun sound or clap made this grete clasche,

That of his huge wecht, fell with ane rasche,

The erd dynlit, and al the cieté schuke,

So large feild his gousty body tuke.

Doug. Virgil, 305, 9.

2. Used to denote the clashing of arms.

Nane vthir wise Enee the Troyane here

And Daunus son Turnus samyn in fere

Hurllis togiddir with thare scheildis strang,

That for grete raschis al the heuinnis rang.

Frangit, Virg.

Ibid. 438, 12.

3. Rasch is still used for a sudden fall, Loth.

4. It is also used for a sudden twitch. S.

A.S. hraes, impetus. As the s. implies the idea of noise, perhaps Germ. rausch-en, stridere, crepitare, is allied.

To RASCH, RASHE, v. n. To make any forcible exertion; to rush, S.A.

"Incontinent rais ane terribyll clamour amang the Britonis fast raschand to harnes to resist this haisty affray." Bellend. Cron. Fol. 8. b.

"I am maid ane slaue of my body to ryn and rashe in arrage & carraige." Compl. S. p. 193.

"Young men—haue health, habilitie & strength of body to run and ride, rash here and there," &c. Rollocke on the Passion, p. 517.

R A S

"To rashe through a darg, to perform a day's work hastily," Gl. Compl.

This is deduced from "Fr. arracher, Teut. er-haschen;" ibid. But it is evidently synon. with A.S. raes-an, to rush, and may be viewed as of the same stock with Su.G. rasa mentioned above, which also signifies to run, to make haste; rask, Belg. ras, quick, expeditious.

RASCH, RASH, s. A crowd. S.

RASCH, RASH, adj. 1. Agile; active. 2. Hale; stout; spoken of persons advanced in life. A rasch carle, a man vigorous beyond his years, Loth. Tweedd. S.

This and the E. word are both from Su.G. rask, celer, promptus; praeceps. But ours has the primary sense of the Goth. term, whereas the E. adj. retains only its oblique signification. V. lhre in vo. Isl. hress, vegetus, robustus; Ol. Lex. Run. Raskinn, virilis, et vegetae aetatis, is probably from the same root.

RASCH, RASH, s. A rush, S.

"Than the scheiphyrdis vyuis cuttit raschis and seggis, and gadrit mony fragrant grene meduart." Compl. S. p. 65.

Lyndsay uses a very expressive emblem of security, of a proverbial kind, in which this term occurs.

Johne vponland bene ful blyith I trow,

Becaus the rasche bus keipis his kow.

Warkis, 1592, p. 272.

A.S. resc, juncus; Moes.G. raus, arundo.

RASCHEN, RASHEN, adj. Made of rushes; as, a raschen cap, a cap of rushes, a raschen sword, &c. S.B. See S.

"The straw brechem is now supplanted by the leather collar, the raschen theats by the iron traces." P. Alvah, Banffs. Statist. Acc. iv. 393.

RASHY, adj. Covered with rushes, S.

I mind it well, when thou could'st hardly gang,
Or lisp out words, I choos'd thee frae the thrang
Of a' the bairns, and led thee by the hand,
Aft to the tansy know or rashy strand.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 104.

To RASCH, v. n. To pour down; a raschin rain, a heavy fall of rain. S.

RASCH of rain. A sudden and heavy shower. S.

RASCHIT, RESCHIT, pa. Perhaps overrun; crossed. S.

To RASE out, v. a. To pull; to pluck. See Sup.

Tak thir dartis, and sone out of my case

That ilk reuengeable arrow thou out rase.

Doug. Virgil, 385, 10.

Rudd. deduces it from Fr. arracher, id. But it has more immediate affinity to Germ. reiss-en, trahere, rapere, Alem. raz-en. As it implies the idea of celerity, it may be traced to Isl. ras, Su.G. rask, celer, manu promptus.

RASH, s. A row; a series; a number. S.

To RASH, v. a. To drive with violence, &c. V. RASCH, v. a.

To RASH out, v. a. To blab; to publish rashly. S.

RASHEN, adj. Made of rushes. V. RASCHEN. S.

RASHMILL, RASHIE-MILL, s. A plaything made of rushes, turned round by a stream like a water-mill. S.

RASH-PYDDLE, s. A sort of net made of rushes. S.

RASIT, part. pa. Abashed; confounded; thrown into confusion.

Than Schir Gawyne the gay, gude and gracios,

—Melis of the message to Schir Golagrus,

(Before the riale on raw the renk was noght rasit.)

Gawan and Gol. ii. 7.

i. e. "He was not abashed before the nobles that formed a line."

This word, which is not in Mr. Pinkerton's Gl., may be from A.S. reas-an, to beat down violently; Su.G. ras-a, Isl. hras-a, to fall; q. cast down, as radically the same with the v. Rasch, q. v. Verel. renders Isl. rask-a, disturbare.

R A T

RASOUR, s. Venice stuff; smooth cloth of gold. S.

RASPS, s. pl. Raspberries, S. A. Bor.

RASSE, s. A strong current. V. RAISS.

RAT, s. 1. A scratch; as, a rat with a prein, a scratch with a pin, S.

2. Metaph. a wrinkle.

Alecto hir thrawin vissage did away,

—And hir in schape transformyt of ane trat,

Hir forrett skorit with runkillis and mony rat.

Doug. Virgil, 221, 35.

3. The track of a wheel in a road; cart-rat, S.B. rut, E.

Teut. reete, rete, rijte, rima, incisura, ruptura; canalis; rijt-en, findere, rumpere, lacerare. In sense 3., it might seem allied to Su.G. ratta, a path. But perhaps the root is rad, a line.

To RAT, RATT, v. a. 1. To scratch, S.

2. "To make deep draughts, scores or impressions, as of any sharp thing dragged along the ground," S. Rudd. V. the s.

RAT, s. A wart on any part of the body, S. more properly wrat, q. v.

RATCH, s. Apparently the lock of a musket.

Some had guns with rousty ratches,

Some had fiery peats for matches.

Colvil's Mock Poem, P. 1. p. 6.

RATCH, s. The little Auk, a bird; Alca Alle. S.

To RATCH, v. a. To pull or tear away so roughly or awkwardly as to cause a fracture. S.

RATCHEL, s. A hard rocky crust below the soil, S. synon. pan, till.

Fr. rochaille, rocks, rockiness.

RATCHELL, s. The stone called Wacken Porphyry. S.

RATCH'T, part. adj. Ragged; in a ruinous state. S.

RATE, s. A line or file of soldiers. V. RATT. S.

To RATE, v. a. To beat; to flog. S.

RATH, adj. and adv. Quick; quickly. V. RAITH.

RATH, adj. Strange; savage in appearance; a term applied to the owl when decked in borrowed feathers.

Than rewit thir ryallis of that rath man,

Bayth Spirituale and Temporale, that kennit the cas.

Houlate, iii. 18. MS.

Erroneously printed rach.

A.S. rethe, "savage, fell, rude," Somner.

RATHERLY, adv. Rather. S.

RATIHABITION, s. Confirmation; a forensic term, used in the form of Lawborrows.

L.B. ratihabitio, confirmatio; ratihabere, pro ratum habere, confirmare; Du Cange.

RATT, RATTE, s. A line; a file of soldiers. See Sup.

"I advanced myself, where there stood a number of gentlemen on horseback, where I found five ratt musketeers." Gen. Baillie's Acc. Battle of Kilsyth; Baillie's Lett. ii. 273.

"When our general assembly was set in the ordinary time and place, Lieutenant-Colonel Cottrell beset the church with some rattes of musketeers and a troop of horse." Ibid. p. 369.

Germ. rat, series, Su.G. rad, linea, ordo, Dan. rad af soldater, a rank or file of soldiers. Alem. ratte, rotte, turma militaris, L.B. rut-a; Schilter. Hence, I suppose, the soldiers of the City Guard of Edinburgh are to this day called The Town Ratts; although it would seem, that the phrase is now understood as if it had been ludicrously imposed. However low the term may have fallen in its acceptation, these gentlemen were certainly embodied at first for clearing the town of vermin. The word might be introduced from the Swedish discipline; as many of our bravest officers in the seventeenth century had served under the great Gustavus Adolphus.

To RATTLE,* v. n. To talk with volubility, loosely and foolishly, and with more sound than sense. S.

To RATTLE aff, v. a. To repeat or utter with rapidity. S.

RATTLE,* s. A smart blow; A rattle i' the lug. S.

RATTLE, s. V. DEDE-RATTLE. S.

RATTLE-BAG, s. One who bustles from place to place, exciting alarm on whatsoever account. S.

RATTLESCULL, s. 1. One who talks much without thinking, S. q. who has a rattle in his scull.
Gin Geordy be the rattle-scul I'm taul',
I may expect to find him stiff and baul'.
Shirrefs' Poems, p. 49.

2. A stupid, silly fellow. S.

The E. adj. rattle-headed is formed in the same manner.

RATTON, s. A rat, S. A. Bor. rottan, S. B. Shirr. Gl.
"Na rattonis ar sene in this cuntre; and als sone as thay ar brocht thair, thay de." Bellend. Descr. Alb. c. 9.
Thocht rattonis ouer thame rin, thay tak na cure,
Howbeit thair brek thair nek thair feil na pane.
Lyndsay's Warkis, 1572, p. 72.

This is also used in O. E.
With that ranne there a route of rattons at once,
And smal mise with hem, mo than a thousande.
P. Ploughman, A. iii. a.

Gael. radan, rodan, Hisp. raton, id. Teut. ratte, pl. ratten; hence ratten-kruyd, arsenic.

RATTON-FA', s. A rat-trap. S.

RATTON-FLITTING, s. The removal of rats in a body from any place they have formerly occupied. S.

RATTON'S-REST, s. A term used to denote a state of perpetual turmoil or bustle. S.

RATT RIME, s. Any thing repeated by rote, especially if of the doggrel kind, S.
With that he raucht me ane roll; to rede I begane
The royetest ane ragment with mony ratt rime,
Of all the mowis in this mold, sen God merkit man.
Doug. Virgil, Prol. 239, a. 53.

This seems the same with E. rote; probably connected with Isl. roedd, vox, raeda, sermo, whence raedin, loquax, dicaculus, G. Andr.; or perhaps rot-a, circumagere, because of the constant repetition of the same thing.

RATTS, s. pl. A term used both by Dunbar and Kennedy, which from the connexion, evidently signifies some such treatment of a malefactor, as when, according to our custom, his dead body is hung in chains.
Ill-fart and dryit, as Densman on the ratts.
Evergreen, ii. 50.

Quhen thou wryts Densman dryd upon the ratts, &c.
Ibid. 66. st. 1.

— The ravins sall ryve out baith thy ein,
And on the rattis sall be thy residence.
Ibid. 69. st. 22.

Germ. Belg. rad signifies a wheel. Arm. rat, Ir. rit, rhot, Alem. rad, Lat. rota, id. Germ. rad brechen, to break on the wheel. But the custom, to which the passages above quoted undoubtedly allude, is thus expressed in Belg. Op een rad gezet, "set upon a wheel, as murderers or incendiaries, after they are put to death;" Sewel. Alem. ruet, rota, crux, furca. V. Meruet, Schilter. Dunbar most probably alludes to this custom, in consequence of having seen it on the continent; especially as he speaks of a Densman, or Dane on the ratts. For it does not appear that it was known in Britain. Sw. raadbraka, to break on the wheel.

From the reply that Kennedy gives to Dunbar's accusation, it is unquestionable that the person represented as on the ratts, is a malefactor. For Kennedy endeavours to ridicule the allusion, by shewing that Densman is an honourable appellation. He plays upon the word, as it not only signifies a Dane, but is a term of respect generally used in Scandinavia. V. DENSMAN.

RAUCHAN, s. A plaid, such as is worn by men, S. mawd, synon. See Sup.

Perhaps a corr. of Gael. breacan, id. "The Highland plaid," says Lhuyd, "is still called Brekan, and is denominated from its being of various colours." Lett. to the Welch, Transl. p. 20. In Shirr. Gl. however riach plaidie is expl. "dun, ill-coloured plaid." The name may thus originate from the peculiar colour. Gael. riach, grey, brindled; riachan, any thing grey. Su. G. rya, however, signifies a rug, a garment of shag; gaunace, vestis stragula villosa; Ihre. This is evidently synon. with A. S. reowe, "loena, sagum; an Irish mantle or rugge, a soldier's cloak;" Somner.

RAUCHAN, adj. Applied to cloth of which the sailor's coats called Dreadnoughts are made. S.

RAUCHT, pret. v. Reached.
For hunger wod he gapis with throttis thre,
Swyth swelleand that morsel raucht had sche.
O. E. rauht, id. Doug. Virgil, 178, 27.

Botes he toke & barges, the sides togidere knytte,
Ouer the water that lage [large] is, fro bank to bank raucht itte. R. Brunne, p. 241.

A. S. rachte, porrigibat; from A. S. rac-an, raec-an, V. RAUGHT, s.

RAUCHTER, s. V. RACHTER. S.

RAUCHTIR, RAWCHTIR, s. An instrument of torture.
His yrins was rude as ony rawchtir,
Quhaire he leit blude it was no lawchtir.
Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 20.

Sibb. derives it from rauchtis, which he gives as synon. with rattis, rendering it the gallows. Dan. rakker signifies an executioner, Sw. skarp-raettare, id.

RAUCIE, RAUSIE, adj. Coarse. S.

RAUCKED, part. adj. Scratched, as with a nail. S.

RAUCKING, s. The noise of writing with a nail on a slate. S.

RAUCLE, adj. Rash; stout; fearless. V. RACKEL.

To RAVE, RAUE, v. a. To take by violence. See Sup.

"The Duke of York, thinking that he had better occasion to recover the crown, than Henry IV. had to rave the same from Richard II. and Leonell's posterity, joyned himself in this conspiracy of thir noblemen, by whose moyen and assistance he purposed to recover his right and heritage, withholden from him and his forbeers. Pitscottie, p. 59.

Su. G. raff-a, A. S. ref-an, id. V. REIFE.

RAVE, s. A vague report; an uncertain rumour; a story which is not very credible, S. B.
Fr. reve, a dream, which seems derived from Germ. raf-en, to rant; or Teut. rev-en, delirare, ineptire.

RAVE, pret. of v. to Rive. Tore; did rive or tear. S.

To RAVEL, v. n. To make up as a hard-twisted thread.

RAVEL, s. A rail. V. RAIVEL. S.

To RAVEL, v. n. To speak in an irregular unconnected manner; to wander in speech. S.

RAVELLED. A ravell'd hesp, a troublesome or intricate business, S. See Sup.

"You have got a revel'd hesp in hand;" Kelly's S. Prov. p. 375.

To red a ravell'd hesp, to perform any work that is attended with difficulty, S.

R A U

Gin ye hae promis'd what but now perform?
Amang us all a ravell'd hesp ye've made;
Sae now pit tee your hand, and help to red.

Ross's Helenore, p. 91.

RAVELS, RAIVELINS, s. pl. Ravelled or entangled thread.
RAVELLED BREAD. Wheaten bread baked up with the flour, bran, &c. just as it came from the mill. S.
RAVERY, s. Delirium; Fr. resverie.

"They will endeavour first to distemper this good man, and then, if he shall fall into ravery and loss his judgment, they will write down what he says." Wodrow's Hist.
ii. 387.

To RAUGH, v. a. To reach; to extend. S.
RAUGHT, s. The act of reaching, S.B.

"Thinks I, an' I sou'd be sae gnib as middle wi' the thing that did nae brak my taes, some o' the chieils might lat a raught at me, an' gi' me a clamihewit to snib me frae comin that gate agen." Journal from London, p. 8.

It seems properly to denote the act of reaching out one's hand to strike; from A.S. raec-an, to reach. V.
RAUCHT.

RAVIN, adj. Ravenous.

The lesty beuer, and the ravin bare.—

Fr. ravineux, id.

King's Quair, C. v. 6.

RAUISANT, part. pr. Ravenous; violent.

"Ande nou sen the deceis of oure nobyl illustir prince Kying James the fyift,—tha said rauisant volfis of Ingland hes intendit ane oniuist veyr be ane sinister inuentit false titil contrar our realme." Compl. S. p. 3.

Fr. ravissant, id. from ravir, to ravish.

RAUK, adj. Hoarse. S.

To RAUK, v. a. To stretch. V. RAK. S.

To RAUK, RAUK up, v. a. To search. S.

To RAUK out, v. a. To search out. S.

To RAUK up, v. a. To put in order. S.

To RAUK, v. n. To search; to rummage. S.

RAUKY, adj. Misty; the same with Rooky. S.

RAULLION, s. A rough, ill-made animal. V. RUL-
LION. S.

RAULTREE, RAELTREE, s. V. RAIVEL, or RAIL-TREE.

RAUN, RAWN, s. The roe of fish, S. See Sup.

From fountains small greit Nilus flude doith flow,
Even so of rawnis do mighty fishes breid.

K. James VI. Chron. S.P. iii. 489.

Johns. says that roe is properly roan or rone. Thus indeed the E. word is given by Skinner; but he expl. it as pl., and equivalent to roes, ova piscium.

Dan. raun, Teut. rogen eines fisches, Isl. hrogn, ova piscium. V. ROUN. Hence,

RAUNER, s. A name given to the female salmon, i. e.
the one which has the roe. The male is called a kipper, Loth. Tweedd.

RAUN'D, part. adj. Having roe. S.

To RAUNG, v. n. To range, especially in a military form.

And thai within, quhen that thai saw
That mengne raung thaim sua on raw,
Till thair wardis thai went in hy.

Barbour, xvii. 348. MS.

Edit. 1620, raying, i. e. arraying. Fr. rang-er, id. Sw.
rang, ordo, series.

RAUNS, s. pl. The beard of barley, S.B. synon. awns,
q. v.

RAUNTREE, s. The Mountain-ash. V. RAWNTREE. S.

RAUP, s. A three-pronged implement used in the country to break potatoes for supper. S.

R E A

To RAUP, v. a. To prepare potatoes in this manner. S.
RAW, adj. 1. Damp, and at the same time chill. A raw day, a day on which the air is of this temperature, S.

The word is used in this sense, E. But although Johns.
quotes several passages in which this is the obvious meaning, he merely expl. it, "bleak, chill;" whereas the predominant idea is that of moistness.

It corresponds to Su.G. raadt waeder, coelum humidum, from raa, madidus.

2. Unmixed, as applied to ardent spirits. Raw spirits, ardent spirits not diluted with water, S.

Su.G. raa, A.S. hreauw, crudus.

RAW, s. 1. A row; a rank, S. On raw, in order;
also, in line of battle. V. SEILDYN.

He driuis furth the stampand hors on raw

Vnto the yolk, the chariotis to draw.

Doug. Virgil, 230, 40

Ad juga cogit equos, Virg.

A.S. raewa, Alem. ruawa, id.

2. A kind of street, a row. V. REW. See Sup.

3. Apparently used to denote parallel ridges, or the ground of different proprietors lying in run-ridge, q
in rows. See Sup.

"Wha was misca' a Gordon on the raws of Strathbogie?" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 75.

RAWLIE, adj. Moist; damp; raw; as, a rawlie day. S.

RAWLY, adj. Not fully grown; not ripe. S.

RAWMOUD, adj. Expl. "beardless; simple."

Rawmoud rebald, and ranegald rehator.

Kennedy, Evergreen, ii. 68.

q. having a raw mouth.

RAWN, adj. Afraid; timid. S.

RAWN-FLEUK, s. The turbot. S.

RAWN-TREE, RAUN-TREE, s. The Mountain-ash. S.

To RAX, v. n. 1. To reach; to extend the bodily members, as one when fatigued or awaking, S.

Charles wha heard the cock had crawn,

Begoud to rax and rift. Ramsay's Poems, i. 270.

2. To make efforts to attain.

But naithing can our wilder passions tame,

Wha rax for riches or immortal fame.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 321.

3. To stretch; to admit of extension. S.

RAX, s. The act of stretching or reaching, S.

To tak a turn an' gi'e my legs a rax,

I'll through the land until the clock strike sax.

Morison's Poems, p. 118.

A. Bor. wrax, id. V. RAK, v.

To RAX, v. a. 1. To stretch; to extend, in a general sense. 2. To stretch out the body; as, "He raise and raxed him where he stood." 3. To reach; as,
"Rax me that hammer." S.

RAXES, s. pl. Iron instruments consisting of various links, on which the spit is turned at the fire; andirons, S. Ramsay writes Rax. See Sup.

It did ane good to see her stools,

Her boord, fire-side, and facing-tools;

Rax, chandlers, tangs, and fire-shools.

Poems, i. 228.

Denominated from the circumstance of the spit raxing, or extending, from the one iron to the other.

REA, s. The sail-yard. V. RA, RAY. S.

REA, s. Apparently, a fairy or demon. S.

REABLE, adj. Legitimate. S.

READ, s. A perusal; the act of reading. S.

R E A

READE, s. Perhaps, sceptre, or rood, cross. S.
 READ FISH. Fish in the spawning state. V. REID FISCH.

This denomination is evidently from Redd, spawn, q. v.
 READILY, * adv. 1. Probably.

"They are printed this day; readily ye may get them with this post." Baillie's Lett. i. 237.

2. Likely; naturally. S.

To READY, v. a. To make ready; as, to ready meat. S.

To REAK to, v. a. To equip; to fit out; to rig. S.

REAKES. To play reakes, to play tricks. S.

"The Lord set all our hearts rightlie on worke: for the heart of man in prayer is most bent to play reakes in wandering from God." Z. Boyd's Last Battell, p. 731.

To PATCH REAKS. To make up an intrigue. S.

REAL, REALE, adj. Royal. O.Fr. Hisp. id.

Brute—byggd in his land a towne,

Yhit reale and of gret renowne.

Wyntown, iii. 3. 78.

REALTÈ, REAWTÈ, RYAWTÈ, s. 1. Royalty.

—Na thare consent, of ony wys

Prejwdycyale suld be

Til of Scotland the realtè. Wyntown, viii. i. 62.

2. Royal retinue. 3. A certain jurisdiction. Syn.
Regality. S.

REAL, * adj. Eminently good; true; stanch. S.

REAL, adv. Eminently; peculiarly; i. e. very. S.

REAM, REYME, REM, s. Cream, S.

"Thai maid grit cheir of—reyme, flot quhaye, grene cheis, kyrn mylk." Compl. S. p. 66.

The term is used metaph. in the S. Prov.

"He streaks ream in my teeth,"—"spoken when we think one only flattering us." Kelly, pp. 136, 137.—"on your gab;" Ramsay.

Methenke this paines sweeter

Than ani milkes rem.

Legend, St. Margrete MS. Gl, Compl. p. 366.

Nor could it suit their taste and pride,

To eat an ox boill'd in his hide;

Or quaff pure element, ah me!

Without ream, sugar, and bohea!

Ramsay's Poems, i. 132.

A.S. ream, Isl. riome, Germ. rahm, id. The E., as in many other instances, has adopted Fr. creme, and laid aside the A.S. term. Even this, however, seems originally Gothic. Isl. krieme, flos, cremor, from krem-ia, macerare, liquefacere. Skinner derives Fr. creme from Lat. cremor.
 But it is most probable, that even the latter is of Scythian origin; as the more radical term is found in different Northern dialects.

To REAM, v. a. To cream; to take the cream from milk, S. Germ. rahm-en, id.

To REAM, REME, v. n. 1. Ready to ream, to be in a state of readiness for being creamed, S.

On skelfs around the sheal the cogs were set,

Ready to ream, and for the cheese be het.

Ross's Helenore, p. 77.

2. To froth; to foam. "Reaming liquor, frothing liquor," Gl. Shirr. A reaming bicker, &c. S. See S.

You too, lad, or I'm much mista'en,

Hae borne the bitter blast alane,

An' kend, what 'tis Grief's cup to drain,

Whan reamin owre!

Rev. J. Nicol's Poems, i. 87.

He merely ressaui the remand tais,

All out he drank, and quhelmit the gold on his face.

Doug. Virgil, 36, 48. MS.

Not remanent, as in print.

280

R E B

"Thus we say that ale reams, when it has a white foam above it;" Rudd. vo. Remand. V. TAIS.

REAMIN'-DISH, s. A thin shallow vessel, of wood or tin, used for skimming the cream off milk. S.

REAM-CHEESE, s. Cheese made from cream. S.

REARD, s. Noise; report. V. RARE and RAIRD. S.

REASON, s. Right; justice; Spenser, id.

"If they get reason, it's thought they are both undone;
 and none among us will pity their ruin." Baillie's Lett.
 i. 71.

"The Treasurer—required that his Grace would see justice done on him for libelling in such a place a prime officer of state. The Commissioner promised him reason."
 Ibid. p. 106.

REAVEL-RAVEL, s. A confused harangue; a rhapsody.

He making hands, and gown, and sleives wavel,

Half singing, vents this reavel ravel.

V. WAVEL.

Cleland's Poems, p. 107.

Belg. revel-en, "to rave, to talk idly, by reason of being light-headed; revelaar, a raver; reveling, a raving;" Sewel.
 Teut. ravel-en, delirare, ineptire; Kilian. The word is the same, in both forms; being a dimin. from Belg. rev-en, id.
 I am much disposed to think that reavel-ravel is originally the same reduplicated term which we now pronounce Reel-rall, q. v.; with this difference that the latter is used as an adv.

REAYER, s. A robber. V. REYFFAR.

REAYERIE, s. Robbery; spoliation. S.

REAVILL, s. The same with Raivel, a rail. S.

REAWS, s. pl. Royal personages; O.Fr. reaulx.

Na be na way the female

Suld be thare chese, gyve ony male

Of Reaws might fundyn be Worth to have that realtè. Wyntown, viii. 1. 103.

REBAGHLE, s. Reproach. S.

To REBAIT, v. a. To abate; to deduct from the price;
 Acts, Ja. IV. Fr. rebatt-re. See Sup.

Dan. rabbat, Teut. rabet, an abatement, rabatt-en, concedere partem pretii.

REBALD, s. A low worthless fellow, used as E. ribald.
 Rawmoud rebald, and ranegald rebatour.

Kennedy, Evergreen, ii. 68.

Fr. ribauld, Ital. ribaldo. These might at first seem derived from Lat. rebell-is. As the Fr. has borrowed a great deal from the Ital., and the Ital. retains many Goth.
 terms, perhaps ribaldo ought to be immediately traced to Isl. rifballdi, tyrannus, G. Andr. p. 197.; perhaps from rifa, rif, rapina, and balldr, potens, q. powerful by means of violence or robbery. Ihre deduces Su.G. ribalder, nebulo, from hrid, pugna, and balldr, audax, as originally denoting soldiers who could be kept under no proper discipline.

REBALDALE, REBALDAILL, s. The mob; the rabble.

—Thai, that war off hey perage,

Suld ryn on fute, as rebaldail.

Barbour, i. 103. MS.

Isl. ribbalder, a multitude of dissolute men. Fylgir oc
mikill fioldi ribballda; Magna etiam multitudo hominum dissolutorum et cacularum castra sequuntur; Verel. Ind.

REBALDIE, RYBBALDY, s. Vulgarly of conversation;
 ribaldry. See Sup.

Oft feynyeing of rybbaldy

Awalyeit him, and that gretly.

Barbour, i. 341. MS.

REBAT, s. The cape of a mantle.

—Rebats, ribbons, bands and ruffs,

Lapbends, shagbands, cuffs and muffs.

V. TUFF.

Watson's Coll. i. 30.

R E B

Fr. rabat, a piece of cloth anciently worn by men over the collar of the doublet, more for ornament than use. V. Dict. Trev. Here it is mentioned as a piece of female dress. Rabat de manteau, the cape of a mantle; Cotgr.

REBAWKIT, pret. v. Rebuked.
All birdis he rebaakit that wald him nocht bow.
Rebalkit, MS. Houlate, iii. 22.

Skinner derives E. rebuke from Fr. rebouch-er, to stop the mouth; Seren. from Arm. rebech, objurgare, and this perhaps from re, and Isl. beckin, insultatio.

REBBITS, s. pl. Polished stones for windows; a term in masonry, S.
Fr. rabot-er, to make smooth with a plane.

REBEGEASTOR, s. Apparently a severe stroke. S.
REBELLOUR, s. A rebel. S.
To REBET, v. n. To make a renewed attack.
Gret harm it war at he suld be ourset,
With new power thai will on him rebet.
Wallace, x. 202. MS.

Fr. rebat-re, to repel; to drive back again; or rabat-re, to draw back again.

To RE-BIG, v. a. To rebuild. S.
To REBOOND, v. n. 1. To belch. 2. To be in a squeamish state, or to have an inclination to puke. 3. Metaph. it is sometimes used to denote repentance. S.

REBOURIS, At rebouris, rebowris, adv. Cross; quite contrary to the right way.
— He his sistre peramours
Luffyt, and held all at rebouris
His awyne wyff, dame Ysabell. Barbour, xiii. 486.

In MS., evidently by mistake, that is used for at.
Bot Schyre Willame persaywyd then
His myschef, and hym send succowris,
Ellis had all gane at rebouris. Wyntown, ix. 8. 48.

Mr. MacPherson inadvertently refers to O.Fr. rebouts, repulse, rude denial; not observing that a rebours is used in the very sense which he has given to the S. phrase.

REBUNCTIOUS, adj. Refractory. S.
To REBURSE, v. a. To reimburse. S.
To REBUT, RABUT, REBOYT, v. a. 1. To repulse; to drive back.
Sais thou I was repulsit and driffe away?
O maist vnwourthy wicht, quha can that say?
Or me justely reprocheing of sic lak,
That I rebutit was and doun abak?
Doug. Virgil, 376, 35.

—The gud King gan thaim se
Befor him swa assemblyt be;
Blyth and glaid, that thar fayis war
Rabuty apon sic maner. Barbour, xii. 168.

In MS. thaim is erroneously written for him.

2. To rebuke; to taunt.
—A Howlat complend off his fethrame,
Quhill deym Natur tuk off ilk byrd but blame,
A fayr fethyr, and to the Howlat gaiff;
Than he throuch pryd reboytyt all the laiff.
Wallace, x. 138. MS.

“Rewis thow,” he said, “thow art contrar thin awin?”
“Wallace,” said Bruce, “rabut me now no mar, Myn awin dedis has bet me wondyr sar.”
Ibid. ver. 595. MS.

Fr. rebut-er is used in both senses. Menage derives it from but, mark, scope, E. butt, q. removed or driven from one's aim or purpose.

REBUTE, s. A repulse.
Lat be thy stout mynde, go thy way but lak,
VOL. II. 281

R E C

With ane mare strang rebut and driue abak.
Doug. Virgil, 375, 24.

RECAMBY, s. Interest, or a fine for delaying payment. S.
To RECANT, v. n. To revive from debility or sickness. S.
To RECEIPT, v. a. 1. To receive; to give reception to. 2. To shelter an outlaw or criminal; a juridical term. S.

RECEPISSE, s. A receipt. S.
RECESSE, s. Agreement; convention. S.

RECH, Wallace, iii. 193. Edit. Perth. V. RETH.
RECHAS, s. A term used in hunting.
The huntis thei hallow, in hurstis and huwes;
And bluwe *rech*as; ryally thei ran to the ro.
Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. i. 5.

Rechase, Skinner. “Hunter's music,” Gl. Pinkerton. It seems to be a call to drive back the game, from Fr. rechass-er, to repel.

RECHENG, RECHENGES, RECHENE, s. Perhaps, interest due for money borrowed; or exchange. S.

RECIPROQUILIE, adv. Reciprocally. S.
RECIPROUS, RECIPROUSS, RECIPROQUE, adj. Reciprocal.

RECK, s. Course; tract, Border.
“In the middle of the river [Tweed,] not a mile west of the town, is a large stone, on which a man is placed, to observe what is called the reck of the salmon coming up.” Pennant's Tour in S. 1769, p. 51. N.

Teut. reck-en, tendere, extendere, Su.G. rek-a, vagari, exspatiari.

RECKLE, s. A chain. V. RACKLE. S.
To RECOGNIS, RECOGNIS, RECOGNOSCE, v. a. To claim back land from a vassal, or feuar, in consequence of his having neglected to conform to the terms by which he holds his feu from his superior. Also, to acknowledge; to recognise. S.

RECOGNITION, s. The act of a superior in reclaiming heritable property, or the state into which the lands of a vassal fall, in consequence of any failure on his part which invalidates his tenure. S.

To RECOGNOSCE, v. n. To reconnoitre. S.
RECORDOUR, s. A wind instrument. See Sup.
The rote, and the recordour, the ribus, the rist.
Houlate, iii. 10. MS.

Sibb. expl. recordar, “a small common flute;” E. recorder.

To RECOUNTER, v. a. To demur to a point of law, or to contradict some legal positions of the adverse party; thus producing a wager or weir of law. S.

RECOUNTER, s. One who opposes the admission of a pledge in a court of law. S.

To RECOUNTER, v. a. To turn the contrary way; to reverse; to invert,—a technical term. S.

To RECOUNTIR, s. To encounter.
The awaward in that while
To recountir the first perile,
First than entrit in the pres. Wyntown, ix. 27. 396.

To RECOURSE, v. a. To rescue. S.
To RECRUE, RECREU, v. a. To recruit. S.

RECRUE, RECREW, s. A party of recruits for an army. S.
To RECULE, v. n. To recoil; to fall back; Fr. recul-er.
And he ful feirs, with thrawin vult in the start,
Seand the sharp poyntis, reculis bakwart.
Doug. Virgil, 306, 54.

To RECUPERATE, v. a. To recover; to regain. S.

RECURE, s. Redress; remedy; Fr. recours.
And by him hang thre arowis in a case.—
The third of stele is schot without recure.
King's Quair, iii. 22.

R E D

Chaucer uses the same term, expl. recovery. V. RES-COURS.

RECURELESSE, adj. Irremediable; beyond recovery. S. To RECUSE, RECUSS, v. n. To refuse. S.

To RED, REDD, REDE, REID. The v., written in one or other of these forms, is used in a variety of senses, which cannot all be easily referred to one origin; although some of them are intimately connected. I shall subjoin these different senses in that order which seems most natural; adding to each v. its derivatives. To RED, v. n. "To suppose; to guess;" Gl. Shirr. S.B. See Sup.

Although I have met with no other written example of this sense, it is undoubtedly very ancient. A.S. raed-an, araed-an, "to conjecture, to divine, to guess, to reed;" a word which to this day we use for explaining of riddles;" Somner. This sense is retained in Glouc. "At what price do you read this horse?" Gl. Grose, i. e. what, do you conjecture, was the price of it? Hence araed, a prophecy; raedels, a riddle, as such predictions were delivered in dark and enigmatical language; Alem. reda, an oracle; Teut. ghe-raeden, a prophet; vaticinator, expositor aenigmati; raed-en, Germ. rat-en, conjicere, divinare, hariolari. This term, in times of heathenism, was most probably used to denote the oracles delivered by priests.

To RED, REDE, v. a. To counsel; to advise, S. read, A. Bor.

O rede, O rede, mither, he says,
A gude rede gie to me;
O sall I tak the nut-browne bride
And let faire Annet bee?
— Ise rede ye tak fair Annet, Thomas,
And let the browne bride alane.

Lord Thomas, Ritson's S. Songs, ii. 188. 189.

The word is common in O.E.

Of help I haf grete nede, my werre is not alle ent,
To wite what ye me rede, I set this parlement.
R. Brunne, p. 283.

A.S. raed-an, Isl. rad-a, Su.G. raad-a, Teut. raed-en, Alem. rat-an, Germ. rat-en, rath-en, id. Moes.G. ga-ragi-noda, gave counsel, ragineis, a counsellor. Ihre supposes that g is used for d.

As the v. in A.S. Teut. and Germ., which signifies to counsel, is written in the same manner with that denoting conjecture and divination, it is probable that it was originally used to signify counsel, from the respect paid to the oracular declarations of the priests. Hence, REDE, adj. Aware; q. counselled. S.

REDE, REIDE, RAD, s. Counsel; advice, S.

The King, eftre the gret journé,
Throw rede off his consaill priué
In ser townys gert cry on hycht,
That quha sa clemyt till haf rycht
To hald in Scotland land, or fe,
That in thai xii moneth suld he
Cum, and clam yt.—— Barbour, xiii. 722. MS.
—And may you better reck the rede,
Than ever did th' adviser. Burns, iii. 213.

WILL OF REDE, consilii expers, destitute of counsel;
at a loss what course to take.

And quhen he wyst that he wes ded,
He wes sa wa, and will of reide,
That he said, makand iwill cher,
That him war lower that journey wer
Wdone, than he sua ded had bene.

Barbour, xiii. 478. MS.

Wyll of rede, Doug. Virgil, 61, 41.

R E D

A.S. Teut. raed, Isl. rad, Su.G. raad, Alem. rath, Germ. rat, id. Will of rede is purely Gothic. Su.G. willradig, inops consilii; a will-a, errare, quasi dicas, cujus incerta vagantur consilia; Ihre.

REDLES, adj. Destitute of counsel; as denoting the disorderly situation of an army surprised during sleep.

Redles thai raiss, and mony fled away;
Sum on the ground war smoryt quhair thai lay.

Wallace, viii. 361. MS.

In Edit. 1648 and 1673, reklesse; but not according to the MS.

A.S. raed-leas, rede-leas, consilii expers; also, praecept, "headlong, unadvised;" Somner. Su.G. raadloes, Isl. radlaus, id.

To REDE, v. a. To judge; to determine one's fate.

Off comoun natur the courss be kynd to fulfill,
The gud King gaif the gest to God for to rede.

Houlate, ii. 12. MS.

i. e. "Rendered up his spirit to God, that it might be judged by him."

A.S. raed-an, discernere, statuere, Germ. rat-en, constituere, ordinare; Moes.G. ga-raid, stipendium constitutum, A.S. raede, red, lex, decretum, statutum. Su.G. red-a is used in a judicial sense; causam suam agere; Ihre.

This sense is closely connected with that of giving counsel; because men, who act rationally, ask counsel, that they may form a judgment, and actually determine according to the propriety of the counsel which is given. Hence, probably,

REID, s. Used as synon. with weird, fate, lot.
Quhy hes thow thus my fatall end compassit?
Allace, allace, sall I thus sone be deid
In this desert, and wait nane other reid?

Palice of Honour, i. 5.

It may, however, signify, "know no other counsel."

To RED, REDE, READ, v. a. To explain, to unfold; especially used with respect to an enigmatical saying.

Red my riddle, is a phrase which occurs in old S. songs. In an Eng. copy of Lord Thomas, we find Come riddle my riddle, dear mother, he said.

Percy's Reliques, iii. 69.

This the learned editor supposes to be "a corruption of reade, advise."

"But ye maun read my riddle," she said;
"And answer my questions three;
"And but ye read them right," she said,
"Gae stretch ye out and die."

Minstrelsy, Border, iii. 276.

Su.G. raad-a, red-a, explicare, interpretari; Germ. rat-en, exponere, docere.

To red a dream, has a similar sense.

Last ouk I dream'd my tup that bears the bell,
And paths the snaw, out o'er a high craig fell,
And brak his leg.—I started frae my bed,
Awak'd, and leugh.—Ah! now my dream is red.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 9.

This sense, although nearly allied to that of giving counsel, may be directly traced to the primary one, of divining; as it was the business of him, who was supposed to possess a prophetic spirit, to expound what was obscure. Ihre accordingly views Su.G. red-a as synon. with A.S. araed-an, to prophesy. Somner, when explaining A.S. raed-an, to conjecture, says; "Hence our reading, i. e. expounding of riddles." In the same sense, S. we speak of reading dreams, A.S. raedan swaefan, somnia interpretari; of reading cups, reading fortunes, &c.

It would seem indeed, that A.S. raed-an, legere, (whence the E. v. to read, in its common acceptation,) primarily denoted what was considered as a supernatural power; and is therefore, as commonly used both in A.S. and E., to be viewed as bearing only a secondary sense. For its Isl. synonym, rada has this signification. Rada runer, Magiae secretas literas exponere. It was transferred to what must have been viewed by the unlearned as very difficult, the explanation of the poems of the Scalds, which were not only written in Runic characters, but generally in language highly figurative and enigmatical: Rada risur, Scaldorum carmina explicare. Hence radning, disciplina. V. Verel. Ind.

R E D

To REDE, REID, v. n. To discourse, to speak at large.

— Mekill off him may spokyn be.

And for I think off him to rede,

And to schaw part off his gude dede,

I will discryve now his fassoun,

And part off his condition. Barbour, x. 276. MS.

Sa did this King, that Ik off reid.

V. RADNESS.

Ibid. ix. 101.

It seems to be used in the same sense by Wyntown.

Or I forthire nowe procede,

Of the genealogi will I rede. Cronykil, ii. 10. Rubr.

Arbace als the kyng of Mede,

Of qwham before yhe herd me rede,

Ryflyd Babylon that yhere,

That Procas in Rome begowth to stere.

Ibid. V. Prol. 22.

Isl. raed-a, loqui. Menn raeddu um tha er vaener; Men speak of those who are graceful; Kristnisag, p. 140. This word is used in the same connexion with that in The Bruce. For it is also rendered sermocinari, Gunnlaug, S. Gl. Raeda um vid einn, in sermone cum aliquo tangere; Sw. raed-a, red-a, Germ. red-en, to speak, to discourse; bered-en, to persuade. The most ancient form of the v. is Moes.G. rod-jan, loqui.

This sense is nearly allied to that of explaining or unfolding. It might also seem to be radically the same term with that used to denote counsel. For, to speak, to discourse, is merely to bring forth the counsels of the mind.

REDE, s. 1. Voice.

The cler rede amang the rochis rang,

Throuch greyn branchis quhar byrdis blythly sang,

With joyus voice in hewynly armony.

Wallace, viii. 1188. MS.

Editors, not understanding this word, have used such liberties with the verse, as not only to change the meaning, but to make nonsense of it; as in Edit. 1648, 1763, &c.

The fresh river among the rocks rang.

2. Perhaps religious service.

Syne all the Lentren but les, and the lang Rede,

And als in the Advent,

The Soland stewart was sent;

For he coud fra the firmament

Fang the fische deid.

Houlate, iii. 5. MS.

From the mention of Lent and Advent in connexion, one might at first suppose that the month of March were meant; A.S. Hraed—, Hraeth-monath, id. so called, either from Rheda a goddess of the Saxons, to whom they sacrificed in this month; or from hraed, paratus, because by this time they made preparation for agriculture, navigation, and warlike expeditions, from which they rested during winter. Bede, who calls this Rhed-monath, suggests another derivation; from A.S. hreth, ferus, saevus, because of the storms that generally prevail during March. For this reason, it might seem that Holland might call it the lang rede; as its severe weather often retards the spring, and checks the ardour of the husbandman.

The term, however, appears rather to denote the multitude of religious services used in the church of Rome during Lent.

Both these senses are supported by ancient authorities.

R E D

Isl. roedd, raud, vox, loquela; raeda, sermo, a speech, a discourse; Fogur raeda, pulchra et placida oratio; Verel. Ind. Su.G. raede, Franc. reda, Germ. rede, id. A.S. raed is also rendered sermo. Lye quotes one example from Lib. Constit. p. 148. Raed weametta, sermonis iracundia. To RED, v. a. To loose, to disentangle, to unravel, S. redd, South E. id.

This being said, commandis he euery fere,

Do red thare takillis, and stand hard by thare gere.

Doug. Virgil, 127, 44.

This is the sense given by Rudd. It may, however, signify, to put their tacklings in order.

"Fools ravel, and wise men redd;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 26.

To RED one's FEET. To free one's self from entanglement; used in a moral sense. S.

To RED A RAVELL'D HESP. To unravel yarn that is disordered, S.; used also metaph. V. RAVELLED.

This corresponds to Sw. reda en haerfwa, to disentangle a skain.

To RED THE HEAD, OR HAIR. To comb out the hair, S.

This also is quite a Goth. idiom. Su.G. reda ut sit haar, crines pectine explicare; Isl. greida har sitt, id. For both Su.G. red-a and Isl. greid-a signify, explicare, extricare. V. Ihre in vo. p. 409. Hence,

RED-KAIM, REDDING-KAIM, RID-KAIM, s. A wide-toothed comb for the hair. V. KAIM. S.

Terms, when used figuratively, are generally transferred from the body to the mind. The contrary seems to be the case here. The v., which properly denotes the act of expounding, i. e. unravelling, what is hard to be understood, is transferred to any thing implicated in a literal sense.

To RED, REDD, REDE, RID, v. a. 1. To clear, to make way, to put in order, S.

And oure the wattyr, of purpos,

Of Forth he passyd til Culros:

Thare he begowth to red a grownd,

Quhare that he thowcht a kyrk to found.

Wyntown, v. 12. 1180.

Wyth swerdis dynt behuffis vs perfay

Throw amyddis our inemyis red our way.

Doug. Virgil, 329, 20.

In this sense Rudd. expl. the following passage.

Thys Dardane prynde as vycour thus in were

Sa mony douchty corpis has brocht on bere,

Amyd the planis ryddand a large gate,

As dois ane routand ryuere rede on spate.

Ibid. 339, 44.

But rede here seems not to be a v. but the adj. red, i. e. in such a state of inundation as to be highly discoloured.

The large wod makis plâcis to thare went,

Buskis withdrawis, and branchis al to rent,

Gan ratling and resound of thare deray,

To red thare renk, and rowmes thaym the way.

Doug. Virgil, 232, 25.

i. e. to clear their course; as we still say, to red the road.

Thus quhan thay had reddit the raggis,

To rounge thay wer inspyrit;

Tuk up thair taipis, and all thair taggis,

Furth fure as thay war fyrit.

Symmye & His Bruder, Chron. S.P. i. 360.

2. To clear in the way of opening; to free from any thing that stuffs or closes up; as, to red a syvour, to clear a drain, &c. S.

To RED, OR RED UP a house. To put in order, to remove any thing out of the way which might be a blemish or encumbrance, S.

—Anither forward unto Bonny-ha,

R E D

To tell that there things be redd up and braw.

Ross's Helenore, p. 125.

"Your father's house,—I knew it full well, a but and a ben, and that but ill red up." Statist. Acc. xxi. 141. N.

To RED up, also signifies, to put one's person in order, to dress.

Right well red up and jimp she was,
And wooers had fow mony. Ramsay's Poems, i. 273.

She's ay sae clean red up and braw,
She kills whene'er she glances. Ibid. ii. 205.

"To REDE MARCHES betwixt two contending parties, i.e. to fix the true boundaries of their possessions; and figuratively, to compose differences, to procure peace." Rudd. V. MERE, s. 2.

To REDD MARCHES, also signifies to clear up any controverted point by nice and accurate distinctions. S.

To RED up. To reprehend; to rebuke sharply; to scold. S.

To RED, REDD. By a slight obliquity, to separate, to part combatants, S. South E. id. Gl. Grose.

Heich Hutchoun with ane hissill ryss
To red can throw thame rummil. Chr. Kirk, st. 16.

"To rede two at a fray or quarrel, i. e. to separate them, which he who does very often gets (what we proverbially call) the redding stroak, i. e. a blow or hatred from both;" Rudd. To red a pley, S. To redd parties, id.

He held, she drew; for dust that day

Mycht na man se ane styme

To red thame. Peblis to the Play, st. 15.

"Gif it sall happen ony person or persons, to be hurt, slaine, or mutilate in redding, and putting sindrie, parties meetand in armes, within the said burgh of Edinburgh; they alwaies redding the saidis parties with lang weapons allanerly, and not be schutting of hagbuttes and pistols, at ony of the parties;—the saidis Provost and Baillies,—sall be nawaies called, troubled, persewed or molested criminallie, nor civilie therefore." Acts, Ja. VI. 1593. c. 184. Murray.

REDDER'S LICK. The stroke which one often receives in endeavouring to part combatants. S.

REDDER'S PART, REDDER'S BLOW. A blow or hatred from both parties. S.

REDDING-STRAIK, s. The stroke which one often receives in attempting to separate those who are fighting, S. See Sup.

Kelly improperly writes ridding stroke.

"He who meddles with quarrels, gets the ridding stroke," p. 159.

V. the v. It is also called "redding blow or redder's part;" Sibb. Gl.

REDD-HANDIT, adj. Clever, active, and neat-handed. S.

To red the cumber, id.

Up rose the laird to red the cumber,
Which could not be for all his boast;—
What could we doe with sic a number?
Fyve thousand men into a host.

Raid of Reidswire, Minstrelsy, Bord. i. 118.

"Red the cumber,—quell the tumult." Ibid. N.

Rid is used in the same sense; as, to rid a plea.

"This, I fear, be a proclamation of red war among the clergy of that town; but the plea, I think, shall be shortly rid." Baillie's Lett. i. 46. Hence, REDDER, RIDDER. 1. One who endeavours to settle a dispute, or to bring parties at variance to agreement.

2. One who settles a dispute by force of arms. S.

"One night all were bent to go [to England] as ridders, and friends to both, without riding altogether with the parliament." Ibid. p. 381.

The v., as here used, may be immediately allied to A.S. ge-raed-ian, Su.G. red-a, Isl. reid-a, Belg. reed-en, Germ.

R E D

be-reit-an, to prepare; Isl. rad-a, ordinare, in ordinem cogere. As E. rid, however, also signifies, to clear, it is questionable whether our red, in this sense, should not rather be traced to A.S. hredd-an. V. next v. Notwithstanding of the difference of form between hreddan, ahraeddan, and geraedian, as in many other Goth. and A.S. verbs, it is highly probable that they are not radically different.

But it merits observation, that there is an obvious affinity between red, as signifying to disentangle, and red, to clear. For A.S. geraedian, parare, is used with respect to the hair; Geraedde hire feax; Composuit crines suos; Bed. 3. 9. Hence it appears, from analogy, that g in Isl. greid-a, extricare, mentioned above, as used in the same sense, corresponds to A.S. ge, being merely the mark of the prefix, like Moes.G. ga. This intimate connexion between the verbs, as signifying to clear, and to disentangle, might induce a suspicion, that red, in all its senses, should be traced to that prolific root A.S. ge-raed-ian, parare, and its cognates; were it not that, in some of its significations, it retains a relation to the ideas of divination, prophecy, &c. which cannot well be referred to this as the root.

RED, REDD, s. 1. Clearance, removal of obstructions.

Beffor the yett, quhar it was brynt on breid,

A red thai maid, and to the castell yeid,

Strak down the yett, and tuk that thai mycht wyn.

Wallace, viii. 1075. MS.

In Edit. 1648, altered to path.

Reddin is used in the same sense by James I.

Thay thrang out at the dure at anis,

Withouttin ony reddin. Peblis to the Play, st. 14.

2. Order, S. Isl. raud.

3. Rubbish, S. V. OUTREDD. See Sup.

RED, REDD, part. adj. 1. Put in order; cleared; as, The house is redd, S. A.S. hraed, paratus.

2. Clear; not closed up; not stuffed. S.

3. Often used in the same sense with E. ready, S.B. 4.

Distinct; as opposed to confusion, either in composition or delivery of a discourse. One who delivers an accurate and distinct discourse, is said to be redd of his tale, S.B.

This is nearly allied to Su.G. redigt tali, oratio clara; A.S. hraede spraece, ready speech.

REDMENT, s. The act of putting in order; a redment of affairs, a clearance of disordered concerns. S.

REDSMAN, s. One who clears away rubbish; a term particularly applied to those who are thus employed in coal-pits, Loth.

To RED, v. a. 1. To disencumber; the same with E. rid; with the prep. of or from subjoined: part. pa. redd.

"Scho determinit presently to red him of his calamiteis, hir self of irksomnes, and hir adulterer from feir." Buchanan's Detect. C. iii. a.

"These and suche uther pestilent Papistes ceassit not to cast faggotis in the fyre, continuallie crying, Fordward upoun these Heretykes; we sall ance red this realme of thame." Knox's Hist. p. 129.

"The Congregation and thair Cumpanie,—sall remove thameselfis forthe of the said toun, the morne, at ten houris befor None, the 25th of Julii, and leive the sam voyde and redd of thame and thair said Cumpanie." Ibid. p. 153.

2. To save; to rescue from destruction. See Sup.

————— And quhen the man

Saw his mantill ly brynnand than,

To red it ran he hastily. Barbour, xix. 677. MS.

3. It is used as a reflective v. to remove, S.

Su.G. raedd-a, Dan. redd-er; A.S. hredd-an, ahraedd-an, Belg. redd-en, Franc. ret-en, Germ. rett-en, liberare, e periculo expedire; Isl. rad, salus.

R E D

REDDING, s. Rescue; recovery.

RED, s. Riddance.

For sum of thame wald be weil fed,
And lyk the quenis ladeis cled,
Thoch all thair barnes suld bleir.
I trow that sic sall mak ane red
Of all thair paks this yeir.

Maitland Poems, p. 282.

REDDINS, s. To hae reddins of any thing, to get clear of it.

RED, adj. Rid; free.

To RED, v. a. To overpower; to master; to subdue.

The fyr owt syne in bless brast;
And the rek raiss rycht wondre fast.
The fyr our all the castell spred,
That mycht na force of man it red.

Barbour, iv. 132. MS.

A.S. raed-an, regere, gubernare; Su.G. raad-a, Isl. rad-a, Alem. raet-an, Germ. rat-en, id. Isl. rad, potestas, victoria.

RED, adj. Afraid. V. RAD.

But Davie, lad, I'm red ye're glaikit;
I'm tauld the Muse ye hae negleckit.

Burns, iii. 375.

REDDOUR, s. Fear; dread; Rudd. makes it more properly "violence, vehemency."

And forther eik, sen thou art mad becum,
Ceis not for to pertrubil all and sum,
And with thy fellound reddour thame to fley,
The febil mychtis of your pepill fey,
Into batal twyis vincust shamefully,
Spare not for tyl extol and magnify.

Doug. Virgil, 376, 54.

Leg. felloun, as in both MSS.

Rudd. has mistaken the sense of the word, rendering it "violence, vehemency, stubbornness." He has not adverted to the language of Virg.

— Proinde omnia magno

Ne cessa turbare metu, atque extollere vires
Gentis bis victae.

Su.G. raedde, timor; raed-as, timere. Ihre observes that the A. Saxons have prefixed d, whence draed, E. dread. V. RADDOUR, under RAD.

RED, REDD, s. 1. Spawn. Fish-redd, the spawn of fish; paddock-redd, that of frogs, S. See Sup.

Germ. walrad, sperma ceti. Rad, according to Wachter, pro semine est vox Celtica. Boxhorn., in Lex. Antiq. Brit., rhith, genitale sperma. Sibb. vo. Paddow-redd, refers to Teut. padde-reck. (Kilian writes padden-gherack.) But there is no affinity.

2. The place in which salmon or other fish deposit their spawn, S.A.

With their snouts they form a hollow in the bed of the river, generally so deep, that, when lying in it, their backs are rather below the level of the bed. This is called the redd. When they have deposited their spawn, they cover it with sand or gravel. Some suppose that this is the reason of their being called Reid fische. But this is a mistake. V. REID FISCHE, and RUDE, s. 2.

To RED, v. n. To spawn, S.

REDE FISCHE. Salmon in the state of spawning. S.

RED, s. The green ooze found in the bottom of pools. S.

To REDACT, v. a. To reduce.

"That the Queen therefore was now returned, and they delivered of the fears of redacting the kingdom into a province, they did justly esteem it one of the greatest benefits that could happen unto them." Spotswood's Hist. p. 179. The word is also used by Wyntown.

Formed from the Lat. part. redact-us.

REDAITIN, s. A savage sort of fellow.

To REDARGUE, v. a. To accuse.

S. RED-BELLY, RED-WAME, s. The charr, a fish, S.B. Salmo Alpinus, Linn.

"Loch-Borley affords, in great abundance, a species of trouts called Red Bellies, and in Gaelic, Tarragan." P. Durness, Sutherland. Statist. Acc. iii. 579.

The Gael. name of the charr is written tar deargan, Ibid. p. 522. tarr dhiargan, or "the fish with the red belly;" Ibid. xiii. 513. Its C.B. name torgoch, as we learn from Pennant, signifies Red Belly. Zool. iii. 260.

"This lake abounds with charr, commonly called red wames." P. Moy, Invern. Statist. Acc. viii. 504.

For the same reason, the redness of its belly, in Sw. it is called roeding, and in Lapland raud. Faun. Suec. No. 124.

REDCAP, s. A name given by the vulgar to a spectre with very long teeth, believed to haunt old castles. S.

REDCOWL, s. A spectre believed to haunt churchyards. S.

Lord Soulis he sat in Hermitage castle,

And beside him old Redcap sly;

"Now, tell me, thou sprite, who art meikle of might,
The death that I must die."

"Redcap is a popular appellation of that class of spirits which haunt old castles. Every ruined tower in the South of Scotland is supposed to have an inhabitant of this species." Minstrely, Bord. ii. 360. 361.

REDCOAL, REDCOLL, s. Horse-radish. Syn. Rotcoll. S.

RED COAT s. A vulgar term for a British soldier, from the colour of his uniform. S.

RED COCK-CRAWING. A cant phrase for fire-raising.

REDDAND, s. The bend of the beam of a plough at the insertion of the coulter. S.

REDDENDO, s. The clause of a charter which states what duty a vassal is to pay to his superior. S.

REDE, adj. Apparently, fierce, furious, in the following passages.

Wallace commaund till all his men about,
Na Sotheron man at thai suld lat brek out;
Quhat euir he be reskewis off that kyn
Fra the rede fyr, him selff sall pass tharin.

Wallace, vii. 428. MS.

— The rede fyr had that fals blud ourgayne.

Ibid. ver. 470. MS.

I found this idea on the use of the synon. phrases bryme fyr, and woode fyr.

The bryme fyr brynt rycht braithly apon loft.

Ibid. ver. 439. MS.

— Nocht was lewyty mar,

Bot the woode fyr, and beyldis brynt full bar.

Ibid. ver. 512. MS.

A.S. reth, rethe, ferox, ferus, saevus; retha regn, a cruel rain, rethe stormas, violent storms. V. RADDOWRE.

REDE, s. The name given to some being, apparently of the fairy kind, S.A.

"The editor recollects to have heard the following [rude burlesque verses,] which he will not attempt to explain:

'The mouse and the louse, and little Rede,
'Were a' to mak a gruel in a lead.'

"The two first associates desire little Rede to go to the door, and 'see what he could se.' He declares that he saw the gay carlin (as the phrase is pronounced) coming,

'With spade, shool, and trowel,
'To lick up the gruel.'

"When the party disperse;

'The louse to the claith, and the mouse to the wa',
'Little Rede behind the door, and licked up a'."

Gl. Compl. 318.

This may possibly be allied to Isl. rad, a demon, or genius, a general name given to the genii supposed to preside over certain places; as skogs-rad, the genius of the wood, bergs-rad,—of the mountain, &c. from rad-a imperare.

R E D

Or rede may signify counsel : and the verses may be viewed as an apologue intended to show that a little wisdom or prudence, is preferable both to greater power, and to celerity in flying from apparent danger.

REDEARLY, s. Grain that has been heated. S.

REDENE, s. Apparently prose. S.

REDEVEN, s. Apparently the eve of Beltane. V.

REID-EEN. S.

To REDY, v. a. To make ready.

In a littar the King thai lay ;
And redyt thaim, and held thair way,
That all thair fayis mycht thaim se.

Barbour, ix. 171. MS.

Edit. 1620. grathed. O.E. id.

To Scotland now he fondes, to redy his viage.

A.S. ge-raed-ian, parare. R. Brunne, p. 315.

REDYMYTE, REDEMYTE, adj. Ornate ; decked ; beautiful ; Lat. redimit-us.

Heuinlie lyllyis, with lokkerand toppis quhyte,
Opynnit and schew thare creistis redemyte.

Doug. Virgil, 401, 23.

RED LAND. Ground that is turned up with the plough ; as distinguished from ley, or from white land, S. See Sup.

“There’s mair whistling than red land ;” a proverbial phrase, borrowed from its being customary for ploughmen to whistle, while engaged at the plough, for keeping both themselves and their cattle in good spirits. It is applied to those who make more noise than progress, in any thing in which they are employed ; or who, in discoursing, have more sound than sense.

REDLINS, adv. Readily ; sometimes perhaps, probably.

RED-NEB, s. The Kidney-bean potato. S.

To REDOUND, v. a. To refund. S.

RED SAUCH, s. A species of willow. S.

REDSCHIP, s. Furniture ; apparatus. S.

RED-SHANK, s. Apparently used as a nickname for a Highlander, because of his bare legs ; or from the buskins which he wore, made of undressed deer hide, with the hair outwards. See Sup.

I answer, with that Red-shank sullen,

Once challenged for stealling beef ;

I stole then [them] from another thief.

Colvil’s Mock Poem, P. ii. 52.

RED-SHANK, s. The Dock when it begins to ripen. S.

RED-WARE, s. Sea-girdles, S.

“On deep shores, as at the sea-holms of Aukerry, near Stronsa, and of Rouskholm, near Westra, great quantities of red-ware, or sea-girdles, (F. digitatus), are collected with long hooks at low water.” Neill’s Tour, pp. 28, 29.

RED-WARE COD. Asellus varius vel striatus Shonfeldii, the redware codling. Sibb. Fife, p. 123.

“The wrasse—frequents such of our shores as have high rocks and deep water, and is very often found in company with what we call the red-ware cod.” Barry’s Orkney, p. 389.

RED WARE FISHICK. The Whistle fish, Orkn.

“The Whistle Fish, (gadus mustela, Lin. Syst.) or, as it is here named, the red-ware fishick, is a species very often found under the stones among the sea-weed.” Barry’s Orkney, p. 292.

RED-WAT, adj. Wetted, so as to become red. S.

REDWATER. 1. The name given to the murrain in cattle, S.

“The Murrain, or Red Water, is not frequent among Highland cattle, except in some of the Western isles.

R E E

The animal, when seized with it, loathes its food, becomes extremely feverish, while the urine, which it passes, is thick, clammy, and red.” Prize Essays, Highl. Soc. S. ii. 209.

2. The name of a disease in sheep. S.

RED-WOOD, s. The name given to the reddish and more incorruptible wood found in the heart of trees. S.

REE, s. 1. Half-drunk ; tipsy, S.

For many a braw balloon we see,—

Until their noddle twin them ree,

And kiss the causey.

R. Galloway’s Poems, p. 23.

2. Crazy ; delirious ; wild ; outrageous, S.

Sibb. gives it as the same with ray, which he derives from A.S. reth, ferox. Isl. hreifd-r, elatus, ebrius, temulentus. Perhaps the term is merely Fr. reve, softened into ree, from rev-er, to rave. A keen etymologist might trace it, however, to Heb. רַוַּח, ravah, inebriatus est.

IN A REE. In a state of temporary delirium. S.

REE, s. “A small riddle, larger than the sieve ;” Gl.

Sibb. Belg. rede, id. See Sup.

Ree, E. is used as a v., to sift, to riddle.

REE-RUCK, s. A small rick of corn, in form of a stack, put up that it may more speedily dry. S.

REE, A SHEEP-REE, s. A fold surrounded by a wall of stone and feal, in which sheep are put for shelter. S.

REE, s. A wreath ; rees o’ snaw, wreaths of snow. S.

To REE, v. a. To wreath. S.

REE, REEGH, s. 1. A square enclosure from a river, or the sea, for the purpose of receiving small vessels.

2. The hinder part of a mill-dam. 3. Laxly, a harbour. S.

To REED, REDE, v. a. 1. To fear ; to apprehend.

Rank Kettren were they that did us the ill ;

They toom’d our braes that swarming store did fill :

And mair than that, I reed our herds are ta’en.

V. RAD. Ross’s Helenore, p. 29.

2. To suppose ; to guess. S.

REED, conj. Lest, S.B. See Sup.

It sets them weel into our thrang to spy,

They’d better wish’t, reed I sud raise a fry.

Ross’s Helenore, p. 18.

This is most probably the imperat. of the v. Reed, q. v.

REED, CALF’S REED. The fourth stomach of a calf. S.

REEDING PLANE. A kind of carpenter’s plane. S.

REED-MAD, adj. Distracted. Syn. Reid-wod. S.

REEFD, part. pa. Rumoured. S.

REEFORT, RYFART, s. A radish, S. Raphanus sativus, Linn. Fr. raifort, horse-radish, literally, strong radish. See Sup.

— Sybows and ryfarts, and carlings.—

V. CARLINGS. Ritson’s S. Songs, i. 211.

REEFU’, adj. This seems to be merely the S.B. pron. of rueful.

The herds came hame and made a reefu’ rair,

And all the braes rang loud with dool and care.

Ross’s Helenore, p. 99.

REEGH, s. A harbour, Loth.

REEK, s. Trick ; wile. S.

REEKER, s. Something exceeding the common size. S.

To REEK FOORTH, v. a. To rigg out, S. to reek out.

V. REIK OUT.

REEK HEN. 1. A hen bred in the house. 2. The exaction of a single hen from each house, or reck, Shetl. S.

“On one estate in the parish, the barony of Alford, the cottars and subtenants pay for their houses and firing, to the landlord only, a reek hen, and one day’s shearing in harvest.” P. Alford, Aberd. Statist. Acc. xv. 451.

REEKIE, AULD REEKIE. A designation given to Edinburgh at first by those who, from a distance, observe its smoky appearance. S.

REEKIM, REIKIM, REIKUM, s. A smart blow; a stroke that will make the smoke (or dust) fly. S.

REEK-SHOT, s. A term applied to the eyes, when they become sore, and water, without apparent cause. S.

To REEL. To Reel about, v. n. 1. To go to and fro in a rambling noisy way. 2. To romp. 3. To go through the figure of a dance. S.

REEL, REIL, REILL, s. 1. A rapid motion in a circular form. S.

2. The name given to a particular kind of dance, S. "A threesom reel, where three dance together." Rudd. vo. Rele.

3. A confused or whirling motion. 4. A confused motion of whatever kind; a turmoil. 5. A disorderly motion; transferred to the mind. 6. A loud sharp noise; rattling. 7. Bustle; hurry. S.

REEL-ABOUT, s. A lively, romping person. S.

Either from Su.G. rull-a, Arm. ruill-a, in gyrum agi, because the dancers whirl round; or Isl. ryl-a, miscere, because they mix with each other.

To REEL, v. n. To roll. V. REIL. S.

To REEL, v. n. To travel; to roam. S.

REEL-FITTIT, adj. Having the feet so much turned inwards, that when a person walks, he crosses his legs, and makes a curve with his feet. S.

REELIE, s. A diminutive from E. reel. S.

REEL-RALL, adv. Topsy-turvy; in a disorderly state, S. See Sup.

Perhaps from Isl. ryl-a, miscere, riall-a, vagatim ferri; or ragl-a, E. reel, reduplicated with the usual change of the vowel. V. REAVEL-RAVEL.

REEL-TREE, s. The piece of wood to which the top of a stake is fixed in an ox's stall, Fife. Revel-tree, Border. q. rail-tree.

To REEM, v. n. "To reem in one's noddle," to haunt the fancy, producing unsettledness of mind. S.

REEMIS, REEMISH, s. A rumbling noise. V. REIMIS. S.

REEMOUS, s. A falsehood. S.

To REENGE, v. n. 1. To move about rapidly, with great noise and bustle; to range. 2. To emit a clattering ringing noise, like that of articles of crockery, or pieces of metal falling. S.

REENGE, s. Such a clattering noise. S.

RENGER, s. One who ranges up and down. S.

To REENGE, v. a. 1. To rinse. 2. To clear out the ribs of the grate; to poke them. S.

REENGE, s. A handful of heath firmly tied together for rinsing. Ranger, Heather-ranger. S.

REENGE, s. The semicircular seat around the pulpit in a church, in which the elders were wont to sit, or those who presented children for baptism. S.

REEPIN, s. A very lean person or animal. S.

REEPAN, s. A low-made wretch; a tale-pyete. S.

To REESE, REEZE, v. a. To extol; to praise. See S.

He lap bawk-hight, and cry'd, "Had aff;"

They rees'd him that had skill.

V. RUSE. Ramsay's Poems, i. 262.

REESE, s. A reese o' wind, a high wind; a stiff breeze. S.

REESIE, adj. Blowing briskly; as, "a reesie day." S.

REESIN, REEZIN, adj. Vehement; strong; forcible; as,

"a reezin wind," a strong dry wind: A reesin fire, one that burns briskly, with noise and flame, S. perhaps from Teut. raes-en, to burn.

REESK, REYSK, s. 1. A kind of coarse grass that grows on downs, Fife.

"The E. side of the parish—consists of corn-fields, some of a pretty good soil, others very poor, interspersed with heath, and, near the sea, with large tracts of ground producing a coarse kind of grass, called by the country people reesk." P. Aberdour, Fife. Statist. Acc. xii. 576.

A.S. risc, a rush; Isl. hrys, virgultum.

2. Waste land which yields only benty grasses, such as Agrostis vulgaris, and Nardus stricta, Aberd. See S.

3. A marshy place, where bulrushes and sprats grow, Ang. V. REYSS and RISE. See Sup.

REESKIE, adj. Abounding with grass of this kind. S.

REESLIN' DRY, adj. So dry as to make a rustling sound. S.

To REEST, v. a. To arrest. V. REIST. S.

REESTED, part. pa. Smoke-dried. V. REIST, v. S.

REESTIE, adj. Restive. V. REIST, v. S.

To REEVE, v. n. 1. To talk with great vivacity and constancy, S.

It rather conveys the idea of incoherence in discourse, and may therefore have a common origin with E. rove; Teut. rev-en, delirare, ineptire.

2. In the part. it is applied to the wind. A reevin wind, a high wind, S.

REEVE, s. A pen, or small enclosure for confining cattle, Aberd.

"That he has heard there were fishers' houses for white-fishers upon the top of the Ram's Hillock;—but they were all pulled down before the deponent entered to the fishing, and turned into a reeve or pinfold for James Finlay's bestial." State, Leslie of Powis, &c. 1805. p. 113.

This is radically the same with RAE, and perhaps also with WREAD, q. v.

REEVE, pret. of v. Rive. Burst, or bursted. S.

To REEZE, v. a. To pull one about roughly. S.

To REEZE behind, v. n. To let wind go. S.

REEZIE, adj. Light-headed in consequence of drinking; elevated with drink; a dimin. from Ree, S.A. S.

— The reezie lads set hame,

Wi' friendly chat.—

V. REE. Rev. J. Nicol's Poems, i. 158.

REEZIE, adj. Fiery; applied to a horse when he is inclined to whisk his tail and plunge. S.

REEZLIE, adj. Applied to ground that has a cold bottom, producing coarse grass. S.

To REFE, v. a. To rob. V. REIF.

REFECKIT, part. pa. Repaired; renewed; become plump.

Als bestiall, thair rycht courss till endur,
Weyle helpyt ar be wyrkyn off natur,
On fute and weynge ascendand to the hycht,
Conserwed weill be the makar of mycht;
Fischeis in flud refeckit rialye
Till mannys fude, the world suld occupye.

Wallace, iii. 9. MS.

This is the reading, instead of resectit, Perth Ed.; O.Fr.

refaict, repaired, renewed; also, made plump; Lat. refect-us.

In Ed. 1648, restorteth; in a later one, resorteth. Some early Editor had substituted restorit for refectit, as being better understood.

REFEIR. To the refeir, adv. In proportion, S. perhaps from O.Fr. raffiert, convient, Gl. Rom. Rose.

To REFER, v. a. To defer; to delay; to put off. S.

REFF, s. Spoil. V. REIF.

R E H

To REFOUND, v. a. To charge to the account of. S.
 REFOUNDIMENT, s. Reimbursement; act of refunding. S.
To REFRANE, v. a. To retain; to hold in. S.
 REFT UP, part. pa. Lifted up, or snatched up. S.
 REFUT, s. Shift; expedient; means of deliverance.

Sum feblȳt fast that had feill hurtis thar,
 Wallace tharfor sichit with hart full sar.
 A hat he hynt, to get wattir is gayn,
 Othir refut as than he wȳst off nayn.

Wallace, ix. 971. MS.

In Ed. 1648, changed to refuge, which, indeed, expresses the idea, as it is from the same stock. But it is refut in MS. Fr. refuite, evasion, avoidance, from refuir, to fly, to shun.

REFUISS, s. Refusal. S.
 REFUSION, s. The act of refunding. S.
 REGALIS, s. Districts with privileges of regalities. S.
 REGALITY, REGALITÉ, s. l. A territorial jurisdiction granted by the king, with lands given in liberam regalitatem; and conferring on the persons receiving it, although commoners, the title of Lords of Regality.
 2. The territory or district over which this right extended. S.

REGENT, s. l. A professor in an university, S.
 2. One who taught a class in a college without a formal appointment to a chair. S.

"At first there were three regents in the arts, Alexander Geddes, a Cistercian monk, Duncan Bunch, and William Arthurlie.—Besides teaching and presiding in disputations omni die legibili, they lived within the college, eat at a common table with the students of arts, visited the rooms of the students before nine at night, when the gates were shut, and at five in the morning; and assisted in all examinations for degrees in arts.—There was no salary for this office for many years; and the fees, paid by the hearers, were very small." University of Glasgow, Statist. Acc. xxi. App. p. 10.

L.B. Regens, Professor, qui docet in Academiis, Gall. Regent, Professeur. Occurrit in Litteris ann. 1330, pro Univers. Oxoniense, apud Rymer. Du Cange.

To REGENT, v. n. To discharge the duty of a Professor in a university. S.

REGENCY, s. A professorship in a university. S.

REGENTRIE, s. A regency in a kingdom. S.

To REGISTRATE, v. a. To register. S.

REGISTRATE, part. pa. Registered. S.

REGRESS, s. Legal recourse upon. S.

REGRET,* s. A complaint; a grievance. S.

To REHABILITAT, v. a. The same as Rehable. S.

REHABILITATIOUN, s. The act of restoring to former honours or privileges; a forensic term. S.

To REHABLE, REABILL, v. a. To restore; to reinstate; a forensic term.

Thus he who has a sentence of attainder taken off is said to be rehabled. The term is also applied to one born in bastardy, who is legitimated.

"Gif ane bastard, legitimat and rehabled in his life-time, makis ane testament lauchfullie: the King thereby is excluded fra all richt and intromission with his moveable gudes." Skene, Verb. Sign. vo. Bastardus.

"King Robert incontinent maryit Elizabeth Mure lemmen afore rehersit for the affection that he had to hir barnis, that thay mycht be lawchful and reabilit be virtew of the matrimony subsequent," Bellend. Cron. B. xvi. c. 1. Ut legitimos redderet; Boeth.

Fr. rehabilit-er, L.B. rehabilit-are, in integrum restituere.

REHATOURE, REHATOR, s.

R E I

Now lat that ilk rehatoure wend in hy,
 The blak hellis biggingis to vesy,
 Vnder the drery depe flude Acheron.

Improbis, Maffei. Doug. Virgil, 467, 53.

Rudd. conjectures that it signifies, "mortal enemy," from Fr. rehair, to hate extremely. Dunbar uses the phrase bawd rehatour, Evergreen, ii. 60. and Kennedy, in his reply, ranegald rehatour, ibid. p. 68.

Conjecture might supply various sources of derivation; as Ital. rihauita, revenge, regattare, to contend, to put every thing in disorder, reatura, guilt. But both the determinate sense and etymology are uncertain.

REHERSS, s. Rehearsal. S.

To REHETE, v. a. To revive; to cheer.

With kynde contenance the renk couth thame rehete.
 Chaucer, id. Fr. rehait-er. Gawan and Gol. iv. 13.

REJAG, s. A repartee. S.

To REJAG, v. n. To give a smart answer. S.

REIBIE, adj. Thinly formed; spare; slender. V. RIBIE. S.

REID, REDE, s. A calf's reid, the fourth stomach of a calf, used for runnet or earning, S. Fr. caillette. See S.

"Caille signifies curdled; and hence the French have given that as a name to the fourth stomach, because any milk that is taken down by young calves is there curdled." Monro's Compar. Anatomy, iii. 388.

It seems to be the same word that occurs in Sir Tristrem, p. 31.

To the stifles he gede,
 And even ato hem schare;
 He right al the rede;
 The wombe away he bare.

This is rendered small-guts, Gl.

Teut. roode, stomachi appendix; et echinus, bovis ventriculus, a rubedine dictus; omasum; Kilian. V. RODDIKIN.

To REID, v. n. To discourse. V. REDE, v.

REID, adj. Red, S.B. reed, Cumb. A.S. read. See Sup.
 The greyss woux with the blud all reid.

Barbour, xii. 582. MS.

REID FISCHE. Fish in a spawning state, S.

"It is—forbiddin be the King, that ony Salmound be slaine fra the Feist of the Assumptioun of our Lady, quhill the Feist of Sanctandrow in winter, nouthur with nettis na cruvis, na nane vther wayis vnder the pane put vpone slayaris of Reid fische." Acts, Ja. I. 1524. c. 38. Edit. 1566. Read fish, Edit. Skene. Reid fische, Ja. VI. 1581. c. 111. Ed. Murray.

"At the time of spawning, the sides of the fish become of a very red colour, and when the spawning is over, the white colour entirely disappears, the belly becomes livid, and the sides are all streaked over with a sooty or black colour. The salmon in these states are termed in our acts of Parliament, Red and Black Fish; and a chief design of these acts is to prevent the destruction of the fish when they are of these colours, which never happens but in the spawning season." Dr. Walker, Prize Essays, Highl. Soc. S. ii. 364.

REID, s. Necessary preparation; fitting out. S.

REYD, s. A road for ships. V. RADE. S.

REID-DAY. 1. A day about the middle of September (14th or 15th) before which the wheat is generally sown. On the eve of this day the hart and the hind are believed to meet for copulation. 2. The 3d day of May. V. RUDE-DAY. 3. Also applied to the 7th of December. S.

REID-EEN, s. The evening preceding the 3d day of May; Reide-een, synon. V. RUDE-DAY. S.

REID ETIN. The name of a Giant, or monster, used by nurses to frighten children. V. EYRTYN.

REID HAND, a phrase used in our laws, denoting the marks of blood found on a murderer.

— "He sould not be lattin frie, albeit he offer pledges for him;—gif he is takin with reid or hait hand of slauchter." Quon. Att. c. 39. s. 2.

— Cum rubro vel recenti manu. Lat.

"It is ordained, that the manslayer be punished with death, if taken with reid hand, on the very day on which he is arrested." Acts, Ja. I. c. 100. Ed. 1566.

The term seems used improperly, with respect to "ane man taken with reid hand, with ane sheip, or muton, or with ane calfe." Skene, Cap. Crimes, c. 13. s. 9. i. e. when he is seized in the act of carrying off any beast that he has stolen.

REID-HUNGER, s. The rage of hunger. S.

REID-HUNGERED, adj. In a ravening state from hunger. S.

REIDSETT, adj. Placed in order.

Thus Schir Gawayn, the gay, Gaynour he ledes,
In a gleterand gide, that glemed full gay,
With riche ribaynes reidsett, ho so right redes,
Rayled with rybees of rial aray.

Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. i. 2.

Mr. Pinkerton gives this as not understood. But it is an A.S. phrase. Ge-rad sett-en, in ordine ponere; Teut. ge-reyd, Su.G. rad*, ordo. V. Ihre, vo. Rad, p. 373. Saetta i rad, to set in a row.

REID-WOD, RED-WOD, adj. 1. In a violent rage, maddened with anger, S. See Sup.

Will ran reid-wod for haist,
With wringing and flinging,
For madness lyke to mang.

Cherrie and Slae, st. 67.

2. Furious, distracted; in a general sense.

My muse sae bonny ye describe her;—
Gin ony higher up ye drive her,
She'll rin red-wood.

Hamilton, Ramsay's Poems, ii. 336.

Sibb. derives it from A.S. reth, Isl. reide, ferox, asper, and wod, q. v. The Isl. word, (reid-ur, Verel, iratus, Su.G. wred, Isl. reide, ira,) is the most natural etymon. For our term seems originally to signify, furious with rage.

To REJECK, REJECT, v. a. 1. To refer for decision. S.

2. To impute; to ascribe.

REIF, REFE, s. 1. An eruption of the skin, S. A. Bor. reefy, scabby; Gl. Grose. 2. In some places the itch is, by way of eminence, called the reif, S. See Sup.

A.S. hreoƿ, scabies, scabiosus, leprosus; Alem. ruf, riob, the leprosy; Su.G. rufwa, the scurf of a wound; Belg. roof, a scab or scurf; A.S. heofod hrieftho, capitis scabies, q. the head-reif. The leprosy is sometimes called hwite-hrieftho, the white reif. This denomination may be radically allied to Su.G. rifw-a, Germ. reib-en, to scratch; Su.G. klada, scabies, being formed from kla, to scratch, and Germ. kratza, scabies, from kratz-en, synon. with reib-en and kla.

As A.S. hreoƿ also signifies callosus, whence E. rough; an ill-natured Scot, in return for the many compliments paid to his country on this subject, might feel disposed to say, that the ancient E. had borrowed the very term which denotes roughness from the prevalence of this cutaneous disease among them.

To REIFE, REYFF, v. a. To rob, to take with violence.

Crystyne thai ar, yone is thar heretage,
To reyff that croune that is a gret owtrage.

Wallace, vi. 291. MS.

"Gif anie man—enters within any mans land without his licence; and reifes—meat fra his men & tenants: he sall for that wrang pay aucht kye to the Lord of the ground." Stat. Dav. II. c. 11. s. 4.

A.S. reaf-ian, Isl. hreif-a, Su.G. rifw-a, Moes.G. raub-jan, id.

REIF, REIFF, REFF, s. 1. Robbery; rapine.

"The thieves and broken men, inhabitants of the saidis Schirefdomes, and utheris boundis of the marches of this realme, foirnentis the partis of England, not onlie committis daylie thieftis, reiffis, heir-schippes, murtheris, and fyre-raisingis, upon the peaceable subjects of the countrie: bot als takis sindrie of them, deteinis them in captivity as prisoners, ransoumis them, or lettis them to borrowis for their entrie againe." Acts, Ja. VI. 1567, c. 21. Murray.

2. Spoil; plunder.

The King gert be depertyt then
All hale the reff amang the men.

Spraith, Edit. 1620.

Barbour, v. 118. MS.

A.S. reaf, Germ. raub, Sw. roof, praeda, spoliolum; Isl. rif, rifa, rapina.

REIF. Foulys of Reif. Ravenous or carnivorous fowls. S.

REYFFAR, REFFAYR, REIFFAR, REAVER, REUER, s. A robber; used to denote one who lives by depredation, whether by land or sea.

Thow reyffar king chargis me throw cass,
That I suld cum, and put me in thi grace.

Wallace, vi. 378. MS.

The Rede Reffayr thai call him in his still.—

The Rede Reiffar commaundyth thaim to bid,
Held out a gluff, in takyn of the trew.

Reaver, river, Edit. 1648.

Ibid. ix. 87. 168. MS.

Yone fals se reuer wyl leif in sturt.—

Doug. Virgil, 219, 19.

"Reavers should not be ruers;" S. Prov. "They who are so fond of a thing as to snap greedily at it, should not repent that they have got it." Kelly, p. 284.

A.S. reafere, Su.G. roefware, id.

REYFLAKE, RIUELAK, s. Rapine. S.

To REIK, v. a. To reach, S. A. Bor.

Reik Deianire his mais and lioun skyn.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 94, 4.

Reik to the man the price promyst all cryis.

Ibid. 140, 29.

Belg. reych-en, Teut. rech-en, A.S. recc-an, Su.G. raeck-a, id. Our v. is also used like E. reach, in a neuter sense. V. RAK, v. 1.

To REIK out, v. a. 1. To prepare for an expedition; to fit out, S. See Sup.

Reek foorth occurs in this sense.

"Notwithstanding of al his great armie, quhilke was so lang in reeking foorth,—hee findeth the wind more nor partie, as the carcages of men and shippes, in al coastes, dois testifie." Bruce's Eleven Serm. Q. 8. b.

2. To dress, to accoutre.

It is radically the same with E. rig, which Johnson fantastically derives from rig or ridge. The common origin seems to be Sw. rikt-a, Moes.G. riht-an, Germ. richt-en, ordinare, instruere; if not A.S. wrig-an, velare, to cover.

To REIK, v. n. To smoke, S.

A.S. rec-an, Sw. riuk-a, rock-a, id. Some have traced this word to Heb. רִיק, reek, emptiness. V. RAK, s. 2.

REIK, REEK, REK, s. 1. Smoke, S. A. Bor. reek.

"The reik, smeuk, and the stink of the gun puldir, fylit al the ayr maist lyik as Plutois paleis had been birnand in ane bald fyir." Compl. S. p. 65.

The fyr owt syne in bless brast,

And the rek raiss rycht wondre fast.

Barbour, iv. 130. MS.

Reek is used by Shakspeare in the same sense. But he seems to have borrowed it from the North of E.

2. Metaph., a disturbance, a tumult.

R E I

Thair was few lordis in all thir landis,
Bot till new regentis maid thair bandis.
Than rais ane reik or euer I wist,
The quhilk gart all thair bandis brist.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 271.

A reik in the house, is a phrase still used in the same sense, S.

"It is a soure reek, where the good wife dings the good man;" S. Prov. "A man in my country coming out of his house with tears on his cheeks, was ask'd the occasion; he said, There was a soure reek in the house; but, upon farther inquiry, it was found that his wife had beaten him." Kelly, p. 186.

3. Metaph. a house or habitation. S.

A.S. rec, Isl. reikr, Dan. reuke, Su.G. roek.

To GAR CLAISE GAE THROUGH THE REIK. To pass the clothes of a new-born child through the smoke of a fire, to ward off from the infant the fatal influence of witchcraft. S.

REIKIE, adj. 1. Smoky, S. See Sup.

2. Vain, empty; metaph. used.

"All the joys which are heere, are but reckie pleasures, purchased with teares, wherewith the eyes of men are made bleared." Z. Boyd's Last Battell; p. 511.

REEKINESS, s. The state of being smoky. S.

REIK HEN, REIK FOWL. 1. A hen bred in the house. 2. The exaction of a single hen from each house or Reik. S.

REIK, s. "A blow; variation of Rak," Gl. Sibb.

To REYKE, v. n. To range. V. RAIK.

REIKIM, s. A smart stroke or blow. V. REEKIM. S.

To REILE, RELE, v. n. To roll. "To gar one's ene reil, to make his eyes reel, rowl, or roll," Rudd.

To pik thaym vp perchaunce your ene wil reile.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 66, 44.

Bot with the preis we war reilit of that stede.

Ibid. 53, 33.

"Ye never saw green cheese, but your een reel'd;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 84.; addressed to those who are supposed to be of a greedy or covetous disposition, still wishing to have a part of what they see.

Rudd. views reel, roll, and rowl, as all originally the same. I know not if reile has any affinity to Isl. roel-a, lentè et vagè ferri. This seems rather the root of E. reel, to stagger. But this is not materially different from the other terms. For what is reeling but rolling, in a certain sense?

To REYLE, REWL, v. n. To snarl up like a hard-twisted thread. V. RAVEL, v. S.

REILIEBOGIE, s. A confusion; a state of tumult or disorder. S.

REILING, s. 1. Confusion; bustle.

All the wenchis of the west

War up or the cok crew;

For reiling thair nicht na man rest,

For garray, and for glew.

Peblis to the Play, st. 2.

2. A loud clattering noise, S. synon. reissil. V. REEL-RALL.

REILL, s. A turmoil. V. REEL. S.

REIME, s. Realm; kingdom.

That wes ane semely syght,

In ony riche reime.

Gawan and Gol. iv. 20.

REIMIS, REEMISH, s. 1. Rumble. 2. The sound caused by a body that falls with a rumbling or clattering noise. 3. A weighty stroke or blow. S.

"She tumbled down upo' me wi' sik a reemis, that she gart my head cry knoit upo' the coach door." Journal from London, p. 3.

R E I

As she's behading ilka thing that past,

With a loud crack the house fell down at last;

The reemish put a knell unto her heart.

Ross's Helenore, p. 64.

This seems merely the S.B. pron. of Rummyss, q. v. Isl. rym-ia, however, signifies to bellow or roar, A.S. hrem-an, hrym-an, id. A. Bor. reem, to cry aloud.

To REIMIS, v. n. To make a loud rumbling noise. S.

REIM-KENNAR, s. Perhaps, a skald or poet, or rather one who knew how to quell the power of evil spirits. S.

REIND, s. A reind of spwnis; perhaps, a case of spoons.

REYNGIT, part. pa. Surrounded with a ring. S.

REINYEIT, adj. Striped; corded. S.

To REIOSE, v. a. To possess; to enjoy.

"Thay wer profoundly resolutit to haue aliance with the Pichtis, and to gif thair dochteris in mariage, vndir thir condiciounis, ylk ane of thaym sall reiose in tyme cumyng al thay landis quhilkis thay reiosit afore the mariage." Bellend. Cron. Fol. 4. b.

Fr. rejou-ir, to re-enjoy.

To REIOURNE, v. a. To delay; to put off. S.

REIOURNING, s. Used apparently in the sense of delay. S.

REIRBRASSERIS, s. pl. Armour for defending the back of the arms.

"Uthers simpillar—haue—a pesane with wambrasseir is and reirbrasseir is." Acts, Ja. I. 1429. c. 134. Edit. 1566.

From rear or Fr. arriere, behind, and brassart, a defence for the arm, from bras, brachium. V. WAMBRASSEIRIS.

To REIRD, RERDE, v. n. 1. To make a loud noise; to resound.

— Vp thay rasit ane cry

That rerdis to the sternes in the sky.

Doug. Virgil, 324, 25.

The wod resoundis schil, and euiry schaw

Schoutis agane of thare clamour and dyn,

The hillis reirdis, quhill dynlis roke and quhyn.

Ibid. 252, 18.

2. To break wind, S.

3. It seems also used actively, as signifying, to cause to make a crashing noise.

— The feirs wyndes ye se,

Zepherus, Notus, and Eurus all thre

Contrarius blaw, thar bustuous bubbis with bir

The woddis reirdis, baith elme, aik and fir

Ouerturnis to ground.

Doug. Virgil, 53, 1.

This use is improper. For the language of Virg. is, stridunt silvae.

Rudd. deduces this and the s. from A.S. reord, lingua, "as it seems originally to have denoted the clamour of tongues." It is far more natural to derive it from A.S. rar-ian, Teut. reer-en, fremere, rugire, mugire, vociferare.

REIRD, RERDE, s. 1. Clamour; noise; shouting.

Syne the reird followit of the younkis of Troy.

Doug. Virgil, 37, 12.

— The Troianis rasit ane skry in the are,

With rerde and clamour of blythnes, man and boy.

Ibid. 300, 29.

2. The act of breaking wind, in whatever way; from the sound emitted, S.

3. A falsehood, a mere fabrication, especially when it proceeds from a principle of ostentation, S.B.

This may be borrowed from the idea of emitting wind, as a lie sometimes receives the latter designation. Or, it may be an oblique use of A.S. reord, sermo, loquela; reord-ian, sermocinari, q. to amplify in narration.

R E I

REIRDE, s. Perhaps a loud report, from Rair; or a spring from E. v. to rear. S.

REIRDIT, part. pa. Reared.

Syne war thai war of ane wane, wrocht with ane wal,
Reirdit on ane riche roche, beside ane riveir.

Gawan and Gol. i. 19.

REISES, s. Brushwood, pl. of Rise or Reise. S.

REISHILLIN', part. adj. 1. Noisy. 2. Forward, prompt. S.

To REISK, v. a. and n. To scratch so as to occasion a noise; a variety of Risk, q. v. S.

REYSS, s. pl. That kind of coarse grass that grows on marshy ground, or on the sea-shore.

Thai trewit that bog mycht mak thaim litill waill,
Growyn our with reyss, and all the sward was haill.

Wallace, vi. 713. MS.

Edit. 1648. rispe. V. RESP, REESK, and RISE, 2.

REISS, adj. Of or belonging to Russia. S.

To REISSIL, v. n. To make a loud clattering noise, as if one were breaking what is handled, S.

Teut. ryssel-en, A.S. hrisl-an, crepere, strepere; Su.G. rast-a, crepitare. Seren. derives the A.S. v. from Su.G. hrist-a, rist-a, to shake, especially used to denote the sound made by the concussion of arms. This is evidently from the same fountain with Moes.G. hris-jan, quater, concutere. E. rustle is nearly allied; but it does not convey the idea of so loud a noise.

To REISSIL, RISSLE, v. a. To beat soundly.

"S. He risl'd their rigging with rungs, i. e. cudgell'd or bang'd them soundly," Rudd. Addit. to Gl. vo. Hirsill.

It seems doubtful, however, whether this be not rather a dimin. from Su.G. ris-a, virgis caedere, from ris, a rod or twig.

REISSIL, REISLE, s. 1. A loud clattering noise. 2. A blow; a smart stroke, S. See Sup. V. REMYLLIS.

To REIST, v. a. To dry by the heat of the sun, or in a chimney, S. Reistit bufe, smoked beef, S.B. A reistit haddock, one that is dried. See Sup.

Reistit and cryud, as hangit man on hill.

Dunbar, Evergreen, ii. 57.

"The said Stewart receives thir dewties in miell and reistit mutton, wyld foullis reistit, and selchis." Monroe's West. Isles, p. 36.

My best beloved brother of the band!

I grein to sie thy sillie smiddy smeik.

This is no lyfe that I leid up-a-land

On raw rid herring reistit in the reik.

Montgomerie, Chron. S.P. iii. 500.

Dan. rist-er, to broil or toast; ristet, broiled or toasted.

REISTER, s. A kipper, or salted and dried salmon. S.

To REIST, v. n. 1. To wait for another; with the prep. on added.

And on Volscens alanerly he reistis,

Thocht round about with inemyis he preist is.

Moror, Virg.

Doug. Virgil, 292, 12.

Lat. rest-are, id.

2. To become restive. Thus a horse is said to reist on the road, S. Reasted, tired, A. Bor. Gl. Grose. See S.

In cart or car thou never reestit;

The steyst brae thou wad hae fac't it.

Burns, iii. 144.

3. Applied to the drying up of a well.

And there will be plenty o' broo,

Sae lang as our wall is na reested.

Jamieson's Popular Ball. i. 313.

REIST, s. To Tak the Reist. 1. To become restive; to refuse to go forward; applied to a horse. 2. Applied to a person, who, after proceeding so far in any business, suddenly stops short. S.

R E L

REIST, s. Rest.

To Orodes the hard reist dois oppres

The cald and irny slepe of deithis stres.

Quies, Virg.

Doug. Virgil, 346, 17.

REIST, REYST, s. l. The iron socket in which the bolt of a door rests.

Apoun the postis also mony ane pare

Of harnes hang, and cart quheles grete plenté,—

Of riche cieteis yettis, stapyllis and reistis,

Grete lokkis, slottis, massy bandis square.

Doug. Virgil, 211, 33.

2. Sibb. renders reistis, door hinges.

3. That on which a warlike instrument is supported.

Ane Inglissman saw thair chiftayne wes slayn,

A sper in reyst he kest with all his mayne,

On Wallace draiff, fra the horss him to ber.

Wallace, v. 260. MS.

As muskets, when first used, were supported by what was called a rest, the custom seems to have been borrowed from what was formerly practised in the use of the lance or spear.

"Long spears and lances were used by the Saxons and Normans, both horse and foot, but particularly by the cavalry of the latter, who in charging rested the butt end of the lance against the arçon or bow of their saddle; the mail-armour not admitting the fixture of lance rests, as was afterwards practised on the cuirass.—A lance rest was a kind of moveable iron bracket, fixed to the right side of the cuirass, for the purpose of supporting the lance." Grose's Military Antiq. ii. 275.

REIST, s. The instep of the foot. S.

To REIST, REEST, v. a. To arrest. He reisted his furniture, he laid an arrest on his furniture. S.

REISTER CLOK. A freebooter or brigand's cloak. S.

REITHE, adj. Keen; ardent. S.

REIVE, s. The name of an ancient Caledonian fort. S.

REK, s. Smoke. V. REIK.

To RELE, v. n. To roll. V. REILE.

To RELEISCH, v. n. To take a wide course; to go at large.

The larkis loude releischand in the skyis

Louis thare lege with tonys curious.

Doug. Virgil, 403, 31.

Fr. relasch-er, to let go, to enlarge. Perhaps it is descriptive of their music, as we say S., to let go, or gae, i. e. to raise a tune.

RELEVANT, adj. Sufficient to warrant the conclusion, whether in reference to a libel or to a defence. S.

RELEVANCY, s. The legal sufficiency of the facts stated, in a libel, or in a defence, to infer punishment or exculpation; both forensic terms. S.

To RELEVE, v. n. To raise; to exalt; to promote.

Flawndrys in hys dayis wes

Relevyd till ane Erldwme

Wyth custymabil honoure and fredwme.

Fr. relev-er, to raise, to lift up. Wyntown, vi. 10. 25.

To RELEVE, v. n. To reassemble; to form anew into one body.

His men relewit, that douchty was in deid,

Him to reskew out off that felloun dreid.

Wallace, v. 829. MS.

Relewit and releiffit are used in the same sense.

The Scottis men than relewit to giddir fast.

Ibid. ver. 972. MS.

In Edit. 1648, the passage runs;

The Scottish men they ran together fast.

The fleand folk, that off the feild fyrst past,
In to thair king agayne releiffit fast.

Ibid. vi. 605. MS.

—Thay that dreuin war abak and chaist
Releuis agane to the bargane in haist.

Doug. Virgil, 391, 10.

Fr. relev-er is mentioned in Dict. Trev. as synon. with ramasser, colligere, and with assembler, colligere in cumulum, coacervare.

To RELY, v. a. To rally.

Tharfor comfort yow, and rely

Your men about yow rycht starkly.

Barbour, xiii. 371. MS.

He releyt to him mony a knyecht. Ibid. ii. 401. MS.

Skinner renders Fr. rallier, q. re-alligare. But it seems merely re-aller, q. to go again, i. e. to unite after being parted.

REMANENT, adj. Other.

S.

REMANER, s. Remainder.

S.

To REME, v. n. To foam; to froth. V. REAM.

To REMEID, v. a. To remedy.

"All makes for the ruin of this isle; and I see yet no mean to remeid it." Baillie's Lett. i. 51.

REMEID, REMEED, REMEAD, s. 1. Remedy; amelioration. 2. Remeid of Law, Remedy of Law; formerly applicable to the obtaining of justice by appeal from an inferior to a superior court.

S.

REMEID, s. Alloy of a peculiar description.

S.

To REMEIF, v. a. or n. To remove.

S.

REMEMBRIE, s. Remembrance; recollection.

Sic fantasie on hir I set

The fainer I wald hir foryet,

Remembrie grew the mair.

Burel, Watson's Coll. ii. 47.

To REMENT, v. a. To remember; to recollect.

My spreit supirs and sichs maist sair

Quhen I rement me euer mair

How godles men begins,

For till associat them sels,

With sic as pietie repels.

Burel, Watson's Coll. ii. 48.

Fr. ramentevoir, id. ramentu, remembered.

REMIGESTER, s. A smart stroke.

S.

REMYLLIS, s. pl. Blows.

Quhen thai had remyllis raucht,

Thai foirthocht that thai faucht.

Houlate, iii. 16.

Teut. rammel-en, Su.G. raml-a, tumultuari. This word seems formed from the v., in the same manner as reissil, a blow, from the v. Reissil, which is synon. with rammelen. Reissil primarily signifies noise; and, secondarily, a blow, because of the sound emitted by it.

To REMORD, v. a. 1. To have remorse for; Fr. remord-re. Lat. re and mordere.

In sum part than he remordyt his thocht,

The Kingis commaund becauss he kepyt nocht.

Wallace, x. 9. MS.

2. To disburden the conscience of any thing that may be the cause of remorse.

Wallace to God his conscience fyrst remord,

Syne comfort thaim with manly contenance.

Wallace, iv. 590.

Edit. 1648—His confidence couth remord.

To RENCHEL, RENSHEL, v. a. To beat with a stick. S.

RENCHEL, RENSHEL, s. A term used to denote what is tall and thin; as, "He's but a lang renchel." S.

RENDAL, RENNAL, RENNET, RUN-DALE, s. A term used with respect to the division of land, equivalent to run-rig, S.

"Another great improvement on the state of this country would be a better division of the small farms, which are parcelled out in discontinuous plots and run-rig, termed here rigg and rendal." P. Dunrossness, Shetl. Statist. Acc. vii. 398.

"A pernicious custom still too much prevails in this and other places, of possessing land in what is called rig and rennal, or run-rig; that is to say, each tenant in a particular farm or district, has a ridge alternately with his neighbours." P. Wick, Caithn. Statist. Acc. x. 26.

"There is an old practice, which still prevails in some places, and which is very detrimental to husbandry. It is commonly termed rig and rennet.—Instead of every one having his land in one place, it is scattered here and there, several tenants having different shares in one field, or a rig a piece alternately." P. Latheron, Caithn. Statist. Acc. xvii. 32.

"The tenants originally possessed their lands in run-ridge or run-dale." P. Dudingston, Loth. Statist. Acc. xviii. 363. See Sup.

This phrase is undoubtedly of Northern origin. Perhaps from Isl. Su.G. ren, palus limitaneus, a stake used for distinguishing the property of neighbours, and del, a division, or deld, portio agri; or from renn-a, to run, and del, deld, q. to have the portions of ground running parallel to each other. Thus run-rig would be merely the translation of ren-del, or rendal. Rennet is evidently the corr. of rendeld. A.S. Su.G. raa denotes a land mark, being nearly synon. with ren. In the Laws of Upland, delda raa signifies the limits between the portions belonging to neighbours.

To RENDER, v. a. To melt or beat butter, Ayrs; "to separate the skinny from the fat parts of suet," &c. Gl. Lancash. V. RIND.

To RENG, RING, v. n. To rule; to reign.

Thy maist supreme indiuisibill substance,—

Rengand eterne, ressauiis na accidencie.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 308, 32.

Do clois the presoun of wyndis, and thar on ring.

Moes.G. reikin-on, Lat. regn-are.

Ibid. 17, 28.

To RENYE, v. a. To rein.

"Than the master cryit and bald renye ane bonet, vire the trossis, nou heise." Compl. S. p. 63.

RENYE, s. The rein of a bridle; Fr. resne.

—The samyn four foutit beistis eik

Bene oft vsit full towarlye and meik

To draw the cart, to thole bridill and renye.

Doug. Virgil, 86, 37.

Leg. towartlie, as in Elphynstoun's MS.

RENYIT, part. pa. Forsworn; abjured, Barbour. Fr. reni-er, to deny; to abjure.

RENK, s. A person; properly, a strong man.

The renk raikit in the saill, riale and gent,

That wondir wisly wes wrought, with wourschip and wele.

Gawan and Gol. i. 6.

It is evidently the same with Rink, q. v.

RENKNING, s. Placing according to rank or precedence. Hence, perhaps, ranking of creditors. S.

RENOMME, s. Renown.

—For syne King was he;

And off full mekill renommé. Barbour, iv. 774. MS.

Chauc. renomee, Fr. renommée.

RENSS GULDING. A foreign gold coin. S.

RENTAL, s. 1. A kind of lease; leaseholding, S. See S.

"A rental is a particular species of tack, now seldom used, granted by the landlord, for a low or favourable tack-duty, to those who are either presumed to be the lineal successors to the ancient possessors of the land, or whom the proprietors design to gratify as such; and the lessees are usually styled rentallors or kindly tenants." Erskine's Instit. B. ii. Tit. 6. § 37. V. KINDLY.

R E P

2. The annual value or rent. 3. In English it denotes the amount of the rents of an estate. S.

To RENTALE, v. a. To let in lease. S.

RENTALLER, s. One who holds land by lease or rental. S.

REPAIR, s. Company; frequency; concourse, S.
Thrie Priests went into collatioun,
Into ane privie place of the said toun.—
Thay luifit not na rangald nor repair.
Priests of Peblis, S.P.R. i. 3.

We still say of a street, which is retired from the bustle of a town, that there is not much repair in it, S.
Fr. repaire, a haunt; L.B. ripar-ium, receptaculum, domus munita; Ital. riparo.

To REPAYRE, v. n. To return; O.Fr. repair-er, L.B. repar-are.
Qwhen that the Romanys passyt ware,
The alienis, that war chasyd are,
Repayryd, and nere all the land
Dystroyit wyth fyre and fellown hand.
Wyntown, v. 10. 589.

To REPARELL, v. a. To repair; to refit; to repair or rebuild houses; Fr. repareill-er. See Sup.
His nauy loist reparellit I but fale
And his feris fred from the deith alhale.
Doug. Virgil, 112, 51.

To REPATER, v. n. To feed; to take refreshment.
In the mene quhyle,—al the beistis war
Repaterit wele eftir thare nyctis lare.
Fr. repaitre, Lat. repasci. Doug. Virgil, 248, 29.

To REPEAT, REPETE, v. a.* To recover; to call back. S.

REPETITION, s. Repayment; restoration. S.

To REPELL, v. a. To recall; like obsolete E. repeal. S.

REPEND, part. adj. Apparently, scattered; dispersed; or broken loose from the ranks.
Reth horss repente rouschede frekis wndir feit;
The Scottis on fute gart mony loiss the suete.
Wallace, iii. 193. MS.

Fr. repand-re, to scatter or cast abroad; repand-u, dispersed. In Edit. 1648, it is ramping.

To REPLAIT, RESPLATE, v. a. To try a second time. S.

To REPLEGE, REPLEGE, v. a. To recall a person from the jurisdiction of one court to that of another; a forensic term.
"He [Makduff] sall haue fre regalité to mak officeris within hym, & to replege his men (gif neid beis) fra the kingis lawis to his regalité." Bellend. Cron. B. xii. c. 9.
Potestatem quoque habet—ad suos revocandi iudices; Boeth.

He, who as a superior, repledged one, whom he claimed as his vassal, from another court to his own, left a pledge or surety with that court, that he should do justice to the complainer on the person thus recalled, within year and day. The pledge was called Cutreach, q. v. Quon. Attach. c. 8. s. 4.

L.B. repleg-iare, to redeem any person or thing upon pledge; from re and pleg-ium. V. Du Cange. E. replevin.

To REPLEID, v. a. To resist.
This officer but dout is callit Deid;
Is nane his power agane may repleid;
Is nane sa wicht, sa wyse, na of sik wit,
Agane his summond suithly that may sit.
Priests of Peblis, S.P.R. i. 45.

R E S

L.B. replaud-are, repulsare, Du Cange; unless the idea rather be that of pleading again, or legally replying.

REPLOCH GRAY. V. RAPPLACK.

To REPONE, v. a. To replace; to restore to a situation formerly held; properly, a forensic term. Lat. repon-o. See Sup.
"It was required, that the ministers of Edinburgh might be reponed to their places." Baillie's Lett. i. 24.

REPONABILL, adj. Adapted to restore things to a proper bearing. S.

To REPONE, v. a. To reply; a forensic term. S.

REPONE, s. To mak a repone. To give a reply. S.

To REPORT, v. a. To obtain; to carry off. S.

To REPOSE, v. a. The same with Repone.
"Mr. Andrew Logie, who lately had been reposed to his ministry, being cited to answer many slanderous speeches in pulpit, not compearing,—was deposed." Baillie's Lett. i. 383.

To REPOUSS, v. a. To repel; to drive back. S.

To REPREIF, v. a. To disallow; to set aside; to reject. S.

To REPreme, v. a. To repress; Lat. reprim-ere.
"Thir vordis of Salomon beand veil considerit, is ane souerane remeid ande salutair medycyn to repreme and distroye the arrogant consait of them that glorifeis & pridis them to be discendit of nobilis and gentil men." Compl. S. p. 242.

REPRISE, s. The indentation of stones in building.
Gilt burneist torris—like to Phebus schone,
Skarsment, reprise, corbell and battellingis.
Palice of Honour, iii. 17.

Fr. reprise de pierres, denting pieces of stone; Cotgr.

To REPUNG, REPUGNE, v. n. To oppose; to be repugnant to. S.

REQUESED, REQUESIT, adj. Requisite. S.

RERIT, pret. v. Fell back.
The Sotheron ost bak rerit off that place,
At thai fyrst tuk, v akyr breid and mar.
Wallace, vii. 1191. MS.

Edit. 1648, retired. Fr. arriéré, cast or fallen behind, from arriere, backward; or immediately from riere, id. corr. from Lat. retro. Bak rerit is an obvious tautology.

RESCHIT, part. pa. A term frequently used in Collect. of Invent. V. RUSCHIL. S.

RESCITATION, s. Restoration. S.

To RESCOURS, v. a. To rescue.
"This man that rescoursit the Kyng wes callit Turnbull, and wes rewardit with riche landis be the kyng." Bellend. Deser. Alb. c. 10.
O.Fr. rescourr-er, L.B. rescuere, to assist.

RESCOURS, s. Rescue; relief in a siege.
—Gylmyne the Willeris, that than Held the towre, and wes worthy man,
Sawe his wictalis war nere gane,
And hope of the rescours had he nane.
V. the v. Wyntown, viii. 34. 30.

"The gouvernour laid ane sege to the castell of Lochindoris, quhare erle David Cumynis wife was for the tyme. This woman knowing her hous mony dayis afore abyll to be segit, send to Kyng Edward, and desirit rescours." Bellend. Cron. B. xv. c. 9.

To RESEAW, v. a. To receive. S.

RESERVE, s. A tree reserved in a hag, or cutting of an allotted portion of wood. S.

To RESETT, v. a. 1. "To receive; harbour; or entertain," S. Rudd. See Sup.

2. To receive stolen goods.
"Quha resets theft stollen fra anie man; he salbe es-temed as ane common theif, and salbe punissed with the like paine." Stat. Alex. ii. c. 21. V. the s.

R E S

RESET, RESETT, s. 1. Place of residence; abode.

Bot qwhethire thai caws had or nane,
Ilk man til his reset is gane.

Wyntown, viii. 26. 260.

2. The act of harbouring one who is considered as a public enemy, or exposed to danger.

Than thai gert tak that woman brycht and scheyne,
Accusyt hir sar of resett in that cass:

Fell syiss scho suour, that scho knew nocht Wallass.

Wallace, iv. 715. MS.

3. One who affords harbour to another, when exposed to danger from enemies. See Sup.

Thar duelt a Wallas welcummyt him full weill;
Thocht Ingliss men thar of had litill feille.

Bathe meite and drynk at his will he had thar.

In Laglyne wode, quben that he maid repayr,

This gentill man was full oft his resett;

With stuff of houshold strestely he thaim bett.

Wallace, ii. 17. MS.

4. A place of entertainment for money; an inn. S.

"It is ordanit that in all burrow townis of the realme, and throughfaris quhair commoun passages ar, thair be ordanit hostillaris and resettis, hauand stablis and chalmers."

Acts, Ja. I. 1424. c. 26. Edit. 1566.

5. The act of receiving goods which one knows to be stolen; a common law-term, S.

"The crime of reset of theft consists either in harbouring the person of the thief after the goods are stolen, or in receiving or disposing of the goods." Erskine's Instit. B.
iv. Tit. 4. s. 63.

6. The receiver of stolen goods; improperly used in the vulgar adage, "The resett is as ill as the thief," S. Rudd. See Sup.

The forensic term is Resetter, q. v.

Mr. Macpherson derives the word, sense 1., from A.S. seta, inhabitant, saetung, occupation, possession. But it seems merely Fr. recepte, recette, receiving. O.Fr. recept, retraite, demeure; Gl. Rom. de Rose. L.B. recept-us denoted the obligation of a vassal to receive his lord into his castle, if this was necessary either in warfare or for business; receptum, the right of going to a particular place for food; jus pastus, droit de giste; recipere, pastum praebere; Du Cange. Hence Belg. receptes, the feasts which are given to a newly married pair by their relations.

The forensic sense seems merely secondary; as being a restricted application of a term which is otherwise used with greater latitude.

Recetted occurs in O.E. as equivalent to harboured.

— Gyf eny wolde

Come as to defense, that ner wounded were,

Other wery, as in a castel recetted were there.

R. Glouc. p. 214.

RESETTER, s. 1. "He who entertains," Rudd.

2. A receiver of stolen goods; a forensic term.

"Such as sell goods belonging either to thieves, or to other lawless persons who dare not themselves appear at a public market, may be justly considered, not only as resetters of the goods, if they were stolen, but as concealers of the thieves or other offenders from justice." Erskine's Instit. B. 4. T. 4. s. 63.

RESH, s. A rush.

Mine harness helped me not a resh;

It stinted never but in my flesh. Sir Egeir, p. 7.

RESIDENTER, s. A dweller; a residentiary. S.

To RESILE, v. n. 1. To draw back; to flinch, S.

"It has been said of me, that I have, in word at least, resiled from my wonted zeal for the Presbyterian Government." Wodrow's Hist. i. 208.

R E S

2. To resist the force of; to start back from; applied to argumentation.

Read Duram and Calvin well;

If from their reasons you resile,

I'll count you sots, or that your knaverie

Will lead us back to Roman slavery.

Fr. resil-er, id. Lat. resil-ire. Cleland's Poems, p. 79.

To RESILE, v. a. To beguile; to deceive. S.

RESING, adj.

Schir, I complane of injure;

A resing storie of rakyng Mure

Hes mangillit my making, throw his malise,

And present it into your palise.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 107.

"Raisen? raised?" Pinkerton. Perhaps a story that makes a great noise, q. has much currency; A.S. reas-an, Su.G. ras-a, to run.

To RESING, v. a. To resign. S.

RESITIT, part. pa. Cited a second time; re-cited. S.

To RESOLVE,* v. n. To terminate. S.

RESP, RISP, s. A kind of coarse grass, S. Gl. Sibb.

To RESP, RISP, v. n. To make a noise resembling that of a file, S.

Swannis souchis throw out the respend redis,

Ouer all the lochis and the fludis gray.

Doug. Virgil, 401, 47.

Or than the bustous swyne fed wele, that bredis

Amang the buskis rank of risp and redis,

Beside the laik of Laurent mony yeris.

Ibid. 344, 42.

Rudd. views both these as the part. pr. Sibb. says, that he "mistakes the meaning entirely;" as he thinks that resp, risp, is the s. But, in none of the passages, the pl. is used; which would certainly have been the case, as corresponding to redis. The evidence of the MSS. is rather against this being the v. Ruthven MS., in the first passage, has rispy; Elphinstoun MS. resp and; in passage second, Ruthv. MS. risp and, in Elph. MS. rysp and.

This, at any rate, can only be a secondary use of the v. as signifying to rasp. V. RISP.

RESPECT, RESPETE, RESPUTT, s. A respite, or pro-rogation of punishment, or of prosecution for crimes committed or imputed. S.

RESPECTS*, s. pl. Interest; emolument; advantage. S.

RESPOND, s. The return which is made by a precept from Chancery, on an application for a seisin. S.

RESPONDIE, s. The duplicate of an accout; a check.

RESPONDIE-BOOK, s. A check-book. S.

RESPONSALL, adj. Responsible, Acts Parl. pass. See S.

RESPONSIOUNE, s. Suretyship. S.

RESPUTT, s. Respite. V. RESPECT, RESPETE. S.

RESSAYTHAR, RESSAYTTAR, s. A receiver. S.

To RESENT, v. a. To have a deep sense of. S.

To RESSOURSS, RESURSE, v. n. To rise again;

Resourss, rose again.

Zepherus began his morow courss,

The swete wapour thus fra the ground resourss;

The humyll breyth down fra the hewyn awaill,

In euery meide, bathe fyrrh, forrest and dail.

Wallace, viii. 1185, MS.

— Resursyng vp hie in the are.

Doug. Virgil, 297, 26.

Fr. resourd-re; whence resource, rising again; from Lat. resurg-ere. In O.Fr. indeed, resurrexi occurs as an adj. synon. with ressuscité; Dict. Trev.

R E T

RESSUM, s. A small fragment, There's no a ressum to the fore, S.B.

A.S. reasn, a beam, or Su.G. ris, a twig? The phrase may have been borrowed from a ruined house, of which there was not a beam or wattle left standing.

To REST, v. n. To be indebted to one. What am I restand you? How much do I owe you? S. See Sup.

Properly, the prep. to is subjoined.

"Our said soverane Lord—ordainis that the said John, now Erle of Gowrie, sall nawayis be callit, persewit, chargit, or burdenit with the payment of quhatsumever his said umquhill father's dettis, quhair of he took allowance in ony of his compts of thesaurarie, for the space of ane yeir next to cum after the dait hereof, that in the meintyme his Hienes may see the said Erle satisfieit of the saidis super-expenses, restane be his Majestie to his said umquhill father." Act Sederunt, 20th June 1600.

Fr. etre en reste, to be in arrears; a financial phrase. Hence,

RESTES, s. pl. Arrears; Fr. id.

"The three Estaites of Parliament decernis and ordanis letters to be direct, to require the Ordinaries to give their letters upon all Prelates, to cause payment be maid of all restes, awin be them to the seate of the Session, of all termes by-gane." Acts, Mar, 1543, c. 2. Murray.

REST. Auld rest, probably old sprain.

—The painful Poplesie, and Pest,

The Rot, the Roup, and the auld Rest—

V. FEYK. Watson's Coll. iii. 14.

A sprain is often called a wrest, wrist, or rest. A.S. wraest-an, to distort.

REST, s. 1. A remnant. 2. In plur. remains; relics. S.

REST, s. An arrest. V. REIST. S.

To RESTYN, v. a. To refresh.

Thare is na land mare likand to myne entent,

Nor quhare me list so weil, and profitabil

Our wery folkis to restyn and estabill.

Doug. Virgil, 128, 13.

Rudd. views this as a s. But it is evidently the v., used in that form which seems to have been borrowed from the A.S. Thus sayne occurs for say, sene for see, &c.

RESTING CHAIR, a long chair shaped like a sofa, used in farm houses, Ang. Perths.

RESTORANS, RESTORANCE, s. Restoration. S.

To RETEIR, v. n. To retire. S.

To RETENT, v. a. To cause to resound.

Their Pagans fell, with clamor huge to hear,

Made such a dinne as made the heaven resound,

Retented hell, and tore the fixed ground.

Hudson's Judith, p. 33.

Fr. retent-ir, to resound, to ring again.

RETH, adj. Fierce, unruly.

The Ingliss men thocht thar chyftayn was slayne;

Bauldly thai baid, as men mekill off mayn,

Reth horsse repende rouschede frekis wndir feit;

The Scottis on fute gert mony loiss the suete.

Wallace, iii. 193. MS.

A.S. rethe, fierce, savage. Some early Editor, not understanding the language, has rendered it, as in Edit. 1648.

Rich horse ramping rushed frekes under feet.

In Edit. Perth, by mistake rech. V. REPENDE.

RETHNAS, s. Ferocity; cruelty.

Thir ar no foulis of ref, nor of rethnas,

Bot mansuete, but malice, mandrit and meke.

Houlate, i. 19. MS.

Mr. Pinkerton renders this prey. But although this idea is necessarily implied, it is previously expressed in ref. A.S. rethnes, rethnesse, ferocitas, saevitia.

R E U

To RETOUR, RETOWRE, v. a. 1. To make a return in writing; a forensic term, used with respect to the service of an heir, S.

"It is the maist necessar, common & profitable brieue or inquisition that is vsed be the lieges of this realme, quhairby ane desiris to be served and retoured, as narrest & lauchful air to his father or vther predicesour." Skene, Verb. Sign. vo. Breve de morte antecessoris.

2. To make a legal return as to the value of lands, S.

"Thair lands are so high retoured, that a forty-merk land with us will not pay so much rent as a two-merk land elsewhere." Baillie's Lett. i. 370.

3. To return.

—And swa he

Wyth honowre and wyth honestè

Retowryd syne in his land hame.

Wyntown, ix. 11. 99.

RETOUR, RETOURE, s. 1. Return, in a general sense.

—Nor yit ane victour with prosperité

Vnto thy faderis cieté haue retoure.

Doug. Virgil, 361, 7.

2. The legal return that was made to a brief, emitted from chancery.

"There is twa kindes of retoures or aunswers, maid be the persons of inquest, to this brieue, and retoured to the Chancellarie: the ane is generall, and the vther speciall." Skene, Verb. Sign. ut. sup.

3. The legal return made as to the value of lands, S.

"—The common burdens were laid on, not according to the retour or merk-land, but the valuation of the rents." Baillie's Lett. i. 370.

The word is not only retained in courts of law, but in vulgar language. A retour-chaise, is one returning from the stage to which it has been hired, S.

The term is used in the laws of France, with respect to inheritance, although in a different sense. On apelle, retour de partage, ce qu'on ajouté au lot d'un des coheritiers, pour suppléer ce qui lui appartient de droit. Dict. Trev.

To RETREAT, v. a. To recall, to retract.

"And als thair wes mony of the byschoppis quhilkis wer conuenit in this wickit conuentioun, quha retreatit thair awin deliberatioun, quhilk wes neuir done be the generale consalis dewlie conuenit." Kennedy of Crossraguell, Compend. Tractiue, p. 87.

Fr. retract-er, Lat. retract-are.

RETRETT, part. pa. Retracted; repealed; reversed. S.

RETROTRACTION, s. The act of drawing back. S.

REVAY, s. Festivity. S.

It war teir for to tel treuly in tail

To ony wy in this warld wourthy, I wise,

With revaling and revay, all the oulk hale.

Gawan and Gol. iv. 27.

O.Fr. reviaux, fetes, divertissements; Roquefort. S.

REUAR, s. River. S.

REVE.

His gloves, his gamesons, glowed as a glède;

With graynes of reve that graied ben gay.

Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. ii. 5.

Reve seems to denote that middle colour between yellow and grey, which the Latins called rav-us; Su.G. rapp, id. Graynes of reve, are dye-stuffs of this colour. Graied may signify, made grey.

REVEL, s. A severe blow; often applied to a back-stroke. S.

REUER, RYVIR, s. A robber, a pirate. V. REYFFAR.

REUERE, REURY, s. Robbery.

Wallace was ner; quhen he sic reueré saw,

R E U

- He spak to thaim with manly contenance,
In fayr afforme, he said, but wariance ;
"Ye do ws wrang, and it in tyme of pess Off sic rubry war suffisance to cess."
Reury, Ed. Perth. Wallace, iv. 40.
- REVERENCE, s. Power, S. See Sup.
"—Sin hath put you in the courtesy and reverence of justice." Rutherford's Lett. P. ii. ep. 34.
- REUERY, s. 1. Noise, uproar.
The women routtis baldly to assay,
Wyth felloun brute, grete reury, and deray,
Furth haldis samyn on the feildis sone.
Doug. Virgil, 388, 13.
2. It is used to denote the crackling noise made by flames.
Than he that set the kendlyng glaid and gay,
Behaldis how that the low dois make deray,
Blesand and crakand with ane nyse reury.
Ibid. 330, 52.
- "From Fr. resverie, idle talking, raving, vain fancy ;"
Rudd.
- REVERS.
- Syne marrowis mix
Do schute at buttis, bankis and brais,
Sum at the revers, sum at the prikkis.
Scott, Evergreen, ii. 189. MS.
- "The rovers at which the archers shott;" Ramsay.
But at rovers, E. is explained by Dr. Johnson, "without any particular aim." The expression seems therefore to mean, at random, as opposed to shooting at a mark; from Fr. au revers, backward, cross.
- To shoot at rovers means to shoot at a distant object, making allowance for the elliptical motion of the arrow. S.
- To REVERSE, REUERSE, v. a.
The Rychmound borne down thar was :
On him arestyt the Douglas,
And him reuersyt, and with a knyff
Rycht in that place reft him the lyff.
Barbour, xvi. 417.
- And him reversit with a knife. Edit. 1620.
- It may either signify, overturned, overthrew, Fr.
renvers-er; or gave a back stroke to, from Fr. revers, which denotes a stroke of this kind.
- REVERSER, s. A proprietor, who has given his lands in wadset, but retains a right to redeem them on repayment of the wadset price. S.
- REVERSION, s. The right of redeeming property under wadset. Forensic terms. S.
- To REVERT, REUERT, v. n. 1. To revive, after a state of decay.
The knoppit sionis with leuis aggreabill,
For till reuert and burgione ar maid abill.
Palice of Honour, Prol. ix. Ed. 1579.
- And every thing in May reverts.
Evergreen, ii. 186.
2. To recover from a swoon, or from sickness, S.B.
O.Fr. revert-ir, retourner, revenir, Dict. Trev.
- To REUEST, REWESS, RAWESS, v. a. 1. To clothe.
Tisiphone that furious monstoure wilde,
In bludy cape reuestit and ouer sylde,
Sittis kepand but slepe bayth nycht and day
That sory entré and this porche alway.
Doug. Virgil, 183, 40.
2. To clothe anew; metaph.
—The cornis croppis, and the bere new brerde
Wyth gladesum garment reuesting the erd.
Ibid. 400, 28.
- Fr. revest-ir, id. literally, to clothe again, to resume one's clothes. It seems especially to have denoted the throwing

R E W

- off one's ordinary garments, when one was about to appear in the distinctive badges of office, or of ceremony; thus applied to the putting on of the royal, pontifical, or sacer-dotal dress. Our good Bishop, in the first passage, seems to have borrowed his phraseology from the ecclesiastical customs in his own time. A cette procession tout le Clergé étoit revêtu de chappes. Dict. Trev.
- In this very sense the term, a little disguised, is used by Blind Harry.
In to the kyrk he gert a preyst rewess ;
With humyll mynd, rycht mekly, hard a mess.
Wallace, vi. 870. MS.
- Maister Jhon Blar was redy to rawess,
In gude entent syne bownyt to the mess.
Ibid. viii. 1194. MS.
- REVESTRIE, REUESTRIE, s. The vestry of a church. S.
- REVESTRE, s. A chapel or closet.
To the also within our realme sall be
Mony secrete closet and revestré,
Quharin thy workis and fatal destenyis,
Thy secrete sawis and thy prophecyis,
I sall gar kepe, and obserue reuerentlye.
Doug. Virgil, 165, 6.
- The designation is evidently borrowed from Fr. revestiaire, the place where the ecclesiastical vestments are kept; E. vestry.
- REVIL, s. The point of a spur. E. rowel. S.
- REVILL-RAILL, adv. Perhaps in a confused way. S.
- To REVINCE, v. a. To restore; to give back what has formerly been taken away; an old forensic term. S.
- REUK, s.
—Thai that held on horss in hy
Swappyt owt swerdis sturdyly ;
And swa fell strakys gave and tuk,
That all the reuk about thaim quouk.
Barbour, ii. 365. MS.
- This seems to signify the atmosphere, the welkin, especially as in a thick and misty state. V. RAK. Or as this battle was towards night, ver. 300, it may denote the atmosphere as it appears in twilight. Isl. rock-r, crepus-culum, rok-ua, vesperascere.
- To REUNDE, ROOND, v. n. To grind; to produce a disagreeable noise as by grinding. S.
- REUOLF, v. a. To examine; to inspect. S.
- REURY, s. Robbery. V. REUERÉ.
- REVURE, REVOORE, adj. 1. Thoughtful; dark and gloomy. 2. Having a look of calm scorn or contempt. S.
- To REW, v. n. 1. To repent, S.
Thow sall rew in thi ruse, wit thow but wene,
Or thow wond of this wane wemeles away.
Gawan and Gol. i. 8.
- i. e. Thou shalt repent of thy boasting.
Hence, to rew a bargain, to break, or to attempt to break it, in consequence of one's regretting that one has entered into it, S.
2. To grieve or have compassion for, E. rue.
The King said, "Certis, it war pité
That scho in that poynt left suld be,
For certis I trow thar is na man
That he ne will rew a woman than."
Barbour, xvi. 280. MS.
- Thai rewid nocht ws in to the toun off Ayr,
Our trew Barrownis quhen that thai hangyt thar.
Wallace, vii. 1062. MS.
- A.S. hreow-ian, poenitere; lugere. Germ. reu-en, id.
Alem. hriuuo, me poenitet.
- REW, s. Repentance.
Sumtyme the preistis thoct that thai did weil,
—Thoch that all vyces rang in thair persoun,

Lecherie, gluttunrie, vain-gloire, avarice;
With swerd and fyre, for rew of relegioun,
Of christin peple oft maid sacrifice.

Maitland Poems, p. 302.

i. e. Used fire and sword for making people repent of, or recant, what they called heresy. Or, it may signify, because of their change of religion.

A.S. hreowe, Alem. hriuuo, poenitentia; Sw. ruelse, id.

REUTH, REWTH, s. 1. Sorrow, or cause for repentance.

Reuth have I none, outlak fortoun and chance,
That mane I ay persew both day and nicht.

King Hart, ii. 53. Maitland Poems, p. 38.

V. OUTLAK and REWMYD.

2. Pity, or cause of pity.

Hou Lust him slew it is bot rewth to heir.

Bellend. Evergreen, i. 46. st. 30.

REW, s. 1. A row, a line.

Cramessie satine, velvot embroude in divers rewis.

Palice of Honour, i. 46.

Chaucer uses the word in the same sense; on a rew, in a line.

Hence, "the plane rew of a window, the wooden board or level on which it rests, window sole, in the modern phrase," Gl. Compl.

2. A street; S. raw, as "Potter-raw, Edinburgh, Ship-raw, Aberdeen;" Rudd.

Sum cumpanyis with speris, lance and targe,
Walkis wachand in rewis and narow stretis.

Doug. Virgil, 50, 17.

All burrowstounis, everilk man yow prayis
To maik bainfyris, fairseis, and clerk-playis;
And, throw your rewis, carrels dans, and sing.

Maitland Poems, p. 284.

Fr. rue, L.B. ruga. Rudd. views Germ. reihe, ordo, series, as the radical word; eine reihe hauser, continuata aedium series. And the idea is certainly just. Only, he has selected a term as the root, which, as it is only a derivative, has less resemblance than its primitive. V. RAW.

REWAYLD, part. pa. Apparently for ravelled. S.

REWAR, s. A robber; a pirate

Apon the se yon Rewar lang has beyn,
Till rychtwyss men he dois full mekill teyn.

V. REYFFAR.

Wallace, x. 817. MS.

REWELYNYS, ROWLYNGIS, RILLINGS, RULYIONS,

RULLIONS, s. pl. Shoes made of undressed hides, with the hair on them; S. rullions. See Sup.

Till Louchabyre he held hys way,
And the tothir hym folowyd ay,
And led hym in-tyl swylk dystres,
That at sa gret myschef he wes,
That hys Knychtis weryd rewelynys
Of hydis, or of Hart Hemmynys.

Wyntown, viii. 29. 273.

Ane Ersche mantill it war thi kynd to wer,
A Scotts thewttill wndir thi belt to ber,
Rouch rowlyngis apon thi harlot fete.

Rulyions, Edit. 1648.

Wallace, i. 219. MS.

Thare left fute and al thare leg was bare,
Ane rouch rilling of raw hyde and of hare
The tothir fute couerit wele and knyt.

Doug. Virgil, 233, 2.

This is the word used for translating crudus pero, Virg.
Æn. vii. 690. From this passage it appears that the inhabitants of ancient Latium, or at least of the district now called Campania, wore shoes of untanned leather, or what we call rullions. Servius observes, that this is a rustic shoe, which they borrowed from the Greeks, from whom they sprung.

"After the Scots were dislodged [from Stanhopepark,
A. 1327, or 1328], some of the English went to view their camp, partly to see their customes and manner of living, and what provision they had, partly to seek some spoil.

When they were come there, they found only five hundreth carcasses of red and fallou deare, a thousand paire of Highland showes called rullions, made of raw and untand leather, three hundreth hides of beasts set on stakes, which served for caldrons to seethe their meat." Hume's Hist.
Douglas, p. 45.

The term, because of the meanness of the dress, is used as a reproachful designation for a Scottish man, in Minot's Banokburn.

Rughfute riving, now kindels thi care,
Bere-bag, with thi boste, thi biging is bare;
Fals wretche and forsworn, whider wiltou fare?

Poems, p. 7.

This is very near the S. phrase, rouch rullion, applied to this kind of shoe. Warton renders biging clothing.
But it certainly means dwelling-house. Minot, that his satire might be more severe, seems to have made himself acquainted with some S. terms. The designation bere-bag refers to a bag for carrying barley meal, commonly called bear-meal, which constitutes a considerable part of the food of many of our countrymen to this day. The idea seems to be, that the Scots had left both their houses and their girnels empty, in order to supply themselves with meal, while they were on the field. Every man, according to our ancient statutes, when summoned to attend the King, was bound to bring forty days' provision with him.

It is certainly the same word, which occurs in a very coarse passage, applied to the Scots during the usurpation of Edw. I., although by Hearne, without any respect to the sense, expl. "turning in and out, wriggling."

Thou scabbed Scotte, thi nek thi hotte, the deuelle
it breke,

It salle be hard to here Edward, ageyn the speke.
He salle the ken, our loud to bren, & werre bigynne,
Thou getes no thing, bot thi riuelyng, to hang ther inne.

R. Brunne, p. 282.

It seems doubtful, if R. Brunne himself understood the term. For he uses it, as if it signified a rope, or something by which one might be hung.

In Dunbar's time, the use of the rilling seems to have been confined to those who were viewed as Highlanders.
Hence he thus addresses Kennedy.

Ersch Katherene with thy polk, breik and rilling.

Evergreen, ii. 55.

He applies it as a term of reproach, nearly in the same manner as Minot had done before him. For he calls Kennedy, Ruck-rilling, Ibid. p. 60. This is certainly equivalent to ruch rilling, and perhaps should have been thus printed.

Mr. Macpherson gives no conjecture as to the origin.
Rudd. views it as perhaps derived from raw, q. rawlings;
Sibb., q. rollings, as "originally they might be only broad thongs or stripes of raw hide rolled about the feet; or as possibly a corr. of Fr. poulaines, i. e. souliers à poulaine, a kind of rude sandals made of horse leather, from poulaine,
a colt."

Mr. Tooke, having quoted the passage in Douglas, derives rilling from A.S. wrig-an, as being "that with which the feet are covered." Divers. Purley, ii. 232.

But the term is A.S. rifling, obstrigillus; rifelingas, obstrigilli; Aelfric. Gl. Isidore thus defines obstrigilli;
Qui per plantas consuti sunt, et ex superiore parte cor-rigia trahitur, ut constringantur; p. 1310.

In the passages quoted, the various changes of the term may be traced. Minot writes riving, which is most nearly allied to the A.S.; and a shoe of this kind is to this day called a rivelin in Orkney. Rewelyng is only a different mode of pronunciation; hence rowlyng, rullion.
Rilling is rifling softened by the substitution of l for f.

R E W

But whence, may it be said, is the A.S. word? This it is not so easy to determine. But probably it has been formed from Moes.G. A.S. rih, hirsutus, and fel, pellis, q. rough, or hairy, skin or hide. The Gael. name, according to Shaw, is cuaroga.

REWELL, s.

The schipman sayis, "Rycht weill ye may him ken,
Throu graith takynnys, full clerly by his men.
His cot armour is seyn in mony steid,
Ay battaill boun, and rewell ay off reid.

Wallace, ix. 106. MS.

Fr. rouelle, "a round plate of armour, for defence of the arme-hole, when the arme is lifted up;" Cotgr. Early editors have stupidly rendered this rayment.

REWELLYT, pret. v.

Gud Wallace than that stoutly couth thaim ster,
Befor thaim raid in till his armour cler,
Rewellyt speris all in a nowmyr round.]

Wallace, x. 279. MS.

This is the word in MS., instead of rewlyt, Perth Ed., and seems to signify, "they discovered, shewed, or revealed, their spears at all points, in a circular form."

REWERS.

Off Kingis fer I dar mak no rahers,
My febill mynd, my trublyt spreit rewers.

Wallace, ix. 315. MS.

This either signifies, fears, by an improper use of Fr. rever-er, to reverence; or perhaps, shrinks back, from Fr. revers, backward, q. my mind recoils at an attempt so arduous as that of describing the appearance of royalty.

To REWESS, v. a. To attire one's self for the discharge of official duty. V. REUEST.

REWID, pret. v. Deprived of; reaved.

And the treis begouth to ma
Burgeans, and brycht blomys alsua,
To wyn the helyng off thair hewid,
That wykkyt wyntir had thaim rewid.

Barbour, v. 12. MS.

i. e. To gain that beautiful covering to their heads, of which cruel winter had bereaved them. The sense is totally lost in Edit. 1620, p. 83.

To win the hewing of their head,
That wicked winter hath them made.

V. REIFE.

To REWL, v. n. To be entangled; the same with Ravel. S.

REWLL RYCHT, adv. Exactly square. S.

To REWM, v. n. To roar. O.Fr. ruim-er, rugir. S.

The pepill beryt lik wyld bestis in that tyd,
Within the wallis rampand on athir sid,
Rewmyd in reuth with mony grysly grayne.

Wallace, vii. 459. MS.

This is radically the same with Rame; and evidently the origin of Rummyss, q. v. Rewmyd indeed has been changed to rumisht, Edit. 1648 and 1673. V. RAME. Hence, REWMOUR, s. Tumult; clamour.

Rewmour raiss with cairfull cry and keyne.
The bryme fyr brynt rycht braithly apon loft:
Till slepand men that walkand was not soft.

Wallace, vii. 438. MS.

This is evidently quite different from E. rumour; as being the same with Germ. rumor, tumult, and nearly allied to Isl. romur, applause, as denoting the noise made in expressing it.

REWME, s. Realm; O.Fr. reaume.

He wes nevyr worth, na all hys kyn,
The fredwme fra that reume to wyn.

Wyntown, viii. 3. 140.

It is used by Wiclif.

R I B

"And if a reume be departid agens it self: thilke reume may not stonde." Mark iii.

RHAIM, RHAME, s. A commonplace speech; a rhapsody.

To RHAME oer, v. a. 1. To run over or repeat any thing in a rapid and unmeaning way; to repeat as if by rote.

2. It often signifies to reiterate. S.

RHEEMOUS, s. Apparently clamour. S.

RHEUMATIZE, s. Rheumatism. S.

RHIND MART. A whole carcass from the herd, a mart of cow or ox beef. See Sup.

"I was long puzzled to find the meaning of a word often made use of in the reddendo of charters in the North country, a Rhind Mart. The word Mart I understand to be something payable at Martinmas; but the meaning of rhind I could not find, until it was explained to me by a person conversant in the German language, from whom I learned that this word was made use of in Germany for horned cattle, such as cows or oxen." Russell's Conveyancing, Pref. viii.

But Germ. rind, which must be the word referred to, has no relation to horns. It simply signifies an ox or cow: rinder, pl. "neat, cattle, great cattle." Hence the distinction, rinder und schafe, great and small cattle, or neat and sheep. Kilian says, that Teut. rind properly means, bos in masculino genere; and rind-vleesch, caro bubula. Wachter derives the term from renn-en, coire, as applicable both to male and female. Thus a rind mart seems properly to signify, a mart from the herd, as opposed to one from the flock, beef as distinguished from mutton, &c. Hence most probably E. runt, although now restricted in its signification; being applied to "an animal below the natural growth of the kind;" Johns.

Isl. rind is used in the same sense as the Germ. word; bos, vitula, G. Andr. This author indeed says that it is of Germ. origin; adding, that it is an ancient name of a woman in the Edda, being that of the daughter of a king of Livonia, the concubine of Odin.

RHYNE, s. Hoar-frost. S.

RIACH, adj. Dun; ill-coloured, S.B.

—"I had nae mair claise bat a spraing'd faikie, or a riach plaidie." Journal from London, p. 8.

V. RAUCHAN.

RIAL, RIALLE, adj. Royal. V. RYBEES.

It is sometimes used substantively.

There come in a soteler, with a symballe,
A lady, lufsom of lete, ledand a knight;
Ho raykes up in a res bifer the rialle.

Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. ii. 1.

RIAL, RYALL, REAL, s. 1. The name of a gold coin anciently current in S. 2. The term Ryall was also applied to some silver coins, in conjunction with the name of the sovereign. V. Mary Ryall, James Ryall. S.

RIALTE, RYALTIE, REALTEY, ROYALTY, s. Territory immediately under the jurisdiction of the king; as distinguished from that to which the privileges of a regality were annexed. S.

RIAUVE, s. A row or file. V. the letter v. S.

To RIB, v. a. To rib land, by leaving a furrow alternately unploughed; to give it half ploughing, S. Belg. gerib, ridged. Hence, S.

RIBBING, s. A slight ploughing.

"The dung is then spread, and the ground gets a kind of ribbing, and directly after that the seed furrow." P. Lesly, Fife, Statist. Acc. viii. 513.

RIB-PLOUGHING, s. A kind of half-ploughing performed by throwing the earth turned over by the plough upon an equal quantity of undisturbed surface. S.

R I B

RIBBALDAILL, RYBBALDY, s. "Vulgarity;" Pink.; properly, low dissipation.

And till swylk thowlesnes he yeid,
As the courss askis off yowtheid.
And wmqhill into rybbaldail;
And that may mony tyme awaill;
For knowlage off mony statis
May quhile awailye full mony gatis.
As to the gud Erle off Artayis
Robert, befell in his dayis.
For oft feyneing off rybbaldy
Awailyeit him, and that gretly.
For Catone sayis ws, in his wryt,
That to fenye foly quhile is wyt.

Barbour, i. 336. 341. MS.

From the connexion, it might seem synon. with folly. But I suspect that the sense is still stronger; that it signifies debauchery, profligacy of the lowest kind; corresponding to O.Fr. ribaudie, used by J. de Meun in this sense.

Après garde que tu ne dies
Ces laismes et ces ribaudies.

Rom. de Rose.

Scortatio, latrocinium, scelus, libido, luxuria; Dict. Trev.
RIBBAND. St. Johnstone's ribband, a halter, a rope for hanging one as a criminal, S.

Hence of St. Johnstone's ribband came the word,
In such a frequent use, when with a cord
They threaten rogues; though now all in contempt
They speak, yet brave and resolute attempt.

Muse's Threnodie, p. 119.

This phrase, according to Adamson, had an honourable origin. The inhabitants of Perth, also called St. John's Town, at the beginning of the reformation, finding that the Queen Regent and the Popish Clergy were determined to keep no faith with them, three hundred, whom he compares to the Spartans under Leonidas, devoted themselves for the preservation of their religion and liberty. He thus describes their engagement.

Such were these men who for religion's sake,
A cord of hemp about their necks did take,
Solemnly sworn, to yield their lives thereby,
Or they the gospel's veritie deny:
Quitting their houses, goods and pleasures all,
Resolv'd for any hazard might befall,
Did passe forth of the town in armes to fight,
And die, or they their libertie and light
Should lose, and whosoever should presume
To turn away, that cord should be his doome.

St. Johnstone's Tippet is used in the same sense. S.

RIBBLIE-RABBLIE, adj. Confused; disordered, Loth. synon. reel-rall, S. Teut. rabbel-en, praecipitare sive confundere verba.

RIBE, RYBE, s. 1. A tall colewort with little leaf; a cabbage that does not stock well. 2. A lean person or animal. S.

RIBIE, adj. Tall, with little foliage; lank; tall and thin. S.
RYBEES, s. pl.

Thus Schir Gawayn, the gay, Gaynour he ledes,
In a gleterand gide, that glemed full gay,
With riche ribaynes reidsett, ho so right redes,
Rayled with rybees of rial aray.

Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. i. 2.

Perhaps borders, from Fr. ribe, a coast or skirt; riba, id. Bullet. As this piece of dress, however, is said to have been gleterand, i. e. glittering, rubies may be meant.

RIBS of a chimley. The bars of a grate. S.

To RED THE RIBS. To poke the fire. S.

RIBUS, s. A musical instrument. See Sup.

R I C

—The rote, and the recordour, the ribus, the rist.

Houlate, iii. 10. MS.

This seems corr. from ribibe or rebeke, both of which denoted a sort of violin. Fr. rebec, Arm. rebet, id. rebet-er, to play on the violin. Both these words came also to be used, although for what reason is unknown, as contemptuous terms for an old woman. In this sense is ribibe used by Chaucer.

RICE, s. V. RISE, RYS, RYSS.

To RICE the water. V. under RISE, RYS. S.

To RICH, v. a. To enrich.

Of that spreth mony war rychyd thare,
That pour and sympil be-for war.

Wyntown, viii. 42. 57.

Belg. rych-en, Sw. rik-ta. V. RYK.

To RICH, v. n. To become rich.

"As the carle riches, he wretches;" S. Prov. Kelly, p. 24.

RICHIE, RICHE, s. Abbrev. of Richard. S.

RICHT, adj. 1. In health; No richt, not in good health, S. Germ. nicht richt, id.

2. In the exercise of reason, possessing soundness of mind. He's quite richt now; he has come to his senses: No richt, insane, S.

"Duplied,—He was of a weak judgment, and not very richt, and so it was needless to ask counsel from him." Fountainhall's Decisions, i. 85.

In his richt mind, is an E. phrase. Our term seems to be used elliptically.

To RICHT, v. a. To put in order, in whatever respect; to put to rights; often, to mend, S.

The word is used in the same sense in Franc. Tatian, describing the calling of two of the disciples, says, that Jesus saw them rihtente iro nezzi, rectificantes retia sua, S. richting their nets.

RICHT FURTHER, adv. Immediately; forthwith. S.

RICHT NOW, adv. Just now.

"It is the layndar, Schyr," said ane,

"That hyr childill rycht now hes tane."

Barbour, xvi. 274. MS.

In A.S. it is inverted; Nu rihte, jam, nunc.

RYCHTSWA, adv. In the same manner. See Sup.

"And rychtswa the Seriaund of the Regalitie salbe changit at thre heid Courtis befor the Lord of the Regalitie." Acts, Ja. II. 1426. c. 110. Edit. 1566. V. CRISTIE.

RICHTS. At richts, straight, speedily, Doug. Virgil. "As we say, at the rights, i. e. at the nearest way," Rudd.

Su.G. raett waeg, via recta.

RICHTWYS, RYCHTUIS, RYCHTOUS, adj. 1. Righteous, Wyntown. See Sup.

A.S. rihtwis, Isl. rettvis, Sw. raetwis. Ihre views the termination wis as formed from Moes.G. wis-an, esse, and therefore as merely indicating the existence of a quality. Perhaps it is rather from wis, modus, forma, as denoting the quality itself.

2. Rightful; possessing legal right. 3. Used as denoting what is legitimate. 4. True; real; not nominal. S.

RYCHTWYSNESS, s. Righteousness. S.

RICK, s. "Matter," Pinkerton.

— I haif fund a gret horse bane.—

Schyr, ye may gar the wyffis trow,

It is ane bane of Sanct Brydis cow,

Gude for the fevir tartane.

Schyr, will ye rewill this rick weill,

All hail the wyvis will kiss and kneill,

Betwix this and Dumbartane.

Lyndsay, S.P.R. ii. 74.

R I D

Perhaps from A.S. recc, cura, as we use concern for business; or racc, story, narration.

RICKAM, s. A smart stroke; a variety of REEKIM. S.
RICKETY-DICKETY, s. A toy made for children. S.

RICKLE, RICKILL, s. 1. A heap; as, a rickle of stanes, a heap of stones; a rickle of banes, a phrase used to denote a very meagre person, S.

Ye sall have ay quhill ye cry ho,
Rickillis of gould and jewellis to.

Philotus, S.P. Repr. iii. 15.

"Mr. Abercromby the surveyor, depones, 'That when the water is filtrating through the dike at low water, there is more water filtrates through the dam-dike, which is the next thing to a rickle of stones, from one end to the other, than the eyes of the two intakes could contain.'" Petition, Thomas Gillies of Balmakewan, &c. 1806, p. 10.

2. Peats or turfs put up in heaps or small stacks, to prepare them for winter fuel, are called rickles. 3. A low stone fence built before a drain. S.

This is a diminutive, evidently allied to A.S. rieg, Su.G. roek, ruke, Isl. hrauk, cumulus, hrcik-a, cumulum exstruere, Moes.G. rik-jan, congerere. Perhaps Belg. richgel, a ridge, is from this stock; as E. rick undoubtedly is. Su.G. ben-rangel, which properly denotes a skeleton, is also metaph. used in the same sense with our rickle of banes. But most probably the resemblance is merely accidental.

To RICKLE, v. a. 1. To put into a heap; applied to corn, S.

"There is a method of preserving corn, peculiar to this part of the country, called Rickling, thus performed. After the corn has stood some days in uncovered half stooks, from forty to sixty sheaves are gathered together, and put up into a small stack,—and covered with a large sheaf, as a hood, tied down with two small straw ropes." P. Kirk-michael, Ayr. Statist. Acc. vi. 104. N. V. the s.

2. To put into the form of a stack; as, "When are ye gaun to rickle your peats?" 3. To pile up in a loose manner. S.

RICKLE-DIKE, s. A wall without lime built firmly at the bottom, but having the top only the thickness of the single stones, loosely piled above each other. S.

RICKLER, s. One who piles up stones loosely. S.

RICKMASTER, s. This must be a corr. of Rit-Master. S.

RID, RIDE, adj. Severe; sharp.

Thar mycht men se a hard bataill,
And sum defend, and sum assaile;
And mony a reale romble rid

Be roucht, thar apon athir sid. Barbour, xii. 557. MS.

Yit sall I mak tham unrufe, foroutin resting,
And reve thame thair rentis with routis full ride.

Gawan and Gol. ii. 15.

Perhaps from A.S. reth, ferox, saevus. It may, however, be allied to Isl. reide, ira; or hrid, Su.G. rid, certamen, impetus; Hin hardasti hrid, certamen acerrimum, Verel.

RID, s. Advice; counsel; originally written red. S.

RIDDEN MEAL. 1. The money that was paid to an incoming tenant for the liberty of the farm from Martinmas till Whitsunday. 2. The sum paid to the outgoing tenant as a consideration for the crop left on the farm. V. RIDDIN. S.

RIDDIN, part. pa. Cleared off; driven away. S.

RIDDLE. The Riddle (Sieve) and the Shears. A mode of divination, or trial by ordeal, for the discovery of theft, &c. described in Sup.

RIDE, adj. Rough; rude, Gawan and Gol. ii. 15. V. ROLD.

To RIDE, v. a. In the diversion of curling, to drive one's stone with such force, as to carry before it that stone, belonging to the opposite party, which is nearest the mark, or blocks up the way. To ride full out, to carry it quite away from the possibility of winning, S. V. WICK, v.

R I F

RIDE, s. The act of sailing. A rouch ride, a rough passage by water, S.

This seems to be a metaph. of Goth. extract. For Isl. redskap is equally applied to carriage on horseback and on shipboard. Hominis vectura equo vel cymba, Verel. Ind.; from rid-a, equitare, to travel on horseback.

To RIDE THE BEETLE. To walk while others ride. S.

To RIDE THE PARLIAMENT. Formerly, the procession of the King on horseback to the Parliament House.

To RIDE TAIL-TYNT. To stake one horse against another in a race, the losing horse being lost to the owner. S.

RYDER, RIDAR, RYDAR, s. A gold coin formerly current in S. bearing the figure of a man on horseback. S.

RIE, RY. This, as a termination of many nouns, denotes dominion, authority; as in Bishoprie, the extent of the authority of a bishop:—in other cases it denotes abundance of the thing expressed by the original word; as Bletherie, &c. It is similar to ric in E. S.

RYE-CRAIK, s. The land-rail or Corncraik. S.

RIEP, s. A slovenly-dressed girl. S.

RIERFU, adj. Roaring. S.

RYFART, s. A radish. V. REEFORT.

To RIFE, RIFFE, RYFFE, v. n. To rive; to be rent.

Quha can not hald thare pece ar fre to flite,
Chide quhill thare hedis riffe, and hals worthe hache.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 66, 29.

Su.G. rifu-a, Isl. riuf-a, id. E. rive.

RIFE, s. The itch. V. REIF. S.

To RYFE out, v. a. To plough up land that has been lying waste, or in pasturage. Syn. To break up. S.

RIFF-RAFF, s. The rabble; persons of a worthless character, S.; also used as a low E. word. V. Grose's Class. Dict. See Sup.

It is, however, a very old term in E., applied to vile persons.

The Sarazins ilk man he slouh alle rif & raf.—
He sauh tham rif & raf comand ilka taile.

R. Brunne, p. 151. 276.

It also denotes things of the basest kind.

Ne costom no seruise of thing that he forgaf,

That noither he no hise suld chalange rif no raf.

"The least scrap, the least bit," Gl. Ibid. p. 111.

Perhaps from A.S. reaf-ian, Su.G. rifu-a, Isl. rif-a, rapere, whence rif, rapina; as having been primarily applied, as above, to the depredations of war.

RIFT. Leg. RIST, s. A musical instrument.

—The rote, and the recordour, the ribus, the rist.

Houlate, iii. 10. MS.

A.S. hrisc-ian, vibrare, stridere?

To RIFT, v. n. To belch; to eructate, S. See Sup.

Three times the carline grain'd and rifted.—

Ramsay's Poems, i. 297.

Johnson mentions the v. But it is rather a provincial word. Skinner gives it as used in Lincoln.; Dan. raev-er, Su.G. rap-a, Alem. rof-an, eructare; Dan. raeven, eructatio. Sibb. derives it from the Lat. v.

RIFT, s. A belch; an eructation, S.

And tho' their stamack's aft in tift

In vacance-time,

Yet seenil do they ken the rift

O' stappit weym.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 46.

R I G

RIFTING, s. The act of belching. S.
To RIFT, v. n. To magnify in narration; to talk without book. Syn. Blow, Blast. S.

RIFT, s. 1. An inflated account; a fib. 2. A hearty and free conversation. Syn. Crack. S.

RIG, s. A tumult; also, a frolic, Loth. See Sup.

Isl. rig-a, motare, citare in gyrum. I suspect, however, that rig, in this sense, is rather a cant term of modern formation.

RIG, RIGG, s. 1. The back of an animal.

Anone is he to the hie mont adew;—
 His tale, that on his rig before tymes lay,
 Vnder his wame lattis fall abasitly.

Doug. Virgil, 394, 39.

"The back, Scot. called the rigging and rigback;" Rudd.

V. REISSIL.

2. A ridge, S. See Sup.

It seems to receive the name from its resemblance to the back, in relation to the depression of the sides; as the ridge is elevated above the furrow. Chaucer, rigge, id.:

Of the, Serranus, quha wald nathing schaw,
 Quhare thou thy riggis telis for to saw,
 As thou was chosin capitane of were?

Doug. Virgil, 196, 9.

3. The fold of a web, or that part which is folded or doubled, as distinguished from the selvedge. S.

4. Rig and Fur, a phrase used to denote ribbed stockings, S. See Sup.

Rug signifies back, O.E.

R. Glouc. gives the following account of the manner in which Edward the Confessor did penance for listening to the false accusation of Robert, Archbishop of Canterbury, against his mother; p. 340.

— The byssopes echon,

Ech after other, asoyled then kyng of thys trespas
 Myd gerden in hys naked rug, & that gret pyte was.
 Thre strokes the moder ek, wepynde wel sore,
 Gef hym to asoyly, & ne mygte vor reuthe mor.

It seems doubtful whether gerden signifies rods, or is synon. with strokes. V. GIRD, s.

A.S. hricg, Isl. hrigr, Su.G. rygg, Dan. reg, Belg. rugge, Teut. ruck, dorsum.

RIG and BAUK. A ridge of corn with an intervening strip of pasture alternately. V. BAUK. S.

RYG-BAYNE, RIG-BONE, s. The back-bone. See Sup.

Wallace, with that, apoun the bak him gaif,
 Till his ryg bayne he all in sundyr draif.

Wallace, ii. 44. MS.

— Syne with ane casting dart

Peirsing his rybbis throw, at the ilk part

Quhare bene the cupling of the rig bone.

Doug. Virgil, 329, 43.

Rig-bane, S. Doug. uses bone, metri causa. Riggin-bone, Chaucer.

A.S. hricgban, Dan. rigbeen, Su.G. ryg-ben, spina dorsi.

RIG-FIDGE, s. A gentle blow on the back. S.

RIGGIE, s. A cow with a white strip along the back. S.

RIGGIT, RIGGED, adj. Having a white strip, or white and brown streaks along the back; applied to cattle. S.

RIGGING, RIGGIN, s. 1. The back, S. called also rig-back, Rudd.

Syne to me with his club he maid ane braid,
 And twenty rowtis apoun my rigging laid.

Doug. Virgil, 451, 42.

2. The top or ridge of a house, S. riggen, id. A. Bor. See S.

A hack was frae the rigging hanging fu
 Of quarter kebbocks.

Ross's Helenore, p. 77.

R I K

Hence, riggin-tree, the roof-tree, or beam which forms the roof of a house, S.

3. A small ridge or rising in ground. S.

Sw. tak-ryggen, the ridge of a house; q. thack-riggin.
A.S. hricg signifies fastigium, as well as dorsum. Thaes temples hricg, Templi fastigium, Luke, iv. 9.

RIGGING-STONE, RIGGIN-STANE, s. One of the stones which form the ridge of a house. S.

RIG and RENNET. V. RENDAL. S.

BUTT-RIG, s. Three men shearing on one ridge. V. BUTT.

RIG-ADOWN-DAISY, s. Dancing on the grass. S.

RIGGIN, s. A term of reproach to a woman. S.

RIGHT, adj. In the exercise of reason, S. V. RICHT.

RIGHTSUA, adv. In like manner. V. RYCHTSUA. S.

RIGLAN, RIGLAND, s. An animal that is half castrated, S. Riggilt, A. Bor., a ram that has one testicle.

— Ye sall hae a rigland shire

Your mornin' gift to be.

Jamieson's Popular Ball. ii. 272.

E. rig, rigsie, riggil, ridgeling. V. Jun. Etym.

RIGMARIE, s. 1. A name given to a base coin, Loth. Dumfr.

My banes were hard like a stane dyke,

No Rig-Marie was in my purse.

Watson's Coll. i. 14.

Supposed to have originated from one of the debased coins struck during the regency of Morton, but antedated, and bearing to be from the mint of Queen Mary, which had the words Reg. Maria, as part of the legend. See Sup.

RIGMARIE, s. A mischievous frolic; a rig. S.

RIGMAROLE, s. A long-winded incoherent story or speech; a sort of rhapsody. S.

RIGMAROLE, adj. Long-winded and confused. S.

RIGS, RIGIBUS, s. A game of children. S.

RIGWIDDIE, s. 1. The rope or chain that crosses the back of a horse, when he is yoked in a cart, by which the shafts are supported, S.

From rig, back, and widdie, a twig, or bundle of withes; as this had been used before the use of ropes. This custom is still preserved in some parts of S. The rigwiddie, in the Highlands, is to this day made of twisted twigs of oak.

That, which fastens the harrow to the yoke, is called a trodwiddie, also cutwiddie, (Fife), more commonly a master-graith. To this are fastened two swingle-trees; and to these the horses are yoked by the theats or traces, S.

Isl. trod denotes a stake or pole.

2. One of a durable frame; one that can bear a great deal of fatigue or hard usage. S.

RIGWIDDIE, adj. 1. A rigwiddie body, one of a stubborn disposition. 2. Deserving the widdie or gallows. S.

RIGWIDDIE-NAG, s. A horse with only one testicle. S.

RYK, RYKE, adj. 1. Potent, Wyntown; according to Mr. Macpherson. But I have overlooked it. 2. Rich. See Sup.

The land had rest, the folk ware ryke,
 And foysozne wes of froyt and fude.

Wyntown, viii. 38. 214.

Than Eduuarde self was callit a Roy full ryk.

Wallace, i. 120. MS.

Moes.G. reiks, princeps, praefectus; A.S. rica, princeps, potens; ryc, Su.G. rik, Belg. ryk, Isl. ryk-ur, dives.

These terms were primarily used to denote power, which, in barbarous times, was the great source of wealth; because powerful men enrich themselves by making the weak their prey.

RIK, RYKE, s. A kingdom.

R I N

And hawbrekis, that war quhyt as flouris,
Maid thaim gletirand, as thai war lyk
Tyll angelys hey off hewynys ryk.
Barbour, viii. 234. MS.

Bot Wallace thriss this kynrik conquest haile,
In Ingland fer socht battaill on that rik.
Ryke, Perth Ed. Wallace, ii. 358.

Moes.G. reiki, imperium, principatus, dominatio; A.S.
ryce, Franc. riki, riche, regnum.

RIKE-PENNY, s. Perhaps Reik-penny or Hearthmoney.

RILLING, s. A shoe made of rough untanned leather.

V. REWELYNYS.

RIM, s. A sort of rocky bottom in the sea, where fish are caught, Orkn.

"As to rocks, we have three of what we call rims, which are generally occupied by our fishermen as their best fishing grounds;—the rim shoals deepen from twenty to forty fathom, or upwards." P. Birsay, Orkney, Statist.
Acc. xiv, 351.

Perhaps allied to Isl. hraun, saxosa loca, cautibus continuis obsita, G. Andr.; if not a derivative from rif, Su.G.
ref, whence E. reef of rocks.

RIM (of the belly,) s. The peritoneum. S.

RIMBURSIN, s. A rupture of the abdominal muscles;
in consequence of which the belly sometimes bursts, Bord. Northumb. Horses and cows are both subject to it.

— The worm, the warcit wedonypha,
Rimbursin, ripplis, and bellythra.
Roull's Cursing, Gl. Compl. p. 331.

From rim (of the belly,) and burst, or the part, pa. bursen.

RIM-BURST, s. The disease called a rupture or Hernia. S.

RIMBURSTENNESS, s. The state of being under a Hernia.

RIMLESS, adj. Reckless; regardless. S.

RIMPIN, s. 1. A lean cow. 2. An old ugly woman. S.

RIM-RAM, adv. In a state of disorder or confusion. S.

To RIN, v. n. 1. To run, S.

— Sic multitude
Of slauchter he maid, quhil Exanthus the flude.
Mycht fynd no way to rin vnto the see.
Doug. Virgil, 155, 18.

Moes.G. Alem. rinn-an, Su.G. Isl. rinn-a, Germ. Belg.
rinn-en, currere.

2. To become curdled, in consequence of being soured by heat; a term used as to milk, S.

Su.G. raenn-a, renn-a, coagulare; miolken ar runnen;
the milk is run, or curdled. Hence E. rennet, coagulum,
S. earnin.

To RYN oure, v. n. To run on; not to be interrupted. S.

RIN, s. 1. A run; the act of running, S.

Ralph mean time from the door comes with a rin,
And pray'd that Jean and Nory wad gang in,
And try gin they yon fiery lass cou'd tame.
Ross's Helenore, p. 89.

2. A rin of watter, a water-fall; also, a stream, S. 3. A ford, where the water is shallow, and ripples as it flows.
Germ. rinne, fluvius, Su.G. raenna, canalis.

RINNIN DARN. A disease in cows, in which they are severely affected with a flux, S.B. Darn may signify what is secret.

RIN-WAW, s. A partition, a wall that runs or extends from one side of the house to the other, and divides it, S.

Some might prefer Su.G. ren, a stake, as this sort of wall is often made with stakes interlaced with straw and clay.

To RIN in one's head. To produce a slight degree of intoxication; to occasion a transient giddiness or stupor. S.

R I N

To RIN in one's head. Used impers. It rins i' my head,
I have an indistinct recollection of this or that. S.

To RIN on, v. n. To push; to butt as a furious bull. S.

To RIN out, v. n. To leak; to allow to escape. S.

To RIN stockings. To darn them with thread of their own quality, for making them more durable. S.

RINABOUT, s. A vagabond; one who runs about through the country. S.

RYNNARE-ABOUT, s. The same with Rinabout. S.

RINNINS, s. The vulgar term for scrofula. S.

RIN-THE-COUNTRY, s. A fugitive; one who has fled the country for misdeeds. S.

RINTHEREOUT, s. A needy houseless vagrant. S.

To RYND, v. a. Applied to one whose affairs are in disorder. "Gie him time to rynd himsell," i. e. allow him to get things into some sort of order. S.

To RIND, RYNDE, v. a. To dissolve any fat substance by the heat of the fire; as, to rind butter, to rind tallow,
i. e. to melt it, S. also, render.

"That na maner of man—tak vpon hand, to rynde, mylt, nor barrell talloun, vnder the pane of tinsall of all thair gudis." Acts, Ja. V. 1540. c. 105. Edit. 1566. c. 123.
Murray.

It makes them clout elbows and breasts,
Keep rinded butter in charter chests.
Colvil's Mock Poem, P. i. p. 77.

I leave the creash within my wame,
With a' my heart to Finlay Grame;
It will be better than swine seam
For any wramp or minyie;
First shear it small, and rind it sine
Into a kettle clean and fine. Watson's Coll. i. 60.

From Su.G. Isl. rind-a, pellere, propellere, because it is beaten during the operation; as we say, to beat butter; or from Isl. raenn-a, rinde, liquefacere, to melt. S. and A. Bor.
render is evidently from the same source. "To melt down.
To render suet. North." Gl. Grose.

To RYND, v. n. 1. To pertain; to belong. See Sup.

—"First to considder, geue the genrale consalis had the spreit of God to do that thing quhilk ryndit to the weill of the rest of the congregatioun, as had the Apostolis?
—Swa it is necessare, that thay quhilkis occupyis the place of the Apostlis, haue the gyft of the haly gaist (conforme to the promeis of oure Salueour,) to do in all sortis that ryndis to thair office." Kennedy of Crostraguell, Compend. Tractiue, p. 27.

2. To tend. S.

Su.G. rind-a, A.S. hrin-an, aethrin-an, Germ. rein-en, tangere; O. Teut. reen-en, conterminum esse. I need scarcely observe, that touching, used metaph., is equivalent to, concerning, pertaining to.

RIND, RYND, s. Hoar-frost; frost-rynd. V. RHYNE. S.

RYNE, s.

Thai turssit up tentis, and turnit of toun,
The Roy with his round tabill, richest of ryne.
Gawan and Gol. i. 18.

Either, kingdom, Fr. regne; or, as this is otherwise written and pron. S., perhaps rather territory, domain; Teut. reyn, limes, confinium. The latter seems supported by another passage.

Now is the Round Tabil rebutit, richest of rent.
Ibid. iv. 11.

RINEGATE, s. A vagabond. S.

To RING, v. a. 1. To reign, S.

Do clois the presoun of wyndis, and thar on ring.
Doug. Virgil, 17, 28.

2. To rage; to prevail with universal influence. S.

To RING down, v. a. To overpower; to overbear, S.
To RING oure, v. a. To hold in subjection. S.

RING, s. 1. Kingdom.

Thair saw we mony wrangous conquerouris,
Withouthin richt reiffaris of otheris ringis.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592. p. 230.

Honour, quod scho, to this heuenlie ring,
Differs richt far fra this warldlie governing.

Palice of Honour, iii. 77.

Although this may be viewed as a corr. of the Fr. or Lat. v., yet we have some very ancient Goth. words of a similar form. Moes. G. ragin-on, reikin-on, to govern, to preside; ragin-eis, a senator.

2. It also signifies reign, S. It seems doubtful to which of these senses the last extract belongs.

But gif thow will thine hart incline,
And keip his blissit law diuine;—
— As did monie faithfull kingis
Of Israell, during thair ringis:—
Qubais riche rewarde was heuinly bliss,
Quhilk sall be thine, thow doand this.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592. p. 273.

R. Brunne uses it in this sense, p. 85.

To William the rede kyng is gyuen the coroun,
At Westmynstere toke he ryng in the abbay of Londoun.

RING, s. The meal which fills up the crevices in the circle around the mill-stones, Loth. See Sup.

To RING THE MILL. To fill the crevices round the millstones with the first grain that is ground, after the stones are cleared. S.

This is different from the definition of the term in Ang. V. MILL-RING. The term, as thus expl., seems merely to respect the circular form of the stones.

RING, s. Used as synon. with rink, a race, if not an erratum.

"It is enough that these who run a race see the gold only at the starting place; and possibly they see little more of it, or nothing at all, till they win to the ring's end, and get the gold in the loof of their hand." Rutherford's Lett. P. i. ep. 24. V. RENK.

RING, s. A circular fort, S.

"There are many Pictish and Scotch encampments in this parish and the neighbourhood. All of them are of a round or oval figure, and are called rings by the common people." P. Lauder, Berw. Statist. Acc. i. 77.

"There are in the parish four encampments, all of a circular figure, called rings by the common people." P. Cuiiter, Lanark. Statist. Acc. vi. 78. V. also xiii. 390. 391.

This term seems to be used only in the South and South-West of S.; and may have originated merely from the circular form of these enclosures. Among the Northern nations, however, the same word, primarily signifying a ring for the finger, or any thing circular, has been applied to these places where thing, ting, i. e. their comitia, or public conventions, were held. Hence the phrase, in the Sw. laws, A thing oc a ring, in judicio et circulo; Ihre, in vo.

Among the Germans it was extended to encampments. The Huns gave the name of Ring, or Hringe, to that place in the middle of the camp, of a circular form, in which the king, with his nobles, used to lodge, both for the sake of honour and of security. Lambec. Bibl. Vin-dob. ap. Ihre. Hence the palace of their princes was denominated Rhingus. V. Du Cange.

It has, with great probability, been supposed by Verel. and other learned writers, that from ring, as denoting such an assembly, the Ital. have formed reng-are, areng-are, aring-are, verba facere in comitiis, foro, senatu; whence Fr. harang-uer, the word being merely aspirated. Fr.

rang-er, to set in order, and rang, the right of precedence in a public meeting, E. rank, have been traced to the same source.

RING. To Ride at the Ring, a phrase denoting an ancient amusement. See Sup.

A.S. hring-sete signifies circus, "a roundle or circle, a place in Rome, where the people sat and saw games; Hring-seta, Circenses, games of wrestling, running, and the like exercises;" Somner. Hring seems here used in reference to the circular form of the buildings. But Alem. ring was transferred to the entertainment; lucta, certamen; ring-en, certare, luctare; Dan. ring-er, id. In Su.G. it is used to denote a ring, which, as it was anciently suspended at the tournaments, the knights attempted to carry away with their lances. Hence, rida till rings, hastiludium exercere; Ital. arringo, locus certaminis.

It is singular, that this ancient custom of riding at the ring, which was reckoned an amusement worthy of the most celebrated knights, is now observed only by the Fraternity of Chapmen, on the day of the annual election of their president or Lord.

"To prevent that intemperance to which social meetings in such situations are sometimes prone, they spend the evening in some public competition of dexterity or skill. Of these, riding at the ring, (an amusement of ancient and warlike origin,) is the chief. Two perpendicular posts are erected on this occasion, with a cross beam, from which is suspended a small ring: the competitors are on horseback, each having a pointed rod in his hand; and he who, at full gallop, passing betwixt the posts, carries away the ring on his rod, gains the prize." P. Dunkeld, Perth. Statist. Acc. xx. 433.

This seems to have been an amusement used in Iceland. Hence, hringleikur, lusus genus, Verel.; literally, the ring-sport, or play; Sw. ringleek.

RING, s. The name for a game of marbles among boys, in which the bowls are placed in a ring or circle. S. To RING in, v. n. Bells are said to be ringing-in, when in order to stop them, the repetition of the strokes becomes quicker than before. 2. A person who has made a great noise in his day, is said to be ringing in, when on the borders of death. S.

RINGALD, s. Crowd. V. RANGALD.

RINGAN, RINGANE, RINGAND, s. The name Ninian. S.

RING DANCIS, "S. a kind of dances of many together in a ring or circle, taking one another by the hands, and quitting them again at certain turns of the tune (or Spring, as Scot. we call it,) and sometimes the Piper is put in the center;" Rudd.

Like to the goddes Diane with hir rout,— Ledand ring dancis, quham followis ouer all quhare
Ane thousand nymphis flokand here and thare.

Doug. Virgil, 28, 42.

"The ring means the dance à la ronde." Sir. D. D. Annals, i. 259. N.

The learned judge is certainly right. For Kilian gives Teut. ringh-dans as synon. with ronden-dans, orbis saltatorius. V. Hop.

RINGE, s. A whisk or small besom, made of heath, S. corr. from the E. v. rinse.

RINGE-HEATHER, s. Cross-leaved Heath, S.B. Erica tetralix, Linn.

It seems to receive its name from ringes being made of it.

RINGE, s. A blattering or rumbling noise. S.

RINGER, s. The name given to a stone lying within the ring that surrounds the tee, or mark in Curling. S.

R I N

RING-FENCE, s. A fence surrounding a farm. S.
RING-FENCIT, part. adj. Surrounded by a ring-fence. S.
RINGING BLACK FROST. A severe frost, without snow, when the ground seems to ring when struck. S.
RINGIT QUOY, a phrase used in Orkney, denoting a circular enclosure. V. QUOY.

RINGLE-EYED, RYNGIT, adj. Having a great proportion of white in the eye, S. Wall-eyed. E. See S.
"Scot. we yet call such horses as have a great deal of white in their eye Ringle-ey'd;" Rudd.

The term seems properly to denote a ring of white as it were encroaching on the ball of the eye. This idea is conveyed by the language of Doug.

— His creist on licht bare he,

With bawsand face, ryngit the forthir E.

Doug. Virgil, 146, 36.

A horse, that has this form of the eye, is generally reckoned apt to startle, as seeing objects from behind.

RINGO, s. Apparently the same as Mill-ring, sense 2. S.

RING SANGIS, songs or tunes adapted to ring dances.

To the sche led ring sangis in karoling.

Doug. Virgil, 220, 31.

Sum sang ring sangis, dancis, ledis and roundis,

With vocis schil, quhil all the dale resoundis.

Ibid. Prol. 402, 33.

It certainly should have been printed dancis ledis, without the comma. V. RING DANCIS.

RING-STRAIK, s. An instrument used for stroking down grain in a corn measure. V. Straik. S.

RING-TAILS, s. pl. 1. Small remnants of any thing.

2. The confused odds and ends in the winding up of a multifarious concern. 3. Sometimes, arrears of rent. S.

RIN-IM-O-ER, s. A game resembling Willie Wastle. S.

RINK, RYNK, s. A strong man.

Stevin come steppand in with stendis,

Na rynk mycht him arreist.

Often written Renk, q. v.

Chr. Kirk, st. 6.

A.S. rinc, strenuus miles; but also used, in a general sense, for vir, homo. Su.G. ring, vir praestans, eximius. Ihre inclines to derive it from reke, Isl. reck-ur, a hero, n being often inserted in the Northern languages. Reckar, indeed, in pl. is so defined by Verel., as plainly to shew that it is radically one; Viri proceri et robusti; expl. in Sw. Stora och starka karlar, i. e. S. stour and stark carles. Perhaps the Isl. term ought to be traced to Moes.G. reiks, a prince. V. RENK.

RINK, RYNK, RENK, s. 1. A course; a race; also reik, Gl. Shirr.

A man is said to get out his rink, when he is sowing his wild oats, or going on in a dissipated course; Fife.

Be this thay wan nere to the renkis end,

Irkut sum dele before the mark wele kend.

Doug. Virgil, 138, 33.

"Sleepy bodies would be at rest, and a breathless horse at the rink's end."—"Howbeit the runners never get a view of it, till they come to the rink's end." Rutherford's Lett. P. i. ep. 166, P. ii. ep. 2.

2. The act of running.

"He commandit als, gyf the haris had forrun the hundis be lang renk, to be na forthir persewit." Bellend. Cron. B. v. c. 11.

"Agill of thair bodyis;—swift of rynk, and reddy to euery kynd of jeopardde." Bellend. Cron. Fol. 27, a. Corpore agiles—ad cursum; Boeth. V. THORTOUR.

3. The course of a river.

— The schyl riuer hait Ufens,

Sekis with narrow passage and discens,

304

R I N

Amyd how valis his renk and isché.

Doug. Virgil, 237, b. 10.

4. The particular station allotted to each party at the commencement of a tournament.

Sone fra thai hade thair salus made,

Thai tuk thair rynkis, and samyn rade.

And at the tothir cours of were

The Dowglas hit, and brak his sper.

Wyntown, viii. 35. 40.

5. A distinct charge or encounter in a tournament.

"In the thrid rynk Lord Wellis wes doung out of the sadyll with sic violence, that he fell to the ground with gret displeseir of Inglismen." Bellend. Cron. B. xvi. c. 10.

Thus rynnynk renk is used, Gawan and Gol. V. RIO-LYSE.

Trumpetts and schalims, with a schout,

Playd or the rink began;

And equal juges sat about

To see quha tint or wan

The field that day.

Justing, Adamson & Sym, Evergreen, ii. 177.

6. The course; the proper line in the diversion of curling on the ice, S.A. See Sup.

Perhaps from A.S. hrincg, a ring; as the mark is generally a cross enclosed in a circle.

Rank occurs in Graeme's Poems, by mistake for rink or renk.

— Say, canst thou paint the blush

Impurpled deep, that veils the stripling's cheek,

When, wand'ring wide, the stone neglects the rank,

And stops midway?— Anderson's Poets, xi. 447.

7. It also denotes the division of two opposite sides into smaller parties, at quoit-playing. S.

8. Rink is still used in the South of S. for a straight line. It also denotes a line or mark of division. S.

Rudd. derives it from Teut. renck-en, flectere; "for," says he, "the word properly signifies a tour, a compass, or winding, and not going straight on." This idea he seems to found on the sense of the v. RINK, q. v. But it is not at all applicable to the noun, which is undoubtedly most ancient. This suggests an idea directly the reverse; and has been probably formed, after the example of frequentatives, from A.S. rinn-an, or Su.G. raenn-a, to run. Or, as the term is applied to running in the lists, sense 4., if we could suppose that it had been unknown before the use of tournaments, it might have originated from A.S. hrinc, hrincg, Su.G. ring; as this was the most honourable species of running. Hence Su.G. raenna till rings, rida till rings, hastiludium exercere.

MASTER OF THE RINKS. V. LEADER. S.

RINKROUME, s. "Place of tournay" course-room.

That round rinkroume wes at vtterance;

Bot Talbartis hors, with ane mischance,

He outterit, and to rin was laith.

Lyndsay's Squyer Meldrum, 1594, B. i. a.

To RINK, v. n. "S. To rink up and down, discurre, circumire," Rudd. vo. Renk.

To ride and rink, to scamper about the country on horseback, S.B.

RINKER, RINKETER, s. A high, thin, and long-legged horse, as opposed to one of a round squat shape, S. It is generally conjoined with the adj. auld.

The phrase, auld rinker, or rinketer, seems equivalent to, old, or worn-out race horse; from rink, a race.

RINKETER, s. A tall raw-boned woman. V. RINKER. S.
To RINK about. To run from place to place; to gad about. S.

To RINK, v. n. To rattle; to make a noise. S.

R I P

RINNER, s. 1. A little brook. 2. Butter melted with tar for sheep-smearing. S.
RINNIN KNOT, RUN KNOT. A slip-knot. S.
RYNNAND, part. pr. Current. S.
RINO, s. Ready money; a cant term, S.B.
 — That their kindness may continue,
 Wishes them fouth o' ready rino.
Shirref's Poems, p. 244.
RINRIGS, s. pl. Wiles; stratagems; deep-laid schemes.
RINRUIFF, s. Apparently meant for run-roof. S.
RINS, s. pl. A local term denoting two large promontories, Galloway.
Ir. rinn, a hill, Lhuyd. Gael. rinn, a point,—but used in a general sense. Bullet says, that Alem. rain signifies a mountain, and rein, a ridge, a promontory. I do not find the terms either in Schilter or Wachter. But Isl. hraun is rendered, saxosa loca, cautibus continuis obsita; G. Andr. p. 121.
RINSCH, adj. Rhenish; of or belonging to the Rhine. S.
RIN-SHACKEL, s. A shackle that runs on a chain, with which a cow is bound in the byre. S.
RYNSIS, RYNSS, s. Gauze, or some material of which the head-dress of females was made. S.
RIOLYSE, s. pl. Princely persons; nobles.
 Twa rynnynng renkis raith the riolyse has tane;
 Ilk freik to his feir to frestin his fa.
Gawan and Gol. iii. 21.
 Formed perhaps, as Mr. Pinkerton observes, from royal, often written rial, ryal; or it may be immediately from Lat. regalis, princely, or regales, petty kings. V. FRESTIN.
RIOT, s. Festivity; indecent mirth.
 The gild and riot Tyrrianis doublit for joy,
 Syne the reird followit of the younkeris of Troy.
Doug. Virgil, 37, 11.
 Thus, as Rudd. has observed, O.Fr. riot-er signifies to feast and be merry. Isl. hriota, subsultare.
To RYOT, v. a. To destroy; to ravage.
 All that he fand he makyt his;
 And ryotyt gretly the land.
Roytyt, Ed. Pink. Barbour, ix. 500. MS.
 — Inglis man he come agayne,
 And gert his folk wyth mekil mayne
Ryot halyly the cwntré. Wyntown, viii. 30. 111.
 Isl. riod-a, Su.G. rod-ia, desolare, vastare; Teut. ruyt-en, destruere, vastare. Hence the Belg. phrase, ruyten and rooven, to pillage and plunder. V. ROISTERS.
RYOT, s.
 — The nawyne
 Of Frawns thai tuk wp all of were,
 And wan thame all wyth thare powere,
 And slwe the Amyrall of that flot.
 Than all the lawe in that ryot,
 That thai in-to schippys fand,
 Thai let rycht nane than pas to land.
Wyntown, vii. 9. 100.
 Mr. Macpherson views it as perhaps an err. for rowt, q. crowd, army. Or, it may signify destruction, E. rout, from the v.
RIP, RIPP, REIP, s. A handful of corn not thrashed, S. Gl. Shirr. See Sup.
 A guid New-year I wish thee, Maggie,
 Hae, there's a ripp to thy auld baggie.
Burns, iii. 140.
 It properly denotes that which one holds in his hand, as he cuts it down on the field; reap, Northumb. V. RAPEGYRNE.
RIP, s. A basket made of willows, or of willows and straw, for holding eggs, spoons, &c. Ang. See Sup.
 VOL. II. 305

R I P

RIP, s. 1. Any thing base or useless; as a counterfeit piece of money; an old horse, S.
 It is used in the latter sense in cant E.
 2. A regardless fellow. 3. A cheat, S. S.
Rap is synon. q. v. I have not, however, heard rap used to denote a worn-out horse. Belg. rappig signifies scabby, scurvy; Alem. hryp-an, to steal.
To RIPE, RYPE, v. a. 1. To search; to examine, S. See Sup.
 And eftyre this mony a day
 The grafe, quhare this dede Pypyne lay,
 Thai rypyd, and the body soucht.
Wyntown, vi. 4. 33.
 Quho heirtofore hes hard within the bowells of Edinburgh, yettes and dures under silence of nicht Brust up, houses ryped, and that with hostility, seaking a woman, as appeareth, to oppresse hir? Knox's Hist. p. 303.
 In this sense, we speak of ripping for stolen goods, S.
 2. To probe.
 — All the hyrnis of his goist
 He rypit wyth the swerd amynd his coist,
 So tyl his hart stoundis the pryk of death.
Doug. Virgil, 339, 38.
 3. To investigate; transferred to the act of the mind.
 Bot ripe the querel, and discus it plane.
Doug. Virgil, Prol. 354, 28.
 "Be instructioun of gods word examine, discus, serche and rype weil thi conscience." Abp. Hamiltoun's Catechisme, Fol. 153. b.
 4. To poke, S.
 Then fling on coals, and ripe the ribs,
 And beek the house baith but and ben.
 i. e. Poke the grate. Ramsay's Poems, ii. 205.
 Rudd. deduces it, although used somewhat obliquely, from A.S. rypt, dissutus, rypp-an, spoliare, whence E. rip; Sibb. from Teut. repp-en, movere, agitare. But the most probable origin is A.S. hryp-an, dissuere, the proper root of E. rip. It also signifies fodere, to dig, Somner. This may, indeed, be viewed as the literal sense of the v. as used by Wyntown.
 We may mention two Isl. words, which are perhaps allied.
Hrip denotes a sieve, G. Andr. p. 123. and the v. sift is metaph. used with respect to accurate investigation. Rif-ia is rendered, distinguere, explicare, Verel., a sense which has considerable affinity.
RYPE-POUCH, s. A pick-pocket; applied by schoolboys when any thing is taken out of their pockets. S.
To RYPE, v. a. To reap; to obtain. S.
RIPPET, RIPPAT, s. 1. Tumult, the noise of great mirth, S.
 — Thre hundreth rial templis dyng
 Of riot, rippet, and of reuelling
 Ryngis, and of the myrthfull sportis sere
 The stretis sounding on solacius manere.
Doug. Virgil, 269, 47.
 2. It also signifies uproar, in a bad sense, S.
 Allace! this is ane fallone rippat!
 The widdifow wardannis tuik my geir
 And left me nowdir horss nor meir,
 Nor erdly gud that me belangit.
Lyndsay, S.P.R. ii. 186.
 3. Disturbance of mind about any thing; as denoting complaint, murmuring, &c. 4. A bitter-tempered chattering creature. S.
 Teut. repp-en, movere, agitare, and Su.G. rap-a, to rush headlong, seem to be cognate terms. But it is perhaps rather to be traced to Teut. ravott-en, tumultuari, luxuriari.
 2 Q

RIPPIE, s. A kind of pock-net fixed to a hoop, used for catching crabs, Mearns.

Perhaps allied to Isl. hrip, cribrum; or hrip-a, raptim ago.

To RIPPLE, v. a. To Ripple Lint, to separate the seed of flax from the stalks, S. A. Bor. See Sup.

— Syn powing, and ripling, and steeping, and then To gar's gae and spread it upon the cauld plain.

Ross's Helenore, p. 135.

Teut. rep-en, stringere semen lini; repe, instrumentum ferreum, quo lini semen stringitur; Germ. riffel, id. The v. riffel-n, varies a little in its signification, being rendered to hatchell or pull flax. Isl. ripell denotes an instrument wherewith any thing is scraped; rupl-a, nudare, spoliare. But Su.G. rep-a, to pluck, seems to direct us to the original idea; repa lin, linum vellere; Moes.G. raup-jan ahsa, to pluck the ears of corn, Mark ii. 23. Nearly allied to this, if not deduced from it, is A.S. rip-an, metere, to reap, E.

RIPPLE, RIPLE, s. A toothed instrument through which flax and hemp are drawn to separate the seed from the stalks. S.

RIPPLER, s. A person employed in separating the seed of flax or hemp from the stems. S.

RIPPLING, s. The operation of separating the seed of flax, &c. from the stems. S.

LINT-RIPPLE, s. A ripple used chiefly for flax. S.

RIPPLIN-CAIMB, s. A wide-toothed and coarse comb, or instrument for separating the bolls of flax from the stem, S. V. the v. See Sup.

"Every thing has its time, and so has the rippling-comb," S. Prov. Kelly, p. 95. equivalent to, "Every dog has his day."

To RIPPLE, v. n. 1. To drizzle; used both in the North and South of S. 2. Applied to the atmosphere; "The clouds are ripplin," or beginning to separate, so as to foretell a cessation of rain. S.

RIPPLES, RIPPLIS, s. pl. 1. A weakness in the back and reins, said to be attended with shooting pains, S.

— Rimbursin, ripplis, and bellythra—

Roull's Cursing, Gl. Compl. p. 331.

For world's wasters, like poor cripples,

Look blunt with poverty and ripples.

Ramsay's Works, i. 143.

From the cause, to which this disease is attributed, perhaps the name is corr. from Fr. ribauld, a fornicator. This seems confirmed by the Teut. phrase, Vuyl rabauld, ita rei venereae intentus ut enervetur; Kilian.

2. Used improperly to denote the King's evil, Bord. V. Gl. Compl. ibid. See Sup.

From the vulgar song quoted, it seems uncertain whether the term be meant in this, or the common signification.

RIPPLIN-GARSS, RIPLE-GRASS, s. Rib-grass; Plantago lanceolata. S.

RISE, s. A bulrush; or perhaps a coarse kind of grass.

Unto ane muddy mares in the dirk nycht,

Amang the risis and redis out of sycht,

Full law I lurkit, quhil vp salis drew thay.

Doug. Virgil, 43, 9.

Rudd. is doubtful, whether the term denotes bulrushes, or shrubs. But it is most natural to understand it of some kind of grass, as conjoined with reeds. It is evidently the same with Reyss, q. v.

A.S. ris, juncus, Isl. reis, Moes.G. raus, arundo.

RISE, RYS, RICE, RYSS, s. 1. A small twig or branch, S.

Although generally rendered as if pl., it most frequently occurs in the sing., when it should be written rise, rys, or rice; and in pl., ryss, as horss for horses.

Welcum oure rubent rois upoun the ryce.

Bannatyne Poems, p. 194.

Heich Hutchoun with ane hissill ryss

To red can throw thame rummil.

i. e. A hazel rod.

Chr. Kirk, st. 16.

The kowschot croud is and pykkis on the ryse.

Doug. Virgil, 403, 22.

In these passages it seems used in the sing. Rise signifies branch in some early specimens of E. poetry. V. Warton's Hist. E. P. i. 32.

And therupon he had a gay surprise,

As white as is the blosme upon the rise.

Chaucer Milleres T. ver. 3324.

"Hot peasecods," one began to cry,

"Strawberry ripe, and cherries in the rise."

Lydgate's London Lyckpenny. Ellis, Spec. E.P. i. 325.

i. e. on the twig.

2. In the pl. it denotes brushwood, or small twigs, S.

Doun the thruch ryss ane revir ran with stremis.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 9.

This passage, not understood by Lord Hailes, is evidently, as Mr. Pinkerton observes, "through the bushes." The words have, from inadvertency, been transposed. They are printed in Evergreen, xi. 24. Doun throwch the ryss, &c.

The term is also used in Orkney. The branches of heath, juniper, &c. are called the ryss of such a plant.

3. The branches of trees after they are lopped off. S. To RICE the Water. To throw plants or branches of trees into a river to frighten the salmon and make them lie still, before using the lister. S.

STAKE AND RYSE. 1. Pales for enclosing ground, formed by stakes driven into the earth, and thin boughs nailed across; in some places, by twigs wattled or intertwined, which is the ancient mode.

"That na man mak hedgis of dry staiakis, rise or stikis, or yit of hewin wod, bot allanerly of lyand wod." Acts, Ja. II. 1457. c. 94. Edit. 1566.

"Victorine capitane of Britane commandit the Britonis by general edict to byg the wal betuix Abircorne and Dunbritane with staiik and ryse in thair strangest maner to saif thaym fra inuasion of Scottis & Pichtis." Bellend. Cron. B. vii. c. 6. Palis sudibusque; Boeth.

"At that time, the houses in Rannoch were huts of, what they called, Stake and Rise." P. Fortingal, Perth. Statist. Acc. ii. 458.

The same phrase is applied to the partition walls in many cottages. These are called walls of stake and rise; "i. e. of stakes, and small twigs, ropes or such like, twisted about them, and then plastered over." Rudd. vo. Risis.

2. Metaph. a discourse or sermon written out in a skeleton form, without extending the illustrations, is said to be prepared in a stake-and-ryse way. S.

Isl. hrys, virgultum, Su. G. ris, id. whence ris-a, to beat with rods; Isl. hreyss-ar, hrish-ior, a place beset with twigs or brushwood; sometimes a marsh of this description, palus virgultis consita; Verel. Teut. rysk-en, virgulta, rami; Su.G. ruska, congeries virgultorum. This Seren (vo. Rush) derives from rusk-a, vento agitare. If this etymon be well-founded, we may view A.S. hrisc-ian, stridere, rispere, as a cognate term. This, again, may be viewed as an oblique use of the old Moes.G. v. hris-jan, to shake, because of the rustling noise, caused by the shaking of trees, armour, &c.

To RISK, v. n. To make "a noise like the tearing of roots," Gl. Burns.

— Thy auld tail thou wad hae whiskit,

An' spread abreed thy weel-fill'd brisket,—
Till spritty knowes wad rair't and risket.—

Burns, iii. 143.

It seems properly to refer to the noise made by bul-rushes, and the like, when hastily passed through. V. the preceding etymon.

RISKISH, adj. A term applied to soil. S.

RISKOURS, s. Recourse. S.

RISLES, s. pl. Perhaps, errat for ribbes, ribs. S.

RISP, s. The coarse grass that grows in marshy ground, S. See Sup.

And hard on burd into the blemit meids,
Amangis the grene rispis and the reids,
Arryvit scho—

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 10.

Rispe is used in this sense in Wallace, Edit. 1648, instead of Reyss, MS. V. REYSS, and RESP.

RISP, s. A sort of file used by carpenters. E. rasp. S.

To RISP, v. a. 1. To rub any body with a file, S. rasp, E. See Sup.

Su.G. rasp-a, Germ. rasp-en, Fr. rasp-er, Hisp. rasp-ar, Ital. rasp-are, id. Wachter views these terms as formed, by metathesis, from Isl. reps-a, cum aliorum injuria corradere; and this from Germ. reib-en, to rub.

2. To rub any hard bodies together; as to risp the teeth, S.

It is also used in a neut. sense, as denoting the ungrateful sound emitted.

RISPINGS (of bread,) s. What is rubbed off by a rasp. S.

RISPIE, s. Coarse grass, the same as Risp. S.

RISSILLIS, RYSSILLIS, adj. Of or belonging to Lisle. S.

RISTLE, s. A kind of plough used in North Uist. S.

To RIT, RET, v. a. 1. To make a narrow longitudinal incision in the ground, as a line of direction for future labour. 2. To scratch; as, "Dinna rit the table." S.

RIT, RITT, s. 1. A slight incision made in the ground.

2. A scratch made on a board. V. RAT. S.

RITMASTER, s. A captain or master of horse.

"At present there was very little difference between the King's secret council, and Dalziel's council of war. Duke Hamilton was only Rit-master Hamilton, as the General used to call him, Rothes was Rit-master Lesly, Linlithgow was Colonel Livingstone, and so of the rest." Wodrow, i. 271.

Belg. rit-meester, id. Teut. rit-meester, rid-meester, ryd-meester, dux equitatus, magister equitum, from rit, ryd, equitatus.

RITNACRAP, s. 1. Root nor crap, or top. 2. Metaphorically a mystery. S.

RITTOCH, s. The Greater Tern, Orkn.

"The Greater Tern, (Sterna hirundo, Lin. Syst.) which is here known by the name of the Rittoch, appears only in summer." Barry's Orkney, p. 303.

G. Andr. gives rit-ur as the Isl. name of the seapie; Avis marina, pica marina, vulgo risa, p. 200; According to Penn. in Isl. the Kittiwake is called Ritsa, Norw. Rot-teren, Zool. p. 539.

RITTOCKS, s. pl. The refuse of tallow, when it is first melted and strained. Cracklins. S.

To RIV, v. n. To sew coarsely and slightly. S.

To RIV, v. a. To rivet; to clench. Syn. Roove. S.

RIVA, s. A cleft in a rock. S.

RIVE, s. 1. A rent, or tear, S. Isl. ryf, from rifu-a, to rend. 2. The act of laying hold with the teeth, and eating hastily. S.

RIVE, s. The sea-shore. S.

Now bringeth me atte rive,

Schip and other thing;

Ye se me nevir olive,

Bot gif ich Ysonde bring. Sir Tristrem, p. 84.

"The sea shore, from ripa, Lat." Gl. Tristr. Perhaps rather from Isl. rif, reif, brevia; q. the place where ships of small burden lie, for receiving passengers, as being shallow.

To RYVE, v. a. To rob; to spoil.

— Thai besid Enuerkething,

On west half toward Dunferlyng

Tuk land; and fast begouth to ryve.

V. REIF, v. Barbour, xvi. 551. MS.

RYUER, s. A robber. See Sup.

With thy virginal handis breke anone

Yone Troiane ryueris wappinnis and his spere.

Doug. Virgil, 380, 44.

Rudd. observes; "But 125, 10. our author seems to dennte a Hawk by it."

Glade is the grounde the tendir flurist grene,—

The wery huntar to fynd his happy pray,

The falconere rich ryuir vnto fleyne.

Germ. refier denotes a tract of country; lust-refier, a pleasant region. It is most probable, however, that the term here used signifies "abundance of prey." V. REYFFAR.

To RIVE, v. a. To plough up ground that has either lain long in lea, or has not been ploughed before. S.

To RYVE out, or RIVE up, v. a. To break up very tough ground, or what has been long unploughed. S.

RYUING, s. The recoil of a piece of ordnance. S.

RIVLIN, s. A sandal of raw hide. V. REWELYNYS. S.

RIWELL. Roelle, a sort of buckler, Wallace I. x. 106. S.

To RIZAR, v. a. 1. To dry in the sun. A rizart had-dock, one dried in this manner, S. See Sup.

2. Applied to clothes half-dried in the open air. S.

Fr. ressorè, parched, or dried, by the sun.

RIZAR, s. A drying by means of heat, properly that of the sun, S.

RIZARDS, RIZARS, RIZZER-BERRIES, s. pl. The name given to Red Currants; uvæ Corinthiacæ, S. See Sup.

"There are also at Scalloway some Goose and Rizzer-berrie bushes, which use every year to be laden with fruit, which are a great rarity in this place of the world." Brand's Orkney, p. 80.

RIZZIM, s. A stalk of corn. S.

To RIZZLE, v. n. To rustle. S.

RIZZLES, RUSSLES, s. pl. A species of berry. S.

ROAD,* s. Large way; path. Hence, S.

IN one's ROAD. 1. Applied to one who is deemed a hindrance, encumbrance, or restraint to another. S.

2. Iwadna see you in my road. The language of an active impatient person to one slow in operation. S.

OUT OF one's ROAD. 1. Used in a negative form of one who never loses sight of his own interest, or how every occurrence may be turned to his own advantage; as, "Happen what will, ye're never out o' your road."

2. Applied also to one who can submit to circumstances that would be vexatious to others. S.

To ROAD, v. n. Applied to small game which, when found by the setting dogs, instead of taking wing, run along the ground before the sportsman. S.

To ROAD, v. a. To follow game running in this way. S.

ROADMAN, s. A carter who drives stones for mending the public roads. S.

ROAN, s. A congeries of brushwood. S.

ROAN, s. Perhaps a boar. Lord Hailes says a cow. S.

ROB, ROBIN, ROBENE. Familiarly used for Robert. S.

ROBIN-A-REE, s. A fireside game like Jack's Alive. q.v.

ROBIN-HOOD, a play condemned in our old Acts of Parliament. See Sup.

The nature of it is partly explained in the following verses.

In May quhen men yeid everichone,
With Robene Hoid and Littill-Johne,
To bring in bowis and birkin bobbynis;
Now all sic game is fastlings gone,
But gif it be amangs clovin Robbrynys.

Scott, Evergreen, ii. 187. MS.

Birkin bobbrynys means, the seed-pots of Birch. Robbrynys may either be ruffians, or denote bankrupts, q. cloven or broken. Fr. Robin is used as a term of reproach. Robin a trouvé Marion, a notorious knave hath found a notable quean. Robon, a short-gown, is used in composition in a similar sense: La sequele au robon, mean tradesmen, the refuse, &c. Cotgr.

Arnot has thrown together the principal circumstances relating to this ancient custom.

"The celebration of games by the populace, in honour of their Deities and heroes, is of the greatest antiquity, and formed the principal part of the Pagan religion. The Floralia of Rome seems to have been continued with our forefathers, after the introduction of Christianity, under the title of May-games. The custom observed at this day in England, of dancing about May poles, and of carrying through the streets of London pyramids of plate adorned with garlands, undoubtedly originated from the same Pagan institution. As the memory of the original heroes of those games had been long lost, it was extremely natural to substitute a recent favourite, in room of an obsolete heathen deity. Robin Hood, a bold and popular outlaw of the twelfth century, by his personal courage, his dextrous management of the bow, and by displaying a species of humanity and generosity in supplying the necessities of the poor with the spoils he had robbed from the wealthy, became the darling of the populace. His achievements have been celebrated in innumerable songs and stories. As for the game which has been instituted to his honour, it is not so easy to describe what it was, as how strongly it was the object of popular attachment.

"The game of Robin Hood was celebrated in the month of May. The populace assembled previous to the celebration of this festival, and chose some respectable member of the corporation to officiate in the character of Robin Hood, and another in that of Little John, his squire. Council Register, V. i. p. 30. Upon the day appointed, which was a Sunday or holiday, the people assembled in military array, and went to some adjoining field, where, either as actors or spectators, the whole inhabitants of the respective towns were convened. In this field they probably amused themselves with a representation of Robin Hood's predatory exploits, or of his encounters with the officers of justice. A learned prelate preaching before Edward VI. observes, that he once came to a town upon a holy-day, and gave information on the evening before of his design to preach. But next day when he came to church, he found the door locked. He tarried half an hour ere the key could be found; and, instead of a willing audience, some one told him, 'This is a busy day with us; we cannot hear you. It is Robin Hood's day. The parish are gone abroad to gather for Robin Hood. I pray you let (i. e. hinder) them not. I was fain (says the bishop), to give place to Robin Hood. I thought my rochet should have been regarded, though I were not; but it would not serve; it was fain to give place to Robin Hood's men.' Latimer's Sermons, p. 73. A.D. 1550.

"As numerous meetings for disorderly mirth are apt to engender tumult, when the minds of the people came to be agitated with religious controversy, it was found necessary to repress the game of Robin Hood by public statute.

Acts Mar. 1555. c. 61. The populace were by no means willing to relinquish their favourite amusement. Year after year the magistrates of Edinburgh were obliged to exert their authority in repressing this game, (Council Register, V. iv. p. 4. 30.); often ineffectually. In the year 1561, the mob were so enraged at being disappointed in making a Robin Hood, that they rose in mutiny, seized on the city-gates, committed robberies upon strangers; and one of the ring-leaders being condemned by the magistrates to be hanged, the mob forced open the jail, set at liberty the criminal and all the prisoners, and broke in pieces the gibbet erected at the cross for executing the malefactor. They next assaulted the magistrates, who were sitting in the council-chamber, and who fled to the tolbooth for shelter, where the mob attacked them, battering the doors, and pouring stones thro' the windows. Application was made to the deacons of the corporations to appease the tumult. Remaining, however, unconcerned spectators, they made this answer: "They will be magistrates alone, let them rule the multitude alone." The magistrates were kept in confinement, till they made proclamation be published, offering indemnity to the rioters upon laying down their arms. Still, however, so late as the year 1592, we find the General Assembly complaining of the profanation of the Sabbath, by making of Robin Hood plays.—Book of Universal Kirk, p. 414." Hist. Edinburgh, pp. 77.—79.

The phrase, gathering for Robin Hood, refers to the custom of a number of people going through the country to collect money for defraying the expences of this exhibition; as, for purchasing dresses in which the actors were to appear. Ritson has given some curious extracts, on this subject, from Lyson's Environs of London.

"1 Hen. 8. Rec^d for Robyn Hod's gaderyng 4 marks.

5 Hen. 8. Rec^d for Robin Hood's gaderyng at Croydon, - - - 0 9 4

11 Hen. 8. Paid for three broad yerds of rosett for makyng the frer's cote, - - - 0 3 6

—Shoes for the mores daunsars, the frere and mayde Maryan at 7d. a payre, - - - 0 5 4

16 Hen. 8. Rec^d at the church-ale and Robyn hode all things deducted, - - - 3 10 6

&c. &c." Ritson's Robin Hood, i. civ. cv.

It might appear, from one expression used by Arnot, that the prohibition of this game was the effect of the Reformation. But the act of Parliament was made against it so early as the year 1551, several years before the general reception of Protestant principles in Scotland. It might give no offence to the court, that this game was celebrated on Sabbath and on holidays. But men of sober minds must have observed, that, however innocent at first view, it had in fact an immoral tendency; as it consisted in the honourable commemoration of the manners of a notorious robber. It has been said indeed, that "the character of Robin Hood and the outlaws of these early ages, when a proper allowance has been made for the violence of an occupation to which the impolitic severity of the laws compelled them, was not such as to awaken in us much disapprobation;"—that he "robbed the rich only," &c. V. Godwin's Life of Chaucer, i. 197. 198. The laws, with respect to the royal forests, were indeed exceedingly severe. But the individual had, on this account, no right to live in a state of rebellion. In proportion as the memory of Robin Hood was regarded by the vulgar, they must have been alienated from subjection to their rightful rulers, when a law seemed severe; and armed against the rich, at least in their inclinations.

There seems to have been sufficient reason for the exercise of civil authority in the suppression of this game. It is natural enough to suppose that villains, taking advantage of the gathering for Robin Hood, would at times carry the matter so far as to imitate this celebrated character in the very mode of gathering. This, we find, was actually done. Knox accordingly gives the following more particular account of the conduct of "the rascall multitude," who "wer steired up to mak a Robin Huid."

"Bot yet they ceassit not to molest, alswell the inhabitants of Edinburgh, as divers cuntreymen, taking from thame money, and threatning sum with farder injureis. Quharewith the Magistrates of the toun hiely offendet, tuk more deligent heid to sic as resortet to the toun, and apprehendet ane of the principall of that misordour, named Kyllone, a cordinar, quhome they put to ane assyis; and being convicted, (for he could not be absolved, for he was the cheif man that spoylled Johne Moubry of ten crowns of the Sone) they thocht to have executed judgement upoun him, and erectet a gibbet benethe the croce." Hist. pp. 269, 270.

ROBIN-RIN-THE-HEDGE, s. A trailing kind of weed that runs along hedges; perhaps, Erysimum alliaria. S.

To ROBORATE, v. n. 1. To strengthen. 2. To confirm in whatever way; to confirm in a legal manner. S.

ROCH, ROCHE, ROTCHE, s. A rock, Fr. roche. See Sup.
Na bridill may him dant, nor bustuous dynt,
Nor bra, hie roche, nor brade fludis stynt.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 94, 20.

"The depe hou cauernis of cleuchis & rotche craggis ansuert vitht ane hie not." Compl. S. p. 59. Roch, Burrow Acts, c. 62. O.E. roche.

In then at the roche the ladies ryde.

Sir Orpheo, Ritson's E. M. R. ii. 262.

ROCH, ROCHE, (gutt.) adj. Rough; unshorn. S.

ROCH AN' RICHT, adv. Entirely; pretty well. V. ROUCH. S.

ROCHE, s. Apparently an artillery cartridge. S.

ROCHT, adj. Apparently rough or unpolished. S.

ROCK, GIBRALTAR ROCK, s. A kind of confection. S.

ROCKAT, s. A surplice, or loose upper garment, E. rochet; Gl. Sibb.

Su.G. Germ. rock, Alem. rokke, A.S. roce, S.B. rocc-us, Arm. rocket, Fr. rochet, an outer garment, Fenn. roucat, the covering of a bed made of skins.

ROCK-COD, s. A kind of cod found in a rocky bottom. S.

ROCK-DOO, s. The wild pigeon; Columba oenas. S.

ROCKEL, s. The porch or vestibule. S.

ROCKETY-ROW, s. A play in which two persons stand back to back; and, the one passing his arms under the shoulders of the other, they alternately lift each other from the ground. Syn. Seesaw, E. S.

ROCKING-STANE, s. A stone so poised by art as to move at the slightest touch. S.

ROCKING, s. 1. A denomination for a friendly visit, Ayr. 2. The term is now frequently used to denote an assignation between two lovers. See Sup.

On Fasten-een we had a rockin,

To ca' the crack and weave our stockin;

And there was muckle fun an' jokin.

V. Append. p. 7. Burns, iii. 236.

"There is another custom here, less noted indeed, but seemingly of equal antiquity, commonly known in the language of the country by the name of rocking, that is, when neighbours visit one another in pairs, or three or more in company, during the moon-light of winter or spring, and spend the evening alternately in one another's houses. It is here marked, because the custom seems to have arisen when spinning on the rock or distaff was in use, which therefore was carried along with the visitant to a neighbour's house. The custom still prevails, though the rock is laid aside; and when one neighbour says to another, in the words of former days, "I am coming over with my rock," he means no more than to tell him that he intends soon to spend an evening with him." P. Muirkirk, Statist. Acc. vii. 612. 613.

ROCKER, s. A person who attends a Rocking. S.

ROCKLAY, ROKELY, s. A short cloak, S. A reid rocklay, a scarlet cloak worn by women, Ang. See Sup.

He coft me a rokely o' blue. Ritson's S. Songs, i. 188.

The lasses syne pat on their shoon

Their *rokli*es and their fine lace.

R. Galloway's Poems, p. 91.

"A cloak for a woman." N.

This seems most nearly allied to Su.G. rocklin, a surplice. V. ROCKAT.

ROCKLE, s. A pebble. S.

ROCKLIE, adj. Abounding with pebbles. S.

ROCKMAN, s. A bird-catcher. Syn. CRAIGSMAN. S.

RODDEN-FLEUK, RAAN-FLEUK, s. The turbot. S.

RODDIKIN, RUDDIKIN, s. The fourth stomach of a cow, sheep, or of any ruminating animal, S. the Atomason; the same with REID, q. v. See Sup.

RODDING TIME, the time of spawning.

"It is said that the raising of the Damhead of Partick mills, upon the Kelvin, is the sole cause why the fish come not up in rodding time to the Glazert." P. Campsie, Statist. Acc. xv. 321, N. V. RED, REDD, s.

RODDING, s. A narrow path; properly that made by the treading of sheep. S.

RODEN-TREE, s. The mountain-ash, S. B. V. ROUN-TREE.

RODENS, s. pl. The berries of the roan-tree, S.B. See S.

ROE, s. The sail-yard. S.

ROEBUCK-BERRY, s. The Stone-bramble berry, S. Rubus Saxatilis. Linn.

"Wild fruits are here in great abundance, such as—bird-cherry called here hagberry, rasp-berries, Roebuck-berries, and strawberries," &c. P. Lanark, Lanarks. Statist. Acc. xv. 25.

"They [roes] feed during winter on grass, and are remarkably fond of the Rubus Saxatilis, called in the Highlands, on that account, the Roebuck Berry." Penant's Tour in S. 1769, p. 107.

A similar name is given in Sw. to another species of the Rubus, the chamaemorus. It is called hiortron, or the hart-bramble; Linn. Flor. Suec. No. 449.

ROGEROWSE, (g hard), adj. Addicted to freedom of speech. Syn. Outspoken. S.

ROY, s. King.

Than Eduuarde self was callit a Roy full ryk.

Wallace, i. 120. MS.

It was used so late as the seventeenth century.

"The Bishop in his owne citie, and among his vassals, will thinke himselfe a pettie Roy; who dare deny to lend, to give, to serve them with whatsoever they have?" Course of Conformitie, p. 47.

Fr. roi, Gael. re, id. In Gl. Compl. it is said that the latter seems to be of Fr. origin. But this idea is unnatural. The Fr. term is in fact of Celt. origin. C.B. rhuy, rhi, Corn. ruy, Arm. rue, roue, Ir. righ. Lat. rex is probably from the Celt. stock.

To ROY, v. n. To rave.

Rebald, renounce thy ryming, thou but royis;

Thy trechour tung has tane a Heland strynd.

Dunbar, Evergreen, ii. 50.

Apparently from the same root with Teut. reven, Fr. rev-er, id. We say rove for rave. C.B. rheydh, mirth.

ROYALTY, s. A territory immediately under the jurisdiction of the sovereign. V. RIALTE. S.

ROYAT, s. Royalty. S.

R O I

- ROICH, s. Meaning not clear. S.
 ROID, ROYD, RIDE, adj. 1. Rude, severe.
 The King, that stout wes and bauld,
 Wes fechtand on the furd syd,
 Giffand and takand rowtis roid.
Barbour, vi. 288. MS. also, xv. 54.
Ride has the same meaning.
 Yit sal I mak thame unrufe, foroutin resting,
 And reve thame thair rentis with routis full ride.
Gawan and Gol. ii. 15.
 Thus eftere a royd harsk begynnyng
 Happynt a soft and gud endyng.
Wyntown, ix. 1. 27.
2. Used metaph. for large; in reference to the roughness of the means employed.
 Throu the gret preyss Wallace to him socht,
 His awful deid he eschewit as he mocht,
 Wndyr ane ayk, wyth men about him set.
 Wallace mycht nocht a graith straik on him get;
 Yeit schede he thaim, a full royd slope was maid.
 The Scottis went out, no langar thar abaid.
Wallace, v. 77. MS.
A.S. reothe, rethe, rude, rough. Su.G. rodia indeed signifies to cultivate ground by removing trees, shrubs, &c., and metaph. to remove any obstacle. But notwithstanding the apparent connexion between this and the term as used in Wallace, from the allusion to a gap made in a hedge or wall, there seems to be no real affinity.
- ROYET, ROYIT, adj. 1. Wild; irregular; unmanageable.
 — To rede I begane,
 The royetest ane ragment with mony ratt rime.
Doug. Virgil, Prol. 239, a. 53.
2. In a moral sense, dissipated, S. like E. wild.
 Ye royit louns, just do as he'd do;
 For mony braw green shaw an' meadow,
 He's left to cheer his dowy widow.
Fergusson's Poems, ii. 84.
 "Royet lads may make sober men;" Ferguson's S. Prov. p. 28.
3. Romping, that cannot be restrained from sport, S.
 "From the same signification [Fr. deroyer,] is the Scots word royet, or royit, signifying, romping." Ramsay's Poems, i. 239. N.
 According to Sibb., "q. de-royed, from Fr. des-royer, or des-arroyer, perturbare." But by the supposed change, the word would have a signification quite contrary. If not allied to Roy, used as a v. q. v., I would refer to Fr. roide, fierce, ungovernable. Une course roid, the course taken by an unmanageable horse. Lysandre et Caliste, p. 158.
- ROYETNESS, s. Romping, S.
 ROIF, ROVE, RUFF, s. Rest; quietness.
 Robene, thou reivis me roif and rest,
 I luvie bot the allone
Robene and Makyne, Bannatyne Poems, p. 99.
 This is the reading in MS., instead of roiss, as given by Lord Hailes.
 This riche rywer down ran, but resting or rove,
 Throw a forest on fauld, that ferlye was fair.
Houlate, i. 2. MS.
 Fortoun him schawit hyr fygowrt doubill face,
 Feyll syss or than he had beyne set abuff
 In presoune now delyuerit now throw Grace,
 Now at vnness, now into rest and ruff.
Wallace, vi. 60.
Roif and rest is undoubtedly a mere pleonasm, common with S. writers. For the terms are synon.; Alem. rauua, O.E. row, id. "Row, or ru, also written ro. Rest, re-

R O Y

- pose, quietness;" Verstegan, p. 255. Su.G. ro, Isl. roi, quies.
- ROIK, s. A thick mist, fog, or vapour. V. RAK, RAWK.
 ROIK, s. A rock.
 Na more he said, bot blent about in hy,
 And dyd espie, quhare that ane grete roik lay.
Doug. Virgil, 445, 42.
- ROYL-FITTIT, adj. Having the feet turned outward. S.
 ROYNE, s. The scab; the mange. S.
 To ROIP, v. a. To make an outcry; to expose to sale by auction. V. ROUP.
- ROIS, s. A rose.
 — Rois, register, palme, laurere, and glory.—
Doug. Virgil, 3, 9.
- ROISE, s.
 The blude of thair bodeis
 Throw breist plait, and birneis,
 As roise ragit on rise,
 Our ran thair riche wedis. Gawan and Gol. iii. 16.
 "Stream?" Gl. Pink. If this be the meaning, it must be the same with what we call a rush, as a rush of water, S. from A.S. hreos-an, Su.G. rus-a, to rush. It would then signify; "as a stream rages on the twigs or brushwood."
Su.G. rose signifies a clot of any thing, as blodrose, clotted blood. Did this lead to the sense, ragit might be allied to Su.G. rage, an heap. But the allusion, I suspect, is merely to a red rose, when it is ragged, so that its leaves are shed or scattered on its parent twig. Rose on rise is a common phrase. V. RISE.
- ROIS NOBLE, ROSE NOBLE, s. The denomination of an English gold coin, formerly current in Scotland. S.
 ROISS, Bannatyne Poems, p. 99. V. ROIF.
- ROIST, s. A roost.
 Thou raw-moud rebald, fall down at the roist.
Kennedy, Evergreen, ii. 48.
 This metaph. phrase, signifying, "Yield to thy superior," has an obvious reference to a fowl dropping from the roost, from weakness or fear.
- ROYSTER, s. 1. A vagabond; a freebooter; a plunderer.
 "Somerled—gathered a great band of Roysters together, and arriving at the frith or bay of the river Clyde, there made a descent on the left side of it." Buchanan's Hist. Scot. i. p. 311.
 It is used for facinorosos, Lib. vii. c. 43. It occurs also in O.E.
 "He spared not his spurres, nor fauoured his horse flesh: rode lyke a Royster, and doubted no daunger." Saker's Narbonus, ii. Fol. 63, a.
 Elsewhere the writer uses it rather in the sense of spendthrift.
 "The spending of my luyng, hath prooued me a lewde loyterer, and the losing of my lands a right Abbey lubber:—now shall my owne rod bee the remedy for such a royster: and my owne staffe my stale for so foolish a harbin-ger." Ibid. i. Fol. 32, b.
 Junius renders roister, grassator, a robber; referring to Isl. hrister, concussor, a term, which occurs in the Death-song of Regner Lodbrog, st. 15. He also refers to hraustur, robustus, validus, fortis.
 This term, at first view, might seem allied to Su.G. rost-a, to prepare; in a secondary sense, to prepare for war, Isl. rosta, combat, warfare; especially as O.Fr. rusterie, rustrierie, rustrie, signify pillage; rustre, a ruffian.
 But, according to Bullet, L.B. Rustarii is the same with Rutarii, Rotarii, the designation given to a set of rascals, who committed great devastation in France, in the eleventh century. They embodied themselves in troops, like the regular militia, and in this way pillaged the different provinces of the kingdom." In O.Fr. they were called Routiers.

R O L

The name was afterwards transferred to the stipendiary forces, employed by the kings of England. They were raised abroad, and generally in Germany. Such were those, whom King John brought against Berwick, where they were chargeable with great cruelty.

Anno 1216. 18. Cal. Febr. cepit Johannes Rex Angliae villam & castellum de Berwic, ubi cum Rutariis suis feroci supra modum & inhumana usus est tyrannide.—In reditu autem suo Rutarii sui Ministri Diaboli Abbatiam de Coldeingam expoliaverunt. Chron. Mailros. Rer. Angl. Script. i. 190.

Bullet derives the term from Ir. ruathar, pillage; Du Cange, p. 1544. with greater probability, from L.B. rupturarius, a peasant, formed from rumpere, q. one who breaks up the ground, as these depredators chiefly consisted of peasants. Rutarii he views as originating from the Fr. pronunciation, in Routiers. It confirms this etymon, that Matth. Paris, and other writers of that age, use Ruptarii in this sense.

Both Spelman and he derive rout, as denoting a tumultuous crowd, from L.B. rupta, Ruptariorum cohorts.

It seems doubtful, however, whether the insertion of p in this word proves it to be from rumpere; as this insertion was very common with writers in the dark ages, as condempno for condemno, alumpnus for alumnus, &c. Perhaps ruptarii, rutarii, may rather be from the same origin with Ryot, v. q. v. or Teut. ryter, miles, which seems properly to denote a soldier of cavalry. Germ. reuter, ritter, Dan. ryttere, a rider, a trooper; rytterie, cavalry, troopers. See Sup.

2. The term is also applied to a dog, apparently of the bull-dog species.

Some dogs bark best after they byte;
Some snatch the heels and taile about,
And so get all their harns dung out.
A well-train'd Royster fast will close
His jawes upon a mad bull's nose.

Cleland's Poems, p. 112.

To ROYT, v. n. To go from place to place without any proper business, to go about idly, S.B. A beast, that runs through the fields, instead of keeping to its pasture, is said to royt. See Sup.

Su.G. rut-a, discurrere, vagari.

ROYT, s. A reproachful appellation.

Thy ragged roundels, raveand Royt,
Some short, some lang, some out of lyne, &c.

Polwart, Watson's Coll. iii. 2.

It may perhaps denote an unsettled fellow, as allied to the v.

ROIT, s. A term of contempt for a female. S.

ROIT, ROYT, s. A babbler. S.

ROYTYT, Barbour, ix. 500. V. RYOT, v.

ROYTOUS, adj. Riotous. S.

ROK, s. A storm. S.

A tounschip ay ryding in a rok ;—
It may wele ryme, bot it accordis nought.

Pinkerton's S.P. Repr. iii. 126.

Isl. rok, roka, procella, turbo. S.

ROKELAY, ROKELY, s. A short cloak. V. ROCKLAY. S.

To ROLE, v. a. To row; to ply the oar.

— On the coistis syde fast euery wycht
Spurris the persewaris to role besely.

Doug. Virgil, 135, 7.

Hence rollaris, rowers, remiges, Ibid. 321, 50.

ROLK, s. A rock.

— Syne swymmand held vnto the craggis licht,

R O M

Sat on the dry rolk, and himself gan dycht.

Doug. Virgil, 133, 30.

To ROLL, v. a. To enrol. S.

ROLMENT, s. Register; record. S.

ROLLYD, part. pa. Enrolled.

Of archeris thare assemblid were

Twenty thowsand, that rollyd war.

Wyntown, viii. 40. 129.

ROLLYING, part. adj. Free; frank; speaking one's mind without hesitation. Syn. ROLLOCHIN, q. v. S.

ROLLOCHIN, (gutt.) adj. A rollochyn queyn, a lively young woman, who speaks freely and with sincerity, S.

Rallack, to romp, A. Bor., (Grose), is evidently from the same origin. These words are perhaps allied to Isl. rialla, vagatim feror, rugl-a, effutire, or Sw. rolig, pleasant, merry, diverting, fond of sport.

To ROLP, v. n. To cry. V. ROIP.

ROMANYS, ROMANIS, s. 1. A genuine history.

Lordingis, quha likis for till her,

The Romanys now begynnys her.

Barbour, i. 446. MS.

"This word Romanys does not mean what we now term a romance, or fiction; but a narration of facts in romance, or the vulgar tongue. This use of the term is the genuine one, while we abuse it. Decrees of councils, and other remains of the ninth and tenth centuries in France, shew that the Francic, or German, was the court language, while the common people spoke the lingua Romana rustica, or romance. When this last language had prevailed, as that of the greater number always does, and began to be written, it was long called romance, but latterly French. Such was also the case in Spain and Italy. —As tales were first written in romance, the name of the language passed to the subject. Barbour begins, ver. 8, &c. with telling us, that his narration is suthfast, or true: and the reader needs only peruse Dalrymple's Annals, to see the veracity of the most, if not all of it." Note by Mr. Pinkerton, ibid.

2. A work of fiction.

Thir romanis ar bot ridlis, quod I to that ray,
Lede, lere me an vthir lessoun, this I ne like.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 239, b. 9.

Ital. romanze, Fr. roman, id.

ROMANIS, s. Perhaps Rome, or Romania. S.

ROMBLE, s. A blow; a stroke.

Thar mycht men se a hard bataill,
And sum defend, and sum assaile;
And mony a reale romble rid
Be roucht, thar apon athir sid.

Barbour, xii. 557. MS.

"i. e. many a royal rude blow;" from Belg. rommel-en, to rumble, because of the noise made by the stroke.

ROME, s. Realm; kingdom. Fr. royaume. S.

ROME-BLINKED. V. Blink, v. n. To become sour. S.

ROME-RAKARIS, s. pl. "Those who search the streets of Rome for relics," Lord Hailes; or, perhaps, who pretend to come from Rome with relics, which they sell to the superstitious.

And sanis thame with deid mennis banis,
Lyk Rome-rakaris with awsterne granis.

Bannatyne Poems.

q. raiking to Rome. V. RAIK, v.

In O.E. Rome runners.

— There I shall assigne

That no man go to Calice, but if he go for euer,
And all Rome runners, for robbers of beyond,
Beare no siluer ouer sea, that signe of kyng sheweth.

P. Ploughman, Fol. 19, a.

R O N

ROMOUR, s. Disturbance ; general noise, expressive of dissatisfaction. S.

RONDELLIS, s. pl. Small round targets, commonly borne by pikemen ; Fr. rondelles.

"Ande ye soldartis & compangyons of veyr, mak reddy your corsbollis,—lancis, pikkis, halbardis, rondellis, tua handit sourdis and tairgis." Compl. S. p. 64.

RONE, s. "Sheep-skin dressed so as to appear like goat-skin ;" Gl. Wynt.

A rone skyne tuk he thare-of syne,
And schayre a thwayng all at laysere,
And wyth that festnyd wp his gere.

Wyntown, viii. 32. 50.

Mr. Macpherson mentions Gael. ron, seal, sea-calf, Sw. rone, boar. Perhaps it signifies roe-skin, from A.S. ran, Belg. reyn, a roe.

RONE, RON, s. 1. A shrub or bush ; pl. ronnys.

The rone wes thik that Wallace slepyt in ;
About he yeid, and maid bot litill dyn.
So at the last of him he had a sycht,
How prewalye how that his bed was dycht.

Wallace, v. 357. MS.

The roses reid arrayt the rone and ryss.

Henryson, Evergreen, i. 186.

It is evidently the pl. of this s. which is used by Doug., and rendered by Rudd. "brambles, briars." He seems to have given this sense, to support his derivation from Fr. ronce, id. According to this supposition, it must be a pl. s. But in all the passages quoted from Virg., it may be understood in the more general sense given above.

Small birdis flokand throw thik ronnys thrang.

Virgil, 201, 19.

The wod was large, and full of bushis ronk,—
Of breris full, and thik thorn ronnys stent.

Ibid. 289, 53.

— Kiddis skipband throw ronnys eftir rais.

Ibid. 402, 22.

Thorn ronnys cannot mean, thorn briars or thorn brambles. It evidently denotes thorn bushes.

The weird sisters wandring, as they were wont then,
Saw ravens rugand at that ratton by a ron ruit.

Montgomerie, Watson's Coll. iii. 12.

Rudd. also refers to "Isl. runne, saltus sylvae." But the origin is runn, as used by the ancient Goths and Icelanders, to denote a bush or shrub. Brinner up runn en ; If one bush be in a blaze ; Leg. Suderm. ap. Ihre. That hefur Moses audsynt vid runnen ; Moses shewed at the bush ; Luke, xx. 37. Gloande ellde loga af einum runne ; A flame of fire out of a bush ; Exod. iii. 3. Slaande hoffuodet med ronne ; Striking his head with bushy twigs. V. Roenn, Ihre.

2. Rone would seem at times to denote brushwood, or a collection of bushes.

The lyon fled, and throu the rone rinnand,
Fell in the net, and hankit fate and heid.

Henryson, Evergreen, i. 194.

Perhaps the passage from Wallace, quoted above, should be understood in this sense.

RONE, s. A coarse substance adhering to flax, which, in hackling, is scraped off with a knife, Perth.

RONE, s. The mountain-ash, or roan-tree.

My rubie cheiks, wes reid as rone,
Ar leyn, and lauchtane as the leid.

V. ROUN-TREE. Maitland Poems, p. 192.

RONE, s. 1. A run of ice, a sheet of ice ; properly what is found on a road, in consequence of the congelation of running water, or of melted snow, S.

Ye ar the lamps that sould schaw them the licht ;

312

R O O

Lo leid them on this sliddrie rone of yce.

Lyndsay, S.P. Repr. ii. 205.

Isl. hraun is used in a sense nearly allied.

"A stretch of lava, or a hraun, of three miles in length, and two and a half in breadth, remains to this day as a monument of it." Von Troil's Lett. p. 225.

2. Applied to a great assemblage of weeds in a field, so much intertwined as to form a kind of close turf. S.

Isl. hroenn, sparsa congeries ex nive, aqua et pulvere, G. Andr. p. 121.

RONIE, adj. Covered with runs or sheets of ice. S.

RONE, s. The spout affixed to the side of a house, for carrying down the rain-water from the roof, S.O. See Sup.

Sw. raenna, a spout ; takraenna, a spout for the rain on house eaves, Wideg. from tak, the roof, (whence S. thack,) and raenna, a derivative from raenn-a, to run. Germ. rinne, Mod. Sax. ronne, a canal.

RONE, s. A scurf ; a crustation ; a scabby scurf. S.

To RONGE, v. a. To gnaw ; to file. V. RONGED. S.

RONGED, part. adj. Gnawed, filed, fretted, worn away ; Fr. rongé, id.

"Besydis all this, thair clipped and ronged Sollis, quibilk had na passagis thir three years bygane in the realme of France, ar comanded to have cours in this realme, to gratifie thareby hir new comed in souldiours." Knox's Hist. p. 164.

"Forget not the first essay of their good service in Parliament, to God, the Kirk, and Commonwealth, in giving their votes and suffrages to seventeen erections of the Prelacies and livings of the Kirk in temporal lordships, to attaine thirteen rounged and dilapidate Bishopricks." Course of Conformitie, p. 43.

RONGIN, pret. Reigned.

"The Pychtis had sum tyme the principall and maist plenteus boundis of al the landis, that ar now vnder the empire of Scottis, eftir that thay had rongin in the samyn i. m. i. c. Ir yeirs." Bellend. Descr. Alb. c. 5.

RONK, s. "Moisture ;" Pinkerton.

For wes he never yit with schouris schot,
Nor yit our run with ronk, or ony rayne.

King Hart, Maitland Poems, p. 3.

I suspect that the word rather signifies deceit ; Teut. ranche, fallacia. If moisture be meant, it is probably an erratum for Roik, q. v.

RONKIS, s. pl. Inserted by Mr. Pinkerton in his list of words not understood, seems to signify, folds or cresses in a cloak or veil.

Quhen freyndis of my husbandis beholds me on far,
I have my waltir sponge for wa, within my wide ronkis,
Than wring I it full wylelie, and weitis my cheikis.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 60.

A cress is still called a runkle, S. Dan. rincke, Su.G. rynka, a wrinkle, a fold ; Isl. rauga, roeka, id. In Edit. 1508, clokis, however, is the term used.

RONNACHS, s. pl. Couch-grass, Aberd. Mearns ; quicken, Ang.

RONNAL, s. The name given to the female salmon, trout, or fish of whatever kind : the male, kipper. S.

RONNET, s. Rennet for coagulating milk. S.

RONNYS. V. RONE, 2.

RONSY, s. A hackney horse. S.

To ROO, v. a. To pluck wool off sheep. S.

ROO, s. A heap of any kind ; a rick. S.

To Roo, v. a. To pile up into a heap. S.

ROO, s. An enclosure in a grass field, in which cattle are penned up during the night. V. WRO, WROO. S.

ROOD, s. Sometimes used for RUDE-DAY, q. v. S.

R O O

ROOD-DAY, s. The third day of May, S.B. V. RUDE-DAY.

Rood day is used by Wyntown for the 14th September, or day of the Exaltation of the Holy Cross, in the Popish Calendar.

ROOD GOOSE, RUDE GOOSE. Apparently the Brent Goose, the Road goose of Willoughby, Anas Bernicla, Linn., Ross. See Sup.

"During the winter storms, there are shoals of sea-fowls on the coast here, such as wild ducks [ducks,] and a species of geese called rood-geese, which are esteemed good eating." P. Kiltarn, Ross, Statist. Acc. i. 265.

"Rude geese and swans sometimes come there in the winter and spring, especially when the frost is intense." P. Kilmuir W., Ross, Ibid. xii. 274.

The Brent 'goose, in Orkney, is called Raid or Rade Goose; and, like the fowl here described, comes in winter.

Dan. radgaas, Norw. raatgaas; Teut. rotgans, anser minor, sterilis, Kilian.

ROODOCH, s. A deluded wretch; a savage; a villain. S.

ROOF-TREE, s. 1. The beam which forms the angle of a roof, to which the couples are joined, S.

2. A toast, expressive of a wish for prosperity to one's family; because this beam covers the house, and all that is in it. See Sup.

"Your roof-tree," or, "I drink your roof-tree;" i. e. I wish health to all your family, S.B.

ROOK, s. A disturbance; a sort of uproar. To raise a rook, to cause disturbance, Loth.

It seems doubtful whether this be a metaph. use of roik, rouk, a mist, like the synon. vulgar phrase, to raise a reek in the house, S. or allied to Su.G. ryck-a, cum impetu ferri, Germ. ruck-en, movere, ruck, impetus, Su.G. ryck, id. Dan. ryk, impetus. If the latter be the etymon, perhaps rig, a tumult, may be viewed as originally the same word.

ROOKERY, s. An uproar or great noise. S.

To ROOK, v. n. To croak; to cry as a crow or raven. S.

To ROOK, v. a. To deprive one, by whatever means, of money or any thing else. S.

ROOK, s. Thick mist, S. V. RAK, s. 3. See Sup.

ROOKY, adj. Misty, S. A. Bor.

There Wallace stay'd, no wise alarm'd or fear'd,
Until the twinkling morning star appear'd;
A rocky mist fell down at break of day,
Then thought he fit to make the best o's way.

Hamilton's Wallace, p. 330.

The author has undoubtedly written rooky.

To ROOKETTY-COO, v. n. To bill and coo. S.

ROOKETTY-COOING, s. Fondling. S.

ROOKLY, s. Used for Rocklay, a short cloak. S.

ROOM, adj. Roomy; spacious. V. ROWME, adj.

ROOMILY, adv. With abundance of room. S.

ROOM, s. A possession. V. ROWME, s.

ROON, s. A shred; a remnant, Gl. Shirr., S.B. also roond. V. RUND.

To ROOND, RUND, v. n. To make a loud hoarse noise in coughing, as when one has a severe cold. S.

ROOND, s. A list, edging, or border of cloth. S.

ROOND-SHOON, s. pl. Shoes made of lists of cloth plaited across each other. Carpet-shoon. S.

To ROOSE, v. a. Fish that are to be cured are first thrown together in a large quantity, with salt among them. In this state, which is called roosing them, they are allowed to lie for some time. S.

To ROOSE, v. a. To extol. V. RUSE.

ROOSER, s. A watering pan. S.

VOL. II.

313

R O S

ROOSHOCH, adj. Coarse; robust. Also expl. half-mad.

To ROOSSIL, v. n. To beat; to cudgel. Syn. Reissil, q. v.

ROOST, s. 1. This word signifies, not only a hen-roost, as in E., but the inner roof of a cottage, composed of spars of wood reaching from the one wall to the other, S.

2. It is also vulgarly used to denote a garret, S.B.

Isl. raust, Edda Saemund. is rendered an ascent; Su.G. roste, the highest part of a building, which sustains the roof.

ROOTHER, s. A species of shell-fish. S.

ROOT-HEWN, adj. Perverse; froward, S.B.

Ye'll see the town intill a bonny steer;

For they're a thrawn and root-hewn cabbrach pack.

Ross's Helenore, p. 90.

The idea seems borrowed from the difficulty of hacking the roots of trees, or of raising them out of the ground.

Sw. rothugg-a, to root up; to cut off by the roots; from rot, radix, and hugg-a, caedere, S. hagg, E. hack, hew.

To ROOVE, RUVE, RUIFF, v. a. 1. To rivet; to clinch, S. See Sup.

"That there be ane prick of iron, ane inche in roundness, with ane shoulder under and abone, rising upright, out of the center or midst of the bottom of the firloft, and passing throw the midst of the said over-croce barre, ruiffed baith under and abone." Acts, Ja. VI. 1587. c. 114. Murray.

2. Metaph., to determine any point beyond the probability of alteration.

"In the mean time, they are so peremptor, that they may pass a vote, declaring the King, for no scant of fault, incapable to govern while he lives. If this nail be once rooved, we with our teeth will never get it drawn." Baillie's Lett. ii. 236.

Sibb. derives it from E. groove. But Fr. riv-er is used precisely in the same sense. Both terms seem to be radically allied to Isl. roo, summitas clavi; Verel. Ferramentum clavi cuspidi tenaci aptatum; G. Andr. p. 200. Rauf, foramen, rauf-a, perforare, might also be viewed as having some affinity. V. NEID-NAIL.

ROPEEN, s. Any hoarse cry.

"The ropeen of the rauynis gart the cras crope." Compl. S. p. 60. V. ROUP, v.

ROPERIE, s. A ropeyard; a ropework. S.

ROPLAW, s. A young fox. S.

ROPLOCH, adj. Coarse; applied to woollen stuffs. S.

To ROPPLE, v. a. 1. To draw the parts of a hole in cloth together clumsily instead of darning it. 2.

Applied to vegetation, to grow quickly and rankly. S.

RORIE, s. Abbreviation of the name Roderick. S.

ROSA-SOLIS, s. The plant called Sundew. S.

ROSE, s. The disease called Erysipelas. S.

ROSE, s. The rose of a rooser is that part of a watering-pot which scatters the water. S.

ROSEIR, s. "A rose-bush, arbour of roses; Fr. rosier;" Gl. Sibb.

ROSE-LINTIE, s. The red-breasted linnet. S.

ROSET, ROZET, s. Rosin, E. See Sup.

Full of roset down bet is the fir tre.

V. DRODDUM.

Doug. Virgil, 169, 17.

Burns uses rozet metaph.

ROSET-END, s. A shoemaker's thread. V. ENDS. S.

ROSIGNELL, s. A nightingale.

Syne tuke thame to the flicht,

The Osill and the Rosignell,

The Phoenix and the Nichtingell.

Burel's Pilgr. Watson's Coll. ii. 28.

2 R

R O U

Fr. rosignol, id. although this writer by mistake views them as different birds.

ROSIN, ROSSEN, s. A cluster of shrubs or bushes. S.
 ROSSENY, adj. Abounding with brushwood. S.
 ROST, ROIST, s. Tumult; disturbance. S.
 ROST, s. An impetuous current. V. ROUST, s. 2.
 ROT, s. Six soldiers of a company. S.
 ROT-MASTER, s. An officer inferior to a corporal. S.
 ROTCHE, s. The Greenland Rotche; Alca Alle. S.
 ROTCOLL, s. Horse-radish, S.B. Cochlearia armoracia, Linn.

Perhaps from Su.G. rot, root, and koll, fire, q. burning root, because of its pungency; as it is now in Sw., for the same reason, called peppar-rot, i. e. pepper-root.

ROTE, s. A musical instrument.

His rote withouten wene,

He raught by the ring.

Sir Tristrem, p. 106.

The rote, and the recordour, the ribus, the rist.

V. CITHARIST.

Houlate, iii. 10.

Chaucer uses the term. Notker, who lived in the tenth century, as Tyrwhitt observes from Schilter, says that "it was the ancient Psalterium, but altered in its shape, and with an additional number of strings." According to Notker, the Psalter was in his time in Teut. called rotta a sono vocis. V. Schilter in vo. This seems to intimate that the name has some relation to the voice; and in Isl. rodd is vox. L.B. roecta, rota, rotta, Du Cange. Wachter contends, that its true name is crotta, or chrotta. It is mentioned by Venantius Fortunatus, who flourished about 580, as a British instrument.

Graecus Achilliaca, Crotta Britanna canit.

Lib. vii. carm. 8.

The crota, as used by the ancient Britons, and by the Welch in modern times, is a stringed instrument, C.B. crioth, a sort of harp or lyre; crythor, one who plays on a stringed instrument, E. crowder. Ir. cruith, a lyre, a violin; cruitare, a musician.

It seems extremely doubtful, however, if the opinion of Wachter, that rotta is the same with crotta, be well founded. Ritson derives the term "from rota, a wheel, in modern French vielle, and in vulgar English hurdy-gurdy, which is seen so frequently, both in Paris and London, in the hands of Savoyards." Dissert. on Romance, E. M. R. i. CLXV. N. V. Sir Tristrem, Note, p. 305.

ROTHE, s. Apparently a small wheel. S.

ROTHOS, s. A tumult; an uproar; a term used in the higher parts of Ang.; synon. ruthar, q. v.

Its resemblance to Gr. ῥοθος, a tumult, noise of waters, (from ῥεω, fluo,) must be viewed as merely accidental.

ROTTACKS, s. pl. "Old musty corn. Literally, the grubs in a bee-hive;" Gl. Popular Ball.

And now a' their gear and ald rottacks

Had faun to young Hab o' the Heuch.

Jamieson's Popular Ball. i. 293.

ROTTON, ROTTEN, s. A rat. V. RATTAN. S.

ROOF ROTTEN. The black rat; Mus rattus. S.

ROTTEN-FAW, s. A rat-trap. V. FALL, FAW. S.

ROUBBOURIS, s. pl. See Sup.

—Sa the King gart euerie day

Befoir Bell and his altar lay

Fourtie fresche wedderis fat and fyne,

And sex greit roubbouris of wicht wyne.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592. p. 64.

This seems to denote casks of certain dimensions. But I have observed no similar term. In later editions, rubors.

ROUCH, (gutt.) adj. 1. Rough, S.

—Persauyt the mornyng bla, wan, and har,—

R O U

The sulye stiche, hasard, rouch and hare.

Doug. Virgil, 202, 27.

2. Hoarse, S. Germ. Ein rauher hass, hoarseness; literally, a rouch hass, or throat.

This, although apparently only a peculiar use of rauh, hirsutus, greatly resembles Lat. rauc-us. V. ROULK.

3. Plentiful. A gude rouch house, an house where there is abundance of provisions, S.

"He has a hole under his nose, that will never let him be rough;" S. Prov. Kelly, p. 145. "Plentiful," N.

The term is used, in conjunction with another, in a proverbial phrase; "They do nae keep a genteel house, but they have ay plenty of rouch and round;" Clydes. Perhaps rouch here denotes the plainness of the food; as round undoubtedly conveys the idea of abundance; corresponding to Su.G. rund, bountiful, liberal, Wideg. largus, liberalis, Ihre. The last-mentioned writer views the term as allied to A.S. rum, whence rumedlice, liberaliter, rumgifa, liberalis. But round, E. is used in the sense of large, as "a good round sum." V. Johnson. The Fr. say, Tenir table ronde, to keep open table. This, however, may be viewed as borrowed from the romantic histories of King Arthur.

4. As denoting immoral conduct. A profane swearer, a drunkard, &c. is called a rouch, or a rouch-living man, S. 5. Unshorn; unclipped. See Sup.

ROUCH AND RIGHT, adv. Entirely; indifferently well. S.

ROUCH AND ROUND, adj. Plain but abundant. S.

ROUCH, s. The coarser, also the largest part of any thing is generally called the rouch o't. S.

To ROUCH, v. a. To fit a horse's shoes for going on ice. S.

ROUCH-HANDIT, ROUGH-HANDED, adj. Daring; violent.

ROUCHNESS, s. Full housekeeping; as, "There's aye a deal o' rouchness about yon house." S.

ROUCH-RIDER, s. A horse-breaker, S.

ROUCHSOME, adj. 1. Having some degree of roughness.

2. Rough in manners; unpolished; rustic. S.

ROUCH, s. The act of rowing. V. ROUTH.

ROUCH-SPUN, ROUGH-SPUN, adj. Rude; having coarse manners. S.

ROUCHT, pret. v. Reached.

Bot he, that had his sword on hycht,

Roucht him sic rout, in randoun rycht,

That he the hede till the harnys claiff.

V. RAUCHT.

Barbour, v. 632. MS.

ROUCHT, pret. v. Cared; from RAK, q. v.

Fyfteyne he tuk, and to the toun went thai,

Couerit his face, that no man mycht him knaw;

Nothing him roucht how few ennymys him saw.

Wallace, iii. 356. MS.

i. e. He wished to be seen by few; in mod. S. He car'd na how few saw him.

Rouht, O.E. id.

—If the decretal ne were ordeynd for this,

The clerkes ouer alle ne rouht to do amys.

R. Brunne, p. 337.

ROUCHTON, s. A rough, strong fellow. S.

ROUDES, adj. Expl. "haggard."

She has put it to her roudes lip,

And to her roudes chin;

She has put it to her fause fause mouth,

And the never a drop gaed in.

V. the s.

Minstrelsy, Border, ii. 136.

ROUDES, s. An old, wrinkled, ill-natured woman, Fife; a strong masculine woman; pron. rudes. See Sup.

Sae grey a gate! mansworn! and a' the rest!—

Ye lied, auld roudes.—

R O U

Auld roudes!—filthy fellow, I shall auld ye.

Ramsay's Works, ii. 147. 149.

The termination indicates a Fr. origin; perhaps rudesse, harshness, austerity.

ROUDOCH, ROODYOCH, adj. Having a sour look, or a sulky appearance. Syn. Roudes, adj. S.

To ROVE, v. n. 1. To be in a delirium, S. "To rove (in a fever;) to be light-headed, or delirious;" Sir J. Sinclair's Observ. p. 93.; rave, E. See Sup.

2. To have a great flow of animal spirits. S.

ROVING, s. Delirium, S.

"We run our souls out of breath, and tire them in coursing and galloping after our own night-dreams, (such are the roving of our miscarrying hearts), to get some created good thing in this life." Rutherford's Lett. P. i. ep. 89.

To ROVE, v. a. To rove cotton, or wool, to bring it into that ropy form which it receives before being spun into thread. Statist. Acc. vi. 38. See Sup.

ROVE, s. Rest; the same with ROIF, q. v.

ROUEN, part. pa. Rent; torn; riven; split. S.

ROUGHIE, s. 1. A torch used in fishing under night.

2. It seems also to denote brushwood in general. S.

To ROUK, ROWK, v. n. "To lie close; to crouch;" Gl. Sibb.

Thair was na play bot Cartis and Dice,
And ay Schir Flatterie bure the price;
Roundand and rowkand ane till ane vther;
Tak thow my part (quod he) my brother,
And mak betuix vs sicker bandis,
Quhen ocht sall vaik amangis our handis,
That ilk man stand to help his fallow.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592. p. 266.

If we could suppose that it signified "to lie close, to crouch," it would be most natural to view it as allied to Isl. hruk-a, coarctatio, junctis genu calcibus sedentis; G. Andr. But rowkand and roundand seem to be perfectly synon.; both signifying whispering. V. ROWKAR.

ROUK, s. Mist, S. See Sup.

ROUKY, adj. Misty, S. A. Bor. V. RAK, RAWK.

ROULK, ROLK, adj. Hoarse.

I hard a peteous appeill with a pure mane;—
Rowpit rewhchfully roulk in a rud rane.

Houlate, i. 4.

In MS. rolk. Fr. raugue, Lat. rauc-us. L is often inserted after u, and sometimes instead of it; as sowlpit for sowpit.

To ROUM, v. a. To find place for. V. SOUM and ROUM.

ROUN, s. Roe of fish. See Sup.

"Thir salmond in the tyme of heruist, cumis vp throw the smal watteris, speciallie quhare the watter is maist schauld and loun, and spawnis with thair wamis plet to vthir. The hie fische spawnis his meltis. And the scho fische hir rounis." Bellend. Descr. Alb. c. 11. V. RAUN.

ROUN, ROUNE, s. 1. Letters; characters.

Tristrem was in toun;
In boure Ysonde was don;
Bi water he sent adoun,
Light linden spon;
He wrot hem al with roun,
Ysonde hem knewe wel sone.

Sir Tristrem, p. 115.

Here we find a very ancient Northern word, used, most probably, in its primary sense; A.S. Isl. run, Su.G. runa, litera, character. This term, because the ignorant were filled with admiration at the use of letters, which were thence a powerful mean of imposition in the hands of the designing, was transferred to magical characters. The idea may, however, be inverted. It may be supposed, that, as those, who have pretended to divine, have generally used some mysterious characters, or hieroglyphics, it was eventually used to signify letters in general.

R O U

Various etymons have been given of the word, which may be seen in the learned Ihre's Gloss. He derives it from run-a, to whisper. But perhaps the v. was rather derived from the s. as Moes.G. run-a, C.B. rhin, Ir. run, denote a secret, a mystery; and, according to Pezron, Celt. rhyn-ia signifies magical secrets. V. Keysler, Antiq. Septent. p. 462.

Obrien, vo. Run, observes, that "if Olaus Wormius had known that run is the common and only word in the old Celtic or Irish, to express the word secret, or mystery, it would have spared him the trouble of the long dissertation in the beginning of his book, de Literatura Runica, to account for the origin of the word Runae, which was a mysterious or hieroglyphic manner of writing used by the Gothic Pagan Priests, as he himself observes in another place."

Although the term occurs in some of the Celtic dialects in one sense, it is most probable that it is originally Gothic; as it is not only found in almost all the Gothic dialects, but found with a variety of cognates or derivatives. V. ROUN, v.

2. A tale; a story; a narrative.

Marke schuld yeld, unhold, —

Thre hundred pounde al boun,

Of monè of a mold,

Thre hundred pounde of latoun,

Schuld he;

The ferth yere, a ferly roun!

Thre hundred barnes fre. Sir Tristrem, p. 52.

i. e. "The fourth year, he should deliver three hundred noble children; a marvellous story!"

In the following passage, roune may signify either characters, writing, or tale, narrative.

I was at [Erceldoune;]

With Thomas spak Y thare;

Ther herd Y rede in roune,

Who Tristrem gat and bere.

Ibid. p. 9.

3. It seems to be used, in a loose sense, for speech, mode of expression, in general.

"Hunters whare be ye,

The tokening schuld ye blowe."—

Thai blewen the right kinde,

And radde the right roun. Sir Tristrem, p. 32.

To ROUN, ROUNE, ROUND, ROWN, v. n. 1. To whisper.

Mekeliche he gan mele,

Among his men to roun;

He bad his knightes lele,

Come to his somoun.

Sir Tristrem, p. 17.

I am under a necessity of differing from my friend Mr. Scott, who renders roun in this place, "to summon privately." The idea is indeed the same. But the meaning of the term itself is to whisper. "He began to mingle with his men, to whisper to them; and desired his trusty knights to obey his summons."

This ilk cursit fame, we spak of ere,

Bare to the amouris Quene noyis, and gan roune,

The schippis ar grathand, to pas thay mak tham boun.

Doug. Virgil. 110, 7.

It is sometimes used as a v. a.

Sum rounys till his fallow thaym betwene

Hys mery stouth and pastyme lait yistrene.

Chauc. rowne, id.

Doug. Virgil, 402, 51.

Hence the phrase, to round one in the ear.

Scho roundis than an epistil intill eyre.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 72.

R O U

2. Also expl. "to mutter like a Runic enchanter." S.
Su.G. run-a, A.S. run-ian, Alem. run-en, Germ. raun-en, Teut. ruyn-en, mussitare, submissa voce loqui. Or-runen, auricularium, Gl. Pezian. Teut. oor-ruyn-en, in aurem mussitare. C.B. rhagain, susurrare, murmurare. V. Jun.
Gl. Goth. vo. Runa. Ihre derives the s. runa, a secret, from the v., because those who have any secret to tell, and are afraid of being overheard, generally whisper. V. the s.

ROUNAR, ROWNAR, ROUNDAR, s. A whisperer.

Him followit mony freik dissymlit,—
 With rownaris of fals lesingis.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 28.

And be thow not ane roundar in the nuke;
 For gif thow be, men will hald thé suspect.

Ibid. p. 97.

ROUNNYNG, ROWNNYNG, s. The act of whispering.

— Their lordys had persawing
 Off discomfort, and rownnyng,
 That thai held samyn twa and twa.

Barbour, xii. 368. MS.

To ROUND, v. n. To whisper. V. ROUN, v.

ROUNALL, s. Any thing circular, such as the moon. S.

ROUND, adj. Abundant; plentiful. V. ROUCH, sense 3.

ROUND, s. 1. A merry dance, "in which the body makes a great deal of motion, and often turns round," Rudd.

Vpster Troyanis, and syne Italianis,
 And gan do doubil brangillis and gambettis,
 Dansis and roundis trasing mony gatis
 Athir throw vthir reland on thare gyse.

Doug. Virgil, 476, 2.

"The country swains and damsels," says Rudd, "call them S. roundels, not much unlike the Lydian measures of the Ancients."

Doug. mentions roundis, 402, 33, as if different from ringis, although they are certainly the same. Fr. dance à la ronde. V. RING DANCIS.

2. The tune appropriated to a dance of this kind.

Sum sang ring sangis, dancis, ledis, and roundis,
 With vocis schil, quhil al the dale resoundis.

Doug. Virgil, 402, 33.

ROUND, ROUNDE, s. A circular turret of a castle. S.

ROUND, s. A semicircular dike or wall, made of stone and feal, used as a shelter for sheep. S.

ROUND-ABOUT, s. A name given to a circular fort or encampment.

"There are a great many *round-about*s in the parish, commonly called Picts Works. They are all circular, and strongly fortified by a wall, composed of large stones." P.
Castletown, Roxburghs. Statist. Acc. xvi. 84. V. RING, s. id.

ROUNDABOUT, s. An oatcake of a circular form;
 a small cake, baked with flour and butter. S.

ROUNDABOUT, ROUNDABOUT FIRESIDE. A square chimney with seats round the sides, the grate standing in the centre of the square, detached from the walls. S.

ROUNDAL, s. A kind of poetical measure, generally consisting of eight verses, in which the two last rhyme with the two first, and the fourth also corresponds to the first.

Rudd. views this word as somewhat different in signification from E. roundel.

The railyeare rekkinis na wourdis, bot ratlis furth
 ranyis,

Ful rude and ryot resouns bayth roundalis and ryme.

Doug. Virgil, 238, b. 22.

Fr. rondeau, "a rhyme or sonnet that ends as it begins;"

R O U

Cotgr. Teut. rondeel, L.B. rondell-us, rhythmus orbicu- laris; Hisp. rondelet, circularis cantilena, Du Cange. The origin is evidently Fr. rond, round.

ROUNDAR, s. A whisperer. V. ROUNAR.

ROUNDEL, s. A table; a board.

Befoir them was sone set a roundel bricht,
 And with ane clene claith finelie dicht,
 It was ouir-set. — Priests of Peblis, S.P.R. i. 3.

And quhan the King was set down to his meit,
 Unto his fuil gart mak ane semely seit,
 Ane roundel with ane cleine claith had he,
 Neir quhair the King micht him baith heir and se.

Ibid. p. 22.

Fr. rondeau de paltissier, a round and flat board on which pastry-cooks raise their paste; Teut. rondeel, id.

ROUNG, s. A round piece of wood; a cudgel. V. RUNG.

ROUNGED, part. adj. Consumed; exhausted. V.
 RONGED.

ROUN-TREE, ROAN-TREE, ROWAN-TREE, s. The Mountain-ash. Sorbus sylvestris Alpina, Linn. S.
See Sup.

"The Quicken or Mountain Ash, Anglis. The Roan- Tree, Scotis." Lightfoot's Flora Sc. p. 256.

"I meane—by such kinde of charmes as commonly daft wiues vse, for healing of forspoken goods, for preseruing them from euill eyes, by knitting roun-trees, or sundriest kind of hearbes, to the haire or tailles of the goodes." K.
James's Daemonologie, p. 100.

In my plume is seen the holly green,
 With the leaves of the rowan tree;

And my casque of sand, by a mermaid's hand,
 Was formed beneath the sea.

Minstrelsy, Border, ii. 392.

The term roan-tree seems to have been formerly used in E. For, although not found in modern dictionaries, it is mentioned by Skinner.

Skinner is uncertain whether it may not receive this name from the colour called roan. But it is a Goth. term.
Su.G. ronnn, runn, sorbus aucuparia, Dan. ronne, id. ronne-ber, the berries of the mountain-ash.

Ihre observes, that, among the ancient Goths and Ice-landers, runn denoted a shrub or bush, and supposes that, as a shrub springs up in a variety of shoots, which is often the case as to the roan-tree, it retained the name from this circumstance. He mentions another conjecture, which is far more probable, that this tree received its name from runa, incantation, because of the use made of it in magical arts.

The superstitious use of the Mountain-ash gives great probability to this etymon. Even in our own country, there are still some so attached to the absurd usages of former times, that, in order to prevent the fatal effects of an evil eye, to which they ascribe any misfortune that befalls their cattle, they cut a piece of this tree, peel it, tie a red thread round it, and put it on the lintel of the byre or cowhouse. Then, it is supposed, their cattle are proof against skaith. This charm is especially observed in Angus on the evening preceding Rood-day, (May 3d.) They often also tie these branches round their cattle with scarlet threads.
 On this day, for preventing the power of witchcraft, some old women are careful to have their rocks and spindles made of the wood of the roan-tree.

The first of these customs has considerable analogy to one observed by the Ancient Romans, in their Palilia, or Feast celebrated in the end of April, for the preservation of their flocks. The shepherd, in order to purify his sheep, was, in the dusk of the evening, to bedew the ground around them with a wet branch, then to adorn the folds with leaves and green branches, and to cover the doors with garlands. He was also to touch his sheep with smoking sulphur, so as to make them bleat, and to burn the male olive, fir, sabine and laurel. V. Ovid. Fast. Lib. iv.

"It is probable that this tree was in high esteem with the Druids; for it may to this day be observed to grow more frequently than any other tree in the neighbourhood of those Druidical circles of stone so often seen in North Britain; and the superstitious continue to retain a great veneration for it, which was undoubtedly handed down to them from early antiquity.—Their cattle,—as well as themselves, are supposed to be preserved by it from evil; for the dairy-maid will not forget to drive them to the shealings or summer pastures with a rod of the Roan-tree, which she carefully lays up over the door of the sheal boothy, or summer-house, and drives them home again with the same. In Strathspey, they make for the same purpose, on the first day of May, a hoop of the wood of this tree, and in the evening and morning cause all the sheep and lambs to pass through it." Lightfoot, p. 257.

To ROUP, ROWP, ROPE, ROIP, ROLP, v. n. 1. To cry; to shout.

— Orestes son of Agamemnon
On theatrics in farcis mony one
Roupit.——— Doug. Virgil, 116, 27.

And thow Proserpyne, quhilk by our gentil lawis
Art rowpit hie, and yellit loude by nycht.
Ibid. 121, 31.

— Thar was mani a wilde lebard,
Lions, beres, bath bul and bare,
That rewfully gan rope and rare.
Ywaine, Ritson's E.M.R. i. 11.

Warton, when referring to this passage, by mistake renders the word ramp; Hist. E. Poet. iii. 109.

2. It occurs in a peculiar sense, either as denoting an incessant cry, or perhaps hoarseness of voice, as the adj. roupy is now used, S.

The Rauin come rolpand quhen he hard the rair,
Sa did the Gled with monie pietous pew.
Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 207.

"Thir slaves of Sathan, we say, roupit as they had bein ravenis; yea, rather thay yellit and roarit as devills in hell, Heresie, Heresie, Guillian and Rought will cary the Governour unto the Devill." Knox's Hist. p. 33.

3. Used as a v. a. To expose; to sale by auction, S.

"Lady Kincarden craved that her son's estate might also be rouped for the use of the creditors, as to the casual rent of coal and salt." Fountainhall's Decis. i. 115.

"The commoun gud and patrimony of all burghs within this realme, sall be yeirly bestowed, at the sight of the Magistrates and Councell of the saidis burrowes, to the doing of the commoun affaires thereof allanerly, after the yeirly roiping and setting thereof, as use is." Acts, Ja. VI. 1593. c. 181. "The commoun good of Burrowes suld be roiped." Tit. ibid.

Teut. roep-en, clamare, clamorem edere, tollere vocem, clamarere, Germ. ruff-en. Rudd., having mentioned these verbs, refers also to Isl. raup, jactantia, raupare, jactator, and hroop, clamor. The two former may perhaps be allied; because of the noise often made by a boaster or braggart. He has not, however, observed that Isl. Su.G. rop-a is synon. with roep-en; Alem. ruaf-an, ruof-en. The oldest form of the v. is in Moes.G. hrop-jan, af-hrop-jan, clamare, exclamare.

Hence Belg. uyt-roep, an outcry, Sw. utrop, Germ. aus-rauf, id. Teut. wt-roep-en, Sw. ut-rop-en, to proclaim.

A.S. hrcop-an, clamare. I know not, if we should view as a cognate the v. hrop-an, Luke xviii. 5. to vex, to molest; q. by importunate crying. Hickes mentions E. outroeper, as signifying a herald. Rope, as used in Ywaine, cannot be viewed as a proof that the v. was O.E. For it is undoubtedly a S. poem.

ROUP, ROUPING, ROWPING, s. An outcry; a sale of goods by auction, S. See Sup.

"A roup, in Scotland,—a canting or outcry." Rits. Gl. A. M. R.

"The Lords ordained a roup to be made of the estate of Cunnochie in Fife." Fountainhall, i. 13.

"The tenements are set by Roup, or auction, and advanced by an unnatural force to above double the old rent, without any allowance for inclosing." Pennant's Tour in S. 1772. p. 201.

ROUPER, s. One who cries; one who sells his goods by outcry. S.

Land-louper, light Skouper, ragged Rouper like a raven. Montgomerie, Watson's Coll. iii. 30.

ROUPING-WIFE, s. A female who attends outcries, or roupings, and purchases goods for the purpose of selling them again. S.

ROUP, s. 1. Hoarseness, S. pron. roop.

O may the roupe ne'er roust thy weason!

May thirst thy thrapple never gizen!

Beattie's Address, Ross's Helenore, st. 3.

Baith cooks an' scullions mony ane
Wad gar the pats and kettles tingle,—
To fleg frae a' your craigs the roup.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 77.

Some derive this from Isl. hroop, heroop, vociferatio, because this is frequently the cause of hoarseness. V. RAY. The idea has great probability; as rousty, hoarse, seems formed by analogy, from the v. roust, to cry.

2. Sometimes used to denote that disease otherwise called the croup, S.B. This is perhaps meant in the following passage.

—The Rot, the Roup, and the auld Rest.

V. FEYK. Montgomerie, Watson's Coll. iii. 14.

3. It also denotes a disease which affects hens in the mouth or throat, S.

ROUPY, ROOPIT, adj. Hoarse, S. "Roupet, hoarse, as with a cold," Shirr. Gl.

Alas! my roupet Muse is hearse! Burns, iii. 20.

To ROUSE with salt upon salt. To cure fish by the use of the finest salt. V. SALT UPON SALT. S.

ROUSE, ROOSE, s. Commendation; boast. S.

ROUSER, s. Any thing very big of its kind. S.

ROUSING, ROUSAN, part. adj. 1. Properly applied to what is powerful or vehement; as, "a rousing fire," one that emits great heat. 2. Transferred to any thing large; as, "a rousing whud," a great lie: S.

ROUSSILIN, adj. Bustling and cheerful. S.

ROUST, s. Rust, S. pron. roost.

Out on the, auld trat, agit wyffe or dame,

Eschames ne time in roust of syn to ly.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 96, 29.

Hence rousty, rusty. Teut. roest; and roestigh.

ROUST, ROST, s. A strong tide or current; or the turbulent part of a frith, occasioned by the meeting of rapid tides, Orkn. See Sup.

"We had several rousts or impetuous tides to pass."

Brand's Orkn. pp. 7, 8.

"These currents have different names, as Dennis-roust, North Ronalsha-roust." Ibid. p. 48.

"Rost or Roust, a tide, where the sea usually runs high with ebb." P. Cross, Orkney, Statist. Acc. vii. 476.

Isl. roest, raust, aestuaria, vortices maris, Verel. Ind. Rost, vortex, Ol. Lex. Run.; allied perhaps to Su.G. rust-a, tumultuari. But the ingenious editor of the Gl. to Orkneyinga S., having expl. the term, cataracta maris, gorges, observes that such whirlpools take their name from raust, sonus, from the great noise which they make. Therefore, he says, the vortex of Malstroem, near the Feroe islands, is denominated from maal, maele, sermo, sonus. He mentions A.S. ræse, stridor, impetus fluvii, as synonym. with raust.

To ROUST, v. n. 1. To cry with a rough voice, S.B.
And lo as Pharon cryis and doys roust,
With haltand wourdis and with mekle voust,
Eneas threw ane dart at him that tyde.

Doug. Virgil, 327, 9.

2. To bellow; applied to cattle, S.B.

Thay twa bullis thus striuand in that stound
Be mekill fors wrikis vthir mony wound,—
That of thare rousting al the large plane
And woddis rank rowtis and lowis agane.

Doug. Virgil, 438, 7.

"Either from rust, as if the throat had contracted rust, or from the Lat. raucus, raucitas; or from rowt [id.], and all originally from the sound;" Rudd. "Much the same with Roup and Rout;" Sibb. Lye has come nearer to the mark in referring to Alem. hluzreister, clamorus. V. Jun. Etym.

The origin is Isl. raust, vox canora; hahreist-a, vociferare, from ha, high, and reist, raust, voice. Ihre views Su.G. rust-a, tumultuari, as a cognate term. Hence, ROUST, s. The act of roaring or bellowing, S.B.

ROUSTY, adj. 1. "Hoarse, having a rough voice," S. Rudd. V. ROUP, s.

2. Not polished, not refined; in allusion to the harsh music of one who is hoarse, or has a rough voice.

Ressaue this roustie rural rebaldrie,
Laikand cunning, fra thy pure laige unleird.

Palice of Honour, Concl.

ROUSTER, s. A stroke; a blow. S.

ROUSTREE, s. The cross bar on which the crook is hung, Aberd.

Perhaps from Su.G. roeste, suprema aedificii pars.

ROUT, s. Apparently, the Brent Goose; Anas bernicla. S.

To ROUT, Rowt, v. n. 1. To bellow, to roar as cattle do, S. Rowt, rawte, A.Bor. id.

Frae faulds nae mair the owsen roust,
But to the fatt'ning clover lout.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 106.

Nae mair thou'lt rowte out-owre the dale,

Because thy pasture's scanty. Burns, iii. 64.

V. CAM-NOSED.

This is the primary sense. According to Sibb. this word is formed ex sono. But it is evidently the same with Isl. raut-a, rugire belluarum more, frendere; or as G. Andr. expl. it, to roar as a lion or wild boar.

2. To roar, to make a great noise; used in a general sense.

The firmament gan rumyllyng rare and roust.

Doug. Virgil, 15, 48.

It denotes the noise of waters.

Ane roust burn amydwart therof rynniss,
Rumland and soundand on the craggy quhynniss.

Doug. Virgil, 227, 37.

3. To snore. S.

ROUT, Rowt, s. 1. The act of bellowing, S.

Lyke as the bul, that bargane begyn wald,
Geuis terrybyl roustis and lowis mony fald.

Doug. Virgil, 410, 12.

2. A roar; a loud noise, S.

Thay all lekkit, the salt-wattir stremes
Fast bullerand in at euery rift and bore.
In the mene quhile, with mony rowt and rore
The sey thus trublit, and the tempest furth sent Felt Neptune.—

Doug. Virgil, 16, 55.

V. the v.

To ROUT, v. a. To beat; to strike, S.

Thair stent was mair than they cou'd well mak out;
And whan they fail'd, their backs they roundly rout.

Ross's Helenore, p. 48.

Isl. rot-a, percutio, ictu onero; rot, ictus, G. Andr.

ROUT, RUTE, s. A blow; properly, a severe or weighty stroke, S. lounder, synonym.

Bot he, that had his sword on hycht,
Roucht him sic rout, in randoun rycht,
That he the hede till the harnys claiff.

Edit. 1620, routs.

Barbour, v. 632. MS.

The rede blude with the rout folowit the blaid.

Gawan and Gol. iii. 23.

With that scho raucht me sic ane rout,
Quhill to the erde scho gart me leyn.

Maitland Poems, p. 201.

Thir hardy kempis al in waist let draw

Athir to vther mony rutis grete,

On holl sydis feill double dyntis gan bete.

V. LOUNDER.

Doug. Virgil, 142, 16.

ROUTAND, part. pr.

The Inglis sic abasing

Tuk, and sic dreid of that tithing,

That in v. c. placis and ma

Men mycht se samyn routand ga;

Sayand, "Our lordis, for thair mycht,

Will allgate fecht agane the rycht."

Barbour, xii. 360. MS.

"Whispering," Gl. Pink. I can perceive no reason for this, but that rownnyng is used a little downwards; and substituted in this place, in Edit. 1620. The sense certainly is; "Men might see them assembling in a tumultuous manner. To rout, is used in this sense, E. from Su.G. rut-a, vagari, discurrere; or Isl. rot-ast, circumagere, conglobare. Bellicumque vocabulum est; A bardaga rotast, ad certamen ineundum confluere; Heims Kring. i. 236. V. Ihre, vo. Rote, manipulus.

ROUTH, ROUCH, s. 1. The act of rowing, or of plying with oars. See Sup.

The swift Pristis with spedy routh fute hote
Furth steris the stern Mnestheus anane.

Doug. Virgil, 131, 31.

So that agane the streame throw help of me,
By airis rouch thidder caryit sal thou be.

Ibid. 241, 39.

2. A stroke of the oar.

Besely our folkis gan to pingil and strife,
Swepand the flude with lang routhis belife.

Ibid. 77, 33.

It is written rouch either from corr. pronunciation, or by the mistake of some transcriber.

"From row, as truth from true, ruth from rue, growth from grow;" Rudd. But he has not observed that the formation is A.S. Rewete, rowette, rowutte, remigatio; from rew-an, reow-an, row-an. remigare.

ROUTH, ROWTH, s. Plenty; abundance, in whatever respect, S.

Let never man a wooing wend,
That lacketh thingis thrie:

A routh o' gold; an open heart,

And fu' o' courtesy. Minstrelsy, Border, ii. 143.

I dinna want a routh of country fair,

Sic as it is, ye'er welcome to a skair.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 14.

Sibb. expl. it as also signifying, "rough, roughness;" and thinks that, as denoting plenty, it may be from rife, plentiful. It has apparently more resemblance to Su.G. roge, a heap, whence rogadt, cumulus; rogadt maatt, a heaped measure. Hence, ROUTH, adj. Plentiful.

S.

R O W

ROUTHIE, adj. Plentiful, S.
Then wait a wee, and canie wale
A routhie butt, a routhie ben. Burns, iv. 319.

ROUTHRIE, s. The same as Routh, s. S.

ROUTHLESS, adj. Profane, applied to one who neither regards God nor man, Fife.
It seems merely E. ruthless used in a peculiar sense.

ROUTHURROK, s. A species of goose mentioned by Leslie, De Orig. et Mor. Scot. p. 35. V. QUINK.
"Routheroock-goose, Bernacle-goose, Anas erythropus. The name—occurs in the old writers on Orkney; but is now nearly unknown in the islands." Neill's Tour, p. 196.
Isl. hrotta, anser montanus; Fiälla rota, hrota, etiam animal anus, G. Andr. p. 124.

To ROW, v. a. 1. To roll; part. pa. rowit.
The huge wallis weltres apon hie,
Rowit at anis with stormes and wyndis thre. Doug. Virgil, 15, 40.

2. To revolve, to elapse; applied to time, in a neut. sense.
Than the yong child, quhilk now Ascanius heicht,— Thretty lang twelf monthis rowing ouer, sall be king. Doug. Virgil, 21, 20.

3. To revolve; applied to the mind.
—For his dere birding dredand sore,
Ilk chance in haist did row in hys memore. Ibid. 383, 34.

Hence,
To row about, to be in an advanced state of pregnancy, a low phrase, S.

Row, ROWE, s. A roll; a list. S.

ROW, s. A roll of bread. S.

BAWBEE-Row, s. A halfpenny roll. S.

To ROW, Row up, v. a. To wind; as, "To row up a knock," to wind up a clock. S.

To ROW, v. n. To be moved with violence. S.

To ROW a Nievefu'. A phrase in use among reapers. S.

To ROW, Roo, RUE. To Row sheep, to pluck the wool from sheep; to tear it off instead of shearing it. S.

ROW, Roow, s. The wheel, an instrument of execution. To break upon the row, to break on the wheel. S.

To ROW, v. a. To roll wool or cotton for spinning. S.

ROWAN, ROWING, s. Wool as it comes from the cards; a flake of wool, S. See Sup.

According to Sibb. q. rolling. But it seems rather allied to Rove, v. a. q. v. Hence, perhaps,
"To cast a rowan, to bear an illegitimate child," Sibb. This resembles the metaph. use of Lagengird, q. v.

ROWAN, s. Auld rowan, "old jade," Pink.; a term given to a bawd, who, by a great deal of coaxing, endeavours to entice a young woman to marry an old man.
—Cum lick that beird auld rowan.
Now sie the trottribus and trowane,
Sa busilie as scho is wowane,
Sie as the carline craks. Philotus, S. P. Repr. iii. 15.

Sibb. views it as the same term with that mentioned above. But it is certainly equivalent to witch, or sorceress, as allied to Germ. rune, Su.G. runa; more commonly in a compound state, Al-runu, mulier fatidica, or as some render it, omniscia. Others suppose that the word is properly alte-runu, vetula saga, or as here, auld rowan. Keysler. de Mulier. Fatidicis, p. 469. The same writer informs us, that the ancient Finns had a goddess supposed to preside over storms, whom they called Roune. Now we know that it has been generally believed by the Northern nations, that the witches had great power in this respect. Germ. raune, Su.G. runo, denote magical arts. V. ROUN, s. 2., also ROUN-TREE.

R O W

ROWAN, s. A name for the turbot, a fish, Fife.
"Formerly there was a very plentiful fishing upon the coast here, consisting of cod, ling, haddock, rowan or turbot, skait, &c.—But within these 4 or 5 years past, the fish have in a manner quite deserted these places (particularly the haddock,) and none are now caught but a few cod, rowan, and skait." P. St. Monance, Statist. Acc. ix. 337.

ROWAND, adj. Perhaps, Rone-skin. S.

ROWAN-TREE, s. The Mountain-ash. S.

ROWAR, s. A wooden bolt or bar, which may be moved backwards or forwards.
The tothir end he ordand for to be,
How it suld stand on thre rowaris off tre,
Quhen ane war out, that the laiff down suld fall. Wallace, vii. 1155. MS.

Edit. 1648 and 1673, rollers.
Fr. roul-er, to roll; rouleaux, "long and round leavers, whereon ships are gotten into a dock, and launched into the water againe; Cotgr."

ROW-CHOW-TOBACCO, s. A game of boys. S.

ROWY, s. King.
Precelland Prince! havand prerogatyve
As rowy royall in this regioun to ring;
I thé beseik aganis thy lust to stryve
And loufe thy God aboif all maner of thing. V. Roy. Bannatyne Poems, p. 148.

ROWIE, ROWE. Apparently abbrev. of Roland. S.

ROWKAR, s. A whisperer; a tale-bearer.
"Also the wisman speikis of thame that ar quhysperaris, rowkaris & rounaris on this manner: Susurro inquinabit animam suam, et in omnibus odietur. A rowkar and rownar sall fyle his awin saule, & sall be hettit of all men. Mairour he sais: Susurro, et bilinguis maledictus erit, multos enim turbavit pacem habentes. A man or woman that is ane rowkar and doubil toungit, is cursit and wariit, for siclik ane persone hes put mekil trubil amang men & wemen, quhilk afore was at peace." Abp. Hamiltoun's Catechisme, 1551, Fol. 71, a.

Rowk is expl. "to be close, to crouch." But rowkar is here given as synon. with Lat. susurro. It may be allied to Su.G. Isl. rykte, rychte, Germ. rucht, ge-rucht, fama. These terms are frequently used in a bad sense, and have been traced to Alem. ruog-en, Germ. rug-en, Isl. raeg-a, to accuse, to defame.

ROWK, ROWIK, s. A rick of grain. S.

To ROWME, ROUME, v. n. To roam; to wander.
—He went diuers thingis to se,
Rowming about the large tempill schene. Doug. Virgil, 27, 11.

This is from the same origin with E. room, as Skinner has observed with respect to roam; because he who wanders in succession occupies much ground, and still seeks a new place.
A.S. rum-an, Belg. ruym-en, Germ. raum-en, Su.G. Isl. rym-a, remove, diffugere. Isl. rum, foras, Verel. Ind. Mod. Sax. id. Alem. rumo, procul, rumor; longius, lre in vo. V. next word.

To ROWME, v. a. 1. To make room; to clear; to remove obstacles.
Out throu the thickest of that oste
Of legis, boluyt than in boste,
About hym than he rowmyt thare
Thretty fute on breid, or mare. Wyntown, ix. 27. 417.

Buskis withdrawis, and branchis al to rent
Gan ratling and resound of thare deray,

R O W

To red thare renk, and rowmes thaym the way.

Doug. Virgil, 232, 25.

Teut. ruym-en, vacuare, vacuum reddere; amputare ramos supervacuos, extricare agrum silvestrem: Sw. gifwa rum, to clear the way. A.S. rum-ian, viam aperire. We find indeed the very phrase used by Wyntown. Veg rum-ian, quasi diceres, obstacula viae summovere; Ihre, vo. Ryma.

2. To enlarge.

Joce, than Byschape of Glasgw

Rowmyd the kyrk of Sanct Mongw.

Wyntown. vii. 8. 366.

3. To place; to put in a particular situation. S.

Teut. ruym-en, ampliare, dilatare; Su.G. rym-a, id.; evidently from rum, locus, or perhaps immediately from rum, spatiosus.

ROWME, ROUME, s. 1. Space; extent of place.

His hors in hy than has he tane,

And hym alane amang thame rade,

And rwdly rowme about hym made.

Wyntown, viii. 40. 172.

2. A place, S. 3. A possession; a portion of land; whether occupied by the proprietor, or by a tenant.

"Our fais hes not only tint schamefully the landis that thay wrangusly conquest, bot ar vincust in battall, chasit and dounng fra thair rowmes, and inuadit with vncouth & domistik weris." Bellend. Cron. B. x. c. 20. Suis pulsi sedibus; Boeth.

—Theves hes done my rowmis range,

And teynd my fald.

Maitland Poems, p. 318.

"Siclike thair wyfis, barnis, executouris, or assignais, sall bruke thair takis, steidingis, rowmes, and possessiounis, alsweill of Kirklandis, as of Temporall mennis landis." Acts, Mar. 1547. c. 5. Edit. 1566.

Ev'ry pensioner a room did gain,

For service done and to be done;

This I'll let the reader understand

The name of both the men and land.

Scott of Satchell's Hist. Name of Scot, p. 45.

Room is still commonly used for a farm, S.

4. Local situation, in relation to the ministry of the gospel.

"Such as have not received ordination, should not be permitted to teach in great rooms, except upon urgent necessity, and in the defect of actuall ministers." Spotswood's Hist. p. 444.

5. Official situation.

"It was not their pleasure he or his colleague Mr. Rankin should bruik their rooms any longer. So programs were affixed for the provision of two vacant places in their college." Baillie's Lett. i. 85.

6. Room is used for ordinal relation, like place in modern language.

"In the thrid roume, it coms in to be considered, how the signe and the thing signified are coupled." Bruce's Serm. on the Sacr. 1590. Sign. B. 3. b.

"Thus, in the first room, our religious and reformation-rights, and next our lives and civil liberties, are laid at the King's feet, to be trampled upon." Wodrow's Hist. i. 311.

7. A particular place in a literary work.

"The 11th act of this session, December 15th 1669, Concerning the Forfeiture of Persons in the late Rebellion, deserves a room in this collection." Wodrow's Hist. i. 313.

Moes.G. rumis, A.S. Su.G. rum, place of any kind.

ROWME, ROUME, ROOM, adj. 1. Large; spacious.

Flaikis thai laid on temyr lang and wicht,

A rowme passage to the wallis thaim dycht.

Wallace, vii. 985. MS.

R U C

— To behald thame walking to and fro
Throw the roume hallis, and so bissy go,— Ane paradise it was to se and here.

Doug. Virgil, 474, 32.

A.S. Su.G. rum, Isl. rum-r, Teut. ruym, amplus, spatiosus.

2. Clear; empty; used obliquely.

"A fair fire makes a room flet;" Ferguson's Prov. i. e. it makes those who are in it sit far from the fireside.

"Scot. we say, To make a room house, when one drives them out that are in it, and so makes it empty, and consequently much room in it;" Rudd.

Teut. ruym also signifies, latus, vacuus; ruymhuys, domus laxa; Kilian. Belg. ruum huus maken, vacuas aedes facere, (Ihre;) Zyne handen ruym hebben, to have one's hands free, Sewel.

ROWMLY, adv. Largely; liberally.

A tendrare hart mycht na man have;

Til lordis rowmly he landis gave;

His swunnys he mad rych and mychty.

Wyntown, ix. 10. 46.

In this adv. we have a vestige of a metaph. sense, in which the adj. has probably been used. A.S. rum not only signifies largus, amplus, but faustus. In Belg., however, we have a phrase more nearly allied; Een ruyme beurs, a well-stuffed purse; also, a liberal hand. The term is used like Lat. largus, which not only signifies large, spacious, but liberal, open-handed.

To ROWMIL, v. a. To clear out; as, to rowmil a tobacco-pipe, to clear it when it is stopped up. S.

To ROWMYSS, v. n. To follow. V. RUMYSS.

ROWSAN, part. adj. Vehement. V. ROUSING. S.

ROWSTIT, part. adj. Dried. V. REIST, v. S.

To ROWT, v. n. To snore. Junius gives route as an E. word, although not mentioned by Johnson.

The King slepyt bot a litill than,

Quhen sic slep fell on his man,

That he mycht nocht hald wp his ey,

Bot fell in slep, and rowtyt hey.

Barbour, vii. 192. MS.

A.S. hrut-an, Isl. hriot-a, id.

To ROWT, Rout, v. n. Apparently, to range. S.

ROZERED, part. adj. Apparently resembling a rose. S.

ROZET, s. Rosin. V. ROSET.

To ROZET, v. a. To prepare with rosin. S.

To RUB, v. a. To rob. S.

RUBBERY, s. Robbery. S.

RUBBLE, s. Rough and coarse masonry. S.

RUBBOURIS, s. pl. Apparently, baskets or barrels. S.

RUBEN, s. A ribbon. S.

RUBIATURE, s. Expl. "ragamuffin;" a bully. S.

For laik of rowme that rubiature

Bespewit up the moderator.

Legend Bp. St. Androis, Poems 16th Cent. p. 314.

Properly robber; from L.B. robator, rubator, Ital. rubatore, latro; L.B. rob-are, Ital. rub-are, furari, praedari; Du Cange.

RUBY BALLAT. A species of ruby. V. BALLAT. S.

To RUCK, v. n. To belch.

Sche riftit, ruckit, and maid sic stendis,

Sche yeild, and that at baith the endis.

Lyndsay, S.P.R. ii. 87.

Teut. roek-en, Lat. ruct-are.

RUCK, s. 1. A rick of corn or hay, S.B. See Sup.

2. A small stack of any kind. S.

Isl. hrauk, Su.G. roek, (pron. ruk), Isl. hruga, cumulus.

RUCKLE, s. A noise in the throat seeming to indicate suffocation. V. DEDE-RUCKLE. S.

R U D

RUCK-RILLING. V. REWELYNYS.

RUCTION, s. A quarrel.

RUD, adj. Red.

The hostellar son, apoun a hasty wyss,
Hynt fyr in hand, and till a gret hous yeid,
Quhar Inglissmen was in full mekill dreid;
For thai wyst nocht quhill that the rud low raiss;
As wood bestis among the fyr thar gays.

Wallace, ix. 1448. MS.

A.S. rude, reod, Su.G. roed, (rud), Alem. ruod, Isl. raud-ur, Belg. rood.

RUDE, s. 1. Redness; blushing.

Lauinia the maide, wyth sore teris smert,
Hyr moderis wourdis felt depe in hir hert,
So that the rude did hir vissage glow.

Doug. Virgil, 408, 16.

2. Not the complexion in general, as some expl. it;
but those parts of the face, which in youth and health,
have a ruddy colour, as distinguished from the lyre,
or those of which whiteness is the characteristic, S.B.
"The red taint of the complexion," Shirr. Gl.

As ony rose hir rude was reid,

Her lyre wes lyk the lillie.

Chr. Kirk, st. 3.

Rudde, id. is used by Chaucer.

His rudde is like scarlet in graine.

Sir Topas, ver. 13.

A.S. rudu, rubor. According to Lye, it also signifies, vultus. Isl. rode, Su.G. rodna, Germ. rote, redness.

RUDAS, adj. Bold; masculine; stubborn; E. rude. S.

To RUDDY, v. n. To make a loud reiterated noise,
S.B. See Sup.

The wind is said to ruddy, when one means to express the loud irregular noise it makes, especially as striking upon any object that conveys the sound, as on a door or window. In like manner, it is said that there is a terrible ruddying at the door, when a person raps with violence and reiterated strokes, as if he meant to break it open.

Ruddying is nearly allied in sense to thud. There is this difference, however, that ruddying includes the super-added idea of repetition or continuance. Ruddying is the reiteration of thuds in uninterrupted succession. It perhaps also denotes rather a sharper sound than that expressed by thud, which, as vulgarly used at least, suggests the idea of a hollow sound. Ruddy is sometimes used as a s.

This is most probably allied to Isl. hrid, a storm, a tempestuous wind; as thud, q. v. has a similar origin. Isl.
hrid and Su.G. rid also denote force in general; hence transferred to the rage of battle;—impetus; certamen.
Isl. skothrid, pugna, griothrid, saxorum jactus.

RUDDY, s. Redness; ruddy complexion. S.

RUDDIKIN, s. V. RODDIKIN. S.

RUDDOCH, RUDDOCK, s. The Redbreast. S.

RUDE, adj. Strong; stout; applied both to persons and things.

Ceculus descendit of Vulcanus blude,
And Umbro eik, the stalwart chiftane rude,
That come was fra the montanis Marciane
The bargane stuffis, relevand in agane.

Doug. Virgil, 337, 16.

— His big spere apoun him schakis he,
Quhilk semyt rude and square as ony tre.

Ibid. 445, 18.

RUDE, s. The spawn of fish or frogs, Ayrs.

And thou hast cum in Merch or Februeir;
There till ane pule and drunk the padock rude.

V. REDD.

VOL. II.

Kennedy, Evergreen, ii. 65.

321

R U D

RUDE, RWD, s. The cross.

Think how the Lord for the on rude was rent.

Think and thou fle fra him, than art thou schent.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 356, 16.

A.S. Su.G. rod, Germ. rode. Junius has observed, that as the Cimbr. or old Isl. word roda signifies an image, it appears that "the word rod, in its primary signification, anciently denoted an image of any kind, until from a special reason it was restricted to the cross of Christ, and also to the representation of this." Mr. Macpherson says, that "such explanation is inconsistent with his own quotations, to which hundreds of others might be added, all expressly bearing that Christ died on the rude;" Gl. Wynt.
This argument, however, is not conclusive. For, although used by A.S. writers to denote the cross on which our Saviour himself suffered, this will not prove that the term, as first adopted by that people, properly signified the instrument of suffering. That material crosses were used, and probably with an image of Christ upon them, before the conversion of the A. Saxons, cannot be denied.
V. Bingham's Orig. Ecclesiast. B. viii. c. 6. s. 20. This people, when they saw the veneration paid to the cross, might naturally apply to it a term formerly appropriated to the images of their false gods. As little can it be doubted, that they had innumerable words in common with the Goths whom they had left on the continent.

RUDE-DAY, s. 1. The third day of May, S.B. i. e. what in the Kalendar is called, the day of the Invention of the Cross.

Some of the superstitions, connected with the first of May, seemed to be transferred to this day, most probably as being so near the other. Some old women are careful, on the eve of this day, to have their rocks and spindles made of the Roun-tree, or Mountain ash, to preserve their work from the power of witchcraft. For the same reason, on the evening preceding this day, many hang up bunches of this tree above the doors of their cow-houses, and tie them round the tails of their cattle with scarlet-threads.

On this day, indeed, great attention to their cows is supposed to be necessary; as both witches and fairies are believed to be at work, particularly, in carrying off the milk. V. MILK THE TETHER. Many, accordingly, milk a little out of each dug of a cow on the ground. It is believed that this will make the cow luck or prosper during the whole summer; but that the reverse will be the case, if this ceremony be neglected. I need scarcely say, that this is evidently a heathenish libation, either to the old Gothic or German deity Hertha, the Earth, or to the Fairies. A similar superstition is mentioned, vo. PANKALE.

Great virtue is ascribed to May-dew. Some, who have tender children, particularly on Rude-day, spread out a cloth to catch the dew, and wet them in it, S.B. See Sup.

On this day, as well as on Christmas, New-year, and Handsel-Monday, a superstitious person would not allow a bit of kindled coal to be carried out of his own house to a neighbour's, lest it should be employed for the purposes of witchcraft.

A superstitious regard to this season has also prevailed in Germany. There witches are supposed to have peculiar power in the beginning of May. Among the Bructeri, as well as in Ireland, according to Camden, the woman, who, on the first day of May, first applied for fire, was believed to be a witch; Keysler, Antiq. Septent. pp. 90. 91.
He also says, that the Bructeri were wont to assemble during the calends of May, and spend their time in dancing and feasting in the open air and among the woods.
This he ascribes to the abuse of those public assemblies which they used to hold at this season, when their prince or leader appeared among them. But it is more probable, that the respect paid to it was previous to these assemblies; that the nation, indeed, fixed on this as the time of assembling, because it was formerly consecrated by superstition. V. Keyser, pp. 87, 88.

R U F

Although the regard attached to Rude-day must be immediately traced to Popery, there can be no doubt that many of the superstitions, observed at this time, existed previously to this. There is a considerable resemblance between some of these and those observed by the heathen Romans. At this time, they celebrated their Floralia, a feast in honour of Flora. Lactantius, (Inst. Lib. i. c. 20) and Minucius Felix, (Octav. p. 233) assert that she was a common prostitute, who engaged to leave a great legacy to the city of Rome, if a feast should be observed in commemoration of her; and that the Senate, thinking that this would be disgraceful, pretended that the feast was in honour of the goddess who presided over flowers.

As this is a time of great gaiety among young people, who generally go out into the fields in parties for their amusement, it was observed in the same manner among the Romans.

Venerat in morem populi depascere saltus.

Ovid. Fast. Lib. 5.

The greatest mirth was indulged. Persons appeared in the most fantastic habits. Even shocking indecencies were tolerated. I do not know that the Romans had any custom exactly similar to the May-pole. But they wore garlands of flowers, and clusters of berries, on their heads.

Tempora sutilibus cinguntur tota coronis, &c.

Ovid. ibid.

A great similarity may be observed between the superstitions observed on Rude-day, and those of Beltane in other parts of S. V. BELTANE.

2. In our old Acts the 14th day of September is called Rude-day. S.

RUDE-GOOSE. V. ROOD-GOOSE.

RUDESMESS, RUDESMAS, s. The designation of a certain term of the year, which happens on the 14th September. S.

To RUDJEN, v. a. To beat. S.

To RUE, v. a. To pluck. V. Row, v. S.

RUE. To tak the rue, to repent of a proposal or bargain. S.

RUE-BARGAIN, s. Smart-money for casting a bargain. S.

RUF, adj. Rough. S.

To RUF, v. n. To rest; to live in quietness.

This widd fantastyk lust, but lufe,
Dois so yung men to madness mufe,
That thay may nouthir rest nor rufe,
Till thay mischeif thair sellis.

V. ROIF. Scott, Chron. S. P. iii. 153.

RUFF, s. Rest. V. ROIF.

To RUFF, v. a. To put in disorder. E. ruffle. S.

